What Was Happening In Davie Before
The Days of Automobiles and Rolled Hose.

W. A. Bailey, of Advance, was in town Monday.

Shirt waists are becoming popular in Mocksville.

T. C. Sheets, of Bixby, was in town Monday.

Gannon Tolbert, assistant postmaster at Advance, was here this week.

G. H. Graham, of Farmington, was in town the first of the week.

W. F. Furches, a member of the board of county commissioners, is quite sick.

Judge Rowden of Chicago, was here a day or so last week on business.

Mrs. J. S. Leonard, of Statesville has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. S. D. Swain the past week.

The old soldiers will have their reunion and picnic at Clement Grove on Saturday, May 25th.

Mr. Allen, of Bixby, is talking of moving his roller mill to Mock-ville. The more the merrier.

James Walker, who lives near Kappa, lost his house, wheat and beacon, and part of his corn and out-buildings by fire Saturday morning. Everything in his kitchen was a total loss.

J. W. and J. C. Charles lost ten thousand feet of lumber by fire last week, also a planer and a lot of saw mill fixtures.

J. H. Ratledge has opened a stock of groceries in the Orrell store at Advance.

J. W. Collette, a jeweler of Concord, was in town last week.

The town election is progressing as we go to press. The old ticket is being voted for. The Republicans are taking no part in the election.

W. W. Stroud, of Hickory, spent one day in town last week visiting his brother.

We learn that a knitting mill is being spoken of for Mocksville.
Such an enterprise would add much to Mocksville's growth.

An entertainment will be held at Advance Thursday night and the proceeds will be used to buy an unvalued chair for Miss Rose Orrell.

Jim Harper, of Woodleaf, was a Kartees visitor Sunday.

J. Lee Kurfes and little son
Gilbert visited relatives at Bailey Sunday.

Some fine fish were caught at Coolcree Saturday, the largest weighing 12 to 15 pounds.

Three Happy Fathers.

The recent death of Col. John C.
Coolidge brings to mind the fact that only three fathers have lived to see their sons inaugurated as President of the United States. As a general thing our Presidents have been along in years at the time of their accession to the Chief Executive died before their distinguished sons attained to the highest honor in the honor in the gift of the American people.

Colonel Coolidge was present when his son, Calvin Coolidge, was sworn in as Vice President as was Dr.
George T. Harding, who saw his son take the oath of office. Dr. Harding is still living but his distinguished son and the father of President Coolidge have both passed on.

Colonel Coolidge was the only man in his only man in history who had the pleasure of swearing in his own son and lived to see that son inaugurated a second time as President of this great Republic.

The third father who lived to see his son President, was John Adams who on March 4, 1825, saw his son, John Quincy Adams proclaimed the Chief Executive of the land.—Union

Florida Boom Has Been Punctured.

Word comes from Florida that the frenzied real estate boom in the Bubble state has been punctured and business of every kind in that commonwealth is flat and showing signs of retrogression.

Miami, one of the boom cities where real estate was inflated beyond all reason and common sense, reports being in the midst of an acute period of readjustment, accompanied by a frenzied search for cash. Large developments of real estate are retrenching and seeking loans. Other enterprises, threatened with failure, are being reorganized and refinanced. Small outlying subdivisions are quietly sinking into oblivion, carrying with them expensive pavements and street lamps.

Investors and speculators in real estate, from business men to mechanics, are scraping for cash to pay income taxes and meet payments on property.

Mortgages on high grade real estate can be bought for 60 cents on the dollar, and money lenders are exacting high discounts.

All this is what Miami terms the "setting" process. It was generally recognized at least three months ago that the "boom" period was at an end. The skyrocketing of prices under the stimulus of speculative buying could not not endure.

Thus far the reaction has been characterized by stagnation rather than by reduction of prices. Real estate is being sold for less than it would have brought six months ago, but for that it would have brought a year ago. Business sites and choice residential property well within Miami bought during the height of the boom are being sold at small profits.

At the same time the resale departments and brokers are loaded to the guards with listings of property which they cannot sell. Owners are willing to sacrifice anticipated profits, but not to accept losses.

The question is causing no little apprehension in Miami is "Will the market break?" Income tax payments already are pressing on investors who put their profits last year back into real estate. Thousands of speculators who applied all their cash on first payments on real estate are not in a position to make their second payments, which will fall due in the next three months.
Unless the market revives sufficiently to permit them to dispose of parts of their holdings they will lose all they have. For the present speculators are holding on grimly, and from the sounder developments they undoubtedly will receive lenient treatment if they cannot make payments promptly.

"Suckers" who bought, from irresponsible promoters who misrepresented their land or who will never make the improvements they promised have already lost. "Suckers" was bought in outlying subdivisions which will not be populated until Miami is as large as Chicago, have lost. Speculators who gobbled up more land than they can digest will lose.—Ex.

ridge township, Rutherford county,

25 friends of the youthful couple.—

Why The Bother?

So they have sent Walter D.
Siler down from Washington to open the Overman campaign headquarters in Raleigh. There must be a political fight in the brewing, contrary to former reports that there would be none. It was not many days or weeks or months ago that a dispatch came down from the City of Officeholders that the junior Senator would devote his time to attending to the people's business while others indulged in this thing called politics.

But the impression is now gained that Mr. Siler, who knows the campaign business from kiver to kiver, will set the Simmons machine into operation for Senator Overman. No one believes that Simmons himself will take a hand in the fight so anybody can notice it, but the supposition is that he has passed word along the lines to "Fight, boys, fight."

It may prove the end of the Reynolds candidacy, but, at least Candidate Robert R. will have the satisfaction of knowing he made
"em come off the perch.—Hickory Record.

Where Styles Come From.

"No definite rule has been laid down as the length of the feminine skirts this year," informs a news dispatch from London to The New York World, "but there is a plain royal hint in the authorized samples which show skirts several inches longer than the orthodox evening costumes now worn." When that bit of news spread from the royal dwelling place of His Highness and Her Majesty the dressmakers began getting busy. It has reference to the styles which will prevail at the royal court, but shop girls in New York will begin searching similar models. And from such as that come styles.

Yet some crouic will present a long face and arise to remark "If dresses move either way they had to move downward."—Hickory Record.

July 4th on Sunday This Year.

The Fourth of July this year falls on Sunday but this makes no difference to the banks, barber shops and other places that gobble up all the holidays and Monday will be observed instead. The Moose are taking things in hand at the Guilford Battle Ground and are sponsoring a big celebration there this year. A speaker of note will be present and big doings are promised.

Another date that falls on Sunday will be the Fourth of March, 1929, which will give Calvin Coolidge one more day of office, as the next President will not be inaugurated until Monday, March 5. Mr.
Coolidge may be the may as he seems to be only one mentioned for the high honor by the Republicans at this time. Of course it is of the question that a Democrat would be inaugurated on that day. If the Democrats elect a President by the year 2000 they will be doing exceeding well.

Three Presidents in the history of the country have been inaugurated on the Fifth of March, the Fourth coming on Sunday on those dates, these being James Monroe, in 1817; Zachary Taylor, in 1849,
and Rutherford B. Hayes, in 1877.

An Iredell Tragedy of Long Age.

Mr. Editor:—Many years ago there was a man came thru North Iredell by the name of Saunders selling time pieces. His home was in Rockingham county and my father was well acquainted with him.
An old colored man tells me that Saunders was killed at Howard's
Ford, on Hunting creek, two miles north of Union Grove church. He says he was in 50 yards of the time place where the man was shot and heard the gun fire. His mother was forced to help bury Saunders and he knows exactly where his body was buried. This negro is intelligent and is now more than 80 years old. Saunders' horse was taken to South Carolina and sold after the murder by another man.

I am writing this thinking that some of Saunders relatives living in Rockingham county or elsewhere may see it and will have the consolation of knowing what became of him. I have felt an interest in this matter a long time hence my giving it to the public.—R. R.
Lowe, in Union Republican.

Death To Bobbed Hair.

The American Hair Dressers association recently held a convention and among other things sounding a keynote or slogan "death to bobbed hair." A hair expert who was present declared that the women who commenced bobbing their hair when the craze first started seven years ago haven't half the hair now that they had then. He said that the little tight hats worn by women with short hair, duplicating the condition of the common baldness of men is attributed, may be the cause of the loss of hair by the women.

This expert declared that nature must compensate for this discouragement to hair growing on the head, and it has been predicted that a race of short haired women will be a race of bearded women.

Let us hope nothing so disastrous will overtake the fair sex as a flowing mustache and a goatee. The women have about taken possession of the barber shops now, especially on Saturdays, and if they,
in the future, have to shaved also,
what is to become of the men?—
Union Republican.

Paid Dear For His Trouble.

A Monroe Enquirer subscriber came in the office the other day and said to Eugene Ashcraft the editor:
"Here, I want you to send your paper to my daughter who is off at school. We have been sending the paper after we get through with it and it costs two cents for postage and besides going to the trouble of wrapping and mailing."

"Which is true, and to mail 104 papers would cost $2.08, when the Enquirer's subscription price is only

"But the man who persistently borrows his neighbors newspaper is the one who in the end pays dear for his trouble. It is related that once upon a time some fellow sent his kid to borrow the neighbor's paper, and the kid upset a hive of bees and soon was covered with lumps. His father ran to help him and caught his chin on a clothes line and sprained his back and fell and fell and broke a $25 watch. The clothes pole fell over the car and smashed the windshield, and mother rushing out to see what occasioned all the excitement, upset a five gallon churn of cream into a baskets of kitten, drowning all of them. The electric flatiron burned through the ironing board while she was out of the kitchen, setting fire to the house and the firemen broke all the windows and chopped a hole in the roof. The baby ate a jar of pickles and got cholera morbus, and the doctor's bill was $15. The daughter run away with the hired man during the excitement, the dog bit a neighbor's kid and the calves ate the tails off four nightshirts on the clothes line."

The Stuff That Degrades.

When officers found and destroyed a 200 gallon copper still in New Light township, Wake county, they also found, as related by the Raleigh Times, "little shoes and juvenile garments" at the still place. The officers figured that a child had been working at the still, carrying water, had fallen in the branch and the shoes and clothes had been placed by the furnace to dry. Whether the children's wear indicated that children had been at work or play on the premises, either conclusion would indicate that certain citizens of New Light district, or reprehensible transients who had invaded the territory for purposes of evil, are yet far from the light. A few days ago a cleric testifying at the probi-tion hearing before the senate committee, told that prohibition had resulted in the manufacture of liquor in the homes, in the presence of the children, with the consequence of drunken mothers and children begging for "moonshine." That was a hard saying, and no doubt most of us down this way who read it, could vision such occurrence only in the crowded city tenements, where depravity is near total. But if the prohibition officers did not do bad wrong in their Sherlock Holmes deductions, practically the same thing is found in the county that contains the capital city of North Carolina.

And the fact that children are permitted to see liquor made, to help make it and to learn to drink it, either in the great urban places far away or within sight of the North Carolina state house, isn't because of prohibition, either. It is outstanding evidence of the glaring degradation that results from association with liquor, either as manufacturer or consumer. "One doesn't have to be a fanatic about liquor, or even a prohibitionist, to realize that fact.
Honest, unbiased observation will furnish ample proof of the degrading influence of strong drink if one stays with it. A Chicago business man, testifying at this senate prohibition hearing, had something to say on this point, the truth of which will be recognized by any one who recalls the attitude of the liquor dealers in pre-prohibition days.

They tell us for instance, that the present reign of lawlessness should be ended by legalizing the sale of light wines and beer. Did the liquor interests ever obey the law?
Did they obey it before prohibition?
They violated every provision of the law that stood between them and maximum profits.

If it was worth while to remain open after hours, they remained open. If it was worth while to sell liquor to drunkards and minors, they sold to drunkards and minors. They observed the law only when it was not worth while to break it. They know if, everybody knows it. What at fat chance there is that these interests, which were always lawless would be law-abiding if they were permitted to sell light wines and beer. When did they change their spots?—Greensboro News.

Reward The Faithful.

It was real naughty of the Raleigh newspaper correspondents to dig up the fact, which every Republican in North Carolina knew, that A. M. Kistler, of Morganton, contributed $200 to the State Democratic campaign fund in 1924 to help in the election of A. Wilton McLean became governor he rewarded Kistler by appointing him as one of the so-called Republican members of the State highway commission. The law expressly provides that three of the nine members of the State highway commission shall be of the Republican party yet McLean goes ahead and ignores this law and appoints Kistler, a half-baked Republican, who contributes money to help finance the Democratic campaign in the State.—Union Republican.

A woman recently told a magistrate that her son had tried to run away from home to be a telegraph-messenger. "That ought to stop

No Change In School Books This Year.

Everything was all cocked and primed for another sweeping charge in the school text books now used by the children of North Carolina for this fall thus placing another heavy drain on the parents of the children of the State to buy a new set of books but the State board of education composed of seasoned Democratic politicians, these being the governor, secretary of State, treasurer, auditor, attorney general and superintendent of public instruction heard the rumblings of the taxpayers and as this is a campaign year decided that it would be the best thing for the wheezy old Democratic party to let well enough alone and use the same books this year as last. But watch out for 1927, after the election is over and see if there is not a nother change in the school text books that will cost the parents of children thousands of dollars.

The proposition to use the same books another year was discussed at the March meeting and left open until another meeting, the past week, when the little coterie of Democrats composing the board decided to postpone the matter for a year.

Objection to any change in the elementary text books for school children in the State for the next five years was contained in recent questionnaires sent to candidates for State offices by the State Federation of Labor and the Farmers' Union, which indicated opposition to the changing of the text books.

The 1923 General Assembly enacted a law that made it impossible to make a complete change in the school text book in less than five

While the contract made in 1922
by the State Board of Education with the publisher of the school books now used by school children of the State expires next year, Superintendent Allen states that matter of extending the contract for another year had been submitted to the publisher and the latter had agreed to the proposal.

Superintendent Allen states that he had been requested to notify the publishers that at the proper time the State Board of Education would submit contracts for the new text books. The contracts, according to Mr. Allen, will embody all provisions of the old contracts.

The Republican party has gone on record in several instances in opposition to this continual changing of the text books taught in the public schools of North Carolina which is such a drain on the parents of the State but doubtless had it not been a campaign year the Democratic machine, as usual, drunk with power would have gone ahead anyway and changed entire list this fall. Watch out, for 1927.—Union Republican.

Loss From Tornadoes.

Bangor Commercial.

No less than 115 individual torna-does were reported to the Weather Bureau in 1925, with 130 listed in 1924. The loss of life in 1925 was estimated at 853. This is more than twice the toll of life of the 1924 tonadoes, which was 376, and about night times the toll of 1923. The tornadoes occurred were April 30, 1924, and March 18, 1925. Reports indicate that on the latter day there were seven tornadoes in different districts causing 792 deaths, or more than nine-tenths of all tornado deaths during the year.

Present indications are that the tornadoes of 1925 caused damage amounting nearly $25,000,000. The 1924 tornadoes caused still more loss, or about $26,100,000. There have now been 26 months in succession, from January 1924 to February 1926, inclusive, with at least one tornado reported in each month.
This is an unusual succession without break. Windstorms other than tornadoes have also ceased considerable loss of property and life, though not nearly so much as torna-does.

The first caucus between a Democrat and a Citizen that we have observed, was held here last week.

The wrong kind of men at the head of a church, a factory, a secret organization or anything else will soon put the organization out of business. We have seen this fact demonstrated.

Sheriff Cope is going to collect the taxes so long as he holds his present job regardless of how many tax-dodgers he offends. The good people of the county should commend him for his record along this line.

The Democrats have had their convention, the registration books are now open, the water is warming up slowly and the campaign will now begin to take on a little life. County politics are only beginning to simmer, but by the time hot weather arrives the temperature of the average politician will register 100 in the shade.

Will the Davie county Democrats nominate a ticket composed of Democrats this fall or will they put out a ticket composed of former enemies? This question has been asked The Record frequently. It is impossible for us to say what our good Democratic brethren will do. Surely they can find nine good Democrats in Davie county who are willing to make a sacrifice and accept the nominations for the various county offices.

There is some dissatisfaction on account of the time the post office is closed in the afternoon in Mocksville. The office closes at 5:30 p. m., which is much earlier than any of the business houses close with the exception of the banks and the court house. The Record mentions this matter because it believes that the public is interested in good mail service. We don't know what time the postoffices close in other towns.

Lots of folks spend too much time looking after other folks' business, which reminds us that what everybody's business is nobody's business. Preachers as well as laymen sometimes make mistakes. Doctors and editors also make mistakes. The editor prints his and everybody talks about what a fool he is, while the doctor buries his and talks cover them up with flowers. This is a great old world we are living in, and we wouldn't swap it for anything under the sun.

The Record is going to give a premium of a five dollar gold piece for the best coop of chickens at the Center fair this fall. C. C. Sanford Sons Co., are giving $25 in cash for the best coop of chickens. The boys and girls, men and women who are interested in poultry should get busy and see what fine chickens they can bring to this fair. Davie county is fast becoming one of the leading cattle and poultry counties in the state. There is no reason why she shouldn't be at the head of the column.

The Record man was talking with a good Methodist preacher the other day in regard to politics, churches, automobiles and good and bad folks. The preacher told us he thought the world was getting worse all the time and was headed for the devil at a rapid rate. This is the first preacher we have talked with that agreed with us that this jazz age was worse than twenty-five or fifty years ago when folks went to hell on foot instead of in automobiles. The country has become almost bankrupt and greatly demoralized since the first tin lizzie was put on wheels. There are many good people in the world, else it would have been destroyed long ago, but the big majority have gone money mad, dance mad, booze mad or speed mad. One of these days there will have to be a halt called. The world cannot long travel at the rate it is going today. The fiddler will have to be paid sooner or later.

Lawyers For Ellis Get $8,000 Verdict.

Winston-Salem, April 28.—After a trial lasting for three days, the jury tonight in the case wherein eight lawyers brought suit against W. B. Ellis, a former tobaccoist of this city, to recover legal fees totaling $15,000, brought in a verdict awarding $8,000.

Lions Elect Officers

The Lions Club at their semi-monthly business meeting and luncheon Saturday evening, elected the following officers: President—H. W. Harris. Vice-Presidents—Dr. L. P. Martin, I. P. Graham and J. C. Sanford. Secretary—E. C. Morris. Teller—Twister—Maxie Brown. Lion Tamer—T. J. Cudell. Directors—Dr. E. C. Choate, J. S. Stroud, A. A. Holliman and Knox Johnstone. An interesting meeting was held and the luncheon prepared by Miss Dorothy Meroney, was enjoyed by the 28 members present. There is a prospect of Lion J. C. Sanford erecting a handsome brick building on the west side of the square in which to house the Lions. Several important matters were discussed during the business session.

KARPEN
May 1st to 8th

Greater savings to inspire all home-lovers

This is the furniture sale of the season. No doubt about it. See how these simple statements answer every question that might perplex.

Are the pieces old style or left-overs? Absolutely the newest Karpen pieces are included, full suites, occasional chairs, day beds; all the wanted things. Furniture for living room, library, sun-room, and hall. Most of these have just come from the maker's shops.

How can I be sure of quality at such low prices? The Karpen nameplate on the underframe of each piece proves it a genuine Karpen production, with the inner integrity that assures sturdy worth throughout the hidden parts.

Why are the prices reduced? To make new friends for our store, to please old friends, and to advertise the beauty, quality, and greater value of Karpen furniture.

How long does this sale last? The special selling is for seven days only. After May 8th every piece goes back to its regular price. Please come in early, while stocks are complete and fresh. It is especially advantageous to visit our displays during the forenoon. But by all means, don't fail to come and look around before the Karpen Week reductions are withdrawn.

"Quartermaster speaks for the crew," he said. "And my view is as for the crew is for fighting for their rights. The Walrus has played second fiddle long enough, and here's a chance as isn't likely to come again. There was a second brief interval of silence.

"Nobody contrary," announced the quartermaster cheerfully. "Council's quiet. Keep quiet, mates. No drizzle, no rain. There'll be plenty of both."

The snatching ranks broke up into groups, and a number of men stroled toward their hiding-places. But I did not wait. From the shelter of the chase-gun I hunched myself back behind a water-cask, and so regarded the bows, sliding overside and all down the anchor-cable to the water.

A huge white shape floated up to the surface.

"Is dot you, Bob?"

"Yes. They're for attacking the James when the tide turns."

He headed down-stream without a word. We were half-way to the James before he spoke.

"Dot Murray, he is a lucky feller. Always gets what he wants."

"What does he want?" I panted.

"Now he gets rid of Flint and der Walrus crew, ja."

"But he'll lose their half of the treasure!"

"Maybe; maybe he don't. And after dot he gets rid of der James."

"You're crazy, Peter," I said indignantly, trying my best to keep pace with him. "He'd be stranded here."

"Oh, he don't dot here—maybe he don't dot at all; maybe der tide'll stop helping him, ja. But if he gets der chance, you watch him, Bob. He gets rid of der James, and maybe he gets rid of us, ja."

"Well, why do we help him, then?" I snapped, recalling my great-uncle's parting gibe.

"Dot's where he is smart, Bob. He takes it so we go to help him to save our own skins, ja. And der little gal, too. For him and der Irish der drizzle like a Lenape squaw I ain't got to use. But you and der little gal—dot's different."

"Do you mean he intends to sacrifice all of us? And carry away the whole treasure for himself?"

"I don't know, Bob. Murray, he is a funny feller. Very funny! He likes der little gal. Maybe he likes me—don't know. And he is honest about der old king dot liffs in Rome. But say of us come in his way, he would risk us aside. Dot's him now!"

The stern of the Royal James rose before us, and in one of the open windows my great-uncle's fine white head showed like a faded picture in a frame set across a darkened room.

"The before he planned too big," I whispered on. "Maybe this time der gal's loud to der tide!"

My great-uncle's voice floated down, clearly distinct.

"They are gone overboard. Gadooks, whether, if they do not shortly return I'll ship my cable and take advantage of what remains of the flood come at the Walrus and finish matters off-hand."

"O'Donnell's reply was simply a serious echo from the interior of the cabin.

"That sounds as though he had some for us," I murmured to Peter. He was trending water beside me.

"Ja. Use he has for us. Maybe he needs us when he gets rid of der James, eh? If der tide falls him, we can have use for honest men, Bob."

"Well, soon know," I retorted, and noticed the rope which dangled by the water-post.

"Who is there?" challenged my great-uncle, instantly alert.

"Robert," I whispered back, and commenced to climb.

Both Murray and O'Donnell—the latter for the time being stirred out his habitual gloom—assisted me by the window-sill, and it affected me oddly to note my great-uncle's concern for the water I dripped on a slicken coat.

"You ha' suffered no hurt?" he asked eagerly.

"No, no," I answered. "Make haste help Peter up. They are coming against us with the making of the tide."

He was betwixt me and the window, I could see the faint smile of satisfaction on his face.

"This what was to be expected of you," he remarked. "We must insure our watch. 'Tis no compliment for people that they failed to sustain sight of your going and coming."

After squattering into the cabin like enormous toad.

"Dot," he squeaked. "I haf bubbled under my skin. We haf a fight with Murray, ja?"

"Thanks to you and Robert, friend 'twill be rather in the nature of chastisement than a fight," he answered urbanely. "If you will pardon gentlemen, I will go and complete necessary arrangements."

A trickle of glass told me that O'Donnell was refilling his goblet.

"That's a fight to the likes o' him!"

muttered the Irishman dolefully. "Treachery and scheming and murdering, aye it's a fine night for such! Oh, blessed saints, where'll we be this time the morrow?"

"Safe, beyond question," I sought to encourage him as I drew on my breeches. "Tis never the Walrus' scaly crew will overcome us."

"Be not too sure, Master Ormerod," he retorted with unusual vehemence. "I am thinking there is the curse of high Heaven on this venture and all connected with it."

Nevertheless he buckled on his sword and accompanied us to the deck when we were dressed. Men were scurrying silently to and fro, and from an open hatch came the whine of tackle as a piece was shifted on the gundeck. Aloft, squads of topmen were unfurling shreds of canvas to give the James steeprage way at need.

On the poop my great-uncle was issuing his final orders to Martin, Saunders and Coupeau.

"You, Saunders," he said, "will stand by the anchor-cable with a broad-ax and upon my giving the word heave it asunder. Your position, Martin, will be in the waist. Keep men on the fore and main yards, ready to make sail when the cable is cut. Coupeau, of you I expect an initial broadside of crushing effect and a second fire if circumstances permit. Now to your stations, and above all things instruct your men to preserve silence. The man who makes a noise I will blow from a gun forthwith, and let that be my declaration to Flint!"

The officers gave their acknowledgments and fitted away. Simultaneously Peter pointed up the inlet.

"See!" he exclaimed.

The Walrus' riding-light winked out. An interval of minutes, and one of the waist-lights followed it. Another interval, and she disappeared completely in the black maw of the night.

My great-uncle sneezed delicately. "In the dark one is clumsy," he observed. "I fear I have abused my nose with an overheavy dose of Rip-Rap. Well, well! Perhaps there is a parable in the incident for such clever fellows as Captain Flint."

"I must ask you not to move about, gentlemen. We have the better part of a glass to wait for the ebb, but caution is our watchword!"

We heard the Walrus before we had sight of her—the slapping of a head-sail, a rattling block, a vague creak of cordage. Then an impression of a mighty shadow, a towering spiderweb of spars and lacy rigging, stealing ghostlike from the enshrouding dark.

She floated nearer. Nearer still. And nearer. It seemed that the two vessels must collide, and the suspense became unbearable. I wondered at my great-uncle's restraint. Would he never—I gasped with relief as his cool, even tones clove the silence.

Crash! The deck leaped underfoot; the anchored hull surged forward. A red sheet of flame girdled the James' side, and in the instant's glare the Walrus was revealed in stark detail.

Agalms, a setting of glittering detail, water and low, forested shores. I saw a man in her foretop, aimlessly balancing a grenade. I saw men staring curiously from the gunports as our broadside smashed into them. I had a glimpse of the brutal face of Bones, peering over the bulwarks, a cutlass in his teeth.

The darkness returned, and a multitude of echoes dinned back and forth across the inlet. There was a rending and cracking of timbers, with such screams as I never hope to hear again, the screams of wicked men who face an unexpected death, oath and blasphemy and piteous appeals, all blended into one terrible, heart-scorching whole.

My great-uncle's level voice dominated the confusion as easily as if it had the silence.

"Cut your cable, Saunders!"

Flint's bellow answered from the Walrus.

"Give it to 'em, ye cowardly swabs! Stand to your guns!"

The red tongues of the Walrus' guns licked out at us; the staggering roar of their discharging smote the night. The fabric of the Royal James quivered and shook as the iron hail lashed into her. A moaning and screeching rose from waist, fore-castle and gundeck.

"Oh, God!"

"My leg! My leg!"

"They're out! My guts are a-run-in' out!"

"Where's my arm? Oh, God, where's my arm?"

But a third time my great-uncle mastered the uproar.

"Make sail, Martin!"

Coupeau had reloaded his guns, and the James fired a second broadside with the same crushing unanimity as before. The Walrus recoiled as if our fire had had the effect of physically repelling her from us. Clouds of smoke came between the ships, and I perceived that we were benefitting from the severing of the anchor-cable. The ebb tide was already sweeping us down the anchorage toward the open sea.

The Walrus shot off another ragged broadside, which for the most part splashed water or scattered mud, and then settled to a pegging chase, the Long Toms on her fore-castle barking fitfully as they tossed the twelve-pound shot atwart our decks. Our guns were silent. Our gundeck spewed forth men, whom Martin hustled to the yards to shake out every sail to catch the errant wind that veered gustily from southeast to southwest.

Colonel O'Donnell waved his fist at my great-uncle.

"What madness will have taken ye now, Murray?" he cried. "There was the grand chance ye had to finish the rascals once and for all. Are ye feared of them that ye turn tail—you that ha' struck first blow; aye, and second, too?"

"Not at all, sir," rejoined my great-uncle. "Having struck first blow and second blow, as you so aptly phrase it, I am of a mind to strike also the coup de grace. And this with as trifling damage to my own vessel as is possible."

"Man, you'll never have another such chance as that ye just cast away," mourned the Irishman.

"For a soldier, cavalier, you reveal astonishing lack of judgment," returned my great-uncle. "Had I remained to finish conclusions with Captain Flint in the narrow space of the anchorage I might conceivably have gained the victory, but it must have been by means of subordinating brains to brawn, and with loss in proportion thereto. I prefer to force him to sea, where, by maneuvering and proper strategy, I can secure the same object at a half or a third of the cost."

"Tis all the same," retorted O'Donnell. "If ye sink him, ye lose his treasure."

"Quite true," assented Murray. "But what would you say to driving him ashore, eh?"

"What O'Donnell would have answered to this I know not; for there was a sudden drumming of feet on the deck, and Moira cast herself into his arms.

"Oh, padre," she cried tearfully, "and are ye safe from the cannon?"

I waked in my bed with their roaring, and it came over me we were on the Santissima Trinidad once more, and poor Señor Nunez, the apothecary, groaning from his death-wound—and him that was looking forward to the quiet end of his days in the little house by Alcantara!

"And then I was thinking 'twas all a horrid dream. But the cannon blatted again, and the ship trembled, and there was a shriek at my very door. So out I ran in my shift, and Dionea, the blackamoor was lying in his blood on the cabin floor, and Ben Gunn beside him a-praying. And with that I put on me enough clothing for decency's sake, and came to find ye, for my four bones are clattering with fear, and that's Heaven's truth!"

O'Donnell drew her close.

"There, there, acushla," he said with a tenderness he had only for her. "The worst will be over. There's naught for ye to fear."

She reached up and stroked his face.

"Troth, and I was thinking that same if I could but come at you, padre," says she. "But 'tis terrible fearsome to be sleeping by your lone self, and awaken in the midst of a sea-fight."

Her father swore under his breath.

"Ah, 'tis I was the weak, foolish fellow to drag you into such a venture! There'll come a day I must answer."

She stopped his mouth with her hand.

"As if I'd be anywhere else than just here!"

I turned my head, not wishing to be prying into their affairs, and a quarter-mile astern I saw a jet of flame and heard the smacking report of one of the Walrus' chase-guns.

Moira said something more that I did not hear, and he interrupted her.

"Get ye below, my maid until we—"

There was a harsh, whistling sound in the air, and the hairs on one side of my head rose up, and on the heels of this came the thud of a shot as it struck timber.

"Oise, egad!" commented my great-uncle.

O'Donnell swayed strangely and dropped over his daughter's shoulder. "Faire!" The dazed grief in her voice was tragic. "Why won't ye stand? Are ye hit? Oh, blessed Virgin, there's no sense left in him! Bob, Master Peter, help me! He's so—so—heavy."

Peter and I jumped to aid her, and Murray was not far behind us. We lowered O'Donnell's tall body to the deck, and I ran for a lantern. When I returned with it my great-uncle had assumed control of the situation.

"We can feel no blood or broken bones," he said. "Hold your light here by his head, if you please, Robert."

The yellow glow played over the Irishman's long face. His lips were drawn back in what had been a smile; his eyes were fixed and glassy; no pulse beat in his corded throat. Moira crouched beside him, chafing his limp hands and cradling a melody of endearments in English, Irish and Spanish. Murray, opposite her, thrust exploring fingers into the bosom of her father's shirt. A startled look appeared in my great-uncle's lambent eyes, but his features preserved their immobility.

"Tis useless to cry to him, lass," he said gently. "He doth not answer, you see."

"But he will!" she protested. "Sure, ye must soon be finding what is wrong with him, sir. It may be a sup of brandy would bring him round."

My great-uncle reached across and plucked from her grasp the hand she had been rubbing.

"Come," he said, rising. "We will ask Peter to carry him to his berth, shall we?"

"But—but—must we bring him to?"

"We cannot bring him to," he answered kindly.

She stood up bewildered.

"Not—bring—him—to? But why?"

"Because his heart no longer beats," said my great-uncle. "Quick! Catch her, Robert."

She lay like a tired child in my arms.

"Dead!" she murmured faintly.

"Tis cannot be dead!" I exclaimed. "There's not a wound on him."

"Neen," said Peter.

He picked up the lantern from where I had dropped it on the deck and directed the light upon the upper part of Colonel O'Donnell's head. A blue bruise like a scar was spread across the Irishman's left temple.

"A graze-shot," pronounced Peter. "Der cannonball came dot close. Ja!"

"But the skin is not even broken," I objected.

"Ja, but dot don't matter."

Murray bent over and fingered the bruise.

"Peter is right," he said. "'Twas the concussion affected the brain. I have heard of such a freak shot, but never saw it happen before."

Moira clung to my arms.

"And he is really dead? The padre is really dead? And he unshriven, without a comfort of the Church! Oh, holy saints, be his advocates! Sure, was there ever a crueller end?"

She collapsed in a passion of weeping.

"Conduct her below, Robert," said my great-uncle. "We will follow you."

She suggested me to lead her from the poop without objection, more like a child than ever, sobbing and protesting and repeating the same things over and over again, in an abandonment of grief which only the Irish can attain.

"Tis you are the kind friend," she stammered when we had reached her stateroom. "And oh, Bob, I have the sore need of you, I that am an orphan in a pirate ship. Troth, I haven't a friend in the wide world unless it be you and Master Corlaer. But I am the bad, selfish girl to be thinking of my own plight, and the father that loved me this moment gone up to Peter's gate, and him without the holy water to his lips or so much as a prayer said over him. Ah, what ill deed did we do, either one of us, that he should be taken from me so."

without a word of parting? The sisters were always after saying we must reconcile ourselves to God's mercy, but 'tis little mercy has been shown to me."

I quieted her at last, brought her a swallow of brandy and induced her to lie down.

"I mustn't be crying the way I will have done," she apologized, gulping her sobs. "Himself will be needing all the prayers I can say, and a boiling of candles, too. Do you go on, Bob—only promise you'll not leave me by my lone if there's more fighting. I could never stand to hear the thundering of the cannon after—after—that—and no one by to bid me take heart o' grace."

The gray dawnlight was seeping through the stern windows when I rejoined my great-uncle and Peter in the main cabin. Peter was as placid as ever, puffing industriously at a long clay pipe; but my relative displayed more concern than I remembered to have observed in him at any time in the past.

"I trust you were able to calm the poor lass?" he greeted me. "Stap me what a sorry business! I'd never have chosen O'Donnell for a traveling companion, but without him I know not what to do. The whole venture—"

He shook his head and stared out the window beside him, clicking the lid of his snuffbox open and shut.

"But we have first to attend to the Walrus," he added presently. "I shall do so with the less reluctance after that last shot. The cursed luck of it! A beaten enemy's blow in the dark, blundered, by gad! And to think it must strike down of all men the one most essential to my schemes. I could—Well, well, no matter! We must triumph over the unexpected. 'Tis the chasm all great leaders must cross to win the final victory."

I found myself somehow instinctively hostile to his attitude.

"What have you done with Colonel O'Donnell?" I asked coldly.

"Peter carried him to his stateroom. We will give him decent burial when we return to the island. And perhaps some day we can come for him in state with a squadron of king's ships and bear him home to a grave in the land he was exiled from."

My great-uncle's spirits brightened noticeably as he contemplated the picture of his words presented.

"Yes, yes," he murmured half to himself. "What O'Donnell could have done surely I can do. Our friends in Avignon will help. And, Robert?"

He turned to me.

"Ah my boy this unfortunate incident is my best justification for pressing you in my cause. What should I do without you and Peter? 'Twill be for you two, with Mistress Moira, to establish our connections with the king's agents in France."

"You seem to forget I am no Jacobite," I answered unpleasantly.

"Tut, tut, you shall be as stout a Jacobite as Princes Charles himself."

"Not I."

"We'll leave that to Mistress Moira," I retorted.

Mrs. Mattie McClamrock died last Tuesday at the home of her niece, Mrs. S. A. Bailey, at Cooleemee. The body was carried to Eaton's Baptist church Thursday and laid to rest. Mrs. McClamrock lived at Cana, but went to Cooleemee to visit relatives a few days before her death. She is survived by two brothers, Messrs. S. P. Snider of Jerusalem and Phillip Snider, of Alleghany county. Her husband died several years ago.

William Ferabee, a well known citizen of the Cana section, was found dead in bed early Friday morning. Mr. Ferabee was 75 years of age, and was apparently in good health. Surviving are his wife, four sons and four daughters. The funeral and burial services were held Sunday at Wesley's Chapel. Mr. Ferabee was a good man and his sudden death brought sadness to his many relatives and friends in Davie.

The Harmony-Statesville highway which has been closed over Rocky Creek for the past several months, while a bridge was being built, was opened to the public last week. The Winston-Charlotte busses are now running over this route instead of following route 75 from County Line to Statesville as heretofore. The distance from Mocksville to Statesville is 31 miles, but 15 miles of this distance is hard-surface, and the road is much better than route 75.

Mrs. J. H. Reid, of New York, spent Saturday the guest of Mrs. J. C. Boger, on R. 1.

Sheriff Cope carried Stokes Benson, of Fork, to the State Hospital at Morganton Sunday.

The Farmington, Fork, Smith Grove and Harmony commencement are being held this week.

Miss Gladys Dwiggins, a student at Greensboro College, spent the week-end here with her parents.

J. M. Ratledge, of near Cana, who suffered a stroke of paralysis about ten days ago, is slightly improved.

Mrs. H. W. Brown, of R. 2, was carried to Broadoaks Sanatorium at Morganton Saturday, where she will undergo treatment.

A meeting of the Associated Charities, will meet in the Directors room of the Southern Bank & Trust Co., Friday May 7th, at 3:30 o'clock.

The Mocksville and Harmony high school ball teams met on the latter's diamond Monday afternoon. The game was fast and furious and resulted in a score of 3 to 2 in favor of Harmony.

Several of the Davie county cases booked for trial at Salisbury Federal court last week were continued on account of the serious illness of Federal Agent Fred Ratledge's father. Roy Williams of Smith Grove, was tried and sentenced to five months in Davie jail. Will Link, of near Cooleemee, drew a six months sentence in the Davie jail, while Note Bailey, of Fulton drew six months in the local jail; Will Shuler, also of Fulton, got a $500 fine or 30 days in jail. Bill Canter, of Smith Grove, also got a jail sentence. Our jail is about full. Law violators will take notice and be governed accordingly.

Mocksville School Present Operetta

Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the high school auditorium, the primary grades of the Mocksville School presented "Pandora," a charming operetta based on Hawthorne's story "Paradise of Children," in which more than thirty children from the first grades took part.

The operetta was given in three acts which represented the three periods of the day, morning, noon and twilight. In the first act Quicksilver brings the box and warns the children not to open it. Act two shows how Pandora's curiosity gets the better of her and she opens the box, letting out the troubles. But this like all other fairy stories, has a happy ending and in the last act happiness is restored by Hope and Love.

Solo parts were taken by Margaret Smith as Pandora, Billy Mooney as Epimetheus, and Carolina Cherry as Hope.

The entire cast was as follows: Pandora, Margaret Smith; Epimetheus, Billy Mooney; Hope, Carolyn Cherry; Quicksilver, Albert Chaffin; Love, Mary Harris; Troubles, William Chaffin, A. T. Grant; Billy Nail, Lonnie Gray Call, Lois Binkley; Margaret Ward, Ashley Dwiggins, Louise Frost; Chorus, children from first three grades.

The operetta was coached by Miss Isabella De Voming, director of public school music, who was assisted by the primary grades teachers, Misses Beulah Flemming, Fronie French, Margaret Bell and Mrs. Zol Anderson.

Public Speaking.

Lieutenant Lawrence A. Oakley, State Director of Public Welfare among the negroes, will speak to our colored citizens in the Mocksville colored school auditorium on Thursday evening, May 6th, at seven o'clock. He is a real man with a real message. We hope the colored people will give him a splendid audience. Please be prompt.

Chicken Prices in 1925 Highest in Four Years

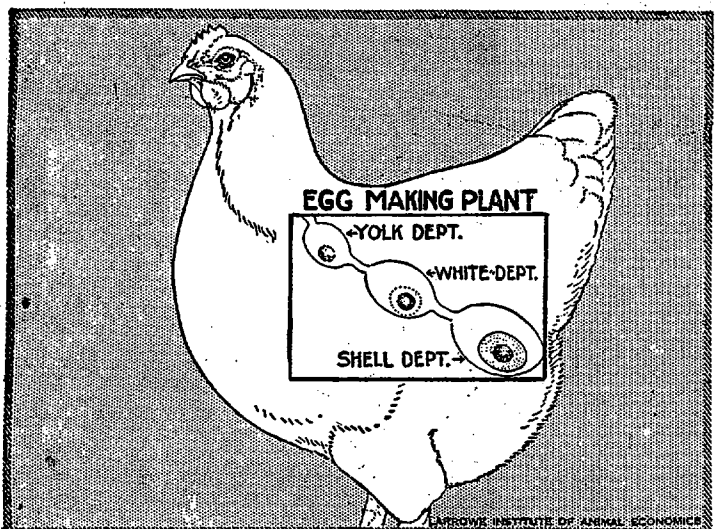

A STEADILY expanding market for table poultry in recent years resulted in an average 1925 farm price per chicken of 83¢ cents, the highest since 1921, according to the 1925 market review of the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. Prices for fowls on the New York market during the year were highest in late January when extra quality reached 37 cents a pound. Since then they have ranged between 35 cents and 24 cents until early November when the usual heavy receipts of this time of the year began to be felt. Prices then dropped to 21½ cents a pound, but recovered rapidly as the colder holiday season came on.

Increased demand for poultry in 1925 over the previous year is due in some measure to a lesser consumption in 1924, caused by a wide-spread poultry epidemic in that year. Storage stocks of poultry did not accumulate as rapidly during the past year as they did in 1924, which is an indication of continued good prices during the spring months when this poultry is taken from storage.

Comparatively lower feed costs since 1920 have made poultry profits in recent years the highest in thirty years. Present market demands and industrial conditions in general point to good prices for poultry and poultry products for another two years at least.

Hen's Own Egg Factory Is Run Like Real Plant

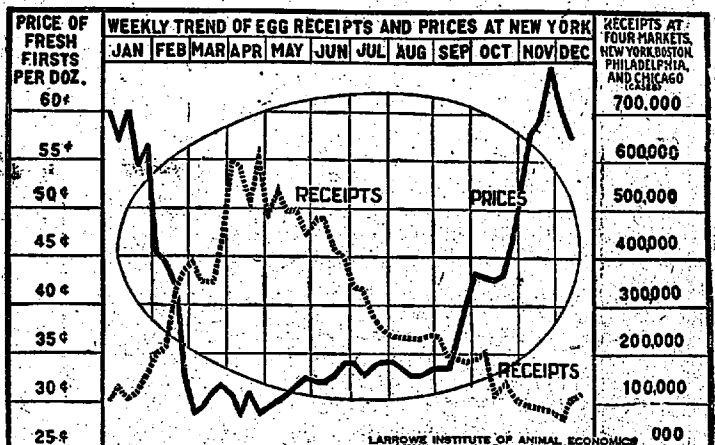

IT'S A whole egg or none for the hen, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. Being an honest manufacturer she does not make half an egg. Her egg "factory" is run like a real plant. When the yolk is made it is then passed into another department where it is surrounded by white, then into a third where it is encased by a layer of the purest form of carbonate of lime, forming the egg shell, after which it is ready to greet a hungry world.

The average hen lays about 72 eggs a year, mostly during warm weather. She should manufacture twice that number, state the Institute's experts who, in experimenting with hundreds of laying hens, discovered surprising differences in the number of eggs produced by various poultry flocks. If the hen's egg-making apparatus fails to work up to a standard of efficiency it is probably not the hen's fault, but rather that of the poultryman who unknowingly does not provide her with the food material the hen requires to keep all three egg-making departments working full time. When the hen is fed sound grains and an efficient mash containing egg-making nutrients that make for the greatest efficiency in her plant, she can't help but make eggs! Feed is the most important single factor in egg production. It is also the biggest item of cost. Profitable results cannot be secured with poor rations.

In addition to providing the best rations for egg production the wise poultryman will watch his flock, continuously cull out the naturally poor layers, thus building up a flock of heavy-laying fowls. Every effort should also be made to see that the hens are comfortably housed, especially in winter, because dark, damp, dirty quarters may nullify all the advantages resulting from culling and better feeding.

Egg Eaters Increase in 1925 Prices Highest in Five Years

EGG prices during the past year were higher than they have been since 1920, according to the annual review of the egg market made by the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. While there has been very little difference in the total production this past year as compared to 1924, the higher prices during 1925 indicate larger consumer demand.

The Fruit Crop Has Closed

The temperature last today morning was down to 30, or three degrees below freezing and there was plenty of ice and frost, the latter being heavy in places.

According to Mr. F. T. each am, very little damage, apparently, was done to the fruit crop. Peaches had not shed their petals and this along with the frost on the trees, helped to protect this valuable crop. There is heavy set of pears and these are safe also. Apples are in full bloom and bid fair to yield a heavy crop. So far they, too, are safe from damage. Fruit should be sprayed again.

Advanced wheat may be injured a little, Mr. Meacham this, but not many fields are far enough advanced as to cause serious injury. The cold snap stunted baby chicks somewhat and did early gains no good.

Speaking about these ever-recurring late cold spells in the spring an aged Union county citizen told the Monroe Enquirer last week there would be more winter. The turtle dove may go off hatched in his spring love-making, the groundhog may get fooled and stay out and the frogs rustle the seasons worse than the women—furs in summer and silk in winter—but for a old reliable weather prophet this wise seer commends you to the persimmon tree. It clays its fashion parade. Even now the 'possum tree is as dormant as in mid-winter. So, therefore, don't take 'em off' until the 'summon tree is in full bloom. —Latesville Daily.

Be Neighborly!

If you are one of those who have written for the Charles William Stores' Catalog of big bargains and haven't received it we are sorry. The reason is, an amazing demand for this book has exhausted our supply. We earnestly ask you to borrow a catalog from one of our customers—there are many in your community—and we'll sure they'll oblige you. . . .

Of our old customers we ask please help us and your less fortunate neighbors by lending them your catalog for awhile. We could not foresee how great the demand would be for this catalog and as our Special Midsummer Sale Catalog will be published so soon—May 15th, it seems hardly possible to print a fresh supply of the big book. We have all the big bargains that we could get. However, if our old customers and new neighbors will lend us they will render a real service to us and their neighbors.

We thank you.

JUST TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

What Was Happening In Davie Before The Days of Automobiles and Rolled Hoses.

Luther Leach, of Hickory, visited relatives here last week. Frank Stonestreet made a business trip to Mt. Vernon last week. Mrs. John Green spent several days with her parents near Kappa last week.

The Davie Bank was organized at this place last week, with $10,000 capital. W. A. Bailey, of Advance, was elected president; T. B. Bailey and James McGuire vice-presidents; T. J. Byerly, cashier, E. L. Gaither, Attorney. Directors J. F. Hanes, Herbert Clement, Jas. McGuire, W. J. Byerly, Z. N. Anderson, C. C. Sanford, E. M. Armfield, W. A. Bailey, T. B. Baily, A. M. McGlamery, E. E. Hunt, O. L. Williams, H. T. Smithdeal and W. J. Armfield.

J. L. Sheek has a fish farm near Smith Grove. Last week some fishermen caught an 18½ pounds. It is said the fish was as large around as Frank Naylor. This fish farm can be bought at a bought at a bargain.

Mr. Horace Peck, of New York, who has been spending the winter here, was called home last week on account of the sudden death of his father.

Lightning struck a clothes line near the stables of George Crofts, of Fork Church last Wednesday and killed a fine horse in the stable.

S. A. Bailey who lived near Fork Church, died last Saturday morning, aged 40 years and was buried Sunday evening at Fork.

Cheek, of Yadin, got 17 years in the penitentiary for killing J. A. Pinnix. Many thought he should have been hanged.

B. A. Knox, of Cleveland, was in town last week.

C. L. Granger is resting after spending some time at work in Charlotte.

L. K. Bailey, of Cripple Creek, Colo., is visiting relatives in the county.

Quite a little sprinkle of hail here Wednesday but no damage done.

G. H. Graham, of Farmington, killed a hawk last week that measured 4½ feet.

G. W. Green with his son and their families, have moved from Cana to Mocksville and are boarding with M. R. Chaffin.

S. B. Bailey and George Hardin, of Salisbury, spent Saturday in Mocksville with relatives.

L. M. McClamrock and daughter spent Saturday in Winston.

Horn Bros. & Johnson are putting in new machinery at their flour mill.

Mrs. J. B. Johnson has returned from a visit to her parents in Cleveland.

A. M. Garwood, of Fork Church, was in town Monday.

Not Fit for Publication

Once in an English class the teacher assigned a composition to be written, and it had to contain 250 words. The next morning one little boy was asked to read his. This is what he had written: "My uncle was driving his new car one day and he had a puncture * * * The other 236 words are not fit for publication."—Washington Post.

Two of a Kind

A man will give a dollar for a fifty-cent article that he wants. A woman will give forty cents for a fifty-cent article that she doesn't want.—Detroit News.

Of course, we're not interested, but whatever became of King Tut?

Men who settle world problems on the street corner can't settle a dog fight in the neighborhood.

Legislative Ambitions.

Jesting after an ancient and reliable pattern, a Guilford citizen says he is amind to run for the legislature, as, not having made any great success at anything else, he allows maybe he would be a good legislator. A man who announced as a candidate for the general assembly was once asked by an acquaintance why he sought the position. The asker had ideas of his own on various things of the sort that legislators can do, and was interested in exchanging opinions about the problems of state and how to solve them with one who evidently had been thinking of similar things. "I've got two boys," answered the would-be solon, "and I just want when they grow up they will be able to say that their daddy was a member of the legislature."

Such an ambition might appear more or less shocking to the idealist, but it is not ambition as legislative ambitions go. It is probably something like the same reason that has actuated a large majority of men who have sought election to the legislature. If such a motive had been the poorest, the state would have been in better case today.

The blight of North Carolina, as of other states, has been lawmakers who went to the capital to do what they were told to do; and who to that extent, knew exactly why they sought the office but did not tell. Many of them knew definitely what they would get for doing as they were told, but more with an indefinite hope of substantial rewards. In our state as in others, most of the lawmakers have been, and are, the "eye-alls" who are open for business. Future professional employment and political preferment are both legitimate desires that can be made to fit in with almost any sort of legislative course.

The optimist can find much basis for the conclusion that the quality of legislation and legislators steadily improves. Whenever the general assembly is in session, in these times, there is an approach to constructive, economic and social questions undreamed of a few decades ago. A new sort of state consciousness is exemplified in chapter after chapter of legislation with liberal appropriation of public funds and the day of course work, rough stuff, happily has passed.

But if anyone supposes there are no longer those present in effective number who know exactly what they are there for, let him present some measure in which the interests of the state as a whole are opposed to those of particular groups that long ago found out how to look out for themselves.—Greensboro News.

Plenty of Peaches in Sand-Hill Country.

Despite the killing frost, the past week, the Sand Hill country will make a full crop of peaches this year according to orchardists in the vicinity of the Southern Pines and Candor. The frost damage is variously estimated at from 16 to 60 per cent, but since the trees would have to be thinned to that extent, or greater, the size of the crop will be affected but little.

Dewberries, which are grown commercially in the sandhill section, were injured from 10 to 15 per cent, according to estimates from George Ross, head of the division of markets of the department of agriculture.—Ex.

What has become of the mills that used to make cotton hose for women.

This is the time of the year for the good women to begin wearing their furs.

Not Federal Officers.

Two deputy sheriffs of Surry county, Bud Simmons and E. S. Smith, were convicted Tuesday at Dobson of manslaughter in connection with the death last November of Jimmy Sutphin and were sentenced by Judge James L. Webb to from 15 to 18 months each. The two officers wanted to stop an automobile in which Sutphin was a passenger. One Johnny Joyce was the driver and Melvin Joyce was also riding in the car. The exact details of what happened are not available but it is clear that the car did not stop and that Sutphin, the passenger, was shot through the head and died almost immediately. If there is any dispute that the shot which killed Sutphin came from the deputy sheriffs it is not reflected in the news stories.

At the time of the shooting it was said that the officers were looking for a liquor car and thought driven by Joyce and containing Sutphin was the car they were looking for. And it was said then, and we have not heard that it has been contradicted, that the Joyce car was not a liquor car and carried no liquor when the deputy sheriffs blazed away at it.

In brief, another such case of the type with which the state has become familiar, only just now the state is looking at it from the other view. Simmons and Smith have appealed and the conviction and sentence await, therefore, the action of the Supreme court. There was a story a few days ago of another such incident in Virginia, similar in all important details with the usual run of such cases with one exception. The officers who shot at a car which it was said he thought was a liquor car went to his home and shortly thereafter was found dead. He died either by his own hands or accidentally. It is pointed, although not conclusively, to suicide. Certainly it was known that when he discovered his mistake (he wounded a passenger) he suffered terribly but while to such extent that his reason gave way we do not know. He was an exception.

Those who clothed with official authority wound and kill innocent riders and go their way unpunished are becoming exceptions so. Simmons and Smith, however, were not federal officers.—Greensboro News.

Doesn't Like High Point Jass.

The public dances in High Point, like many other cities of the state have become notorious and some of the doings carried on at these parties are not calculated to the eternal glory land.

There has been so much complaint of the High Point Jass that Mayor H. A. Moffitt of this city has come out in an open, foot stand against the way these parties are conducted in this town. "If I had my way about here would not be another dance at High Point if the officials did not to close the doors at a reasonable hour—say midnight," the mayor declared before the city council.

The people do not seem to care what a reasonable hour is, and continued until the wurs of the morning. "Why they start about 8 o'clock and go?" he asks.

Practically none of the dances at High Point close at 1 a. m. or 2 a. m.—Ex.

Some mean cuss has had there wouldn't be no love if the first sight was at 7 a. m. But there's exceptions to every rule.

Unselfish Idealism Behind Local Newspapers.

The local newspapers in the United States each year getting on a firmer foundation and becoming more useful to its home community.

We frequently hear it said that that the old-time independent spirit of the newspaper is gone, that its editorial policy is now subservient to the business office. Yes this is not true. There is more unselfish idealism in the average local newspaper than in any other business enterprise. It frequently speaks out in the way which it believes will be for the good of the nation and of the community, regardless of what the consequences may be from a business standpoint.

The local newspaper is the principal booster for the community and it does its boosting often without hope of material reward. Unfortunately is the community which neither appreciates nor supports its local newspapers.—Wisconsin State Journal.

Joke on Judge Grady.

Gatesville, the capital of Gates county, is wondering whether the joke is on Judge Henry A. Grady or the stranger. Judge Grady is similarly puzzled. The stranger, for obvious reasons, cannot be interviewed.

Judge Grady who was holding superior court in Gatesville the past week was strolling near the courthouse. A stranger tapped him on the shoulder.

"I got it," he said. "Got what?" asked Judge Grady. "You know," replied the stranger. "Come on over here behind this house and I'll give it to you."

"Do you know I am?" asked the Judge. "Ain't you the man that ordered a quart of whiskey from me?" the other countered suspiciously.

"I'm Judge Grady, presiding over Gates."

He got no further, it is reported. The bootlegger fled taking on speed as he ran.

Home Town Boosts.

Dead towns have no tales to tell. Like mother, everyone's home town ought to be the best on earth.

Work for, boost up, smile upon, hold down, trade in, and love always the home town.

A knocker is a mortgage on his home town, and every other citizen is paying interest on him.

The fellow who says his home town is dead is speaking rather irreverently of himself and his neighbors. The sixth sense is the sense of boosting things that are good and forgiving things that are not good.

The home-town newspaper is the loudspeaker for the community, and it costs but a trifling sum a year to tune in.

Lame, Tired, Achy?

Are you tired, lame, achy—worried with backache? Do you suffer sharp pains, headaches, dizziness and disturbing bladder irregularities? Perhaps your kidneys need attention. When the kidneys fail to properly filter the blood, body impurities accumulate and cause poisoning of the whole system. Such a condition may lead to serious sickness. Don't neglect it! If you suspect your kidneys, why not give Doan's Pills a trial? Doan's have been used successfully over thirty-five years—are recommended the world over. Ask your neighbor!

Makes Hot Weather Easier On Baby

Baby suffers often during hot, sultry spells. Food is upsetting, Colic is frequent and mothers must watch out for Diarrhoea, Acidity, Cholera Morbus, and such troubles. The one safe preventive is to build up baby's strength and vitality to go through these hot weather ailments.

"When my baby began teething he was cross and did not sleep good," writes Mrs. Sam Millapp, of Dalton, Ga. "Baby's cry was pitiful and he was restless. When Dr. Moffett's Teethina was recommended I am happy to say it did loads of good. Now Baby is well and happy as you please. I certainly recommend Teethina to all mothers as I don't see how they could bring a baby up without it."

Teethina is a baby doctor's prescription. It costs only 30c at all leading druggists. Millions of mothers know its priceless value in keeping babies well.

POULTRYFARM FLOCK STILL ILLINOIS SIDE LINE

Although Illinois is one of the foremost states in value of poultry and poultry products, the business is still considered a side line on most farms of the state, according to John Vandervort, poultry extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. Poultry is kept to utilize waste grain and furnish eggs and poultry for the family. Some profit is realized from the average farm flock, but the income is distributed in small amounts throughout the year. The farmer, therefore, often does not realize how profitable his flock is.

There is a great need for educational work to encourage farmers to adopt better management methods. To this end, the flock management is being stressed in the poultry extension work of the college. A definite project is being carried out for the three-fold purpose of: (1) encouraging better management methods for farm poultry flocks in Illinois, (2) encouraging the keeping of records as a basis for studying the efficiency of farm flock production, (3) developing leaders who will follow improved poultry practices, as far as practical, in order that their flocks may serve as demonstrations of profitable poultry management in their respective communities.

This flock management project is becoming more popular each year. Groups of co-operators in 40 counties started records at the beginning of 1925 and it is expected that similar records will be kept in nearly fifty counties in 1926. The record itself is of much value to the individual, but it is felt that more good will eventually be derived from the development of flock demonstration farms that will demonstrate better management practices to farmers in communities near these farms.

Seventy farm poultry records were completed in 1924. The average size flock on these farms was 133 birds, the average egg production was 112 eggs and the average profit was $12.24 a bird. The best one-third of the farm flocks showed an egg production of 128 eggs and a profit of $2.88 a hen while the poorer one-third of the flocks showed a production of 96 eggs and a loss of 21 cents a hen. These records bring out the fact that low egg production can be an important factor in causing low profit.

Better production can be brought about by the elimination of hens that have proven to be poor layers and pullets that do not give promise of paying their board, careful breeding from birds selected for egg production and by careful feeding and management.

Poultry is not profitable on many farms because of heavy losses caused by parasites and diseases. This problem is becoming more and more serious throughout the state and a need for work along these lines has been felt. As a result, a poultry sanitation program has been outlined and started in a few counties this year in co-operation with the farm advisers of these counties and the animal pathology division of the college.

Dust Wallows Essential for Health of Chickens

A dust bath is as essential for the health of chickens as a water bath is for humans. By its use fowls are able to rid themselves of many lice, as well as to remove the scales and scurf from the skin.

Large, deep dust boxes are essential in the laying pens. They should be deep enough to hold about six inches of dusting material. They are usually placed in the corner of the pen, in the sunshine, and elevated so that the litter from the floor will not be thrown into them.

The material used for dusting should be fine, light and dry. If it is to kill lice it must be fine enough to fill the breathing pores of these parasites. Sandy loam mixed with road dust makes a fairly good dusting material. Sifted coal ashes will help in making it finer.

If no provision has been made for securing dusting material before winter, it will usually be necessary to depend upon loam which can be dug up and dried and mixed with one-third sifted coal ashes.

Lack of Proper Feed

If you own a flock of Rhode Island Reds or Barred Rocks that don't seem to be producing as many eggs as your neighbor's Wyandottes or Leghorns, don't make the mistake of wanting to raise the same breed as your neighbor. You probably are at fault in the care, feed and method of feeding. If given proper management your flock would probably be able to produce as well as your neighbor's. The average farm flock does not receive the feed needed for egg production.

Time to Caponize

The time of the year to caponize is of little importance as the capon recovers from the operation regardless of the season. However, there are certain other considerations that are of importance. First in importance is the age and size of the cockerel. The best time to caponize is when cockerels weigh from 1½ to 2½ pounds at from 2 to 4 months old. The lower age limit applies to large breeds and the higher limit to the Asiatic varieties.

Seed Important in Potato Yield

First Requirement Is That They Be Free From Any Possible Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A progressive corn farmer does not plant the bunnies left in his crib after he has fed or sold the bulk of his crop during the winter. He has long since learned the value of good seed corn. The same farmer, on the other hand, does not always use equally good judgment in selecting seed for his potato patch. Too often he plants the culls and inferior potatoes which are left in the bin after the good ones have been sold or eaten. He has not learned the value of good seed potatoes.

First Requirement

"The first requirement in good seed potatoes," says William Stuart, potato specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, "is that they be as free as possible from disease, at least of those diseases which cannot be destroyed through treatment in either the hot or cold corrosive sublimates or formalin solutions." Good seed, he says, must also possess good vigor, high productive capacity, and be true to name and to type of variety. While such factors as the preparation of the land, its fertilization, the proper spacing of the seed pieces, and the cultural care given the growing crop have an important bearing on the yield, none, he says, is of such prime importance as the character of the seed.

Perhaps the best way for the average farmer potato grower to be assured of good seed is to purchase "certified seed." There is abundant evidence that certified seed is improved seed, and that it will yield much more than common or uncertified seed. Reports to the department from a number of experiment stations in the United States and Canada, based on 11,627 tests show an actual increase of 44 bushels per acre for certified seed over uncertified seed. Individual tests showed an increase of as much as 210 bushels per acre by the use of certified seed.

Crop Grades Higher

Increased yield is not the only favorable result from the use of such seed, says Mr. Stuart. The crop from good seed will invariably grade a higher per cent of No. 1 stock than will that from poor seed. The difference may often be so great as 20 per cent, but even if it should be only 10 per cent it materially enhances the value of good seed.

Spraying Schedule forGrapes During a Season

Grapes need four sprays during the season if they are to have adequate protection against diseases and insects. The Iowa Fruit Growers' association recommends the following spray schedule for grapes.

First Spray—Spray a few days before the blossoms open for anthracnose and black rot. Use home-made Bordeaux mixture of four pounds quicklime and four pounds copper sulphate to fifty gallons of water, or about six pounds commercial Bordeaux to fifty gallons of water.

Second Spray—Apply the second spray after the grapes have bloomed and are about the size of small shot, before the berries touch in the bunch, for the control of black rot and leaf-eating insects. Use home-made Bordeaux mixture, 4-4-50 formula, or about six pounds of commercial Bordeaux to fifty gallons of water. Also add one and one-half pounds of dry arsenate of lead to every fifty gallons of water, no matter whether home-made or commercial Bordeaux is used.

Third Spray—Apply the third spray about two weeks after the second, using the same spray material as in the second spray.

Fourth Spray—Apply the fourth spray ten days to two weeks after the third spray and use the same spray material as in the second spray. The latter sprays are especially important for the control of black rot on grapes, particularly if the season has been wet.

Farm Hints

Get the hens into laying quarters a couple of weeks before they commence to lay.

Feeding sour milk to baby chicks in a tin receptacle or in a wooden trough is practical and safe.

Good pasture might be made of much rough land that now yields little grass, just by chopping out the stumps and brush and mowing the weeds twice a year.

Everything should be in readiness for the baby chicks when they arrive. Have the brooder stove set up and in operation two or three days before trusting it to take care of the chicks.

The isolated farmer isn't isolated any more. Instead he is able to keep up close contact with his neighbor in a social as well as a business way. That is one place that the automobile beats the horse.

It was only a few years ago that colts were a common sight in Mid-West pastures and fields. Now few colts are seen. Where is the farmer of the future going to secure his horse power? In the form of machinery perhaps.

Lesson for May 16ABRAHAM AND THE STRANGERS

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 18:1-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—All nations of the earth shall be blessed indeed.—Gen. 18:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Abraham Is Kind to Strangers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Abraham Welcomes Three Strangers.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Abraham's Hospitality.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why God Chose Abraham.

I. The Lord Appeared to Abraham (vv. 1-8).

While Abraham sat in his tent door, he lifted up his eyes and lo, three men stood by him. His reception of these three men is a beautiful picture of oriental hospitality. These beings, while called men, are also called angels (see 19:1). When the men arose to depart, Abraham according to custom, accompanied his guests some distance on the way. One of the men was the angel of Jehovah, or Jehovah manifest in human form. The Jehovah angel remained behind to commune with Abraham. This is clear from the fact that three started out—one talked with Abraham and only two entered Sodom (see 18:22 and 19:1).

II. God's Promise to Abraham Reaffirmed (vv. 9-15).

The Lord communed with him about his personal interests, showing how Sarah should have a son in her old age, according to the covenant promise. This conversation being overheard by Sarah from her place in the tent only provoked laughter on her part. Although she thus expressed unbelief, it doubtless was a great comfort to Abraham who had been awaiting the fulfillment of the promise for years. "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" is a striking rebuke to Sarah's unbelief, and shows that the Lord is able to discern even our inmost thoughts.

III. The Doom of Sodom and Gomorrah Revealed to Abraham (vv. 16-21).

The Lord now communed with Abraham about Sodom and Gomorrah. Though Abraham had no personal interest in Sodom, the Lord revealed unto him His secret purpose concerning it. He did not hurt up Lot to make known unto him his purpose concerning Sodom. He never goes to the persons who are entangled with the things of the world. The only way to know God's thought touching the age in which we live is to remain separate from it. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him." (Ps. 25:15). The reason for this disclosure may be stated as follows:

1. Because he was his friend (Jas. 5:23; John 15:15). Friends confide in each other. The master reveals his purposes to his friends, not to his servants.

2. Because he was to be the head of a great nation (v. 18). As such he was to be the medium of blessings to the world. The interests of humanity were at stake in the destruction of Sodom. It was good that Abraham should know that he might be able to instruct coming generations.

3. Because of the responsibility of instructing his own family aright (v. 19). God is always careful that His judgments have a rational explanation, serving to deter others from the same sin. The Lord declared that His purpose was to go down and see whether the Sodomites had done according to the cry which had come up from it (v. 21).

IV. Abraham's Intercession for Sodom and Gomorrah (vv. 22-28).

The two men departed for Sodom, leaving Abraham alone in the presence of the Lord. He stood there as an intercessor. In this unselfish act Abraham represents our High Priest (Heb. 7:23-28; Rom. 8:34; 1 John 2:1). Jesus possesses the divine right to stand before the Father. Abraham made his plea on the ground of justice to the righteous who might be in the city. Because of the infinite sacrifice which Christ made by His blood for our sins, He can plead our cause before God on the ground of strict justice. He ventured his plea six times, each time diminishing the number. We should learn from this that petitions granted give encouragement to ask for others. Abraham's power as an intercessor was limited. He was afraid of overdrawn his account with the Lord. This is not the case with our High Priest. His credit and influence with the Father are infinite. He is able to save unto the uttermost those who come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them. (Heb. 7:25).

NO WOMAN CAN KEEPHOUSE EFFICIENTLY

Four Walls Can Make a House, but it takes a Woman to Make a Home

To be a successful homemaker, a woman must guard her health. When mother is not well, the home is upset. Women everywhere are learning through their own personal experiences, as these women did, the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lancaster, Ohio.—"For ten years after my marriage, I had poor health."

Matter of Opinion

"Is that your dog, Willie?"
"Well, the man next door thinks he owns him."

I was on a visit to my sister in Utica, Michigan, and she had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Her husband got me a bottle and I took it to others. I felt better that I got a second one. Now, whenever I feel run-down, I take the Vegetable Compound and soon feel all right again. I have had three little girls in the last six years and do all my housework, sewing, washing, and ironing. My time is pretty well taken up, but I will answer any letters I receive.—Mrs. FRANK DINDORE, 323 Pierce Avenue, Lancaster, Ohio.

Sturgis, Michigan.—"I am very thankful for what your medicine has done for me and have recommended it to others. I took it to give me strength before my baby was born. I would have to stop work and lie down sometimes all the afternoon. I felt as if I did not care whether anything was done or not. I got tired out too easily. One day I found a little book on my porch and that night I showed it to my husband and he went down town and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The medicine has helped me so much that I was soon able to do my work, and when my baby was born, my nurse, Mrs. Forbes, said it was the easiest birth she had ever attended. I will be more than pleased if I am helping someone else by giving my testimonial."—Mrs. EDWARD P. SINK, 208 Surprise Ave., Sturgis, Michigan.

Old Folks Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Most men and women past fifty must give to the bowels some occasional help else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting natural bowel "regularity"—or must you purge and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural, regular bowel movement even for those chronically constipated. It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take. Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(G. 1226, Western Newspaper Union.)

"The anxiety of some people to make new friends is so intense that they never have time to have old ones."

"Those who bring sunshine to the lives of others cannot keep it from themselves."

HOW TO BE THRIFTY

If we study the early lives of those who have amassed great wealth we will find that they have been careful, saving and economical. As a whole these who have achieved great wealth are not wasteful in spending what they have earned.

It is in the little things and small leaks and wastes that, multiplied by hundreds, make great wastes in many homes. Example is the most important incentive in teaching children thrift; if the mother would teach her children wise spending, she must be thrifty herself.

How many women leave the soap in the dishpan and in the scrubbing pail all through the time of using. Instead of using the soapshaker and removing it when the water is sufficiently soapy? Small bits of soap may be used up in the shaker or if a cake is used keep it in a dish nearby when needed.

When cooking over such heat as gas or electricity use triplicate dishes on one burner; in this way three foods may be cooked with less expense.

Let us occasionally remind our selves that a nickel is the interest on a dollar for a year, and it is not parsimony to save, but something that we should be proud that we can do, in these days of high living.

Small bits of butter, too small to seem of any value, may be placed together and in a short while there will be enough to season a dish of vegetables. Cold coffee added to ginger bread instead of water saves the coffee, adds a flavor and thus improves the cake. Cold coffee used with gelatin makes a delicious dessert, added to spice cake instead of milk, it is an improvement.

A good motto to hang in every kitchen, where there is much opportunity for waste, is "Let Nothing Be Wasted."

What is true of the kitchen will follow in the rest of the house. Care and thoughtfulness will keep down expenses.

China and all crockery is so expensive now that care should be taken of the household supply. Dishes are nicked by putting too many together in the pan, striking them against the water pans or handles of pans. Swing the pans so that the handles are out of the way when using pans with handles.

It takes but a moment's thought to turn off the lights when leaving the room, even for a few minutes. If the gas or electricity is turned off before the dish is removed from the stove it will save many a bill.

Appetizing Dishes.

A delicious salad which takes but a few moments to prepare is:

Apple and Onion Salad.—Dice nice flavored apple very fine, add one-fourth as much shredded or finely diced Bermuda onion, season with a teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne.

Pour over tablespoonful of olive or corn oil and let stand for half an hour, then add mayonnaise mixed with cream and stir well before serving. Serve on lettuce. The addition of a half-dozen minced dates, omitting the sugar, adds much to the flavor of the salad, though it is very good without.

A nice luncheon dish is poached eggs served on a nest of seasoned spinach. Open a can of spinach if the fresh is not at hand, season lightly with butter, after draining. Save the spinach water and give it as a drink to any member of the family who needs iron or vitamins.

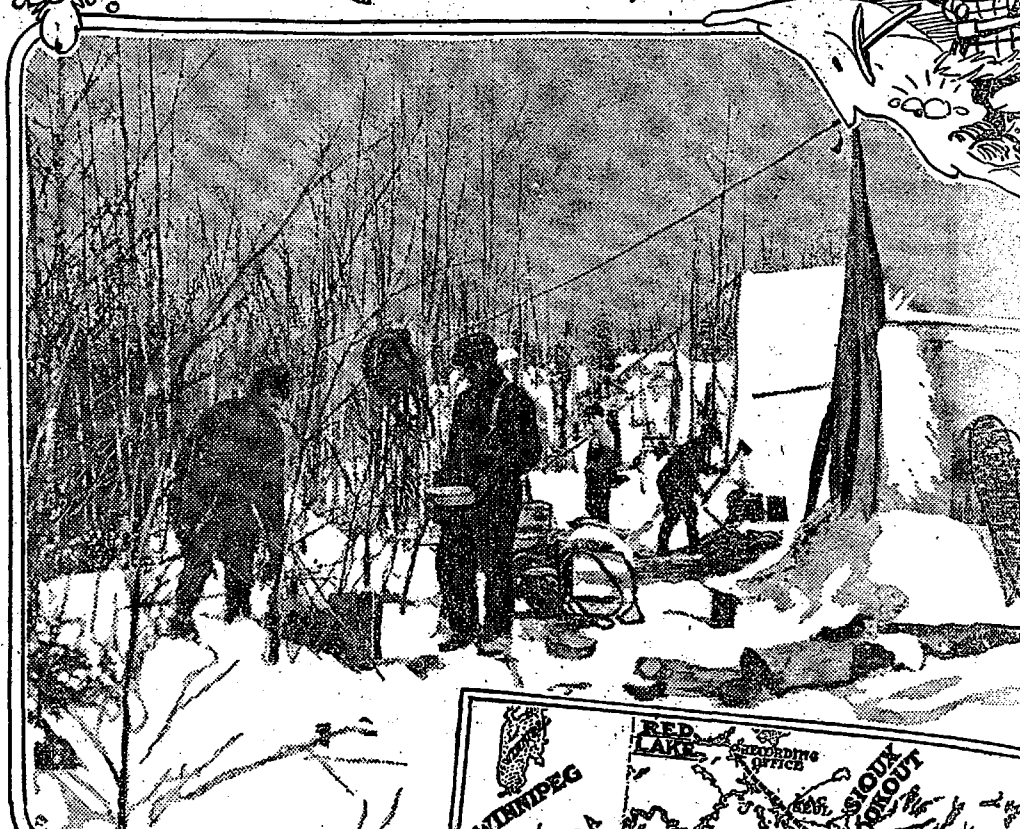

Beef Olives.—Take thin slices of rare roast beef and roll each around a thin slice of bacon which has been fried until transparent but not crisp. Tie up or skewer with a toothpick and broil. Add the fat from the bacon to some of the roast beef gravy, season with Worcestershire sauce and a tablespoonful of currant jelly. Serve hot.

Corned Beef Hash.—Chop cooked corned beef very fine, then add the chopped vegetables from a boiled dinner, also chopped, using three times as much of the vegetable as the meat. Put into a frying pan, moisten with some of the broth from the vegetables, stir and heat until very hot; serve with a poached egg.

Chicken Terrapin.—Melt four table-spoonfuls of butter, add the same quantity of flour, pour over one-half cupful of chicken broth and one-half cupful of mushroom liquor, also one and one-half cupfuls of cream; season, add a half-cupful of sliced mushrooms, and three hard cooked eggs, chopped and a pint of sliced dark meat of the chicken with the minced chicken livers. Serve hot.

AGAIN THE RUSH FOR GOLD

"TINY STREET" IN RED LAKE
International Photo

By PROEHL HALLER JAKLON

THE gold fever has broken out anew. Recent strikes in two different parts of North America are drawing adventurous souls from all parts of the country to re-enact with modern touches some of the scenes of the Klondike gold strike in the '90s. The Red Lake region of British Columbia is the goal of hundreds of young and old prospectors, while in our own country we find the Kramer hills on the Mojave desert in California the objective of other hordes of adventurers stirred to action by the lure of gold.

Lorne Howie last summer struck gold in a wide land of quartz at Red Lake. Now with more than 1,500 claims already staked, they're calling it Canada's "greatest" strike. Howie and his companions reported how they had discovered a vein of gold nearly 1,000 feet long, running from 10 to 50 feet in width. Subsequently the vein was observed to run for a distance of more than 25 miles.

Red Lake is about 150 miles from the nearest railroad, but as distance is nothing when gold is at stake, this district soon found itself possessed of a thriving, bustling population of gold seekers lured from all points of the compass in the hope of digging a fortune from the earth. Despite weather of 20 to 30 degrees below zero, these prospectors pushed through the 150 miles of snow and discomfort to the land of promised gold. Unheard of prices were paid for dogs to make the desolate trip, and one enterprising aviator, Jack V. Elliott, has established an air route between Hudson, Ont., and the gold fields. Hudson is on the northern transcontinental line of the Canadian National railways, about 240 miles east of Winnipeg and 12 miles to the west of Sioux Lookout. It is the nearest railway point to the Red Lake district, and a short time ago was nothing more than a name on the map.

What kind of a place is Red Lake? Is it full of dance halls, saloons, gambling joints and other wild and woolly institutions which spring up like magic in such settlements? It's hard to get information either into or out of this district. Of course, there are no telegraph lines, and all dispatches have to be sent by dog team. From E. Paul R. D'ing, who mushed across the barren area into Red Lake, comes the following information as it appeared in the Washington Star:

"Tucked snugly in one corner of a bay, near the outlet of this straggling sheet of frozen water is a cluster of tents. They are pitched on hastily constructed log cribs and roughly floored with hewn spruce. Through the roof of each a section of rusty stovepipe thrusts itself at a rakish angle, belching upward in the frosty atmosphere. "One of the tents bears above its flaps the end of a packing case bearing in staggering black letters the portentous legend, 'Mining Recorder's Office.' Another, though it does not yet bear a sign, is a provincial police post; a third is the office, and a fourth the cook tent, this last perhaps the most important of all."

Astute Johnnie

Johnnie had intently watched the moving of the family that had come to occupy the house next door but his chief interest lay in the child who seemed to be his own age. All attempts to make friends with the child were unavailing, however, so it was with a great deal of enthusiasm he announced: "I know what the little boy next door says. It's 'Original.'"

for hunger gnaws unceasingly in the cold.

"To the little poplar trees that stud the shore a legion of dogs are chained—huskies, collie curs, nondescript mongrels of intricate ancestry, fish eaters—the uncivilized and unrequited slaves of a harsh regime. They fill the air with doleful sound, the collies yelping shrilly, the huskies, unable to bark, rounding the echoes with that wailing wail that resembles the cry of neither dog nor wolf, but is the song of the wolf-dog alone."

"Mining history is being written, and these are the characters that record it, for the Howie claims, now the property of the Howie Gold Syndicate, are the focus of the greatest gold rush Canada has seen in a score of years, and this desolated community assures itself that it is to form the nucleus of a great camp."

What are the chances of striking it rich? Is the field already too crowded? Mr. Reading is enthusiastic about the possibilities, but it might be well to wait for positive results before you take the following too seriously:

"This will be a stampedie probably unequalled since the Klondike. It will not assume its full proportions until the spring break-up clears the way for further prospecting. Assays on the properties now being tested have shown extraordinary values and surprising consistency. On the main vein, which strikes roughly northeast and southwest, you can pick up samples bearing free gold, little glittering specks that permeate the quartz, right across on a width of 20, 40, and even 60 feet."

"Great lakes and rivers make summer travel easy and rapid. For ten miles to the east, and nearly as far west, the country is staked solid, and the peculiar thing is that practically all of the claims have yet to be prospected."

"If the anticipations of the mining men here are fulfilled, there will be fresh discoveries elsewhere in spring and fresh belts to be staked, in a zone of possible gold-bearing rock nearly ten miles wide and thirty long. At present interest centers in East Bay, the northeast arm of the lake, which is 16 miles away but in line with the strike of Lorne Howie's lead."

"So far the sour dough has had his innings. A census of Red Lake's floating population this winter would have read like a map of the original Porcupine staking, with the name of Alex. Gillies, who discovered the Hollinger, at the head of the list. Gillies has been in charge of development work on the Howie claims. He is quite unassuming and cautious in his statements, but does not conceal his faith in this new camp.

"John Hammell, chairman of the Howie Red Lake Syndicate, also sees a big future. He is not lacking in experience, for he has the development of four or five successful mines to his credit, and he declares outright that the surface showings at Red Lake are the most encouraging he has ever seen."

Turning to our own country, we find the desert wastes of the Mojave, about 120 miles from Bakersfield, Cal., filled with prospectors for the gold discovered in the Kramer hills. Here the going is easier, and miners are arriving in every kind of conveyance from slivers to air taxis, which, leave on regular schedule from Los Angeles, San Francisco, and other coast cities.

Back of this scramble lies a real romance. Nearly thirty years ago one Austin Burcham, a miner, drilled powder holes 35 feet into the ground near the site of the present diggings. Then along came news of a new gold strike, and Burcham deserted his stake before setting off the dynamite he had ready for the last step in his long labors. Recently Edward Herkelath found Burcham's uncompleted work and set off the blast. When the smoke cleared away he found gold ore later estimated to be worth $1,000 a ton.

Then the rush of the '20s began. The extent of the golden spread down through the gulches and over the low brown desert hills is yet undetermined, but enough real gold has been found to attract throngs of treasure seekers to the field. The town of Kramer, a short time ago nothing but a railway siding along the Santa Fe tracks, became overnight a gold-and-town. Old-time prospectors and "greenhorns" have worked furiously day and night.

Everyone who has staked a claim constantly is on the lookout for claim jumpers and high-graders. Revolvers and rifles put in their appearance soon after the hordes arrived, and old-timers in the mining game shook their heads dubiously as the jumble of location notices piled up in the recorder's office.

One tract of land adjoining the original discovery shaft of Edward Herkelath and his cousin John, original discoverers, nearly 400 acres in extent, which has been thoroughly staked from end to end, was found to be owned by Mrs. S. S. Kelly of San Bernardino. The land was purchased from the state many years ago.

reached on stilts, there will still remain wonderful things to do. The greatest things of all to explore—and develop—are human nature and human souls. And maybe we shall have more time for these greater adventures when we have exhausted all the lesser!

Quite an attractive feature of the commencement program of last week was the play "Honor Wins" the following students took part in the play: Leon Foster, Sallie Spillman, Nell Johnson, Grace Hendricks, Duke Furches, Ray Graham, Mary Eliza Baily, Lillian James, Henry Furches, Mildred Walker, Cornelia Taylor, and Elizabeth James.

John Brock of N. C. State and his room mate Willis Munch of South Carolina spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Brock.

Misses Flossie Brewer, of Clemmons teacher at Cana, Lola Sofley teacher at Smith Grove, and Sally Spillman spent the week-end with Miss Elizabeth Graham. The following teachers have returned to their respective homes: Misses Thronburg of Newton, Poindexter, of Hamptonville, Bohannon of Elkin, Mrs. Luna Welborn, of Wilkesboro, and Mr. Peter, Butler, Tenn.

Albert Redman, of Duke University accompanied by Mr. Grant visited home folks Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Daniel and daughters, Lois and Ruth of Mocksville were dinner guests at Kennen Krest Sunday.

The Farmington Branch of the Davie County Associated Charities was organized recently with Miss Vada Johnson, as Miss Johnson is President of the Parent Teachers Association and with work the two organizations in unison. Miss Zelma Brock, Messrs Burke Furch and Gilmer Graham students of Mars Hill College are home for their vacation. Gilmer graduated.

Miss Joy Tatum, teacher in Yang Chaw, China, gave an interesting talk on the Baptist church here Sunday afternoon. Sorry there were not more out to her.

Miss Elizabeth Walker, of Hanesville visited Miss Elizabeth James and others last week.

A Lucky Devil.

The editor has been surprised at the number of people he has met stating they thought he was a young man. Well, he is 63 years young, has been engaged in the printing business since 1880, with the exception of five years spent in railway train service; has a wife and six children all married; is a member of the M. E. Church, South; loves everybody—especially the ladies—God bless them, and has never been in jail. He considers the last item quite a feat, considering the other accomplishments herein enumerated.—Harriman Record.

Where's The Editor?

An Oklahoma editor tells of an old Indian who came into his office to pay for his paper. The editor took the money then the Indian wanted a receipt. Mr. Indian, in fact, insisted. After making it out, the editor wanted to know why he was so persistent about wanting a receipt. The Indian said: "Me die some time. Go to big gate and St. Peter ask if I been good Indian. I says yes. He says, 'Did you pay editor for paper?' I say yes. 'Where is receipt?' I no have it. If have to run all over hell to find you and get the receipt."

Sold Wilmington Darkey's a Lemon

More than 200 negroes who bought through passage railroad tickets from Wilmington to Cleveland, Ohio for three dollars each, were put off a Seaboard Air Line passenger train at Navassa a small station, a few miles from Wilmington: Sunday afternoon and were forced to return to the city. Police are searching for the visiting ticket agent. The agent worked the black belt of the city quickly but very effectively. In fact one negro said he fought to get the spot occupied by the agent, fearing that the supply of tickets would be exhausted before he could secure one.

The black Ponzi told the men they would be employed as iron workers in Cleveland at wages of dollar an hour; that work was plentiful and that his interests had 500 vacant houses waiting for occupants. He was to provide them with meals on the trip, this money to come out of their wages.

The gullibility of the "suckers" was vividly shown when they followed his instruction to the letter in leaving town. Knowing they could not get through the station gates with the bogus ticket the agent requested that they all buy tickets to Navassa in order to prevent his being assisted as a labor agent.—Ex.

Ormond Damage Suit Continued Again.

It seems for both sides to agree for a date for the trial of $150,000 damage suit which Rev. A. L. Ormond, Methodist minister has instituted against William B. Cole, wealthy cotton mill man of Rockingham, for slaying Bill Ormond, world war veteran, son of the minister.

The case was to have been tried in Wake county Superior court, the past week, but was again continued. Judge Barnhill on his own motion set the trial of the case for June 15, and stated from the bench that no further continuances will be allowed by either side.—Ex.

We have heard many excuses for a man's getting drunk. But we have never heard of anyone having the temerity to offer any excuse for a drunken man trying to drive an automobile. There is no excuse in law, morals or reason for operating a motor car while drunk. A man may be a good fellow, popular, a respectful son, a kind husband or an indulgent father, but if he drives a car while drunk he is a public menace and a dangerous nuisance that deserves speedy punishment. — Nashville Tennessean.

Fortunate youth

THE educational opportunities for the boys and girls of the South are keeping pace with the leadership of the South in the economic progress of the Nation. This is seen in the following facts:

In the last twelve years more than $125,000,000 has been spent for the construction of new school buildings in the states of the South served by the Southern.

In 1900 there were less than 73,000 school teachers in the states of the South served by the Southern, and the appropriation for education amounted to only 90 cents per person living in these states. In 1922 the appropriation was $6.85 per person, and the number of trained teachers had increased to 139,309.

In 1900 only 64.8 percent of the children of school age in these states attended school, while the average for the nation as a whole was 72.4 per cent. But in 1922, the latest year for which complete figures are available, 81.4 per cent of the children in the states of the South served by the Southern attended school, while the average for the nation as a whole was 81.2 per cent.

The growth in the educational facilities of the South, as well as the number of children that can take advantage of them, is one of the fortunate and direct results of the prosperity that has come to the South.

The Southern Railway System has contributed to the prosperity of the South, as a tax-payer, as a large employer of men and women—and as the transportation agency which carries Southern commerce to and from world markets, regularly, dependably and economically.

Carpenters are repairing the March store room where J. L. Clement will soon open up a stock of goods.

Mr. J. T. Ratledge will preach at Bethel Sunday, May 26th, at 3 o'clock.

Much damage is being done to school houses in the county by breaking out the window glass.

The editor and E. L. Gaither attended court at Farmington last week and were hospitably entertained by Dr. Johnson.

Spencer M. Sheek, little son of Geo. W. Sheek, showed us an egg last week that measured 6 1/2 inches around.

Cap Stewart of the Tennyson section was in town last week and told us that the hail did considerable damage to his wheat and rye.

H. M. Rich who has been visiting in Davie and Yadkin counties since the latter part of January, left for his home in Iowa last Saturday.

Mr. Rich spent Saturday in Mocksville.

Philip Hanes, of Winston, has rented the Dr. James McGuire residence and will move his family over next week.

Mr. Hanes is a good man and a good citizen, and we extend to him and his family a cordial welcome.

Mr. Hanes will build later on and make this his permanent home.

The editor spent Thursday in Winston and found it awfully dull.

Killed—A Mother.

He killed his mother, not with a revolver, not with a shotgun and neither did he stab her with a knife. He killed her in a more heartless way. A young fellow in another city left a jail to see his mother and as he stopped to kiss her and tell her of his predicament, the mother, old and worn with care, died of heart failure. She could not stand the shock of knowing her boy was in jail charged with a serious crime.

Far better in one way it would have been for this young sheik to have taken a pistol, placed it at the temple of his mother and pulled the trigger. Far better it would have been that he plunge a dagger into her heart than it was for her to see with her own eyes the shame and disgrace that this boy brought upon him and his family. But even better it would have been had this same sheik of a son taken a dagger and plunged it into his own heart. His mother then would have died with only the deep sorrow of the suicide of her son; but for him to be in jail was too much for her.

It was the same old story. This young sheik attended a wild party at night and then proceeded "to do the town" and he did; the police said he killed a man "while he was doing the town."

But who suffers the most in this case? The murdered, the dead man or the mother? Certainly no one suffers any greater, in fact, not as much as the mother who passed thru the Valley of the Shadow of Death, that the worthless son who thought he knew it all, and believed in having a good time with booze, might live. She then saw only the bright light of a future but when the sheik grew to manhood and other boys teased him because he was "tied to his mother's apron string," he broke loose from that string and launched into reckless living.

It was but one of thousands of cases where a young boy breaks the heart of a mother. The mother dies. Some die suddenly while others waste away time until they call for the last time; kiss his forehead and utter a silent prayer that he will yet be saved from the gay parties and wild automobile rides. It's the same old story of the mother who pays.—Twin-City Sentinel.

118-Pound Fish Caught in Tar River

Saturday a sturgeon weighing 118 pounds, which measured six feet seven inches, was caught in a trap operated in the Tar River, near Greenville, Pitt county, by J. P. Moss and Ed. Moye, of Greenville.

The trap is of the revolving type and the weight of the fish was so great that the force of the current was not enough to lift the trap from the water, but brought it to a level making it impossible for the fish to escape. The trap was securely tied in this position and left until Sunday morning at which time the fish had played itself out to such an extent that removal from the trap was no great undertaking.

The big fish was brought the city and placed on exhibition where a large number of people took a look at the monster.—Ex.

Old Negro Singing Passing.

Some of the most cherished traditions of the old South are fast being lost by the new South. The "spirituals" and unmatched harmony in the old plantation songs of the negro are fast becoming extinct. Industrial progress is blamed by music critics for this and other changed conditions among the negro race.

The large plantations of the South were once the homes of the chief negro musicians. Now the best musicians of that race, it is pointed out, are to be found in the large cities and centers of population, and many of these have acquired cultural attainments which have detracted from the old songs. One must go far into the State of Alabama now to find negro singing that even approximates the harmony that once existed over the entire South.

Tuskegee Institute is making a big effort to preserve and retain the old negro songs. That institute is trying to preserve to both the white and the negro races the spiritual songs originated by the latter. It has produced some of the finest negro singers. During the past school year its glee club presented interpretations of negro songs of other days which were said to be as nearly perfect as reproduction could be made. Fisk and Hampton, other famous negro schools, have also given serious endeavor along similar lines.

It is claimed that one who has never heard the "cotton-patch harmony" cannot appreciate what it would mean to music lovers if this art should pass. Music critics have traveled far to hear negro harmony in its original setting. They claim that go negroes, of varied ages, in a cotton field are capable of producing an impromptu program of songs, chant, whistling and chatter that can be found no where else on earth.

A true negro song is one that was never written. They do not have to know a song to join in with their fellows in singing it. Each farm group has a leader, usually a man, and as soon as he strikes his key, the rest follow in. The same song may be sung for an hour or all day, but it never grows monotonous because of its variations. Some negro singers can ring in more notes than have ever been written in the staff. They sing in minor, minor and unknown "keys." There are no precedents for what they sing. But no matter what they sing there is nearly always an indescribable rhythm, swing and motion in it which according to one critic, it is "harmonious and the flow of a meadow brook." The old time negro singers know nothing of written music, but they know harmony.

Build More Roads

The next legislature will be to consider the issue of more road building—this was evinced by the lobby talk at the recent convention. Many counties insist on increased bond issues here is no real reason for not confining the road building. The gas tax goes for the interest and king fund and the automobile own pay this tax. As long as they are willing to pay a tax of four cents a gallon on gasoline for building—let us up the work. Good roads save money for the people of the State.

Tightening Up.

The house has voted for tightening up of the prohibitions. Just how tight they propose to make it is not quite clear, but reports coming out of Washington are true it might be well to begin right in the national capital. The reason the prohibition laws so hard to enforce is simply that of those in the populous cities and in others places, charged with their enforcement, are in league with the bootleggers.—Plain Talk.

Yadkin Bridge Matters Remains In A Deadlock.

So far as this paper can learn, no definite action was taken last week by the State Highway Commission in regard to the location and building of the proposed bridge over the Yadkin River on Highway 75. Those who have protested against the selection of the Oakes Ferry site instead of Fulton Ferry, the present crossing, had represented before the commission.

It appears now that a concerted effort is being made by some of the supporters of the Fulton Ferry site to have the Highway Commission delay indefinitely the building of a bridge unless it is put at that place. This view is reported to have received some report from official sources in Davie county, as well as from some citizens of that county who have been fighting for the Fulton Ferry site.

Figures on the recent survey of the latter site are said to have shown that it would cost somewhat more than the lower site, and the road between the Myers place, west of Reeds, and Fork, where the proposed routes converge, is somewhat longer than by Oakes Ferry. However, it is claimed the difference in distance is not great. Two small streams beside the Yadkin would have to be bridged on the upper route. Offsetting these disadvantages, proponents of Fulton Ferry contend that the road that way, as at present, serves many more people in both counties than it would if routed by Oakes Ferry.

Davidson County last year agreed to lend the Commission $100,000 as a loan for the building of the bridge. The local board was given to understand at that time that Davie's portion would be provided, either by a loan from the county or from State highway funds accruing to that county. However no information of the actual availability of such funds has been given the Davidson authorities. And while the loans from this county stands authorized there has not yet come a request from the State Highway Commission to make the money available. Davidson commissioners recently informed Commissioner J. Elwood Cox that this county would not be interested in making an outright donation toward building over either route, but were leaving the matter of decision of routes entirely up to Highway Commission. The local board several months ago went on record officially as preferring that the bridge be located at or as near Fulton Ferry as possible, this being understood at the time merely an expression of preference and not an effort to interfere with the Commission's regular methods of procedure in such matters.

Proponents of the Fulton Ferry site contend that if the upper site should be chosen by the State Highway Commission that Davie county would co-operate in putting the road and bridge through.—The Dispatch.

Shut Up Cow In The Chapel.

Some of the boys at High Point college, the Methodist Protestant institution, pulled off a right lively prank one night the past week when they secured a cow, led her into the chapel of the building and closed the doors.

The cow had not been confined to any one position and from indications she pretty well traversed the aisles and other available space, as if she might be trying to find a way out from her enforced imprisonment. President Andrews had the male student body before him the next morning and expressed himself very forcibly on the occurrence but at last accounts the perpetrators of the prank had not been found.—Ex.

Troubles Of An Officer

Have you ever noticed how readily people will take sides against an officer when he arrests somebody for violation of the law? It matters not what offense the man has committed, nor what his station in life may be, he is the object of general sympathy in the crowd that gathers to watch the arrest, or hear the preliminary trial. Often good law-abiding people will take sides with a criminal and go his bond or offer financial aid, that he may evade the penalty of wrongdoing.

It is this attitude of the public that makes it difficult for our officers to do their duty. The officers are merely human, and they will not keep on risking their lives and doing unpopular thing when they have reason to believe those whom they are trying to protect do not appreciate their efforts. There are possibly cases where the prisoner deserves sympathy and help from the crowd, but such cases are rare. Usually the officer is right and deserves your sympathy and help. Remember this when you are tempted to take sides against an officer of the law. Remember that it is for your sake that the laws are attempting to make the law effective.—Newport Herald.

Didn't Want Allen.

Sidna Allen, one of the Hillsville, Va., desperadoes, who was recently released from Virginia State prison, where he had served about half the sentence imposed by the court for his part in shooting up the court at Hillsville, had an unsettled account in the United States district court of the court of the western district of North Carolina. The charge was perjury, on the docket in Charlotte, and grew out of Allen's testimony in a counterfeiting case in the court at Greensboro. Allen had been convicted of perjury, his case appealed and the appeal was pending when he engaged on the shootingfest at Hillsville. According to the usual amenities in such cases, Virginia asked the Federal court authorities in this district, before freeing Allen, if they desired to take him over. The Federal court decided they didn't care for the present at least. Of course they weren't "afraid" that he would shoot up the court, but under the circumstances they just didn't care to have any truck with him. If Allen has any more shooting to do, which is improbable, Virginia is his field. If he will stay over there, our folks are content.—Statesville Daily.

What Caused the Fire?

There is still a dispute going on as to what caused the disastrous fire at the state hospital for the insane, at Raleigh, a few weeks ago. Lewis F. Hicks, chief of the Raleigh fire department, contends that the blaze was caused by patients in the building while hospital attaches lean to the opinion that the flames started on the roof from a blow torch in the hands of workmen who were repairing the roof.

In the meantime the bald fact sticks out that there has been a fire, hundreds of people might have been cremated, the water supply inadequate and Dr. Anderson, the superintendent, was not on the job, being away attending court in Durham, a question of lunacy brought up.

He is the same Anderson that swore Fred Jones, a negro of Winston-Salem, who killed King, the laundryman, was crazy, and also the same doctor who went to Wilkesboro and swore that Bill Cole, wealthy slayer of Bill Ormond, former soldier was sane.—Union Republican.

The wets have had a good time telling the public how rotten the dry law has made the country.

Democracy's Extremity In North Carolina.

Nine Republican nominees refused place on the ticket because of technicality that has never before been raised. One of these Mr. Poole, of Taylorsville, opponent of Congressman Doughton, is near home, and there is no doubt that the action of the election board is caused by the fear that Congressman Doughton's election this fall was in danger. In the primary every candidate is required to state what his politics is and the party from which he seeks the nomination, but the Republican party does not go into the primary, nominating its candidates in conventions as provided for in the law, and the nominee being certified to the election board as the candidate of the party. To make the thing look fair one Democratic candidate was refused a place on the ticket, according to the election board "for the same reason as the Republicans are excluded for." The same reason does not exist because the Democrat was a candidate in the Democratic Primary while the Republicans are the nominees of their party. Over in Alexander county and in some other parts of the state the old registration is being thrown away and a complete new registration ordered. This is done with the idea that the Democratic primary will result in the registration of all the Democrats, but that many of the Republicans, because there is no interest in the primary and no interest in the primary may neglect to register and thus be excluded from voting in the November election, as the Republican understand the situation. The extremity to which the Democratic party in North Carolina is driven in the present election, in which their leaders in Washington admit openly that they are not fighting for principle, but individuals, is the worst the party has ever faced. Every corrupt act that a machine may commit under the protection of a wicked and outrageous election law formed for the perpetuation in power, not of the party, may be looked for in the coming election. The only effect of the refusal of the election board to let Mr. Poole's name go on the printed ticket is to compel his supporters to write it there, for the Republican dares an election board to fail to count the votes so cast for an officer of the United States. The party hopes the Republicans will be too lazy to write the name and so that Doughton will be reelected, but the Republican believes that this dirty deal, the use of this ruling that has never been made before, will arouse the Republican voters of the state and that thousands of Democratic voters who, like Max Gardner, one of the cleanest men in the Democratic party, believe in honest and fair elections, will repudiate the ruling at the election and swell the majority that is assured to Mr. Poole and to others of the mistreated Republican nominees. Six years ago the Democratic ring cut down Max Garner in the primary. It would do it again if it dared, but honest men in that party will not stand for it again. Neither will thousands of honest Democrats stand to have their Republican friends and neighbors robbed by dirty tricks of ringsters and rough neck politicians.—Tar Heel Republican.

It seems that Mocksville is going to have three undertaking establishments. Now watch us grow.

A man who will steal from an editor is just as sorry as the fellow who will rob a preacher or under taker.

From present indications there is going to be a bumper crop of blackberries. There is always something to be thankful for if we had sense enough to realize it.

We are reliably informed that the Davie Democrats are going to elect a new county chairman at their next county convention. Is this done to promote peace and harmony in the party?

We shall try to say nothing hard of any politicians this year. So far we have been able to take back any of our remarks when necessary, but it is painful exercise and detrimental to one's physiognomy.

A prominent Democrat in the county gave us some information which we published a week ago. We have been informed that another Democrat in the county has made Democrat No. 1 an awful liar. Gentlemen, you can take the case. The Record prints what is given to it for publication but vouches for nothing that the editor doesn't know personally to be the truth. Our good Democratic friends should be very careful in what they say about each other for it is not long until another election is going to be on hand.

About three hundred of our subscribers have let their subscriptions to The Record expire. One dollar doesn't mean so much to the ordinary man, but three hundred dollars means a good deal to the editor of this flag of freedom. We trust that every one of our subscribers who are due us anything will bring or mail us a dollar within the next week or two. It is costing us more to print The Record than ever before and we want to keep our debts paid and our family out of the county home as long as possible. We are having an uphill job making both tongue and buckle meet. Let us hear from you at once.

Fighting Bob Reynolds, of Asheville, who is making a strenuous campaign for U. S. Senator to succeed the aged Overman, of Salisbury, was in town last week shaking hands with friends and enemies. Reynolds is going to give Overman a tight race. Both are Democrats and The Record has nothing to do with the election of either one. The young Democrats throughout the State are lining up with Reynolds while the grey-heads and Watts machine crowd are believed to be standing solid behind the venerable and pie-counter fed Overman who has held on to this piece of pie since most of us were in our youth. Reynolds made many votes by coming to Mocksville.

It has been suggested by some Republicans that an early primary and county convention be held in Davie this year. Others think the convention should not be held until early in the fall. The Republicans are determined to line up solid behind the nominees this fall and carry the county by a greatly increased majority. It is thought that practically all of the present office-holders will be re-nominated as they have served but one term. There are three or four candidates for clerk of the court and it is not known who will get this nomination. So far as we know there is no active candidate for the legislature. Six months remains in which to pick a man for this important office.

To Build Yadkin Bridge.

Lexington, May 13 - Word has been received here from Commissioner J. Elwood Cox that the State Highway Commission has ordered advertising for bids on the Davidson-Davie concrete bridge across the Yadkin River, on Highway 75. The bids will be opened at the June meeting of the Commission, states Mr. Cox, and it is expected that the contract then be awarded.

This bridge has been in prospect for several months, but recently letting of contract was delayed when a dispute arose over the site. Highway engineers recommended that the structure be placed at the old Oakes Ferry site, some distance down the river from Fulton Ferry, where the road now crosses the river. Proponents of the latter site in both Davidson and Davie appealed to the full meeting of the commission, which ordered that a detailed survey be made of the site they advocated.

Engineers have reported a difference of a little over a mile in distance, with Fulton Ferry route longest, and estimate it would cost $80,000 to $100,000 more to go that way.

Davidson County Commissioners voted several months ago to lend the State $100,000 toward the cost of placing the bridge across the river.

It is expected that the State Highway Commission will improve Highway 75 between Statesville and Raleigh, probably by placing a catchhite surface. The road is also to be straightened at a number of places. This is considerably the shortest route between Lexington, where the road crosses No. 10, and Raleigh and Chapel Hill, and passes through picturesque scenery between here and Asheboro.

Snow Visits Mocksville

It is unusual for a snow to visit this section of North Carolina in May but such a thing actually happened here Sunday, May 16th. A snow flurry hit the town about 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning. If any one doubts this statement we refer them to W. F. Diggins, one of the city commissioners, who will testify to the fact.

Must Check Baggage.

Every public bus traveling the highways of North Carolina are now required to check baggage of passengers, according to a ruling of the corporation commission which was made sometime ago and which went into effect May 1.

Some of the bus lines have been checking baggage and making it compulsory that passengers present it for checking. This is because space is needed in the busses. Whether it will be compulsory that passengers in all busses surrender their baggage for checking is not known. If it is a small piece of baggage and the space not needed for passengers the passenger might be allowed to hold his baggage. However, all bus lines will be obliged to offer checking facilities.

Bus lines are compelled to carry insurance upon baggage and it is necessary that there be checking in order that insurance be obtained.

Many Visit Harding's Tomb.

More than 900,000 persons have visited the tomb of the late President Harding, in the cemetery, at Marion, Ohio, said Lieut. Walter Lee Sherfy, who has commanded a detachment of troops stationed at the tomb since President Harding's body was placed there.

Cornerstone of the Harding memorial will be laid May 30, and the structure completed in another year. The bodies of President Harding and Mrs. Harding will then be placed in the memorial. The building and its approaches will cost $600,000.

The detachment of regular army troops which number 36, will maintain its vigil until the bodies of the Hardings are removed to the permanent tomb from the receiving vault.

If everybody who reads this newspaper agrees with everything they read it is our mistake.

Mocksville Lions Busy.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Lions Club of Mocksville was held Saturday evening in the rooms of the Junior Order in the Anderson Building. A tempting supper was prepared and served by the Wesley Class of Methodist Church, and the Lions ate and roared as they usually do when they get together.

"Doc" Harris, of baseball fame, made his "debut" as an expert parliamentarian by presiding over the meeting with much grace and dignity, and Maxie Brown distinguished himself as a real, energetic and in dustrious tail twister. The fines imposed by Maxie, in comparison, would make the "Crutchfield Court" of olden days seem like an abandoned poorhouse.

Among the matters under consideration by the Club and reported on by committees were, the bridge across the Yadkin River on Route No. 75, the proposal of Southern Public Utilities Corporation to enter Mocksville for the purpose of supplying electric power, etc., and the co operation of the Club with the other civic and fraternal organizations of Mocksville in a movement to procure permanent and more attractive quarters.

Lion Robert S. McNeill reported that the Highway Commission had settled the controversy regarding the location of the bridge on Route No. 75 and had announced that the contract for the construction of the bridge would be let next month. Lion John C. Sanford reported that he had been in telephone communication with Southern Public Utilities Corporation and that this company had assured him of its desire to come to Mocksville to provide electric power at rates much lower than those now prevailing. The committee, of which Lion Sanford is chairman, was continued and authorized to go more fully into the proposition and report at the next meeting.

Lion Sanford also reported a plan whereby the Lions, Juniors, Patriotic Sons of America and those "K's" will soon have a common meeting place as all of these organizations have entered an agreement to lease the second floor of a new and modern brick structure which Sanford Brothers are going to erect immediately on the site now occupied by Davie Cafe and the old wooden structure adjacent thereto.

The usual songs, stunts and jokes featured the meeting, the songs, however, falling "flat" as expected. Lion Claude Horn submitted to a fine rather than attempt a solo de manded of him by the tail twister.

Interesting talks on organization matters were made by Lion I. P. Graham, J. S. Stroud, Arthur Holleman, Lester Martin, J. C. Sanford, Cecil Morris and others.

To Darned Much Credit.

Every time a cargo of liquor is captured by Knoxville officers Cocke County is given credit for its production. There may be, and probably is, a good deal of whiskey manufactured in this county, but all of it that falls into the hands of the officers does not come from Cocke County. There are other sections equally as guilty, and the credit should be given to those to whom it belongs.—Plain Talk.

A widespread, hopeful disposition is your only true umbrella in this vale of tears.

Do the work you have to do With a purpose strong and true. Every day.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

The simplest foods well cooked and served are the most satisfying to the majority of people for every day.

Clarified Beef Heart.

Wash and remove the arteries from the heart, wipe dry and fill with a good stuffing, tie up securely and roast in a moderate oven for three hours. Remove the strings before serving, and also pour a hot gravy around the heart.

Stuffing: Chop one ounce of suet fine, add two cupfuls of bread crumbs, one chopped onion, season with parsley, thyme, pepper, salt, and a grating of nutmeg. Mix well and add one beaten egg to bind it.

Spring Salad: Grate or put through the fine knife of the food chopper enough carrots to make a cupful, add a little minced celery, a seasoning of onion and enough good salad dressing to season well. Serve on lettuce, dotted with spoonfuls of the dressing.

Plain Custard Pie.—It would seem that any cook might make a most acceptable custard pie, but the proof of the pudding being in the eating, we know they can't. Line a pie tin with a good rich crust having the rim stand up well above the edge of the tin. Fill with a custard mixture, using for an ordinary pie two eggs, one-third of a cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt, and two cupfuls of milk, adding a generous grating of nutmeg or cinnamon if preferred. Set into a hot oven to bake the crust quickly—this avoids soaking it—then lower the heat to bake the custard, as that should not be cooked at a high temperature. Too hot an oven will make the custard whey, and become coarse grained. A perfect pie should be well baked on the bottom and have a filling of rich, creamy consistency. A custard is well baked when a knife thrust into the center comes out clean.

Tapiooca well cooked and mixed with any bits of canned or fresh fruit, topped with whipped cream, makes a most delightful dessert.

Dumplings.—Delicious fluffy dumplings may be prepared as follows:

Take one beaten egg, one cupful of buttermilk, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt; sift in flour enough to make a drop batter. Drop from a teaspoon into a kettle of hot meat with plenty of bones to hold up the dumplings, cover tightly and cook eight minutes. Do not uncover during the cooking.

Everyday Good Things.

If one desires a large quantity of sandwich filling for company, the following recipe will be a good one to follow. For small amounts it may be divided.

Cheese Sandwich Filling.—Mix together one cupful of sour cream, three eggs, one tablespoonful each of butter and sugar, a few grains of cayenne, one teaspoonful of mustard, and one teaspoonful of salt. Beat all together until the eggs are broken, set over hot water and stir until it begins to thicken, then add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar (hot) to the cream mixture. Cook until it coats the spoon, add one and one-half pounds of finely cut cheese, two green peppers put through the meat chopper and two red peppers also chopped. Add the peppers after the mixture is slightly cool. Use on slices of buttered bread. The cheese and peppers may be used, adding enough dressing to make the right consistency; in this way the amount may be varied to suit the need.

Carrot, Pineapple and Nut Salad.—Put a carrot or two through the meat chopper; to one cupful of the carrot add a slice of finely minced pineapple and a tablespoonful of chopped nuts. Mix with a good salad dressing and serve on lettuce.

Curry of Mutton.—Fry one large onion, chopped fine, in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix one tablespoonful of curry powder, one teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of flour, and stir into the onion and butter. Pour over slowly one and one-half cupfuls of stock. Cut two pounds of lean mutton into small pieces and brown them in hot fat; add them to the sauce and simmer until tender. Place the meat on a hot dish and arrange a border of hot cooked rice around it.

Liver Patties.—Seal a pound of liver and grind it with one-fourth of a pound of bacon and an onion through the meat chopper. Season well, form into small cakes and cook in a little hot bacon fat, browning on both sides.

Medley Sandwich.—Take two-thirds of a cupful of minced chicken, one-third of a cupful of minced ham and tongue; add cayenne and enough mayonnaise to make a smooth mixture to spread and spread on buttered brown and white bread made into ribbon sandwiches.

MOTHER! Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love the pleasant taste of "California Fig Syrup." A teaspoonful never fails to clean the liver and bowels. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

The simplest foods well cooked and served are the most satisfying to the majority of people for every day.

Clarified Beef Heart.

Wash and remove the arteries from the heart, wipe dry and fill with a good stuffing, tie up securely and roast in a moderate oven for three hours. Remove the strings before serving, and also pour a hot gravy around the heart.

Stuffing: Chop one ounce of suet fine, add two cupfuls of bread crumbs, one chopped onion, season with parsley, thyme, pepper, salt, and a grating of nutmeg. Mix well and add one beaten egg to bind it.

Spring Salad: Grate or put through the fine knife of the food chopper enough carrots to make a cupful, add a little minced celery, a seasoning of onion and enough good salad dressing to season well. Serve on lettuce, dotted with spoonfuls of the dressing.

Rhubarb and raisins make a good combination for a pie.

Plain Custard Pie.—It would seem that any cook might make a most acceptable custard pie, but the proof of the pudding being in the eating, we know they can't. CHAPTER XIII—Con

"His back is broken," said great-uncle. The James had begun headway; but as the wheel burst squarely on the potholes to the deck. Peter recoiled before either Murray or the Easterling's body gripped the wheel in his gloved hand. The buoyancy of the Royal James swung across to the rudder's thrusters before the wind. The headland Mokra had faded into the mist; but uncle shook his head sadly. "We are making water," he said; "and the island is so far we can scarce weather it, do—"

A faint hail reached us to sea.

And a rent in the sky showed a second and lower fair over our larboard bow. Peter started to put the helm to bear off a possible and have whatever there was of clearing it; but caught his arm.

"No, no, Peter!" cried great-uncle. "Head up! Head the North inlet! If we can't stay'd of that spit we'll starve." "Ja," squeaked Peter, and muscled the rudder. It neutralized the drive of land sea; and foot by foot James made her southing, least split with half a cable spare and opened a narrow roadstead, with shores that offered protection any storm that blew.

"His back is broken," shouted my great-uncle. The James had begun to gather headway; but as the wheel was released from the dead beam's grip her head fell off, and she dropped heavily into the trough of the seas which surged over the shattered mast, and one green hill of water leaped squarely on the poop, hurling the deck. Peter recovered his feet before either Murray or I could assist him. He was on his hands and knees, his head buried in the water, his arms outstretched in a gesture of appeal to the rudder's thrust and lurching of the wind. The headland Moira had sighted faded into the mist; but my great-uncle shook his head sadly. "We are making water," he shouted to me; "and the island is to leeward. We can scarce weather it, and if we do—"

A faint hall reached us from the fore.

"Land!" And a rent in the storm-clouds showed a second and lower headland fair over our larboard bow.

Peter started to put the helm down to enable us to bear off as much as possible and have whatever chance there was of clearing it; but Murray caught his arm.

"No, no, Peter!" cried my great-uncle. "Head up! Head up! 'Tis the North inlet! If we can pass in to starboard of that spit we are safe."

"Ja," squeaked Peter, and his iron muscles forced the rudder over until it neutralized the drive of the wind and sea; and foot by foot the Royal James made her southing, passed the spit with half a cable's length to spare and opened a narrow, bottle-necked roadstead, with tree-clad shores that offered protection from any storm that blew.

The rain was still pelting down. The surf was foaming on the outer beaches; the wind whistled shrilly in the rigging. But to us that prospect was the fairest ever seen. Moira sank to her knees in prayer beside the dead pirate. My great-uncle stepped to the rail and bade the survivors of the crew get sufficient sail on the ship to give us steerage-way. And I tried to shake Peter. He blinked at me solemnly. "I think Gott spoke out loud to der 'del today, Bob," he said. "Ja!"

CHAPTER XIV

Disaster

Another less self-assured than Andrew Murray must have been dismayed by the series of misfortunes which had beset him. We were safe, but no more. The Royal James was taking in water so rapidly 'twas necessary to beach her on the mud-flats at the south end of the inlet. She heeled like a sieve where the mizzenmast had thumped her side, and her lower works were in splinters. In the fight with the Walrus and the storm we had lost eight odd men, but more serious than this were the deaths of the two mates. Martin's body was found near the stump of the mizzen; he had been struck down by the mast as so disoriented. Nothing was ever seen of Saunders, and we could only suppose that he had been swept overboard.

The crew were apathetic and sullen, inclined to be mutinous and resentful of my great-uncle's authority. For the first time they had reason to question his omnipotence, and it required a full display of his ruthless temper to reduce them to subjection—an accomplishment to which he was aided considerably by Coupeau, and I am free to admit, by Peter and me, who could not afford to risk the brutal license which would certainly follow a successful revolt of the gundeck's poltroon horde. The former galley slave was a redoubtable ally with the lime-tailed cat, and a bruiser whose fists were as deadly sure as the long lightnings he handled so deftly.

The rain and wind ceased with the approach of darkness, and my great-uncle had the men mustered under the poop, many of them still bleeding from the punishment they had received. And of all his feats I deem that the most remarkable: To face, practically unaided, upward of a hundred and fifty men, who had just been hurled in the act of mutiny, without even sufficient light to enable him to exploit the compelling gleam of his tawny eyes. He beat them down—hand held them down—by sheer power of will and utter fearlessness.

"You stand upon the deck of a wrecked ship," he said bleakly. "Under butcheries lies sufficient treasure to make every one of you comfortable for life, to buy you dissipation or place or fortune, whichever you prefer. One man can lead you to repair the ship and conduct you where the treasure will be of use to you. I am that man. Without me you are doomed to spend your days chasing the goats on those hills; and if there is any repetition of the disorder exhibited today I shall maroon all of you save a number required to handle the ship.

"Get to work. Before you rest I expect the maindeck to be cleared and staving rigged over for resheathing and calking."

He drove them until midnight, then sent them reeling to their hammocks. In the morning a systematic plan of occupation was arranged. By Coupeau's advice a handful of the more amenable of the crew—mostly negroes, Portuguese, Italians and Frenchmen of the south—were organized as an afterguard, and the remainder were divided into squads headed by men selected for skill at some special trade. One squad were to overhaul the sails and cut and sew from spare canvas a suit for the new mizzen, which a second squad were to haul on the slopes of Spyglass mountain and transport to the ship. A third squad were to repair all exterior damage to the hull; a fourth were to recalk the started seams; a fifth were to attend to whatever internal repairs were necessary.

Coupeau was placed in charge of the work aboardship, and the rest of us carried Colonel O'Donnell's body to the top of a small hill east of the head of the inlet. There, in the midst of a grove of pines, we laid him to rest. 'Twas a noble situation for a wanderer who had never reached his goal, with the crashing boughs and the distant thunder of the surf to sound a requiem until the end of time and a view over green meadows and dwarf woodlands to the white rim of the beach and the blue sea, shining in the sun.

Yesterday seemed years past. I blinked my eyes, looking from the peaceful garb of nature to Moira's slim body huddled in prayer beside the mound of raw earth amongst the pine needles. On the edge of the grove the men who had dug the grave were playing a gambling game with the pine-cones. Peter leaned on a musket, gravely compassionate. My great-uncle, his eyes puckered in thought, was staring out to sea. As I watched, he twitched my coat sleeve and drew me to one side.

"I shall leave you to amuse yourself as you choose for the remainder of the day," he said. "This for you and Peter to safeguard the maid. I must ascertain, if possible, what hath become of Flint."

"And then?" I asked. "Then?" His eyebrows arched in surprise. "Why, then, Robert, we shall continue as we have done hitherto."

"You must pursue this insane scheme?"

He was as patient with me as if I were a fractious child. "Tis no 'insane scheme,' but a coup of high politics of fascinating import, my boy. I own to disappointment it doth not appeal to you more readily. What? Shall we cry quite, simply because of shipwreck? And after every move hath turned as we plotted it should!"

I shook my head hopelessly, but decided to try again.

"Bethink you," I argued, "the longboat can speedily be made weather-tight. In her we might reach—"

"Put it from your mind," he interrupted with a hint of iron in his voice. "You little know me, Robert, if you reckon me one to turn back from what I have begun—in especial, this matter which consummates the ambition of my life."

"But what?"

"This time the iron was uppermost. 'Boy, you are essential to my plans. Much as I love you, I— But we'll not talk on that plane. I am none for threats. Let it suffice that you are not to mention the subject again.'"

He wheeled around and left me, and with his escort of tarry-brecks strung out behind him was soon buried in the undergrowth on the lower flanks of the hill.

The sun was past meridian when Peter and I induced Moira to abandon the unmarked mound, and to divert her mind we led her on a tramp to the shoulders of the Spyglass, where a score of the James' men already had felled a giant fir and were lopping the branches from the trunk preparatory to removing the bark. In the forest near by we killed a mess of birds, and Peter skillfully broiled them over an open fire, and after that, since she professed to enjoy the silence of the mountain side, we pressed on, beyond hearing of the ringing axes, and finally came to the foot of the steep pinnacle of rock which was the lens of the Spyglass.

Here we would have halted, but Moira had heard the story of the watch the pirates maintained from the summit, and she insisted on completing the hour. And we, because we were for doing anything that would please her that day and relieve her grief, consented.

It was more difficult than it looked, and the sun was low in the west when we reached the platform at the top, stained and blackened by the beacon fires that had burned there. But the view was glorious. The island was spread out beneath us like a map on a table, from the Foremast hill on our left all the way southward along the rocky spine of the west coast to Mizzenmast hill and a cape to the west of that which old Martin had called Haulbowline head. Eastward the irregular shore ran north and south to the indentation of Captain Kidd's anchorage, the tree growth patted and thick except for several savannas midway of the island and the silvery loops of two or three small rivers.

We identified the masts of the James, rising above the headwaters of the North Inlet, and the opening in the trees north and east of Captain Kidd's anchorage that was the site of the fort Flint had built. And then Moira cried out:

"Oh, blessed saints, will that be a ship? Do but see, Bob! Peter!"

She pointed eastward; and there, sure enough, was a ship, or rather, the top of a ship barely lifting over the horizon's rim. If it had not been for the fact that the sun's rays were striking level across the ocean floor, and so were reflected from the sheen of the canvas, we should never have seen it, not even with a glass.

"Aye, 'tis a ship," I said. "Ja," nodded Peter. "It is Flint."

Moira shivered. "Troth, and who would it be else?" she demanded. "There'll be no friends of us come a-calling, I'm thinking."

"It might be a king's ship—" I began. "No, then," she denied. "If this island is gone all these years without the king's ships finding track of it, 'tis not like they will come upon it sudden in this moment."

"Tis a ship indeed," I agreed unwillingly. "Aye, a full-rigged ship."

"Ja, a ship like Flint's," said Peter. We were silent for an instant, the three of us, dazed by the suddenness with which our whole outlook on the future had been changed by this unexpected loom of tops' leagues away.

"He must have weathered the storm," I said foolishly.

"And now the red fighting will begin all over again," cried Moira. "My soul, will there not have been deaths enough for this treasure? Every piece of it must be speckled with men's blood."

"We better tell Murray," said Peter, moving toward the lip of the rock platform.

"But how could Flint be back so soon?" I protested. "Tis impossible, Peter. He could not—"

"He could, ja," returned the Dutchman imperturbably. "Der storm was by in two glasses—and der ship is yet maybe ten leagues off, near?"

We descended the Spyglass in silence. Twilight overtook us in the forest at its base, and we were obliged to retrace our course with extreme caution, so that eight bells rang from the Royal James—so exact was the restored discipline on that stranded hulk—as we stepped from the trees on to the shore of the North Inlet and hailed for a boat.

My great-uncle met us at the gangway, immaculate in plum satin coat and blue plush breeches, white silk stockings and black pumps, silver-buckled, his hair neatly tied with a black silk ribbon.

"Well," he greeted us, "you have made a long day of it. I trust you are not overtired, sweet?"

This to Moira.

"I have delayed sitting to dinner in hopes that you would be here. You can see—" he waved an all-inclusive hand—"that we have not been idle aboard the James. We begin to look like a ship again, eh? Did you by chance see the new mizzen?"

Idea of Submarine Warfare Is Ancient

Experimentally, of course, the idea of the submarine goes back into a very remote past. Aristotle speaks of some kind of submarine vessel used in the siege of Tyre more than 2,000 years ago, and there are occasional mentions of the idea through history. In the sixteenth century one comes to the bishop of Upsala's claim to have invented a boat for scuttling ships from below, and in 1626 Charles I. gave a Dutch inventor an order for "boats to go under water," though they do not seem to have been used against the French. There were the rudimentary and unsuccessful "turtles" of Bushnell in the eighteenth century. But an ill fate pursued the early inventors. Fulton's submarine was rejected by France, England and America in turn, and he set himself to the more usual work of designing boat engines. Johnson's submersible

"You better come to der cabin," said Peter abruptly.

"I beg your pardon?" answered Murray. "I have something to tell you," I said. "It cannot wait."

His eyes plumbed mine, and I think he knew in that instant what our news was. He clicked open his snuff-box and dusted a pinch delicately into his nostrils.

"So?" he murmured. "Sets the wind in that quarter?"

And he offered Moira his arm with the fine, stately dignity he achieved to perfection, and led the way aft to the main cabin.

"You may place the viands upon the table, Gunn," he said to the steward when we were seated. "We will serve ourselves."

He turned to Moira. "Tis fresh-catch, and 'sciplo—" the remaining blackamoor—"is a master at such dishes; he hath scoured it, you see, with greens he procured from the woods."

"We have scant time to eat, let alone to admire our food," I interposed roughly. "From the peak of the Spyglass at sunset we sighted the tops' of a ship in the east."

"I presume that you believe her to be the Walrus?" he returned. "Ja," said Peter. "It is Flint."

"My faith, and who else would it be?" asked Moira.

"Doubtless you are right," he assented. "Indeed, I do not question it. Our examination of the northern and eastern beaches today failed to disclose a trace of evidence to indicate what had become of the Walrus, and had she sunk some wreckage must have washed ashore. Yes, yes, my friends, our ill-luck is still with us. Flint rode out the storm. But that, Robert, is no reason why we should not secure the maximum of satisfaction from this tasty meal—all the more particularly so when we consider 'tis like to be the last for some days we shall eat in such comfortable surroundings."

"You take it coolly!" I exclaimed. "And why not? 'Tis a disaster, I grant you, yet irritation will not aid me to redress it."

"You don't stay here, neen?" said Peter.

"Quite right, friend Peter. The Royal James in her present plight would be a death-trap. I shall abandon her tonight and shift to the fort Flint was so obliging as to construct for us by the anchorage."

"And the treasure?" I asked. He held up his wingglass to the light and studied it reflectively.

"Obviously, we must be where the treasure is," he returned at length. "Or, if you please, put it the other way round: The treasure must be where we are. I foresee a busy night for our people."

Moira thrust out appealing hands toward him.

"Oh, sir, why won't ye just be after calling out to this ship when she comes and bid them take what they will and go? Sure, that would be better than—"

"Tut, tut," he rebuked her. "A part of this treasure is to supplement the eight hundred thousand pounds intended for your father's friends—and then, my lass, are King James' friends. You are a good Jacobite, I trust, and would not see our Cause deprived of a single doubloon that might buy muskets in Lyons or sword-blades in Breda?"

"Ah, 'tis little enough I feel for King James or any of them that will have sent the padre to his doom!"

which was to have rescued Napoleon from St. Helena came to nothing. Bauer, who was taken up by the prince consort, drowned the crew of his submarine. —Manchester Guardian.

Genius Poorly Rewarded

The discovery of the correct position and physiological function of the heart, when announced by Andreas Vesalius, the Belgian master of anatomy, was received on the one hand with cold skepticism, and on the other with hot opposition. Slowly, grudgingly, the worth of it was recognized. Reward, in proper measure, was not given. But it provided the stepping-stone enabling William Harvey to discover the circulation of the blood.

Vesalius was a native of Antwerp, his period being 1514-1564. At fourteen he was a student of medicine in Louvain; at twenty he was in Venice, and the year following became public demonstrator at Padua. In Bologna he gained a professorship and in Pisa a similar chair. At twenty-eight his incomparable treatise on human anatomy appeared. —London Graphic.

WOMAN COULD NOT SLEEP

Her Mother-in-Law Knew A Remedy

Mrs. Belle Thompson was a very weak and run-down condition for four years. She had great difficulty in getting to sleep at night, and even then did not sleep soundly. She would wake up again and again. Besides this her appetite was poor. "My mother-in-law told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash," she writes. "I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound and I was not the same woman at all. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does me more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."

—Mrs. Belle Thompson, R. 2, Rossville, Georgia.

The Divorce Evil.

In Mecklenburg county last year, the bonds of matrimony were dissolved for eight couples. Of these unfortunate unions fifty three were contracted in the war period or in a few years after the war. Some people think that the general unrest and demoralization of the war caused a great many hasty marriages and the natural consequence—a big crop of divorces. Whatever may be its cause for divorces. Whatever may be its cause the divorce evil appears to be growing steadily throughout the United States. Here in Carteret county there is hardly a term of Superior court that one or two divorces are not granted. Fifty years, even twenty five years ago, a divorce suit here would never have been the talk of the whole county. Now the average suit for divorce attracts no attention and but for its publication in the newspapers would not be known except to a few persons. Nobody seems to know what to do about this divorce business. There are many suggestions but nothing in particular is being done and the unjoining process goes along regularly if not merrily. If is one of those social problems which the American people have not yet been able to solve.—Ex.

JUST TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

What Was Happening in Davie Before The Days of Automobiles and Rolled Hoses.

E. M. James, of Wadesboro, was in town last week.

Misses Clement and Eaton's school closed last Friday.

Miss Elva Kelly returned last week from a visit to Salisbury.

F. M. Johnson has returned from a visit to Mt. Airy.

C. F. Cheshire, of Harmony, was in town last week on business.

The Coolmees Cotton Mills want 50 hands at once to help repair the race. One dollar per day is offered.

The high water played havoc at Coolmees Cotton Mills. It washed out about 75 feet of race bank just about the old grist mill, causing the mill to shut down, and suspend all operations. It is hoped the mill will be able to start up soon.

M. A. Foster and J. C. Giles made a business trip to Salisbury Monday.

The old soldiers picnic was held in Mocksville at Clement Grove last Saturday. Capt. Frank Robbins and Rev. W. C. Willson made speeches and a nice dinner was served. A great time was enjoyed by all present.

We are having plenty of rain at this season.

Mrs. McKinley who was so sick about a week ago that the President's trip had to be called in, is much better.

Nothing Like It.

(From The Monroe Enquirer.)

Every time I see a man on the streets selling patent dingusses for automobiles I am reminded of the fellow who installed on his car a new-fangled carburetor that was guaranteed to save 20 per cent in gas.

Then he put in special spark plugs that were guaranteed to save 20 per cent of the same precious fluid and an intake super-heater that was guaranteed to save 20 per cent.

He next put in a patented rear axle that was also guaranteed to save 20 per cent, and retired with a new brand of tires that promised a 20 per cent saving in gas consumption. Finally, he drained his crank case and refilled it with a new oil guaranteed to increase his mileage 20 per cent. Now, with a fuel economy of 120 per cent, the owner has to stop every hundred miles and bail out the gas tank to keep it from running over!

Cocke County has a lot of fine peaches but they are not growing on trees. The latter variety would flourish here as well as the former.

Those who work because they like it are better workmen than those who work better they have to.

Don't let noise deceive you. The vocalists don't do all the work and the workers don't do much talking.

Freedom.

There are many angels from which this subject can be discussed but we will treat it from angle of free in our public schools and in education in general.

The students and leaders in various educational institutions are crying now for unlimited freedom in educational fields that there may be no hampering of truth. It is all about the question of whether man evolved to his present status or whether he was created in the image of God and has degenerated to his present state.

The truth of the whole situation is that there is no effort on the part of those who believe in creation, to hamper truth. They are cry out for freedom also. The kind they desire is that will make men and women really free to search for ultimate truth. They protest the teaching of a theory as a fact and especially one that is as theoretical as the question that is agitating the mind of the world today. This is the thing that men want to believe and therefore is more acceptable to HUMANITY than real truth and if given the weight of being an established fact by some of the greatest minds when it is but a theory, will prevent the arriving at the ultimate. This will be the result because men are seeking the line of least resistance which is natural and that carries the minimum penalty for violation of the truth.

What those who believe in creation desired we understand them, is that everything that is a truth be taught and that is theory and taught as such.—Ex.

Power of Imagination.

A young man heard a lecturer say: "Of all venomous reptiles the 'cotton-mouth' is most dangerous; a man rarely lives an hour if bitten by one."

Later the young man went fishing. He clambered along a sheer rock wall, his rod pointing ahead of him, his bait afloat upon the water. Presently a cotton-mouth dropped into the stream before him then another and another.

He paid no attention, for he was used to cotton-mouths. He groped with his left hand in the briars and vines to hold himself on the ledge. Suddenly something stabbed his finger. Two pin-points trickled blood. Then the biggest cotton-mouth he had ever seen uncoiled from the vines above him.

Cold sweat broke over the young man. His hand throbbled. He felt the poison burn in his veins, paralyze his nerves. He decided to leap into the stream rather suffer the slow death now coming. He poised to do it when a fish struck his bait. His rod bent to the flitting pull of a great bass. Instinctively he thrilled to the battle—the tingling thrill of the fisherman when "a big one" hits the fly.

He landed the bass after an hour, glorified over the big, fighting fish, then remembered his hand. It didn't throb any more. He took courage to probe the pinpoint wounds. In each of them he found—a long, sharp, harmless nettle!

Which only means that imagination can doom men to death; does doom many to failure. Pricked by a nettle, they imagine they have been bitten by the cotton-mouth; meeting a little trouble they imagine it fatal.

Don't let imagination enlarge your troubles. Turn it on the other way, making it enlarge your power to meet troubles and overcome them. Most troubles are nettles, not cotton-mouths.

Well, boys, cheer up! It's most time for the bathing girls to take the spot-light again.

Night Watchman Dies a Horrible Death.

Suffering indescribable agonies, S. P. West, night watchman at the Fairmont cotton mills, Spartanburg S. C., died in a hospital in that city the past week of hydrophobia. Despite his intense sufferings, Mr. West was conscious at times and calmly made arrangements for his funeral services.

Mr. West took the Pasteur treatment for rabies, receiving the stipulated number of inoculations for rabies he stipulated number of inoculations for 27 days and his hand, lacerated by the dog, apparently had healed. Several days ago he complained of pain in one of his fingers on the wounded hand. In a few hours the pain became more intense and symptoms of convulsions developed. He was brought to a hospital Monday.

Mr. West was attacked by a mad-dog as he was at work in the boiler rooms at Fairmont mills about a month ago. He fought the animal with his bare hands and knocked the dog to the ground several times. Once, when the frenzied beast sprang at his throat, Mr. West slapped the dog in the face, and the animal immediately grabbed his hand. The dog's teeth tore through the flesh and almost severed two fingers from the hand. The animal clung desperately to the hand and Mr. West was forced to choke the dog almost to death before he could free his fingers.

Small Bank Accounts

It was recently announced that the North Carolina Bankers Association would in all probability suggest that a charge be made for small bank accounts that are handled by them, because of the expense of handling them.

This would be a very bad business move to make. It is killing the goose that lays the golden egg.

If great oaks from little acorns grow when the little acorns should be given all the care necessary to insure their germination and grow until able to stand the storms of the financial world.

This action on the part of the bankers would indicate to wage earners who makes a deposit on his checking account, because in this way it is not so easy to spend and hoping that the accumulation over and above what he spends will eventually be placed in the savings account that his account is not wanted. This would serve to further separate Capital and Labor and is undesirable and a dangerous move.

The laboring man barely makes sufficient to save a very little now and if the charge is made for handling the account it would tend to discourage saving. It can't be possible that the banks do desire that the number of depositors be decreased and the amount of deposits increased due to the favored few getting all the money because it is spent.

The best friend a laboring man has is a banking institution which is desirous of educating him to save and offering inducements to him to do so. Education in thrift will not only result in increased deposits but will also result in the coming generation being more thrifty than the present. Don't do it bankers, it has a kick and you will be the ones who will suffer if you do.

The banks are making sufficient to keep them going from the present rate of interest which they are permitted to collect on loans. They can't cry out poverty. It is another attempt if made, to corner the money supply into the coffers of the rich and prevent the poor man from becoming rich. It can't be done simply by stopping the door of the banks to the small depositors.—Carolina Independent.

Nothing is said in the platform about evolution and whether that matter will come before the next Legislature must await future developments.

Providence of the Weekly Newspaper.

"There will continue to be for a long time, many weekly and semi-weekly newspapers in the state because the daily field is limited," says the Statesville Landmark.

"The weeklies are as important in their field as the dailies in theirs, and the constituency served by the weeklies deserve the best the field affords. In fact the field of the local weekly is most important and it offers opportunities for service that are not found on the daily. In brief, the country weekly ably and conservatively edited, can do a greater service to it constituency than it is possible for the daily to render in that field. Therefore the importance of strong men, trained men, taking hold of the country weeklies should be stressed. Not all who aspire to newspaper work, can find jobs on the dailies and it is best for them and the dailies that they do not. If they can take a country weekly and make it go, can put it on the map, the financial reward may or may not be so great but the service will be greater; and he who demonstrates in the weekly field that he is a real newspaper man will find openings in plenty on dailies. In fact the dailies—the larger dailies especially—are always looking out for men who have made good on weeklies."

Democrats Destined to Rude Awakening.

The Biblical Recorder, organ of the great Baptist denomination in North Carolina doesn't like the platform of the Democrats, adapted in their recent state convention at Raleigh any too well and is fearful lest there is an underground movement to deliver the state over to the wet Catholic Al Smith. Democratic candidate for the Presidential nomination in 1928.

"In reading the platform" says the Biblical Recorder, "we regret, to see that several very important matters were sidestepped or touched upon very lightly. One of the most important matters before the State now is the adoption of the Australian Ballot. This has been urged by the women and by many others who want to see an honest election law enacted. But the old line politicians seem to be against it and as near as they came to considering the matter was to state that every one should be protected in his rights in voting. All us know that these are catch phrases.

The platform has nothing to say about prohibition or law enforcement. At a time when the whole country is stirred from side to side on this vital matter, and a congressional committee has been investigating it quite recently, it seems a pity that the convention should have been silent on this matter. We wonder if this silence means that the Democratic party expects to swing the State for Al Smith, a wet Catholic, in case he is nominated. If so, we think the party is destined to a rude awakening. As powerful as the party lash is we do not believe it can drive the Christian voters of this State, or of the South, to support a man who openly declared that he is in favor of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

Reference was made to the importance of improving our rural schools, but the eight months' term was not mentioned in the platform. It was stated, however, that a commission had been appointed to study this whole question and present their findings to the General Assembly. On that commission are some of our best and wisest citizens who are friends of the education of all the people. It may that their findings will be such as to lead the Legislature to adopt the eight months school term.

If the officers don't soon get some of our speed fiends we are afraid the devil will.

Only 30 days until the blackberry will begin turning black. Cheer up, boys, good times are ahead.

Republicans should be very careful these days when approaching certain leading citizens. There are many secrets in the air.

Davie county has a fine set of county commissioners and the voters are going to re-elect them this fall for a second term.

From present indications it would seem that the Democratic brethren have already opened up campaign headquarters in Mocksville.

Reading the report from the Republican primary in Pennsylvania last week we are led to believe that Pennsylvania is just about as wet as Al Smith, of New York.

The venerable Overman of Salisbury, who has been in Washington drawing a handsome salary since Heck was a pup declared some time ago that he would not make an active campaign this year. Ye gods and little fishes.

So far as we can learn the Al Smith for President Club in Mocksville isn't growing as fast as some of the boys had just figured. It is mighty hard to get our people to admit that they are anxious to support a "wet" man and a Catholic for the highest office in the gift of the people.

If there is a conscientious Democrat in Davie county who will say that Kelley Cope hasn't made a good sheriff since taking office we would like to see the color of his skin. Mr. Cope will have no opposition so far as we know, from the Republican camp. It is thought by some that the Democrats will put out a man to oppose him but this remains to be seen.

There is not a better agricultural county in the state than Davie. While our county is among the smallest in the state yet it will produce almost any crop that can be grown in the south outside of Florida. The soil is especially adapted for wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, and various kinds of small grain. There are many thousands of acres of idle land in the county, much of which could be purchased at reasonable figures. We have room for a large number of good farmers and some effort should be made by the Lions Club, together with the merchants and professional men throughout the county, to secure some outsiders to locate in our midst. Our climate cannot be excelled, and the healthful atmosphere keeps the county free of malaria, fever and many other diseases that men are heir to. We have a number of as fine cattle and dairy farms as can be found in this section, and the poultry business is coming to the front at a rapid rate. The Record would be glad to furnish its readers who live in nearly every state in the Union, any information they desire regarding Davie county. This information is free and we will try to answer any question in regard to crops, climate, markets, land prices, etc., with the assistance of county agent George Evans. If you are thinking of locating in this state, visit Davie before making up your mind to settle down. A hearty welcome awaits you, among the best people in the best county, in the best state in the world. Come.

Several of our people attended the Commencement exercises last week.

Walker to Pay $5,700.

The civil action brought against ex Sheriff Roy Walker by the county commissioners was compromised Monday. Mr. Walker is to pay the county the sum of $5,700, tax money which he did not collect of 1923 taxes. He has been given authority by the courts to proceed and collect these taxes by law.

Commencement Exercises Next Week.

The annual commencement of Mocksville high school will begin next Sunday, May 30th, and continue through June 2nd.

Sunday evening the baccalaureate sermon will be preached by the Rev. Edgar A. Woods, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Salisbury.

Monday evening, as customary, will be given over to the literary societies whose program will take the form of oration and declamation contestants are selected to represent the four literary societies.

Tuesday evening will be given to Seniors as class night. The program should prove entertaining since it is not of a conventional type but a novel affair.

The graduation exercises which are to take place Wednesday evening, mark the close of the commencement.

The annual address will be delivered Wednesday evening but the speaker has not yet been selected. There are 20 young ladies and gentlemen in the graduating class this year, namely: Misses Grace and Laura Veigh McCulloch, Pansy Walker, Myrtle Anderson, Geneva Garrett, Myrtle Allen, Frankie Craven, Rebecca Grant, Thelma Wyatt, Pearl Stonestreet, Hattie Eaton, Brady Angell, Floyd Tuterow, Harry Stroud, T. B. Walker, Jr., Tom Bailey Woodruff, James Daniel, Paul Grubbs, Sidney Kirk, Jake Meroney.

FOOD FOR THE DAY

The French are wonderful cooks, but they look with dismay upon our huge, juicy roasts and steaks. Mark Twain said: "There is here and there an American who will say he can remember rising from a European table of food perfectly satisfied; but we must not overlook the fact that there is here and there an American who will lie."

Onion Soup With Eggs and Cream.
Cut up six white onions, thin and fry in a tablespoonful of butter until a light brown. Add a quart of water and a pint of milk. Season with a teaspoonful each of salt and sugar, a dash of red pepper and a pinch of mace. Cook slowly for an hour and strain; beat four eggs until light, add a cupful of cream and a tablespoonful of cornstarch, mixed with a little cold water; cook until the starch is well cooked before adding the eggs, as the soup must not be boiled after adding the eggs or it will curdle.

Jellied Chicken.—Dress, clean and cut up a four-pound fowl. Put in a saucepan with two slices of onion; cover with boiling water and cook slowly until the meat falls from the bones. When partly cooked add half a teaspoonful of salt. Remove the chicken, reduce the stock to three-fourths of a cupful, strain and skim off the fat. Decorate the bottom of the mold with parsley and hard-cooked eggs cut into slices. Pack in the meat, freed from skin and bones, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour over the stock and place the mold under a heavy weight. Keep in a cold place until firm. In warm weather add a teaspoonful of gelatin to the stock.

Merridale Pie.—Take two cupfuls of drained crushed pineapple, one-half cupful of red currant jelly, one tablespoonful of confectioner's sugar, and one stiffly beaten egg white. Mix the pineapple, jelly and sugar and beat vigorously with an egg beater, then fold in the beaten egg white and turn into a baked pastry shell. Sprinkle with one-half cupful of grated coconut and place in the oven until brown. Baked Chicken With Bananas.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one large onion thinly sliced, cut two young chickens into pieces for serving, cover and cook slowly, turning often; after cooking ten minutes add one cupful of chicken stock and cook until the meat is tender. Remove the chicken, put stock and onion in the meat is tender. Remove the chicken, put stock and onion through a sieve and add one and one-half tablespoonfuls each of butter and four cooked together until smooth. Season with salt, pepper and a bit of cayenne. Arrange the chicken on a platter, pour the sauce around it and garnish the rim of the platter with sliced bananas which have been fried in butter. A teaspoonful of lemon juice and one-half teaspoonful of sugar may be used to taste the bananas while cooking.

Choice Cakes.
Wise mixing and careful baking are important points in successful cake making. If the cake is to bake an hour, watch the oven the first quarter or twenty-five minutes to see that it begins to rise; the second quarter it should finish rising and begin to brown; the third quarter it should finish browning and begin to shrink from the sides of the pan; the last quarter finishes the baking. If the cake begins to brown in the first quarter, it will not rise sufficiently, so careful following of this rule will insure a good cake, provided it has been well prepared.

A cake filled with large holes has too much of the rising agency—baking powder or soda and cream of tartar—or it has not been well blended. Careful mixing to thoroughly blend all the ingredients is vital in good cake-making. If a cake cracks open in the middle, lumping itself up into an unsightly shaped loaf, it may be caused from too hot an oven or too much flour. The first five minutes in the oven a cake may be turned and shifted without injury, but after that leave it until it has fully risen before moving it.

Wedding Cake.—Take one cupful each of white sugar, brown sugar, molasses, coffee and butter. Six eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, two pounds of raisins, one pound of currants, one-half pound each of finely sliced citron and chopped dates, the same of figs, one pound of walnut meats chopped, one-half ounce each of orange and lemon extract, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves, nutmeg and allspice. Two cupfuls of chopped apples and salt to taste. Add four cupfuls of flour and steam three hours, then bake one. This fruit cake will keep for months and is before it will be served. Steaming the cake first insures a moist, good-flavored cake.

LIVES ON FARM
IN OKLAHOMA

Happy Woman Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a sunny pasture in Oklahoma, a herd of sleek cows was grazing. They made a pretty picture. But the thin woman in the blue checked apron sighed as she looked at them. She was tired of cows, tired of her tedious work in the dairy. She was tired of cooking for a household of boarders, besides caring for her own family. The burdens of life seemed too heavy for her failing health. She had lost confidence in herself.

One day she began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her general health began to improve. She took it faithfully. Now she can do her work without any trouble, sleeps well and is no longer blue and timid. This woman, Mrs. Cora Short, R. R. 9, Box 396, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes: "Everybody now says: 'Mrs. Short, what are you doing to yourself?' I weigh 135 and my weight before I took it was 115. I have taken seven bottles of the Vegetable Compound."

Other women who have to work hard and keep things going may find the road to better health as Mrs. Short did, through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Ask your neighbor.

JACOB AT BETHEL

LESSON TEXT.—Genesis 28:10-22.
GOLDEN TEXT.—I am with thee and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest.—Gen. 28:15.
PRIMARY TOPIC.—Jacob Dreams at Bethel.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—Jacob's Vision at Bethel.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—A Young Man's Dreams and Visions.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—The Place of Vision in Human Lives.

1. Jacob's Flight to Haran.
He fled from an outraged brother. His deceit and cunning, got him into trouble. His long exile from home was the result of his selfish ambition. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Rebekah made her plea before Isaac for sending Jacob away, stating her fear of Jacob's probable marriage with a daughter of Canaan, when in reality she feared that Esau would kill him. Isaac at once recognized the wisdom of her suggestion. He knew that the success or failure of one's life is largely determined by his marriage. It was clear that if Jacob were to continue in the line of the covenant blessing care must be exercised in his marriage. Besides, it is a parental duty to see that children are well married. Among Christians only marriage in the Lord is allowable (1 Cor. 7:39). Isaac, alive to Jacob's destiny, issued his command and bestowed upon him the covenant blessing which had come from God Almighty to Abraham (Gen. 17:1). The elements embraced in this blessing are:

(1) A numerous offspring (v. 3).
(2) Possession of the promised land (v. 4).
(3) And everything that is included in the Abrahamic covenant (Gen. 12:1-3 and Gen. 15:1-8).

We should learn from the experience of Jacob.

1. Be sure your sin will find you out.

Jacob deceived his father. He in turn was deceived by his children.

2. That wrong home life has its perils.

Isaac knew that the blessing was to be Jacob's, yet he planned for Esau to have the place of prominence. He was willing for the sake of a little venison to give to Esau that which God had planned for Jacob.

11. Jacob at Bethel.
1. The Lord meets Jacob at Bethel (vv. 10-15).

With a spirit clouded by homesickness on the one hand and by fear on the other, he had a dream that night in which God appeared to him. In this dream Jacob beheld a ladder or stair reaching from earth to heaven, upon which angels were ascending and descending. Above the ladder stood the Lord who spoke to him. This ladder suggests a means of communication between earth and heaven, between man and God. Jesus Christ is the ladder which provides us a means of communication with heaven (John 1:51; 14:6; Heb. 10:19-20). Jesus became a real ladder to us, bridging the chasm between earth and heaven. He was a real man that He might identify himself with the race. He is very God, really divine, that He might lift us up to God and secure a reconciliation with Him. Earth and heaven, man and God, were separated by the introduction of sin, but through Christ a means of intercourse is re-established. This vision suggested to Jacob that the only approach to God was through a mediator. The angels ascending and descending are heavenly messengers which are sent to minister to man through the mediatory work of Christ (Heb. 1:14). God spoke to him from the top of the ladder and assured him that He is the God who entered into covenant with Abraham and renewed the same unto his father Isaac (v. 13). This assurance embraced the following:

(1) The possession of the land (v. 13).
(2) A numerous offspring (v. 14).
(3) The promise of His personal presence and preservation (v. 15).

This promise was fulfilled in a marvelous way with Jacob and is still being fulfilled with his seed.

111. Jacob's Vow to the Lord (vv. 16-22).

He set up as a monument the stone which he had had for a pillow. He named the place Bethel, which means the house of God. Jacob now vowed that since God had so graciously obligated himself to perform all this for him, he would exalt God as the Lord of his life and give back to Him one-tenth of all that was given to him.

If you want to buy a car on time

It is to your advantage to buy the car that you can comfortably afford, on a payment plan that gives you a sure margin of safety.

General Motors has its own finance company, the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, operating the GMAC Plan. Through its service more than 1,000,000 families have purchased cars comfortably out of income.

On August 1 last, the price of this service, which had always been low, was further reduced. And the automobile-buying public is now saving millions of dollars annually as a result of this reduction and the influence of General Motors' leadership.

The purchase of automobiles on time is a universally accepted practice. The car is a utility and it is sound business to conserve capital and use credit. But buy on sound terms and at low rates. Any General Motors dealer will explain the advantages of the GMAC Plan.

Our meetings were justified when we toiled up the sandy slopes of the hill upon which the stockade was built. The glare of an immense bonfire showed through the trees, and rude voices were chanting that sinister sea-song which had been my introduction to the pirate brotherhood.

Fifteen men on the Dead Man's Chest—
Ye ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!
Drink and the devil had done for the rest—
To-ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!

I had never heard it sung by the James' crew before.

As we approached the palisades we descended through the openings a score or two of them, comical in their broad pantaloons, their belts bristling with cutlasses and pistols, prancing around the fire like Mohicans dancing a scalp.

They paid no attention to us, and we crossed the cleared area inside to the door of the blockhouse, where Coupeau lounged against the log wall.

"M'sieu le capitaine es com?" he inquired.

I told him yes.

"Ees com' queeck?" he insisted.

I shrugged my shoulders to this, and he grunted.

"Maybe so we mak'-com' at those rascal," he suggested.

"Have they had any rum?" I asked suspiciously.

"Non. They have zee fire—and they zee much treasore."

He paused.

"Maybe so you com'," he said, and without waiting for us to answer, strode alone toward the fire.

I shoved Moira inside the blockhouse, and Peter and I started after him. I made to draw a pistol, but Peter caught my arm.

"Neen," he said. "We do this wit' our fists and our voice, Bob—or we don't do it at all."

Such were Coupeau's tactics—but he relied mostly upon his fists. He waited until the dancers, smiting right and left, and Peter and I came behind him. Several men reached for their cutlasses, but these we got to before they had time to draw steel.

In the middle of the row Murray's voice flashed out from the shadows like a sword, and our opponents covered away.

"Sdeath," he drawled. "Will you fellows think to take advantage of me because I turn by back upon you for an hour or two?"

He came forward into the circle of light. "Coupeau!"

"Oui, m'sieu."

"Who began the trouble this time?"

The gunner fastened his awful visage upon the whitening faces of the group of trouble-makers.

"That man."

He pointed.

"Heem. Heem. Heem. Heem."

"Very good," said my great-uncle. "Most of us prefer to sleep, seeing that we confront the certainty of a busy morrow; but I have no wish to disappoint those who would amuse themselves tonight. Nay, I will provide entertainment for them. Take those five, Coupeau, and the fellows who hollered with them, and stand by whilst their followers lay on an hundred and fifty lashes with the cat for wh."

There was an instant's silence, then a rasp of terror, and one man commenced to sob.

"Oh, Gawd, cap'n, sir, we can't stand no hun'erd'n' fifty lashes! No mortal man could. Don't 'ee say it, sir! We'll crawl to 'ee, cap'n, sir, 'deed we will."

"You should have thought of that beforehand," replied Murray, unmoved.

"Not a hun'erd an' fifty, cap'n," pleaded a second man. "'Twill kill us, sure."

"I should not be surprised if it would," agreed my great-uncle, taking snuff. "In fact, were I in your shoes I should hope that it would. Take them away, Coupeau—out of earshot, if you please."

CHAPTER XV

The Attack on the Stockade

Daylight revealed the Walrus heading toward the mouth of the anchorage; but the smoke from our cooking fires obviously puzzled her, and she heaved to and lowered a boat which pulled up the channel to investigate.

"She is bound for the North inlet," commented Murray, pocketing his glass. "Flint will find the James and be with us again by mid-afternoon."

"When his battery will make short work of this gimcrack fortress," I said disagreeably. "Why not make terms with them? You have the eight hundred thousand pounds' safe."

"I stated my opposing reasons last night to Mistress O'Donnell."

"But you had not then been compelled to fog five knives to death," I objected. "This is no crew to fight a forlorn hope."

"They and their like have fought for me these thirty years," he replied placidly. "Nor do I consider the approaching struggle a forlorn hope. Let me involve Flint; in an attack upon us here, and I promise you he'll bring off enough men to work his ship. Also, you err in your first assertion, Robert. Only three of last night's mutineers have died. The other two are yet alive—albeit uncomfortable. I fancy; exceeding uncomfortable."

"And how they must love you!" I sneered.

"Fear me, you should say," he corrected.

"Ja," said Peter, "and from fear grows hate."

My great-uncle smiled.

"I find myself, as always, moved to admiration of the philosophy you have distilled from your wide range of experience, friend Peter," he answered.

"But suffer me to remind you that, in the language of the alchemists, fear and hate are mutually reactive principles, the one consuming and neutralizing the other."

There was no more to be said, and however unwillingly, Peter and I were constrained to do all that we could to aid in strengthening the position.

Twice Peter's idea that the men be set to digging shallow pits behind the stockade to provide additional shelter against musketry fire from the border of woods and undergrowth at the base of the hill, twice likewise Peter suggested, vastly to her indignation, that we construct for Moira a shot-proof cubby-hole of treasure chests and kegs in one corner of the blockhouse.

We had scarce finished these preparations when the Walrus reappeared and tacked up the anchorage to the elbow where it bends sharply around the larger island which covers the entrance. Farther she was unable to go because of shoal water. Her people seemed to be concerned entirely with the task of disembarkation, and in the space of a glass we reckoned that all of a hundred and fifty men were landed and straggled irregularly into the forest.

The afternoon was warm and dewy. The Walrus looked like a toy ship on the oily-smooth surface of the inlet. There was not a sign of life aboard her, and the forest that spread behind us and the shore hugged silently whatever secrets it covered.

My great-uncle frowned thoughtfully.

"This is not like Flint," he remarked. "He must always fly bullet-headed to the attack."

The words were hardly out of his mouth when a shout came from the side of the stockade fronting the inlet.

"Here be Flint's Redhead!"

Forth from the forest wall projected the unmistakable flaming locks of Darby McGraw, with one arm which flourished diligently what once had been a white shirt. At the first glimpse of me he scrambled into the open.

"'Will ye be letting me come in, Master Bob?" he called. "I ha' a message for himself."

"Who?"

"Himself—him that's uncle to ye."

"Well, seeing that we hear each other excellently as we are, suppose you speak your message from the spot you stand on," I said.

"Troth, that will suit me fine," he replied with alacrity. "And 'tis easy said. Flint will ha' Cap'n Murray shift the treasure to the foot of the hill, and that done, the Walrus will stump and fired a pistol over Darby's head. The boy stood motionless a moment, mouth agape.

"The old devil!" he howled then, and fled down the hillside for all he was worth.

Flint did not wait to receive Murray's verbal answer; that pistol-shot was sufficiently explicit. Three musket-shots echoed it from the foot of the hill, and at once there was a renewed hustle of men on the fo'c'sle of the Walrus. A puff of white smoke blew up from the deck, and the crack of a long twelve started myriads of sea-birds from the seaward marshes.

The shot sang over us and crashed into the forest beyond. The other chase-gun howled a shot into the enclosure, where a simply buried itself in the soft sand.

The caronades were unable to reach the blockhouse with their heavier shot, and the Long Toms lacked the power to penetrate the green wood of the walls. Most of the round-shot plumped into the sand. Three posts of the stockade were knocked over and promptly set up again. That was all. When darkness intervened and the dring ceased we felt that we had been the winners of the first bout of the struggle.

In the meantime we had not seen a trace of the landing-party from the Walrus, and as the night shut down we all peered curiously through the posts of the stockade, expecting momentarily to discover a rush of crouching figures. But hour after hour passed without a sound to disturb the silence, and even Murray, whose nerves were of forged steel, became uneasy as he up-ended the hour-glass for the third time since sunset and decided to inspect the circuit of the defenses.

"There is another hand than Flint's behind these Fabian tactics," he observed. "Perhaps John Silver's. 'Tis a clever rogue, and a cunning. We cannot be too vigilant."

Coupeau joined us on the southern side of the stockade. On the north side we came to a pit which was empty, and in the next one to it a man lay on his stomach as if asleep.

Murray prodded him with his sword, and the fellow groaned, but did not stir.

"What is the matter with this man?" demanded my great-uncle.

"Please, zur, 'tis John Pychens," answered the man next beyond.

"I asked what was the matter with him, said my great-uncle coldly.

"He'm wur one o' they as had a hun'erd 'n' fifty lashes, too."

"Where is he?"

"Please, zur, us buried him," the man answered.

"Where?"

The man waved an arm vaguely over the sandy top of the hill.

"Ah! Well, you will leave unburied the next man who dies, be he Job or another—else I shall have the cat administered to all of you who have abandoned your posts without permission."

"Iss, zur. Thank 'ee, zur," replied the man—but there was no thanks in his snarling voice; his face was masked by the darkness.

"Stap me," said Murray turning away, "but these rascals are becoming as slack as Flint's tatterails!"

Across the clearing a musket exploded. Then another and another. A volley crackled from the lower slopes, and our men replied. A hoarse yelling underscored the firing.

"At last!"

Murray's voice vibrated with exultation.

A great roar of firing burst out upon the northern front of the stockade, and mingled with the reports of the muskets were shouts of:

"Down arms, Jameses!"

"Step aside, James lads!"

"All we want is old Murray!"

And a walling voice cried over and over again—

"Here be Tom Morpew 'n' his bloody back, mates!"

The firing sputtered and dwindled and was succeeded by a prodigious scuffling and clatter of cutlasses.

"We'll do 'ee no harm, Jameses!" And now I recognized Silver's voice.

"Strike arms, Jameses!"

Three men, one of them with a broken arm, raced up to us.

"Long John's in," sobbed one.

"Tom Morpew let 'em in," panted a second.

"Excellently planned," drawled Murray.

I heard the click of his snuffbox.

"Yet observe how fate hath tricked our opponents," he went on. "They timed their second attack to catch me on the southern side of the stockade, whereas it happens I am strategically disposed to exploit the disorder which attends their success. I think we shall teach the clever Master Silver a lesson."

"Yes, if your men are loyal," I said angrily.

My great-uncle leaped upon a tree

The boy stood motionless a moment, mouth agape.

"The old devil!" he howled then, and fled down the hillside for all he was worth.

Coupeau joined us on the southern side of the stockade. On the north side we came to a pit which was empty, and in the next one to it a man lay on his stomach as if asleep.

Murray prodded him with his sword, and the fellow groaned, but did not stir.

"What is the matter with this man?" demanded my great-uncle.

"Please, zur, 'tis John Pychens," answered the man next beyond.

"I asked what was the matter with him, said my great-uncle coldly.

"He'm wur one o' they as had a hun'erd 'n' fifty lashes, too."

"Where is he?"

"Please, zur, us buried him," the man answered.

"Where?"

The man waved an arm vaguely over the sandy top of the hill.

"Ah! Well, you will leave unburied the next man who dies, be he Job or another—else I shall have the cat administered to all of you who have abandoned your posts without permission."

"Iss, zur. Thank 'ee, zur," replied the man—but there was no thanks in his snarling voice; his face was masked by the darkness.

Across the clearing a musket exploded. Then another and another. A volley crackled from the lower slopes, and our men replied. A hoarse yelling underscored the firing.

"At last!"

Murray's voice vibrated with exultation.

"Now we shall scoop the rogues like so many grains of sand. The fools! A night attack is fatal with undisciplined men."

A great roar of firing burst out upon the northern front of the stockade, and mingled with the reports of the muskets were shouts of:

"Down arms, Jameses!"

"Step aside, James lads!"

"All we want is old Murray!"

And a walling voice cried over and over again—

"Here be Tom Morpew 'n' his bloody back, mates!"

The firing sputtered and dwindled and was succeeded by a prodigious scuffling and clatter of cutlasses.

"We'll do 'ee no harm, Jameses!" And now I recognized Silver's voice.

"Strike arms, Jameses!"

Three men, one of them with a broken arm, raced up to us.

"Long John's in," sobbed one.

"Tom Morpew let 'em in," panted a second.

"Excellently planned," drawled Murray.

I heard the click of his snuffbox.

"Yet observe how fate hath tricked our opponents," he went on. "They timed their second attack to catch me on the southern side of the stockade, whereas it happens I am strategically disposed to exploit the disorder which attends their success. I think we shall teach the clever Master Silver a lesson."

"Yes, if your men are loyal," I said angrily.

"Any crew are loyal in victory, Robert," he answered.

"Ja," spoke Peter, "but you better not let dot feller talk about his bloody back."

"You are squeamish, it seems, Peter," murmured my great-uncle. "Well, I shall even seek to humor you, Coupeau!"

His voice hardened.

"Oul, m'sieu."

The gunner stepped from the huddled ranks of the afterguard.

"We attack."

But indeed the attack was made upon us. We had not advanced four paces from the shelter of the blockhouse when fifty of the invaders stormed out of the night, howling and waving their cutlasses. We fired one smashing volley that dropped a fourth of them, and charged. A few pistol-shots met us, but most of the Walrus men had discarded their muskets, preferring to fight sailor-fashion with the cutlass, and they were utterly disheartened by the unexpectedness of the reception we gave them.

Murray's slender dress-sword was a bodkin of death which pricked a path through the densest ranks. On one side of him Peter swung a clubbed musket which shattered heads and limbs at every step. On his other side Coupeau wielded a cutlass with equal effect.

A yellow crescent moon was riding over the treetops, and we halted in the gap the attackers had torn in the stockade to survey our situation by its light. Half-way down the hill a group of the Walrus' men rallied and commenced to fire up at us; and Coupeau was for pushing after them, but my great-uncle checked him.

"No, no, Coupeau! Yonder is John Silver, astraddle of the stockade. See, he is helping up another fellow. They have been cut off by our charge, and if you please, we'll deal with them first."

I will admit a pang of sympathy for Silver. He was not more than twenty yards from us and by dint of well-nigh incredible efforts, with the other man to boost him, he had succeeded in scaling the stockade and was sitting there, with his one leg dangling inside. When we discovered him he started to swing his leg over the top, evidently intending to abandon his companion. But whether because of something the other man said or because he feared he must injure himself in dropping the eight feet to the ground without anyone to check his fall, he abruptly changed his mind and faced about toward us very respectfully, seizing hold of the crutch which hung from his neck by its thong.

The man at the foot of the stockade gathered himself together like a coiled serpent and plucked a long knife from his belt. He had been in the shadow until then, but now the moonlight shone over his torso and we recognized him for the blind man, Pew. He had lost his green eye-shade and his pock-marked face was cadaverous in the yellow glow. His eyes were open, and they seemed to smolder dully as they strained at us. His knife glinted in his hand.

"Will you be assisted down and be hanged whole, or must we cut you down, Silver?" hailed Murray.

He, like the rest of us, ignored the blind man. Our attention was fixed upon Silver, his broad face very calm in the moonlight.

"Them there ain't exactly tempting terms, Cap'n Murray, sir," Silver answered temperately. "Couldn't ye be a mite more generous?"

"I am serving you a dish no more highly sauced than that you intended for me," returned my great-uncle dryly.

"Now, sir; now, sir," remonstrated Silver. "How can ye say that? All we done was to try and persuade ye to give us our share o' the treasure—ye havin' eight hundred thousand pound stowed away special, accordin' to your own story. And if we come in by the back door, after it, why that was so's we'd hurt ye least."

"You'd argue yourself to a block of ice in hell, Silver," rejoined my great-uncle amusedly. "I throw down that crutch! Drop that knife, you sirrah, Pew—or whatever your name is!"

Sword in hand, he advanced ahead of the rest of us, who were strung out all the way from the gap in the stockade. Coupeau was at his elbow, and Peter and I close behind.

"Come," he adjured them a second time. "I'm in no mood to talk terms, and if you delay 'twill make your end the more painful."

Silver's face went livid in the moonlight.

"Aye," rasped the one-legged man, "ye'll lash us bloody-raw like the lads as let us in tonight."

And as Murray continued to advance, he struck out with his crutch.

"Keep off," he shrieked. "Keep off!" And then, "I can't reach him, Ezra. Let him have it!"

Pew crouched with his knife-hand drawn back.

"Aye, it takes blind Pew to let him have it," he croaked in his hateful voice.

His hand jerked forward. There was a flash in the moonlight, and my great-uncle staggered, the stung knife buried to the hilt in his side.

"I am stabbed," he gasped.

Silver brandished his crutch over his head.

"Pew's stabbed Murray!" he shouted. "Come on, Walruses! Lay off, ye James lads—we'll not harm ye, mates. Treasure for all, and no more tyranny!"

Peter and I caught my great-uncle as he fell. Coupeau jumped at the blind man with a howl of rage, cutlass raised to strike; but as he came within reach Silver poised his crutch like a spear, leaped over and drove the sharp spike of the ferrule through the gunner's eye into the brain. Coupeau dropped in his tracks.

"I ha' done for Coupeau," Silver shouted again. "Don't make Long John do it all, lads!"

There was such a rush of enemies, such a howl of exultation, as took my breath away.

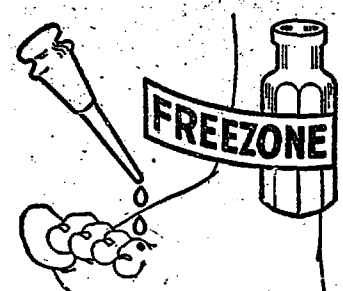

"Do you hold Murray, Peter," I said. "I'll finish that precious pair."

And I ran in at Pew, albeit more warily than Coupeau; but the blind man—and certes, if he was blind his hearing was so marvelous as to make up for it—retained a clubbed pistol, which was a serviceable weapon at close quarters, and Silver covered him overhead with that deadly crutch. I shouted to the after-guard to shoot them, but our people had not reloaded their pieces, and many were already engaged with the party we had just driven out, who swarmed in again through the same gap. Those of the James' men who were nearest were palpably lukewarm, and Silver, atop of the stockade, perceiving his advantage, thrust his crutch at me and continued trumpeting his rallying cries.

Misjudged

The Marquis Henri de la Falaise, Gloria Swanson's husband, has opened a bookshop in New York. His popularity has increased in consequence.

M. de la Falaise, discussing this increase in popularity, said the other day:

"When a titled foreigner marries an American girl with money the worst motives are imputed to him. It's like the little story.

"Sir," a young baron said to a Broadway banker, "I have called to ask if you will give assent to my marriage."

"Not a cent!" roared the banker. "Not a cent! Boy, show this young man out!" — Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

GOOD SAFEGUARDS PREVENT CHOLERA

A recent investigation of the hog-cholera situation by the United States Department of Agriculture reveals surprising carelessness among farmers in dealing with the disease. The effectiveness of the preventive-serum treatment has given many swine owners a feeling of security which is not real. "Yet without proper safeguards" declares Dr. U. G. Houck, in charge of hog-cholera control, "the disease is just as dangerous today as it ever was."

For safety against this disease it is necessary to observe certain precautions. Isolate all new stock, keeping it apart from other hogs for a period of at least two weeks. This precaution applies especially to hogs purchased at public sales or other sources likely to spread infection. Permit no sick hogs to roam at large. Keep hog lots properly fenced and maintain the fences in good repair. Burn or bury deeply the carcasses of animals that die on the farm. Dead animals lying about ground attract dogs. Many outbreaks have been traced to portions of diseased carcasses carried from place to place by dogs. Do not attempt to hide the existence of the disease, since every hidden center of infection is a menace to surrounding farms.

The preventive-serum treatment is a dependable insurance against hog cholera, but this treatment, it should be remembered, is a preventive and not a cure. By adopting the foregoing safeguards swine owners may largely reduce the loss from hog cholera which last year exceeded $20,000,000.

Splendid Time to Grow

Live Stock, Says Dean

Dean W. C. Coffey of the University of Minnesota, department of agriculture, believes this is a good time for energetic and intelligent young men to get on good land and farm with live stock as a major enterprise. Speaking before the Block and Bridle club, an organization of agricultural college students especially interested in animal husbandry, Dean Coffey said:

"Good land within comfortable distances from market can be purchased at more reasonable prices now than in several years past. If the capable college graduate can arrange for adequate financing, he will be better off in the course of 10 to 15 years if he goes on good land than will the graduate who chooses a professional line of work."

Sharp distinction was made by the dean between good and poor land. Land of low producing power, said he, constitutes a handicap. The young men were told that to be successful in live-stock farming they should prepare themselves to comprehend the whole process of farming from the handling of the soil to the turning of the finished product over to marketing agencies for disposal.

Sheep Eradicate Weeds and Improve Fertility

Most weeds seem to be ice cream and cake for sheep. In a list of 200 weeds, sheep will eat 175 of them, including cockle, the young shoots of Canada thistle, dandelion, pigweed, foxtail, ironweed, horseweed, white-top, ragweed, wild mustard, winter cress, wild morning glory, sow thistle and many other species that represent the worst pests. And the more weeds sheep eat the less is the cost of their upkeep. Fields, fence corners, roadsides and farm waste places generally can be kept tidy with sheep, all the while improving the fertility of the soil and yielding a comfortable profit. Pastures can be kept clean by the use of sheep, while the cattle carrying capacity can be increased in the meantime.

Sheep are also useful in grain-fields and in meadows. In a timothy meadow there is no better way to kill white-top than to turn sheep into the field, since sheep prefer the white top to timothy. On grain stubble, sheep will pasture on foxtail and other late blooming weeds.

Live Stock Hints

If your cattle are infested with lice, get a brush and groom them with raw linseed oil, that is, put them with it and see that they are thoroughly covered.

Young pigs must have exercise. Without it they are very apt to die of thumps—which takes its name from a jerkiness of the muscles accompanied by hiccoughs.

The prosperous farmers since the war have been hog producers, for a hog crop shows a quick turnover.

Hand-fed pigs are more likely to be overfed than underfed when it is understood that a sow has only about one quart of milk per day for a whole litter of pigs.

Disposition is an important factor in determining the number of pigs which a sow succeeds in raising. It should be mild and quiet rather than nervous, mean or cross.

Paper-Wool Twine for Tying Fleeces

Saving of 2 Cents Pound Made by Farmer on Wool Properly Prepared.

Although the wool trade has long complained bitterly against the use of binding twine in tying fleeces on the farm, the practice still continues to a large extent in many states, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The use of such twine is objectionable because small shreds cling to the wool and appear in the finished cloth, from which they can be removed only by expensive hand labor. The use of paper-wool twine manufactured especially for tying fleeces is advocated instead of steel (binders twine), hemp, jute, or twine of similar fibers. One large wool producer reports a more ready sale and a saving of two cents a pound on wool properly prepared for market.

Chaff and Straw Hurt. Chaff and straw, allowed to get into the fleeces through carelessness in feeding, from unswept floors at shearing time, or during storage, also make fleeces less valuable and unattractive to the buyer, and sometimes results in a loss to the grower—an avoidable loss—as much as ten cents a pound. The appearance of a fleece is also improved if rolled up and tied with the flesh side out. Twine of moderate size is best for tying, and more than two strands each way is advisable. To withstand the strains of handling and shipping use bags in good condition.

The practice of branding with lead paint or tar is a great detriment because these materials will not scour out in the manufacturing process. Where branding or marking is necessary, as put on and care taken not to slap it on carelessly. If the undesirable paint or tar brands have been used they should be clipped from the wool at shearing time and packed separately or thrown away.

Desirable Marking Fluid. A soluble marking fluid manufactured especially for branding purposes is most desirable and should be used in preference to common paint. More attention to the details of shearing, handling, storage, and preparation of the fleeces for market would mean a general improvement in the wool of this country, and make it compare more favorably with most of the foreign wools imported for manufacturing purposes.

Profitable Practice in Sweet Clover Culture

A profitable practice in sweet clover culture is that in which the clover is sown with the oats in the spring. As soon as the oats crop has been harvested, the clover takes on a rapid growth and soon furnishes a valuable hay crop. Soon after the hay has been made, the crop furnishes fall pasture and spring in time for a corn crop. A rotation such as this furnishes three crops—oats, sweet clover hay and corn—as well as fall pasture, in two years. In addition the system furnishes a legume every other year for soil improvement. The oats must be cut high enough so as not to injure the on-coming clover.

To Prevent Sheep Worms

It is most important to keep sheep and lambs free from stomach, and other worms, as possible. To accomplish that the ewes should be treated for expulsion of worms during summer and again before being bred, and when the lambs come, the ewes and their young should go to new feeding and should have a "fresh bite" of grass at short intervals during the entire period of grazing. Especially try to keep ewes and lambs off low, wet permanent pasture.

FARM NOTES

Give your chicks a good start and they will repay you with a good finish.

Everybody has an income of 24 hours to spend each day. Do you budget yours?

Sunlight is the cheapest and best disinfectant for use in the poultry flock.

Under good husbandry there would be no "marginal" land; if it can't grow field crops, or furnish pasture, let it grow tree crops.

One eternal triangle is commendable. It has for its vertices the farmer, the banker, and the farm bureau in the dairy community.

Sweet clover makes an excellent pasture and should be used more generally for this purpose. Sweet clover is also one of our best soil-improvement crops.

If it is impossible to use new ground for the chicks it is well to thoroughly clean up the old ground and sprinkle lime plentifully in order to kill as many of the bacteria as possible.

Hogs are the most efficient domestic animals found on the farm, since they will consume a greater diversity of feeds than other animals and since they will convert this feed into more pounds of meat.

Good Shelter Given Pigs Helps Growth

Farrowing Pen Must Possess Many Good Qualities.

Many hog raisers have found that the farrowing house has much influence on the success of raising young pigs to maturity. The New Jersey State College of Agriculture enumerates several qualities that a good farrowing house must possess. They are warmth, air, isolation, sanitation, safety for the pigs, and nearness to pasture. These features may all be combined in a portable farrowing house built for one sow and her litter.

The individual portable house is small enough so that the sow can keep warm with her own body heat, yet it can be ventilated by completely opening the front in warm weather. Safety for the young pigs is provided by isolating the sow in a separate small lot or pasture so she will not be disturbed by other animals. Clean, sanitary soil is also obtained by the use of this portable house. The house, being small, can be thoroughly cleaned and sterilized before farrowing time and moved to fresh pasture whenever desired. Guard rails of 1 1/4-inch pipe are fastened to the walls for the safety of the very young pigs. These should be 8 inches above the floor and an equal distance from the wall.

Plans for such a portable one-family hog house may be obtained without charge from the agricultural engineering department, New Jersey State Agricultural college, New Brunswick.

Silage Very Convenient

Feed for Dairy Farmer

Among the many different advantages of a silo for the average dairy farmer are the following:

1. In a silo all the corn crop is saved for feed. When not stored in a silo 40 to 50 per cent of the crop is lost.

2. Silage has a beneficial effect on the digestive system and therefore is worth more than its feed value alone.

3. Silage furnishes a succulent feed during the winter when there is no grass.

4. More feed may be stored in a smaller space and at less cost than any other way.

5. Silage is convenient to feed and is a cheap roughage.

6. The silo can be built during July when farm work is slack.

7. The dairy farmer who waits until August to think about building a silo usually does not have one.

8. Join with your neighbor to buy a silage cutter.

9. If a concrete silo is built it should stand at least a month after construction before being filled, to insure proper setting.

10. Ten milk cows or their equivalent in young stock—two yearlings equal one cow—justify a silo.

11. Japanese seeded ribbon cane makes nearly as good silage as corn. On most lands a greater tonnage of cane is secured.

12. Corn should be about fodder-pulling stage when cut for silage. Cane should be ripe enough to make silage.

Evidence Mr. Gotroch—Are you sure that young man's intentions are serious? Daughter—Well, papa, he's jealous of everybody who wants to know how much money you have.

Fathers and Mothers Arthur Somers Roche, the novelist, was discussing at Palm Beach Rebecca West's recent diatribe on the selfishness of fathers.

"If fathers love their children too little," he said, "mothers love them too much. A mother is apt to love her child so extravagantly that she'll sacrifice anything for it—even be husband."

"One mother said to another: 'What a naughty little boy Tommy is! Doesn't he know better than to keep striking you over the head with that heavy stick?'

"Don't blame him," said the second mother. "Don't blame the little angel. He's only doing, bless his heart, what he sees his father do every day."

It's better late than never, but the man who buys a summer suit in April is rather early than late.

Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

Cows Heart Pumps 21,600 Gallons of Blood Every Day

MORE than 21,000 gallons of blood—enough to fill a tank 14 feet square and 14 feet high—are pumped through the average cow's heart in twenty-four hours, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. Twenty to forty seconds are required for the blood to make a complete circuit of the main circulatory system.

The railroad engine deriving its power from the coal burned in its furnace, transforms the fuel into mechanical energy, but the dairy cow not only derives all her power from the grain, hay and grass she consumes, but, further, turns these materials into blood and milk, which is made of blood. A cow does not perform miracles, and her "milk factory" will not produce abundantly unless she herself is fed plentifully on a tested grain ration, good hay and silage. This is the only sure and safe method as yet discovered by scientists to keep the milk "pail" filled month after month.

Bargain Pure Bred Prices Boost Dairying Profits

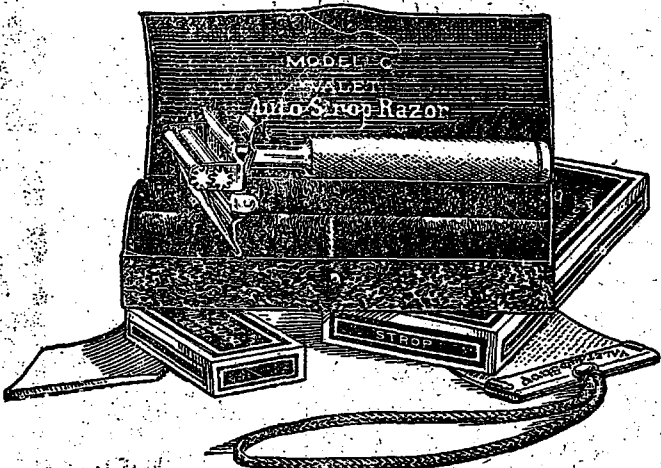

A PURE-BRED sire is the first step to profitable dairying, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics, which is urging farmers to take advantage of prevailing low prices of good breeding stock to organize their herds for greater production. A pure-bred bull and cow which three years ago sold for an average of $433 at auction may now be obtained for only $293, statistics show.

"Sire profits" may make all the difference between a farmer's labor income of $500 a year and another farmer's income that is twice that amount. In one agricultural college survey it was found that whereas the average labor income on farms heading their herds with pure-bred bulls was $337 in a year, farms using grade bulls returned a labor income for the year of only $499. But even as he breeds up better cows, the farmer can realize a greater profit from the cows on hand if he will but give more attention to proper feeding. The average cow under ordinary farm conditions is not productive profitably because her grain ration lacks milk-making elements or because she is underfed or overfed with poorly balanced food.

There are "poor" pure breeds as well as "good." "Pedigree" alone only guarantees pure blood, not results. It takes a good cow, a good dairy ration and good management to succeed. Records of performance and the actual test are what need to be watched in these days of business farming.

The Small Town Gal.

(From The Excelsior Springs, Mo., Standard.)

A sweetheart in the city may be powerful nice to know, but love ain't very lastin' when you've got too far to go. It's right to figure distance when a feller needs a pal—and, the gal! You'll mebbe find her clerk in where the bargains wait for all—or it may be she's the "central," where she plugs the hurry calls; we sometimes find her shoppin' after sparrrrrrrs or percale—but she's allers doin' somethin'—is the small home-town gal! I do't know how to say it, but the way she bobs her hair would gather in her first money at Clinton County fair! She might be Esmerelda—Mary Jane or even Sal—I don't keer what you call her—she's the small town gal!

Was Prepared For Making the Ardent.

Chatham county officers, the past week, captured one of the largest distilling outfits ever taken in that section of the State. The plant was located in thick woods, five miles from silver City and the still was 110 gallons capacity, being made of copper and of the very latest model. In addition to the still and equipment there was captured at the place 1,200 pounds of sugar, a quality of yeast, a one horse load of galvanized roofing used to cover the beer stands 17 stands of beer each holding about 300 gallons, a 50 gallon barrel full of whiskey and a keg containing two and a half gallons of booze.

The still was running full blast when the officers approached and two negroes at work there took to tall timber and made good their escape. It was evident that the still had been in operation for several months and had been doing a land office business. There was a shanty near the still and a full camping outfit.—EX.

Commended For Rarity.

When the bank at Warsaw was closed a few days ago it contained all the funds of the state division of the American legion, which had been deposited in the bank under the direction of the State Commander Stevens being a director of the bank. The state commander at once made good the amount due the legion, more than $4,000 depositing it in another bank to the credit of the organization. For this he has been shown the proper conception of the relation of the trustee to trust funds and his duty. But Mr. Stevens is commended because the high conception of duty on which he acted is so rare that it is felt that it should be acknowledged. In that we are forced to admit that high ideals as to trust funds are the exception rather than the rule, Mr. Stevens could have left the loss to his comrades, on the ground that he put the funds in a bank generally believed to be entirely safe, and the loss was not his fault. He would probably have been criticized because Stevens, a director of the bank, should have known more about the institution's financial standing. But there a times when a bank official can put it over even the most careful board of directors, and it is improbable that Mr. Stevens could have been forced to make good.

But he didn't wait or quibble. He made good the trust funds promptly. It is an act that deserves applause; but it is disturbing to realize that we are applauding a man for doing right because doing right under some circumstances is so rare that we feel that it deserves special recognition.—Greensboro News.

Some Time, Maybe.

Maybe some sweet day the lawyers will manage to get a case before the Supreme court in such shape that the validity of the bad check law may be determined. Twice the attempt has been made and failed—and the last one, from Caldwell county, was a rather glaring case of error. Meantime the great numbers of people who make it a habit to give worthless pieces of paper for money or things of value will be encouraged to increase their output. Occasionally one lands in jail or on the roads, but it's because he lacks the nerve, or the cash, to put up a fight for his rights, the same being that one may not be imprisoned for debt. But the chances are pretty good for getting by with the worthless check, and the belief of not a few that the laws are often framed to protect the crooks if further fortified.

We heard the local citizen ragging this week over the high cost of living and the way taxes are eating us up. He was probably sour on the world because the millionaire had the audacity to send him a bill for his wife's new spring bonnet.—Newport Plain Talk.

JUST 25 YEARS

What Was Happening In Davie The Days of Automobiles and Hoses.

J. W. Kimbrough and Smith Grove, were in to week. Deputy Collector S. F. spent Thursday in town. Frank Stroud spent Sunday and Newton. Mrs. N. A. Peebles was in town last week. Miss Sallie Sue Ellis, of visiting the Misses Chaffin. The school girls have to their homes. Some of them have long faces. Mrs. Mary Hoskins died some near Smith Grove Monday 61 years. Miss Edith Clement has come home after spending some with relatives in Stanley county. Miss Maud England, instructor at Sunnyside School returned to her home in Le week. Mrs. G. A. Allison and of Advance, spent several week with relatives and friends. Miss Sophid Tatum, Bridge, retired home after spending a few days with Thirza Graves. Miss Glenn, Boyd and V. are visiting Miss Laura S. Misses Margaret Bell, Woodruff, Laura Sanford and Hardison have returned from school. C. M. Colaher and family moved from here to Greenville. Mr. Colaher will go into insurance business in that town. The Mocksville Chair man an up-to-date saw planing machine in connection with their other business. W. F. Furches, of Fayette, was in town Monday after being confined to his home last weeks with illness. A number of our young men attended the Cool Springs amusement Friday night. Sam Dwiggins and M. Brown made a visit to Sunday. Cleveland Emerson has a new buggy. Watch for it. Mitchell county was visited by a disastrous flood last week and people lost their homes and everything in them. Corn is selling on the local market at 60c. per bushel; wheat at 100c. per pound; hay at 15c. per pound; eggs 10c. and 15c. cents. Spring chickens a good price—60c. per pound. (Gosh, what a time it is the year of our Lord.)

Fiddle Failed to the Body.

In some sections of Tennessee where in the South that playing a fiddle is not where a person draws the body to the surface water is still extant. A negro fiddler all day of the Emory river in an effort to raise the body of a man here. But the body didn't rise. However, the old fiddler claims that in his time he has fiddled the bodies of 17 persons, means, is not discouraged. He claims that his apparent case was due to the fact that the victim's body was not in the place where it was supposed to have gone down. Subsequent search and examination of the body failed to find it.

Editors seem strangely ignorant of the treasury's plan to pay with $10,000 bills.
