Voglers Service Available any Distance Day or Night.

With this issue of The Record Frank Vogler & Sons, Funeral Directors, of Winston-Salem, begin their publicity program, the purpose of which is to thoroughly acquaint the people of this section with each and every phase of their service, and to familiarize the people with the traditions and policies of their organization, wheih has served the public for sixty eight consecutive years.

One of the outstanding features of this organization which is now owned and controlled by the third generation of the Vogler family, is that they do not confine their service to any distance or particular man with those labels on him class of people, but render the same dependable service no matter whether circumstances demand that much or little be spent. Their service is extended to one and all regareless of what station in life one

For several years, each year has brought increased demand for their services, which enable them to buy in larger and larger quantities, in some instances buying a whole year's supply at one time. As a matter of fact these conditions made it possible a long while ago, to offer to the people of this section a complete funeral with their efficient service and care of every detail, at a reasonable cost and within the means of every one. As we have just said, the people who have had Vogler Service have been given these advantages for several years, but up to this time no publicity has been given out in regard

After sixty eighty years of continous service they are prepared to take care of every need that may arise in making plans and arrangements for funerals, and it has al ways been their policy to have always on hand suitable furnishings of different qualities to meet the CANDIDATE FOR CLERK OF THE needs and requirements of their patrons, under all conditions, and

More and better hogs, cattle and poultry is what Davie county needs. A flock of pure bred chickens, a few good hogs and two or three registered cattle will produce greater income than a two-horse farm that is put in wheat, corn or cotton. If you don't believe this, get you a piece of paper and a pencil and go to figuring.

Mocksville is going to take on new life. A number of new business houses are going to be built this year. What we need is some outside capital to help build modern hotel, put up a few manufacturing plants and increase our payroll. There is no better county in North Carolina than Davie. Mocksville must get a move on or the rural sections will go elsewhere to do their trading. A progressive county needs a progressive

The farmer who had a good acre age in wheat-who has put a big crop of corn and feed stuff this year, is going to be the lucky man If a twelve to sixteen million bale cotton crop is to be produced, which seems likely-the price of cotton is going to be mighty_low this fall. The farmer who expects enought cash out of his cotton crop to feed his stock, his family, pay his taxes and other debts, is going to be disappointed. More than five million bales of cotton was carried over from the 1925 crop, and the cotton mills are mostly running on short time. People have quit buying cotton goods like they once did. The cotton dresses, cotton stockings or hose, cotton underwear, etc., have been relegated to the attic or the basement and the ladies are nearly all wearing silk dresses, silk hosiery and silk lingerie. The amount of cotton that was once uséd in a dress will now make two or three dresses, and the end is not yet. The people have got to stop, look and think. A halt is going to be called some of these days. There are too many folks living and dressing beyond their means—too many folks riding and not enough walk ing. Somebody has to go to work or we will all starve together.

With this issue The Record finishes out its twenty-seventh year. The present editor and owner came to Mocksville nineteen years ago this month and purchased the paper from E. H. We have more than doubled the circulation since taking charge and feel that we have accomplished some good by coming to Davie county. Our policy has been to give every man a square deal, hew joining the Dr. W. C. Martin ing to the line and letting the chips fall where they may. The Record is a Republican paper for the simple reason that the editor believes in Republican principles. We believe in Davie county, Mocksville and North Carolina, and will either sink or swim in the best community in the world. We want to thank all our friends and enemies for all the good and bad things they have said or done to us during our long sojourn here. We will strive to give this section a good paper in the inture and ask for a continuance of your patronage.

The contract for 3.84 miles of soil road between the Yadkin kiver at Oaks Ferry to Fork Church. was let Tuesday to J. F. Mulligan for $33,300.16. The contract for he Yadkin River bridge, connecting Davie and Davidson counties, was also let, the Kessler Construction company to build the bridge at known when work will begin on these projects. It was thought that the bridge contract wouldn't be let at this time on account of Davie failing to loan the state a part of the money to build the bridge, but the commission seems to have had more money than they thought they had. These projects are on route 75, running from Le noir via Statesville, Mocksville Lexington and Asheboro.

The above figures were the low oids on the bridge and road, but we learn that the contracts for this work was not let last week but were to be taken up and discussed at another meeting that was billed to be held in Raleigh on Tuesday of this week. The Charlotte Ob server, of the 2nd, says that North Carolina has mighty near more money that she knows what to do with. That being the case we suppose she will build this bridge without having to call on little Davie for a loan.

Here's a new kind of story of the West—a romance of hydraulic engineering. CHAPTER' I

The Canyon

Caleb Warner conscientiously fished very foot of the likeliest-looking hole he had seen on Hermanos creek, but there came no rise, no eager tug, no submerged/gléam of a rainbow's shimnering flank.

He waded ashore, put up rod and tackle, climbed through the thick, tall ferns and brambly undergrowth to the narrow trail and turned upstream. All the day was his, the next, for that natter, and he fancied the fishing would be better higher up. Caleb walked with his coat-tucked between the slings of his creek, his shirt open at the throat; lean, long, well-shouldered and slender-flanked, tanned of skin, springy of action, generally good to look at. By the canons of moving pictures and magazine illustrations he was not handsome. New England ancestry had made him too aquiline of feature, but he had youth and strength, his gray eyes were clear, his forehead high to his straight, closecropped hair, his lips clean-cut and his chin well forward, not too narrow. His general make-up was typically American, Yankee-American, marred by inbreeding. Below him Hermanos creek sang, half hidden by the undergrowth. His economic, New-England brain saw potentiality going to waste. In Massachusetts Hermanos creek would long age have been harnessed. Mills and factories would have sprung up along its banks. Here was water for steam, for turbines, for commercial and domestic use, for irrigation; all unused its energy seemingly doomed, for there vas a peculiar thing about the creek that Caleb, as an engineer, had noted. Contrary to the habit of most wellnannered watercourses, its volume diminished as it flowed.

He was twenty-seven, six years out of the college chrysalis that he had pun at Columbia. He had served in the war, hard, practical service in tásks that were low-grade but necessary, the crude, swift work of building and repairing war-roads and bridges, and in it Caleb Warner had, in large measure, found himself. He hand she patted them while with the had acquired initiative, resource, comnand of men, if nothing else. And he had come out unscathed, unwounded. ingassed, reduced to an acme of cordination, sane mind and sound body. He had been granted wider horizons. So he had come west to find his oyster

-and to open it. Swiftly the woody cave of the canyon became a tunnel, the creek now far below him in a water-chiseled gorge. The tunnel became a gut. A suspension bridge, a shivery thing of wire rope and short planks, anchored with wire cables to high walls of rock, cressed the gorge. It shook under his tread and hung trembling as he stopped midway to look at the gush of compressed water surging through were signs on the rock that at times the creek rose close to the flooring. Before him, to the south, lay Hermanos valley, a green bowl lipped by slopes furred thick with wild oats waving in the wind, oats as high as Caleb's head, a shimmering sea of em- | zois," she said. "You must excuse erald and silver. He stood for a while undecided whether to adventure on to the waterwas time to fish down the canyon with the hope of better results than the three trout his persistence had lured from tile creek. He had a book tucked into his pocket but he was not tired. And he had lunched an hour before.

The view held him. Looking down, he saw that the stream was a vagrant, enough to convey its waters. A seccreek. Willows bordered it.

Beyond the willow fringe came her mate, bound for bound, level with the bitch, unseen, though perhaps not unknown to the coyote.

Then, from a thicker growth of trees, outmatched but traveling fast, a pinto flashed into Caleb's view, a boy crouched low on the withers, welded to the horse, urging it on.

Caleb thrilled to the chase as it swept on beneath him, admiring the horsemanship of the figure in breeches, puttees and fluttering blouse, a little envious of it. "Gad, he can ride," he muttered.

A cap blew off, a long tress of chestnut hair, ruddy as a flame, whipped out, was reached for and tucked in by its owner, only to stream errant again. The boy was a girl!

The bitch was almost up with the coyote, the dog, watchful through the gaps in the willows, came circling in, jaws agape, ready for the kill. The coyote made a last desperate effort. The bitch, with one enormous leap, came abreast. She lunged, her white neck like, a snake's for speed and sin-uousness, her teeth clamping down on the forefoot of the coyote. Caleb saw the latter checked, tumbling, heard a broken snarl of defiance, and then the second hound sprang in a white gleam of fury, too swiftly for him to catch the action. Its powerful jaws, bred for the work, crunched through the vertebrae of the coyote's neck. The hunt was ended.

The girl rode up at a gallop checked the pony in midstride and slid to the turf while the two hounds thrust their muzzle at her. With one other she strove to coil up her hair, now fairly down her shoulders, reaching to her belt. "Good boy, Saratof! Good girl, Siva!" Caleb heard her faintly but plainly and shouted down his own meed of applause. He had left most of his innate reserve behind him in Europe and the stir of the hunt still held him. "Bully for both of them!" he cried and waved his hat as the girl looked up. She smiled, waved back an un-gloved hand at him in western friendliness, and finished the uptwisting of her hair without embarrassment. Caeb started down through the oats. He loved dogs. He did not know so much about girls. But this one seemed different. And he had left the conventions behind in Massachusetts. She smiled at him again as he came out on the level, half waded, half jumped the creek and went toward rolling hills, their crests bronzed by her. The wolfhounds looked at him the summer sun, blazoned with great with their dark brown eyes, sniffed, patches of golden poppies, with accepted his pats and turned their clumps of purple lupine, the lower heads away, pointedly aloof. The girl laughed at his evident chagrin. "They are disdainful beasts, my bor-

She had a trick of looking through long lashes that was a bit unfair, Caleb thought. But they did not hide a twinkle that lurked behind them. "Did you catch/any trout, Mr. War ner?" she asked. He showed her his basket.

"We have trout in New England," he said. "I was hoping to do better later in the afternoon. Did you say you were from the South?"

"I am a Californian." He was certain that she knew he had hoped she would give him her name in return. "The best fishing is in the canyon back of the waterfall at the head of our valley," she said. "You can easily climb the cliff."

"You own it? The valley?" She opened her eyes a bit in acknowledge nent of his persistence and speed to take the opening. "My father does. His name is Clin-

The girl had left the pinto pony standing with its reins hanging straight from bit to soil, an effective haltering. Now she placed them shout its neck, their buckle back of the saddle-horn and, as she and Caleb walked along the stream toward the house the pony followed as closely and sedately as the wolfhounds.

Evidently Miss Clinton is what we Americans call "a nice girl," with individual attractions. Does the Yankee measure up?

Colonies Classified

In 1690 the American colonies were divided under the following classifications: Royal, proprietary and republican. The classification is based upon the three diler w methods by which their governors obtained office. At this date the following colonies were royal: New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and Maryland (temporarily). The proprietary colonies were Pennsylvania, Delaware, New ter group only the first two remained proprietary. The rest became royal, while Maryland was restored to the Baltimore family. Rhode Island and Connecticut alone retained their elec-and Jochebed before Moses—Aaron and Miriam. However, Moses was the first one that his mother was assured was to be the deliverer of the chosen people. There was something striking shout this child which caused her to believe that it was sent of God. She saw that he was a "goodly child." In Stephen's speech (Acts 7:20) he as-Golden and I was recommended to serts that the child was "exceeding fair," or fair to God. No doubt his mother believed him to be the deliverer of his people and instilled that truth in his mind from childhood Because of this belief she had confidence that somehow God would save him from the cruel hand of the king.

III. Moses' Preservation (vv. 8-8). Though Pharaoh's edict was in force, his mother's faith was such as to cause her to ignore it and hide Moses for three months. The biding of the child was not because but because of faith (Heb. 11:23). It was her faith which made her brave to ignore the king's edict. Though Moses' mother had faith, she did not ignore the proper use of means. Pharaoh's plan was that every male child should be destroyed, but God had planned otherwise for this child. Perhaps the story of how the ark suggested to his mother the expediency used, namely, the ark of bulrushes. Doubtless she was fa miliar with the place where Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe, and believed that somehow through her the child would be saved. She placed the ark at the particular place where it would attract attention. It is interesting to note the steps as pointed out by another, by which God's plan was car-

1. The mother's wit. She placed the baby at the proper place and at the opportune time. Then, too, Mirlam was no doubt stationed as a watch to aid in the af-

4. A woman's compassion (v. 6). When the ark was brought and opened the baby wept. That woman has lost her feminine instinct who is unmoved with compassion at the cry of a lonely, motherless baby.

5. The baby's tears (v. 6). The tears aroused her womanly instinct, and at the suggestion of Miriam the baby's mother was hired to nurse her own child. No one can nurse a child so well as its own

IV. Moses' Education (v. 9). 1. Moses was first educated at his mother's knee.

During this time his character took form. Here his mind was filled with the Word of God and he was made acquainted with the Jewish hopes and prospects. In these early years no doubt the indomitable purpose was fived to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season (Heb. 11:24-26). Seeing by faith the destiny of her child, Jochebed made good use of her time.

2. At the Egyptian court (v. 10). It was here that he became as quainted with all the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7:22). This was of great importance. It peculiarly qualified him to be the lawgiver and historian of his people.

A small leak under low pressure is sometimes stopped by embedding the pipe in richly mixed portland cement mortar. It is necessary to shut off the water from the pipe and build a boxing around it to hold the soft mortar closely against the pipe. Broken sewer pipe can be repaired in like manner. A wrapping of wire netting embedded in the mortar increases its tensile strength. A small hole in cast-iron pipe may be tapped with a screw plug.

Where a leaky screw joint cannot be tightened with a pipe wrench, the leak is sometimes stopped by s blunt chisel or calking tool and ham-Sometimes a crack or hole is cleaned out and then plugged and calked with lead, tinfoil, or a commercial iron cement to the consistency of putty. Sometimes a pipe band with bolts, or a split sleeve is employed to hold a thin coating of iron cement or a gasket over a leak. If the leak is at a screw joint, the band is usually coated inside with one eighth inch of iron cement and then slipped over the pipe. Keeping the bolt farthest from the coupling or fitting a little tighter than the other, both bolts are tightened. During the tightening the band should be driven with a hammer snugly against the

Leaky Spot in Tank A corroded and leaky spot in a steel tank or range boiler can be closed with an inexpensive repair bolt or plug obtainable from dealers. The picture shows a homemade repairer consisting of a three-sixteenths by three-inch toggle bolt costing ten cents and a flat rubber gasket, brass washer and nut. The link of the bolt, after being passed through the hole, takes an upright position, and screwing up the nut forces the gasket tightly against the outside of the boiler. A small hole must be reamed or enlarged with a round file to a diameter about five-eighths inch. The metal beneath the gasket should be firm and clean. A little candle wick packing may be vrapped around the bolt to prevent leakage along the bolt. Sometimes a hole is closed by driving in a tapered steel pin to turn the metal inward, forming a surface which can be tapped for an ordinary screw plug. A hole in the wall of a tank or pipe having considerable thickness can be easily and ered steel tap-plug which cuts and hreads its way through the wall. But when (from above rather than below, and of man) that yell was rent through the blood of Christ offered once for all, this new thing is announced, namely, that each man who will receive Jesus as Savior and Lord may enter into the very pres ence of God and call Him Father. God has in the gospel come out and man has through the gospel been-permitted to go in-thus it is all new The dread of our guilty souls has been met by God coming near. The rent veil has typified that coming near. quickly closed by screwing in a ta- By the perfect sacrifice, the blood of Jesus, we enter in to find that what we dreaded, even the righteousness of God which is no longer dreaded since "we are made the righteousness of God in Christ." Here is newness of life. Here, if ever a lost child experienced the sense of newness after t had been received in a home of plenty and enriched with the love of those who befriended it, here is newness, for, the soul has been made at nome with God. The stained and bruised sinner has been healed and > saved and is in the holy place in Father's house. But this, dear as it is, does not tell half the account. The new way is the living way. Never could that be said of the old way. No, the sacrifice remained dead, the priest, even the high priest died, and the temple itself had o be restored after it had lain as if indeed dead. But this new way, what contrast it presents! The Lamb of od lives again. At a future time we are to see Him in the midst of the throne. The new government must have a place for this offered one who is alive forevermore. Our High Priest. . . . "It was impossible that He should be holden of death." We speak of Him and then announce the word, forever. This temple, the new

Him in spirit and in truth. The tem ple is where that is. It can never need rebuilding. That temple is the living God himself Dear Cross! My sins were borne there. Yes, but the Christian's faith looks on and up. Our Redeemer has passed through the heavens. He lives, He ever lives. Search not for His tomb, you will find it empty. Death could not keep its prey. The moment we see there that the price of our re demption was fully paid, then this ap pears, that the way in is opened. Risen with Christ we are joined to Him by one Spirit: Not only is this all in contrast with the old covenant, but it is in forcefu contrast with and opposition to every effort of man to improve his religion Man's efforts in this regard from stars to finish are the same old repetitions the same old dead works. It is but a delusion that makes men think that their theories are getting them some where. The latest productions of the magazines which set forth men's the ories of the Bible and the church when searched out a little are seen to be so old they are musty. And dead ness of intellect, deadness of home deadness of virtue, deadness of hope has for so long accompanied the conclusions made, that one feels as if he had been condemned to live in a morgue or an ancient tomb as he reads them. The polish of titles and legrees cannot serve to rid them of the incubus of decay. Never able to say that God has truly come forth or tha man can come in to Him, they pro claim their deadness with their age.

Would you come out where is new ness and life? Would you be up-tonow, and then look in established hope to a future newly provided for? Would you find yourself fascinated with the lavished wealth of the grace of God' The way is opened. Step in. Why. even the Book that tells of it is so crammed with wealth that, studying it, you will discover something new very day.

Colorful Dresses for Summer Wear

Gayest Flowers Adorn Milady's Apparel; Cottons Show Prints.

Gayer than a field of California popples, summer frocks are making their appearance upon the streets. You simply can't get them too colorful Great splashy designs in the most vivid of effects. Glowing blossoms more exotic than any which ever grew in tropical forests. Bakst at his best outdone, and Greenwich Village batiks pushed in the background, declares a fashion writer in the Philadelphia Record.

But with it all they are never garish. They never shock the eye. With all their riot of color they are some how soft and altogether lovely. Perhaps it is the exquisite texture of the fabrics used which accounts for much

At last the tight little felt hat has met its Waterloo. One simply cannot wear a tiny dark-colored felt with one of these frivolous blossom-strewn chiffons. So felts have widened and taken on pastel shades. They refuse to be heaten. Wide felts in such luscions shades as gladioli pink, golden wheat, raspberry glace and lovebird greet are among them, simply trimmed with a band of twisted velvet. There is also the dashing phantom red, which appears in larger felts, but more often in hemp or tagal straw.

How the Color Was Named. By the way, did you know how this ery bright red came to be called phantom"? It would seem to be any thing but a phantom with all its vivid Lon Chaney wore it in a thrilling "movie." By such things as this are colors born and made. Everybody went to Florida to win a fortune, and Florida gold, coral sands, Miami rose and palmetto green became leading colors. The astute lady has only to study the daily news to know what color is to be next in favor.

Perhaps that is why we have all colors just now strewn over our pretty frocks. There is no event of importance happening, so fashion smiles upon them all, just to be on the safe Printed crepes are quite as popular as the filmier materials. These are shown in small Dolly Varden and English chintz patterns or in extremely bold design. Patou sponsors a printed crepe which is being used a great deal for sports and morning dresses in this country. They are made up on simple lines, frequently with a jabot of plain color. Some of these prints are plain at the top and patterned in large designs below the waist.

The jabot is an excellent idea of the printed model. A number feature a most distinctive inbot. It appears to be really a sort of collar, coming from the back of the neck and spreading out, reverslike at either side of the front. Usually, it horders a V niece at the front and meets in a point at the center of the very low waistline. Accents by Plain Colors

Printed crepes and georgettes are ccented a great deal by plain colors. This must be done with much artistry or the whole thing is spoiled. It is so easy to make a lovely flowered frock look common if too much plain material is used or if it is applied the wrong way. Models which are simply trimmed with a half-inch of material in the predominating shade achieve much distinction. This band outline the apron front, the lower edge of the skirt, the bottom of the jabot or the panels.

Again lace is seen as the note of contrast. A charming afternoon frock of flowered chiffon in tones of red. green, blue and cream had a very full skirt edged with two inches of black chantilly lace. The black brought out the colorings most delightfully.

One of the outstanding prints of the season is the polka dot. And in these red undoubtedly leads. Red coin dots were introduced by Lanvin very early in the season. Tan on navy is a conservative choice for the older woman, and red on white for her smart daughter, Martial et Armand created a costume called "Pour les Petits Pois." It is a coat of ottoman worn over white crepe polka-dotted frock.

Black coin dots on white is another favorite, and in this season of black and white smartness they are seen a great deal. A white crepe, with large black dots showing on the lower part of the puff sleeves; as a band on the skirt and as a dashing tie, is very smart. Ties which are little less than scarfs sometimes furnish the printed note with no other aid.

Black and white in huge flower patterns is another silk greatly the vogue. An overskirt of plaited material open at the front is a pleasing finish. Black and white is never anything else but distinguished wherever it is seen. And the older woman is showing her knowledge of the mode by adding a collar, cuffs and trimming bands of polka-dotted silk. Black dots in varying sizes are also seen a great deal on a white ground. These range in size from a quarter to a French pea. The French pea is considered a good size for dots in many of the newest models. There are fewer combina tions of colorings shown than last season, but many exclusive shops have sports frocks dotted in several colors Very striking, and one might suppose very hizzarre, is the frock which uses three-cornered designs in all sorts of These completely cover the ground and seem to merge one into the other, although each is sharply de-But extreme as they are, they are both smart and good to look at.

For Morning Dresses.

Even cottons are showing prints and the most adorable little morning frocks of printed dimities and cotton crenes and English broadcloths are shown. As a rule these are at their best in tiny flower prints or in wee designs of exceptional quaintness.

Many smart women at Cannes and various other resorts are introducing the fashion of a printed top with a plain skirt. The skirt may be plaited and separate or it and plain. There are several French houses featuring the suit with the blouse of printed silk, which makes a coat suit much more elaborate than a plain blouse. Here, toc, the skirt may be separate or attached. Many of them are very trim little one-piece frocks when the coat is removed. Two bands of the skirt material across the printed blouse relate the two and completely save that cut-off appearance which so many coat suits have when seen without the coat.

Goupy, which is one of the newer houses, is especially fond of the suit worn with a printed blouse. One suit of heavy crene in nowder hime has a blouse of georgette printed in a blue, mauve and yellow pansy design. The powder blue of the skirt is repeated in collar, ties and cuffs, which also

Madeleine Vionnet, who sims s youthful effects, has done some en-chanting things this season, all with that certain subtle simplicity that is her chief characteristic and charm One particularly beautiful wedding gown is made of crepe georgette cut from shoulder to hem in repeated V lines, creating in the skirt bias panels that flare and drop to different points around the bottom and form large, irregular scallops. The interesting lines in the gown are marked with strass beads and thereis no other trimming. The vell of fine silk net has an edge of point d'Alencon and falls to the end of the train of crepe, that is lined with satin: An original and extremely graceful wedding govn from Cheruit is cut all in large godets, with a simple, half high bodice, long sleeves and with both the train and veil made of the same material as the dress, fine, soft chiffon. Lace is used a great deal, some werding gowns being made entirely of sheer blond lace, Chantilly or any of the novelty laces over taffeta, crepe or satin, and some have lace flounces added to-the skirt. It is very modish at the moment to gather lace quite full in two or three flounces straight around the skirt, and to trim the edge of the vell with the same

OME persons are very sensitive to the sting of the bee, others scarcely notice it at all. An instance is recalled of a perfectly healthy child who on one occasion was stung on the finger by a bee and within a few minutes was completely prostrate. Both eyes were swollen shut and the entire body greatly disfigured. The heart action and respiration were greatly disturbed and the child appeared dangerously ill. There were at the home and always with marked reaction, but only this one time was it so severe. That child nossessed a peculiar sensitiveness to the protein injected by the bee when stinging. The father of that child felt a bee sting like the prick of a pin, but the place could scarcely be found a few minutes later. The father was immune to that kind of foreign protein. In exactly the same way, many peo ple are hypersensitive to various foreign proteins. When grasses and plants blossom they give off pollens which act as foreign proteins to which some people are peculiarly susceptible When these pollens in the air get onto the mucous membranes of eyes nose and throat of susceptible persons they set up violent reactions. The irritating substance causes reddening of the conjunctiva, and swelling of th tear ducts. There is increased secre tion of tears which cannot drain off through the swollen shut tear ducts and hence the eyes "water". In the mucous membrane of nose and throat there is the same condition. In an effort to expel the irritant there is much sneezing. When the nasal pas sages become so swollen that it is hard to breathe through the nose, the patient begins breathing through the mouth. If the patient still remains in a polluted atmosphere then these in ritating pollens are inhaled directly into the lungs where the bronchi and bronchioles become congested so that breathing is difficult. This stage is called asthma.

The entire body is equally sensitiv except where the outer protective lay er of the epidermis prevents the ab sorntion of these pollens. If this pro tective layer of epidermis is broken by a slight pin scratch and the offend ing pollen applied to the scratch there will result a red and swollen wheal By utilizing this point the physician is enabled to use test pollens or scratches in the skin and thus deter mine the exact pollen or pollens which cause the individual damage. In man cases frequently repeated small in jections of an extract of the offending ollen will finally produce in the dividual a degree of relative in munity.

Many things other than plant po lens cause hay fever and asthma Dander of horses, dogs, cats, feathers and many foods cause severe reaction in some people,

Every year, during the summe season, persons are struck and killed by lightning. It would be more cor rect to say that persons are struck and stunned by lightning and later die from neglect. Most persons stun ned by lightning could be resusc tated if speedy and proper treatmen could be given

The intense straight flashes are the most dangerous. The zig-zag flashes are seldom dangerous and the sheet lightning never dangerous Just as the person instantly killed by a builet never hears the report of the gun so the person struck by lightning does not hear the thunder. By the time we hear the thunder the danger from that stroke has passed.

When a thunder storm approache do not seek shelter under a tree with thick foliage. This is especially dan gerous if you have already gotter wet. Your body is a better conductor than the trunk of the tree and by standing under such a tree your body forms a line of discharge to the ground. Probably more people are killed by lightning in this way than all other ways. When in group of persons one is struck and the others not it is because the body of that person is a better conductor than the others. The person lying flat on the ground is always safe.

Do not stand in the doorway of either barn or house nor at the window near a chimney. Lightning, to some extent, follows the currents of air through doors and up the chimney, especially warm air.

THE CLINTONS

Synopsis.—Idly fishing Hermanos creek, in California, Caleb Warner, civil engineer, and a New Englander, is witness of the end of a coyote pulled down by two wolfhounds, urged on by a girl rider. Admiring the hounds, he introduces himself, and learns her name is Cliston. With west-ern hospitality she invites him to the ranch to meet her father.

> CHAPTER II —2— El Nido and Padilla

The Rancho El Nido, which means The Nest, was well named. Behind the lee of the tall eucalypts, planted in two rows at right angles, nestled the building of the ranch-house, built in old Californian fashion of adobe brick, red tiled, in the shape of a hollow square inclosing a patio-garden. It was on a rising ground above the stream that ran between trees heavily mantled with wild grapevines. About the house, and its barns and sheds and corrals, grew orchard trees, peach and apricot, almond, cherry, walnut. There were some orange and lemon trees and a few figs. There was a vineyard and the patic was a riot of flowers. A spring bubbled up in the exact center of the court and had been confined within a stone basin with one outlet out of which the overflow rippled and ran under an arch way in the foundation of the house.

The place was above all a home, ong-settled, deep-rooted, if a nest, built on the ground, as some nests are, may be fancied to have taken root. The place was well styled El Nido.

Back to it, in the twilight, at the urgent suggestion of the girl's father suggestion that was half command, holding such spontaneous invitation that, it could not be refused without a touch of churlishness, came Caleb, returning from the stream above the waterfall, packing a well-filled creel. The girl rose from an outer porch as he came up from the stream and net him at the steps. She was trans formed. A soft gown of white had wrought magic and she received the omage of Caleb's surprised and frankly admiring gaze demurely. He opened the lid of the creel for her inspection.

"You know how to cast a fly in Massachusetts," she said. "They are beauties. We shall have them for supper. Wang!"

A fat and genial Chinaman, immacu late in white, appeared at the far end of the gallery, came forward and took the fish with a chuckle of approval. "Suppeh leady twenty minnit, Miss Betty.":he said as he waddled off. "Betty-Betty Clinton!" He had her name at last and thought it suited her.

"You'll want to wash up. ' Maria will show you to your room." "My room?" "You are to stay here tonight. Father would not hear of you going. There is no moon. It is three miles down the canvon to the station at Heyward. Seven by the road. And there are no trains that you could catch conveniently." She led the way in and delivered nim to Maria, fatter than Wang, ample of breast, triple of chin, Spanish of look and accent: "Maria," said the girl, "is the actual ruler of El Nido. You must pass in-spection by Maria to be welcome here.

You have fifteen minutes. We shall be in the big room at the north end. You can come in through the patio." It was altogether a little astounding. Caleb reflected, as he made what toilet he could. He had come to the valley unheralded, without mutual acquaintance, without introduction, and here he was, pressed as a guest, almost as a friend. In Massachusetts—he laughed welcome would be as his behavior. But it was all very pleasant, very Western. The big room ran the full length of one side of the house. At either end a quarter was raised by two steps, arched off, one part a library and study, the walls covered with books, the other end more distinctly feminine with a piano, flowers, inviting chairs of wicker and good rugs, some pictures on the walls. The intermediate space was common ground, dining room and living room combined. The place was lit with oil lamps in wrought-iron brackets and with candles in branching holders for the table. The meal, with the rustling; bestarched Maria, in black gown and white apron, superin-tending Wang, who served as well as customs. And he was aware that his

he had cooked, was perfection. The girl presided over the main dishes. Her father, tall, erect, grayhaired gray of close-clipped mustache and goatee, had one sleeve tucked in

"I shall put the formal interrogation, sir," he said to Caleb. "How do you find the West?"

"I find it eager. And I like it. We bustle in the East but our ways and means are settled," "Eager? I like your term.

am glad you like the West. We shall hope to see more of you." "You have lived here long?" asked Caleb.

"My-grandfather settled here in eighteen-forty. He was one of Fremont's cavalry legion. He helped to take California from Pico. He was on the shores of Monterey bay when the British landed from their frigates and found they were too late. My father was then ten years old. I was one when he went back to Virginia and fought in the War of the Secession. For the South. I beg your pardon, Caleb caught Betty Clinton smiling at him.

"Not at all, sir," he answered. "My own grandfather fought for the North. But that was two generations ago. Now I know." he added with an answering smile, "why you, Miss Clinton, called me 'Yank' with such unction."

"My grandfather used to say," said Clinton, "that he was always cautious when he fought the Yanks but that he downright feared them when it came to business. But you are right, sir. That is all past. I fought in the Spanish war side by side with many gallant gentlemen from New England. One of them was major in my company. If it had not been for him I might have lost more than this." He touched his empty sleeve.

"You held rank, sir?" "I was a captain. It was a volunteer rank. I do not use it now. My sword is a plowshare. I have sufficient. souvenir."

Caleb thought he detected a little bitterness in the reference to the missing limb.

Caleb noticed that Clinton refrained from any query as to his guest's status in the war. Nor did he mention it himself. He was tired of talking about it. The states were full of men who had lone as much as he had.

"What are you going to do in California?" asked the girl. "The term civil engineer is a wide one. What does it mean to you? Bridges? Railroads?' "It was predestined," said Caleb. He struck a match and showed her a seal at the end of his watch chain. On the green stone two parallel zigzags were graven. "The Zodiac sign of Aquarius, the at himself in the mirror as he fussed with his tie. This was California, a Water Bearer. It is the eleventh sign country to itself, with very pleasant and the sun enters it about the twentyfirst of January, the day that I was born. So I am a water engineer, both by choice and by predestination." She gave a little cry as she bent forward to look at the seal. The light of the swift-burning match brought her face out of the darkness like a cameo. "Isn't that altogether curious and delightful," she said. "I wonder."

"I don't know what will offer," Caleb said. "I cannot wait too long. I have neither the means nor the inclination to stay idle. I have not had very much practical experience—as such things go—but I should rather tie up with a new enterprise than work with portunity."

her tone, and warmed to it. "Po create something, to be a Water Bearer, to the thirsty earth or to thirsty people To make a city grow where none has been, or render dry lands fertile."

"Do you expect to settle out West?" asked Clinton. "To make your home

"I hadn't gone quite as far as that," answered Caleb with a smile. "It depends upon whether I get the chance o settle—I mean by that if work opens up. I like the West. I should like to make a home here, I think. I have none elsewhere," he added simply. have relatives in the East, and I even own a house out there—but it isn't a nome any longer, since both my father and mother are dead." There are silences that create an at mosphere more sympathetic than the finest choice of phrase. Caleb found himself talking of his plans in greater extension than he would have considered possible to chance-met, recent acquaintances. He had, he told them, a little money, he had a chance to sell his Massachusetts house that held open indefinitely. This, with his trainng, and his youth, constituted his capital. At the end of the evening, in his room, the windows open, admitting the fragrance of the patic garden, the subdued chuckle of the overflow from the spring basin, he realized that he had done little but talk about himself had shown no appreciation of the girl's femininity, had surely been lacking in even conventional gallantry. Girls, liverer of His People (3:7-10). Caleb believed. liked that sort of thing—expected it. Yet, talking to her in the dusk of the veranda had been a | ple (v. 7). good deal like talking to another man. Her intelligence was keen, her interest had not seemed feigned.

Meanwhile, in her own chamber. Betty Clinton came to a favorable conclusion in the same matter. "For a Yank," she told herself, as she arranged her hair for the night in two great, shining braids, "he is quite agreeable—so far. I think I am going to like Caleb Warner."

Caleb decided not to outstay his welcome. He announced his intention at breakfast.

"We shall hope to see you again," said Clinton and Betty backed his invitation.

She seemed a little older this morning, appearing the well-poised hostess in her housegown. To Caleb, still new to western ways, it was hard to reconcile this housewifely person presiding over the silver coffee urn with the rider on the pinto, galloping hard after her hounds to the kill. Yet there was no real discrepancy, no loss of dignity, of sex. And she made the girls that Caleb had grown up with seem suddenly constricted in his recollection.

"You are not to walk down to the train," she told him. "I am sorry that cannot drive you but I have a lot to do. You shall ride the Don. Padilla will go with you and bring him back. And we are to see you again. Soon."

Caleb was not at all certain of his prowess in the saddle. To his relief single-footer, racking along with a smooth motion that left him almost motionless in the saddle. The selection was, he felt, another indication

Padilla, swarthy, bow-legged, agile, bore signs of battle that had come ered scar, purple against his brown skin. It ran from eye to chin, a rakarm was scored with cleatrices. His left side seemed shrunken between hip and shoulder. Caleb was conscious that all down the canyon, Padilla subjected him to a close scrutiny. When directly in front of him he could almost feel Padilla's black eyes bering between his shoulder blades. Despite the unworded recommendation that the Mexican held from his employment at El Nido, Caleb fancied him a better night.

"Eet was a puma, senor. A cougar, a lion of the mountains. Carrajo! Almost eet keel me, Luis Padilla. Knife against claws an' teeth, senor, the knife ween. Thees knife." And

With the same swift definess he half drew a shining blade from a sheath that was tucked inside the belt of his trousers, then replaced it. The speedy excitation of the Latin convulsed his features. They twisted in a ferocious snarl, they looked as they must have appeared in the actual conflict, Caleb thought.

This Padilla seems to be an intense sort of person. What's his purpose with Warner?

I. The Lord Speaks to Moses From the Burning Bush (3-1-6). It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. The Lord did not leave him long in suspense. and his own affairs.

In a preample of this commission God declared:

(1) "I have seen the affliction of my people." So keenly conscious is God of all that goes on in the world that not one of His chosen ones can be touched without His notice.

(2) "I have heard their cries." We ometimes feel that God does not hear, but no cry ever goes up from the heart of his covenant child unheard. (3) "I know their sorrows."

Many indeed are the sorrows of God's children. They are so diverse, but He knows all about them and will adapt himself in grace to their need. 2. God's gracious obligation to His children of Israel out of Egypt." III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (3:11-4:10).

Hebrew "to be." It indicates: 1. God's self-existence. It sets forth the idea, that God is the self-existent one and the source of all existence. There is no existence apart from Him.

(2) His self-sufficiency. He said, "I am that I am." God is the unique one. He is not dependent upon any other existence.

(3) His unchangeableness. "I am that I am" may be expanded to mean, I am what I always was. What I always was and am I always will be. The "I AM" of this passage is the Jesus Christ of the New Testament. Therefore the apostle could say, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever." 3. Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1).

This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (4:2).

4. Lack of eloquence (4:10). He confessed that he was slow of speech and of a slow tongue. His ability to speak had not been improved by the Lord's message to him. The Lord's reply (v. 11) carried a real rebuke. He assured him that the God who had made man's mouth could give man the ability to use it. This difficulty the Lord in His infinite patience met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron.

HIGH COST OF HATCHING EGGS

It costs $1.06 to raise a leghorn chicken from the time the egg is set until the bird is six months of age. This was revealed by the class in poultry management, conducted by Prof. L. F. Payne head of the poultry department at the Kansas State Agricultural college. The class recently completed a problem on the cost of hatching eggs and rearing the pullets

The cost for hatching 100 chicks was based on the following items: Eggs at $5 a hundred, fuel at 45 cents, labor at 63 cents, interest on investment in incubator at 68 cents, depreciation 65 cents, tax 26 cents, making a total of $10.27. The cost for running the machine for three hatches was figured at approximately 10 cents for each chick. The cost for brooding and rearing from the time the chickens were hatched to six months of age includes interest, depreciation and tax on the ouses, brooders, drinking fountains, fencing feeding hoppers, supply hoppers, self-feeders, and also such items straw, fuel and labor at 25 cents an hour, raled $54.68 for 100 chick-

Feed consumed by the 100 chickens until they were six months of age amounted to 2,215 pounds of grain and mash, and 1,708 pounds of milk. The food cost of the chicks for the first 12 weeks was 20 cents a chick, and for the last 12 weeks it was 41 cents. This brought the total feed cost of 61 cents for each chick and $1.25 for the entire expense account of each of the chicks from the time the eggs were set to maturity of the colcks at six months of age. Deducting from this the income from the broilers and cull pullets, the total cost for each pullet matured was $1.06.

Feather Eating Caused

by Idleness and Feeds

Feather enting is often caused by idleness and lack of something in the ration which the birds crave. Overcrowding in a small poultry house brings the birds in close contact with each other and may start the habit. One of the best remedies is to turn the hens out on range, where they will separate and become interested in other things.

One pultryman reports that feeding a little raw ground bone each day seems to satisfy the bird's appetite and they stopped picking at each other. Feed a balanced laying mash and plenty of green feed. Scatter the scratch grain in straw litter so the hens will keep busy. If only a few hens have the habit a short observation of the flock may locate the offenders and they can be isolated.

Clean Poultry Quarters

Necessary for Success Thorough cleaning of the poultry house every few days is absolutely necessary if the flock is to be kept free from disease. Not only infections but itary conditions.

Cleanliness means not only a general sweeping out, but it means cleansing with boiling lye water and it means painting the inside of the building with a good disinfectant paint which will serve the double purpose of improving the appearance as well as making it sanitary.

Unless you are willing to keep the poultry quarters clean and sanitary you cannot hope to have very much success except by accident.

Sour Milk Is Best

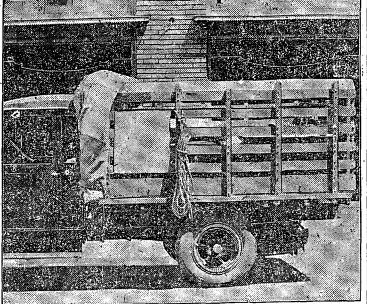

Sweet milk is not advised in the chick's ration. Chicks do not handle the milk sugar to the best advantage, and changes from sweet to sour mill cause digestive disorders and should be carefully avoided at all times. As it is difficult to keep sweet milk from souring in the fountains near the warm brooder stoves, it is best to give only sour milk, or buttermilk, to chicks. The lactic acid in the sour milk seems to help in retarding bowel trouble and keeps chicks healthy and

Green Ducks for Market

There are two sources of incomfrom ducks-the sale of green ducks at the age of about ten weeks, and of eggs, both for hatching and commercial purposes. Ducklings grow rapidly and they can be made to reach practically their full growth at ten to twelve weeks. This means a very intensive feeding program. Those who keep a small farm flock will find it profitable to separate those which are to be forced for market and keep them in a separate pen.

Remedy for Leg Weakness Leg weakness is not a disease but is usually a condition brought about by faulty feeding and lack of sunlight tor, nine speeds, electric lights and The feeding of cod liver oil or the exposure of the growing chick to direct tires. Where pneumatics are used this practice does as much damage to truck tires as a complete disregard of the rules of inflation. With regard to the latter subject, the tire manufacturer's instructions on inflation of truck tires should be observed consistently. Overinflation is, in most cases, as dangerous as underinflation.

Even braking is necessary to obtain maximum wear and tear. Assuming even pull, the proper place to make first adjustment is at the brake band or shoe, not at any other part of the mechanism. Regular inspection of brakes is necessary and an even contact of the band at all points is requisite in good adjustment. Uneven contact of brake bands is the cause of "chattering" when brakes are applied. Operators can obtain full details con-

Overloading of trucks is the big | cerning brake adjustments from the vehicle manufacturer's book of instructions.

A severe shock, such as results in striking a curb, may spring the knuckle rod, thus throwing the front wheels out of proper adjustment. This results in hard steering and excessive wearing of tires, either solid or pneumatics. In a case which recently came to my attention an operator completely ruined a pair of pneumation tires on a 50-mile drive after a slight

The front wheels should not be lined up exactly parallel. Tie rod adjustments should produce a "toe-in" of one-fourth to one-half of an inch in the front wheels (see manufacturer's nstructions for exact dimensions and method of making adjustment).

Lubrication of all steering gear con nections, including steering knuckles, at regular intervals, is necessary. The majority of "hard steering" complaints are due to a lack of lubrication.

RED TO YELLOW CHANGE FOUGHT

Switch of Tail Light Is Opposed by Majority of A. A. A. Clubs.

Since the adjournment of the second national conference on street and highway safety, the American Automobile association has conducted a canvass of sentiment among its affiliated clubs as to the proposal made at the conference to change the tail lights of automobiles from red to yel-

It develops, according to A. A. A. headquarters, that the motor clubs already heard from regarding this proposed innovation are against it, and take the position that such a change, applying to 20,000,000 motor vehicles would cause untold confusion on the highways and would inevitably tend to increase the toll of traffic accidents.

Rank and Fil This was practically the one proposition on which the A. A. A. took issue with the recommendations made by the committees of the Hoover conference and it was at the insistence of club executives that a decision on the tail light was postponed. All developments since the conference in dicate, it is stated, that the rank and file of the motoring public stand by the resolution adopted at the time by the A. A. A. as follows:

"That the secretaries of clubs affiliated with the American Automobile association in convention as sembled hereby condemn the proposed change as being detrimental to public safety and to the best interest of 20,000,000 motor vehicle owners.

Railways Want It.

Although no mention was made in the resolution of the forces urging the change, it was well known that the railroads and the motor clubs were on different sides of the fence on this important matter. Notice has been served by the A. A. A. that proper provision must be made for representation of the motorists before any committee that takes up this question for further study, as provided by the safety conference.

Be careful that a sharp turn of the front wheels does not bring the tire in contact with a spring fender or bumper. As the wheel turns this projection will quickly cut through the tread of the tire. When the car is heavily loaded there is danger that in passing over rough roads the tires will be bumped or gouged by projections on the fenders. Bent or broken fenders may also be in a position where they will gouge the tires. Inspect beneath the fender and make sure that there are no projections which could strike upon the tire. You may find bolts rubbed smooth and bright by continuous rubbing on the tires. If a change is made to oversize tires, be sure that there will be sufficient clearance between tire and feuder when the car is loaded to capacity.

Parks Preserve Battle Memories

memorated by National Military Reservations.

Washington.-In view of the humerous measures which have been introeral years for the establishment of national military parks, national monablets in commemoration of historic battles which have been fought on the soil of the United States, it has been proposed that the War department undertake studies and investigations of all battlefields with the view of preparing a general plan as well as detailed projects where necessary for properly commemorating these battlefields and adjacent points of historic and military interest

Congress has in the past provided for the commemoration of battles in one of three ways: First, by the establishment of national military parks; second, by indicating the lines of battle by markers or monuments, or both, without establishing parks; third, by single monuments without otherwise marking the field.

It is the view of the War department that national military parks should as a general rule cover a comparatively large area of ground, probably some thousands of acres, and so marked and improved as to make them into real parks available for detailed study by military authorities the battle lines and operations being clearly indicated on the grounds. The number of such parks would have to be kept fairly low, it is believed, be cause of the expense of maintenance Less important and extensive engagements which have nevertheless a definite military and political effect could be properly commemorated ac cording to the scheme of the War de partment by the placing of a limited number of markers, the idea being that small areas of ground en the site of the battle could be purchased and appropriately marked and the whole aggregation of separate area designated as a national monument.

First National Military Park. The first national military park was established by congress on April 19, 1890, to commemorate the battles of Chickamauga and Chattanooga. This perk consists of a main tract of about 5,600 acres covering the battlefield of Chickamauga, and detached areas in Wauhatchie valley, on Lookout moun tain, on Missionary ridge and elsewhere obtained for the purpose of es tablishing the lines of battle on the field of Chattanooga. The second military park estab lished was that of Gettysburg. The marking of the battle lines on this field was begun under the act of March 3, 1893, but the park itself was established under the act of February 11, 1895, which authorized the secre tary of war to accept for this purpose from the Gettysburg Memorial asso ciation about 800 acres of ground. Since the establishment of the park it has been greatly enlarged and now overs an area of approximately 2,530

The act stated: "That in order that the armies of the Northwest which served in the Civil war, like their com ¹²des of the Eastern armies at Gettysburg and those of the Central West at Chickamanga, may have the history of one of their memorable battles preserved on the ground where they fought, the battlefield of Shiloh, in the State of Tennessee, is hereby declared a national military park.... According to the text of the vari ous acts, these three military parks were designated by congress not only to preserve for historical and professlonal study the battlefields themselves, but also to serve as lasting memorials to the great armies of the war. The field of Gettysburg was to be a memorial to the Union Army of the Potomac as well as the Confederate Army of Northern Virginia; the field of Chickamauga, a memorial to the Union Army of the Cumberland and the Confederate Army of Tenne-

Vicksburg Military Park.

As a fitting memorial to the Union Army of the Tennessee, the field of Shiloh was not considered so approduced in congress during the past sevpaign of Vicksburg being the most brilliant operation of the army. Some uments, or the placing of markers and vears later, therefore, the Vicksburg National Military park was established by the act of February 21, 1899. This park has an area of about 1,300 acres, covering the siege zone about the intrenched camp of 1863.

That these national military parks might be fitting memorials to the great armies engaged and be accurately marked for historical and professional military study, a commission consisting of survivors of the opposing armies was appointed for each park to fix the location of every monument and marker on the field. The legislatures of many of the states cooperated in the work by making appropriations' for monuments to mark the positions of their regiments and batteries on the field and also to serve as memorials to these regiments and batteries. These four were the only national parks that were established up to the beginning of this year to cover battlefields of the Civil war. It is pointed out that in the four battles marked by these four existing military parks were represented all the corps of the Union army but four and practically all the organizations of the Confederate army. The four Union corps not represented were the Tenth and Eightenth (consolidated in the latter part of the war to form the Twenty-fourth) which were on the Carolina coast: the Nineteenth, which was near the mouth of the Mississippi river, and the Twenty-third, organized in Kentucky in 1868 and later a part of the Army of the Ohio.

One small national military park has been established to commemorate one of the battles of the Revolutionary war. The history of its establish ent is: By the act of February 13, 1911, the sum of $30,000 was appropriated for "erection of a monument on the battlefield of Guilford Court-. . . to commemorate the great victory won there on March 15. 1781, by the American forces commanded by Maj. Gen. Nathaniel Greene and the officers and soldiers who participated in the battle." This was followed by the act of March 2, 1917, designating the battlefield as a national military park.

To Commemorate Antietam. In the sundry civil act of August 19 1890, there appeared this item: "For the purpose of surveying, locating, and preserving the lines of battle of the Army of the Potomac and the Army of Northern Virginia at Antietam and for marking the same and for locating and marking the position of 43 different commands of the regular army engaged in the battle of Antletam, and for the purchase of sites for tablets for the marking of such positions . . . $15,000."

Under this and subsequent legisla-Under the act of December 27, 1894, tion of like character the lines of the wagress established the third na-battlefield of Antietam have been sat-mal military park, that of Shiloh. isfactorily marked without the establishment of a national military park. The lines consist of about five miles of improved avenues along which are, as rule, placed the monuments and markers of the different organizations that took part in the battle. A significant indication of state policy is seen in the fact that the state of Pennsylvania refused to erect a monu ment on the Antietam field for any unit already represented by a monu-ment on the battlefield of Gettysburg. The field of Chattanooga is marked in a manner similar to that of Antietam as the field lies outside of the main park of Chickamauga. In this method of marking battlefields there is less latitude for locating monu ments and markers than if greater areas are acquired, but it is declared to give very satisfactory results for historical and professional military study at a much smaller expenditure of money for the purchase of land, and a much smaller outlay for maintenance.

Single monuments have generally of the Revolutionary war, the War of 1812, and Indian wars. Some of these have been erected by appropriations made by congress to supplement funds appropriated by states or raised by patriotic associations; others have been erected by the national government alone. Among those of the former class are the Saratoga monument, the Princeton battlefield monument the Monmouth Courthouse battlefield monument, and the Bennington field monument, for the Revolutionary war, the New Orleans battlefield monut for the War of 1812, and the Tippecanoe battlefield monument, for Indian wars.

Revolutionary War Memorials.

Among those erected by the United States alone are the Yorktown monu-ment, at a cost of $100,000; the Guilford Courthouse battle monument, at a cost of $30,000, and the Kings Mountain battle monument, costing $30,000, all to commemorate engagements of the Revolutionary war. Indian war monuments erected by the government include the Point Pleasant baty tle, the Fort Recovery, the Horseshoe battlefield, and the Fort Phil Kearny monuments.

According to a study of the battles of the United States made by the army war college with a view to Getermining their proper commemoration either through the establishment of national military parks or the designation of their sites as national monuments, two engagements of the Revolutionary war are deemed worthy of having national military parks created to perpetuate their memory and to preserve their fields for detailed military and historical study. These are the battle of Saratoga, Sentember 19, and October 7, 1777, and the siege of Yorktown, September 28 to October 19, 1781. The two decisive events of the Rev olutionary wars were the surrender of the British army under General Burgovne as a result of his defeat in the battles variously called Saratoga, Stillwater, Freeman's Farm or Bemis Heights, and the surrender of the British army under General Cornwallis as a result of the siege of Yorktown. Of the importance of these engagements, it is declared, there can e no doubt, Saratoga brought about the definite intervention of France in favor of the American colonies and is listed by Creasy as one of the 15 decisive battles of the world: Yorktown ended the war. The surrender of Cornwallis is commemorated by a monument erected within his lines at Yorktown. The surrender of Burgoyne is commemorated by a monument on the site where the surrender took place a few miles from the battlefield. In accordance with the parks. In none of the later wars of this country, except-the Civil war, was any of the battles within the limits of the United States of such major importance as to warrant the establishment of parks, according to this study. The four large national military parks already existing commemorate the engagements regarded as decisive in the Civil war.

garded worthy of national military

Civil War Engagements.

One battle of the War of 1812 and 15 battles of the Civil war, while not of quite the same importance as hose for which parks have been or are proposed to be established, are singled out by the army war college as of far-reaching importance, with either large numbers of troops engaged and losses sustained or grea military or political effect. These battles it is thought, should be commemorated by having the battle lines ocated and indicated by a series of markers or tablets. The battle of New Orleans, fought on January 8, 1815, after the treaty of peace ending the War of 1812 had been signed, though not confirmed, is placed in this class, due to its unique character, the number of troops engaged, and its immediate effect in protecting New Orleans from capture.

The engagements of the Civil war classified in this group are the following: Bull Run, 1861; Fort Donelson, 1862; battles around Richmond, Va., 1862; second Manassas or Groveton, 1862; Fredericksburg, Va., 1862; Murfreesboro, Tenn., 1861; Chancellorsville, Va., 1863: the Wilderness, Va., 1864; Spottsylvania, Va., 1864; Cold Harbor, Va., 1864; battles around Atlanta, Ga., 1864; battles around Petersburg, Va., 1864; battle of the Opequan or Winchester, Va., 1864; Nashville, Tenn, 1864, and Bentonville. N. C., 1865.

Report of Underwriters Shows an Increase in Killings of 17,600 Over Preceding Year.

New York.—Automobile fatalities in the United States for 1925 totaled 22,500, an increase of approximately 2,200 over 1924, according to the re port of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. The study shows that automobile fatalities in 147 cities, including collisions with street cars and railroad trains, increased from 17,600 in 1924 to 19,800 in 1925. Fatal automobile grade crossing accidents mounted from 1,688 in 1924 to 1,784 in 1925. The automobile death rate per 190,-000 is shown by the report to have increased from 14.9 in 1923 to 15.7 in 1924 and to 17.2 in 1925. The increase per cent, while the increase from 1924 children of less than fifteen years of working.

to 1925 was nearly 10 per cent. From this it is deduced that fatal automobile accidents not only are increasing in number but the rate at which they are increasing also is rising.

Registration of cars, the study shows, increased from 17,591,981 in 1924 to 19,954,347 in 1925. Fatality rates on the basis of registration have been decreasing for several years, but the rate for 1925 was practically the same as that for 1924.

Deaths of children under fifteen years of age continue to be one of the most serious aspects of the automobile accident situation, the report says. During 1925 it is estimated that 6,300 children under fifteen years were killed in automobile accidents, as compared to 6,090 in 1924. One encouraging aspect as developed in from 1923 to 1924, therefore, was 5 the study, however, is that deaths of age increased only about 314 per cent in 1925 over 1924, whereas the fatalities among adults increased about 15 ner cent

INFANTILE DIARRHEA

IARRHEA in infants is always a serious condition and deserves the most careful at-

Nature always tries to guard against danger and when bad food or infection gets into the digestive tract nature tries to quickly get rid of it. Diarrhea is a protective effort of nature to get rid of dangerous

In the presence of undigestible or irritating food or in the presence of dangerous infection the muscles of the intestinal walls begin much more active contractions and the intestinal glands secrete much more fluid. This increased muscular activity and the increased secretion of the glands moves out and washes out the offending material.

Strictly speaking, there really is no such thing as Infantile Diarrhea, for diarrhea is abnormal frequency of evacuation whether in the infant or

The intestinal tract of the baby, however, is much more easily irritated than the adult and, because people forget this, children are much more frequently affected by having been permitted food they cannot digest. As a matter of common observation, the children of the poorer classes are more often affected than the children of the better classes. This, however, is only because the environment of such children permits them greater opportunities for getting infections and improper food.

It is also noted that children with lowered vitality because of malnutrition are more prone to diarrhea than healthy and normal weight children The lack of robustness indicates also a subnormal and more easily upset intestinal tract. When the child, malnourished because of improper food, gets diarrhea then the digestion and assimilation of food is disturbed and this child already under nourished is not able to get nourishment from such food as it has. It is indeed serious matter when the malnourished or in any way debilitated child gets

Thus the cost to the purchaser of railroad service must be measured as much by the quality of the service as by the actual charge in dollars and cents.

But even the actual dollar and cent calculation of railroad charges shows how cheap service on the Southern Railway System is in relation to other things. The cost of almost everything has increased about 70 per cent in the last decade, but the average freight charges on the Southern have increased only 35 per cent.

In relation to the cost of other things, transportation on the Southern is cheap. And when measured by the quality of service rendered, it is one of the cheapest things that can be bought today.

Fresh Impetus Last Summer

A great impetus was given to the eir mail service last summer when the government let contracts for four feeders to the transcontinental route, including three north-south trunks and over-night service between New York and Chicago. It was said that the new air service would directly connect 29 important cities by air mail routes with the 16 cities: which have been receiving similar service on the transcontinental air

In addition to these, it was believed that many other cities would enjoy the advantage of speedy transmission of mails by combining the air routes andthe railway mail services. Private Lines Now Connect by those who have the interest of commercial aviation at heart.

Aviation as an Industry. Both Herbert Hoover, secretary of ommerce, and Harry S. New, postmaster general, have expressed the opinion that it was the proper function of the government to aid in the development of aviation as an indus-try. With a view to encouragement of the flying art Secretary Hoover last year recommended the establishment of a bureau of civil aviation in the Department of Commerce, to be charged with the duty of providing services for commercial aviation comparable to those afforded in the field of commercial navigation.

This proposed bureau received warm commendation from Mr., New when he appeared before President Coolidge's air board of inquiry last September The postmaster general brought out that in the last fiscal year air mail planes had flown more than two and one-half million miles, of which more than half a million miles were night flights. Great as had been the growth in efficiency of the government-operated air mail service, Mr. New contended, however, that the government should not permanently adminster the service under its own auspices. He favored assigning the service to private agencies under contract, just as is done in the transportation of the mail by railroads and water carriers.

Already some private concerns have entered the new field outlined by Hoover and New. The Eastern Air Transport, Inc., linking New England with the West by means of the Federal line, was organized late last year. Shortly afterward the Western Air Express. Inc., with main offices in Los Angeles, began operation of an air mail and freight service between Chicago and California.

Besides these, several other lines are contemplated in St. Louis, Boston, Hartford, Des Moines and other points, So far, due to the fact that the amount of freight must be limited, private commercial aviation has not developed at the rate that some of its ardent advocates would like; but this phase of the matter is receiving serious study all over the country, and it is believed that the day is not far off when planes will be able to carry more freight, thus being of greater industrial use

Early this year Henry Ford entered the ranks of the pioneers in commercial aviation when he started to operate a private line between Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. The first definite adventure of financial men into the field of commercial aviation, with the avowed intention of extending their activities to all parts of the country, was announced in Dethe Colonial Air Transport, Inc. This "adventure" was halled as the first great sten toward making commercial aviation practical and profitable on a large scale. It was predicted that, should the first efforts be successful. he backers of the scheme would next the government to turn the air mull over-to private interests. "The time. is at hand when the government can step out of the air mail business and let private interests gradually take over the service," he said. "I don't think that the handling of mail alone will pay on air lines. The successful lines must be prepared to carry not only mail but high-class express, and eventually passengers. That will come when the American public has been trained to realize that airways have business possibilities."

It is readily granted both here and abroad that in its air mail service the United States ranks first. But, according to a review made recently by the New York Trust company, in passenger and freight service Europe is far ahead of the United States. Aviation lines, most of them privately owned with government subsidies, are an established part of the transportation-service on the Continent.

This review further states that in France, now maintaining the strongest military air service with the largest number of planes, the operation of the thirteen commercial lines has been consolidated into five heavily subsidized companies. Punctuality is rated as high as 90 per cent, with the same degree of safety as on the railroads. Efforts are being made to establish connections between Paris and the main capitals of the world, and to organize a Mediterranean aerial system connecting France with the Near East and South America.

The German lines although not as fully developed, have shown less deficit than the French and are less dependent upon government subsidy, according to the review. Their activity has been-concentrated into three great trunk lines, the Europe System being the most powerful. This system controls most of the strategic air routes in middle Europe, comprising airplane service in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Danzig, Latvia, Esthonia, Finland and

In the development of commercial aviation abroad Turkey fills a novel chapter. When, late in 1925, the enthusiasm over aviation became nationwide a committee composed of deputies, army officers and professional men made a house-to-house canvass seeking a contribution from each family according to the income. Balls and fetes were given to swell the fund for the establishment of a passenger. commercial and mail service between Constantinople and Angora.

Thus commercial aviation is progressing all over the world. In England a new organization became effective in April, 1924, when the existing companies were consolidated into the Imperial Air Transport company, Ltd., which has a monopoly of commercial areonautical operations. In Mexico, the governor of the state of Tabasco last year requested permission to establish a hydroplane service between Villahermosa, capital of the state, and Puerto Mexico and Vera Cruz. Air service between the United States and Cuba, via Key West and Havana, was resumed last year. In cember, 1925, with the formation of Canada commercial aviation, according to reports, is progressing at an amazing rate. Plans to link Europe with South American countries have repeatedly been considered, both in Paris and Berlin.

GHOST CITY, ONCE THRIVING METRÓPOLIS, TO BE JUNKED

Midco Built Up Around Great Steel Plant in Missouri During the World War.

Kansas City, Mo.—Nestling in the hills of southern Missouri lies Midco, a mushroom town that thrived in the war, but now a "ghost city," with only ineteen families living there with free rent, waiting for the crane, crowbar and sledge hammers of the junk dealer. The thriving metropolis of Carter county eight years ago figured in one of the most unusual transactions in America, growing out of the World war.

The entire city, 350 houses, a great steel plant, water works system, electric light plant, motion picture show, gyunasium and executive building of 18 rooms, streets and all improvents, has been sold to the Sonken & Galamba Iron and Metal company of Kansas City as junk.

The ninetecn families that live there by virtue of the free rent are wondering what the Kansas City concern will do with the homes. Many of the buildings, seven and eight-room structures, are strictly modern. Herman Sonken of the iron com pany says he is in a quandary as to what to do with the fine homes. It would be a crime to tear them down, he feels. There are more than two hundred houses. Midco has 294 acres of land in the townsite. The same owners also have lease on 23,000 acres of timber land. In close proximity to the town are several fron mines which produced metal for military uses in the war, but are idle now. When the great demand for iron came in the World war the Mid-Continent Iron corporation built a huge iron plant and pig iron plant there and laid out the town.

About $4,000,000 was spent on the plant. Workers hurried in and built the homes and buildings. The hum of the powerful machinery in the great plant was heard night and day during the war and the workers went to the new city in great numbers. As many as 3,000 once occupied the town. After the war, the plant was shut down. The population, jobless, departed, leaving the city in the hills deserted. Most of the machinery in the big steel plant is intact and will be reclaimed by the iron company.

Synopsis.—Idly fishing Hermanos creek, in California, Caleb Warner, civil engineer, and a New Englander, is witness of the end of a coyote pulled down by two wolfhounds, urged on by a girl rider Admiring the hounds, he introduces himself, and learns her name is Clinton. With western hospitality she invites him to the ranch to meet her father. At the Clinton home Warner learns his new friend's name is Betty. He is welcomed by her father, Southern Civil war veteran and owner of Hermanos valley. Warner tells them something of his ambitions and his feeling that he is destined to be a "Water-Bearer."

She is in Luis Padilla on his track," he told himself, wondering if the ample Mahas tie her by one long reebbon to the trunk so she shall play weeth her flowers an' not fall een the creek. May the Mother of God forgeev Maria! An' me also, Luis Padilla! Senor, I am in love with Maria, we are to wed. I hav leave my work, I hav' follow down the canyon to talk weeth Maria! Now Padilla was rolling a cigarette with a murmured, "eef you permit senor," riding out of the water up to the little plateau where the thing had happened with a face as suddenly void of emotion as if a light had been switched off behind a shade, intent only upon inhaling the smoke of his cigarette, seated with one leg across the saddle horn. Caleb and the Don had followed him. The last puff taken Padilla flung away the wisp of the cigarette end into the stream with a savage gesture and slid to the ground. again he was in his role, now giving antomime to aid his words in con uring up the happening.

"Eet is by the mercy of the Good God that Maria tie the child, senor I could not reach the leetle senorita in time but I reach that reebbon an snatch her back-so! Jus' as that puma spreeng. I see heem above me all spread. He blot out the sun an' as I snatch back the baby, he yell, like El Diablo himself. His eyes shine, teeth. And Padilla raked himself down his shrunken side with suggestive fingers. He slash my face one time when I dodge. One time I am down an eet is growin' all dark. He take my arm like a dog take a bone. Senor, I hear those teeth on my bone. An' I stab, I steek, I cut! We roll into the creek. Me, I theenk I am almos' gone that time, but the water bring me back. Eet flow from red from the puma also. But there is enough to make two little rug'. One for Maria, one for me. Those rug each in our two room'—Maria an mine-beneath the crucifix. When we pray we kneel on those rug an' we never forget our oath."

Again the fire of his speech suddenly died out and he rolled another cigarette.

"You are not married to Maria?" asked Caleb. "No, senor. That was seventeen years ago. We wait. Eet was the great fault of Maria, also of me, that we leave la senorita. Senor Clinton did not punish. He geev me praise an offer me money which I do not take. But we-we punish each the other We punish that love which make us careless. We take the oath to God and the Mother of God that we watch always over the senorita. Baxter regaled Caleb with an ac count of the trip of the night before along the beach, visiting every boule vard resort. The "peach," it appeared was a blond stenographer who was a "thoroughbred sport and a winner." By which Caleb tacitly understood that the young lady had acquiesced in every suggestion of Baxter's without demur. Caleb broke the tale to make his own change of clothes, to shave and take his bath. Baxter or dered luncheon at the club over the telephone, to be ready in half an hour, then switched to the garage for his car to be brought round in twenty

While they waited he rounded on Caleb and demanded a statement of what he had been up to.

Caleb told his story. He saw no reason why he should conceal any thing and yet he had some reluctance to describe his visit at El Nido in detail. He did not fancy that Baxter would see-or would have seen-the place and its people in the same light that he did. His reservations betrayed him. Baxter seized upon the mention of the girl with a whoop and quizzed

"You sly fox," he cried. "A beauty with chestnut tresses, riding like a centaur after borzois, chasing a coyote -and catching Caleb Warner! She has you on the hip, Caleb. HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN Editor of "HEALTH"

(6. 1526, Western Newspaper Union.) ACUTE KIDNEY DISEASE

MUCH has been written for the public about Bright's disease, the chronic form of kidney disease which generally is found to persons past midde life and which is closely associated with hardening of the blood vessels, high blood pressure and some form of heart disease. This condition, in which the kidneys are shrunken and hard, is much like gray hair. It is one of the signs and results of old age, for which little or nothing can be done, except to relieve the kidneys of as much work and irritation as possible. It is due to poisoning of some kind continued over a long period of time, excessive eating, the use of alcohol, lead poisoning or any other form of chronic poisoning.

But there is another form of kidney disease which is generally found in children or young people, which is not due to age but is caused by some irritation or poisoning which affects the kidneys, and which, instead of being a long drawn-out disease, covering years, is a rapidly developing condition. This is usually caused by some form of infection. It frequently, in children, follows scarlet fever, diphtheria, tonsifitis, pneumonia or influenza. The poison which these dis-eases generate in the body are thrown off through the kidneys and cause an inflammation of these organs. It may also be caused by poisons outside the body, such as turpentine, carbolic acid, arsenic and mercury. It may follow childbirth or may be caused by extensive skin diseases or burns, in which a large part of the skin is unable to work properly, thus throwing greater strain on the kidneys.

Acute disease of the kidneys comes on suddenly, like a fever. There is a chill and high fever, the patient is pale and the face and ankles are swollen. Pain in the back, nausea and vomiting may be present. The swelling of the face, ankles and legs increases. The secretion from the kidneys is small in amount and it is dark reddish-brown or smoky color. due to the presence of blood in the rine. The whole body may be swollen, due to the inability of the kidneys to excrete the water in the body.

The cases which recover begin to show improvement in from one to three weeks. The fatal cases become more serious, the patient dying from pneumonia, heart exhaustion or uremic noisoning. Avoidance of poisons and infectious diseases and of exposure to cold and wet, and keeping children in bed after scarlet fever, measles and diphtheria will prevent many cases of acute kidney diseases.

PREVENTING DIPHTHERIA

TERRIBLE as have been the ravtions, diphtheria is today an entirely controllable disease. It can not only be controlled, it can actually be wiped out just as yellow fever is being wiped out. By the Schick test, which consists of injecting a single drop of antitoxin under the skin, the child who is susceptible can be separated from the child who is naturally immune. Observations which have been made on large numbers of school children, show that from 30 to 40 per cent of all children are naturally immune from diphtheria and so need not be considered, as these immune children will not take diphtheria anyway.

Those children whom the Schick test show to be susceptible to diphtheria can easily be protected by a ose of toxin-antitoxin.

So we know how to prevent this disease in practically every case and yet diphtheria every year kills thousands of children, every one of whom could and should have been saved. As King Edward said. "If this disease is reventable, why is it not prevented?"

It has been, to a great extent, in spite of the indifference of the public. In New York state, for instance, the death rate for diphtheria in 1895 was 95 children for every 100,000 of the population. Antitoxin was discovered in 1894, but did not come into general use for several years. Yet by 1905 the death rate in New York was just one-half. It was ag. in cut in half by 1915. In that year, toxin-antitoxin came into use and the death rate for New York is now only 15 per 100,000 or less than one-fifth what it was in

These 15 deaths per 100,000 are much better than 95 deaths, but they are still far too many and all of them are entirely unnecessary. If every child when it entered school given the Schick test its parents would know whether it was safe from or susceptible to diphtheria. If every susceptible _child, which would mean about one-half of all school children, was then given a dose of toxin-antioxin this disease would practically disappear. Why is this not done? We know enough to stamp it out. What prevents it being done? Mainly ignorance and indifference. Parents school teachers, school boards, health authorities either don't know enough or they are too lazy to protect their children from this disease. And so the children go on dying and will until everybody knows better and does

Lesson for July 25 THE PASSOVER

LESSON TEXT-Exodus 12:1-49. GOLDEN TEXT—Christ, our Pass-ver, is sacrifieed for us. PREMARY TOPIC—The Story of a feast.

IUNIOR TOPIC—The First Passover Feast. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—A Memorial Peast.
TOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—The Meaning of the Passover.

I. The Passover Instituted (vv. 1-

1. The date (v. 2).

With the institution of the passover came a change in the order of time. an imitation fig same The common year was rolling on as usual but with reference to God's chosen people the order was interrupt ed and everything was made to date from this event

2. The lamb set apart (vv. 3-5). This lamb must be a male without blemish, indicating that it must be both representative and perfect.

3. The lamb was killed by the whole congregation (v. 6). This shows that it was not for the individual only, but for the entire as sembly. The setting apart of the lamb was not sufficient. It must be killed, for "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins."

4. The blood of the slain lamb was to be placed upon the side posts and lintels of the door (v. 7). When the destroying angel passed through the land he passed over the houses where the door posts were sprinkled with blood (v. 23). This blood was the evidence that a substitute had been offered for them.

5. Israel feeding upon the lamb (vv. 8-10).

This denotes fellowship. The lamb roasted signified the action of fire in God's judgment at the cross. The head, the legs and purtenance thereof show that in the substitutionary sacrifice the understanding, the walk and all that pertains thereto were involved. This shows that the atonement of Jesus Christ involved His obedience to law as well as His suffering in the stead of His own. The eating of unleavened bread signifies that no sin is connect ed with or allowed in fellowship with Christ. Leaven signifies corruption (I Cor. 5:7.8). The Israelites did not put away leaven to be saved from the destroying angel, but being saved because under the shadow of the blood they put away leaven, that is, evil, in order to have fellowship with their Redeemer. The bitter herbs connected with this feast suggest the bitterness of Christ's suffering.

6. They ate the passover ready for action (v. 11). Their loins were girded, their shoes were on their feet, and a staff in hand. The girding of the loins betokened separation from sin, and preparation and readiness for service. The feet being shed indicated their willingness and readiness to march out of Egypt. The staff in hand-indicated their nature as pilgrims leaning upon a support outside of themselves. They were to leave behing them the place of death and darkness and march to the promised

7. The uncircumcised denied participation in the feast (vv. 43-49). Circumcision was typical of regeneration. The significance of the requirement is that only those who have become new creatures by the power of the Cross have a right to sit at the passover feast.

II. The Significance of the Passover (vv. 24-28).

vv. 24-28). It was a memorial institution, calling to mind the deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage. This was to be taught to their children from generation to generation when they came into the land

iii. The Awful Judgment (vv. 29. SO).

At midnight the Lord smote all the first-born in the land from the firstborn of Pharach that sat on his throne unto the first-born of the captive that was in bondage, and all the first-born of cattle. There-was death that night in every home throughout Egypt where the blood was not found. A great and awful cry went up from the Egyptians for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

IV. The Great Deliverance (vv. 31-

So mighty was this stroke that Pharaoh called for Moses in the night and requested him to be gone with his flocks and herds. The Israelites hastily made ready for their journey. They demanded of the Egyptians jewels o silver and gold-and raiment. The word "borrow" in verse 35 means "demand' instead of the sense in which we use it today.

For street and sports wear, printed filks, plain and figured georgette and chiffon, and light crepes, are the faforite mediums for scarfs. But handnainted scarfs of chiffon or georgette de chine with jabot at the front, cascaded from neck to girdle.

In a little journey through the field of sports clothes it soon becomes evident that color is the most important and the most interesting detail of the new models. In outer garments, coats and capes divide honors, but in dresses for sports or semi-sports wear the two-piece mode holds, practically, a monopoly of attention. For variety's sake designs fall back upon the man-agement of colors and have taken "Make it snappy" for their slogan. "BAYER ASPIRIN" GET YOURSELF A BRAND NEW LIVER

How Dodson's Liver Tone Makes You Feel the Old Liver Is Born Again.

Just off the slant of Old Piedmont where it rolls away into the foot-hills of South Georgia Bud Evans makes a good stand of cotton. A year ago he was too sick to even follow a plow. His right side seemed hard, felt as if his liver had turned to stone; belched gas all the time; couldn't hold up his head for the pain; calomel just turned him inside out. You couldn't imagine anyone sicker than Bud Evans. It just happened that an egg buyer dropped in on him one day and says: "What you need, Bud, is a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone-your liver is baked and full up so it doesn't work." And so Bud got a bottle at the town drug store for a few cents. The very first night it loosened up so much sour bile and fermenting food that the swelling went down, his whole system righted itself and he was a new man entirely before noon. There is no question but that Dodson's Liver Tone will do more for bilious people than anything else ever known. It works easily and smoothly. without gripe or distress, and cleans out all the sour bile and sickening stuff that gives you headache, nausea vomiting, bilious fever and all the other distresses due to obstinate constipation.

Get one bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, and if it doesn't make you feel like you had traded your old, worn-out liver for a new one full of pep, go to the druggist and he will refund the price.

Fisher's engineering experts - skilled beyond their calling by virtue of years of continuous research and experimentation with all types of body construction - unhesitatingly aver that none but Body by Fisher—exclusively used by General Motors for Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars-affords the essential virtues of safety, beauty and com-

Quite logically the public knows that when any improvement which really gives an enhanced measure of safety, comfort and luxury is perfected, Fisher will be the first to present it just as Fisher has created and been the first to present every important improvement in body design and construction of the past decade.

Leaving the dining room, they met Cox alone, coming from the direction of the club's telephone booths. Baxter selzed the moment.

"I want a friend of mine to meet you," he said to the older man, speak-ing with the frank facility that was one of his greatest assets, met by Cox with a sort of half-tolerant geniality. "This is Caleb Warner, one-time classmate of mine at Columbia, civil engineer, following the Star of Empire westward in the hope of hitching his wagon to it. Don't let my friendship with him prejudice you against him. He plays ant to my grasshopper."

Cox smiled as he gripped Caleb's hand cordially enough, giving him a direct glance that, in kindly but determined fashion, seemed to measure

"Glad to meet you," he said. "Plenty of room out here for civil engineers. Any specialty?"

"Water," Caleb answered promptly. The eyes of Cox seemed to harden a little, to hold a hint of suspicion at the pat answer that might have been calculated to awaken interest.

"Done much at it?" "A factory dam or two. One reservoir for town supply. Back East. The rest of my practical experience has been along other lines for the last two years but I am especially interested in water-engineering and the West seemed to be the place."

"It was a great training ground," he said. "No time wasted there, to my mind. Gave a young man a broader horizon, taught him to handle men. My boy was over there." He hesitated as Baxter came back. "He's due here at five-thirty," he went on. "I imagine you'd get on well together. Better join us at dinner. You too

"Got to excuse me," said Baxter. "Previous appointment. Sorry."

One of the members of the luncheon party had been hovering somewhat impatiently in the background, evidently waiting for Cox. The latter saw him and nodded. "Got to go now," he said. "See you at five-thirty, Warner, then."

Caleb watched the tall figure as it strode off, energetic, masterful, listen ing to what the other had to say, dismissing it with an abrupt gesture. He turned to Baxter.

"That man is a fighter." he said. "You can double that bet. They're all fighters, scrapping for everything in sight, fighting to get it, fighting to hold on to it. That's the essence of

"I don't think he took any sudden fancy to me," Caleb answered. "He warmed up a little when he heard I had been across. Thought his boy might like to meet me."

"Of course. I'm a chump. Jack Cox is the apple of his father's eye, all the more so because Pa Cox had good reasons to suppose said apple was worm-eaten. You think I'm inclined to burn the trail. Big Business

Jack Cox turned out so close replica of his father—less weathered, ess bitten by Time and Experience -but nevertheless so evident a chip of the old block, that Caleb almost doubted Baxter's description of him as a reformed wastrel. He had been through the furnace of the war and, vhatever of steel had been in him had been tempered, the baser metals burned to slag and discarded. Caleb listened with interest and understanding.

"There is only one Imperial valley, perhaps," said Cox, "but there are other deserts with soil just as fertile, waiting only for the magic touch of Your end of it-the water end is the initial move in the game, mine is the last. You play Alpha to my

Sport is sometimes criticized for the unfairness of its participants or the partisanship of its followers.

It has a mission besides the devel opment of a healthy body, surely it is in the encouragement of fair-mindedness in the players and on the grand stand. 1. To strengthen the faith of the people. To be delivered from such circumstances would impress upon them anew the reality of the love and power of God. ili. The Overthrow of the Egyptians (vv. 28-27).

Having seen the Israelites go across the sea dry shod, Pharaoh and his peo ple madly pursued them. They insanely thought that they in their unbelief could follow in the wake of God's children. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. He not only looked upon them but took off their chariot wheels, which caused them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring de struction upon the Egyptians.

IV. The Song of Triumph (15:1-21). Standing on the other shore of the Red sea they could fittingly sing the song of triumph because of their miraculous deliverance and the over whelming defeat of the Egyptians. They attributed it all to God. All selfconsciousness and importance were left out. In a glad coming day, a similar but much larger company will sing the same song with an important addition, namely, the "Song of the Lamb." (Rev. 15:3).

Tragedy Shrouds Anticosti Island

Disasters of Sea in Early Days Gave Isle Gruesome Name.

Toronto, Ont .-- Athwart the Gulf of St. Lawrence, like a mighty gunboat guarding the portals of Canada, lies the Island of Anticosti, as large as Porto Rico, and four times as large as the province of Prince Edward is-

Thirty-one years ago the late Henri France, hought the island empire for $160,000. The other day his brother, Senator Gaston Menier, sold it to the Wayagamac Pulp and Paper company for $6,000,000-180,000,000 francs-a substantial profit for the Menier es tate but yet a trifling sum for a kingdom as hig as the state of Connect

The "Isle of Shipwrecks" they call Anticosti in memory of the disasters that piled up on its rockbound coasts before the days of range lights and wireless. Countless tales that are sinister are associated with the island but the sweetening influences of the Menier regime have banished most of them to the limbo of tradition. When M. Menier, one of the wealthiest men in the world, bought the island in 1895 his purpose was to establish a sheeting lodge that would be the talk of the Paris boulevards. He planned a game preserve that would be magnificent, as well it might be with an acreage of 3,780 square miles and two or three million acres of woods already naturally stocked with

But the commercial possibilities of the island which previous generations had left almost as an outcast of the sea soon forced themselves on his attention. Fishing industries were established. A pulp mill was erected. Fishing and hunting camps for Ameri can tourists were built and leased with salmon and trout rights. Silver fox ranching was established, producing 1,500 pelts in a season.

thousand farm settlers were brought from France and the Canadian mainland and given land "on shares." Every department had its own manager. A lobster fisherman from Nova Scotia, taking refuge from a storm in an Anticosti cove, was promptly arrested for trespassing, but the next morning, when his trade had been discovered, he was invited to visit M. Menier in his palace in France and ultimately became man ager of Anticosti's lobster fishing de partment.

And so it comes about that Anticosti, bought as a plaything, now adds substantially to the Menier millions and is helping the patriotic senator to make a handsome contribution to the "Save the franc" fund.

Deer Roam on Golf Course. Anticosti remains a magnificent game preserve. Everywhere one turns in Anticosti it is to see, nibbling in the fields, by the roadside, deer-wild deer so tame that the approach of a human seems rather an event to interest than to fear. Fifty or sixty may be counted on the golf course There are said to be 250,000 on the island. Not a single dog is allowed on Anticosti. Even the wild foxes are to be seen roaming unmolested along the village street.

Bears originally made Anticosti famous. "Natis-cotee," the "place of bear hunts," was the Indian name, and the best the euphonious French-Canadian could do with the name was "Anticosti." Bears still abound. Bears in the New York and Paris zoological gardens boast Anticosti as their home.

The sea thereabouts teems with codfish, haddock, lobsters (which in the tradition of habitants thrived on the victims of shipwrecks) and halibut. some reaching a weight of 400 pounds. Scores of streams abound with salmon and trout. Wild duck, wild geese, gamuts, cormorants and sea pigeon

Recently Senator Menier planned to bring musk oxen from the Arctic and wild ponies from Isle aux Sables, the lost island of the Atlantic, to Anticosti. Generations ago settlers and horses were landed on Sable. The settlers died and the horses survived atavistic form. Menier wanted to see if they could be redeemed.

Though Senator Menier could spend only summers on Anticosti—the island is marooned through a long winterhe never lost interest in the great experiment initiated by his brother. But increasing age made the sea voyage more exacting. Jacques Cartier in 1534 discovered the island, which in a mood of piety he called "Assumption," a name which, however, would not stick. Then King Louis IV presented it as a seigneury to Sieur Louis Joliet, discoverer of the mouths of the Missis sippi and the Illinois. Joliet didn' seem to appreciate Anticosti, and his name is perpetuated not by the St. Lawrence island, but in a penal institution at Joliet.

But in Joliet's family the little is land kingdom remained until 1873. when an English company, having bought it, induced Newfoundland fishermen and their families to settle there by dreams of a new Beulah Canadian government supply boats saved the settlers' lives after their dream dissolved within a year, with the company's money. In 1886-7 F. W. Stockwell of Quebec bought the whole island for $100,000. Menier, in his turn, bought it outright in 1895 from the Island of Anticosti company, Limited, of London, an English com pany which had gone bankrupt.

The English fishermen and wreck ers who were squatting on the island soon realized that Henri Menier had begun his reign; that he was French to the core, and that he did not ap preciate their semicivilized mode of life. Ordered by Menier to leave the island and not to fish within three miles of the shore, the mutinous fishermen joined the wreckers, who had made the most accessible section of the south shore their profitable stronghold for many years. Determined to investigate the sudden dis appearance of the fishermen. Menier set out to steam around the south shore in his yacht Velleda.

Menier Outwits Wreckers. Out of the darkness that overtool them shone the lure-light of the wreckers. The captain was about to shape his course toward the fatal beacon when Menier had his suspicions roused and went shoreward with a dozen men in a launch. They were fired upon by the wreckers, who saw the yacht an chor and realized that their trick had failed. Next day at the head of an armed posse of his employees Menier discovered their hiding place. A bat tle ensued, in which two of the wreckers were wounded. Piling the fishermen and ship ghouls into his yacht, Menier landed them summarily on the coast of Onehec.

Here was a clash of sovereignty, and soldiers began drilling for a possible war between Canada and Menier and possibly France, but the affair blew over with mutual concessions, and the Meniers have ever since been welcome visitors to Canada. Senator Gaston Menier a year or two ago officiated at the opening of Toronto ex

On the spot where the wreckers had established their lair, near the fine natural harbor of Ellis bay, at the western tip of the island, M. Menier built a magnificent mansion a wilderness palace. Down to the smallest detail he drew the plans to suit himself. One oddity of the build ing upon which he insisted was that all parts of wood and iron must be screwed in place. Not a nail or rive was used.

Objects of art, famous tapestries and rich and rare furniture were brought to the villa from all over the They were insured alone for $800,000. Even the late J. Pierpont Morgan was a bidder once for one the priceless tapestries, but M. Menier declined to consider the request. In the memory of people still living remains the recollection of the lavish housewarming party given by the French chocolate king when the man lon was completed.

Sable island, off the coast of Nova Scotia, also famous for its shipwrecks, pales into insignificance be fore the gruesome details of some of the shipwrecks of this great island in the mouth of the St. Lawrence.

Troopships in almost every early English attempt to take Quebec were tossed upon Anticosti sands. One bleak day in November, 1827, the stout brig Granicus stranded on one of the island's shore reefs. Next spring a Canadian government vessel found the awful record of its crew. Human skeletons littered the inside of a rude hut near the shore, and in a pot over the fireplace were found the prepara tions for a meal whose like one would hardly expect to find outside Fiji o Tahiti in the premissionary days.

Out of the sixty-five men who found refuge on the island from the French sloop of war, Renommee, in 1737, only three men survived to welcome the rescuing party. Out of the woods came the three men of the Renomme looking more like wild beasts than en, with suppliant hands stretched out toward the French-Canadian fishermen who had come to aid them For the three weeks previous to the rescue they had lived on their boots and fur breeches boiled in snow water One of them died of joy. They Find a Hay Fever Remedy

As a result of investigations which have been carried on in the protein in-estigation laboratory of the bureau of chemistry in Washington, government scientists believe they have discovered a new remedy for hay fever. The treat-

FATTEN BROILERS FOR MARKETING

For the most part, farmers and poultry raisers who keep Leghorn chickens pay most attention to the production of eggs. They think of eggs as the chief end of poultry keeping. My experience has been that by paying a little more attention to the fattening and marketing of Leghorns, the income from this source can be considerably increased, says a writer in the Successful Farming. Especially is this true when marketing broilers. Leghorn broilers fatten easily when confined and force fed for about two weeks. They will consume about two ounds of feed during this time and should show a gain in weight of one-half to three-fourths of a pound. There are two methods which I have employed in fattening broilers. forms, Foods rich in fat such as pas-These are pen and crate fattening. The simplest and most logical method for farm conditions I have found is pen fattening.

Following this method, the birds are confined in small pens when about one and one-half pounds in weight and are fed the following mash: 25 pounds cornmeal, 15 pounds middlings, 8 nounds meat scraps, and one-half-pound salt. This is fed as a wet mash by adding sour milk, buttermilk, or skim The birds are fed this mash milk. three times a day and are permitted to eat for half an hour at a time, when the uneaten portion is removed. between the feedings should be as equal as possible The object of feeding this wet mash is to get the birdsto eat large amounts of food so they will make maximum ains in the shortest time. Corn meal and milk in any form should be the foundation of any good fattening mash. It should also be remembered that when milk is used in fattening fowls, not a too large amount of meat scraps should be used. One reason for the wide spread in prices paid for Leghorn broilers and those of the heavier breeds is because the Leghorn, being more active, will not take on flesh as readily as the heavier breeds when on free

Roosters Can Be Sold

Now, Says J. H. McAdams

Now that the incubation period is over there is no further need for roosters in the flock and all but one or two of the best male birds can be sold, advises J. H. McAdams, extension poultryman at the Kansas State Agricultural college. Every flock owner knows, according to McAdams, that the male bird is unnecessary so far as the production of market eggs is concerned. Male birds now represent just so many extra mouths to feed, he

The hitch to selling male birds comes largely from the price consideration, according to McAdams, who says that when these birds were purchased last fall or early winter they were valued from $2 up to possibly $10 each. Today with old roosters commanding 16 cents a pound an exceptionally high price prevails, but as soon as the old roostetrs start moving to market the price will drop probably to about 10 cents a pound.

"Even though old roosters were such a drug on the market that he could not sell them at all, no farmer could afford to keep them in his flock." McAdams warns. "To live, a rooster must eat and the feed bill on each individual one will be at least 10 cents a month, making a total cost of at least 80 cents to hold the old birds over until Feb

Poultry Hints

The results of chickens eating carrion or spoiled feed are limberneck or indigestion.

Egg eating is a vicious habit and the best method to combat it is the slaughter of the offending birds.

Convenience for both hens and care taker should be considered—conveni-ence means cleanliness and cleanliness means health.

A laying hen is about the only example of a going concern that can sit still and yet produce dividends.

The first quality that makes for success and profit in the poultry flock is vigor, vitality or constitution. Choose your own name for this

A chicken that is liberally fed does not, as a rule, exercise enough to run off flesh but only enough to keep in good general health and to have good appetite.

Eggs will remain fertile up to ten days after the male has been removed from the breeding pen.

Given a chance, poultry will return good profits on the investment. Cleanliness is one of the best guarantees

Poultry diseases spread principally in four ways: By the birds eating dead diseased birds, by contaminated air, through drinking water, and

SUMMER FOODS

With the markets teeming with all kinds of fruit and vegetables and the housewives efficient in canning greens and foods from the gardens, one may expect to be as healthy in the spring as at any other time of year. We take our blood tonics in the form of fruit and vegetables.

However, with the warm summer dáys comes a muscular relaxation which reacts upon the digestive tract as well as the whole body and it needs to have its tasks lightened, so we les sen the food and serve the lighter tries, cakes and various rich sauces should be partaken of in moderation. Protein foods which furnish the heat should be cut down and more of the succulent fruits and vegetables form

In warm weather the housewife must plan more accurately not to have much left-over food, for spoilage will occur in a few hours in protein food, making it unfit to serve.

When very warm, a cold drink in the form of a plain soda, lemonade or phosphate is much less harmful than sundaes and rich ice creams. When taken at the end of a meal these It is important that the intervals frozen dishes are not considered harm-

It is wise when planning foods for hot days to have one hot dish (if it is a drink), as a too radical change in diet cannot always be borne.

If one's dinner is eaten at noon, the night meal should have at least one hot, simple supper dish, such as milk toast, a soup, macaroni and cheese or a bread and cheese custard, made by spreading bread with butter and cheese, then covering with a custard, using ac egg to a cupful of milk and a bit of salt. Bake as usual. Cheese one of our most valuable foods and one highly concentrated: it is the ideal food to serve in warm weather in vari-

Blackstone Dressing.—Take four tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise and thick ream whipped, two tablespoonfuls of chill sauce, two tablespoonfuls each of tomato catsup and vinegar and a tablespoonful of finely minced requefore cheese. Serve on head lettuce.

Fruits which excite the appetite because of appearance and flavor are used for breakfast, and sweets are used as a finish to a meal. A good reason for never allowing children to eat candy or sweets before a meal is that it dulls the appetite and they refuse to eat the food they should. A bit of candy after a meal is often beneficial, but served before is pernicious.

Salads and Salad Making. Salad making is an art which may be expressed in attractive color combin'ations with vegetables, fruits and other foods.

We all enjoy artistic effects in foods and have a for some new and fetching way to erve the ordinary foods. Almost any food that is edible may be combined to make a salad, yet we would avoid combining foods which do not harmonize Carrots, potatoes, turnips and beets are usually cooked before using in a salad, yet with carrots, grated fresh. mixed with celery, onion and nuts, one has a very pleasing salad. When a salad is to provide the main dish of the meal it should be carefully considered. Salmon, shrimp, tuna, chicken are all good salads for the dalb afám

An arrangement of a salad as well as its garniture is most important Who has not refused to eat a dish which had an unattractive appearance when it was perfectly good and whole some. The eye being the first organ of digestion, the perfection of combination and flavor amount to but little if the salad has been carelessly prepared.

When such firm vegetables as potatoes are used in a salad, the dish will not be well seasoned unless the salad has been marinated with either French dressing or a thin salad dressing for several hours.

Green plants such as lettuce, endive cress and parsley, whose charm lies in their fresh crispness, should be kept well chilled and served at once when the dressing is added.

Cucumbers make delightful salad combinations with other vegetables. The red radish, unpealed or cut into tulip forms, makes pretty decorations which have a double attraction, being edible.

Hot String Bean Salad.—Drain can of beans and heat the liquor boiling hot; reduce it to one-fourth of a cupful. Fry two slices of bacon until crisp, pour the hot fat with the liquor and three tablespoonfuls of boiling vinegar over the beans. Add the chopped bacon and season highly with salt and a few dashes of cayenne. A bit of chopped onion or a dittle juice may be added for flavor, if desired.

the State of Sonora Settle Down to Be Farmers.

Nogales, Ariz.—A problem confronting Mexico for the last twenty years, growing out of the central government's treatment of the Yaqui Indians in the state of Sonera, is in the process of being solved. In effect, the government is seeking to pay a debt owed the Indians through confiscation of lands. Many years ago the Yaquis, an or dinarily peaceful and industrious tribe, but as capable of unmitigated cruelty lost their rich lands. Some of their acreage was given to large land concerns by concession. Other land was taken over by the government because the Indians were allowing it to lie idle. The vast domain dwindled until it was typhoid fever must enter the system through the mouth. There is no other known way whereby this disease may be contracted. Once entering the system these germs choose the lymphatic slands, especially the small lymphatic glands of the intestines called Peyer's glands or Peyer's patchés. (These glands take this name because they were first described by Johann Conrad Peyer, a Swiss anatomist about the year 1700). It is these intestinal lymphatic glands, and the bone marrow, gall-bladder, and perhaps, also the spleen, that act as reservoirs for the growing and multiplying of typhoid germs.

From these reservoirs these bacteria are taken up into the blood stream even before the symptoms of the disease are manifest. They do not multiply in the blood stream but are, there, rapidly destroyed. It is probably this destruction which turns loose in the system the toxins which give rise to the fever and other symptoms of the disease. An examination of the blood will disclose these germs very early in the disease. As the system prepares the antitoxin against these germs they disappear from the blood as the disease progresses.

The germs are discharged from the body in the stools and the urine Those from the gall-bladder and lymph flands into the intestine and feces and those from the blood into the kidneys and urine. They are usually not found in either of these sources until after the first week of the noticeable

Although nature has prepared in the system of the convalescent sufficient antitoxin to counteract the poisons and prevent the multiplication of the germs, it very often happens that a person may carry in the system for months and even years live germs which, when transferred to another who does not have any immunity, will grow and multiply and cause the disease. These persons are called carriers and these are the ones who are the greatest danger to society

Vaccination will cause nature to prepare in the system an antitoxin which will prevent typhoid fever. Hygienic measures and vaccination will eradicate typhoid fever.

TEETHING

ONG with the bones, teeth begin to form before the baby is born. When the baby is born the teeth are there but are not seen be cause they are covered up with the gums. Sometimes babies are born with teeth showing but usually they do not begin to protrude through the gums until the fourth to the tenth

The eruption of the teeth is a perfectly natural process and "teething" gets blamed for many ills of the child which it does not cause. As the tooth pushes its way to the surface the gum gradually and painlessly gives way before it. Normally neither the child itself nor any one else should know when the baby "cuts its teeth" until the teeth are en. If, before the tooth appears hard pressure is made on the gum over the tooth the gum tissue is bruised and pinched until injury is done. When this happens then, later, when even slight pressure is made it presses this sore gum against the hard tooth underneath and of course it hurts. After the gums have been bruised and the teeth are almost through it may often he hes to lance the gums or "rub the tooth through in order to avoid the constant hurting by pressure which otherwise might last for several days, If this is attempted before the tooth is sufficiently elevated, the gum will again close over the tooth and the hurting will continue,

This premature bruising of the gums is responsible for most of the restlessness of babies when they are

The association of diarrheave or bronchitis must be looked upon as being entirely independent of dentition. To be sure the injured gun may cause the child to be constantly putting something in its mouth and this offers increased numbers of opportunities to carry infection to the intestinal tract that would cause diarrhea.

The usual measures indicated for the prevention and treatment of rickets are indicated for the prevention and treatment of delayed or disturbed dentition.

Sunshine, cod liver oil, egg yolk and hygienic measures are of su preme importance.
