Pecans

The bulk of the commercial production of pecans is at present in Texas, Oklahoma, Louislana, Mississippl Georgia and Florida. But the tree is native to river bottoms from Indiana and Iowa southwest into Mexico. Southeastern states and California have taken up pecan growing to some extent, but there has been little com mercial success with these trees north of latitude 40 degrees.

The tree attains a height of 75 to 170 feet. The crop is harvested when the great majority of the nut husks have opened. As a rule it is dis posed of before Thanksgiving.

FISHERMEN'S MECCA DESTROYED BY FIRE

Home of Izaak Walton, English Landmark.

Washington. - Fishermen will be saddened to learn that Izaak Walton's thatched, half-timbered cottage at Shallowford, Staffordshire, has been destroyed by fire.

"England has lost one of her best beloved, literary landmarks and fishermen the home of the art's most famous exponent, with the destruction of Walton's country home," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"As St. Andrews, Scotland, is the mecca for golfers and Stratford-upon-Avon the shrine of drama lovers, so Shallowford has been the place of pilgrimage for fishermen," continues the bulletin. "Staffordshire, unrolling its green, cultivated hills and valleys midway between smoky Birmingham and busy Liverpool, was the birthplace of Walton and the scene of those fishing expeditions wherein he angled and caught with the same hook, trout and many paragraphs we still acclaim.

Some Famous Fishing Places. "Northwest, a few miles from the Shallowford cottage lies Madeley, country seat of John Offley, Esquire, to whom Walton dedicated the 'Compleat Angler' in appreciation for permission to fish on Offley's estate. Northeast ripples the Dove through Dovedale, a green carpeted, English sort of canyon, where Walton fished with that young rake, Charles Cotton, who added to the 'Compleat Angler'. the sections on fly-fishing. Near Beresford at the upper end of the Dale stands the famous fishing house built by the impecunious, creditor-ridden Cotton for the use of 'Father Walton' and himself.

"Nothing could be in greater contrast to an American sportsman's fishing camp than Cotton's fishing house on the Dove. The latter presents the appearance of a rather large, private mausoleum. Its walls are cut stone. Flanking the arched, stone doorway, two windows admit light to the fishing house through diamond-figured, leaded glass panes. Within, the single room measures 15 feet square. Black and white marble squares pave its floor. A black marble-topped table occupied the center of the room and at one Money Back If Emerald Oil Doesn't Do Away With All Soreness, Swelling and Distress in 24 Hours. One Bottle dress of the time, ornamented the walls. Amid classic magnificence the only human note can be found on the fireplace where the initials 'C.C., I.W., record the famous friendship. Over the doorway on the outside runs the inscription: 'Piscatoribus Sacrum,' "Walton did not take his fishing straight. He mixed trout with a kindly philosophy and poetry. The 'Angler's Song' tells why he thinks fishing is superior to all other sports:

"Of recreation there is none So free as fishing is alone; All other pastimes do no less Than mind and body both posse My hand alone my work can do, So I can fish and study, too."

"The most famous fisherman of them all was so unprofessional as to let his pole and line fish unattended while he sought shelter under a tree to talk with a pupil on Montaigne or worms. He also preferred worms to flies for catching trout!

"Izaak Walton was born in Stafford in 1593. Fish and live long early became his philosophy.

Lived in Turbulent Times. "We regard the span of Walton's life as one of the stormiest in England's history. The Pilgrims were sailing to New England to escape religious persecution when Walton at twenty-seven ran a hardware store in a 71/2 by 5-foot London room. With the defeat of the Royalists by Cromwell in 1644 Walton retired to Stafford. All England struggled amidst the tumult of revolution but Izaak merely moved from the banks of the Thames to the banks of the Dove The 'Compleat Angler's' soothing prose praising the beauty of an Engish field after a shower, explaining how to put a worm on a hook, and discussing the excellence of the Episcopal faith; this dissertation, mild as May morning, first appeared in that hectic year when Cromwell proclaimed himself Lord Protector and England became a republic. "'No life, my honest Scholar,' Walton has Piscator advise Venator, 'no life so happy and so pleasant as the life of a well-governed angler; for when the lawyer is swallowed up with business, and the statesman is preventing or contriving plots, then we sit on cowslip banks, hear birds sing, and possess ourselves in as much quietness as these silent, silver streams. which we now see glide so quietly by us. Indeed, my good Scholar, we may say of angling as Doctor Boteler said of strawberries, 'Doubtless oGd could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did,' and so, if I might be a judge, "God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling." "It is quite in keeping that Walton should have inscribed a tribute to the mendow lark which posterity treasures more than his 'observations on

"'As first, the lark,' he wrote, 'when she means to rejoice to cheer herself and those that hear her, she then quits earth, and sings as she ascends higher into the air; and having ended her heavenly employment, grows then mute and sad to think she must descend to the dull earth, which she would not touch but of necessity."

ANCIENT SKELETONS FOUND ON THE OHIO

May Date From the Very Earliest Days.

Dilles Bottom, Ohio.-Remains of five bodies, believed to be those of victims of an Indian massacre, unearthed here when excavation was being made on the shore of the Ohio river for towers to carry high tension wires from the Beech Bottom, W. Va., brought the statement that early set-tlers of the region south of Bellaire had a fort at that point. T. C. Gallaher, seventy-two, said he recalled hearing from his grandparents that a number of settlers lost their lives while seeking shelter in the fort and says that in his youth the ruins of the foundations were visible. Most of the bones crumbled on being exposed to the air. Mussel shells found about three feet above the bones gave rise to the theory that the graves had been decorated with shells.

Another theory is that the mussel shells may have marked the edge of the Ohio river. This would mean the bones date from the days of the mound builders who erected the mound from which the city Moundsville, W. Va., situated within sight of the ancient burial ground, received its name.

There is no record of the river having flowed in the immediate vicinity of the spot during the last century. An Indian burial ground was unearthed years ago on a near-by hilltop. Quarrymen, years ago, found skulls and skeletons of seven persons, presumably Indians, on a hillside a quarter of a mile away. It was believed they had been entombed while seeking shelter beneath a ledge. Both adults and infants were in the group.

Princess-Salesgirl

to Wed Her Employer Paris, France.-A romance that began when a Russian emigre princess became a saleswoman has culminated in the engagement of Lucien Lelong, Paris dressmaker, and Princess Nathalie Paley of the imperial Russian family. They will be married early in August. Lelong met the nineteen-year-old princess only a few months ago when she joined his staff as first saleswoman in his perfumery department.

Princess Nathalie is the second daughter of Grand Duke Paul of Russia and of Princess Olga Paley. The late Czar Nicholas II was her father's nephew.

During the war Nathalie, with her sister, Princess Irene, was taken into Finland. After her father was assassinated in 1919 her mother was smuggled out of Russia by a count dressed as a peasant. After the mother rejoined her family in Finland they moved to Paris and became socially

$100,000,000 Spent by

Scotch Women for Bobs Glasgow.-Close to $100,000,000 a vear is spent by women and gir bobbing and shingling in Scotland, according to James Stewart, the "hairdresser" M. P. for St. Rollox, and as a consequence, he says, a new occupation has been started which employs many thousands of men and women. "I am sure women will not return to the long hair fashion, because the present mode is so comfortable and hygienic," he went on. "Shingling is as popular with the women of the mining villages as it is with the women of Mayfair," In England the cost of treatment of the hair varies from 35 cents in the working class village to $125 in the fashionable salons of London. Some rich women think $25 to $125 quite normal expenditure for hair treatment at one session, but such extravagance is abnormal.

"The average woman probably spends about $6 to $3 a year on haircuts," Stewart concluded, "which compares favorably with the expense of the average man on shaving, haircuts, and shampoos."

Temple Yields Facts

About Ancient Mexico Mexico City.-A sumptuous chamber, he walls of which are covered with fresco paintings, said to be very similar to those found in the prehistoric temple of horticulture in the archeological city of San Juan Teotihuacan in the Valley of Mexico, is reported to have been discovered in the Maya ruins at Chichen Itza, Yucatan, by Dr. Sylvanus G. Morley, in charge of archeological investigations in Yucatan under the auspices of the Carnegie institution of Washington, D. C., and the Mexican government.

The frescoes are said to be marvelously preserved and it is expected that when the picture writings are finally deciphered by scientists much new light will be shed on the history of Maya civilization.

Bit of Lace Trapped

a Bonaparte to Wed New York.-How an American woman trapped Jerome Bonaparte for a husband with a bit of old lace, thus bringing the Napoleonic strain to America, is an almost forgotten legend resurrected in Baltimore by the Woman's Home Companion.

Jerome, Napoleon's youngest brother, sought refuge in America from British pursuers on the high seas in 1803. Not without intention, it is believed, the rare old lace on the gown of Elizabeth Patterson became entangled on a button of his coat when she met him at a New York reception. Just before his return to France, Napoleon was married with great pomp to Miss Patterson, the beautiful daughter of a Baltimore merchant. The young wife, following her husband to France, was not allowed to She went to England, where their child was born. In the mean-time Napoleon annulled the marriage, placed the former husband on the throne of Westphalia and forced him to marry a German princess. The pope subsequently attested the validity of the marriage, but Elizabeth Patterson Bonaparte never saw her husband again.

New Tree Will Develop Wood Pulp in 18 Years

New York .- For production of wood pulp a tree has been developed that will grow to a height of 60 feet and a thickness of 18 inches in 18 years, says the New York Evening Post.

This tree, a hybrid poplar, has been developed by Dr. Ralph McKee of Columbia university and Dr. A. D. Stout of the New York Botanical gardens. The work was backed by the Oxford Paper company of Rumford, Maine.

The paper obtained from poplar pulpwood, said Doctor McKee, is superior to that now generally obtained from spruce. The new trees can be propagated from seedlings.

LESSON TEXT—I Sam., chap. 26.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be not overcome of wil, but overcome evil with good.
PRIMARY TOPIC—David's Kind-

ress to His Enemy.
JUNIOR TOPIC—David Shows Mercy.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Treat Those Who Wrons Us. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-

1. Saul in Pursuit of David (vv. 1-3). Ever since David took his departure from Jonathan (ch. 20), when that crowning act of friendship was shown, Saul had been hunting him as a wild animal. He now pursues him with 3,000 chosen men. David flees from place to place and is in hiding as an outlaw. Sometimes he is in the enemy's country doing disreputable things. This is the period of his schooling, which fitted him to be the future eminent king. It was a bitter period in his life, but God sent him to this school and adapted the instruction to his needs. David could never have been the broad man that he was had he not been prepared in this crucible of bitter experience. He may be mentioned:

1. His own weakness. It was necessary that he be humbled under the sense of his infirmities. Before any one is fit to be raised to a position of prominence he must be made to know his limitations and weaknesses. Unless a man has learned this lesson, sudden elevation to power will utterly ruin him.

learned many lessons, among which

2. His dependence upon God. David's many miraculous escapes caused him to realize that the Lord had redeemed him out of his adversity.

3. He learned the country and people over which he was to rule. By knowing the grievous afflictions which Saul had heaped upon the people, he could sympathize and remove them.

4. He learned the magnanimity of self-control. This a man must know before he can be a true king. He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city (Prov. 16:32).

II. Saul in David's Hands (vv. 4-20). 1. David sends out spies (v. 4). This he did to find out whether Saul was come in very deed. 2. David in Saul's camp (vv. 5-11).

He took with him Abishai and went in the night to where Saul was steeping. Abishai asked to be allowed to kill Saul, but David forbade him because Saul was the Lord's anneinted. 3. David takes Saul's spear and cruse of water (vv. 12, 13). Once before at Engedi (chap. 24) David spared Saul's life. Now again he was at his mercy. This David did that he might show tangible evidence to the king that he had no evil intent. 4. David taunts Abner, the king's bodyguard (vv. 14-16). He calls to Abner and taunts him for his listlessness-his failure to watch over the Lord's annointed, the evidence which is the cruse and spear in his hands.

5. David reasons with Saul (vv. 17-20). David reasoned with Saul, showing that he had nothing but good intentions toward the king. He asked that he would show what wrong he had done, or what evil intent was in his heart. If the Lord was directing Saul he was willing to appease His wrath with an offering. If Saul was only hunting him because wicked men were urging him, a curse should be pronounced upon them. David is very humble and begs Saul to relent, for surely if he had any wicked purpose he would not have saved his life twice when the Lord had placed Saul wholly at his mercy. David recognized the fact that the Lord had delivered Saul into his hands not to kill, but to save. He did not kill, neither did he allow his servants to kill.

III. Saul's Confession (vv. 21-25). 1. He confessed that he had sinned. The sad feature about his confession is that it lacked conviction, for he went right on sinning.

2. He confessed that he had played the fool and erred exceedingly. We see about us daily many using such expressions, but still they go on repeating their sins. David shows his magnanimity of spirit, however, in delivering the cruse and spear to Saul's servant. He knew that Saul's confession was not genuine, so he was afraid to go near. He still appeals to Saul's kindness to him, and they part never to meet again.

HER PLAN WORKED OUT SPLENDIDLY

(6) by D. J. Walsh.)

TF ANYBODY had told Edith Kent as she sat dawdling over a late breakfast that morning that she would receive an invitation to dine with Mrs. Jasper French that evening she would not have believed it, for, although Mrs. French had always taken pains to be gracious to Edith, her friendliness had never gone so far as an invitation to dine.

Edith was having a holiday. Her employer had been called unexpectedly out of town and the office would be closed for a day or two. That was why Edith was enjoying a leisurely breakfast instead of hurrying to her work. It was a real treat, for in Edith's life, since her parents' death. there had been all too few times that she could idle away a bit of time. She was a wage earner and had only recently arrived at a time where her earnings made it possible for her to have two rooms in which to work out a semblance to a home for herself. True, to most people her home, as she called it, would have seemed poor enough, but to Edith, long used to hall bedrooms, this sunny room, with its couchbed, tea wagon and few pieces of ancient furniture, seemed a para-

It is true that Edith did not expect to pass an idle day, for there were stockings to darn, her office suit to be sponged and pressed, and a new recipe for sponge-cake, which she wished to try. Therefore, when Mrs. Hess, who owned the house in which Edith had her "home," came toiling up the stairs to announce in a wheezy voice, "Phone, Miss Kent," Edith had no idea what was in store for her.

When Edith had taken down the receiver and called, "Hello!" she received the announcement that it was Mrs. French, and that she wished Edith to dine with her at six that evening. "Perfectly informal," Mrs. French assured Edith. "Only Miss Gordon and my nephew, Harry Case, whom you already know. Afterward we will have a game or two of cards." At Edith's ready acceptance Mrs. French murmured a conventional phrase or two and said good-by.

Edith was in the seventh heaven of delight. To dine with Mrs. Jasper French, who up to this time had merely been pleasantly neighborly, 'To dine and spend an evening in Mrs. French's cozy home, which from the glimpses Edith had caught through the lighted windows as she passed to and from her work must be lovely. To meet the beautiful Miss Constance Gordon, whom she had long admired, but never met, and to be in the presence of Harry Case, whom she had known since their school days, but had seen little of since. Edith's heart fairly danced for joy. She pinched herself to make sure she was awake and not dreaming. Upstairs she flew. There would not be a moment to waste. The organdle must be put through the dye bath and pressed, her hair brushed until it shone. Oh, there was much to be done before she would be And all the time she worked her heart sang a merry little accompaniment to the grateful thoughts which danced through her mind at the kindness of Mrs. French in asking her-little Edith Kent-to her house.

At a quarter before six, when Edith ran down the street toward Mrs. French's house, she was still joyously happy. Snowflakes were falling and Edith laughingly held up her face to their caress. What a wonderful world it was! Forgotten were the sorrows and troubles which had beset her nineteen years. Tonight she would be happy.
A trim maid admitted Edith and showed her to the parlor where Mrs. French and Miss Gordon, who had already arrived, were seated before the fireplace talking. As Edith entered the room Mrs. French arose and in a delightful, cordial manner welcomed her, and taking her hand led her to the fire and introduced her to Miss Gordon. For a moment Edith was quite speechless. Never before had she seen anything so perfectly lovely as Miss Gordon. Miss Gordon might have been thirty. At any rate, she had the air of sophistication which is so fascinating to nineteen. She was blond and far more beautiful than nature had intended her to be. Though of this Edith was unaware. She, too, wore a pink gown, but of a shade that could not be bought for ten cents at the corner drug store. It was satin— one of those gowns that defy imitation and empty one's purse to buy. It had cost nearly as much as Edith could have earned in a whole year.

Soon after Edith's entrance, the maid ushered in another guest; this time it was Harry Case. From that time on things became very interesting, indeed.

Harry Case was a fine, manly looking fellow of twenty-one. He had fin-ished college and was spending a year working in his father's office learning what he could of the business before entering the firm as a partner.

The dinner which followed was perfect in every detail. Edith, completely absorbed in the pleasure of her first really fine dinner party, was unconscious of anything save her own enjoyment. She was simply an attractive young girl, beautiful, as youth is always beautiful, and her lack of selfconsciousness enhanced her charm, but beside Miss Gordon she was as tiny taper compared to an incandescent light. Mrs. French, however, saw that every attention was showered impartially upon her guests and she also seemed to be thoroughly enjoying herself.

When the guests returned to the parlor Miss Gordon seated herself upon a big gray davenport and, patting the seat by her side, said to Edith: "Come, my dear; sit beside me. Let us get acquainted."

Under the bright light which the chandelier threw directly on their faces Edith looked like a pink rosebud, while Miss Gordon, with her touched-up skin and penciled eye-brows, looked decidedly artificial. Harry Case, who had seated himself directly facing the two girls, looked from one to the other at first in surprise and then in growing conviction. Miss Gordon was in her liveliest moodand all went well until Mrs. French was called to the telephone. Then Miss Gordon's wit seemed to vent it self on poor Edith, who was bewildered by the change in the woman's manner. The fifteen minutes which followed were the most uncomfortable that Edith had ever endured. She felt she was being dissected for Harry's benefit, but she endured it all politely. She was, however, glad almost to tears when Mrs. French returned to the room and the maid brought in the card table. The bad quarter of an hour had done its work and left Edith with the joy of the evening dimmed.

At ten Miss Gordon decided it was time for her to go home, and to Mrs. French's offer of her car Miss Gordon shook her head and with an arch look at Harry Case said she preferred to walk. But Harry failed to catch the look and, turning to Edith, he asked her if he might walk home with her.

Thus the party left the house, Miss Gordon laughing merrily and insisting that she had had a most delightful evening, "dear Mrs. French," but with scarcely a good-night to Harry and Edith, who walked away while she was still saying good-by to her host-

As Mrs. French turned from the door and reached to turn off the lights she caught sight of herself in the long mirror over the fireplace and smiled at her reflection. Her little plan had worked very nicely, and Harry's career was safe in the hands of Edith and all she stood for. It had been a daring thing to do, but Harriet French loved her nephew as if he were her own son. She had resolved that he would not become involved in an affair which would hinder or complicate his future. She had been troubled by the growing friendship between Miss Gordon and Harry, for he was at the age where his fancy might be caught by the charm of an older woman. She was sure Miss Gordon was only amusing herself, but to Harry it might be serious enough to spoil his future. Therefore the risk was too great. hence the dinner party.

Mrs. French switched off the lights and ascended the stairs to her room, humming happily to herself.

Force of Environment Superior to Heredity

Take any newborn American youngster into the interior of China and give him over to the exclusive care of a Chinese family, and he will develop flawless Chinese, wear a onene, worship his ancestors, eat with chopsticks; sit on a mat, John B. Watson writes, in Harper's Magazine.

He will learn the Chinese scale of music (very different from our own, since they have a smaller number of notes than we have), develop very different rhythms and accents in music than we have in the West. What has become of his western trait inheritances from his jazz-proficient, pianoplaying mother and from his cubist modernist-in-art father? Gone like the snows of yesteryear.

His behavior, his capabilities, what he will do, will be determined by his family life-by the patterns he finds there, by the accidents of that environment, and by the special emotional fixation of the one or the other of his (adopted) parents. In the light of what we know we can do with the human infant (and undo and spoil) at an early age, we are no longer willing to make accurate ob-servations upon it. Heredity in the sense both of instincts and of luborn traits, dispositions, capabilities, tendencies, constitution must go until other facts are produced to substantiate it.

Napoleon's First Wife

Josephine, the first wife of Napo leon Benaparte, was born in the island of Martinique, a French posses sion in the West Indies. Her first husband was Viscount Beaubarnois, by whom she had two children, Eugene, who became viceroy of Italy, and Hortense, wife of Napoleon's brother and mother of Louis Napoleon or Napoleon III. Napoleon divorced Josephine in 1809 in order that he might marry Maria Louisa, daughter of the emperor of Austria, Jose phine died in 1814.

Tested and Labeled "How old are you?" inquired the isitor of his host's little son.

"That is a difficult question," an swered the young man, removing his spectacles and wiping them reflective ly. "The latest personal survey available shows my psychological age to be twelve, my moral age four, my anatomi cal age seven, and my physiological age six. I suppose, however, that you refer to my chronological age, which is eight. That is so old-fashioned that I seldom think of it any more."-SuIf you are planning to trade in your present can for a new car, remember these facts:

- I When you trade-in your used car for a new car, you are after all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of the new car.
- Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.
- 3 Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.
- The largest allowance is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.
 - 5 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.
 - 6 First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your used car.

"Aren't I" or "Ain't I" George Bernard Shaw is quoted as being out to put an end to the "damnable affectation" of present-day English writers who see an evidence of culture in using "aren't I" instead of "am I not." "Aren't," says the writer quoted, is plural and "I" is singular. You would not say "Are I not right." would you? Then why use the plural form in the contraction. The homely form "ain't" is much more nearly correct, being derived directly from 'amn't," the contraction of "am not."

It is very certain that women of fashion are eagerly turning to these large milans, ballibuntis and crin transparencies, as a relief from the little felts and fabric hats which have for so long a time held sway in the realm of millinery.

As to large black milan shapes, they are too numerous to count, but aside from these there is no lack of diversification in the picturesque huge-brim chapeaux which are playing so conspicuous a part in fashion's midsum-

The vogue of navy blue extends to milady's hat this season, and many of the handsomest wide brim numbers are in this color, thus complementing the frock with which they are worn. Smertly attired women are wearing navy blue milans such as the one pictured to the left in this group. QUITE POPULAR

Becoming More and More Important Factor in Car Industry.

Fifteen milfion automobile campers. will fill the long, long trails from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast this summer, according to estimates compiled for the Companion, from cities bordering the best known transcontinental routes.

Anticipating this peak in the form of summer outings, which has grown like a speeding avalanche in the past few years, automobile and sporting goods manufacturers have met the demands of the tourists with ingenious devices providing the nearest approach to home comforts and towns and cities have so improved the rest camps in their outskirts that the 15,-000,000 wanderers will be able to realize only by the intervening scenery that they have left their own domi-

Under Roof for Night.

Those who do not like the hardships of sleeping in tents will be able to travel over the northern trail from the Atlantic to the Pacific northwest, down the coast to the southwest and back again, without being deprived of the shelter of a roof for the night. This is due to the cotage camp system, which has been developed to such an extent that auto camping does not necessarily have to be camping.

The cottage camp affords a screened and furnished lodging, lacking only cooking utensils, gasoline stove and blankets. Moreover, many of the camps provide playgrounds, laundries, cafeterias, barber shops, and even beauty parlors and soda fountains. Prefer Real Camping.

There are still many, however, who prefer real camping as they go, but even for them there are improved tents with sewed-in floors, compact cooking outfits which even permit of freshly-baked pies and roast fowls, luxurious air mattresses and auto connection lighting systems to smooth out all the little irritations that used to go with the shortest outing.

The tremendous growth in popularity of motor camping is becoming a more and more important factor in the automobile industry.

Cure Rattle of Fenders

With Leather or Rubber Unsubstantial fender irons, in some light cars particularly, when these are made of half round or flat iron fitted in such manner that they overhang considerably from the point of support, are not rigid enough to prevent springing, under the strain of constant road shocks. The result is the valence and the iron slap together with a sound like that of beating a tin can, yet, when the car is stationary and the owner feels the fenders to find this slackness which causes the noise, they usually appear to be perfectly rigid.

A good plan is to force the valance back with a screwdriver and insert a small piece of leather or rubber, such as a slice from an old inner tube. Felt may also be used. Though the fender and valance appear to fit snugly against the supporting iron when the car is stationary, vibration set up when the car is in operation causes the noise and the pad will insulate the noise so that it is not transmitted to other parts.

Use of Automobile Has Spread to Persian Gulf

For years the use of the automobile has been spreading to those outlying districts where progress moves with heavy feet. The latest country to adopt the automobile for general use is Bahrein, an independent sheikdom on a group of islands in the Persian Bahrein has several miles of improved roads, as well as many miles of desert roads which are passable for automobile traffic. In February, 1926, there were 120 cars and two trucks registered with the authorities and this number increased during the year to between 145 and 150 passenger cars and 3 trucks.

Safety Suggestions

for Driving an Auto Drive over to the right as far 9s possible at all times.

If the car's service brakes are functioning properly they will stop it within 50 feet from a speed of 20 miles an hour.

If the street is wet and slippery, allow at least 20 feet between your car and the one ahead, except at low speed.

Never pass a car going in the same direction until you are positive its driver knows your intention.

When driving fast, keep / a firm grip on the steering wheel. A puncture or blowout, otherwise, may cause the car to swerve off the road.

Remember that the inside of the curve belongs to the car coming from the other direction.

Stripping Rubber Tread From Tire Is Made Easy

Most vulcanizing shops occasionally have to strip the rubber tread from an old tire, either to prepare the casing for a retreading job or to use the stripped fabric for repair boots. To facilitate this task, a Wisconsin repairman devised the simple tool shown in the drawing. A length of 34-inch steel shafting was bent to form a crank and holes were drilled through it to accommedate two steel spurs. The crank was mounted to extend from the underside of the work bench. In use, the rubber tread of the tire is first out and a few inches are peeled off by hand so that the loose end can be pierced with the spurs. With the tire standing up under the crank, it is only necessary to turn the crank to remove the tread. If the tread is heavy, the tool is stopped after several turns so that the rubber wrapping can be removed from the shaft and cut away.--Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Oil Costs More

Motorists in the vicinity of Mexico City, situated in the midst of a rich oil area, have to pay nearly twice as much for their fuel as do motorists far from oil fields in the United States. Here, for instance, the cost of fuel has gone as high as 38 cents a gallon. The reason is the crude oil has to be shipped to the United States for refining and then back to Mexico for salè. This incurs heavy freight charges

Work on "Movie" That Audience Doesn't See

The movie-going public, unfamiliar with the making of a moving picture, has no idea of the time and labor required to produce a film that runs an hour or two in a theater, according to Lillian Gish, famous American screen star, who says, in an article in Liberty, "You buy a ticket at the box office, find a seat, and watch a picture for a vie. Then you get your bat and a out. In two hours you have wither ed something which may have taken us eight months and a million dollars to make. "You have seen a woman walk across the screen," continues the actress, "pause at a window, and turn to stare at a man coming through a door. It takes 40 seconds to show you that scene--and it may have taken us 40 hours to get it right. We may have done that one bit of acting a hundred times in rehearsal, and a dozen times before the camera; and that is only one of a thousand episodes in the play."

Drove Hard Bargain

A man tells this story of his college days:

He was accosted on the street one day by a stranger who offered to sell at a bargain a ming which he said he had found in the washroom of a hotel. The ring had a large stone set. The stranger asked $5 for the ring, but after much bickering took 25 cents.

The student put on his new-mark of opulence and went down to the college with the expectation of making an impression, but on arriving, he found others had made similar bargains, paying from 10 cents to $4.

come in and see me. I don't ever wunt for anything," she said proudly, for the Sayers were an old family and Phoebe never forgot it. "Uncle Nate's got plenty, and he's so kind to n:a But I do love company."

Unas Nate looked up at the sky and said: "You'd better hurry home;

there's a shower coming."
Ned realized that Uncle Nate did not wish ≥hoebe to know of a certain financial transaction, in which wear and tear to his barn and kitchen and the loan of dry clothing had been duly and minutely calculated.

They said very little. They had both been shaken out of the groove in which they had been comfortably existing at the beginning of this drive. Ned was no longer a merely amusing grocer's clerk. He was a man who had held her in his arms, who had called her "dear" and had saved her life. As for Ned, there was no longer any need for question. Mary might be still vague about her feelings toward him, but he knew now what she meant to him. He had known it from the moment he came up out of the water with her in his arms. She was the one girl, the only girl for him. Dorothy Selden, and her predecessors, were pale shadows in the long ago. Mary was what he had been searching for, longing for. He knew it now. It was wonderful. It was romance; romance come upon suddenly in the midst of common, every-day life.

"There's mother, waiting," exclaimed Mary, who had been longing to smooth down his hair which had dried thoroughly, but rampantly, in the breeze. "Oh, I do hope she's not anxious."

CHAPTER VIII

Mrs. Johnston was not only anxious, but annoyed, and was prepared to show her annovance. Then she caught sight of Mary's wet hair and strange clothes. Instantly she eliminated from her world everything but Mary, until she had her in her arms and was convinced that she was safe and

Then, and only then did she include Ned in her gaze, and for a moment Ned wished he were invisible. The mother's eyes were like those of a tigress who has recovered her cub and sights the hunter who tried to take it away. They softened, almost instantly, when Mary told her all she owed to Mr. Carter.

The tigress disappeared utterly as Mrs. Johnston hurried Mary into the house, with instructions as to a hot bath and bed. Then she turned to Ned and ordered him home as fast as he could go. He might come tomor-

She held out her hand and thanked him gratefully and sincerely, and yet dismissed him back into the shades of the grocery shop from which he came. Ned drove away with no thought of bitterness in his heart. Mrs. Johnston was absolutely within her rights. Mary was a precious possession. Besides, though Ned did not consciously formulate this thought to himself, it made the game so much more exciting to have opposition. An implacable mother was almost as exhilarating as

This latter thought brought Ned up with a sudden start. It dawned upon him that he was dreaming wildly, with very little foundation for his dream. He knew absolutely nothing about the girl. But when has that fact discouraged a lover?

a rival. -

Claude was at the entrance of the store when Ned drove up. After the first glance he hurried Ned within. Ned noticed with amusement that Claude pursued the same tactics as Mrs. Johnston, ordering Aunt Lyddy to see that Ned had a hot bath immediately, and also mentioning bed. He agreed to the first, but scorned the latter. Later he told his story.

"Jiminy!" Claude exclaimed. "Lucky you were there, and I'm glad it wasn't more serious. Did you see Mrs.

Johnston?"
"Mrs. Johnston? Oh, yes! You couldn't help seeing Mrs. Johnstonif she was around. Awfully fond of Mary. She isn't a bit like Mary— er—Miss Johnston."

"No," said Claude, dryly, "apparently not. You didn't notice anything else did you? Wasn't there a single little thing about this Mrs. Johnston that marked her out from any other pleasant-spoken, red-headed woman you've seen?'

"Her good looks," Ned admitted, blowing a cloud of smoke to the ceiling. "They were extra."
"Oh my G—d! Ned, you are an exasperating youngster." Ned studied Claude's perturbed countenance. Then it slowly dawned upon him that there might be a reason for this excess of feeling. 'Notnot trying to check up your red-headed Polly girl with her, are you?

"And if I am," declared Claude, shaken out of his usual good-humored acceptance of things as they are, "a lot of help I'm getting from you!" "What was your-Polly's name?"

"Mary-Polly-Johnston." Ned whistled. "If it was the daughter—this Mary girl now, I suppose I could get details and like as not she's twice as ordinary as the mother." "Nonsense!" Ned rose to the defense of his lady. "Mary—Miss Johnston, I mean, has the most extraordinary blue eyes."

"Jiminy, Ned Have I got to hear that again? I got blue eyes myself." Ned looked at Claude and gasped. He leaned toward him and said: "They're the same color as Miss Johnston's." Claude Meinotte Dabbs rose, his lips compressed. "Ned, you've had a hard day and I've come darn near losing you, so nothing on earth will make me pick a fight now. But if you want to do me the greatest favortake a nap, and wake up able to say one single sentence straight through without dragging that girl's eyes in." He left the room abruptly. "All the same," Ned told himself as he reached for a book, "their eyes are very much

her. "You are all I have in the world, so you're rather precious to me. You're not to get up. I've had my dinner, and yours is on the tray ready to bring up. "Mother!" Mary lay still and won-never even dreamed you knew how!" "There's lots of undiscovered country about mother, though you've known her all your life, Mary. You'll find it out some day." Mary finished her dinner and when she relinquished the tray, said: "Mother, couldn't we sort over the jewelry tonight?"

Mrs. Johnston agreed and went from the room with the tray. Mary lay back on the pillows and contemplated the celling, a little frown between her brows. If it was not having to sell the lewelry and being poor, what was it that was worrying mother? Surely she was not worrying about this-this Mr Carter?

At the same moment Claude Dabbs still at his desk, also frowning, looked up from his writing as Ned came into the room. "C. M., aren't you rather jumping at conclusions? 'Johnston' is far from being an uncommon name, and 'Mary,' with 'Polly' for short, is far from be ing uncommon either; therefore the combination really tells you nothing."

Claude nodded. "I told myself that, too, at first, but—"
"All the same," Ned continued reluctantly, "I will tell you something I've noticed about Mrs. Johnston. She has a little black mole on the lobe of her ear. Rather fetching, like the dark stone of an earring. And behind the same ear she has a single lock of pure white hair."

never asked me any questions." "All the same, I don't like the way things look," Claude said doggedly.

"There's something behind it. I'm going to be on the safe side." Ned looked at him curiously, and a little uncomfortably. What safe side could there be for a man in C. M.'s position, if his utterly absurd deduction that lovely Mrs. Johnston was his "Polly" had any foundation in

"I'm going to send her back the money," declared Dabbs. "Going to send her back her cursed five hundred and feel that my soul's my own. I scraped and saved that money the first year I was clear of debt, and I've held it all this time just forjust for this chance." He opened a small drawer in his desk, and reached for a roll of bills with a rubber band about them, wrote a few words on a sheet of paper, sealed it with the money in an envelope, directed it, then went to the store door.

Although the store was closed and shuttered, there was a light in its dim recesses. Young John Slater, an assistant, was there "John," called Claude, take this letter up to the White House. You can take the car. I don't care how late you come back, if there's no answer."

Young John grunted assent and disappeared with the note, whistling at the thought of having the car to himself as late as he wished.

On Mary's bed lay two empty jewel cases. Mary sat propped up against the pillows and her mother sat at the foot of the bed. Between them was a heap of glittering things. If Mary said: "Bother that old ring. You don't want to keep that," her mother would say: "Mary, you gave me that ring when you were only twelve. How can I part with it?" In the middle of an animated discussion about an old jade bracelet, the doorbell rang. Mrs. Johnston, after waiting for some one to answer it, suddenly realized that she was the only some one available, and went down stairs. Young John Slater stood waiting impatiently. "Mr. Dabbs, he asked me to give this note into your hands, and if they was any answer to wait."

Mrs. Johnston managed to indicate that he might wait in the hall, and went swiftly into the library, shut the door and held the letter as though it was a deadly explosive. Presently she opened the letter. Five one hundred dollar bilis fell out. Mrs. Johnston picked them up, together with the note which had been folded around the bills. The note began without preamble. "If you are the Polly Johnston who married me in New Brunswick, some twenty years ago, you will know why I am returning the money. I have felt worse than the devil about it for more years than I like to remember. For God's sake don't refuse me the chance to get financially straight. I wan't intrude otherwise, without your permission. If you are not my Polly Johnston, send it back and excuse

"Claude Dabbs." "It's a godsend," she said aloud as she put the money in her desk. She threw the note on the fire, watched it burn and went into the hall. "Tell Mr. Dabbs there is no answer." Young John went out into the night and Mrs. Johnston went up to Mary, arranging her story as she climbed the stairs.

Mary, fingering the jewels, yawned a little. She idly planned several beginnings for the next chapter of her life in Clover Hollow. They were all different, yet each began with the morning's interview with the grocer's clerk. She thought this was odd, but concluded that poverty and the country were narrowing her horizon. She looked up as her mother entered the room.

With a sudden movement of her hand, Mrs. Johnston swept the "for sale" jewels into the box.

"We won't have to bother with them yet awhile. I've had a telegram from New York. We're to go there and negotiate a loan on the land. I want you with me, of course. couldn't leave you here alone. We'll have to take the first train tomorrow It's the 9:30, I think. Will you be feeling up to that, Mary-girl?"

"I feel perfectly all right, Mother It's only a bit sudden, and I can neve care about the city in this weather. But I'll be ready." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

DAVID BRINGS THE ARK TO JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—II Sam. 6:1-19; Ps. 24. GOLDEN TEXT—We shall be sat-isfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple. PRIMARY TOPIC—David Worships

JUNIOR TOPIC-David Worships

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-INTERMEDIATE AND SERVICE TUP-IC—How to Worship God. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—Exalting God in Individual and National Life.

I. David Made King. 1. Over Judah (II Sam. 2:1-14).

Upon the death of Saul and Jonathan, David knew that the time had come for the fulfillment of God's purpose, but he carefully inquired of the Lord as to the proper movement to make. God directed him to Hebron, whereupon the children of Judah anointed him to be their king. 2. Over Israel (II Sam. 5:1-5). After the death of Ishbosheth, the children of Israel came and formed a league with David, anointing film as their king. They assigned as their reasons: ((1) He was their brother (v. 1). This is true of Jesus Christ, who has become our kinsman through the incarpation. (2) He was their leader in war, ven in Saul's time (v. 2).

(3) He was the Lord's choice (v. II. David's Unsuccessful Attempt to Bring Up the Ark (vv. 1-5). This is an example of a wrong way of doing a right thing. That the Ark of the Lord of Hosts, the symbol of God's presence, should be brought to the center of the nation's life was a decision worthy of all praise. David gathered together the representative men of the nation in order that the movement might be a national one. That David was sincere in this measure cannot be doubted, but he was hasty and inconsiderate, for the procedure was an express violation of God's statutes. The dictum that itmatters little what you do, just so you are honest and sincere is one of the devil's blackest lies. III. God Vindicates His Law and Holiness (vv. 6-9). The people were very joyful as they moved on toward Jerusalem with the ark, but suddenly there was a stop to the jubilant voices and music. At some rough place in the road the oxen stumbled and Uzzah, anxious for the precious freight on his cart, reached forth his hand to steady it. This resulted in his being stricken to death, as a man who touches a live electric wire. Ignorance does not make a man immune from the death which is in the touch of the heavily charged electric wire; neither does it in the case of the violation of God's laws. Since the ark was God's dwelling place among men, they needed to know that He was holy.

IV. The Ark of God in the House of Obed-Edom (vv. 10-12). The homes where God is welcomed are always blessed. Obed-Edom was not better personally than Uzzah and David, but he openly received the Lord and properly related himself to Him. What had been death and dread to others was life and blessing to him. This was all because of his attitude toward it. V. The Ark Brought to Jerusalem With Great Joy (vv. 13-19). 1. Sacrifices were offered after going six paces (v. 13).. David made the start and when convinced of God's approval, he made offerings. These were both burnt and neace offerings, typifying the selfdedication of the offerers and their thanksgiving (I Chron. 16:1).

2. David's great joy (vv. 14, 15). The people joined him with great shouting and with the sound of the trumpet.

3. Michal's criticism (v. 16).

Even though David went to excess in his expression of joy, it was wrong in her to criticize, for God seems to have sanctioned David's rebuke of her (v. 23).

4. The grand celebration (vv. 17-19). As a token of his gratitude to God. David generously treated the people. 5. The King of Glory, the Lord Jesus Christ, coming (Ps. 24:7-10). This was not the psalm composed by David for the occasion of bringing up the ark; that was Psalm 105. (See I Chron, 16). It is strange that such a suggestion should have been made. This 24th psalm pictures Christ as the coming and triumphant King. At that time the gates shall open to Him and the King of Glory shall come in

EXTINCTION OF EIDER DUCK BLOCKED BY LAW

Staging a Comeback Under Canadian Protection.

Washington.-Eider ducks, in the shadow of extinction, are doing a comeback, thanks to the protection of the Canadian government, according to the American Nature association. This is the duck that plucks down from her breast to keep her young

Arthur Newton Pack, associate editor of Nature Magazine, informed Vincent Massey, Canadian minister, he had received a telegram fom Howard H. Cleaves of the association at Wolfbay, Que., reporting on his investigation. The telegram from Cleaves says:

Hundreds of them in each of four sanctuaries cited to date. From one hilltop I saw Nesting birds flew up on all sides icebergs Don't Bother Them.

Despite lingering snow banks and passing icebergs, some eiders have hatched. This fine bird is making wonderful recovery from shadow of extinction and with good weather there will be a large increase this

He was right. The magistrate, not above conduct ing a scientific experiment to liven the tedium of the Traffic court, decided that he would give his public a demonstration as to whether a mind

Turkish Dogs Spend

Summer on Boats

Scutari, Turkey.-In Turkish villages along the Bosporus a dog's life is that of a sailor.

When a village becomes "overhounded" with street dogs the village fathers, loath to kill, as the Koran dictates kindness to animals, charter a ferry boat and ship a load of dog derelicts across the straits to some village on the opposite shore. The villagers on the other side ferry them back, adding a quota of their own. The original exporters retaliate, and thus a game of battledore and shuttlecock wages yearly between Europe and Asia.

SHADOWY HAND DISTURBS TOWN

Appears on Wall Near Picture of Dead Man.

Aosta, Italy.-Priests and spiritualists, using respectively exorcisms and mediums, are seeking to probe the mystery of a shadowy hand, which for some weeks now has been disturbing the family peace of a modest workman, Giuseppe Della Villa, who lives here with his wife and four children.

Some months ago, a brother of Della Villa, who lived in the house, died, and a few weeks ago, the family hung up a photographic enlargement of the deceased in the room in which he slept.

The first signs of the psychic phenomenon were noted by Della Villa and his wife one night about ten o'clock. The clearly defined shadow of a hand appeared on the wall close to the photograph, and the fingers opened and closed as if trying to grasp something.

The neighbors were called in, and the phenomenon was repeated in the presence of half a dozen people. The dead hand was shadowed on the wall near the photograph on several other occasions, always at night time, and the parish priest was called in to pronounce an exorcism.

This seems to have produced no effect on the shadowy hand, which continued to show up every other night about bedtime.

Some local spiritualists then interested themselves, and brought a-medium to the house. According to the medium, the hand is a spirit manifestation from the dead brother, who is trying to convey a message to the family. What this message is, the medium does not pretend to know.

Plan to Strengthen

Plane Wings Found

Washington .- Patient work at the oureau of standards is gradually evolv ing a solution for the problem of aluminum corrosion which may greatly increase the utility of aircraft. Airplane wings constructed of 'doped" cloth stretched over wooden frames are fragile things. To the layman it has long seemed that the strength and durability of the wings would be greater if the frames were made of steel or some aluminum al-The possibilities of metal wings, however, have been greatly restricted by the disposition of the complex alloys to corrode and ruin the expensive fabrics even more rapidly than the conditions of operation have worn out the cloth and wooden structures.

The bureau workers, aided by industrial laboratory experts and equipment, have been seeking a solution of the metal difficulties for some time.

They have determined that, if duraluminum, one of the aluminum alloys of sufficient lightness and strength for plane wings, is coated with pure aluminum by a metal spray process, it can stand even salt water exposure for a year without deterioration.

Some experts are hopeful that by adding a corrosion resistant to the material through special treatment of the alloy during preparation it will be possible to produce all-metal aircraft that will be fireproof and durable

But now a movement is on foot to ask for a "reverent and scientific official examination" of the poet's grave and a measurement of his skull.

Boy, Fourteen, Well Satisfied With Trip Abroad.

Brooklyn, N. Y .- Herbert Avram, fourteen-year-old adventurer, who got to Paris on a nickel and a lot of selfreliance, although Colonel Lingbergh needed an airplane and some letters of introduction for the same trip, returned the other day on the La Savole, the ship on which he stowed away in a stateroom. Herbert returned as a third-class passenger. But even then he had the run of the ship, as he was the only one in that class, and had the privileges of cabin passengers. The French line had decided to treat him as a third-class tourist and had billed his father for $175, half fare for the round

Despite the bill, Morris Avram, an inventor of Manhattan, was not at the pier to greet his globe-trotting offspring. At this Herbert was visibly downcast. Herbert admitted that he expected a licking. A friend of the family, Alexander O'Hara, took him home in a taxicab.

Mum Regarding Trip.

Herbert would not discuss the trip. On the eastward passage the boy was a general favorite with the passengers, who raised a purse for him, but he has refused to let any glamor be built up around him. To most ques-tions he answered, "Bunk," although he was not asked about the skyline or American women. He denied that he went to see Lindbergh, saying he went "just for the trip." He did have one regret. He was sorry he had not taken his five-yearold brother along.

"My father expected me to take care of him at home," he said. "If I had taken him along things might have worked out smoother.' Would Not Have Him Jailed.

Edme Vasco, purser of the La Savoie, said the French line did not like tosturn over boys of Herbert's age to the police. The usual passport requirements were waived and he was placed in the custody of his two sisters, Marguerite and Violet, students in Paris, who cared for him until the ship was ready to make the return voyage. And he came back with more clothes than he left, his sisters having outfitted him with a bathrobe, pajamas and two fresh shirts, which he carried in a small black bag. Whether or not he still had his nickel could not be

To Applaud or Not to Applaud Stirs Musicians

London.-To be applauded or not to be applauded. That is the question which is agitating London's music werld today.

There are two hostile camps. One holds that a real masterpiece, such as an opera or a brilliant planoforte selo by Paderewski, should be received with a solemn hush. And the other thinks that approval should be "signified in the usual manner."

So far the loud applauders seem to victorious, if the opinions of such as Sir Thomas Beecham, the conductor, and Sir Landon Ronald, the composer and conductor, can be taken. "I wish people were more demonstrative," said Beecham. "Nowadays, as a rule, we applaud either in the wrong place or not at all. Concert audiences sometimes choose the worst possible moment for their applausebefore the piece has ended, for instance. As long as the applause is in the right place, the more of it the hetter." "It's all nonsense," said Ronald "artists love applause. That's a thing that troubles an artist when he is making a record for the phonograph. He sings into a trumpet-he outs his heart and soul into it-and at the end there is just dead silence. It seems almost unnatural."

One Auto in U.S. for Every Five Citizens

Washington.-The United States has one automobile in operation for each five of its citizens, the automobile division of the Department of Commerce announces, basing its figures on a recent survey.

Statistics for the world as a whole showed 27,650,267 machines in operation at the beginning of the year, or one for each sixty-six of the popula-

In Canada and Hawaii there is one machine to each eleven of population while New Zealand has one to twelve, Australia and Denmark one to seventeen, Great Britain-one to forty-three Argentine one to forty-five, and France one to forty-six.

It was estimated that 95 per cent of all the automobiles operating in the world are of American origin, though a considerable proportion of them were assembled in foreign branches of American factories.

Seek Beetle Parasites

for Planters in Hawaii Honolulu, T. H .- F. C. Hadden of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' association is now on his way to Formosa to collect parasites to control the Japanese beetle. The beetle, which is an epidemic to southern China, is kept in check in Formosa by natural enemies. It is hoped that introduction of the Formosan parasite into Hawaii will help control the pest here,

Auto Plunges 60 Feet, but Is Undamaged

San Francisco.-M. Cordino of San Leandro has an automobile that has survived theft, a plunge over a 60-foot cliff and hanging. It still runs on its own power. The car was stolen recently and found later suspended from the branches of a cvpress tree 60 feet below the Lake Chabot road. A garage crew hauled it to the highway with block and tackle, cranked it and drove it back to San Leandro.

BANDIT WAS WET. BUT KNEW HIS JOB

Police Take Victim Back to His Spare Pants.

Chicago.-On the face of it the mere fact that it rained copiously the night before is no reason why Anton Schletler should have ridden home in a patrol wagon, yet Anton himself admits that the sequence of facts which won him the free transportation was logical enough, albeit outrageous. Having called on a young woman, he was putting his sedan in the garage at his home, 1924 North Lowell avenue, when the bandit appeared. The bandit was all wet, which considering the weather, was excusable. "Get in the car," he ordered, dis-

laying a gun. "What have I done?" queried Anton, "that you should take me for a ride?"

"I'm not taking you for a ride," vas told; "you're taking me." With a gun in his ribs, Anton enlashed over to 4309 Drummond place, that shuffling ghost, jocularly called "old Jeffries," is no longer there. "My feet are wet," the robber told him, plaintively. "So are my pants." "Am I supposed to cry?" queried

"That's up to you," said the gentleman with the gun. "Gimme yours." Anton vielded trousers, shoes and $19. The robber gave him back his watch, then forced him from the car. "Here," said the bandit, tossing him of 500 B. C. Found Washington.-While Chinese armies are engaged in civil warfare with modern weapons, American archeologists have brought to light two Chinese war chariots, two thousand five hundred years old.

The chariots, which were excavated by Smithsonian institution scientists near Cheng Chow, Honan province, indicate that the ancient Chinese civilization antedated the western civilization in the use of wheeled vehicles. The Chinese charlots, the archeolo gists assert, date back to 500 B. Home of John Wesley Bought by Wesleyans

Epworth vicarage, home of John Wesley, founder of Mcthodism, b about to pass into the hands of the Wesleyan church. It has been an Anglican rectory all these years, as it was in the days when the Wesley brothers, their father, but above all the noble figure of their mother, Suzanne, lived there. It had fallen into dilapidation and the rector appealed for help. Naturally the Methodists came forward and even proposed to buy the historic place. The broad sympathy that has marked inter-Projestant relations since the Lambeth conference in England was also in evidence at the conferences that led to the purchase. There was a time, not so far distant, when harsh worth might have fallen. It will no doubt become a place of grateful pilgrimage to tens of thousands of Wesley's fellow men. But the old ghost that Judge Stack Allows No Trifling.

Judge A. M. Stack, who held court at Jefferson, Ashe county, the past week expressed his disapproval of divorces in general in general in strong term and in two cases refused to release the plaintiffs, men in both instances, from the marital bond, even going to far as to tear up one of the judgments that he had already signed.

. In case of George Ray vs. Sallie Ray, when the plaintiff admitted that he had not fully supported and maintained the children born of the union since the separation, Judge Stack ordered a juror withdrawn and a mistrial entered.

In the case of Ed Wilcox vs Fay Wilcox after Spencer Greer had testified to improper relations with the defendant, the judge at once ordered Greer into the custody of the sheriff and that he give bond for appearance at the next term of the court to answer a charge of fornication and adultery.

Later, when the she sheriff reported to the court that Green had escaped and that Wilcox had aided N. C. on Monday the 5th day of him. Judge Stack called for the September 1927, at 12 00 o'closk M.. Affairs in Wilkes county seem to be in somewhat of a mess. From this distance it seems that everybody is not honest in the good old with a varied program. "State of Wilkes."

Many of our friends brought, us a cart wheel or frog skin Thursday, for which they have our thanks. Those who failed to get here for the picnic are invited to come to court and to the fair with their lifesavers in their pockets.

The big Davie county fair will be held in this city on September 20- smaller than for several years past, 21-22. The various committees are as the weather was not conducive busy getting up the premiums and to ice cold drinks, cream. etc. putting everything in shape for Davie's first fair. Everybody in the county should co-operate to make this fair a big success.

There is too much gambling going on at the picnics these days. Time was when such things would not have been tolerated Some seem to think that it is necessary to have these games of chance to get the crowds to come out We be lieve the crowds would be as large and the proceeds larger if the midway attractions were cut out.

The Record would be glad to see Erank Lowden nominated for president at the Republican National Convention next year, since Mr. Coolidge doesn't choose to run again. We were for Lowden in 1020, but he failed to get the nomination. Among those who would be tickled to get the nomination are Hoover, Lowden, Longworth and a dozen others.

It is said that there were more arrests made Thursday than at a picnic in many years. A good deal of whiskey was in evidence and the arrests were all for drunkenness. The officers, both county, town and Federal were on their jobs during the day and evening. It was thought at one time that there might not be room in the jail to accomodate the fast growing boozers, but the friends of the law-beakers. were also on their jobs and bonded the boys out about as fast as they were put in.

Dabbs demanded. Ned reached for the receiver.

he did so, Claude, with his usual delicacy, left the room.

Mary Johnston was on the wire, Ned, thrilled, heard her voice telling him that Mrs. Pulsifer had the key of the house and was to close it, but would he see that little Phoebe Sayer received the borrowed gar-ments back safely? Would he also tell Phoebe that she was sending her some books as a little remembrance? As for Mr. Carter himself, she would never, never forget all he had done for her, and she was so sorry she could not see him again. They were sailing in a few days. "Sailing? Where?"

"I'm not quite sure, but think England first. Mother decided suddenly." "But you can't go-yet. I beg pardon, Miss Johnston, but I wanted to grateful, too."

At the other end of the line the receiver was hung up. Claude came in and found Ned with his hand still on the telephone receiver, his face a study in perplexity. "What's up?" "They're going abroad, and soon. We've got to start things, right now. How soon can you get ready?"

"Ned!" Claude gasped. "Abroad! I hadn't really planned anything like Why, by Jiminy, Ned, I've that! never traveled farther than New York.

This was so exactly Ned's state of mind that he found himself glaring at C. M., as at a rival, and with difficulty refrained from retorting, "So do I." Fortunately his brain told him that this was no time to tell Mary's possible father, if indeed that was Claude's proud position, his honorable intentions. "Then you'd better come out into the world-with me, and pursue Mrs. Polly Johnston."

"I'm coming," Claude told him. "You go to New York tomorrow. Ned. and if we can't get the same steamer

"I have money."
"Yeh, but you're coming with me, and we're going to need plenty, especially if you're-" Claude stopped abruptly and finished rather lamely, traveling with me."

Ned wondered what was on his mind. He was amazed at this Claude

Claude gave him a clue almost im-"Are you 'Carter' or nediateły. 'Rangely' this trip?"

Ned slid to his feet and faced him, but Claude stopped him before he could speak. "You see, Ned, Miss Selden telephoned the station a day or so ago and sent a telegram to your father. It said that his son was living here under the name of 'Carter.' Guess the girl didn't realize she was on a party wire and what that means in the country." Ned stopped him. "You mean to my you knew?"

You see, I do know Loren Rangeley. and of all the old-well, never mind and excuse me, Ned, for he's your father, and of course that's one thing to his credit. All I mean to say is if there's two sides to any question and Loren Rangeley's on one, let me get on the other."

"You know my father!" "Only just in a business way." This helped Ned very little. What could the great Loren Rangeley have to do with a country grocer? Sus-

To his surprise, Claude Dabb-looked positively confused. "You're dead right, Ned, I haven't been entire ly open with you either, but that can walt. All you have to tell me is whether you'll be 'Carter' or 'Range ley' on this trip." Ned hesitated. "I'd rather be 'Carter,' but we're apt to meet people whi know me as Rangeley, so Carter' o¥."

"Best both of us sail under our true colors from now on and just be our natural, brutal selves. Well, get un der way, Ned, and I'll start things here. Jiminy! Polly won't leave me gasping this time, though it never would have occurred to me to follow but for you." Mary Johnston had departed from

Clover Hollow with the expectation of returning on the afternoon train or the next morning at the latest. They went directly to the Plaza where her mother left Mary and took her own way to the lawyer's office At least that was the version Mary was allowed to believe.

As a matter of fact, Mrs. Johnston went directly to Loren Rangeley's bank, was ushered at once into the president's private office and held a long consultation. At the end she had negotiated a loan on the land; so that much of her version was true She had also told Mr. Rangeley that she wished to get away on the first steamer to Europe, where she could live better and cheaper than she could here. It would be better to stay there until her financial position became se cure, or at least improyed, and it would serve to take Mary away from an undesirable suitor.

Loren Rangeley listened, gravely sympathetic. His quick, cold eyes noted that Mrs. Johnston had lost none of her charm for him: that she wore very well indeed. The loan he was making was amply secured. Indeed, there was every chance of the land experiencing a boom. He was in possession of facts that made this almost a surety, but he did not tell her so. It suited his purpose that while he waited and made up his own mind, she should not be in a position to know that financially she was quite

He agreed with her that it would be better to go abroad with the girl. It is to be noted that even with this lead, and the fact that Mrs. Johnston had been staying in the town Dorothy Selden had wired from, he asked no questions concerning his son. He could and did, by the mere summoning of a private secretary, secure for Mrs. Johnston accommodation on a steamer. "When do you wish to sail?" Rangeley asked.

"Saturday," said Mrs. Johnston coolly. Somehow she did not like his smiling scrutiny any better this time than she had the last. It would be better to escape before he brought the battery of his olderly charms to bear upon her. In her present financial condition it might be difficult to hold him off successfully. Flight, now, might be as useful in her case as in Mary's.

Mr. Rangeley was midlly surprised at this sudden action, but on the whole pleased. He meant to go abroad this summer himself. Nothing like promptness in action. Mary's suitor must be indeed objectionable to cause Irs. Johnston to take such drastic measures.

Mrs. Johnston left, with the money and the steamer reservations. At the last moment Mr. Rangeley told her that business might compel him to cross over, possibly within a few days, but Polly Johnston refused to borrow trouble. She took a cab back to the Plaza to break the news to Mary.

Mary listened without speaking, and with wide, homesick eyes. It was incredible! What was there to hold Mary in this country?

Mrs. Johnston had invented the story about the suitor to suit her own purposes, without really visualizing Ned in the background to give her fib color. Had she unconsciously told the truth? It could not be possible that her wonderful Mary had any real feeling about the grocer's clerk. If she had, then thank the Lord they were going! But she would let Mary infer that it was to escape Loren Rangeley. His name once mentioned, Mary made no protest.

It was only when they were dressed for dinner, and their guests had been announced, that Polly ventured to tell the girl the sailing date was Saturray.

Mary said nothing, but under dark brows her blue eyes looked the question that her mother knew must sooner or later be answered.

Insects in Cold Weather

While the majority of insects disappear during cold weather, some are known to live and thrive at temperatures which kill most of their kind in a few minutes. About 900 different insects have been found living on or in the snaw. About twenty-five spe cies are known to come out on the snow in Europe and America. Some of these are so small that they are never seen except in winter, and they are so little known that they have no popular name. It is not known how, or on what they live.

Lesson for August 21 GOD'S PROMISE TO DAVID

LESSON TEXT-I Chron., chapter 17. GOLDEN TEXT-Thy throne, O God, s forever and ever a sceptre of right-ousness as the sceptre of thy king-

PRIMARY TOPIC-God's Promise to David. JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Rewarded INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-

IC-How God Gives Us the Better Things.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-God's Great Promises.

1. David Desires to Build a House for God (vv. 1, 2). Having subdued all his enemies, David sat down in his new and beautiful house to meditate. While thus musing, he is led to see the incongruity of dwelling in a house of cedar while the Lord's place was so common A truly devout soul cannot be content to dwell in personal ease and luxury while the Lord's work is neglected. David's proposition met with Nathan's approval, but the next day he came with definite instructions from the Lord regarding it.

II. David's Desire Denied (TV. 3-8). While fully appreciating David's motive, the Lord disapproved his plan. The rejection of his plan was not because of his nonappreciation of David, for He had taken him from the lowest walks of life and elevated him to the highest place among men. He assured him also that the cause would not suffer because of this change of plan. Two reasons may be assigned for God's prohibition of David's plan. 1. David was a man of war (I Chron, 22:8; 28:3). Since the kingdom of God is to be a peaceful kingdom, it was not fitting that a man of war should build the capital city. This was not a re-proach of David for being a man of war. The enemies of the Lord must of necessity be put down. No peace or rest could be to God's people till the enemies were subdued. It showed, rather, that David had done his work and that the time had now come for another to take it up.

2. The time and circumstances were not fully ripe. God's house should be a great house. therefore it would require a man's best energies to build it. treasury was no doubt much depleted by the wars. Since much money would be required, ample time was necessary to enable the people to accumulate funds.

III. The Lord Pledged Himself to Do More Than David Proposed (VV. 9-15).

1. David was to have a great name

David's name has gone down in history as one of the great men of the earth. It was a long way from herding his father's sheep to the throne of this great nation.

2. Israel to be established in a cen-moved away, nor to be wasted by the children of wickedness. 3. He was to enjoy God's continued favor and help (v. 10). All his enemies were to be subdued. 4. Perpetuation of the kingdom in David's line (vv. 11-14).

(1) "Build thee a house." This means a granting unto him of a posterity, a family line. David proposed to build a temple as a place in which to worship God. God purposed to establish the kingdom in David's line. This was to be perpetuated in David's seed after him.

(2) "Establish his throne" (v. 12). This means the placing of him in a position of royal authority.

(3) The kingdom was to petual (vv. 13, 14). He was to be settled in his kingdom forever. Disobedience to God would be visited with chastisement (II Sam. 7:15), but the covenants were not to be abrogated. Chastisement has followed, but David's seed is destined to occupy the throne (Luke 1:31-33; Acts 15:14-17). IV. David's Worship (vv. 16-27). In his actual worship, note: 1. His humility (vv. 16-18). Those who really worship God ap-oroach Him with great humility. 2. His praise (vv. 19, 20). Out of a heart of gratitude he praised God for His faithfulness and grace. 3. His gratitude (vv. 21, 22). He had an appreciation of God's fidelity and expressed his gratitude to Him for it. 4. His petition (vv. 23-27). All praise and expressions of gratitude but lead up to the offering of definite petitions to God.

These statements were taken from two enthuslastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. BRAVES BULLETS AND FOILS BREAK

Prison Telephone Operator Proves Real Heroine.

Baltimore, Md.—Caught almost in the line of fire between a guard and two convicts attempting to escape from the Maryland state prison here the other day, Miss Mary Sullivan, the prison telephone operator, ran to a window and called a taxi driver to notify the warden in his home adjoining the prison. She also sent out an alarm to police headquarters and in a few minutes scores of policemen were at the prison.

The convicts were Charles P. Carey, serving a life sentence for the part he played in the killing of William Norris, a contractor, and Benjamin F. Spragins, serving a ten-year sentence

Alfred Walker, a guard, was on duty in the prison lobby when the two convicts asked for admittance. Walker carried the key to the street door. Fifteen or twenty visitors were waiting in the lobby to see prisoners. Saying they had come for packages left for them by friends, Carey and Spragins were admitted.

No sooner were they inside than Spragins opened fire on Walker. One of the several bullets fired entered near his heart, fatally wounding him. He fell and Carey seized his revolver and the key to the street door.

While Miss Sullivan was shouting her warning from the window Charles Stortz, a guard in an adjoining room, heard the shots. Leaping to a table and peering over a glass partition, he saw Walker fall. Spragins saw him looking and cried:

"Go get him, Carey."
Carey started to dash around the partition and Stortz opened fire.
Spragins fell first. Carey continued shooting after he was down.

Patrick Brady, the warden, had just arrived from Lockport, Ill., where he and Miss Lily Howe, daughter of Mrs. Michael Colohan of Chicago, were married a few days ago. They figured in a double elopement, the other couple being Michael Halley and Miss Nana Howe, sister of Mrs. Brady. They were entertaining guests in honor of their wedding when the warden was apprised of the break.

Bad Man Now Vows at Frankfort, Ky.—Hereafter to live in peace "Devil John" Wright, eighty-six years old and with ten notches in his ancient single-action six-shooter, has settled down at the western base of the Cumberland mountains. "Devil John" is not lonely in his declining years, for he has been married three times and he has 30 living children. "Devil John" bears the scars of many bullets, the result of gun battles with "bad men" in the days following the Civil war. He is blind in the left eye, the result of a wound suffered in a feud in Kentucky.

A veteran of the Civil war, the aged man obtained his gun from the equipment of a dead southern soldier. He has killed ten men with it, but always in self-defense, he explains. Beside, he has fought Indians in the West. For many years he made a living by driving herds of mules from Kentucky to Florida.

"Devil John" never has been convicted of a crime, a fact which, he insists, proves him an honest fighter. He wants to die suddenly, he says, so no one will have to bother nursing him. At the same time, though, he slyly admits he would like very much to live to be a hundred years old.

Sailors Battle Escaped

Python on Modern Ark

New York.—A story of a battle with a sixteen-foot python that escaped from its crate and started roaming about the sailors' quarters of the Isthmian line freighter Steel Navigator, was told when the vessel docked here after a voyage from Singapore and the Straits Settlement.

The python was first discovered when a sailor kicked it in belief that it was a rope. The snake then invaded several bunks which the men hastily evacuated. It finally was lassed after a fifteen-minute struggle and returned to its crafe.

and returned to its crate.

The Steel Navigator brought fifteen other pythons, ranging from twelve to twenty-eight feet in length, a baby elephant, five tigers, two black panthers, six sun bears and a golden cat.

NOTORIOUS WOLF IS KILLED IN OREGON

Destroyed Horses and Cattle for 12 Years.

, Portland, Ore.—The great white wolf of Sycan marsh in southern Oregon has been killed and stockmen are breathing easier.

This animal has been feared and hated for 12 years and none was able to trap or shoot it until Elmer Williams, biological survey hunter and trapper, went out after it. Stockmen estimate that the creature took toll of their cattle, horses and sheep to the extent of $15,000, and about it has grown a collection of stories almost as "tall" as those about Paul Bunyan, the great western logger.

Williams' message to his Portland chief, Stanley Jewett, head of the predatory animal work of the biological survey in Oregon, was brief and to the point. It said:

"Sycan wolf killed today. Whitemale."

White Wolf Was Notorious.

Those few words were sufficient because the white wolf of Sycan marsh was the most notorious animal Oregon has ever known. Its great prowess as a stock killer and the fact that it was white in color, made it known all over the Northwest.

Williams included the word "white" in his message because he had had many arguments with Jewett over the color. Jewett had always scouted the idea that it was white. He declared that it was probably light in color and the residents had embellished their stories by calling it white.

Only three times have white wolves been known in the West. One was killed in Arizona a number of years ago by a forest ranger. Another was found over in Wyoming. The Sycan wolf is the third.

This animal was larger than the ordinary timber wolf. His tracks were about the same size as those of a big cougar. During his whole career he hunted alone except for the coyotes that skulked in his rear to feast upon his kill.

He ranged over a territory extending 30 miles in every direction from the Sycan marsh, his home. One night he would kill a horse, steer or sheep in one place and his baying, like that of a hound, would be heard 30 miles away the next night.

The animal scorned - baited and scented traps of all kinds. And no deadfall ow pit could get him until Williams got on the trail. Williams went to work first in 1925. He spent a number of periods of several weeks each trying to trap the animal.

Bobcats Beat Wolf to Trap.
The wolf used to cross a footlog over the Sycan river every day or so in his rounds and Williams tried many times to trap him there. But each time the bobcats beat the wolf to the trap. Then a freshet carried the log away and that chance was gene.

The biological survey stood a lot of joshing over its failure to catch the wolf. Jewett said it was the only animal his hunters had been unable to get rid of in a "reasonable length of time"

Now that the white wolf is gone, the natives of scuthern Oregon are almost sorry. He was a proof that the old West was not quite gone, and he stirred their romantic fancy. However, their stories about him will be told over and over and will grow "talier" with the retelling.

Among them is the uncertainty whether eggs placed in incubators will produce chickens, ducklings or alligators.

MISSOURI RIVER IS BOON TO POOR

High Water Brings Up Plenty of Firewood.

Sloux Falls, S. D.—Although the Missouri river, during perieds of high water, is famous for the speed with which it can "eat up" farms and other lands along its course, it is this summer doing an act of kindness for some of the poor people living in towns along that section of the river which passes, through Scuth Dakota.

These people are being furnished by the big river with an abundance of fuel for next winter, and this, in the form of driftwood, is being retrieved from the swollen waters of the stream and carefully conserved for the time when South Dakota will have freezing temperature next winter.

Old river men along the "Big Muddy" say that not for years has the river brought down so much driftwood as during the present period of high water. The high water is due to the melting of unusually heavy snows in the mountains of Montana, at the head waters of the river.

The Missouri river has this summer inundated much bottomland, has gone through stands of timber on the upper stretches of the stream, and has collected a heavy toll of logs, lumber and brush and other material suitable for firewood. Some of the logs which float near the shore and are drawn to the bank by the watchers along the river are frequently from twenty-five to thirty feet long, and when cut up make a considerable amount of firewood.

When pulled from the river the logs and other material, including tree stumps, are water soaked, but when sawed and split and placed in small piles they soon dry out and make first-class fuel first-class fuel.

Day after day, at the present time, the swollen waters of the river are bringing down logs, gnarled stumps, lumber, railroad ties, and pieces of wood, and as these come near the shore at the various towns along the river they are pulled out and piled up and preserved for the time of need next winter.

Montanans Plan to Reopen Lewis and Clark Cavern

Butte, Mont.—Led by the Whitehall Chamber of Commerce, a movement is under way to obtain federal appropriations for reopening the Lewis and Clark cavern.

This cave, with its stalactite and stalagmite formations, about 50 miles east of Butte, and 1,200 feet above the current of the Jefferson eanyon, was accidentally discovered in 1908 by hunters, and D. A. Morrison of Whitehall filed on the site. He installed stairways to a depth of more than 300 feet, and provided an entrance lower down the hill. Later when the hearing on patent for the ground came up it was discovered that the site was on the Northern Pacific railroad grant and the corporation turned it back to the government.

It is proposed to extend a branch of the Yellowstone trail to a point near the cavern, and install a tourist camp for those who wish to visit the cave.

Birth Rate Drops

Berlin.—There appears to be no lower limit to the descending birth rate of European cities short of absolute zero, according to studies made by Dr. Warren S. Thompson of the Scripps Foundation for Population

Problems.

Berlin leads the procession with only 11.7 births per thousand people in 1925, which exceeded only slightly the death rate of 11.4, but the figures available for 1926 indicate that the death rate may have exceeded the birth rate during the last year.

As a group the large cities of Germany had a birth rate of only 14.1 in 1926 and the report for the first month of 1927 indicates that for this year it will be even lower.

Hurt Muscle Preaching;

San Francisco.—John Matthews,
Presbyterian preacher of Glendale,
Calif., "overpreached" while delivering a sermon recently, and as a result has applied to the state industrial accident commission for compensation for injury.

Mr. Matthews declared that he strained a muscle while gesticulating in the delivery of a sermon, necessitating an operation. He seeks rembursement for medical expenses and loss of time during his recuperation.

His application is the first made by a church employee since the commission informed such workers a year ago that they were eligible for compensation in case of accident.

"10 O'CLOCK LINE" FOUND IN INDIANA

Indians Insisted on Survey From Shadow of Sun.

Indianapolis.—When tourists roaming through southwestern Indiana see signs bearing the words, "Ten O'clock Line," it does not signify that the curfew zone of Toonerville has been pushed out into the countryside. It means simply that 110 years ago the Indians were sure the sun would not fool them whereas the white man might.

When pioneer surveyors staked out the territory acquired through the Harrison purchase, the Indians insisted that the boundary lines be placed by projecting the shadow of the sun and a staff at ten o'clock in the morning. The white man might manipulate a rod and compass, but never the sun. The land acquired was bounded by lines drawn from what now are Browntown to Orleans, to Merom, to Raccoon creek in Park county.

As a consequence of the aborigines' suspicion, the boundary of this colonial acquisition of what now is coal and and fertile river bottom cornfields came to be known as the "Ten O'clock Line."

Into the chronicles of contemporary events are crowded many picturesque occurrences and historical conclusions, such as are found in anonymous documents pertaining to early Hoosier sur-

"It is but a flight of the imagination," says one of these pamphlets belonging to Col. Richard Lieber of the state department of conservation, "to conclude that the "Ten O'clock Line' made William Henry Harrison President of the United States."

Tecumseh Opposed Cession.

This reasoning was derived from knowledge of Tecumseh's methods with his Indian warriors. The chief insisted that land was held in common by all Indians and that no individual tribe nor small confederation had the power to cede tracts of any size to the colonists without the consent of neighboring tribes.

Acquisition of the Harrison purchase, 2,300,000 acres, obtained through a treaty reached at Fort Wayne, December 30, 1809, was the last straw to this sturdy defender of Indian rights. After continual bickering, of which the "Ten O'clock Line" episode was a memorable incident, Tecumseh incited the Indians to resist the pioneering Virginians, and the result was the Battle of Tippecanoe. From this came the successful political battle cry of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too."

Aristocratic Belfast

Families Leave Homes
Belfast.—How the old aristocratic families are being driven from their historic ancestral holdings in Ulster under the pressure of economic circumstances was illustrated in the sale of the furnishings and buildings or Northland house, Dungannan, County Tyrone, the seat of the earl of Ranfurly, and Mulroy house, Milford,

County Donegal, the seat of the earl of Leitrim.

The earl of Ranfurly is a direct descendánt of William Penn, the Quaker founder of Pennsylvania. Another celebrated kinsman was. John Knox, the Scottish reformer. The earl's name is John Mark Knox.

The earl of Lietrim's grandfather was murdered 50 years ago in the dark days of the Land league.

Telephones Are Banned

By English Landlord
London.—Has a landierd the right to prevent his tenants from having telephones? This unexpected question has been brought to a showndown here
as a result of a challenge flung down by Mrs. Catherine Kent, a Kensington property owner, who has ordered the telephones disconnected in the block of apartments whereof she is landlord.

The instructions have been acted on by the telephone authorities, who point out that their agreement provides that permission by the owner must be obtained for provision of maintenance of the circuit. The tenants who claim the telephone is essential to their business are taking legal advice with a view to a restoration of facilities.

Take Seal Census

in Pacific Waters
San Francisco.—Fate of the hair seal and sea lion along the California coast depends on a census now being taken.

If, as the fishermen contend, the animals are increasing rapidly, the state fish and game commission may permit them to be slain in such numbers as will hold their population stationary. Many fishermen regard these sea animals as rivals.

Deputy Paur Bonnot is supervising the investigation, which will take two years. At the outset he has reported finding several rookeries not previously recorded. His observations will cover coastal waters from Mexico to Oregon, the latter state already, having declared the sea lion a menace to fishing and employed a hunter to exterminate the animal.

A charming chiffon frock for afteroon wear is worn by Avonne Taylor, the motion-picture player. It is of white chiffon printed in a futuristic striped pattern in all the shades of red. Panels fall loose from the neck to the hip-line front and back. A girdle of self-material encircles the hips. With this frock, Miss Taylor wears a large, black straw hat and black satin slippers.

Tucking Is Prominent

on Coats and Dresses

Tucking may be one of the oldest devices of the dressmakers and tailrs to ornament a coat or a frock without the use of extraneous ornament, but the sun-ray tuck is spoken of as something new and the clever use of it characterizes many of the products of the dressmakers' establishments this season. One of the most usual modes of using this device is to give decoration to the side of the skirt at the hips, at the same time disposing of the fullnees caused by an upward draping of the skirt at one side. There are groups of sun-ray tucks at one shoulder of some of the frocks and sometimes there are sun-the rounded neckline of a bodice. Milliners still find opportunity for the use of much ribbon, not only in trimming and banding hats, but for the entire construction of small hats. There are shaded ribbons about an inch wide-sometimes a little widerthat range from a deep shade on one side to a light shade on the other and these are used in a circular fashion over light canvas frames to make lit tle hats that are light and wearable for less formal occasions.

ray tucks symmetrically arranged at

Plaited skirts are still in favor, and are chosen to wear with overblouses or cardigans for sports and informal wear. Many of them are made of lightweight checked and striped woolen materials and are usually made without a hem—the line of the selvedge giving a suitable lower edge to the skirt. Usually the plaits are small but so well pressed into the material as to be very nearly permanent-as permanent at least as most permanent hair waves. Sometimes this plaited material is mounted on a belt directly, but to avoid bulkiness around the hips the best plan is to mount the plaited material on a yoke some five or six inches deep of silk which is, of course, hidden beneath the lower edge of the overblouse or cardigan. When the tuck-in blouse is used, this yoke is not to be considered, but the tuck-in blouse is best worn with a skirt of a shaped sortsince a certain smoothness about the hips is desirable.

Bustles, Back Drapery, and Princess Silhouette

Several important dressmaking houses have been added lately to the Paris list of those who sponsor the new princess line. There is a noticeable tendency among the gowns one sees at the Ritz, at Ciro's and the most fashionable night clubs, to fit closer to a normal waistline. The oldfashioned princess line is not yet es tablished. But the idea is undeniably interesting the Parisian designers increasingly.

One of the variations of the fitted line is drapery at the back. Redfern carries this idea to a modified bustle effect. Talbot also shows back drapery, but in less exaggerated form.

and interesting design. Some of the prettiest new frocks are banded at the neck and the cuffs with %-inch bands of heavy gold link chain. The heavy gold contrasts effectively with the dark blue tucked georgette of the dress.

WHY JEAN WAS BLUE

(@ by D. J. Walsh.)

FEAN LEMAN was blue as indigo. As a matter of fact, she was jealous - hopelessly, heart-breakingly jealous. She stood at the ranch house window, watching Perry ride off with Phyllis Sharmon, the babyfaced eastern girl, who had arrived to be "Pa" Leman's paying guest for a month. Phyllis was clad absurdly in a smartly tailored broadcloth habit and was riding Jean's own special pony. Moreover Jean had not been consulted in the matter, so it was simply adding insult to injury. Phyllis was or pretended to be, a novice at riding, and seemed to require considerable instruction from her escort. Perry had been Pa Leman's right hand man at the ranch for six months now, and had spent most of his spare hours during that time with Jean. And yet he appeared to Jean's hurt and bewildered eyes to be absolutely delighted with his new role of guide and instructor to the pertly attractive Jean's eyes grew misty with tears and her heart felt nitifully heavy as she thought of the difference between her present depression and her excited happiness just twenty-four hours earlier. The evening before she had gone with Perry, as she had gone dozens of times, to see that the horses were safe for the night. Just before they returned to the house Jean had stumbled and was suddenly held tight in Perry's strong arms. The very remembrance of the kiss that followed made Jean's heart beat faster even now. It was her first kiss, and though no words had been spoken, Jean had lain awake far into the night, thrilled with vision of a wedding and a possible honeymoon in that far visionary city of New York. And now, this-Perry had gone to meet the eastern girl before Jean was up that morning and had been with her constantly ever since. He had no right to take it for granted that Jean's pony should be the one for Phyllis Sharmon to ride. She wished the girl had staved in the East, where she belonged.

Jean went to bed before the riders returned. Perry's laugh and a giggle from Phyllis floated up to her just as she was dropping off to sleep and kept her miserably awake for hours. Perry stopped her next morning to

"Not angry, are you, Jean?" And such a lump came into Jean's throat that she was helpless to answer and turned back to hide her tears. Then Phyllis claimed his attention, and Jean didn't see him alone all day.

And so it went on for days, until Jean was just an aching bit of hopeless misery. Wanting desperately to conceal her unhappiness from Perry, vet utterly unable to be her old natural self, she answered him so shortly when he did speak to her that he soon avoided her altogether. Sometimes she fancied she saw a hurt, questioning look in his eyes, but always became convinced later that it must have been her imagination. Certainly he seemed to get along famously with Phyllis, and Jean's resentment toward the other girl grew into a bitterness that was more than dislike.

One evening Perry had ridden over to a neighboring ranch on some business for Pa Leman. Jean was just feeling a grim satisfaction in the thought that at least Phyllis couldn't be with him, when the eastern girl came in, dressed for riding. She spoke to Jean, coolly patronizing.

"Saddle my pony, will you, Jean. I'm going to ride over to meet Perry. The rage that suddenly surged into Jean's heart frightened her. She went out of the house to the stable. She hated the pretty eastern girl with her plucked eyebrows and her toored lips-what right had she to steal away Jean's whole life's happiness? "My pony," she said. It was Jean's pony. Phyllis had appropriated the pony as coolly as she had the man, Jean's eyes fell on the little horse that Pa Leman had recently brought home for Perry to break in. It was almost a counterpart in size and color of Jean's own pony. He was becoming accustomed to the saddle, but Pa Leman had forbidden Jean to ride him. Jean's lips were set in a determined line, and her eyes gleamed dangerously. Phyllis would never know the difference between the two ponies in the dusky light of approaching darkness. Let the patronizing little eastern heartbreaker ride the forbidden pony and test the value of the riding lessons that Perry had given her. She saddled the horse without much difficulty and led him with beating heart to the house, where she helped Phyllis to mount and stood watching her ride off. She was all right while the pony was walking, but let her try to keep her seat once the horse broke into gallop.

Then when the waves of anger which had enveloped her had subsided Jean was simply overwhelmed with remorse. She thought she had suffered before, but her former misery was nothing compared to the despair that filled her heart as a succession of pictured disasters passed before her mental vision. How could she have been so utterly insane? Phyllis would be killed and Jean would be responsible. Should she saddle her own pony and ride after her? But that would be a confession. There was nothing else she could do. It was quite dark | actually need."

now and she stood in the doorway. straining her eyes to see across the sage brush, just waiting and waiting -for what, she hardly dared to think.

When, at last, she heard some one riding toward the house she turned cold with apprehension. It was Perry -Perry, holding a limp figure on the saddle before him! Jean could scarce ly force herself to walk down the steps to meet him as he came toward her with Phyllis in his arms. Her voice was faint with terror-

"Oh, Perry! She's not-killed?" Perry shook his head and pushed past her into the house. Jean followed him up the stairs and watched in terrified silence while he laid the unconscious girl on the bed. Then Perry dashed off for the nearest doctor and Jean sat beside Phyllis in an agony of suspense, sending out little wordless prayers for the girl's recovery. It was terrible to think that, loving Perry as she did, she was per haps responsible for the wrecking of his happiness. How could she ever atone?

Perry and the doctor came at last. The minutes dragged into hours while Jean and Perry waited outside the bedroom door. Then, when the doctor opened the door and gave Jean a reassuring smile Jean's face went white and she swayed unsteadily. Perry looked at her surprised-

"Why, Jean, did she mean so much to you?" The doctor told them that Phyllis was badly bruised, but there was nothing serious, and left them. Jean turned to Perry-"If you only knew !"

Perry said hesitatingly: "It was sort of lucky that I happened along when I did. Miss Phyllis had dismounted and was walking too close to the cliff above the river-Jean's eyes widened and she clutched at Perry's hands.

"Do you mean that the horse didn't throw her-that she fell herself?" Then as Perry nodded she sighed, deeply in relieved thankfulness and went on: "Perry I knew now that I only want you to be happy-"

Perry's face lighted up, and he put his arms quickly around her. "Well, Jean, I guess you know what

I need to make me happy." Jean looked up at him, wondering. "But I thought—that Bhyllis—" Perry laughed joyously. "Why, you little goose-do you mean to say that you've been jealous? And all the time

I thought you were angry because I kissed you!" And so, with their second kiss, all of Jean's "blue devils" faded away to parts unknown and life took on a roseate hue once more.

There was a time when the gull was slaughtered and the feathers used to adorn milady's headgear. Their eggs also were eaten and the young, when salted, made a palatable winter dish. In the early days of Wellfleet, Mass., the gulls were captured in the gullhouse and the small birds killed by means of a frying pan and fire at night. But the great value of the gulls was gradually realized. They consumed shoals of fish and other sea animals, sometimes stranded ashore. They continue to perform this invaluable service.

Some leave shore and keep vigil behind the farmer's plow, snapping up grubs and other destructive insects. They devour grasshoppers and locusts as well as field mice and other rodent pests. Fishermen are indebted to them, for the guils, by their presence, indicate where the food-fish are. And in foggy weather, they send a warning cry to mariners and fishermen from their breeding places in dangerous rocks and ledges,

There are 50 species of gulls known, 26 of them found in North America. Many of the American species flock in great hordes to Wellfleet bay and ocean shores and to many ponds.

Nothing to Brag Of

At a plantation on the Savannah river, where he was a guest, Dr. S. Weir Mitchell and his host were enjoying their after-dinner cigar and commenting on the beauties of the scenery, when the moon rose over the havon. The doctor exclaimed:

"Look at that great, mellow, warm, tropical moon, big as a cartwheel. Up in Vermont that moon wouldn't be big ger than a pint cup and it would be all hung over with icicles." Doctor Mitchell gazed rapturously on the moon and continued: "I don't wonder that the South de velops temperament, that poets and artists and orators come from the South when you have that beautiful mellow moon to look at." The colonel gazed sadly on the moon and replied:

Guilty or Not Guilty.

In Iredell Superior court the past week there was another compromise with crime asented to buy Solicitor Long which are getting entirely too common in this State. Several years ago a Cnicago sausage maker, named Luetgert, was charged with killing bis wife and grinding her up in sausage factory. The only evidence, if we remember aright, and the main evidence that convicted him, was that two of her rings were found in the saus age vat. Luetgert was tried and convicted on circumstantial evidence and the jury brought in a ver dict with a recommendation that he be given a life sentence in prison which was done. This so exasperated the sausage maker that he arose in his seat and called the jorors a set of cowards telling them that he either did or not kill his wife. That if he killed her he should be hanged hanged and if he did not he should be acquitted. He wanted no half-way or compromise verdict. In the Iredell case one Summer was convicted of entering the home of his son in-law and shooting him, his intention being to kill the man. He was guilty of burglary in the first degree or he was guilty of nothing. Yet the solicitor compromised the case and accepted a second degree verdict and the man was given a life sentence. This may be the best way to dispose of a case like this but the custom'is a bad one. - Union Republi.

But while Ed Whittle has been tried on and con as to the guilt or innocence of lesser offenders against the peace and dignity of the com munity, three men were hauling Booze from one end of the city to the other openly, brazenly and even boastfully, without the notice or cognizance from the officers: The men stopped at the homes of several prominent citizens who were allowed to come and look at the Booze in the car, and these prominent citizens did not even do so much as to inform the police. The wen did not seem to have any sence of guilt or shame, for even when they could have gone through several streets without anyone be-ing aware of the fact that Booze was in the car, they stopped and called the attention of passers-by to the fact that there was Booze in their vehicle of transportation. And the police did not interfere with this proceeding in any way.

Several times the Booze car pass ed right by the police station. Still the officers did not interfore. Rumors has it that the men told some officer that Booze was in the car. . . still the force seemed petrified and did not act. Finally after seeing that there was no danger of being arrested in this city Mr. Booze and his two companions parked on the square and after lunch drove on their way to a nearby city. Mr Booze said that his name was an accident of birth and had nothing to do with the anti-Voistead beverage. A startling effect is achieved in a white caracul splotched with great dabs of black. This same is collared and cuffed with showy white fox. With white kid footwear, white felt hat, and a white leather gardenia cuddled in the fur, the ensemble spells enchantment.

GRADE CROSSING TAKES ITS TOLL

Most Serious Hazard That Safety Workers Have to Consider.

"The grade crossing continues to take its toll and is one of the most serious hazards that safety workers have to consider," says Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club.

"The record of grade crossing accidents in America," continues Mr. Hayes, "as compared with that of western Europe does not redound to our credit. True, America has more automobiles, more grade crossings, more miles of highways, and more railroad mileage, but our average of fatalities is much greater: according to figures for 1925, there were 19,-900,000 motor vehicles registered in United States. On this basis, one motorist out of every 9,000 registered lost his life in a grade crossing accident.

Casualty Record Large. "In France there were registered 1,000,000 automobiles, and one motorist out of every 45,000 was killed at a grade crossing. The comparative figure for Great Britain was one out of every 65,000. This shows our casualty record to be five times as great as that of France, and seven times that of Great Britain. If our safety standard had been up to that of Great Britain, we should have had but 250 fatalities, and according to the French average our loss should have been less

"Out of 232,755 grade crossings used by motorists in United States, only 27.161 have any form of protection. leaving 205,593 unguarded. In France, out of 32,500 grade crossings used by motorists, 26,000 are thoroughly protected, leaving only 6,500 unprotected. In other words, only 8 per cent of the grade crossings in the United States are protected as compared with 80 per cent in France.

"Our motorists are not less intelligent nor more reckless than foreign motorists. The odds are simply against them.

European System Costly. "The European system of guarding crossings with heavy gates, operated by day and night watchmen, has proved to be costly; not only that, but most accidents are due to the failure of the human element. The most reliable system is that which provides for an automatic closing of the gates when the signal is dropped, giving the train the right-of-way. The French railroad interests are endeavoring to introduce the automatic scheme, which places more responsibility on the highway user. If the automatic system is shown to be as safe for the road user as the present and more costly one, it will be authorized and extended.

"The railroads in America have not been idle in the matter of safety." concludes Mr. Hayes, "on the contrary they have been extremely active, and are deserving of credit for what they have done. There is need, however, of closer co-operation between the states and the railroads, to the end that a campaign of grade crossing elimination and protection can be waged throughout the entire country and not in spots as is now the case.

High Speed Is Fearful Strain Upon Automobile

Figure it out for yourself! Drive 35 miles an hour for five hours and you make a trip 175 miles in length. Average 50 miles an hour and you make the same distance in three hours and one-half but the saving of that hour and a half is made as a fearful cost to the nervous system of the driver and to the passengers as

The strain on your motor car increases in geometrical progression as the speed increases in arithmetical progression. In other words, the strain of driving a car at 40 miles an hour is four times the strain on the machine at 20 miles an hour, and at 80 miles an hour the strain is sixteen times as great as at 20 miles an hour. The hazard of accident increases according to the same scale and a man who proceeds at an average speed of 60 miles an hour increases the danger to himself and his passengers to a point that makes the saving of time not worth the while.

* Rough Roads Rather

Severe on Brakes It is well to remember that rough roads render brakes less efficient. Braking is dependent upon friction between the tire and the road. If the road is so rough that the rear wheels are pulled away from it on the rebound of the springs, this friction is greatly reduced. In the case of the heavy car. this trouble is not so common. Numberless accidents that involve small cars are traceable to this cause, however. The driver approaches too near to the rear of another car at rather high speed. When the need for stopping arises, he finds his brakes inadequate even if they are working to perfection on the smooth highway.

Wooden Jack Especially

Serviceable in Garage When changing tires on a car with bumpers, it is unhandy to use a shorthandled jack. Several makes of jacks. with long handles and low-lift positions, are obtainable on the market, but a good, wooden jack, which is just as effective, can be made as shown in the drawing, and will prove very serviceable, especially for garage use. A length of 2 by 4-inch wood is fitted at one end with a U-shaped bracket or clip, made from a piece of flat iron. About one foot from the end, a short section of 2 by 4-inch stock is securely fastened by means of heavy angle brackets. On the end, a T-shaped support is hinged and a small coil spring is attached to keep it pulled forward. A cord is fastened to the bottom of the T-support to pull it back. The handle end is planed round for convenience in handling. To use the jack, keep the T-support back by means of the cord, slip the U-clip under the axle, then bear down on the handle. As soon as the axle has been raised sufficiently, release the cord, and let the axle down on the support.-Popular Mechanics Maga-

Lampblack for Polish

Lampblack, a soft, thick powder, is one of the best polishes to clean silvered lamp reflectors. A little of this rubbed over the surface of the reflector will quickly restore its brilliancy. If the surface is tarnished badly, use a paste of lampblack and water. This powder will not scratch, and, in addition to this, it seems to leave a slight film on the surface of the reflector which retards dulling.

AUTOMOBILE ITEMS

A fool and his car should be soon

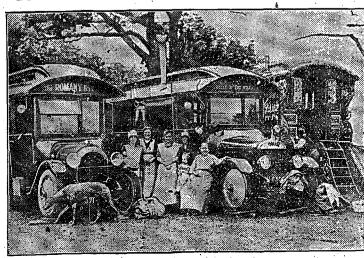

It seems too bad that after the brakes are tested the mental steering gear can't be.

Motorists still attempt to get across in front of a train and only succeed in getting a cross.

In the year 2027, says a college professor, there will be 32 times as many people as there are now, which moves the automobile saturation point farther off than ever.

Now that a phonograph has been devised that will change its own records there may be hope for an automobile that can be sent to a filling station to get its own gas.

CHAPTER IX

Not for long now could Polly count on blind obedience. It was not in the nature of things, nor the nature of a grown-up daughter. Polly decided the time had come for a frank confession. While Mary brushed her hair, Polly announced that she meant to go to Venice and look about for a place to spend several months, cheaply and comfortably.

Mary said it sounded interesting, but did not commit herself further. She was tired and hurt by these halfconfidences.

Frankness was impossible, until her mother was frank with her. She would not degrade her mother's intelligence, or her own, by playing the hypocrite. Mary said she was sleepy and went to bed. But not to sleep. Mrs. Johnston stayed in her own room, the door slightly open between them. She disrobed and stood in her dressing gown before the long mirror, a wonderful color study in a soft, clinging chiffon robe of blue, with her red hair flaming against white shoulders. Polly did not take her usual nightly delight in the spectacle. She braided her hair with no eyes for the vision in the mirror.

"Got to do it, Polly. 'Come," she said to herself and put down the comb. She went to the door and softly opened it.

"Mary, want to sleep?" Mary shook her head, turned on the reading light, threw a rose-colored dressing gown over her shoulders and patted the bed beside her. She recognized from her mother's face that the time had come. "I'd like immensely to have you come and talk yourself out to me. It's been—quite a while." she announced with a sly look up at her mother.

Mrs. Johnston sighed. There was no doubt she was in for it. She sat down, looked at Mary, shut her eyes and took the plunge.

"Mary, I'd like to talk about your father."

Mary sat up. Of all the unlikely things. Talk about her father! Bluebeard's door was about to be opened. From her earliest youth she could remember her mother saying: "Mustn't ask mother questions about father, Mary. It only makes Mumsy un-happy and miserable." What could

Mrs. Johnston settled herself back on Mary's bed.

"How much do you know about me,

"Only that you're the nicest mother ever invented," Mary told her, honestly. "The best looking and the best friend a girl ever had.'

Mrs. Johnston leaned over impulsively and kissed the girl. "I only hope you'll think exactly the same when I get through." "Hurry up, Mother, and tell. You sound like a 'best seller.'"

"I have known some less interesting plots. Well, we'll begin with the fact that I was born of poor people. in Limekilns, N. J. My mother and father both died when I was a lit tle thing, about twelve, and a kind woman brought me up. She took me to New Brunswick, and sent me to I helped about the after school hours. She kept a boarding house. I had only one relative in the whole world, my Uncle Michael, my mother's brother, and he was as crabbed an old bachelor as ever drew breath. He was supposed to be in Pennsylvania somewhere, working in the iron mines, when my people died. But nobody could find him, so Mrs. Bradley took me in.

"Mrs. Bradley died, and her sister came and took the house and ran it as a students' boarding house. I was inherited with the house, and kept right on working there. Mrs. Thomas, the sister, took no interest whatever in me. All she cared about was keeping the house clean and getting the work done. She didn't keep enough servants to do that comfortably, so I had to work from morning to night. It was ghastly."

She paused, looked at Mary shyly and began to describe the men at the boarding house. Mary listened, fascinated. To think that her mother was capable of keeping this odd past to herself all these years. It was most romantic. She waited eagerly for the first mention of her father. Her mother hadn't mentioned any Johnston yet, most of her talk was about some man named Dabbs. Her mind wandered off, thinking about the name and the man it suggested

"It must be painful to have a name like that." "Do you think so?" asked her mother, a little uncertainly. "Well, anyway, this young man lived in the house, but he never looked at me-"Mother!" scoffed Mary. "A lovely red-headed girl like you! I don't be-

"But you must, darling. There's a lot of difference between red-headed Mrs. Johnston, with lots of money and pretty clothes to set off her locks and hair, and a big, overworked, redheaded chambermaid in a boarding

"I hated nearly all men. I had a mind and hopes above my station. I was paid so little that I could only save money slowly. I wanted to get enough to nerve myself to leave that house. My ambition at that time was to be a school teacher." She smiled at the girl and Mary smiled back. "Mother, how brave you were. My heart just aches to think of you, with quate to express our experience, and way." "Bless you, Baby!" her mother exclaimed. "My lost uncle turned up just about then, and found me out. He was a terrible creature: six feet tall, very dry and brittle and had a bad cough, and a vile temper. What was left of his carroty hair had turned a yellow-gray. The poor thing hadn't long to live.

"He had worked too hard, and lived too roughly, to know how to take care of himself. He had plenty of money, discovered, and while he knew how to take care of it, he didn't know how to spend it. He didn't want to leave it to any one, especially to a girl. But was all he had-poor soul." For a moment, Mary's mother caressed the toe of her slipper in silence.

"But Mother, please," urged Mary, "how can I wait until you get to me? Her mother came back from some ong unlit cavern of her mind.

"Of course," she admitted, "that would naturally interest you most. Though Uncle found me and told me of his money, he swore me to secrecy as far as Mrs. Thomas' boarding house was concerned. He was like a lot of unmarried people, tremendously keen about marrying off the rest of the world. Mrs. Thomas had had a bad first and a wretched second husband, and hated men even worse than I did. She assured Uncle that I was a good girl and kept myself to myself and was perfectly safe.

"Uncle went away without committing himself in any way, but two days later a letter came, saying I was to come to a certain address to see him. I went. It was a private sanitarium, and Uncle was very ill indeed.

"He had his lawyer with him, and then and there I was ordered to get married. Uncle wanted to know that his money was going to some properly married woman with a man to look after her. I think some woman had treated him badly when he was young nd poor. He wanted me to get mar ried before any one knew I had any chance of getting money. He wanted me tied up to a hard-working lad who would expect to work for me, and would start honest, as he said, and have a family at once, and as large a family as possible.

"I was shocked and angry, furiously angry. But oh, how I wanted that money! There it was, dangling in front of me, a chance to learn all the things I longed to know, a chance to travel, to have pretty clothes, all the things I'd sworn to have. My dearest day dreams could be realities now. but would be lost to me unless I had a man to hang them on. I, who hated men, who hadn't wanted, and never had had a young man."

"Oh Mother, what did you do?" "I didn't know what to do. I came home simply beside myself. I couldn't confide in the cook or Mrs. Thomas. I knew what would happen. They would laugh at me-and despise me. It's odd, isn't it? It's always the women who've made the worst matrimonial blunders who laugh the hardest. "I found Mrs. Thomas in a fine rage. I'd forgotten to do the third floor before I went out. That was the floor young De Harms, Woods and Dabbs occupied. I went up there as quickly as I could get my things off and began slapping things together Young Dabbs' room I left to the last, because—well, because he was a decent young fellow and wasn't so faultfinding as the others."

"I thought you hated all men," commented Mary, slyly.

Her mother ignored her. "I went to his room. There he was, sitting all huddled up by the window. I asked him if he minded my doing up the room while he was there, and he said he didn't. He had a telegram clutched in his hand. I could see that he was troubled. By and by \mathbf{I}_{arphi} couldn't stand it any longer. I forgot my own troubles. I'd never been so sorry for anyone in my life. I went up to him, and quite forgetting I was a servant,

"Mr. Dabbs - Claude - what's

"Claude!" Mary exclaimed. "Claude Dabbs? What a funny name! Why, it's the same as-" Her mother stopped her with a quick: "It was funnier than that. I discovered afterward it was Claude Melnotte Dabbs."

Mary's soft laugh rang out, and then she checked it.

"Oh Mother, I'm sorry. I'm so interested. Hurry and tell."

Her daughter's mirth was not the pleasantest sound in Mrs. Johnston's pars just then . "I discovered that this young man, with the funny name, was in great trouble. His father was dying and the boy had no money to go home with, and his mother was quite too poor to send him any."

"Oh, poor thing Of course you loaned him your savings." "I didn't. I told him my troubles, and offered him five hundred dollars -if he would marry me."

"Mother! You didn't!" "Sorry dear, but I can't stop to nake this romantic. I'm telling you he plain, unvarnished truth. thought his troubles and mine showed me a way out. I said if he would marry me and show himself, to my uncle, I would give him five hundred dollars. He was to promise to go away and never try to see me again. He was to leave me to go my way alone, while he went his."

"But Mother! What a cold-blooded thing to do!" "Wasn't it?" agreed Mrs. Johnston, nuch embarrassed. "But you see it didn't seem like that to me, Mary. Please remember that he was only my door of escape and it was absolutély a business proposition."

"Oh Mother!" "I can't help it, Mary. That's what I offered him, and after the first moment of astonishment, and when he was convinced that I was not fooling him and would actually have the money—I had two hundred and fifty dollars of my own savings to show him-he agreed.'

"Oh dear," groaned Mary, "then he was just as bad!" "I don't know," Mrs. Johnston said thoughtfully. "I've often wondered. You see, his father was dying."

"That's so, I'd forgotten." Mrs. Johnston looked as though she was about to say something in her own defense, thought better of it, and went on, doggedly: "Uncle wasn't told bout the agreement. Both my uncle and his lawyer were favorably impressed with Claude. "Uncle insisted that we have the ceremony performed at once, and that suited both of us. Claude looked sick with anxiety, and was eager to get it over and start home. We were married before a justice of the peace, who knew neither of us. Right after the ceremony Claude went home with half of the five hundred in his pocket. The other half was to be his when he signed the papers agreeing to leave me alone, and not to block any petition I might make for divorce, on the grounds of desertion, later. The lawver had to have time to draw the doguments up." "Mother, I simply can't recognize you as the calculating girl who married that way!"

"You'll have to, Mary. I did it. Just in time, too, for my uncle died that night. I was free and the money was mine. I left the boarding house and went to a quiet little hotel. I never told the people at the boarding house anything about the money, or in the words a wise man of old, in the ages of faith ascribed to his Creator Be still then and know that I am God!" A later philosopher has remarked that no two men can be said to be truly friends unless they are content to bask in each other's company without expression of words. There are occasions when silence is the sacrament of faith and reverent joy, the seal and sign of a living union with the infinite and confident fellowship with our fellow man. It is in the practice of this silence that we learn how to discipline life, and recognize the profanity of the glib commonplaces of mere passing companionship, of formal religion and the useless volubility of controversy. We pefrain from words because they are inade-

Pastures Need Aid in Summer

If Weeds and Bushes Are Allowed to Grow Grass Will Be Injured.

How the pasture is handled during the midsummer determines the amount and quality of the grazing to be obtained from it during the remainder of the year.

"There are two big things to look out for with the pastures in midsummer," says S. J. Kirby, pasture specialist at North Carolina State college. "If weeds and bushes are allowed to grow, the grass will be shaded and the sod injured. Uneven grazing will also reduce both the quality and quantity of the herbage. Some pastures got off to a poor start this spring because of the cool, dry weather. This provided a favorable environment for weeds, native grasses and sedges, but was hurtful to new plantings of tame grasses. Even old pastures were

Weeds Rob Pastures. If these weeds are allowed to grow, they will rob the pasture plants of light, moisture and plant foed, states Mr. Kirby. All pastures in which the weeds have made a start should be

Bushes should be cut also. Some shade is good for the live stock that uses a pasture, but the close, dense shading produced by low-growing bushes and shrubs will kill the grass and clover plants. Bushes are especially bad in pastures newly seeded on cutover or recently cleared land.

Uneven Grazing Harmful. Mr. Kirby-finds that uneven grazing is another of the detriments to good pastures. This results when not enough animals are placed on the grass to keep the sod grazed evenly. When only a few animals are in the pasture, they will graze heavily in some places and allow the other parts to grow unhindered. Those grasses and clovers growing tall and going to seed become hard, fibrous and unpalatable, whereas had they been properly grazed, would have been succulent. tender and palatable. If grazing is uneven, mow the parts not grazed or, better still, add a few more dairy cows to the farm, states Mr. Kirby.

Phosphate Will Balance

Manure Applied to Corn Farmers who have manure to apply to their corn land will find it to their advantage to mix 25 pounds of 16 per cent acid phosphate with each ton of manure, according to M. F. Miller, of the Missouri College of Agriculture. Every farmer believes in farm manure. Many believe in it so strongly that they will not use other kinds of fertilizers. Barnyard manure will give better returns, however, when mixed with acid phosphate as shown by the results of experiments conducted at the college. Manure is low in phosphate. Its main value as a fertilizer is in the fact that it contains a high percentage of nitrogen. When phosphate is mixed with it, it makes a better balanced fertilizer. Another reason for adding phosphate to manure is that it prevents monia is valuable in building up seil fertility.

Better Silage Assured and Expenses Cut Down Silage will keep just as well with-out tamping or tramping as with tamping and much better than with poor tamping, according to James W. Linn, extension dairyman'at the Kansas State Agricultural college. Let the ensilage fall to the middle of the silo so no leose spots will be formed and the weight will settle the silage down. This practice has proved particularly adaptable to silo filling where two or three men take four or five days. If the silo is filled rapidly, refilling is necessary when tramping is dispensed with. The extension dairyman believes that this method of taking several days to fill a silo assures better silage and it cuts down the expense.

FIND INDIAN GRAVES UNDER LARGE MOUND

Archeologists Study Burial Pyramid in Ohio.

Columbus. Ohio.-A large Indian mound near Bainbridge, Ohio, is be ing sliced like a loaf of bread by exploring archeologists, who have found 30 Iddian burials and a complicated internal structure.

What appears to be an elongate earthen pyramid is buried under the external surface of the so-called Seip mound. Seen from the outside the mound looked merely like a great rounded heap of earth, 240 feet long, 150 feet wide and 30 feet high.

Covers Indian Burials.

The basis of the mound is a lower mound, shorter and narrower than the covering structure, rounded on top and covered with a layer of gravel. Presumably this lower mound was for ceremonial purposes, for under it are found the Indian burials. Covering this inner mound is a mass of earth with steeply sloping sides, like the roof of a house or a long pyramid, and over this in turn there is another mass of earth noticeably different from the "pyramid" in color and texture, which gives the outer mound its final rounded shape.

Over this again is a layer of river gravel, thin at the top and thicker at the sides and held in place at the bottom by a wall of large stone slabs. All this great hill of earth was toilsomely built, many centuries ago, by Indians whose only way of carrying materials was in baskets on their backs or heads.

Research Students at Work.

The peculiar and puzzling structure of this mound has been disclosed only by the methodical system pursued in opening it. The work is being done under the direction of Dr. H. C. Shetrone of the Ohio State Archeological and Historical society. He has a gang of workmen and dirt-handling machinery at his disposal, in addition to a group of research students to do the more exact work.

Every cubic foot of earth in the mound is being moved. He is cutting off the mound slice by slice, examining everything he finds as he goes. Before snow flies he expects to cut his last slice. Then he will put the mound pack into as nearly its original form as is practicable.

To date he has sliced off a little more than half the mound, and has uncovered about 30 Indian burials. Almost all of them are just above ground level, under the inner mound A few are three or four feet higher. These were important chiefs, judging by the burial gifts found with them. which included great strings of rivermussel pearls in addition to the usual stone, bone and pottery offerings, and ornaments and weapons of copper.

Use Fish Oil to Hold Poison on Fruit Trees

Washington.-Insult is added to injury in the newest trick devised by Department of Agriculture scientists in their war against insect pests. Fish oil, never noted for its fragrance, is recommended by Clifford E. Hoed of the bureau of entomology as an adon trees and bushes to protect them from the ravages of gypsy and browntail moth caterpillars.

The oil is not expected to discourage the pests by its smell, howeverit is highly unlikely that the caterpilars even know it is there. Mr. Hood has found in his experiments that various oils used in paints will help to hold the dried drips of the poison sprays on the leaves much longer, and that after a summer of rains a considerable percentage of the arsenic will still be there, ready to do business with any caterpillar foolish enough to chew up the leaf to which it adheres.

Linsced oil is even more efficient in this way than is fish oil, but it costs so much more that the fish oil is recommended as the economic happy

Monticello, Ind.—Her heirship to $1,000,000 bequeathed by her brother, Harry Frederick, of Humbolt, Saskatchewan, Canada, has not interfered with the life in a cottage of Mrs. Edward Music, forty-nine years old, of Monticello, Ind.

Mrs. Music was washing dishes in her cottage when she received word of the fortune given her. She calmly finished the task. Now that she is wealthy she expects to continue her quiet life, and her husband will keep his job in a butcher shop She says they do not care to travel and never desired an automobile.

Cabbies fifty and sixty years old are the rule rather than the exception here. The other day there was a collision between a taxicab, in which the earl and countess of Wharneliffe were riding, and an omnibus. Testimony showed that the cab-driver was seventy-two years old, and has been driving in London for fifty years. When the motorcar came in he was one of the first to adopt the new mode of transportation

UNKNOWN UNCLE WILLS MILLIONS

Fortune From Africa Goes to Australia.

Sydney .- David White, middle-aged

Sydney business man, awoke one morning to find himself heir to over $1,250,000 in cash and $10,000,000 worth of real estate, a fortune amassed by his uncle in diamond dealing in South Africa.

Behind the inheritance is a story revealing bleak depths of human bit terness and suffering. It goes back to the middle of the last century, when Solomon Wheinsky was a fur dealer at Nishni-Novgorod in Russia.

Solomon revolted against the exorbitant demands of the czarist taxgatherer. His brother, a partner in the business, disappeared mysteriously into the mines of Siberia.

Solomon Wheinsky and two sisters fied. They suffered bitterly from cold and hunger before they reached Riga, whence they got aboard a smuggler's schooner and were taken to Amsterdam, whence Solomon went to London and his two sisters to the United States.

Solomon Wheinsky settled in White chapel in 1852 and became a "kosher' butcher. He married a Russian girl and changed his name to White. He had two sons. Abel and Aaron.

Aaron married outside his faith, and so long was the continuance of bitterness that Abel's son, David, decided to start life afresh in Australia.

Meantime Aaron White had gone to South Africa, where he joined the group of men about Cecil Rhodes, the uncrowned king of South Africa for the last fifteen years of the last century. It was there that the fortune which has fallen to David White was amassed.

Aaron White traded in diamonds and he emerged from the welter of those frightful days a wealthy man. He employed his money in speculation and grew richer.

Submarine Detector

to Be Used on Yeggs New York .- A new barrier has been placed between the bank robber and his swag as a result of research by the engineers of the Bell laboratories

Already learned in the ways of cops, night watchmen and the miles of wire incidental to the usual electric alarm system, the robber may now find himself up against a new signal device invisible from the outside yet capable of calling a squad of armed guards upon him as he works. In fact, the safe-blower now works under war-time conditions for the new alarm is founded on the Type H. inertia microphone developed in the laboratories during the war for submarine detection. This alarm consists of a microphone capable of detecting the most minute vibrations of the walls of a safe. It has already been installed in several banks here and in Philadelphia. The microphone will not pick up sound waves. The stimulus is re ceived mechanically rather than acoustically. But the slightest jar will be sufficient to set in motion an electric current to the main office, where both audible and visible sigdition to the arsenic solutions sprayed | nals will be received.

Such devices have been conceived before. But heretofore they have transmitted vibrations and even sounds from outside. Thus, guards have been summoned when merely a heavy truck was rumbling by or when street conversation grew sufficiently

Already several nieces have fallen from Notre Dame, from the palace of justice and from other celebrated buildings. A skunk invaded one nest, but the other hen hatched eight of the eggs. Meeks says the mother quail kept an eye on the proceedings and, when the foster mother was scratching worms for the hungry brood, flew to the nest and lured the baby quail away. There is now one bewildered and puzzled hen in East

U. S. MARKET SERVICE COVERS GREAT AREA

Million Dollar Bureau Gives Free Aid to Farmers

Washington .- Every farmer in the United States has access to a milliondollar information bureau.

It is Uncle Sam's market news service operated by congressional appropriation. Daily, throughout the country, it correlates the radio, ocean cables and miles of telephone and telegraph wires in distributing quotations.

Allied with the titanic system, cooperative "listening posts," clearing houses of information, are supervised by the bureau of agriculture economics. The newest such institution has been established in San Francisco, at request of the California Vinyardist association. It will gather data on prices, supply and distribution of grapes. Lists Number of Carloads.

The information will show the number of carloads of each variety and grade sold at different prices. Railroads will supply figures on the number of cars of each variety of grapes moved to the market. Eastern points will send supplemental reports every 25 hours on shipments received and distributed.

Similar plans for the citrus industry were discussed at a conference here between Secretary of Agriculture Jardine and Florida representatives. Georgia peach growers, and producers of other material crops in all parts of the United States may likewise avail themselves of governmental co-operation during the market season.

"These clearing houses for market information," economists say, "insure an even distribution of products and an even tenor in prices. By knowing where his produce is needed, the shipper is not faced with the probability of a flooded market one day and a skimped one the next. Steady flow to the market solves the problem of individual overproduction and works to a better average price for each

"Through the market news service any part of the country may know exactly how many barrels, bushels or pounds of farm products are rolling to market every hour in the day and the prices offered at all terminal points. The Network of Wires.

"Compilation of such vast knowledge is made possible through uniform operation of 7,351 miles of government-leased telegraph wires, working 12 hours a day. More than 2,000 market reporters supply detailed information from all principal centers in the United States and abroad. Cabled information is obtained from the International institute at Rome, to which 90 countries subscribe.

"By telephone at 38 relay points and through more than 100 radio stations every individual or institution in the land interested in any manner of produce market reports has constant access to the most complete quotations in the world."

Typhoid Germ Lives Years, Science Learns

Francisco. - Disease-causing bacteria have many devices to perpetuate their kind in an adverse world. Bacteriologists of the Hooper foundation for medical research, University of California, have shown that tetanus spores may resist the temperature of boiling water for 90 minutes, botulinus in vegetable juices for 51/2 hours and those of a closely related but harmless species for 81/2 hours. Other workers have proved that tvphoid and other organisms may remain alive for years at refrigerator or lower temperatures.

This happy provision of naturehappy, that is, for the bacteria-constitutes a factor of great danger for man and animals which it is the function of scientific research to obviate. says Dr. George E. Coleman of the Hooper foundation. "The brilliant success," he states, "that has been attained already, in which the experimental use of mice and guinea pigs has played a large part, is constantly being proclaimed by statistical evidence of fewer food poisonings and typhoid fever outbreaks, as well as by increased protection from many of our other microscopic foes."

SHIP CAPTAIN TELLS AN AMAZING STÓRY

Ought to Have Been Satisfactory to Reporters.

New York.-Ship news reporters clustered about Capt. W. W. Clark, of the Munson liner Munorleans, when that vessel arrived from Miami and Nassau.

"Tell us a story," they chorused, and the Cap'n did. To wit: "We sailed from New York June 24,

Seventy miles south of Cape Hatteras we encountered so great a company of enormous whales that we had constantly for some distance to slow our speed and shift our course to keep from running over the whales and fouling our propellers.

"There were thirty of them-and they were very large-the greatest number I have seen at once during my fifteen years of sailing on this "And the phenomenon was the more astounding because the whales were accompanied by 1,000 porpoises and every other kind of sea creature with a multitude of sea birds of all sorts. It was a veritable sea carnival. The passengers stood and watched in fascination and in some fear, for at one time a huge whale dived clear under the vessel. We felt the impact of his back against the bottom of our 6,000-ton ship.

"The birds, attracted no doubt by the strangely numerous and mixed gathering of water life, kept diving down. Frequently we would see fish snap back at birds which sought to make them their prey."

Fiend Leaves Trail

of Murdered Women Winnipeg, Man.—The solution to the murder of more than 20 women in the United States and Canada is believed to be near with the arrest of a suspect here, where the latest killings have occurred. The suspect is said by police to be the "strangler" or "gorilla" who is responsible for many murders and they are holding him under close guard. The stranger's latest appearance occurred at Winnipeg, where he killed Mrs. Emily Patterson, twentyeven years old, and Lola Cowan, a fourteen-year-old schoolgirl. Mrs. Patterson's body was found by her husband under her bed when he returned home from work. The murderer did not harm two small children in the house. The schoolgirl was found after being missing several days. Pelice believe she was held prisoner in a rooming house before the fiend killed her. Similarity of circumstances surrounding each of the many murders indicates to police that the same man is responsible for all of the crimes. From Seattle, Wash., to San Diego. Calif., on the Pacific coast: through Kansas City, Mo., St. Louis, Mo., and Chicago the brute has left a trail of horror. His specialty seems to be the slaying of women who keep boarding houses. If no men were about he rented a room.

Snake Eats 11 Hens' Eggs and One Small-Size Pig Republic, Kan.-To find eleven hens eggs and a small live pig inside a huge snake which he discovered in a hen's nest, was the experience of C. B. Rickel, township trustee and a prominent farmer of Big Bend township near Republic.

He noticed something moving the straw in the nest where the hens lay. He then secured a stick and attempted to kill the reptile. The stick broke and the snake hardly wiggled after eing struck. Rickel then called the dog and it started to tear right into the snake, but Mr. Snake knocked the dog about twenty feet.

Mr. Rickel then got a big club and after a forty-minute tussle killed the snake. He found it to be nine feet and one inch long. Mr. Rickel had been missing his eggs and pigs for some time.

I. David's Crimes (II Sam. 11).

1. Adultery (vv. 4, 5). He by his kingly authority brought Bathsheba, the beautiful wife of Uriah, one of his brave soldiers, into his harem.

2. Murder (vv. 14-18).

David sought to cover up his shameful act of adultery with Bathsheba by calling Uriah from the field of battle and giving him a furlough at home with his wife. (He first gave him honorable recognition by sending a portion of meat from the royal tablev. 8.) Uriah's high sense of military duty and propriety would not allow him to do this.

Failing in this, David corrupted him by making him drunk, with the expectation that Uriah would thus go home. When these schemes would not work he resorted to the terrible crime of exposing Uriah to the mos dangerous place in the battle where he would surely be killed. -

II. Contributing Factors in David's Fall.

1. Idleness (11:1). It was the king's responsibility to go forth with his army to battle. David tarried at Jerusalem because of indolence or self-indulgence. 2. He looked upon a beautiful wom an (11:2). As he was lounging in idleness, this emptation was too great for him. He vielded to his lustful impulse and sent his servants to bring the woman to him. This action on the part of David to him. 1. The parable of the ewe lamb

(vv. 1-6). Among the Jews it was customary to have pet lambs which were brough up with the children of the family and therefore regarded with tender affection. Nathan pictures before David a poor man whose sole posses sion consisted of one such lamb, and a rich neighbor when entertaining a guest had appropriated unto himself this lamb instead of drawing upon his David's anger that he declared that the rich man should restore fourfold and in addition forfeit his life. Nathan declared: "Thou art the man." In spite of David's awful sin, he had burning indignation against the wrong-

(1) He recounted unto David God's eculiar favor (vv. 7, 8). God had taken him from the sheepcote and lifted him to the throne, made him king over all Israel. He had delivered him from Saul's murderous plots and he had inherited Saul's royal possessions.

(2) David's shameful treatment of God's law (v. 9).

Though he confessed his sin as recorded in Psalm 32, and God forgave him, he had to suffer its consequence. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

The Earlier the Broiler the Larger the Profits

WHAT A TWO-POUND LIVE BROILER

$1.00

Profits from broilers are determined largely by how early in the season they reach market size, according to the Sears Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. A two-pound broiler on April 1 is worth 50 per cent more than one the same weight which is not read; until two months later, 75 per centmore than one three months later, and 100 per cent more than one marketed five months later on September 1. Supplies increase rapidly after June and prices fade under the heavier offerings.

Twelve weeks are sufficient to bring a chicken of the heavier breeds to two pounds. This means that chicks must be hatched by the first of February if they are to be of market weight in time to get the cream off the early high market. The general use of in cubators has pushed up the hatching date on the average farm, so that is is easily within the range of possibili ties for farmers to have broilers ready for market in time to get some advantage of the early high prices.

Cost account records show that the 9:05 argest profits are made by marketing 9:45 broilers at one and a quarter to two and a quarter pounds in weight. Above this weight, lower prices and increased feed costs eat up the profit. When prices are declining rapidly, it is often better to sell brollers a little light as the decline in price per pound will more than offset the additional weight.

You can get your name in print 1:15 by many methods but one sure 1:20 way is to send in a check for five 1:40 subscription in advance.

"Couldn't he guess? I'll have to hate him, you know, if he guessed and didn't follow you."

Polly felt that justice demanded that she lay no more than his due share of blame on the shoulders of Mary's father. "He didn't know I was going," she said, limply. "I, ran away from him."

Mary released her mother with little amazed gasp.

"Poor, poor, Father!" "Poor Father!" echoed Mrs. John-ston indignantly. "Little he cared for anything but just getting hold of me and my money and dragging me out to his miserable grocery store in Peace Valley."

Mary sat upright, with astonished eyes, gazing at this extraordinary parent of hers. "But Mother! You said Peace Valley. You're dream-

"Then it was our Mr. Dabbs, and am I-I am really Mary Johnston Dabbs, the grocer's daughter?" "He need never know!"

Mary leaned forward with upraised finger and placed it gently across her mother's lins. "I always doubted those wife-in-name-only stories," she "Don't try to fool yourself or You liked Claude Dabbs more than a little. You singled him out of the crowd in that boarding house. Mother, you were romantic about him even then."

"I was not!" Mrs. Johnston indignantly defended herself.

"Stuff and nonsense!" retorted Mary, rising to the defense of her ab-sent father. "If you hadn't liked him a lot, you would have telephoned and had him put out."

What can a woman say to a daughter like that? Mrs. Johnston said nothing, just sat back and-blushed. "I'm glad you can blush," Mary went on. "Nice tale to tell a girl who thought she was a poor half-orphan, while all the time she had a perfectly good father keeping a grocery store." Ned Carter's uncle's store, she added to herself. And this thought brought a new joy. Now her mother could ot make such a frightful fuss about

"Cross my heart, Mother," declared Mary. "Hope I may die if I'm not ready to love your Claude. Wouldn't it be glorious if Father only had money enough to come flying after

With this ringing in her ears, Polly Johnston put out the light and left the room.

Left to her own thoughts, Mary found them thronging thick and fast, and she felt so excited she could not sleep. She tried to consider calmly what her mother had told her, but it was not a thing one could consider

Mary seldom spoke of her own experiences, but she had tolled among the refugees of the late war. She had, child though she was, done yeo man's work with the first awful rush of the wounded, until Mother carried her away lest she break under the strain. Though she had only fetched and carried for trained workers, she had brushed against birth, death and raw wounds, and had stamped for ever on her plastic soul the truth that one was either man or woman, or brute beast, and that clothes, money and calling were only camouflage for the human soul.

Mary had her own thoughts in the matter of her father. Claude Melnotte Dabbs must be nice, since Mother had married him and Ned Carter liked him, so Mary was not at all prejudiced as she thought of her big, darkhaired, clean-shaven father.

Mrs. Johnston-Dabbs, to give her proper name, also found it difficult to sleep. The years, she was ford of telling herself, had made her philosophic, but philosophize as she would, she found that retelling her story had taken its toll in nerves and sleep.

Mrs. Johnston believed that mere parenthood gave neither man nor woman ownership or legal rights in human beings. She believed that parents were indeed privileged when their offspring truly loved them. She believed that her child should be utterly free to love her or not, to go from her or stay, as she chose. But oh, if she could only own Mary, body and soul, for a few moments! Life was going to be very difficult for her, from now on, unless she could get Mary to see the necessity for flight from the pursuing grocer! If Mary were only twelve years old once more!

In the morning Polly Johnston looked like a princess in exile, but she acted like a weary, bored woman, and she had no time for anything but the necessary words required to start them on their work of packing and last-minute shopping. Mary was to attend to the shopping.

Mary had that morning ventured to open the subject, discussed so freely last night, only to find herself snubbed for her pains, as her mother absolutely refused to answer questions.

What Mary did not know was that her mother's attitude had been aggrarated by an early morning message to the effect that a Mr. Carter wished to speak to her on the telephone.

Ned had arrived in town at an hour too late for a casual acquaintance to call or telephone, and this morning Improved Uniform International the hotel operator had called Mrs. Johnston instead of Miss Johnston.

Following the death of David, Solomon was anointed king (I Kings 1:5-40). David had failed to show the people who should be king after him their hotel, and went out to do his (v. 20). Though an old man, he is stirred into action by the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan. He immediately sent for the faithful three -Zadok, Nathan and Beniah, and commanded them to anoint Solomon king

I. God's Gracious Offer (vv. 4, 5). Solomon made a lavish sacrifice to the Lord. The magnitude of the offering shows that he had strong impulses toward God and that he was unwilling to hold anything back from God. Following the sacrifice, the Lord made to him this gracious offer. This offer was not on the basis that the Lord cared for the number of animals, but the attitude of the man's heart toward him. "Ask what I shall give thee," placed very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired. This was not a reckless act on the part of God, for He foreknew what was in Solomon's heart to ask. This offer to Solomon is no exceptional one, for opportunities equally limitless are placed before us. God is saying to every one of His children, "Ask and it shall be given you." The matter with its limitations is placed before us in John 15:7. "If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." These unlimited offers are open to those who abide in Christ and let His words abide in them.

II. Solomon's Wise Choice (vv. 6-9). The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making a choice. There was no middle course open to him. God deals with all His children in such a way that a choice must be made by them. Solomon was keenly aware of the difficulty and responsibility of his position. David was a great king. For a young man to take up the work of an'illustrious father and push it to completion is a most difficult task. Comparatively few ever succeed. Besides this, he had to deal with the disturbing elements which had been set in motion by the usurper, Adonijah. Being made to shoulder so great a responsibility so suddenly, brought him to keenly feel his insufficiency. In his reply to God he pleaded that his being king was not of his kindness. He argued that, since God had made him king, He was bound to qualify him to fill the place. All who have been called of God to fill positions of honor and trust can surely exercise that same boidness of faith. When called to positions of honor and trust we should humbly present ourselves before God for help. To feel ourselves unworthy and unfit for great and responsibile work and to cast ourselves upon God for help is not cowardice, but a good sign that we shall not fail at the critical moment. Solomon's object in asking for wisdom was not for display but for the good of others.

III. God's Unstinted Gift (vv. 10-15).

Solomon's speech pleased the Lord. God gave him more than he asked Because he put wisdom first. God saw that he could be trusted with material good also. Christ saw the same thing when He said. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness: and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt. 6:33). He who puts God and spiritual things first in time and importance can be trusted with temporal things. That which God promised him above what he asked was riches, honor and length of days. All who feel the lack of wisdom can go to God with confidence (Jas. 1:5). God blessed Solomon with a singularly comprehensive mind (I Kings 4:29-34). He was a botanist, zoologist. architect, poet and moral philosopher.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON HAT is the spirit of Labor Day? There may be as many answers to that question as there are answerers, but from several of them, though phrased in different terms it may be possible to arrive at some statement which will come near expressing the meaning, not only to labor but to all other divisions of human society, of this day of days for the working man.

Labor Day was first suggested in the New York city Central Labor union in May, 1882. It was decided to observe the first Monday in September of that year as a festival day. with a parade, speech-making and picnics. Labor held that, whereas there were other holidays representing the religious, civil and military spirit, there was none which stood for the industrial spirit. Accordingly this first celebration was held, and it was a big success.

In 1884 the American Federation of Labor officially proclaimed the first Monday in September as Labor Day. All wage earners, irrespective of sex calling or nationality, were urged to observe it until it should be as uncommon for a man to work on Labor Day as it would be for him to toil on the Fourth of July. State legislatures were urged to make the day a legal holiday, and 32 of them eventually did enact laws to that effect. Congress made it a legal holiday in 1894 for the District of Columbia and the territories and, although a number of states have no Labor Day law; the federal act has been accepted by all of them, and this holiday is generally observed throughout the United States.

Perhaps one of the first interpretations of the spirit of Labor Day was that uttered by the late Samuel Gompers, the "Grand Old Man of American Labor," in the first Labor Day editorial which he wrote after congress had made it a legal holiday. The editorial, which appeared in the American Federationist for September, 1894, follows:

In the cycle of time we are again on the dawn of our most important national holiday—Labor Day. Most im-portant, since it for the first time in the history of the world devotes a day to the recognition of the fact that the wage carners must hereafter be regarded as the important factor in the economy of life. In this day when so many look upon the dark side of the progress of the labor movement and predict worse things in store darks. predict worse things in store for the laborer, it is not amiss to direct atten tion to the fact that the life of the human family is one vast struggle, and human family is one vast struggle, and that though the progress is not as swift as we, as well as our impatient brothers and sisters of labor, would like it to be, yet the fact that in our decade we can see the rights of labor more clearly defined, the vantage ground obtained, and obtaining a clearer insight into the existing wrongs, the more intelligent perception and determination to achieve here. tion and determination to achieve la

Each defeat acts as a trenchant warning to the toilers of America that error must be avoided, that intelligence must prevail, and that no success can come to them where the in through their own efforts. unless it is through their own efforts and their own organization, and by their persistency manifested. Even the despised immigrant who doesn't understand a word of English, but who is thorough and complete and above all must be permanent. Those organiza-tions which arise like a flash in the pan only go to show how arduous is the struggle before the toiler, in order to overcome the antagonism of the wealth-producing classes of our coun-

Today more than ever the toilers recognize how essentially they are thrown upon their own resources; that they have few if any outside their own ranks who sympathize with them in their efforts for the emancipation of mankind.

Toilers, organize. Let us carry on the good work and in a few more revolutions of the earth upon its axis we shall have a better world—a better mankind. Waiting will not accomplish it; deferring till another time will not secure it. Now is the time for the workers of America to come to the standard of their unions and to organize as thoroughly, completely and compactly as is possible. Let each worker bear in mind the words of Longfellow:

"In the world's broad field of battle. In the bivouac of life, Be not like dumb, driven cattle! Be a hero in the strife!"

Written at a time when American labor had not yet won the many victories which have characterized its progress during the past 40 years of American economic history, that editorial is a striking reflection of the spirit of Labor Day, 1894, when the greatest concern was for the "rights of Since that time the compact organization of American labor, for which Mr. Gomners attered his plea. has brought about amazing changes.

In some foreign countries revolution has failed to accomplish for 19bor what a process of evolution has accomplished for it in the United States. Today the American worker is the most prosperous of any in the world, and he is the envy of wage earners everywhere. And Labor Day, 1927, finds him still standing steadfastly for the "rights of labor." but he is also conscious of the responsibilities of labor as well. That sense of responsibility was voiced recently by one of its leaders. John P. Frev. president of the Ohio State Federation of Labor, when he said: A portion of our obligation, our duty to the great movement which we rep-resent, is to deal with employers with whom we have friendly relations in such a manner that we will not only retain their full confidence, but by example lead other employers to realize that not only as a matter of justice, but as a matter of individual advantage to themselves, it is to their interest to establish friendly working relations with trade union organizations of their employees. tions of their employees. . . . If our trade union movement is to fulfill our trade union movement is to fulfill the purpose for which it exists, its policies, its methods, its attitude must be such as to win and retain the confidence and good will of the majority of employers. Trade union members, trade union discipline and the militant spirit are essential to our welfare, but a trade union movement de-

THE SURE CURE FOR FIDGETITIS

(6) by D. J. Walsh.)

RS. FRISBY was old, elegant and petulant. She lived alone with her servants in a big house set on a wide-sweeping lawn which was as smooth as a carpet and perfectly kept by Old Pete, her gardener. She had flowers in great abundance and a luxurious limousine was housed in a garage quite in keeping with all the rest of her property. Mrs. Frisby was seventy and when she went forth to call on the few persons she considered worthy of her notice she was clothed in the richest of black satin and wore diamonds of such size that she fairly dazzled the eye. She was to all appearances austere and haughty, a woman with a heart of ice. She never allowed any one to take liberties with her and she granted favors and interviews much as a queen might. She was not generous and to the people and children who lived near her she was a perfect bugaboo, for if a child or dog happened to stray on her premises it was driven away and made to feel it had committed a great crime. Everybody, even the few on whom she looked with favor, stood in awe of her. In all her life there had been only three persons who had discovered that she had a heart, one an early sweetheart who left her for her friend, the second old Hannah, her ancient handmaiden, and she knew "Miss Caroline" as she called her mistress, "like a book," and the third was young Doctor Dent. Doctor Dent had been called in an emergency to attend Mrs. Frisby one day when her old family doctor had been away. Mrs. Frisby was, she said, a victim of nerves, but when Doctor Dent had taken her temperature, looked at her tongue and felt her pulse he had told her that she was not a victim of nerves but she had a bad case of fidgetitis. To the old woman, fed up on Doctor Crosby's sympathetic diagnosis, the thought of a new symptom was really refreshing and she continued to employ the young doctor, never suspecting that he had found nothing the matter with her but ennui. When he had said fidgetitis and told her she was a tidgetarian he thought she would see the joke at once, but she had not and quite reveled in the new complaint. This new interest lasted until winter came and the snow piled up and made it impossible for her to get out in the car and then she really did get so nervous and dissatisfied with everything that she lost her appetite and began to sleep badly. Finally she developed a headache and remained in her room and then she took to her bed. She refused to see any one and when some of her acquaintances and relatives heard of her indisposition they sent flowers and books, but she hated flowers in her room and she had dozens of books and magazines that she had never opened.

Poor Hannah was at her wits' end. She offered to put cold compresses on her mistress' head and brought a ottle of Mrs. Frisby's favorite ender smelling salts, but when she only broke down and cried and said she guessed she was homesick this frightened old Hannah so badly that she sent a hurry call for Doctor Dent and he came, as he laughingly told Mrs. Frisby, "on two wheels." When he had talked a few moments he told her if he had had time he certainly would have brought her an aluminum ring with a glass setting as big as a bean. At this she laughed. Before he went away he said he was going to send her a cure. It would arrive the next morning promptly at nine o'clock, and as it was a peculiar remedy and just be delivered directly into her hands she would have to he downstairs when it was delivered. And then he went away, and se busy was 35°s. Frisby in speculating over what the cure could be that before she realized it her headache was gone and when Hannah appeared bearing a tray upon which a dainty supper renosed she fell to and ate with a relish.

The next morning Mrs. Frisby came down to breakfast. She ate hurriedly and as soon as possible returned to the big window in the living room which commanded a view of the street. Promptly at nine a car drove up and a man got out with something wrapped in a blanket in his arms. Mrs. Frisby gasped in horror. A moment later the maid ushered the man into Mrs. Frisby's presence.

The man came forward and without a word set the bundle on the rug at the old woman's feet. He then removed the blanket and there stood revealed the funniest crooked-legged wrinkled-faced Boston bull puppy that was ever seen. "A dog!" fairly shricked Mrs. Fris-

"I hate dogs!" "Oh, but you won't this one, ma'am," said the man. "He's only six weeks old. He comes from a long line of blue ribbon winners. He's more intelligent than a-a child. He will make a fine pal. I have written directions as to his diet and care and I think that's all. Good morning," and before the old woman could frame a protest the man was gone. Left alone with a dog! She, Caroline Frisby, who hated dogs. She would ring the bell for Hannah and she would order the dog sent back at once. As she rose from her chair and started for the door the puppy, whose idea of the world to date was that it was full of love, warmth, milk and dog biscuits, mistook her intention and, staggering forward on his crooked legs, began to yip and growl and cavort and finally in a perfect ecstasy of joy rolled over on his flat back right under her feet.

Mrs. Frisby attempted to shove him out of her way with her foot, but the dog caught hold of the toe of her shoe and began worrying it. In order to get rid of him she stooped down and attempted to grab him by the coliar, but the puppy, seeing a hand approaching, leaped up and kissed it with his warm moist little tongue. The old woman drew back her hand, but she stood looking with fascinated gaze into the friendly bright eyes of the little dog. Why, after all, dogs were not so bad-not this one at least. Maybe she would wait a bit before calling Hannah—there was plenty of time. It would do no harm to watch the creature a moment, and she went back to her seat by the win-

An hour later when Hannah came into the room, followed by Doctor Dent, they found Mrs. Frisby sitting by the fireplace with the puppy in her Her jeweled hand was gently stroking the little fellow's warm body and he was sleeping. She looked up with a smile when she caught the astonished look on old Hannah's face and the amused eves of the young doctor.

"I see my cure has worked," said Doctor Dent, as she came to stand by her side.

"I think it has." answered Mrs. Frisby soberly. "But what if it hadn't?' "I had one more thing to try," he said. "I was going to bring my sweetheart. She is a sure cure for fidgetitis.'

"Who is she, doctor?" asked Mrs. Frisby. "Julia Markham—"

"Julia Markham!" fairly cried the old woman. "Why, she is my grandniece-did you know it?"

"Not until after we were engaged," said the doctor.

"Well," said Mrs. Frisby thoughtfully, "I promised Julia's mother I would make a home for that girl, but I never have. I have always thought hated young things-"

"But do you?" asked Doctor Dent "Not now," answered the old woman. "And if Julia has had sens enough to get engaged to a tine young fellow like you, why, maybe it would be a good thing all the way round for her and you and I to live under this roof together."

"And the dog?" asked the doctor with a smile.

"And Brownie, of course," answered Mrs. Frisby firmly.

Make Use of Firewood in Wedding Proposal

A wooing custom on the island of Formosa was explained by Mr. E H. de Bunsen. H. M. consular service. Japan, to the Royal Geographical so-

"Marriage among the Tsalisen Pai-wans," he said, "is a matter of Individual choice, and not of family arrangement. The proposal can come from either party, but it is usually the man who makes it.

"The manner of wooing is peculiar. After taking steps to acquaint th woman, through a third party, what his intentions are the suitor takes a bundle of firewood by night and leaves it outside the door of the house where she lives. If the bundle is taken in side the house, it is a sign that he may continue his suit: if left 'in situ' it is an indication that his advances are rejected."

Eventually, if all goes well, he is one evening invited to enter, and such an invitation is held to constitute a binding engagement.

For reckoning small amounts firewood also passes for value in Formosa.

Aesthetics

Two aesthetes were in a drug store eating lunch. (We don't know where

"Yes," agreed the other. "It is like the evening sun against fleecy clouds." "And the white bread makes such a perfect background. Notice the delicate shading."

"And there is just enough of it to blend. Not overdone. I detest glaring colors."

Baal, the ged of the ancient Canaanites and Phoenicians, to whom children used to be sacrificed, is still worshiped by the Nuba blacks, who live on the granite mountains of the Dar Nuba, or land of the Nubas, in the far south of the Sudan, just above the equatorial swamps.

Bible Mention of Silk

Silk is undoubtedly mentioned once in the Bible namely, in Rev. 18:12. where it is mentioned among the treatments of the typical Babylon. It is, however, probable that the texture was known to the Hebrews from the time that their commercial relations were extended by Solomon.

Shelter for Hay Good Investment

Prevents Losses to Stack Bottoms and Tops and Is Not Expensive.

Losses due to spoilage of stack bottoms and tops may be largely moided by using some kind of a hay rollor Walter G. Ward, extension orn, relitect of the Kansas State Agriculprediction of the college, advises farmers. "Formately a shelter for hay does not require expensive construction. Where he hay shed is to be located in the field or any place not intended for Reding direct, pole construction is rer; satisfactory. Hay sheds, of course, are made in many different des and types, but for average conjilens, a width of 24 feet will be and convenient. It is wide enough be economical in construction, but not so wide as to require much hand abor, in handling hay with carrier."

Greatest Item of Cost. As the roof represents the greatest ilem of cost, a hay shed should be neale fairly high, Ward suggests. The ide walls may well be 20 feet or nore in height.

As the rigidity of an open pole shed is dependent largely on the poles, they should be set 4 or 5 feet in the gound. They may be spaced from 12 to 16 feet apart, so it does not require many of them to construct a hay shed of good size.

While some hay sheds are built villout covering the side walls, it is good practice to cover them part may down to prevent rain and snow told blowing on the hay when only artly filled. If the side walls are 20 eet high, the lower 8 to 12 feet may usually be left open without much spoilage. A cheap grade of lumber, galvanized iron may be used on

Plans Available. Plans are available in blue print form for two well established types of hay barns. These may be seen in any farm bureau office in Kansas or copies may be secured from the rural engineering department, Kansas State Agricultural college, Manhattan. The plan for the pole hay shed costs 20 ents and the feeding barn 30 cents.

Suckering Corn Costly

Practice for Gardener Suckering sweet corn is a practice handed down from time immemorial. Cardeners have gone on removing suckers, never doubting that it increased yield and quality. Recent exriments by H. C. Thompson, Cornell miversity, proved this practice not mitable either in increasing the ields or quality. The work was carried on for five ears and showed that with varieties which do not sucker heavily, there was no evidence of injury from the ractice, nor any decided advantage. With types which grow many suckers, ockering didn't increase yield malerially, but added to the cost $3 to S an acre. During periods of extreme mught or hot weather, suckering even may prove injurious to corn

In Different Instances

Fall Plowing Benefits Fall plowing in no way causes a loss of fertility unless we have an open winter and heavy rains, so that the soil will wash readily. No ferillity is ever lost by evaporation. Nothing but moisture goes; the solids are all left behind. In many instances, fall plowing is a benefit to the soil. Especially is this true in heavy clay or muck soil. The expos-We to the elements in the winter, the action of the frost, pulverizes the clay and puts it in very much better methanical condition. There is some hager in losing a portion of the soil y washing when it is fall plowed. If the land is left in sod, heavy rains do not wash away the soil, but when plowed, erosion may occur.

Better Fertilizers Cut Expense Bills

Easy to Cut in Half Quantity of Material Handled.

The trend among farmers toward the use of higher-grade fertilizers is bound to result in an appreciable reduction in the cost of growing crops. "For," says A. W. Blair, soil chemist at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture, Rutgers university, it is easily possible to cut almost in half the quantity of material to be handled, carted and shipped. This means a big saving in freight bills alone."

Even a moderate increase in the percentage of plant food in a fertilizer makes an important reduction in the amount of inert materials to be hauled. A ton of a 4-8-5 contains 80 pounds of ammonia, 160 pounds of phosphoric acid and 100 pounds of potash, making in all 340 pounds of plant food. The other 1,660 pounds are combining and conditioning materials. On the other hand, 1,600 pounds of a 5-10-6 fertilizer will give 336 pounds of plant food.

A common fertilizer for corn has been one containing food elements in the ratio of 4-8-4 and used at the rate of 500 pounds to the acre. In a 500pound application there are 20 pounds of ammonia, 40 of phosphoric acid and 20 of potash. Yet the same amount of plant food would be obtained from 400 pounds of a 5-10-5. Thus in fertilizing ten acres the farmer saves the handling of and freight charges on 1,000 pounds of material.

Control Cabbage Worms

by the Use of Poison Cabbage worms and cabbage aphids usually make their appearance about this season of the year in more or less destructive numbers. Farmers will find a cheap and effective remedy for controlling the pests in the use of lead arsenate and nicotine.

The most effective mixture is one containing 15 parts of powdered lead arsenate to 100 parts of hydrated lime. This is dusted on the plants and does not in any way impair the use of the cabbage for human food, it is said.

Repeated doses of the poison dust are necessary during the season, particularly when the heads are forming, if really effective control is to be se-

Where cabbage aphids are present in any appreciable numbers, it is suggested that 1 per cent nicotine be added to the poison dust. This will rid the plants of the lice at the same time that protection is provided against the ravages of the cabbage worms.

Haul and Spread Manure

on Clover or Grass Sod Manure loses something of its value every day it is kept. It is never better than the day it is made. Losses that occur in the barnyard may be partly saved if the manure is hauled out at once and spread on a clover or grass sod. There may be some loss from washing or leaching, but most of this will be deposited somewhere in the field. The Ohio station has demonstrated that. It has shown that eight tons of manure hauled fresh from the stable and spread on clove sod in December and January gives a crop increase of $42. An equal amount of manure piled in the barnyard and spread on the sod in April or May gave an increase of $35.

Substituting Silage for

Hay Found Satisfactory A number of agricultural colleges have carried out tests to find out the advisability of substituting silage for hay and the results have been satis factory. Silage not only is an excel lent substitute for hay, but it is more economical to feed it, and there is an increase in the production. It is not possible to tell exactly the amount saved by feeding silage, but it is around 25 per cent on the feed bill.

Silage also could be substituted for pasture, and it is profitable to feed it in summer. Where land is high priced, farmers are feeding silage instend of keeping the cows on pasture.

Cutting Millet Hay for General Use of Stock

If the millet hay is for general live stock feeding the crop should be cut just after blooming and before any hard seeds have formed. Millet hay containing seeds has long been held to have an injurious effect on horses. Teo much millet hay, cut at any stage, affects horses more than cattle or sheep. The early cut hay, however, is to be preferred for both cattle and sheep.

Millet is cut for hay with a mower the same as any prairie or tame grass hay. The crop usually stands erect and is easy to cut with mower.

Cholera Prevention Is

as Essential as Ever The chances are that we are not going to have cheap corn this fall. The chances are also that hogs will not bring as much money as they did last fall, at the same time we already have a lot of feed in the spring crop of pigs and cholera prevention is just as essential this year as if corn were cheap and hogs brought a higher price. Arrange to have your pigs vaccinated and regard the expense as insurance. Few farmers can afford to carry their own insurance risk,

Polish Women Now

Active in Politics

Polish women are steadily increasing their political activities. They have elected more members of their own sex to office than have their sisters in the United States, judging from a report recently made to the Zurich bureau of the Socialist and Labor International.

As a result of the recent municipal elections in Warsaw there are eleven women on the board of aldermen. Five of the women members belong to the Polish Socialist party, five to the various bourgeois groups, and one woman belongs to the Jewish Labor bund. During the municipal campaign much stress was laid on the fact that the Socialist program in Poland calls for special legal protection for mothers and children.

Endless Track for Plane

Landing skids consisting of endless belts are being tried on airpianes in France. Preliminary tests have indicated their feasibility. The belt, or "traveling track," is mounted on a set of ballbearings between two aluminum shells. The belts are said to reduce the chance of the plane's overturning, to simplify the task of landing on rough ground, and to ease the shock of alighting.

Swept City Streets

Dr. C. H. Marvin, president of the University of Arizona, recently swept the streets of Tucson, seat of the university. He had vowed that if his home city should be defeated by Phoenix in an American Legion membership race, he would himself clean the main thoroughfare of the univer sity town.

Oh, Dot!

When little Dorothy Kitchen, film comedienne, applied for a part, William Lord Wright, supervisor of the unit, looked her over and exclaimed: "My, where did you get those great big eyes?"

"Father and mother gave them to me for a birthday present," said Dorothy demurely.

Adult Butterflies

and Moths Eat Little The chief difference in habit between moths and butterflies is the fact that with one of them most work during the day shift and with the other most work the night shift, writes William Atherton DuPuy in Nature Magazine. The chief difference in form is the way most of them' wear their wings. Most butterflies put the wings on as shutters are put on a window. They are worked back and forth like shutters. Most moths, on the contrary, fold them down on the back. Neither moths nor butterflies feed to any extent as adults. The winged state constitutes their day of glory and of mating. They sip a bit of nectar from a flower here and there, but this is by no means a serious attempt at food-getting. They could quite well get along without any food at all. The eating of a lifetime is done in the caterpillar stage. Most caterpillars are leaf feeders.

To Patrol Forests

William Finlayson, minister of lands and forests for the province of Ontario, reports that his department has purchased and is bringing from England, four seaplane "moths" for use in connection with forest patrol work in northern Ontario, and for detection and fire-fighting work in the northern forests. These planes have a wing spread of 30 feet, compared with a wing spread of 86 feet of some of the airplanes now in use by the department. They have a speed of from 80 to 90 miles an hour.

Almost a Vacuum

The nearest approach to the creation of a vacuum has been accomplished by Prof. R. W. Sorenson at the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena. In connection with the electrical switching mechanism of the high-tension transmission plants, he has made a glass bulb containing only one-millionth part of its original content of air. This near-vacuum prevents arcing when the current is suddenly shut off as it is often necessary

It would be great if every one who congratulated you upon your success meant it.

If one is a glutton for praise, he will get a great deal that he doesn't deserve.

FACTS -AND THE OPEN MIND

THE MOST important element in business success—and the most difficult—is to be sure that you have all the facts before you act.

GET them all, from every possible source, is the first objective in General Motors. The Research Laboratories contribute some. These are nuggets, left in the crucible, after hundreds of ideas that looked good have been burned away. The Proving Ground contributes others. Dealers contribute. The public contributes. Every department contributes. Through the whole organization runs a spirit of inquiry and of rigid insistence on proof.

Our or such thinking come the new models announced from time to time by Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick. LaSalle, Cadillac—all with Fisher Bodies. And by Frigidaire. Each new model is a tested step forward. Nothing goes into it as a result of habit or guess or pride of opinion.

Nothing counts but hard-won facts, gathered and used with an open mind.

An Adjustable Steering Column to Suit Your Convenience

Buick for 1928 is extremely thoughtful of feminine comfort. One indication of this consideration is Buick's new steering column, which may be adjusted to the most comfortable position for women, as well as men.

And in addition, Buick for 1928 has a new steering wheel —slender to fit feminine fingers—yet deep and solid to provide the firm grip men demand.

Buick for 1928 pleases women because it is easier to drive -because it is more comfortable to ride in-and because it is the acknowledged style-leader among motor cars. That's why you see so many Buicks at fashionable gatherings and on the smartest boulevards.
