R. E. Betts, of Asheboro, visited his brother, A. L. Betts here this week.

Miss Sadie Hanes, the popular and accomplished daughter of our daughter of our townsman Philip Hanes, will be married Tuesday, Dec. 23rd to Prof. R. D. W. Connor.

Chief Etchison has done some much needed work on the street in rear of the Methodist church.

Lizzie Ratledge, daughter of Henry Ratledge, were married by Rev.
W. C. Willson at the parsonage on Thanksgiving.

G. C. Patterson has been appointed postmaster at Cooleemee. We believe he will make a good and efficient postmaster.

Hooper & Allen have opened a new flour mill on Dutchman creek, and will be ready to serve you by Jan. 1st.

John Naylor who works in the postoffice, spent Sunday with his parents near Cana.

We hear that electric lights will soon be installed at Cooleemee.

M. M. Kurfess, of Louisville, Ky., is at his old home on a visit.
He travels for the J. F. Kurfess
Paint Co., and says business is fine.
These Davie boys are making a good point.

A. H. O'Brien, of Maxton, will move here in a few days and will go into the furniture business with his brother-in-law A. L. Betts. They will manufacture furniture, coffins, etc.

At the close of business Nov.

business of $61,859.78. The capital stock was $10,000 with loans and discounts of $39,175. Deposits were 49,242.99.

On Thursday evening Robert
Jones was shot by Frank Clary fooling with a gun and it was accidentally discharged, inflicting a wound which resulting in Jones dying that night. Corner J. W.

Bailey held an inquest and Frank Clary was lodged in jail to await a preliminary hearing later. The case will likely go into court.

Eggs are selling high. The market price this week is 18 cents per dozen. Hams are selling at 16 cents a pound. Wheat is 90c. per bushel and corn 60 cents.

a position as clerk in the J. N. Ledford C. store at Cooleemee.

Big Corn Crop In West

One of the largest corn crops on record has been harvested in the western states.

According to the estimates of the department of agriculture Kansas will this year raise 170 million bushels nearly three times as large as last year's crop and one of the 12 best crops the state has ever produced.

It is estimated that Missouri will gather 168,896,000 bushels a seven per cent gain over the 1926 crop.
Missouri's 5,824,000 acres in corn this year averaged 29 bushels to the acre.

Over In Jefferson.

Lant Wright was in the local court charged with trapping fur-bearing animals out of season. In this case the animal was a polecat.
His alibi in defense was that he had caught the cat last December, but the hide in evidence was too fresh according to expert testimony so he was fined $25 plus and failing to secure it, went to Northern Hotel.—Watchman.

The Ignorant Borah.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, claiming to be a Republican but more often offering aid and encouragement to the Democrats made a statement a few days ago in which he announced to have incorporated in the next national Republican platform a plank declaring for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution, which is as everybody knows the prohibition amendment.

Senator Edge, of New Jersey, another Republican, but of the stalwart kind, asked Senator Borah why he singled out the eightteenth amendment and did not specify other amendments to the constitution, notably the fourteenth and fifteenth, which were flagrantly violated in the Southern States.

And would you believe it the Idaho senator professed ignorance of either of these amendments ever being violated in the Southern States and said that he would be glad to help enforce these amendments if it were shown that they were being violated.

Such ignorance on the part of Senator Borah is hardly understandable when everybody knows that the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution is openly violated in every Southern State.

As far as the Republican party in North Carolina is concerned if the Democratic election machine will count the votes as cast and we are allowed a free and untrammelled ballot there is no doubt but what North Carolina would be found in the Republican column.

It is the robbery of the votes of white Republicans in North Carolina by Democratic heelers that rankles in the breast of the patriotic Republicans and causes their passions to sometimes reach a white heat.

Give us free and fair elections in this State and all will be well.—
Union Republican.

A Curious Situation.

The anti-Al Smith resolution of the Baptist State convention was brief and mild. It did not mention Smith and it did not discuss the state of prohibition or drinking or lawlessness or any other of num-ous tempting by-products. But it was there, and nobody doubts its meaning.

And that reminds of a curious situation. Just prior to the meeting of the Baptist state convention was the meeting of the North Carolina conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and just prior to that was the meeting of the Western North Carolina conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and just prior to that was the meeting of the Western North Carolina conference of the same church.

The Western North Carolina conference, which met first, adopted without dissenting vote a vigorous resolution condemning the nomination of anyone who does not favor the 18th amendment. It adopted also, but as Bishop Mouzon has explained the two should not be joined in the headlines, a resolution against smoking.

One week later the North Carolina conference met, transacted business over a period of several days and adjourned. But nowhere in the published reports of the North Carolina conference do we find any word of a resolution against Al Smith, or against smoking cigarettes. More than a week has passed, and no explanation has come.

We confess to uncertainty as to what this means. Surely the North Carolina conference is just as strong against Al Smith and smoking cigarettes as the Western North Carolina conference. But somehow after the experience of the earlier conference is neglected to say so. It would be interesting if somebody could explain why.—

Durham is not the only town in North Carolina where a fellow can get a little snake-bite remedy when it comes to a pinch.

General Bowley is predicting a great war in thirty years. If we can keep out of war for thirty years why should we worry.

"The Smith boom is the voice of the whisky bums," remarks the Williamson Press. Well, perhaps the Press is using more truth than poetry.

The lights on the square are all burning and present an attractive appearance. The only thing needed now is a street sweeper with a good man to keep it going.

The month just closed was the warmest ever recorded in this section so far as we know. The coal and wood dealers have had a hard time, but they will make up for lost time before the robins nest again.

There are two many murders being committed these days. It seems to be a race as to who can kill the most folks—the men or the women. If the world is getting better the daily newspapers fail to say anything about it.

Congress is in session once more—for the 70th time since George called it together in the long ago. What this Congress is going to do for or about the country we don't know. If they can lower the cost of living and at the same time raise the price of all farm products then they can do wonders.

We mailed out about 200 state ments to our out-of-the-county subscribers two weeks ago. We suppose the reason we haven't heard from 175 of them is because they haven't a stamp to reply with. The reason we didn't send them the stamp was because we didn't have the money to buy the stamps with.

The 24-page edition of The Record which was issued last week contained 2,148 inches of advertising, which, we believe, is the largest amount of paid advertising ever carried in a single issue of a Davie county newspaper. We are proud of this big edition which was read by thousands of people in Davie and adjoining counties.

For many moons the whole country has been waiting and watching for the new Ford. The pain has been eased for the 1928 Ford in all its glory put in its appearance last week. There was much rejoicing, not only by the public but by the thousands of Ford dealers throughout the country. The new car is all right and will bring happiness to many who are able to purchase them and sadness to those who have never had enough money at one time to pay for one. We are in the last named class.

It is said that the contract will be let this month for the hardsurfacing of the recently graded road from Mocksville to the Iredell county line. We trust that this report is true. Since this road has been under construction Mocksville has been practically without bus service, only two schedules daily each way between this city, Salisbury and Winston-Salem. We are cut off from Statesville and other points except by rail. The bus line will resume operations to Charlotte via Mocksville when the Statesville road is open to the public.

What Davie County People Think.

"Please paste your Christmas Seals on the back of your letters instead of the front," requested J. L. Sheek postmaster at Mocksville. "Christmas Seals the back of your mail," he urged. The seals make a beautiful decoration. They also carry a valuable health message that is read daily, where every seal is used.

"The fight against tuberculosis has been most effective," says A. A. Holleman, mayor of Mocksville. During the last twenty years the death rate has been cut in half. We are most heartily in sympathy with the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Campaign. The funds are used to reduce the death rate from tuberculosis. We urge every citizen in our community to buy generously."

Dr. L. P. Martin said yesterday, "Public health work at the present time is the responsibility of every fine man and woman. The work of the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association appeals to me especially. It promotes types of health work that are gradually conquering tuberculosis. Lets everybody buy seals."

It will be in keeping with the true Christmas Spirit to give most freely to support the tuberculosis campaign," says Mrs. J. Frank Clement president of the Thursday Afternoon Club. There is no place where money can do greater good."

"Last year the purchase of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals aided the children in our community," said I. P. Graham president of the Davie County Lions Club. "I am particularly interested in the 1927 program because of the children who were made happy and healthy last year by the Seal Sale."

"There is nothing that a penny can purchase and receive more true value than in the tiny Tuberculosis Christmas Seal," said J. F. Moore, Cash of The Bank of Davie. Tuberculosis is an expensive disease. The economic value of a Tuberculosis Christmas Campaign cannot be overestimated in dollars and cents."

"The purchase of the Tuberculosis Christmas Seals is a weapon that aids many thousands of children to conquer tuberculosis," said Jacob Stewart prominent attorney of Mocksville. The seal fund promotes health by educating the public that tuberculosis is preventable and curable. "Health education is necessary to a well-rounded life," says E. P. Bradley, superintendent of the Davie county schools. "The Christmas Tuberculosis Seal is tiny, but it helps to educate the community how to prevent and to conquer tuberculosis. The Tuberculosis Seal drive is a National event, that helps to protect the health of citizens in our city by lessening the death for tuberculosis. I earnestly urge our citizens to buy Seals."

Mr. Jake Hanes, useful citizen of Mocksville said yesterday, "I think the value of the work accomplished through the sale of the Christmas Seals is tremendous. The work is increasing every year and the citizens of our community are responding nobly to the purchase of seals. Every seal bought is a weapon against tuberculosis."

All leading educators of the present time are stressing the importance of health instruction being given to the child in school and emphasis is being given to the prevention of tuberculosis, says J. B. Johnston member of our Davie County Board of Education, as thousands of children under the age of 14 years are becoming victims every year. The Christmas Seal fund brings aid to many of these unfortunate little folks, so let us all help to save "One of the least of these."

The officials of the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Sale deserve the support of every one in their praise worthy to make this annual event a success. The fund derived from the sale of seals go to a cause that no one can deny I think the Seal Sale deserves the support of every good citizen says Mr. John Sanford, "Christmas Seals save the taxpayer money," declared J. S. Daniel County Accountant. "More than 5000 children have been saved from Tuberculosis in the past year. The Tuberculosis Christmas Seal funds were used for food, care and instruction of these children. This was done at no extra expense to public."

Thanking all for their loyal support this year and in the past, we are entering into this year's campaign with more good courage than ever before and feel that we will make of it the greatest success ever before and feel that we will make of it the greatest success ever recorded in Davie county. Please be ready to buy when these good ladies call on you and buy as generously as we were for short in meeting our demands last year.

MRS. QUEEN BESS KENNEN, County Chairman.

Meets Horrible Death.

A sad accident occurred about ten o'clock Friday night on the Fork road about two miles out of Mocksville, when a Ford roadster owned and driven by Elgin Hendricks, of Bixby, ran off a ten foot embankment and turned over twice, breaking Dennis Jarvis' neck, death resulting instantly. Messrs Hendricks and Jarvis had been in this city attending the picture show and were on their way to the home of Mr. Jarvis near Fork, when the accident occurred. The night was rainy and foggy, and the driver was unable to see the road clearly. He got too near the edge and the car left the road, turning over. Mr. Hendricks escaped unhurt. The dead man was about 22 years of age, and is the son of Mr. Henry Jarvis. A coroner's jury was empaneled and after making an investigation of the accident, rendered a verdict that the death of Mr. Jarvis was an accident and was unavoidable. The body of Mr. Jarvis was laid to rest in Snady Grove cemetery at Advance Sunday.

Accidental Shot Kills Iredell Woman.

Lowery-Dull

The many friends of Miss Elma Lowery of Cana will be interested to learn of her marriage on Saturday afternoon Nov. 27th to Mr. Floyd Dull, of Pino. The ceremony was performed by her pastor Rev. C. S. Cashwell, of Statesville. Their many friends wish for them a long and happy life.

Celebrates Birthday.

Tuesday, December 6, J. F. Click, veteran newspaper man of Hickory, will have reached the impressive age of four-score years. Mr. Click was born in Davie county at a fine old colonial home which has been in the possession of the Click family from Revolutionary days. He was reared in a family of twenty, and was the seventh child. Coming into Catawba about 40 years ago, he edited various newspapers here for many years, serving for over two decades as the guiding spirit of the old Hickory Times-Mercury.—Hickory Record.

Mr. James A. Smith died at his home near Redland on Friday, Dec. 2nd, aged 66 years. The funeral and burial services were held at Macedonia church Saturday afternoon at one o'clock, Rev. James E. Hall conducting the services. Mr. Smith is survived by his widow and four sons, seven brothers and four sisters, also twelve grandchildren.

New York. — The subway hat-snatcher—a mysterious joker who for three weeks has been annoying strap-hangers in the downtown subways—has been and unidentified in the police hospital morgue as the result of his clothing catching on a train.

The hat-snatcher's method of operating was to wait until a train was pulling out of a station, then reach quickly through a window and remove the headgear of some unfortunate passenger. By the time the victim realized his loss, the train would be speeding underground a block away. Fedoras, dilapidated felt and straw hats all looked alike to the hat-snatcher, though he was particularly fond of dories.

the latter grabbed his wrist. Rather than kill the tormentor, the officer released his hold when the car roared toward the end of the station platform. The hat-snatcher was lost to sight and the policeman nursed a bruised hand. The snatcher's last joke was when a northbound Bronx local pulled out of the Times Square station. He inserted his hand into the nearest window and grabbed the nearest hat. But something went wrong. The joker's sleeve caught on a projection. He was dragged off his feet and hung outside the window while men in the car tried frantically to pull him inside.

At Fifth street his body struck a projection and fell to the tracks, where two wheels of the car passed over him, killing him instantly.

A wrecking crew jacked up the car, but the mangled clothing bore no identification marks.

Man 99 Years Old Wins

a Decree of Divorce

Los Angeles.—To Francis M. Powers went the distinction of being the oldest person ever to obtain a divorce in Los Angeles county. He is ninety years old. Judge Schauer granted him a divorce from Syndora Guy Powers, who confesses to sixty-seven years herself.

Powers was testy about the matter. "The day she left me I gave her $25. It was worth it," he said. "Never saw her since, until in court, and I wouldn't have known her then, only she introduced herself."

The difficulty in the Powers family, as Powers told it, was that Mrs. Powers tried to crowd him. An hour after the wedding, he said, she asked him to deed or will his home to her. Mrs. Powers was in court, although she had dismissed a cross-complaint.

"I don't want him to have a divorce, though," she explained. "I don't want to be a grass widow, because I always considered that a disgrace."

The marriage took place June 11, 1920, and the separation the following August 1. Prior to the wedding, Powers said, Mrs. Powers had worked for him as a housekeeper on a salary.

Wife's Plea for Erring

Husband Comes Too Late

Fresno, Calif.—Mrs. Nettie A. Nelson exercised the woman's privilege of changing her mind in the court of City Justice Earle J. Church, but she changed it too late to prevent the imposition of sentence on her husband, Henry, on a charge of assault. Nelson pleaded guilty. His wife was the complaining witness. Then Mrs. Nelson rose from her seat in the courtroom and asked that the charge be dismissed. The judge refused.

Undone by Crutches

Kansas City.—A pair of crutches a foot too long for him got Harry Burns a 50-day sentence. Burns was on crutches, leaning against a building, begging. He walked to a patrol wagon without the aid of the crutches.

MOTHER A Cross, Feverish Child is Bilious, Constipated

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruity laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Girls and Old Maids for Sage of Atchison

I've always had a sneaking belief that when a husband dies his widow should retire from the love game. And the idea is not new; plenty of other men are as mean about widows as I am.

The Hindus, for example, believe that when a husband dies his widow should kill herself, or devote her entire time thereafter to doing good.

I do not go that far, and know how speedily widows recover from their grief, and become charming, but I should not care to love one.

I am so sentimental, and have so high regard for love and marriage, that it always shocks me a little when I see a widow "taking notice" again.

I am conscious it is a foolish notion.

But girls and old maids for me.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Treasures in Wilderness

Lost in the Caucasian wilderness in the village of Zugdidi, a palace of the former Dadiani princess, one of the oldest and wealthiest Georgian families and related to Napoleon and Alexander I, stands today practically as it stood 100 years ago in the heyday of those powerful rulers. In addition to much rich furniture of the period, some of which is said to have been presented by the French emperor, there is a collection of stone and bronze arms, Greek statues, ancient Greek coins, a number of skulls of untold value. The contents of the palace have been converted by Caucasian authorities into a museum, but owing to the inaccessibility of the mountain village few except Georgian peasants ever visit it.

More Realistic "Movies"

Natural motion picture effects are claimed for a new camera whose movable back, connected to the lens by a flexible bellows, is shifted about by a system of cams and levers while the pictures are being taken, according to Popular Science Monthly. The photographs are said to appear more realistic than ordinary "movies"; they show relative movement between the near and far planes of the picture, such as you see when you move your head sideways, adding to the stereoscopic effect of depth.

Some Prefer Quiet Styles

"Paris arbiters of men's fashions," says an exchange, "have approved of a royal blue evening suit for men to be worn with pale blue crepe de chine underwear." Let 'em decree till they burst, say we. Speaking for one man, nothing can induce us to give up our rose beige pongee for any pale blue crepe de chine.—Boston Transcript.

So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Bayer—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Sick Headache Due to Constipation

Every person who suffers with sick headache should be warned against becoming a slave to headache powders, pain tablets, etc. These agents may relieve the pain but they do not remove the cause, and their continued use may lead to serious injury to your constitution, especially to your heart and kidneys.

Years ago Dr. W. L. Hitchcock proved that constipation is usually the cause of sick headache and he devised a simple, harmless vegetable prescription that is pleasant to take and most agreeable in its effects, yet removes the cause of sick headache and constipation without any constipating after-effect. Ask your druggist for Hitchcock's Laxative Powder. You will find that it is delightful and by far the best remedy for sick headache, sour stomach, foul breath and excessive gas formation. 25c for a large box at any drug store. 62 Years in Tennessee and 46 in Texas

108 Years Old

ONE hundred and eight years ago, Blackman L. Shirley was born near Pikeville in the Sequatchie Valley of Tennessee. His father, Jesse Shirley, had come over from South Carolina and built a home in the then sparsely settled new state. Blackman was the ninth of fifteen Shirley children. His oldest brother lived to be 101, and several brothers and sisters almost reached the century mark.

He told the interviewer, who recently took the accompanying pictures, that he started to work when he was 8 or 9 years old, helping his father carry the U. S. mail between Pikeville and Jasper. He was 42 when the war broke out between the states, and when the Union regiment of the Fifth

Tennessee Infantry was organized, he enlisted and served through several battles. In 1861, Blackman Shirley moved his family to Parker County, Texas, where he now resides with his third wife. His oldest daughter, Mrs. Sarah Pitts, is 85, and lives in Oklahoma. His youngest daughter, recently married, was born when her father was 90 years of age.

Mr. Shirley is in good health for a man of his age. In September, he was going about his home without assistance. His memory seemed remarkably clear.

MR. SHIRLEY Says: "I consider Black-Draught the best purgative I have ever used. It is a wonderful medicine. Years ago, in Tennessee before I came to Texas, I knew about Black-Draught, and we used to keep it in our home, there."

"Whenever I had a spell of indigestion, I would take a dose of it and the spell would soon pass off. That is almost fifty years ago. For several years after I came to Texas, I was troubled with indigestion. I had sour stomach and sick headache. Some days I would feel dull and my head felt heavy. I found that taking Black-Draught would prevent this, so I never allowed myself to suffer long."

"Sometimes now I suffer from attacks of constipation. I always use Black-Draught when I have one of these spells, and it does not last long. I rarely take any kind of medicine, except an occasional dose of Black-Draught. It relieves constipation. I like a vegetable medicine. We try to keep this medicine in our home."

STORY FROM THE START

Handsome, fastidious and wealthy—young St. Croix Creighton awaits his sweetheart at their trysting place. She is fifteen minutes late, this ordinary little Pennsylvania Dutch girl, Meely Schwenckton, but he awaits her eagerly. She is so demurely beautiful, he thinks, but so out of his "class." Despite her apparent innocence and ignorance, she succeeds in keeping him at a distance, to his chagrin. Meely, in the Schwenckton home, is altogether unlike the girl who meets St. Croix clandestinely, and her speech has little of the Pennsylvania Dutch accent.

The noise of Mr. Schwenckton's suddenly rising and walking to the door at the head of the stairs sent Lizzie, white and quivering, back to her dish-washing.

Meely, slowly following, took a towel and began to dry the dishes already washed, both of them waiting in tense anxiety for the entrance of "the Minister."

But Mr. Schwenckton did not at once come down. Meely and Lizzie, from where they worked, could still hear, faintly, the voices in the room above.

"I have awful afraid!" Lizzie whispered, her teeth chattering as she splashed in the dishpan. "Pop he whips so hard! It's awful good of you, Meely, to help me! Meely if I have all done nice and clean till Pop comes down, he won't whip me so hard!"

"You poor little thing!" Meely exclaimed, working as fast as Lizzie herself. "I won't let him touch you!"

"But I have afraid that would make him do it all the harder, Meely—your tekin' up for me after what his Susie just tol' him!—how you tol' me it was a pity I wasn't old enough to run off! If you took up for me now, after her tellin' him that, he'd think I was gettin' spilt by you and that he'd have to learn me!"

"But you've done nothing! That horrible woman lies! I'll tell him how she lies! And how she imposes on you two children and overworks you. He's too fond of you, Lizzie, to allow it, once he understands. He seems so especially fond of you, Lizzie. Did he ever whip you?"

"Not yet. I'm the only one he didn't whip. Each one, as soon as they got big enough, got one awful hard whippin' and then never no more. Oncet was enough. After that one they never disbelieved to Pop no more. Oncet was enough to learn 'em. Except Sammy. On account of Aunt Rosy's bein' here, Sammy's had his second one. The reason Nettle and Jakey run off was that Pop was a-going to whip 'em if they didn't mind to Aunt Rosy, and as big-grown as what they are yet, they didn't want to take it off of him, so they run off."

"But how have you escaped, Lizzie?" "I don't know—I never seemed to do nothin' to get a whippin' for. But I know Aunt Rosy'll make him whip me tonight! I have so afraid, Meely! I'd run off to Gramma's like Nettle done if it wasn't dark night and ten miles away!"

"It's a wonder your father doesn't force Nettle to come home. He did try to, didn't he?" "Yes, but Gramma she told Pop he couldn't make Nettle come home till Aunt Rosy's away ready. Till Susie's well and Aunt Rosy goes, then Nettle she'll come home. But mind you what she tol' Pop yet!"

"What?" "She tol' Pop if he tried to whip her for runnin' off, she'd run off where he couldn't find her, like Jakey done. Pop he's awful downhearted about Jakey. He don't show it much; but he is."

It was not until after Sammy had finished his supper and the table was cleared and the last dish washed and put away in the cupboard, that Mr. Schwenckton, followed by Aunt Rosy, returned to the kitchen.

Lizzie, with a faint hope of saving herself, spoke to him ingratiatingly, though she was white with fear of him. "See, Pop, how I got all the work done—all the dishes and pans—"

"Yes, well, but," Aunt Rosy broke in, "look at your diapers still layin'—"

Mr. Schwenckton laid his arm around Lizzie's thin shoulders, which shrank away from his touch, for she did not know whether it meant a caress or whether he was about to lead her away for punishment.

Meely, fearing the latter (for she had been a witness to Sammy's chastisement a week ago) could not restrain herself, unwise as she felt her interference might be. "Mr. Schwenckton, this woman doesn't tell you the truth!" she said breathlessly. "Lizzie's an obedient, willing, hard-working child!—and if Aunt Rosy can't get on with her, that's her fault and not Lizzie's. And, Mr. Schwenckton, it's a crime to put a little frail girl like Lizzie to such heavy work as washing sheets and diapers! You don't know, do you, that this little girl stands at the wash-tub several hours every day? Her back will be strained! I ought to have told you before, but I hated to interfere. Now, Mr. Schwenckton, you've got to put a stop to it! You must, you must!—this woman's a devil!"

"But, Mr. Schwenckton raised his hand in protest against such unseemly language on the lips of a girl; and Aunt Rosy's look of deadly spite at Meely's accusation turned into a broad smirk of satisfaction. "Didn't I tell you Sam, how she's gettin' Lizzie spilt fur you? Learnin' her to swear and curse (you heard her call me a devil yet!) and to disrespect me and you—"

"Aunt Rosy," Mr. Schwenckton spoke in quietly, "I didn't speak nothin'—you upstairs, for the reason I did cwant to get my Susie stirred up. But I'm sayin' to you now that I pay you to do the work here and you don't do it. You try to put it off on my little children. And what they don't do don't get done. You drove off my Nettle and Jakey and now you abuse Sammy and Lizzie. If it wasn't that Susie wants you here, I'd get another housekeeper; for no perfect stranger could do worse'n what you do! So if there's any more trouble and if things ain't kept cleaner 'round here, I will send you packin', now mind I'm tellin' you!"

Aunt Rosy, with a look of cold, concentrated resentment at Meely, turned to go instantly upstairs to her sister—but Mr. Schwenckton checked her by the simple, but effective means of barring her way with his bravado outstretched arm. "Not up there. I won't have Susie worried no more tonight." He pointed to the door opening from the kitchen into a small bedroom. "To your own room, Aunt Rosy."

She looked at him reproachfully. "So this here's the thanks a body gets for leavin' my own home and comin' here to work myself to the bone for you—"

"Yes, well, if you did work for us—but you don't. You make my little children do all. Puttin' a little girl like Lizzie yet to the wash-tub! Y! y! y! Don't you leave me hear of such a thing again!"

"It's her," Aunt Rosy pointed vindictively at Meely, "that makes you so contrary! Takin' your children's part agin your wife's sister! And standin' by a stranger that's tryin' to keep your wife sick by washin' her and openin' windows on her—"

"That'll do, that'll do, Aunt Rosy. It didn't need Meely to open my eyes—though for a while, there, I was awful dumb about you. But I only gotta take a look at this here crusty, through-the-kitchen-and-your-puttin'-Lizzie at the wash-tub, a child like that!—well, le' me tell you that when I come in here this evenin' and see Lizzie at that there tub standin', I felt dangerous! I didn't show it none, but for a minute there I felt dangerous! So," he concluded, "don't leave it happen again. And don't go near Susie no more tonight."

For an instant Aunt Rosy wavered, as though weighing the possibility of defying her brother-in-law. But she knew the futility of such an attempt. He'd simply pack her in his car and run her back to her own home; that's how he'd settle it.

So, with a parting glance of malice at Meely, she turned away and went to her bedroom.

Mr. Schwenckton stooped and, picking Lizzie up in his arms as though she were a baby, carried her across the room to a big rocking-chair, where, folded to his breast, he rocked her until she fell asleep.

Then, very carefully so as not to waken her, he carried her upstairs and put her to bed.

CHAPTER III

It was at the heavy noon meal of the next day that Meely for the first time heard Mr. Schwenckton break his own rule against complaining at the table. "Ach, Aunt Rosy, these here files is somepin awful! Susie she never has no files when she house-keeps. And this here's October yet! My first wife, neither, she didn't have no files. Lentways not in October yet! Why do you so leave the files in? Couldn't you manage with less files?"

"It ain't my fault that there's files. It's that there fat farm-hand of yours that gives files in fur me, still; fur when he goes out the door, he's so fat he can't get out quick and that lets the files in."

"You're always got a good excuse, ain't, Aunt Rosy?"

"But I don't see, Mister, why you ever got such a fat farm-hand that he gives files in fur me and that he's too fat to set in your car and drive it for you." She diverted the conversation from files.

"Yes, it is some onhandy that me and Absalom's both too big to drive our car easy. Us," smiled the farmer, who liked his little joke, "we gotta set in the back seat and have such a chignonner! But, Aunt Rosy, blamin' Absalom for these here files—no. That's goin' too far. I don't give you right. You better get after these here files—"

"Did Absalom tell you," Aunt Rosy diplomatically interrupted, "who his company is that's visitin' at their place?"

This question proved effective in diverting attention from the files.

"Why, no, he didn't speak nothin' to me that they had company visitin' 'em," said Mr. Schwenckton. "What makes you conceit that?—that they have company?"

"I seen a strange shirt on their wash-line this mornin' that I recognized wasn't Absalom's. I didn't get time to run down and ast Missus whose the strange shirt was—what with all I had to do and Lizzie not helpin' any," she whined in a tone of deep injury. "But this after, meebly, I'll get time to run down."

"That's funny, too, again—that they got a strange shirt hangin' out and Absalom not sayin' nothin' to me about company," remarked Mr. Schwenckton reflectively.

"But couldn't the 'strange shirt' be a new one of Absalom's?" Meely asked.

"No, it ain't Absalom's size or color," Aunt Rosy pointed out. "Do you know," said Mr. Schwenckton thoughtfully, "what I suspicion about that there strange shirt? I suspicion they're got a boarder at Absalom's, like us. I guess Marvin Creighton's boardin' with 'em since his Pop turned him out! For, you see, this here township's very handy in the center of all the schools he has to visit. Yes, I bet you that's whose the strange shirt is! It's Marvin Creighton's! So then, Meely," he jocularly added, "you better watch your step, with the school superintendent livin' right handy here in sight of us! On our own farm yet!"

Meely stared blankly for a moment, without comment; then, pulling herself together, dropped her eyes to her plate.

As Meely remained silent, Aunt Rosy prodded her for an expression of her sensations at the great news.

"I suppose," Meely at last began to articulate, "my teaching, when he holds it, will give him a shock! It's not," she sighed, "according to rule. I don't know the rules! I don't know anything about teaching! I do have some ideas of my own, though—"

The sudden realization that she was talking to one of the school trustees brought her to with a jolt.

Surgeon Well Placed Among Nation's Great

Selection of Dr. Ephraim McDowell as one of Kentucky's two representatives in the Hall of Fame—the other is Henry Clay—is a reminder of the great service this surgeon rendered to humanity. He laid the way of his profession in abdominal surgery when, in 1809, he performed a difficult operation that never had been tried before, saved the patient's life and enabled his profession to save countless other lives afterward. Doctor McDowell was literally a "doctor of the old world," the type that thought nothing of the monetary return from his practice. He was an adviser of the people, often in financial matters as well as being the custodian of their health and that of their children. He was born in Rockbridge county, Virginia, and had ample opportunity to study the science in which he early decided to spend his life. After obtaining what medical education was available in America, he attended the University of Edinburgh and on his return from Europe located in Danville, Ky., in 1795 to practice. It was there that he performed the operation that made him famous.—Kansas City Star.

ISAIAH COUNSELS THE RULERS

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 37:5-11; 14-20. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in Thee.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Care for a Nation.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Care of a Nation.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God the Ruler of Nations.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Recognition of God in National Affairs.

The committee has given as the scripture units chapters 7, 31, 36 and 37. It will materially help in the grasp of the lesson if brief attention be given to these chapters; therefore in the outline brief reference will be made to chapters 7 and 31 while confining the main exposition to chapters 36 and 37.

1. Isaiah's Message to Ahaz.

1. Prophecy concerning Immanuel (ch. 7).

The occasion of this prophecy was an invasion from the north by Israel and Syria. This invasion greatly alarmed Ahaz. To calm his fearful heart Isaiah assured him that God's purpose concerning the nation would not fail. He urged the exercise of faith in God, offering to confirm his faith by working any miracle desired. While with false humility he refused a sign the prophet announced the giving of a sign which would be the birth of Immanuel.

2. A promise of divine protection (ch. 31).

Ahaz foolishly called for the help of Assyria and Egypt against Israel and Syria. Isaiah rebuked him for this, showing him clearly that his only help was in God.

3. Judah invaded by the Assyrians (Isa. 36).

1. Rabshakeh meets a deputation from Judah (vv. 1-21).

He represented Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, whose mission was to induce Judah to surrender. His method to accomplish this was:

(1) Intimidation (vv. 4-9).

He tried to bully them into submission.

(2) Misrepresentation (v. 10).

He asserted that it was useless for them to put their trust in God and even declared that the Lord had sent him to destroy Egypt.

(3) He tried to create a panic among the people (vv. 13-21). Fearing such a panic the deputation of the Jews urged Rabshakeh not to speak in the Jews' language.

(4) He promised them plenty in another land (vv. 16, 17).

2. The report to Hezekiah by the deputation (v. 22). They rent their garments in fear and dismay over their perilous condition, for the crisis long before predicted by Isaiah had now come upon them.

3. Hezekiah's Behavior (Isa. 37).

1. Resorted to the House of the Lord (v. 1).

This is a sure retreat for God's people in time of distress (Ps. 73:16, 17; 73:18). This action was prompted by faith, for God had promised that whoever in time of distress resorted to His house would be heard by Him (II Chron. 7:15, 16).

2. Sent to Isaiah (vv. 2-7).

The natural and logical thing for the king to do under such circumstances was to send for God's prophet.

3. Hezekiah's prayer (vv. 14-20).

Rabshakeh, who seems to have withdrawn from Jerusalem for a little while, now returned from Sennacherib with a letter warning Hezekiah against trusting God for deliverance, for no God was able to stand against the Assyrian army. He spread the letter before the Lord and prayed.

(1) He recognized God's throne, making it the ground of his plea (v. 16).

He reposed his faith in the lordship of Jehovah, knowing that all power and authority resided in Him.

(2) He recognized the peril which threatened the people (vv. 17-19).

(3) He asked for deliverance (v. 20).

4. Isaiah's message to Hezekiah (vv. 21-35).

(1) That Sennacherib's sin was blasphemy against the Holy One of Israel (vv. 21-23).

(2) That Sennacherib had forgotten that he was an instrument in God's hand (vv. 24-28).

(3) That judgment upon Sennacherib was imminent (vv. 29-35).

IV. The Assyrian Army Destroyed (vv. 36-38).

The angel of the Lord went forth and slew in the camp of the Assyrians 185,000 men, so Sennacherib was turned back by the way he came.

The Bible as a Foundation

The Kitchen Cabinet

(© 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

A clear soup, a bit of fish, a couple of entrees and a nice roast. That's my kind of a dinner.—Thackeray.

A WORD ABOUT DIET

There is no doubt that the American people like good food and are hearty eaters. The French may be more clever in cookery, with their wonderful sauces and economical dishes, the Germans may be more thrifty, but Americans revel in more good food than any other nation.

Most of our country is cold enough during the winter months so that such breakfasts are not too heavy fuel for such season. Nor are the rich pork roasts with stuffing, brown gravies, sweet puddings, mince pies, candied sweet potatoes, escalloped oysters and fruit cakes, too hearty, if neutralized and balanced by a generous ration of green vegetables such as cabbage, lettuce, spinach and celery as well as fresh juicy fruits. The fresh green vegetables are needed to combat acidity, which means rheumatism and other ills which always result from a too concentrated diet.

Fortunately fruits are always in the market, there are no months of the year when the juicy orange and other citrus fruits are not to be procured. Apples are becoming a fruit seasonable in the markets all the year. The citrus fruits, oranges, lemons and grapefruit are anti-acid in their effect on the system, slightly laxative and full of the precious vitamins which supply "pep."

Every housewife should not fail to balance a hearty breakfast with a glass of orange juice or half a grapefruit. When eating luncheon serve a lettuce salad with a hearty meal. After dinner don't eat candy, popcorn or nuts, but before retiring take an orange or drink a pint of hot lemonade. It will give you a good night's rest and a refreshed body in the morning. Hot lemonade shouldn't be confined to people who have colds; drink it for health and often. It is a tonic and a cold preventive.

Supper Dish.—Spread slices of rather stale bread with butter, lay into a deep baking dish, sprinkle with grated cheese and cover with two cupsful of milk and two beaten eggs, with salt to season. Bake until the custard is set. Serve hot at once.

To broil sweetbreads, cut the parboiled sweetbread after splitting it, sprinkle well with salt and pepper, then broil five minutes. Serve with lemon butter. Lard sweetbreads with salt pork, then roast, basting often with good broth. Serve when well browned.

For the Family Table.

Oysters are an important health food. Twenty years ago they were thought to be a delicacy, an appetizer, but with little food value. Now we learn that its composition is of such character as to make it more nearly than most foods—self-sufficient as a diet. The oyster resembles milk in this respect. One pound of oysters will furnish 7 per cent of the energy a man needs daily, 28 per cent of the protein, 35 per cent of the calcium, 53 per cent of the phosphorus and 13.6 per cent of the iron. Recent experiments have shown that the raw oyster is rich in vitamin C, an essential element in the food for preventing scurvy.

People living in cities, especially in winter, and eating almost exclusively of cooked food, need to seize every occasion that offers itself to consume food rich in vitamins. Mollusks, and oysters in particular, are, from this point of view, a most valuable resource.

Oyster Cocktail.—Have oysters very cold. Put not more than six in each cocktail glass and just before sending to the table cover with a dressing made in the following way: Mix together one tablespoonful of mushroom catsup, one tablespoonful of tomato catsup, one tablespoonful of strained lemon juice, five drops of tabasco sauce; add salt to taste. This quantity will make three cocktails. Serve with thin slices of brown bread and celery.

Oyster Chowder.—Chop fifty good-sized oysters. Prepare a cupful of finely chopped celery in the bottom of a pan, then a layer of cooked rice and a layer of oysters. Season with salt and pepper. Repeat these layers, using two layers of oysters. Pour over one cupful of boiling water, and cook slowly for twenty-five minutes. Beat the yolks of two eggs with one cupful of milk; add this to the chowder, stir carefully and serve as soon as it becomes hot.

Oyster Soup.—Take one quart of oysters, carefully drain, and look over for broken shells. But a quart of milk in a saucepan, seasoning of salt, butter and pepper and a bit of mace. Put the liquor which has been strained from the oysters with enough water to make a pint; when boiling drop in the oysters and cook just long enough to curl the edges. Add the hot milk and serve.

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water
Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health. When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Flowers Fall in Love
If Sir Jagadis Bose, the noted Indian scientist, knows what he is talking about, romance is not limited to the animal world. He says flowers have hearts and fall in love. His opinion is that most present teachings in respect to botany are incorrect. Experiments show, he says, that the death of one flower may cause another to pine away and die. Control the Corn Borer!

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
NE of the greatest "battles" in modern history is now being waged against a foreign invader on American soil. It is a battle against an enemy which has threatened to wipe out nearly $10,000,000,000 worth of American crops.

To save them, the sum of $10,000,000 already has been appropriated by the federal government, and much more will probably be required before the fight is ended.

The enemy is the "assassin of the corn field," the "most dangerous enemy of Indian corn that has ever appeared in America"—the European corn borer. This enemy is an alien that first appeared on American soil in Canada in 1921. After ravaging the corn fields of that country and almost totally destroying them in the short space of six years, it sneaked over the boundary line and appeared in the United States. Ohio and Michigan were the first states which it infested and there the losses mounted to as high as 80 per cent of the normal crop.

Before its presence became widely known, the pest had spread into New England and New York, through Pennsylvania as far south as Pittsburgh and into one corner of West Virginia. Then it began to work farther west into Michigan, invaded the northeastern corner of Indiana and within the last year it struck at the heart of America's famous corn belt by appearing in Kankakee county, Illinois. As the result of its operations an area of 8,000,000 acres, covering 10,000 square miles, has been infested and unless it is controlled, it is predicted that the entire agricultural map of the world's greatest farm producing area will be changed.

Threat to Crops
If the corn borer threatened only the corn crop it would be bad enough. But in striking at King Corn, this little insect is a menace also to the very foundations of the dairy, pork, poultry and other farm industries. It is estimated that 80 per cent of the corn is fed to live stock and sold in the form of meat, milk, poultry. Forty per cent of the corn is fed to hogs and 15 per cent to cattle. Last year these hogs were worth $1,060,000,000 and cattle $1,105,000,000. The value of the poultry was estimated at $900,000,000 and the dairy products $1,515,000,000. Add to these the value of the corn crop itself, $2,000,000,000, and it gives the staggering total of $10,000,000,000 which the European corn borer is threatening to reduce. Of course, this does not mean that the corn borer can wipe out of existence that much wealth, but it is a potential danger to it unless the ravages of the pest are checked.

Alarming as the situation has been, there is one ray of light in a recent statement by Secretary Jardine of the United States Department of Agriculture that even though the corn borer might spread over the entire corn belt, by that time his department would have developed effective and economical methods of control and the damage would be kept to a minimum.

The Agricultural department has recently completed a survey of the results of the $10,000,000 spring campaign in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan authorized by congress. Although this survey shows one and a half times as many borers in 1927 as in 1926, this is only one-sixth of the normal increase in the number of borers in the infested area that is shown in the estimate of four times as many in 1926 as in 1925. The significance of this is shown in the remainder of Secretary Jardine's statement which reads as follows:

The reduction of the rate of increase in the number of borers this year indicates the effectiveness of the control measures employed in the recent spring campaign, but these results also show most emphatically that the borer is a real menace. The department's opinion continues to be that the spread of the borer to the entire corn belt is inevitable, and that it is a situation to which the farmers, the state departments of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges must adjust their plans. At the same time the control measures used in the spring were sufficient to believe that serious commercial damage to the nation's two-billion-dollar corn crop can be avoided to a considerable extent. The results of the 1927 campaign are due in a large measure to the co-operation given by farmers in the infested area in carrying out the clean-up measures recommended. The continuation of such concerted and vigorous action by all farmers in the area in putting effective control measures into practice is the only immediate way in which commercial damage can be prevented.

These measures include the destruction of all cornstalks, remnants of stalks, and corn cobs in the fields or near the premises, before the emergence of the corn borer moth. Effective methods of holding down the increase in the number of corn borers must be adopted into the farming practice generally or serious readjustment of the present system of farming in the corn belt area will become necessary, as has already occurred in Canada since 1923.

The joint spring campaign of the federal and state forces having demonstrated the effectiveness of the control measures used in slowing down the increase of the number of borers, it is assumed that adequate control measures will be continued by the states affected. The department will continue to co-operate with the states in accounting to determine infestation, the maintenance of quarantines and in providing for necessary research and educational work insofar as the regular appropriations of the department for the purpose are available.

New Bulletin Out
In furtherance of its "Control the Corn Borer" campaign, the Agricultural department has recently issued a bulletin for farmers on the subject of "The European Corn Borer—Its Present Status and Methods of Control" which contains the following advice on how each can do his share to help thwart the "assassin of the corn field":

The main effect at control of the corn borer in the Middle West should be directed toward the disposal of corn refuse.

Large-stemmed weeds or grasses growing in or along the edges of badly infested cornfields must also be destroyed. Infested plants may be destroyed through any one of the following methods or by a combination of such methods: (1) Feeding to live stock direct from the field, or as silage, or as finely cut or finely shredded material. (2) Plowing under cleanly. Each field presents a separate problem. In fields which cannot be plowed or otherwise handled effectively in the spring, special effort should be made to dispose of all corn remnants during the fall. In case the corn is to be cut, it should be cut as low and as early as possible. Special low-cutting attachments for corn binders must be purchased for this purpose. If corn is to be cut by hand, a short-handled heavy hoe should be used because this permits low cutting without undue exertion. In case infested cornstalks are fed direct to live stock without previous cutting or shredding, the uneaten parts should be destroyed unless cleaned use of the silo and husker-shredder machines is recommended.

If plowing is to be effective in destroying the corn borer all trash must be turned under completely so that plowed-under material may not be dragged to the soil surface by later cultivation before the moths emerge. Clean plowing deprives borers of their natural shelter when they crawl to the soil surface after being plowed under. Average plowing methods must be improved sufficiently to insure that all cornstalks and trash are turned under completely. Neither depth of plowing nor time of plowing is important for corn-borer control if the bulk of the material to such an extent that the remaining parts can then be plowed under cleanly. Breaking or cutting off standing cornstalks at the ground level, followed by clean raking into windrows or piles, and clean burning are very effective methods. They may be made more effective if the remaining trash is plowed under. Before June 1 of each year burn all cornstalks that have been used for building shelters for live stock, for thatching, and for windbreaks, and similar purposes. This should also include surplus stalks stored for fodder and all stalks in and around barnyards and feed lots.

Keep all portions of corn cobs out of shelled corn intended for shipping to points outside the infested areas. Corn from badly infested fields should be shelled not later than June 2 of each year and the cobs burned. Ear corn from such fields should be kept in a tight compartment or covered by fine-mesh wire screen to prevent the escape of the emerging moths. Disking cornstalks or high-cut stubble is an objectionable practice in infested fields, because it leaves abundant shelter for borers. Fossing, trap lights, attractive baits or pasturing infested corn fields have not been effective in controlling the borer and are not recommended.

Control of the corn borer depends upon community-wide effort. The corn growers must help one another. Corn-borer moths fly from field to field. Co-operative clean-up laws are necessary to secure the full co-operation of all concerned.

Man Gnaws Way Through Jail Wall

Rosman, N. C.—There are various ways of escaping jails, as prisoners have demonstrated on occasions, but it remained for an unidentified white man, charged with drunkenness and locked up, here by Chief of Police Moss to gnaw and scratch his way to freedom. The chief, going in the afternoon after the incarceration earlier in the day, to carry his prisoner food, found an empty cell and a large hole in the rear wall of the old wooden guardhouse. Inspection led to the theory that the prisoner had gnawed his way through the boards. "I won't look for him," said the chief. "Any man who has the nerve to gnaw out six inches is allowed to stay out."

LOST MINE FOUND NEAR LOS ANGELES

Legendary Deposit Again to Be Worked.

Los Angeles.—Mine prospectors are excited by the announcement that the "Lost Padre" mine has been rediscovered in Los Angeles county. The mine is said to be situated on land belonging to Annie L. Rose, who for several years has tried to relocate it. The mine, according to legend, was first discovered by an Indian. Rushing to a nearby monastery he notified the "padres," who organized an Indian tribe to work it. A creek was turned from its bed, a shaft sunk and mining operations begun. In three years deposits valued at nearly $1,000,000 were taken from the mine. Operations were brought to an abrupt end when a portion of the mine caved in, burying 15 of the Indians and frightening the others so badly they refused to return to work. The padres then sealed the shaft and allowed the stream to resume its old course.

For years the mine remained sealed, but in 1876, an Indian showed B. V. Bragg, a Kentucky prospector, where the mine was located in return for several horses. Bragg is said to have removed nearly $800,000 worth of gold in two years. His work was brought to an untimely end when the foreman killed four men, including the Indian who had relocated the shaft, threw the bodies in the shaft and sealed it again, hoping to hide his crime.

Bragg never attempted to reopen the shaft, but before his death, told Miss Rose, owner of the land, where the mine was located. She has found backers and the work of digging up the mass of the old creek, long since dried up, has started.

Father's 3-Time Dream Leads to Son's Body

Detroit.—A curious dream which persisted for three consecutive nights sent Charles Roberts, who lives on a farm near Romeo, to the Receiving hospital in search of his son, George, who had disappeared from home a week before. There, from hospital records, he found that the body of the boy had been lying in the morgue four days among the unidentified dead. Young Roberts had never remained away from home before and when he failed to return after a visit to Detroit his father became worried, but did not know where to look for him. Then he dreamed that George was in a big hospital. He gave little thought to the dream until it was repeated in every detail twice more. When he visited the Receiving hospital to search for his son, hospital authorities assured him that they had no record of the boy. The father was so persistent, however, that the property of the unidentified was examined and the property clerk found a locket containing the father's picture, which the young man always carried. Mr. Roberts said. Hospital records then revealed that the young man had been taken to the hospital suffering from an undetermined poison and had died without being identified.

Misses $470 in Crowd; Finds It Later in Gutter

Union City, N. J.—Grant Saddlem of Union City was walking in Thirty-fifth street among luncheon-hour pedestrians here when $470 was taken or fell from his coat pocket. He hurried to police headquarters to report the loss. He outlined the course he had taken and told the location of the place where he discovered his loss. He was told to go back to that spot and look for the money. He found the bits forty-five minutes later in a small puddle of water.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene. That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep. Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

There seems to be a great deal of colds or flu in this section.

Vanden and J. C. Hodgson was seriously injured last Saturday evening when their motorcycle collided with an automobile driven by Hugh Edwards. The wounded boys was carried to a physician office where they received medical attention and later Vaden Hodgson was carried to the hospital at Statesville where it was found he had a broken leg and his body badly bruised and lashed up. The accident was termed unavoidable.

Mrs. H. G. James who has been very ill is improving.

NEWS OF LONG AGO.

What Was Happening in Davie Before The Days of Automobiles and Rolled Hoses

(Davie Record, Dec. 17, 1902)

Winter, with bad roads, is upon us. Lawrence Duke, who spends some of his time in Cooleemee, was in Mocksville last week.

Dr. W. O. Spencer and two little boys of Winston, spent Thursday night with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Spencer.

H. L. Austin has been quite sick for the past few days—was threatened with pneumonia, but is able to be up again.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Stallings, of Wilson, have been stopping for several days with Mrs. Coley.

C. C. Daniel, of Kappa, was in town last week and told us of a hog 265 days old killed by Mr. William Cartner that weighed 266 pounds.

The floor of the Cooleemee Cotton mill gave way last week and dumped several bales of cotton into the river.

There will be a Christmas entertainment at the Farmington Methodist church on the night of Dec 24th.

Dr. Martin has sold his brown straw meadow. Last spring we advertised it free of charge, and in that way he must have found a purchaser.

Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Sherrill went to Elkin Monday where Mr. Sherrill will perform the ceremony in the marriage of Mr. Mason Lillard to Miss Cathryn Gwyn. Mr. and Mrs. Sherrill will return Friday.

Mrs. Agnes McDaniel and Mrs. Mary Stewart, two widows of Ex-Confederate Soldiers, walked all the way to Mocksville, about 12 miles here and back, to see about their pension vouchers. They were disappointed in getting them, but hereafter by ready The Record they will know when to come.

Rural route carrier No. 1 will serve County Line postoffice with lock pouch mail in the future.

J. C. Giles, of R. 4, left Monday for Fries, Va., where he has accepted a position.

M. A. Foster opened his new store near Cooleemee Monday.

Mr. Will Correll and family are now occupying their new residence on R. 4.

An Unfathomable Mystery.

A young woman in Ashe county a few days ago committed suicide by taking poison. She left a note saying that she was "tired of life." She was only 18 years old. "As years go by she had hardly begun to live; she didn't know what life was," says the Statesville Landmark. But the real reason for a self-murder usually dies with the victim. The living may speculate but they can't fathom it. Often there are causes which may have produced insanity. They say sane people don't commit suicide, but that may be questioned. In the fast life of the towns and cities, where many young people get all the thrills early, are mentally and physically fagged at a time when life should be fresh and promising, one can understand the condition that might move them to say they were "tired of life." But the pace is not supposed to be so fast in the rural districts where the Ashe young woman became tired of life. There may have been disappointment, distress concealed from those about her. It is simply the record of another tragedy.

If you cannot talk without knocking, keep your mouth shut.

Come South Young Man?

At the time when Horace Greeley gave his famous advice to the young men of the east, "Go west young man go west," the western section of our country was in the embryo stage of development, but had begun to grow at a rapid pace. Nature had been liberal in pouring out her potentialities upon the river basins and arid plains of the great western area, while the young adventurers from the east went forth into the new country with strong muscles stout hearts and a copious amount of abiding faith within themselves.

Obstacles there were to overcome, to be sure, but nature never threw an obstacle across man's path that she did not give him the strength to grow equal to it, to overcome it. Thus did the wild rough face of the west blossom forth like the rose at dawn, and even the fields of dust and alkali today are covered with the green verdure of growing crops. Never was better advice given to young men than the advice of Greeley at the time when it was given.

But now there is being presented in the gaze of American progress another act and the scene has changed from the barred cliffs, rugged peaks and alkali plains of the west to the forest of oak cypress and pine, the orange groves and cotton fields of Dixie. Here today is being brought into existence the rebirth of the people. Here a metamorphosis in industrial social and rustic life is being effected. Mencken's Desert of the Bazaar, "like the desert of the west in the older days, is beginning to bloom as genius after genius lifts head above the alkali. The South, long a section looked down upon as an object of pity and commiseration, is coming into her own. Commerce and industry is flourishing here today as they are not flourishing in any other section of America. The mild temperature climate, the fertile soil, the wealth of forest material and minerals, the tremendous waterpowers facilities, all combine to offer men of faith and vision one of the greatest opportunities ever afforded man.

The slogan of the wise man, today is not to go west but to "Go South," and if you are already in the south, stay there.—Hickory Record.

Model Policeman Quits.

Henry M. Dunham, who never made an arrest during his 15 years as a policeman at Toms River, N. J., has resigned. He will devote his time to a filling station and motor accessory store which he owns.

Dunham was in the navy during the war, and was returned to the force immediately following his discharge. The reason he never made an arrest was that he had a theory that most cases could be settled without recourse to such action.

He was especially courteous to tourists and visitors and that this was appreciated was attested by numerous gifts he received at Christmas and other days.

What, Ho!

From The Houston Post Dispatch
The Methodist Church's anti-tobacco legislation, when applied in North Carolina, is a reminder of the rule laid by the superintendent of the public schools of Winston-Salem, the biggest city in North Carolina (What!) and the tobacco manufacturing center of the State, that any boy caught smoking or chewing "the filthy weed" would be subjected to a thrashing (Ho.)

Land posters at this office.

Vehicles In The Dark.

Drive after nightfall, almost any time, anywhere, and there appear automobiles with one headlight, no rear light, and sometimes no light. It is not noticed in the court reports that operators of these half-lighted, or unlighted, cars are brought to judgment; or if at all very seldom.

Adverting to Mr. Paul Leonard's commendable effort to get the merchants to help educate operators of horse-drawn vehicles to let a light shine in obedience to the command of Caesar and for their own safety. Human nature being what it is, it is improbable that many of the horse vehicle operators will light up, unless they become alarmed for their own safety, until the motor vehicle people come in a little nearer too per cent. strong. The horse vehicle people are inclined to go their unlighted way not because their deeds are evil evil, but because they love darkness or because they have always gone that way. Also they know that the law requiring them to light was passed at the urgent insistence of the motorists, and so long as a considerable per cent of the latter are allowed to operate at defiance of the regulations they would impose on vehicles drawn by beasts of burden the latter will take to themselves the same privilege. They know the risk, of course, but like the motorists are the willing to take a chance. They recent the attempt to compel them to do something that is not enforced on all alike.

That, at least, is the way of humankind. A lot of folks violate law not because they are lawless, or have any special reason for fracturing statutes except they see others ignore the regulations without harm to themselves and they follow suit because they demand equal rights, even in law-breaking.—Greensboro News.

A Nomination.

He may never have listened to an orator eulogize his service to humanity, he may never have attended a banquet at which notables gathered to do him honor and he may never have greeted a group of scientists gathered at his home out of respect for his achievements.

And yet, working in his quiet modest way, he has earned honors in abundance for his services to his fellow men. Who is he? We will give you a clue.

It is the first cold evening of late fall, giving promise of long dreary days and nights of winter. A penetrating, cold rain, driven forward on a northerly gale, has transformed the roads to canals of mud. Snow is following close behind, and you may retire early under the weight of an extra quilt or two.

Our friend, too, of whom we write, is planning on an evening of comfort and rest, but just as he has settle down the phone rings. A hurry call. Sickens on the Jones farm, ten miles out on a side road.

And of course he goes, as you know he always goes. If you were to commend him for it, he would probably answer: "But such is the life of the country doctor. No heroism about it, just business and as soon as they are in better shape financially, I'll get my fee."

Acting simply in line of duty, however, he may have saved a mother, whose little children need her many years, or a father upon whose work depends the happiness and welfare of a large family.

So we reserve a niche in our hall of fame for the country doctor.

There are only 20,000,000 automobiles in the United States, but why in the thunder do they all get on the same street at the same street at the same time?—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Democrats Steal Kentucky Offices.

In the election held on November 8, Kentucky elected the Republican candidate for governor, Judge F. D. Sampson, by 32,133 votes over Beckham, the Democratic nominee.

For several days after the election an attempt was made to count in Beckham but Sampson's majority was so large enough stealing could not be engineered to accomplish the desired end.

Although the Democrats had absolute control of the election machinery in Kentucky they immediately began to yell fraud and as a result have succeeded in counting out the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor and counting in, instead James Breathitt, Jr., the Democratic nominee by a seat 159 votes over E. S. Nelson, Republican.

We believe as much as we believe the sun will rise tomorrow that every Republican on the State ticket in Kentucky was elected and the Democrats of that State should be ashamed of themselves trying to thwart and overturn the will of the people.

But that is what the Kentucky Democrats are noted for—stealing elections.

Several years ago they stole the governorship from the Republicans and seated William Goebel instead of W. S. Taylor who was rightfully elected.

Last spring the Republicans carried the city of Louisville but a Democratic Supreme court ousted the Republicans and placed the defeated Democrats in office through appointment of a Democratic governor.

Is it any wonder that Kentucky is characterized as "the dark and bloody ground"? Some of these days the Republicans are going to be so strong in Kentucky that any Democrats that attempts to override the will of the people and steal steal an election will meet the people and steal an election will meet the fate of William Goebel. Although he was enough he was counted in, never got to serve as governor of that great State.—Union Republican.

They are trying again to cut the price of school books, which is about as tough cutting as is ever encountered.—Greensboro News.

John Wesley Kurfess, of Winston-Salem may not be a Solomon, but he put Charles Tillett, of Charlotte, Al Smith booster and worshiper in such a deep hole that he won't be able to climb out before Christmas.

Good news travels very slow while bad news travels on the wind. If a good deed is done in our town, outsiders seldom hear of it, but if something bad happens the whole world finds it out in short order.

The Republican National Executive Committee met last week in Washington and decided to hold their National Convention in Kansas City on June 12th. It's a pity they didn't decide to bring the convention to Winston-Salem or Mud-dy Creek.

There are sorry folks in all professions. They are to be found in the stores, the shops, the factories, newspaper and law offices, and even in the pulpits. There is no profession in which crooks can't be found. An honest man is the noblest work of God. What this country needs today more than a good cigar for five cents, is more honest men.

Daily newspapers have been carrying many pages of Ford advertising. The fellow who doesn't read a daily paper can't be expected to know much about the new Ford. Maybe Henry thinks that the man who doesn't take a daily newspaper isn't able to buy a Ford. Henry is liable to be making a big mistake for once in his life.

It is only eleven days until Christmas. It would be a mighty nice thing if the good people of Mocksville would erect a community Christmas tree on the new city square and invite the entire county to come in and spend one evening during the holidays listening to a Christmas program of songs and instrumental music. If there are any children in this section who will be overlooked by good Saint Nick, a treat could be prepared for them on this occasion and distributed through the county welfare office or associated charities.

We have always advocated trading at home, but we do not advise you to buy from merchants who do not advertise their goods. The merchant who has goods of quality and sells them at a price that is not ashamed of delights in extending you an invitation to visit his store, inspect his goods, and compare prices and quality. Those who do not invite you to do this may not want you to compare prices and quality. Those who do not invite you to do this may not want you to compare his wares with the other fellow's.

Mad Dog On Rampage.

An Ireland county dog suffering with hydrophobia came down the Statesville road about 12 days ago. It is known that he bit at least four dogs between County Line and Mocksville. It is not known how many other dogs were bitten through the territory he traversed. All dog owners should examine their dogs and if they have been bitten the owners should put them up, thus preventing a spread of this dread disease. All dogs not bitten should be vaccinated against rabies. Dr. T. L. Glenn, of this city says that the vaccination will prevent a dog going mad for one year, when vaccinated before bitten.

The understanding is that 'twixt now and the opening of the baseball, with time out for the holidays, the boys get their education.—Greensboro News.

30-Cent Cotton At Albemarle.

M. A. Caudle, a Stanly county farmer the past week sold five bales of cotton to a mill at Albemarle and one bale brought 30 cents a pound. It was a long staple, measure 1 5-16 inches. Mr. Caudle realized 26 cent a pound for his No. 2 long staple, and 25 cents for his short-est grade which measured 1 1-16 inch.

The variety which brought 30 cents was Delta Webber No. 1. That which sold for 26 cents was Delta Webber No. 2 and it all goes to show that quality in farm produce still counts.

IN THE EARTHEN BOWL

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

ELLEN stooped and took out a bowl of baked custard. The bowl was earthen, cheap and common, but the custard was the best of its kind. Rich, brown and smelling of nutmeg. It was fit to set before an epicure. With very simple material Ellen had achieved a masterpiece.

A small woman was Ellen, with bright blue violet eyes, a gay color, a humorous mouth. There were lines in her face, gray hairs showing at her temples, but her girlishness persisted. Even now, when most women would have looked fretted and nervous, Ellen went coolly on with her preparations for supper. It was four o'clock, now. Any moment this distinguished guest might arrive.

The deep note of a klaxon, the purr of a motor stopping at her door, and she ran out, forgetting to remove her apron, to welcome the visitor. Mrs. J. B. Gridley, who had been Luella Pell when Ellen King was Ellen Sampson, stepped through the door of the liveried chauffeur held open. From the beautifully clad foot which first appeared to the most becoming of French hats, she was so charming as to make one forget she was middle-aged. Gray, the shimmering gray of the moonstone, enveloped her. She breathed of violet, she gleamed with diamonds and platinum. Her kiss felt like a snowflake on Ellen's flushed warm face. Ellen's clasp left a hint of flour on the silken sleeve. They went into the house together.

As Ellen beheld Luella sitting in the old Morris chair in the midst of the shabby living room a strange feeling came over her. It was as if she had put on a pair of glasses which revealed everything—the cracked wallpaper, the thread-bare rug, the sagging chairs, the pin-hole shades. These things had been there before but she had never seen them. Now she did see them in all their ugliness, with all their meaning of poverty and narrow living. And in the midst of them sat Mrs. J. B. Gridley in French gray smelling of Parisian perfume, an exquisite figure of wealth, culture, all the choicest things of life. With a murmured excuse she hurried back to her kitchen.

Luella's letter had come as a surprise a few days before. She had written that she was motoring with a party of friends and must of necessity pass near her old home town. She would stay away for a few hours and come to see her old friend and schoolmate, Ellen, who was the only person there with whom she still kept up a friendship. Her swift car driven by her Belgian chauffeur could whisk her there and back before her absence would be scarcely noticed by her companions. And she would still have time for a little visit.

With the happiest heart Ellen had prepared for Luella. And now—she stood looking at the custard in the earthen bowl. What would Luella say to the bowl? It might even spoil the custard for her.

It took all Ellen's courage to set the earthen bowl of custard upon the table. The rest of the supper was correspondingly plain and homely, yet deliciously cooked and flavored. She laid her friend come to the meal.

"We are alone because Tom and the boys have gone fishing," Ellen explained, as she poured the tea. "They always go fishing Saturday—help yourself to the omelette, dear." Her spirits rose as she saw the abundant portion Luella took upon her plate.

At last it was time to dish the custard. Ellen saw Luella thoughtfully regarding the earthen bowl. The color rose higher in her cheeks, but she chatted bravely.

Without doubt Luella liked the custard. In fact, she asked for a little more.

Afterward the two friends sat on the small porch and watched the evening shadows gather over the town. In the grass below a ring of golden dandelions shone and the air was scented from the boughs of the old spruce. They talked of the old days, mentioning this one and that one. Ellen could flash all the little histories whose beginnings Luella had observed.

"And Rollin Meek?" she asked at length.

"Oh, Rollin is a fine man! He married Emily Lewis. They have four children—two boys and two girls. They are great home-lovers, all of them. Rollin has a printing office, small, but he gets a good living." Suddenly she remembered that Rollin Meek had gone with Luella Pell. She looked at Luella. Strange that she should remember Rollin Meek! "Would you like to see him, Luella?" she asked. "I could call him up and he'd run over for a moment—perhaps he may go by presently on his way downtown—I declare! He's coming now!"

A big man swung up the street whistling. Ellen called and he came up to the porch. A word of explanation and he and Luella were shaking hands. He stayed a moment, chatting, then he uttered some word about being in a hurry, clipped off one of Ellen's dandelions and hastened away. There was a silence while Luella looked after him and Ellen looked at Luella.

"He didn't know me," Luella said. "Just for a moment I think he didn't remember me. But—it's been twenty-six years." Her voice had a queer little sound. Suddenly she turned and laid her hand over Ellen's as they sat side by side in the porch hammock. "Tell me," she said, earnestly, "have you ever been sorry that you didn't marry George Warren?" Ellen's laugh was a sufficient answer. "I see George once in a while," Luella said. "He looks, thinks, talks money. My husband calls George a great financier. And you might have had him!" "I'd rather have Tom," replied Ellen, earnestly. "I thought so at the time—I still think so."

"Your earthen bowl—" began Luella, then paused.

"I know," Ellen turned quickly, her mind on the custard. "I didn't think. I've made custards in that earthen bowl so many times—it didn't occur to me."

"Oh, my dear!" Luella laughed with a half sob. "I didn't mean that earthen bowl—I never thought of it. In fact, I never noticed it, but the custard was delicious. A poem I read the other day made me think of it. It was one of those personal, intimate poems that might have been written to or about any woman. I can't repeat it but it was about a married couple in simple circumstances of life, poor, perhaps. Don't you see? Their life looked like an earthen bowl, but into it they had passed the full measure of their happy love, so the bowl became a wonderful thing, a rich, lovely thing full of rainbows. Do you get my meaning, Ellen?"

"Yes," Ellen breathed. "Oh, yes!" Her heart was high, her pulse sang, her eyes were like the joyous eyes of a young girl. What a beautiful thing for Luella to say! An earthen bowl—her married life! Yet love had filled it with rainbows. How thankful she had married for love and not, as she had been tempted for this world's goods as represented by George Warren! An earthen bowl—full of rainbows! She must tell her dear Tom—

But in the wonder and delight of what Luella had revealed to her she was forgetting Luella. She looked at Luella, with her beauty, her exquisite attire, and a question burst from her lips:

"If mine is an earthen bowl, dear, yours must have been of silver."

"Silver, yes," Luella's voice was low. "But empty—empty—"

Printers Enemies of Tyrants and Humbugs

Tyrants and humbugs would have everything their own way in all countries, if it were not for printers, Charles Dickens once said.

He paid that tribute to typesetters 63 years ago when he acted as chairman at the annual meeting of the "Printers' Pension Corporation," which recently held its centenary in London.

Dickens was twice chairman of this corporation, in 1843 and again in 1884, and on the last occasion said: "The printer is a faithful servant, not only for those connected with the business, but for the public at large, and has, therefore, when laboring under infirmity and disease, an especial claim on all for support. Without claiming for him the whole merit of the work produced by his skill, labor, endurance and intelligence, without him what would be the state of the world at large?"

"Why, tyrants and humbugs in all countries would have their own way. 'I am certain there are not in any branch of manual dexterity so many remarkable men as might be found in the printing trade. For quickness of perception, amount of endurance and willingness to oblige, I have ever found the compositor pre-eminent. The printer is the friend of intelligence, of thought; he is the friend of liberty, of freedom, of law; indeed, the printer is the friend of every man who is the friend of order—the friend of every man who can read.'"

Puma Liked Old Home

Back and forth, forth and back, paced the puma. Beyond the narrow confines of his cage, visitors to the national zoological park, Washington, expressed pity that the beast had to be kept in such close quarters.

By and by, park officials thought so, too, and one day they transferred the puma to a nice new outdoor inclosure—large and airy. Now the puma will be happy, they said.

But the puma wasn't and gave alarming evidence of it by "going to pieces" in health and temper. He sulked and refused to eat anything whatever. He promptly was returned to his dingy old cage, greatly to his delight. Shortly he was fat and sleekly pacing back and forth again.

Byron's Diet Fatal

Lord Byron, the English poet, died young because he tried to keep his waistline down, according to Sir James Crichton Browne, distinguished British authority on diet. The poet was threatened with becoming fat. To prevent such a catastrophe he subsisted for years on a daily diet of one slice of bread, a few vegetables, a little white wine and some sugarless tea. He satisfied his hunger with tobacco. It was not surprising, declared Sir James, that the brilliant young poet fell ill and died at thirty-six—Exchange.

Buried Treasure Now Located by Wireless

Buried treasure is said to have been discovered in paying quantities by a party of British and American adventurers in Panama City. The party is equipped with a new wireless device that indicates the presence of large quantities of buried metal.

At Panama City, jewels, plate, and chains of precious metal are said to have been found.

If the treasure seeker continues to prove a success, it will probably be used in searching for pirates' hoards in the West Indies and on the Mexican coast, as well as in two other spots, Cocos Island, off the coast of Chile, and a small volcanic island off Brazil. These two places are known as the world's greatest treasure fields.

A Plant Punctures Tires

War continues against the "puncture weed," California's rapid-spreading vine whose half-inch thorns play havoc with motor car tires on country roads. A single vine found near Los Angeles covered a circle 14 feet across. Desperate efforts to check this troublesome plant's spread are hindered by its prolific seed, 1,500 to a square foot, that mature all year round and force a continuous battle.—Popular Science Monthly.

Why "Santa Claus"?

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

CHRISTMAS would not be Christmas without Santa Claus. But who is Santa Claus and why his name? Whatever name he is called—Santa Claus, St. Nicholas, St. Nick, or Kris Kringle—he is the personification of the Christmas spirit and the symbol of childish faith.

Santa Claus, originally Sinterklass, the pet name of the Dutch children for their friend and gift-bringer, Bishop St. Nicholas, came to America by way of New Amsterdam, now New York. December 6 was St. Nicholas day, and on St. Nicholas eve he was believed to make his rounds on a fiery white charger, leaving gifts for good children and a birch rod for the bad ones in the wooden shoes or long blue stockings which they put in the chimney corner.

When the Dutch customs began to merge into the English in the colonial days, the observance of St. Nicholas day gradually merged into the Christmas and New Year's holidays. Soon after the Revolution Sinterklass began to change and to become Santa Claus, an American character. Instead of being a tall, solemn person with long robes, popular tradition made him a fat, jolly person wearing knee breeches and shoes with Dutch buckles. He also began making his rounds in a little wagon drawn by a fat pony, and his visits occurred on New Year's eve instead of December 5.

Washington Irving had something to do with the change in Santa Claus, for in his "Knickerbocker's History of New York" he wrote a description of this friend of the children which made him look much like the Santa of today. However, it remained for Rev. Clement Clarke Moore, professor of oriental literature in the General Theological seminary, to describe Santa Claus minutely and to give him eight reindeer and a sleigh for making his rounds on Christmas eve. In 1822 Professor Moore wrote the now-famous poem, which he called "A Visit from St. Nicholas," but which is better known as "The Night Before Christmas," as a Christmas present for his children.

A niece who was at the Moore home that Christmas copied the poem into her album. The next year it appeared anonymously in the Troy (N. Y.) Sentinel and was widely

The Night Before Christmas

It was the night before Christmas, when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse;
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there;
The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugar-plums danced through their heads;
And mamma in her 'kerchief, and I in my cap,
Had just settled our brains for a long winter's nap—
When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash,
The moon, on the breast of the new-fallen snow,
Gave a luster of midday to objects below,
When what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer,
With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick.
More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled and shouted and called them by name:
"Now, Dasher! now, Dancer! now, Prancer and Vixen!
On, Comet! on, Cupid, on, Donner and Blitzen!
To the top of the porch, to the top of the wall!
Now, dash away, dash away, dash away all!"
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky,
So, up to the house-top the coursers they flew,
With a sleigh full of toys—and St. Nicholas, too.
And then in a twinkling I heard on the roof
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my head and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.
He was dressed all in fur from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had slung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.
His eyes how they twinkled! his dimples how merry!
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry;
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard on his chin was as white as the snow.
The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath.
He had a broad face, and a little round belly,
That shook when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly.
He was chubby and plump—a right jolly old elf,
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself.
A wink of his eye and a twist of his head
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread—
He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose.
He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle.
But I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight:
"Happy Christmas to all, and to all a good-night!"
—Clement C. Moore.

copied. Soon it became known all over the country and had found its way into the school readers. Professor Moore was the author of the first Greek and Hebrew lexicon published in America and had hoped that his name would become famous because of it. As such, he did not want it known that he had composed what he called this "stilly verse," but he finally admitted its authorship and presented the autographed original to the New York Historical society. His lexicon is forgotten, as would his name probably have been, if he had not written the poem that Christmas in 1822 which is now looked upon as the "birthday" of the American Santa Claus, known and beloved by all American children.

Asphalt Long in Use

Back in the days of the ancient Sumerians, the Assyrians, the Persians and the Egyptians, they were waterproofing their boats and castle walls with asphalt; they were making pavements with it; they were creating enduring monuments with it and probably, most important of all, the Egyptians had found in it the substance which enabled them to preserve for all time their marvelous mummies. Nature herself, many thousands of years earlier, was employing it in the extraordinary La Brea asphalt pits of southern California.

Fatal Experiment
Nine Alpinists, one of them a priest, were victims of an odd accident recently while mountain climbing in the yrol. The party was experimenting with a new type of rope containing a pliable steel strand. They had managed to reach the summit of Marmolade mountain, 10,000 feet above sea level, when they were caught in a violent electric storm. Lightning struck the peak and the steel in their rope conducted the electricity. The priest, leader of the party, was killed and eight others were very seriously injured.

FORMER JEWELRY STORE CLERK IS SLIPPERY BANDIT

Oklahoma Crook Manages to Escape Law's Clutches Many Times.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—By virtue of successful evasion of the law for many months, Elmer Inman is Oklahoma's latest uncrowned and unofficial bandit king.
Inman has been popularly dubbed the successor in public interest to the dapper and youthful Matthew Kimes, who has been condemned to die for murder, but to the undiscerning eye of the law he is just an escaped convict.
Inman's elopement with the daughter of a penitentiary warden, a brief attempt to reform and two subsequent and spectacular escapes from custody have set him apart from the run of unimaginative outlaws.
Jewelry Store Clerk.
Ten years ago Inman was a clerk in a jewelry store at Arkansas City, Kan. For embezzlement from the store he was committed to the Kansas penitentiary at Lansing. Because of his excellent behavior he became a trusty and was assigned as a chauffeur to Warden J. K. Coddling. The debonair convict captured the heart of Lavona Coddling, the warden's daughter, and in the belief that he would reform she eloped with him in 1921.

Inman soon became involved again in difficulties with the law, however, and his wife divorced him.
Two years ago he was arrested for the robbery of a jewelry store at Ardmore, Okla. With Ray Terrill, an alleged member of the Kimes gang of bank robbers, he broke jail and escaped.

Buys Truck Farm.
Coming to Oklahoma City, he purchased a suburban truck farm in partnership with Alva Sherwood and for more than a year posed as a gentleman farmer. Neighbors were surprised when Inman and Sherwood, who had gone under assumed names, were arrested while robbing a clothing store. Inman and Sherwood were convicted, but on their way to prison last spring they leaped through the window of their train and escaped.
The outlaw, who is about forty years old, usually presents a spruce appearance. He has expressed a preference for death to further imprisonment. It was believed recently that an outlaw killed by Wichita police was Inman, but the dead hand was identified later as a former associate.

Weds Boy She Sent to Jail as Chicken Thief

Pontiac, Mich.—Two youths, convicted here of stealing chickens, were sentenced to Michigan state prison for terms of three and one-half to fifteen years.
Shortly after sentence of Daniel McGraw, twenty-one years old, of Flint, McGraw and Miss May Young, also of Flint, were married in the Oakland county jail by Justice Henry W. Harpster. Miss Young had been a witness in the cases against McGraw and Carl Rhinevault, of Grovetown, township. The girl promised to wait for McGraw to complete his term.

Ellenwood Barron, twenty years old, Pontiac, another member of the party, was released on probation for three years. E. S. McGraw, of Flint, father of Daniel, pleaded with the court to show leniency with his son. He claimed a previous conviction for larceny of a car had been wrongfully secured.

Seek Religious Calm in Faith of Buddhism

In London it is said that Buddhist missionaries have made more than 800 converts in England in less than a year, not among orientals who have drifted into the world's most famous port, but among Englishmen and English women.

This ought not to cause much astonishment. Some people are always in a state of unrest and discontent with respect to religious matters. They long for peace of mind and spirit which they have not found and they are ready to try something they have not tested.

Buddhism has an especial appeal to such persons now, in the foremost countries of the western world, because it exalts quiet faith in the ultimate destiny of man and teaches striving toward repose, serenity of thought and feeling. Some individuals who find themselves more or less out of tune with their times and their environment imagine that such faith is an endless ultimate calm, and such striving toward it is the one thing they yearn for and most need.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Deaf Made to "Hear" Through Finger Tips

The discovery that the human skin's ability to detect rapid vibrations is much greater than has previously been supposed has been made by Dr. Robert H. Gault, director of the vibro-tactile research laboratory of Smith college. Doctor Gault has been engaged for several years in experiments to enable the deaf to hear through their finger tips by touching a telephone receiver. Previously scientists have supposed that a vibration faster than 1,600 times a second was too fast to be detected by the skin. According to Doctor Gault, however, these touch organs can detect vibrations as fast as 2,700 a second. Though many of the vibrations of the voice are more rapid than this, "oo," for instance, as pronounced by the average male voice being about 3,500 a second, and "ah" 3,682, Doctor Gault says that if the skin can receive vibrations as rapid as 2,700, it is amply sensitive to understand speech. The discovery was made with an instrument called the "telfactor," designed and built for his use by the Bell telephone laboratories in New York city.

No Longer Necessary to Breathe Stale Air

It is becoming every year a simpler matter to wash and cool the air within banks, theaters and other buildings, including homes.
There are now manufactured air-conditioning units that can be installed almost anywhere and connected up to an electric light circuit. A single unit capable of washing and cooling 30,000 cubic feet of air an hour measures three feet square on the ground and five feet high.
A motor-driven fan inside draws air through a series of brick baffles over which water runs. Then the cooled and washed air is driven by the fan up through pipes to the rooms. A motor such as is used on washing machines does the work.

His Position

Gap Johnson was trying to back away from the crossroads store with many yanks at the reins and numerous yells and oaths. His daughter sprang from the wagon and began beating the mules over the head with a club.
"Why don't you buy an automobile?" asked a salesman who had arrived during the operation. "It would save you a lot of trouble."
"I'm used to the 'putt'-trouble," was the reply. "I know how to handle these devilish mules and I wouldn't know how to manage a car."
"Well, it might save the young lady a lot of unnecessary exercise."
"Aw, she's going to get married pretty soon, and needs the experience in managing a husband. Huh-ud, there, mules!"—Kansas City Star.

"Home of the Stutz and Hupmobile Motor Cars"

REPRESENTING TWO MOTOR CARS WHOSE REPUTATION HAS BEEN OF LONG STANDING IN THE AUTOMOBILE WORLD, THE NEW HUPMOBILE AND SAFETY STUTZ—THE NEW HUPMOBILE SIX IS STILL A HUPMOBILE THROUGH AND THROUGH, BUT HOW WONDERFULLY TRANSFORMED—NEW BODIES OF IMPOSING DESIGNS, NEW COLOR COMBINATIONS OF STRIKING BEAUTY—NOW EMPLOYING A PERFECTED HIGH COMPRESSION ENGINE WHICH PROVIDES GREATER POWER, FASTER ACCELERATION AND TURBINE SMOOTHNESS FROM EVERY ATOM OF FUEL—IN THE NEW SAFETY STUTZ IT IS EASY TO PERCEIVE THE DISTINCTIVE DIFFERENCES AND NOTABLE ADVANCEMENT OVER OTHER CARS OF SIMILAR PRICE—THE NEW HUPMOBILE AND NEW SAFETY STUTZ ARE TWO CARS MADE TO MEET EVERY MODERN DEMAND OF PERFORMANCE, RELIABILITY AND SERVICE—LOCATED IN WINSTON-SALEM AT 638 WEST FOURTH STREET—TELEPHONE: WINSTON-SALEM 3075.

Excelling its former peaks of quality and value, Hupmobile more than ever before in its history offers to motorists a line of cars that meets the modern demand of performance, reliability, staunch service, low cost and long life. The Hupp Motor car Corporation of Detroit which this firm represents has taken advantage of errors made in the past in construction of cars and are constantly giving to the public a service that will eliminate unnecessary repair bills, inconvenience and trouble.

In these later days of automobile building and manufacture The Shaffner-Nettles Motors, Inc., has chosen the Hupmobile to handle in this section of the state. They are not only the authorized dealers but maintain an authorized Hupmobile service station at their establishment. They are also dealers for the New Safety Stutz.

The new Hupmobile Six is still a Hupmobile through and through, but how wonderfully transformed. Glistening new bodies of imposing design meet the eye; striking color combinations are artfully employed. Now powered by a perfected high compression that provides greater power, faster acceleration and turbine smoothness from every atom of fuel, the new Hupmobile Six is the ideal car for those who not only ask, but demand perfect performance, but demand perfect performance, but demand perfect performance. Employing the new Hupmobile-Midland (Steeldraulic) brakes your Hupmobile is always under the most perfect control.

The public has long desired a powerful, medium-sized, multi-cylinder motor car and it has remained for Hupmobile to produce it in the Hupmobile Eight, which is now offered in five body styles which are the 5 passenger touring, 7 passenger touring, coupe with rumble seat, sedan and the Berlin. Following the eight-in-line principle Hupmobile engineers have inaugurated a new firing sequence and other innovations which proved after two years of actual road testing to be far superior to those heretofore in vogue.

When you select a Hupmobile to drive for pleasure or business you are not selecting "an orphan." In addition to getting a car of enviable record of many years of satisfactory service to thousands of owners in every part of the United States you are also making a selection from a concern whose surplus is in excess of three times the outstanding stock. That assures you of "service" for many years to come. Also you know when you select a Hupmobile that only most reliable dealers can handle the output of this great Detroit corporation, that Hupmobile in the future will grow stronger and stronger like every other business built on a sound basis.

The New Safety Stutz combines many features that instantly proclaim it inbred fineness. It is an automobile in which you easily perceive the distinctive differences and the notable advancement over other cars. The features of safety, appearance, easy riding, roadability, smooth and quiet operation, worm-drive rear axle and the many others have never before been combined in a single car.

The Safety Stutz has been built and designed to provide the greatest degree of safety to the passengers in and the maximum amount of protection to the cars. The safety features incorporate an extremely low center of mass, great stability, ease of control, high brake efficiency, rapid acceleration, pressed steel, running-board "side bumpers," and safety, non-shattering glass in all windows, windshield and windshield wings.

Powered by the powerful eight cylinder motor, the Stutz is the car for those who demand safety, power, superb performance and distinctive appearance.

The Shaffner-Nettles Motors, Inc. is known as one of the most reliable automobile firms in this section of North Carolina. Dependable service is their motto and they hire only the most experienced men to take care of your motor. The concern is under very capable management including men who have spent years in the automobile world. They have realized the superiority of the Hupmobile and the New Safety Stutz is shown in the choice of motor cars they handle.

Junior Orphanage To Open In March. Wants to Know How Al Stands.

Definite announcement is made that the New Junior Order Orphanage, at Lexington, will not be open for the reception of children before March 1. It was expected to have the opening Thanksgiving Day and the postponement until next March had caused considerable disappointment among the 50,000 members of the order in North Carolina.

Some folks think "a promising young man" is one who never pays but always promises to "pay you Saturday."

M. W. Lincke, editor of the Graphic, of Nashville, Nash county, and past state councilor of the North Carolina Junior Order United American Mechanics has written a letter to Governor Al Smith, of New York, in which he called upon the presidential candidate to make public his views on immigration.

The Junior Order is opposed to wide-open and unrestricted immigration and Mr. Lincke, who is a Democrat, wants to know where

Mr. Smith stands on this great or this great question.

Lots of good men go broke, but, very few ever take advantage of the voluntary bankruptcy law to pay their debts.

dustriously to see and learn our

Smith From Pulpit.

"Let us do all we can to keep Al Smith from being nominated, and if nominated from being elected," Rev. O. L. Rolinson, pastor of Duncan Memorial Methodist church, Charlotte, told his congregation.

Mr. Robinson chanced the subject for his sermon, "Prohibition and Al Smith."

"We can't keep prohibition and elect Al Smith president of the United States," Mr. Robinson declared. "And now is the time to begin to defeat him. I am a Democrat, but if Al Smith is nominated to run on the Democratic ticket this will be one time that I shall vote, a Republican ticket for president. It is not a matter of one party against another—it is a matter of the forces of righteousness lined up against the forces of the devil."

"We need to teacher our people more about the consequences involved and more about the way to keep the wets from gaining ground against the law."

The opposition to prohibition is based, the speaker said, on just one thing, "the desire to get drunk," but other reasons are put forward by opponents as "plausible and decent excuses for their opposition."

The argument for a "larger alcoholic content" as a substitute for the present law was instanced as bearing out the minister's argument that, basically, all opposition is due to the desire to "get drunk."

Government control was likewise discussed and declared impractical.
Smith's candidacy presents a "crisis" in the country, the speaker said. Although Mr. Robinson thinks Governor Smith a "strong man and an admirable character," and sincere when he says he would do all in his power to get the laws repealed and the amendment revoked, and such would be the power of his office that the very a-mentment might be in danger.

As to Governor Smith's Catholicism the speaker expressed the opinion that "no man should be disqualified for public office on account of his religious convictions," but that because "his church does not admit that it has ever made a mistake nor that it can ever make a mistake and his church says that all government should give their allegiance in political matters to the Church of Rome—our very religious liberties might be endangered by the presidency of a man of the Catholic church."

Going Back to Whittle.

President Coolidge, being recently asked what he proposed to do when his term ended, remarked that he was going to Vermont, and said that for a year or two he proposed to spend his time "whitling."

This will remind the former country boys of the rural habit of many old timers, who to occupy idle moments would pull out their jack knives and amuse themselves by drawing long thin shavings from a piece of pine stick. They took pride in their ability to make these fine and even shavings.

It was a sign of the philosophical calm of those days that people could amuse themselves in this extremely simple way. Not many of our folks could do that in these restless days. But after strenuous years at the head of things in Washington, one could see how that quiescent act could see how a President of the United States.—

Any Fool Can Quit.

Whether you are a day laborer or president of a big company, office boy or superintendent of a large plant where you have oversight of many men, you are sure to come to the point sooner or later when things will not go to suit you, when everything seems out of joint,
and you will be a very unusual person if the first thing you think of is not to throw up your job.

This is very time and the very place where you will need self-control. Just remember that any fool can quit his job but the one who sticks, when it looks like the fates are against him, and makes a success of his job, overcoming every obstacle to do, is the man who wins in the long run. He is a genius.

There are unpleasant occurrences in every job be they big or little;
there are obstacles to be overcome by all who would rise above the work which a person can do with his hands, without the use of the head; and the extent to which a person meets these conditions philosophically with a smile instead of a frown will mark that person's degree of success.

If a man control himself when he feels like saying, "I will quit," he will so be able to control conditions which make him want to quit.—Union Republican.

Are You Looking For A Position Or A Job.

We fear too many have a mistaken idea about the duties of a job. They regard a job a meaning hard work and a position as a soft snap without any hard grueling work—good pay and short hours.

If they expect to keep climbing to better things they will find that whether it is a job or a position, advancement comes by hard work, close attention to duty. Some may secure positions but will not retain them unless they make good, without giving the best they are capable of giving. Older people can tell them that whether it is a job or a position, work is involved to win success. To successfully fill any position will mean work.

Executives of big commercial organizations more often work harder than the average day laborer.

More than one president of the United States has succumbed from the strain of their work. No matter whether you have a job or a position, you are going to find work if you succeed. Whatever you do, give it the best you have in you and you will advance to the position more surely than by waiting for a position to seek you.—

The First Christmas.

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem,

2. Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and we are come to worship him.

3. When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

4. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

5. And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judaea: for thus it is written by the prophet.

6. And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

7. Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, enquired diligently what time the star appeared.

8. And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

9. When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

10. When they saw the star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

11. And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

12. And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

13. And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt; and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him.

14. When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt.

15. And was there until the death of Herod: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son."—Matt. 3:1-15.

Be Careful, Brother

The Davie county Superior court docket was so "congested" the past week that the judge opened court at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning, tried two cases, the "congestion" was so great that no time was taken for lunch and the term was actually adjourned at 2:47 after being in session just five hours and 17 minutes. One of the "Bevo" judges was presiding and we are just wondering if he went anywhere else in the State looking for any more "congested" dockets? And yet the cry is going up over the State for more courts, more judges, more solicitors. But it will be noticed that this is the Democratic lawyers who hope to land a job, that are doing most of the yelling about "congested" dockets.—Union Republican.

Our old friend J. W. Ellis who lives in the classic shades of Farmington township was in town last week and gave us a pleasant call.

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK

As has been our custom for the past 20 years, there will be no paper issued from this office next week. Our readers are mighty good people—they read what we have to say to them for 51 weeks every year, and we think it is only justice to them to declare next week a holiday.

For more than twenty years the present editor has been at his desk trying to give the people of this section a clean, readable newspaper free from sensationalism and fit to go into the homes of the best people. Of course we have made many mistakes and will continue to make them so long as we live. Our aim in the future will be to give you the best paper possible for the money.

To our friends everywhere, and especially to those who have given us their patronage and helped us to keep our paper going, we wish to extend our thanks, together with our best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. The next issue of The Record will appear January 4th, the Lord willing.

During the holidays our friends are invited to call and see us when they come to town. Our office will be open every day except Sunday, and we hope that all our subscribers who possibly can, will bring or send us their renewals or subscriptions before the new year.

May the year 1928 be full of blessings to everybody, everywhere, is our sincere wish.

Pension Checks Here.

The pension checks for the Confederate soldiers and widows have arrived, and Clerk of the Court Hartman requests all those who have checks to call at his office as early as possible and get them.

There are 32 checks for old soldiers, each check being for $182.50. There are 63 widow checks, amount of each being $50, making a total of $8,990. This money coming at this season of the year will gladden the hearts of the aged boys who wore the grey during the great war of '61 to '65, and will be a blessing to the aged widows of the men in grey who have gone on before. It will be but a few more years until all of the brave fellows will have passed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees. The Record wishes for all of these survivors a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Mexico City Goes Wild Over Lindy.

Mexico City, Dec. 14.—"Lindy" has done it again—he and the other half of the famous "we."

Without stop, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, piloting the "Spirit of St. Louis," which earlier in the year had carried him to Paris, flew from Washington to Mexico City. For more than 27 hours he was at the controls.

Perhaps there never has been witnessed such a delirious demonstration of joy by a Mexican multitude as that at 2:39 o'clock this afternoon, when after some three hours of apprehension that misfortune had befallen the flier, the Spirit of St. Louis settled on the Valbuena military aviation field, two and a half miles from Mexico City. Lindy and his plane were safe and sound; nothing was wrong, except that a miscalculation of direction carried the plane in a great circle from Tampico in a direct line to Mexico City.

Mr. J. A. Cartner Drops Dead.

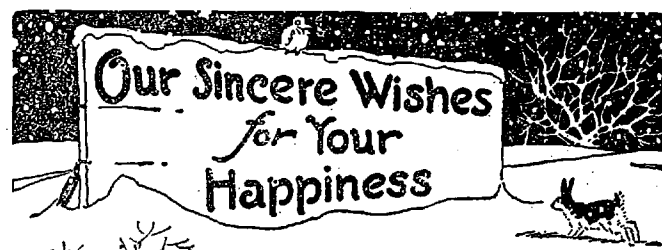

Mr. John A. Cartner died suddenly at his home near Salem church Saturday at noon, aged about 78 years. Mr. Cartner had been in his usual health and had moved from near this city to the Foster farm on Monday of last week. His death came as a great shock to his aged wife and his many friends and relatives. The body was laid to rest in Salem graveyard Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. E. M. Avett, of this city. Mr. Cartner is survived by his wife, one son, and two brothers. A large concourse of relatives and friends were present at the funeral and burial to pay their last respects to this good man.

A large number of Davie county people were in Mocksville last Wednesday taking a look at the new Ford car. The car on display at the Sanford Motor Co., was a two-door sedan, fully equipped. Many fine compliments have been passed on the appearance of this car and orders have been received and will be filled as early as cars can be secured. The new model shows many improvements over the old and the new car will no doubt out-sell any other car on the market.

As the Holiday Season approaches, bring to close another mile stone in the sixty years of our business with the people of Davie county. We wish to pause and to express to the good people of Davie county who for all these years have favored us with their business, our sincere wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. We are proud of our record and we want to thank each and every one of our customers whose faith and loyalty have made it possible for us to have this record. May Good Will and Joy be yours in abundance. May all that your heart desires be fulfilled, is the sincere wish of

CHRISTMAS LESSON

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:1-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Coming of the Christ Child.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God Sends His Son to Earth.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Prince of Peace.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Promised Era of Peace.

1. The Birth of Jesus (vv. 1-7).
1. Jesus' birth foretold (Mic. 5:2). Only a little while before the fulfillment of this prophecy which was made some seven hundred years before, there seemed little likelihood that Micah's words would come true. Jesus' mother was miles away from Bethlehem in Galilee. God moved the emperor to enforce the decree of taxation which brought Mary to the village at the proper time.

2. Jesus' birth announced to Mary and Joseph (Luke 1:26-38).

Gabriel, the archangel, sent by God to the little town of Nazareth to Mary, a Jewish maiden who was betrothed to a carpenter in the village by the name of Joseph, solemnly announced that she should give birth to the Messiah and that this son should not be Joseph's, but the child of the Holy Ghost (Matt. 1:18-21). Later the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph also, making to him the same announcement and added that the child should be called Jesus, which means that Jehovah will save His people from their sins (Matt. 1:21).

3. The prediction fulfilled (v. 7). This took place at a most opportune time. It occurred when all systems of religion and immoral worship were tottering upon their foundations, therefore most suitable for the introduction of the gospel. The whole world being under the power of the Romans who then ruled it, made it possible for Christ's ministers to go from city to city and country to country unmolested. We can be assured that the Almighty rules in the whole universe and is never tardy in His administrations.

4. Jesus Christ Announced to the Shepherds (vv. 8-14).

1. To whom (v. 8).
Jesus' birth was announced to the shepherds who were keeping watch over their flocks by night. The fact that the glorious message was first sounded forth to them shows that poverty is no barrier to its reception. Their humble station in life and their being busy with common duties did not prevent them from hearing this glorious message from God. Moses, Gideon, Amos and Elisha were all called of God from the activities of life. He never calls lazy people.

2. By whom (v. 9).
The first gospel sermon was preached by an angel of the Lord. We thus see them interested in men and having part in the announcement of God's plan for their salvation. No doubt the angelic beings earnestly sympathized with fallen, sin-cursed man.

3. The nature of the message (vv. 10, 11).

It was good tidings of great joy. It was good tidings because the darkness of heathendom, which had so long covered the earth, was beginning to vanish. The casting out of Satan, the prince of this world, was about to take place. Liberty was soon to be proclaimed to those who were in bondage. The way of salvation was to be open to all. No longer was the knowledge of God to be confined to the Jews, but offered to the whole world. Truly this was glorious news; so glorious that a multitude of the heavenly host accompanied this announcement with their song of praise.

III. The Shepherds Investigating (vv. 13, 16).

They did not stop to argue or raise questions, though these things were, no doubt, passing strange to them. They went immediately to Bethlehem, where they found everything just as represented. They had the privilege of first gazing upon the world's Savior, the very Lord of Glory. They returned with gratitude in their hearts, praising God for all these wonderful things which He had revealed unto them.

IV. The Shepherds' Witnessing (vv. 17-20).

They found things as announced by the angels. When they beheld the Lord of Glory they could not remain silent, therefore went back praising God. Those who really hear the gospel message cannot be silent. Those who really hear the gospel must tell it out to others.

Trials That Never Come

For every trial that God sends, He gives sufficient grace to bear it, but He promises no grace to bear affliction with, and we little know how large a portion of our mental suffering arises from trials that never come—Evangelical Tidings.

An Unprofitable Life

The earth life which is not passed in the light which beams out from the glory world would better have not been lived at all.—Gospel Banner.

FROM NUMBERS, B. C., TO THE U. S. CENSUS

First Counting of Noses Was Done by Moses.

Washington.—All Turkey stayed at home one Friday recently while 50,000 officials took the first census of the Ottoman empire.

"Turkey has made up for tardiness by asking questions far more thorough than appear in the famous first census of history," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names every male by their polls; from twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel."

"Thus spoke the Lord to Moses, and Moses, with Aaron's assistance, collected the figures for the first census report, which may be found in practically every home and hotel room. It is appropriately entitled 'Numbers,' the fourth book of the Bible.

"By its breadth of scope the census William of Normandy ordered for his new kingdom of England, resembles modern surveys. He commanded his minions in 1085 A. D. to record every lot and peasant, every acre, every ox, every mill, every manor, every weir and every plow, the value thereof and this is forward looking—the natural resources, woods, fields and streams capable of development and revenue. The report to William the Conqueror became the Domesday Book, unreadable today except by scholars, yet protected in the public record office at London as one of the most precious possessions of England.

Russia's First Count in 1897.

"The United States, although a newcomer in the ranks of civilization, was one of the first nations to establish the modern periodic census. Sweden took the lead before our first census in 1790, but England, France and Prussia did not see the necessity of regular counting of noses until ten or twenty years later. Russia took no census until 1897.

"Deeply religious settlers of America nearly upset our first census when they harked back to another less fortunate Bible census. 'Satan stood up against Israel,' our ancestors pointed out to the marshals, 'and provoked David to number Israel from Beersheba even to Dan.' What happened? 'God was displeased; therefore He smote Israel. The Lord sent pestilence upon Israel; and there fell of Israel 70,000 men.'

"Fears that our first census would bring similar destruction upon the nation did not materialize, so the marshals delivered their reports to President Washington within nine months for all the original states, except Vermont, Rhode Island and South Carolina. Vermont and Rhode Island entered the Union later. The marshal of South Carolina found workers scarce at $1 per 150 heads counted.

"Today a visitor at the census bureau may see the names of famous Americans and the answers given to the first census taker's simple questionnaires. John Hancock's family consisted of two free white males of sixteen and upward, three white females, seven other persons (servants no doubt) and no slaves. Progress in 70 years presents a contrast with data for Abraham Lincoln collected in 1890: 'Age, fifty-one, married, lawyer, value of real estate $5,000—personal estate $12,000, Kentucky, place of birth.'

"From one census every ten years the census bureau has increased to 104 censuses, in addition to many special surveys such as that made to supply data to congress for immigration quotas. One census collected every week shows the number of babies born. Using these figures the bureau sets up its large calculator at an exhibit and every 20 seconds announces to the world that the millions of Americans has been increased, for example, by baby No. 118,972,331.

Statistics About Buying.

"Not content with counting men, women and children, where they work, whether they are in school and if so, how long; not satisfied with tabulating the value of wheat grown and tons of manganese ore dug out of the ground; not resting even with summing up the business of hats and hammocks, shoes and sulphuric acid manufactured in the United States, the census bureau proposes to 'complete the picture.' To finish the portrait in figures of the whole United States, it is necessary, they say, to have a census of distribution. That means an accounting of what is sold to the housewife over the grocery, drug and meat counters, and of what the wholesaler sells to the retailer.

"Recently the census bureau released its first experimental distribution survey for which Baltimore served as a laboratory specimen. The weavers of figures found that in Baltimore 283 people are required to support one neighborhood grocery; that Baltimoreans spend $456.72 per year in stores; that the department stores take the most; that Baltimore spends more on automobiles than on furnishing family homes and that in the average family purchasing budget food requires 31 per cent, clothing 20 per cent and the family automobile comes next with 9 per cent. The same survey takes extended to ten other cities: Chicago, Atlanta, Denver, Fargo, N. D.; Kansas City, Providence, San Francisco, Seattle, Springfield, Ill., and Syracuse, N. Y. Some day it will be extended to the whole nation."

BURY LUNCH FOR PREHISTORIC DOG

Indians' Custom Revealed in Finding of Bones.

Washington.—Discovery of two deer bones painted red is a bit of evidence that Indians who lived in America 2,500 years ago placed food in the graves of pet dogs so that they would have bones for their journey in the next world. The deer bones were found beside the skeletons of two prehistoric dogs by Dr. F. H. H. Roberts, Jr., of the bureau of American ethnology, who has just returned from an archeological expedition to Chaco canyon, N. M.

The dogs appear to have been buried with ceremony by the Indians, said Doctor Roberts in discussing his expedition. Whether the dry bones were painted red to fool the dog spirits into thinking there was good meat on the bones can only be conjectured.

The dogs belonged to Indians of the last days of the basketmaker civilization that flourished in the Southwest many centuries before the Pueblos, he said. Very ancient tribes are known as the basketmakers because they wove all their vessels and containers. In the course of centuries pottery-making was learned.

Definite evidence of the Indians who lived at the time when the change from baskets to pottery was made was discovered by Doctor Roberts. Fifteen skeletons were found in two layers of earth. The burials in the lower level had no baskets or containers for food, such as have been found in similar burials. The baskets here had evidently fallen apart and disintegrated from exposure before time covered them with earth. But in the layer of earth above them were bodies accompanied by crude clay jars and bowls.

These skeletons of the transition period are of great interest to ethnologists who are studying the types of Indians who inhabited America in the days before the time of Christ.

Complete pieces of four bowls which could be patched together, even after so many centuries, were found by Doctor Roberts, as well as quantities of fragments of the rough, coarse clay containers made by the first artisans of the region who tried the potter's trade.

High Shoes for London Girls Are Coming Back

London.—High shoes reaching half way up the calf and reminiscent of styles ten years ago will be in vogue this year with English girls, judging from the exhibitions at the shoe and leather fair which was held here.

The models shown were plain in style and had none of the swashbuckling flare of the Russian boots. It is predicted that black and brown shades will be worn by the business girls, while the ultra-fashionable women will prefer scarlet boots and three-inch heels or opalescent kid boots radiant with every color of the rainbow.

It was evident at the exhibit that lizard skin will continue to be a popular trimming for shoes this winter.

Storm Center Shoves Barometer Far Down

Port Townsend, Wash.—The birthplace of storms south of the Aleutian islands is hard on barometers, reports Capt. J. Kawashima of the Yokohama Maru on arrival here. While passing through the storm nursery he noted the lowest barometric reading ever observed on the Pacific, the indicator showing 23.37.

The vessel experienced no rough weather, but the Japanese navigator believes he just missed a typhoon or monsoon. Most of the severe storms that sweep the Mississippi valley originate in the Aleutian area, where varied currents of ocean water influence the atmospheric conditions.

Clever Chinese

New York.—Clever, these Chinese! A detective arrested a dozen when he found them in a room with money on the table. One explained to the judge in excellent English that they were taking up a collection to buy a book on cross-word puzzles. They were freed.

Deer's Appetites Ruin Golf Course Greens

Girard, Calif.—The Girard golf club is probably the only golf club in the world that finds itself self up against a necessity of hiring a caretaker to shoot wild animals off the greens.

The links border on several dark canyons that run back into the Santa Monica mountains, where bands of wild deer browse. Nobody has shot at these deer in so long that they are more or less tame. At night when the golf players go home to explain to their wives that they have been in their offices all day the deer come out of the canyons, nibble the rich grass and eat up everything else green that is in sight.

Recent fires in Topanga canyon have destroyed the wild herbage. As a result most of the deer are now "boarding" on the golf club greens. Officers of the club say a man or boy with a lantern will be hired to keep the deer on the run after nightfall.

USED HER BEAUTY TO AID IN BURGLARIES

"Countess" Made German Youths Help in Thefts.

Berlin.—It was immediately after the war, in those hectic days when everything turned upside down in Germany, that the name of Countess Colonna was first heard, and the countess herself was first seen in the circle of young aristocrats who tried to forget the grim realities of life by indulging in wild orgies in the night cabarets of Berlin, while in the streets were rattling the machine guns of the revolution, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Nobody knew exactly who she was. No titled family with the name of Colonna lived in Germany, and the only Count Colonna known in Berlin was an elderly man living temporarily in Switzerland. Countess Colonna said she was the daughter of this man and the younger bloods who swarmed around her did not bother to investigate.

She was of matchless beauty, with brilliant blond hair and large, radiant, hypnotic eyes. Her figure was of artistic perfection and her long, shapely hands suggested aristocratic lineage. Men who came in contact with her were spellbound by this demonic beauty.

Had Luxurious Apartment. She had a luxuriously furnished apartment in one of Berlin's fashionable quarters, lived on a grand scale and seemed to be the queen of a gay circle which always formed a bodyguard around her when she visited the night clubs or cabarets.

There was nothing about Countess Colonna to arouse suspicion of the police regarding her life or her activities.

It was one of the worst periods of lawlessness in the history of the German capital. Robberies, holdups, burglaries, murders were all in the day's work and the police could hardly cope with this sudden crime wave.

One gang particularly caused worry to the Berlin police, a gang of astoundingly bold criminals who committed an incredible number of holdups and burglaries. The victims of this gang were invariably persons of high social standing, rich men who gambled for big sums in clubs and persons whose apartments were full of treasures.

A special squad of detectives was assigned to the case, and Albert Dettmann, famous leader of the detective force, personally headed the investigation. Every effort, however, had failed, when chance led to the uncovering of an unexpected sensation and the solution of the first Colonna mystery.

One night, it was in the spring of 1919, the same gang which had robbed so many homes and apartments, plundered the house of one of the best-known Berlin art collectors, a man of high social position and a bachelor, who had been seen many times in the company of the Countess Colonna. His priceless paintings, antique rugs and golden statuettes were thrown out of the window by the burglars, whose accomplices waited outside in an automobile. They must have made too much noise, for a policeman became suspicious, ran to the house and arrived there just as the burglars jumped into the motor and sped away.

Police Arrest Baron.

One of them, however, was not quick enough. This man was captured and brought before Herr Dettmann, who was amazed to learn that his burglar was a Baron Reichenberg, descendant of a rich and titled family. The young man refused to answer Dettmann's questions and his behavior was such that Dettmann summoned a physician, who established the fact that the young baron was acting under the influence of some irresistible force. All Dettmann was able to squeeze out of him was a telephone number. It proved to be that of the Countess Colonna.

It developed that the victim of the latest robbery was in love with the beautiful Colonna and had an appointment with her on the same night that his apartment was robbed. The countess had promised to visit him and asked him to send away his servants, because she did not wish to be seen by anybody. Later in the evening she called up, saying that she did not feel well, and asked the enamored art collector to call at her home. When he returned he found his apartment robbed. The young baron under arrest finally confessed, and the other members of the band, including Colonna, were captured.

"Countess Colonna," it turned out, was a Berlin girl, the daughter of an architect, whose parents died during the war, leaving the young girl penniless. Her name was Ella Bach. She was beautiful, had a fine voice, and because she had always wanted to go on the stage, she tried her luck with one of the cabarets of the German capital.

While she was not a great success on the stage, her conquests in the field of love were decisive. Men who saw this beauty fell madly in love with her.

"How I Regained My Health and Strength"

—MRS. H. D. QUEEN, GASTONIA, N. C.

"I suffered sixteen long years with dreadful stomach trouble, indigestion, nervous dyspepsia and constipation. My life was no pleasure to me at all. Had to take purgatives three or four times a week, and my weight went down to 98 pounds."

"One night my husband brought home a package of Dr. Hitchcock's Laxative Powder. From the very first dose I began to feel better. By the time I had taken half of the first box I had gained five pounds. After continuing to take Hitchcock's Laxative Powder I weighed 125 pounds, and never felt better in all my life. I can now eat anything I want and as much as I want with all good results. I give it to my family, even to my baby. I can never praise Hitchcock's Laxative Powder enough."

Mrs. Queen, and thousands of others have regained their health through the use of Dr. Hitchcock's Laxative Powder because it removes the cause of constipation—not merely giving temporary relief. You, too, can be well and strong again if you will get this wonderful vegetable laxative from your druggist and use it according to directions. Only 25c per box.

Better Than Paregoric For Fretful Babies

Mother, beware of paregoric. The quieting and soothing effect it produces is due to opium. Paregoric is not only dangerous, but merely induces sleep and does not correct the trouble which causes pain.

When baby begins to fret he is uncomfortable from pain, and science now tells us that practically all pain can be traced directly or indirectly to the intestinal tract. To give baby quick, safe relief, use Teethina and remove the cause of his pain.

Teethina is a famous prescription, especially prepared for young babies. It safely and quickly regulates the little liver and bowels, thoroughly cleanses the intestinal tract, corrects acid conditions, removes the cause of trouble and restores restful, healthful sleep without the use of harmful drugs. Millions of mothers are now successfully using it in treating Colic, Diarrhea, Constipation, Indigestion and other stomach disorders. All druggists sell it. Price 50c.

Romances of Industry

More than 60 subjects involved in the romantic task of taking living from underground are depicted in a series of motion pictures prepared by the bureau of mines, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, and elaborate equipment, including portable lighting facilities that furnish 12,000,000 candlepower, has been devised for the task. One of the illuminating units is at huge searchlight somewhat like that used on airplane landing fields. Fifty trunks of lighting apparatus are employed. In filming the "Story of Copper" many of the reels were taken 8,000 feet below the surface.

Both Right
I lately complained of a lady who took the pronunciation "to-may-to" out of my mouth, and called it "to-mah-to."

A gentleman writes we are both right. One of the best modern dictionaries gives "to-may-to" the preference; in fact, says "to-may-to" is the proper pronunciation, in the United States; the English prefer "to-mah-to." Here it is again; two people on exactly opposite sides of a question, and both right.

I have noticed it in many other things.—Howe's Monthly.

PRESIDENT VIEWS NATION'S AFFAIRS

Chief Executive Deals With Prosperity and Peace in Message to Congress.

Washington.—The text of the President's message, in part, delivered to congress, follows:

It is gratifying to report that for the fourth consecutive year the state of the union in general is good. We are at peace. The country as a whole has had a prosperity never exceeded.

Wages are at their highest range, employment is plentiful. Some parts of agriculture and industry have lagged; some localities have suffered from storm and flood. But such losses have been absorbed without serious detriment to our great economic structure.

Stocks of goods are moderate and a wholesome caution is prevalent. Rates of interest for industry, agriculture and government have been reduced. Savers and investors are providing capital for new construction in industry and public works. The purchasing power of agriculture has increased.

If the people maintain that confidence which they are entitled to have in themselves, in each other and in America, a comfortable prosperity will continue.

Stern Self-Denial Is Urged.

Without constructive economy in government expenditures we should not now be enjoying these results or these prospects. Because we are not now physically at war, some people are disposed to forget that our war debt still remains. The nation must make financial sacrifices, accompanied by a stern self-denial in public expenditures, until we have conquered the disabilities of our public finance.

While our obligation to veterans and dependents is large and continuing, the heavier burden of the national debt is being steadily eliminated. At the end of this fiscal year it will be reduced from about $26,000,000,000 to about $17,975,000,000. Annual interest, including war savings, will have been reduced from $1,955,000,000 to $970,000,000.

The sacrifice of the people, the economy of the government, are showing remarkable results. They should be continued for the purpose of relieving the nation of the burden of interest and debt and releasing revenue for internal improvements and national development.

Not only the amount, but the rate, of government interest has been reduced. Callable bonds have been refunded and paid, so that during this year the average rate of interest on the present public debt for the first time fell below 4 per cent. Keeping the credit of the nation high is a tremendously profitable operation.

The immediate fruit of economy and the retirement of the public debt is tax reduction.

The annual saving in interest between 1925 and 1929 is $212,000,000. Without this no bill to relieve the taxpayers would be now proposing.

The three measures already enacted leave our government revenues where they are not oppressive. Exemptions have been increased until 115,000,000 people make but 2,500,000 individual taxable returns, so that further reduction should be mainly for the purpose of removing inequalities.

The secretary of the treasury has recommended a measure which would give us a much better balanced system of taxation and without oppression produce sufficient revenue. It has my complete support.

Probable Surplus Small.

Unforeseen contingencies requiring money are always arising. Our probable surplus for June 30, 1929, is small. A slight depression in business would greatly reduce our revenue because of our present method of taxation.

The people ought to take no selfish attitude of pressing for removing moderate and fair taxes which might produce a deficit. We must keep our budget balanced for each year. That is the corner stone of our national credit, the trifling price we pay to command the lowest rate of interest of any great power in the world. Any surplus can be applied to debt reduction, and debt reduction is tax reduction.

Under the present circumstances it would be far better to leave the rates as they are than to enact a bill carrying the peril of a deficit. This is not a problem to be approached in a narrow or partisan spirit. All of those who participate in finding a reasonable solution will be entitled to participate in any credit that accrues from it without regard to party. The congress has already demonstrated that tax legislation can be removed from purely political consideration into the realm of patriotic business principles.

Any bill for tax reduction should be written by those who are responsible for raising, managing and expending the finances of the government.

For National Defense.

Being a nation relying not on force, but on fair dealing and good will, to maintain peace with others, we have provided a moderate military force in a form adapted solely to defense.

It should be continued with a very generous supply of officers and with the present base of personnel, subject to fluctuations which may be temporarily desirable.

The five-year program for our air forces is in keeping with this same policy and commensurate with the notable contributions of America to the science of aeronautics. The provisions of the law lately enacted are being executed as fast as the practical difficulties of an orderly and stable development permit.

While our army is small, prudence requires that it should be kept in a high state of efficiency and provided with such supplies as would permit of its immediate expansion.

Our navy is likewise a weapon of defense.

We have a foreign commerce and ocean lines of trade unsurpassed by any other country. We have outlying territory in the two great oceans and long stretches of seacoast studded with the richest cities in the world. We are responsible for the protection of a large population and the greatest treasure ever bestowed upon any people. We are charged with an international duty of defending the Panama canal.

To meet these responsibilities we need a very substantial sea armament. We can plan for the future and begin a moderate building program.

We have a considerable cruiser tonnage, but a part of it is obsolete. Every one knows that had a three-power agreement been reached it would have left us with the necessity of continuing our building program. The failure to agree should not cause us to build either more or less than we otherwise should.

A rapid growth is taking place in aeronautics. The Department of Commerce has charge of the inspection and licensing system and the construction of national airways. Almost 8,000 miles is already completed and about 4,000 miles more contemplated. Nearly 4,400 miles is now equipped and over 3,000 miles more will have lighting and emergency landing fields by next July.

Air-mail contracts are expected to cover twenty-four of these lines. Daily airway flying is nearly 15,000 miles and is expected to reach 25,000 miles early next year.

The importance and benefit of good roads is more and more coming to be appreciated. The national government has been making liberal contributions to encourage their construction. The results and benefits have been very gratifying.

National participation, however, should be continued to trunk-line systems.

Conditions in the Philippine Islands have been steadily improved. Contentment and good order prevail. Roads, irrigation works, harbor improvements and public buildings are being constructed. Public education and sanitation have been advanced. The government is in a sound financial condition.

These immediate results were especially due to the administration of Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood. The six years of his governorship marked a distinct improvement in the islands and rank as one of the outstanding accomplishments of this distinguished man. His death is a loss to the nation and the islands.

Greater progress could be made, more efficiency could be put into administration, if the congress would undertake to expend, through its appropriating power, all or a part of the customs revenues which are now turned over to the Philippine treasury. The powers of the auditor of the islands also need revision and clarification.

Views on Agriculture.

The last year has seen a marked improvement in the general condition of agriculture. Production is better balanced and without acute shortage or heavy surplus.

Agriculture has not fully recovered from postwar depression. The fact is that economic progress never marches forward in a straight line. It goes in waves. One part goes ahead while another lags and another recedes.

Everybody wishes agriculture to prosper. Any sound and workable proposal to help the farmer will have the earnest support of the government. Their interests are not all identical.

Legislation should assist as many producers in as many regions as possible. It should be the aim to assist the farmer to work out his own salvation socially and economically. No plan will be of any permanent value to him which does not leave him standing on his own foundation.

It is useless to propose a temporary expedient. What is needed is permanence and stability. Government price fixing is known to be unsound and bound to result in disaster. A government subsidy would work out the same way. It cannot be sound for all of the people to hire some of the people to produce a crop which neither the producer nor the rest of the people want.

Price fixing and subsidy will both increase the surplus instead of diminishing it. Putting the government directly into business is merely a combination of subsidy and price fixing aggravated by political pressure. These expedients would lead logically to telling the farmer by law what and how much he should plant and where he should plant it, and what and how much he should sell and where he should sell it.

The most effective means of dealing with surplus crops is to reduce the surplus acreage. While this cannot be done by the individual farmer, it can be done through the organizations already in existence, through the information published by the Department of Agriculture, and especially through banks and others who supply credit refusing to finance an acreage manifestly too large.

It is impossible to provide by law for an assured success and prosperity for all those who engage in farming. If acreage becomes overextended, the government cannot assume responsibility for it. The government can, however, assist co-operative associations and other organizations in orderly marketing and handling a surplus clearly due to weather and seasonal conditions, in order to save the producer from preventable loss.

It is necessary to preserve the public confidence in this system in order to find a market for their bonds.

Careful supervision is absolutely necessary to protect the investor and enable these banks to exercise their chief function in serving agriculture.

The Mississippi Disaster.

For many years the federal government has been building a system of dikes along the Mississippi river for protection against high water. During the last season the lower states were overcome by a most disastrous flood. Many thousands of square miles were inundated, a great many lives were lost, much live stock was drowned, and a very heavy destruction of property was inflicted upon the inhabitants.

It is necessary to look upon this emergency as a national disaster. It has been so treated from its inception. Our whole people have provided with great generosity for its relief. Most of the departments of the federal government have been engaged in the same effort. The governments of the afflicted areas, both state and municipal, cannot be given too high praise for the courageous helpful way in which they have come to the rescue of the people. If the sources directly chargeable cannot meet the demand, the national government should not fail to provide generous relief. This, however, does not mean restoration.

The people in the flooded area and their representatives have approached this problem in the most generous and broadminded way. They should be met with a like spirit on the part of the national government. No required relief should be refused. An adequate plan should be adopted to prevent a recurrence of this disaster in order that the people may restore to productivity and comfort their fields and their towns.

Legislation is desirable for the construction of a dam at Boulder canyon on the Colorado river, primarily as a method of flood control and irrigation. A secondary result would be a considerable power development and a source of domestic water supply for southern California.

Enforcement of Prohibition.

After more than two generations of constant debate, our country adopted a system of national prohibition under all the solemnities involved in an amendment to the Federal Constitution.

In obedience to this mandate the congress and the states, with one or two notable exceptions, have passed required laws for its administration and enforcement.

This imposes upon the citizenship of the country, and especially on all public officers, not only the duty to enforce, but the obligation to observe the sanctions of this constitutional provision and its resulting laws. If this condition could be secured, all question concerning prohibition would cease.

The federal government is making every effort to accomplish these results through careful organization, large appropriations, and administrative effort.

The federal authorities propose to discharge their obligation for enforcement to the full extent of their ability. Legislation authorizing a system of fuel administration and the appointment by the President of a board of mediation and conciliation in case of actual or threatened interruption of production is needed.

The miners themselves are now seeking information and action from the government which could readily be secured through such a board.

It is believed that a thorough investigation and reconsideration of this proposed policy by the congress will demonstrate that this recommendation is sound and should be adopted.

It has been suggested that the various governmental agencies now dealing with veterans' relief be consolidated. This would bring many advantages. It is recommended that the proper committee of the congress make a thorough survey of this subject, in order to determine if legislation to secure such consolidation is desirable.

For many years it has been the policy of the federal government to encourage and foster the cause of education. Large sums of money are annually appropriated to carry on vocational training. Many millions go into agricultural schools. I am still of the opinion that much good could be accomplished through the establishment of a department of education and relief, into which would be gathered all of these functions under one directing member of the cabinet.

It is the policy of the United States to promote peace. We are a peaceful people and committed to the settling of disputes by amicable adjustment rather than by force. We have believed that peace can best be secured by a faithful observance on our part of the principles of international law, accompanied by patience and conciliation, and requiring of others a like treatment for ourselves.

We should continue to promote peace by our example and fortify it by such international covenants against war as we are permitted under our Constitution to make.

Can They Count on You?

By E. R. ROBINSON
In Farm and Ranch

CAN they count on you to always do
The thing that you know is right?
Or do they think you're sure to shrink
When the cause demands a fight?
Do they say of you "He is true blue"
In the work committed to you;
Who will stick to your work and never shrink
Till you carry your contract through?

Or do they say "He'll run away
In the time of need;
His dearest treasure is his selfish pleasure;
His idol is lust or greed?"

Do they also say "He loves to play
When the game goes his own way,
But he gets lame when he loses the game,
And is ready to charge foul play?"

Do your friends all feel you'll stand like steel
When the great test comes to you;
That you'll face the strife, and give your life
For the cause you know is true?

Or do they fear when that test draws near Shall try your inmost heart,
You'll sell the Christ for a paltry price,
And play the traitor's part?

We are needing men who can clearly ken
The things that are most worth while;
Who can not shirk and forget the dead,
And at misfortune stand;
For the thoughtful man who can work and plan
When the untrained lose their head;
With the skillful hand at his command,
Who can honestly earn his bread.

They look long in the common throng
For the man of faith and love,
Who can think and feel for his brother's weal,
And plan for the life above.

With a tender heart to take the part
Of the weak and down in sin;
Who help is sure for the weak and poor,
Who keeps the Christ within.

expected from these kind-hearted, high-spirited youngsters.

Then, lastly, there were the house decorations to be attended to. There were willing hands in the home which helped hang wreaths, trim the tree and put up the little sprigs of holly and mistletoe. Melodies not familiar to the younger generation filled the house. The humming and quiet whispering told of expected joys not now far in the offing.

There was shopping to be done and many preparations for the food which would be necessary. Busy days, but what happy ones. Mrs. Barber was never too busy or too tired to stop and have a friendly chat with anyone of the elderly people, to profit from their suggestions or abide by their wishes, if it was at all possible to do so.

Christmas Day, the day, arrived. When the old folks came down to their breakfast, they found a Christmas tree laden with at least one gift for each. They were as pleased and happy as children with their presents.

At noon the festivities took on proportion. One would never have guessed that the folks ranged anywhere from seventy to ninety-five, as they trooped in to Christmas dinner. The table was heavily laden with all the Christmas delicacies, especially good for people of their age. They also had another little surprise. They had fifteen radiant happy guests who were introduced to them. It was indeed hard to judge which was enjoying the dinner the most, the young or the old. Suffice it to say, the young folks enjoyed it the most.

Before the group left the table Mrs. Barber made a little announcement. "Our guests have come out today not only to help us enjoy our Christmas dinner, but to help us to have a delightful afternoon. They have come prepared to present a short Christmas play and to furnish us a little musical entertainment."

From the chuckles, smiles, laughter and applause, there was no doubt about the approval with which the entertainment was received. The young people were worth of all the praise which they received. The coaching had been successful. The day had been delightful and was a topic of conversation for a long time. Mrs. Barber was even happier over the occasion than the old folks, if such a thing could be possible. She realized that this vision, her scheme, had been practical. The fifty dollars had given pleasure to not only the old people but it gave these young foreign Settlement-house children a chance to share in the joys of Christmas, the joy of giving of their own talents, reaping the consequential rewards of pleasure, praise and remuneration, the joy of finding the true Christmas spirit in giving freely of themselves, as well as having had a sumptuous Christmas dinner which otherwise might have been merely a thing of their dreams.

There Were Willing Hands Which Helped Trim the Tree.

Willie's Dream of Christmas

The First Christmas

NIGHT had descended upon the hills of Judea. All was hushed and still; the earth and heavens seemed resting in a great, deep calm. No sound came to break the stillness. Even the humble shepherd men who watched their flocks were silent—they, too, felt the deep thrill and mystery of the night. Humble and uneducated as they were, they could not fathom what it all meant, but in their hearts was a sense of awe and wonderment that kept them silent.

Then on the darkness of the night there came out of the heavens a dazzling light and the shepherds were frightened. But an angel of the Lord was standing beside them and in a voice that found its way to their very hearts told them to fear not, rather to rejoice instead, for he was bringing them tidings of great joy, that the long-looked-for Savior had been born that night in Bethlehem of Judea. And when this angel had finished speaking the glory of heaven shone brighter all about them, and looking up they beheld a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and singing the song that has echoed since through all the ages; "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace to men of good will."

After the angels had departed and the dazzling light had vanished from the hillside the shepherds whispered among themselves, and they decided to leave their flocks and go to the little town of Bethlehem, as the angel had told them. Over the hills and valleys they went, never pausing until they came to the humble stable where the Savior lay. There they prostrated themselves at His feet, praising God for the thing that had come to pass, and telling Mary, His mother, and Joseph of what they had seen and heard that night.

Then they departed from His presence and went their way, telling all whom they met of the Savior's coming.

So was it at the first Christmas!—Katherine Edelman.

Christmas Greens

By MARGARET BRUCE

HERE is one jaunt I hope never to deprive my youngsters of," said a business man the other day, "and that is the annual trip to the woods after Christmas greens for the house. Every year since we were married, my wife and I have bundled ourselves up in warm togs and gone out a day or two before Christmas and gathered armfuls of spruce and hemlock branches, sprays of ground pine, and occasionally some mistletoe, though this is rare in our part of the country."

"After the children came, this excursion into the woods became as much a part of Christmas as the tree, the stockings, and the dinner. When we were living out in the suburbs, near the open woods, we used to go out and chop down our own Christmas tree and bring it home on a low sledge."

"Then the time came when we had to move into town, because of my having a good deal of night work, and it took too long to get way out into the country late at night. We couldn't bring home our own Christmas tree any more, of course, but we could, and did, take a whole day to go out and get our Christmas greens, and we do it every year. If the weather is open and there isn't too much snow, we take the car and drive out to the woods."

"If there is a great deal of snow and it is impossible to take the car out, we go on the train to a convenient country station, get off and tramp through the woods, and collect our Christmas decorations. If we have too large a load to take into the coach, I find that the baggage car will bring it in to town for a half-dollar or so. The spirit of Christmas comes back with us from the woods, and the twining of our own greens into wreaths and festoons means a hundred times more than if we bought them out of a wooden packing box at the florist's."

STORY FROM THE START

Handsome, fastidious and wealthy—young St. Croix Creighton awaits his sweetheart at their trysting place. She is late, this ordinary little Pennsylvania Dutch girl, Meely Schwenckton. Despite her seeming innocence and ignorance, she succeeds in keeping him at a distance, to his chagrin. Meely, in the Schwenckton home, where she is boarding, is altogether unlike the girl who meets St. Croix clandestinely. She is the teacher in the neighborhood school, of which Marvin Creighton, St. Croix's brother, is superintendent. Meely learns that Marvin was to have married his cousin, a titled English lady, but, believing she was attracted by the Creighton wealth, had refused the alliance. It is the rumor that St. Croix is to take Marvin's place and marry the English girl. St. Croix's jealousy is aroused by Meely's report of an aged suitor for her hand.

"I'll hide 'em good away," she said shyly. "I'd like to leave 'em all tasteless at home, but it would look suspicious."

"I want a reward!" he said. She drew back a bit; but he suddenly snatched her face firmly between his two hands and brought his lips to hers—almost. With a wrench of her head she averted the contact, and his touch, as usual, met only her cool cheek instead of her rosy mouth. "You always kiss me so unexpectedly!" she said breathlessly, looking flushed and almost frightened. "I wish you wouldn't always get me so unexpected!"

"Meely!" He took hold of her shoulders and turned her right about face. "You're going to hold perfectly still and let me kiss you right—on—your—lips!"

She tried to pull herself free, but he held her in a relentless grip. "Hold still!"

"I won't!" she snapped, holding her face averted. "Let me be! Please let me be, Mr. Creighton!"

"Meely! Why don't you ever let me kiss you on the mouth?"

She hung her head and answered shyly. "My lips is for the man I marry!"

"But, Meely, my girl, you must know," he said in a low voice in which his suppressed passion quivered, "that I want much more than your lips! Or why, my dear, would I be spending so much time with you?"

"Aah!" She raised a radiant, sparkling face to his. "Do you want to marry me, Mr. Creighton?"

His hands fell from her shoulders; he turned from her and bent his eyes to the ground.

"Aah," she apologized humbly, "that time I guess I went too far! But, Mr. Creighton, what is it, then, you want?"

He turned again and looked at her. "Meely! I'm d-d if I know whether you're as innocent and ignorant as an angel or as deep as hell."

"You and I both know, my dear little girl, that we're not spending all these hours together, week after week, for the pleasure of each other's conversation!"

She shook her head hopelessly. "It's always wondered me why you want to set round talking to a dumb thing like me, so uneducated as what I am, and ignorant like you say angels is—"

"Why do you pretend not to know why it is?" His voice was a little thick and husky; his hand hot which clasped her cool one lying in her lap.

The innocence of a new-born babe was in the eyes she raised to his. "Didn't I don't. Why do you?" But before the burning hunger of his eyes she recoiled; and drawing her hand from his clasp, she rose hastily and walked away.

"Meely!" he called. Slowly she turned and came back to him; and with a childishly obvious effort to divert his attention from herself, she spoke to him ingratiatingly of what she felt sure would have that effect.

"Aah, Mr. Creighton, did you know your brother is livin' right on our farm, with our hard man and his wife?"

"With your hired man?" St. Croix exclaimed, an angry flush covering his face and neck. "Living with him? He would!" he added bitterly. "That's the sort of society he seems to prefer—farm hands and miners!"

"And you, too," said Meely, with her ingratiating smile, "like low-down company—ain't? It must run in your family!"

"If you're referring to yourself as 'low-down,' kindly don't do it again—it's insulting to my taste!" He drew her roughly to him and she nestled into his embrace.

"Please tell me," she coaxed, "about your brother. He ain't the swell gentleman you are, is he?"

"He doesn't know you, does he?"

"Not yet."

"But," said St. Croix anxiously, "he's bound to meet you, of course?"

"I guess meebby."

"Don't give us away—our meeting up here!"

"Aah, no, for my Pop would kill me if he knowed—have knew. But it does wonder me, Mr. Creighton, that your brother would board at Absalom Puntz', as common as what they are yet! My land's sakes alive! Why does he do it? Why don't he live at his own home with yours?"

"None of your business, my dear!" She pouted. "I'll get it out of Absalom's missus, then. Or I'll meet up with your brother himself at Absalom's and get it out of him."

"Oh, no, you won't ask him!" St. Croix shrugged. "People don't ask my brother Marvin impertinent questions!"

"Is he so proud, too, like you?"

"His pride," St. Croix sneered, "takes another form than that of the rest of the family! His 'pride' won't let him live, he says, on the 'charity of miners'—won't let him take more than six per cent interest on our invested capital!—insisting that all the rest should be turned over to the miners and to the upkeep and safeguarding of the industry! Talks d-d rot like that! Bolshevism! That's what it is! D-d Bolshevism!"

"Is it? Why, I didn't know Bolshevism was so nice and kind and generous like that! I thought they was a lot of cut-throats, then Bolshevists."

"So they are! The poor cutting the throats of the rich to make themselves rich!"

"But your brother ain't poor."

"He and all of us would be if we ran the mines as he thinks they should be run! If he ever does come

She Hung Her Head and Answered Shyly, "My Lips is for the Man I Marry!"

Into his share of the mines he'll ruin the whole business, his share and mine, too, d-d him! Oh, don't let's talk of him! My father and I see red at the sound of his name!"

"And your mother, too?"

"He's breaking her heart!" St. Croix said with sincere feeling. "Disgracing the family by living with common laborers! Turning school-teacher! Making us the talk of the whole state! It's almost killing my mother!"

"But," Meely protested, puzzled, "I can't see he's doin' anything bad! It's just that he wants to act kinder to other ones than any of yours wants to."

"It's his quarreling with my father and leaving home that hurts my mother so, and makes her suffer!"

"Why's he so different to what you all are? Why ain't he greedy, too, to hog all for himself?" she sweetly asked.

"We're not 'hogging all' for ourselves! Do you know what we pay annually to the people who work for us?" He named a hugely impressive sum. "And you talk about our 'hogging all' for ourselves!"

"But why does your brother talk that way, then, if it ain't? What makes him different to you?" she persisted.

"Oh, from the time he was a kid he's argued with my father about the management of the mines and the way the miners' families have been housed and paid. And at times of strikes he'd howl 'round at sight of the women and children looking starved. And just recently, when a miner who'd worked for us for twenty years was killed and his widow and children had to vacate their cottage, Marvin raised h—! I wanted her pensioned; wanted Father to give her the house she'd lived in for twenty years; wanted him to educate her children—all sorts of things that would have established the worst sort of precedent." St. Croix paused, realizing he was using words beyond her range.

But she answered, "Do you call the Golden Rule in business the worst sort of—"

She, in her turn, stopped short—and hastily changed the subject. "But I guess your brother'll soon have to find another boarding place, for Absalom's soon moving to town. So, then, when Absalom moves, meebby the new farm hand Pop hars won't take your brother to board. And meebby," said Meely suddenly, "my Pop might take him! Say, wouldn't that be a scream, Mr. Creighton?"

St. Croix privately decided that in the face of such a contingency his only prudent course would be to put an end to these secret meetings with Meely; for the Creighton family had learned to their cost that Marvin's eccentric conscience was a thing to be reckoned with.

But even as he came to this decision he realized that it could not be done. He could not give up this girl. At whatever cost short of marrying her (that, of course, an impossibility, he would have her; and the cost, in view of his present delicate position in relation to his English cousin, might prove high indeed! But he would pay it rather than give her up! He was not used to giving up things. His self-control was flabby from lack of exercise.

It never occurred to him that when he was quite ready to take the girl she would not readily come to him. Had he all along supposed her to be a "virtuous" maiden, he would not, at this moment, be here in this spot with her. But although he was not a despoiler of virtue, a man without heart or conscience, he certainly was not above accepting such gifts of life as the gods vouchsafed to him.

St. Croix's conscience, though not troubled as to his relation with Meely, was by no means at peace when he thought of the cousin whom he hoped to marry. He sentimentally felt that to go to his bride straight from a love affair with a "common" girl like Meely would be to wrong her (not Meely, but the bride) and the struggle that went on in his soul between his ideal of what the bridegroom of a high-born and immaculate lady should be and his compelling infatuation for the farm girl was at times bitter and devastating.

But there was never any real doubt in his mind as to which side in that struggle would win.

CHAPTER IV

Meely knew just enough about the profession of teaching to know that she knew shockingly little about it; and her dread, therefore, of the county superintendent's impending visit to her school was a sword over her head.

"If I only knew what he expects (or hopes) to find me doing when he comes, I'd be doing it or making a bluff at doing it!"

She knew that to a professional teacher her methods must seem grotesquely unprofessional, being based on the same principle as that by which she lived most of her life—or tried to; that principle being the imperative need to extract all the entertainment possible from any situation in which you found yourself. So she worked really very hard to make her days in her schoolroom yield entertainment, first to herself, and secondly to forty rather bucolic children of all ages and sects (Amish, New and Old Mennonites, Dunkards) who filled her school. A few vigorous and tireless hours were devoted to drilling in geography, multiplication tables, grammar, spelling (she suspected that the way she did that drilling would have made any real pedagogue shudder) and the rest of the time was delightfully spent in teaching what she, not the school trustees, thought children ought to know—fairly stories, poems, plays.

Early Cradle Formed From Hollowed Log

Cradles, in their earliest form, were merely logs, scooped out to form more or less comfortable resting places for babies. They were without rockers, in the natural shape of the logs made their use unnecessary. Cradles have varied with different modes of living and reflect in their diversity of form and adornment the progress of the cabinetmaker's art. The Romans are said to have used cradles of considerable refinement, but after the decline of the empire, accompanied as the cradle, with other furniture forms, assumed a crude and humble aspect. One of the early forms of the cradle was the oaken chest without a lid. Baskets of osiers were sometimes used, in which the child, wrapped in swaddling clothes, was placed. The American cradle of oak in the Metropolitan museum in New York dates from the early Seventeenth century.

Fabulous wealth and the skill of the greatest craftsmen have been lavished on the cradles of royal children throughout history. These important beds have been gilded and carved, intricately inlaid with gold and gems, upholstered in the choicest silks and fitted with the most sumptuous coverings of velvet and fur—Dorothy Bent, in Art and Decoration.

Appropriated Motto

"Ich dien" is a German phrase, meaning literally "I serve." It was originally the motto of John, the blind king of Bohemia, who served in the army of the king of France and was slain in the battle of Crecy, 1346. The victorious English army was led by Edward the Black Prince, who appropriated the motto, which since that time has been the motto of the prince of Wales.

Another Child at the Inn by Patience Eden

WHERE have you been my son?" his mother said, "You ran away from me . . . it's time for bed!" She shook him gently, ruffling back his hair And led him stumbling up the broad, stone stair. "Where have you been?" she asked him in surprise, Finding a sweet dazed look within his eyes, As if he had been blinded by a light So strange and beautiful, that all his sight Swam in a distant glory. Then the boy Looked up at her, his rosy face all joy, "The cattle stood around and ate the hay," He said, "and there a tiny baby lay. A tiny baby, mother, and I stared Through one small crack . . . but no one saw or cared."

The baby's mother smiled, and all was gold Around him like a light . . . and very old. Rich men did worship him upon their knees. He paused, then pointing cried,—"Oh mother, please Look out and see that shining, shining star! How big and bright it is! How wide and far It sends the light!" So then they both drew near The window to look out. "And can't you hear Sweet singing, mother? Tell me, are there white wings . . . and angels flying through the night?" The child grew drowsy and his curly head Drooped like a flower. Gently to his bed His mother carried him. And there she stayed Kneeling beside him, happy yet afraid.

The HOLIDAY GUEST by Elizabeth Blossing

THE plum pudding was ripening, and the guest room was prettier with the yellow drapes than I had ever dreamed it could be, and a bluff at doing it!"

She knew that to a professional teacher her methods must seem grotesquely unprofessional, being based on the same principle as that by which she lived most of her life—or tried to; that principle being the imperative need to extract all the entertainment possible from any situation in which you found yourself. So she worked really very hard to make her days in her schoolroom yield entertainment, first to herself, and secondly to forty rather bucolic children of all ages and sects (Amish, New and Old Mennonites, Dunkards) who filled her school. A few vigorous and tireless hours were devoted to drilling in geography, multiplication tables, grammar, spelling (she suspected that the way she did that drilling would have made any real pedagogue shudder) and the rest of the time was delightfully spent in teaching what she, not the school trustees, thought children ought to know—fairly stories, poems, plays.

"Surely, Charles, you don't remember well."

"Yes, she is fat," Charles went on, "and although she has money from four years of teaching, she always wears a faded blue serge suit with a belt, and—" The doorbell's ringing interrupted him.

"I'll answer it," I said.—A telegram! and tearing it open, I read: "Meet me at 2:15 at the Union depot—Willie."

It would be a two-hour trip; so I picked up some Christmas cards, and my gold fountain pen with my initials "W. W." on it. I could spend part of the time on the train addressing cards.

I couldn't possibly miss her—the fat, red-headed school teacher in faded blue serge—with a belt, I thought as I settled in my seat.

I stepped from the train conscious of the patronizing attitude I had assumed, but nowhere could I see any one answering Willie's description.

It was nearly five o'clock when I reached the last store, where I had no charge account, but where my check would be accepted. I felt for my fountain pen. It was gone! Frantically I searched my pockets for it, carelessly laying my purchases on the counter.

"Step aside please, Madam, you are holding up the line," politely requested the cashier as a stylish, tall blonde took my place, and before my dismayed eyes took out a pen exactly like mine. I remembered Charles had once told me that often thieves were better dressed nowadays than others.

"She easily could have picked my pocket while we were standing in line," I reasoned. Hence, convinced that she had my pen, I demanded that the cashier examine the pen and see if it had my monogram, "W. W." on it. It had!

"I will let the lady off easy," I thought as I noticed the costly serge of her modish suit, "because she is probably a kleptomaniac whose—" "There is some mistake," a clear sweet voice interrupted my thoughts.

"I'll let the lady off easy," I thought as I noticed the costly serge of her modish suit, "because she is probably a kleptomaniac whose—" "There is some mistake," a clear sweet voice interrupted my thoughts.

"Well," Charles had hesitated, "I told you once that she was a 'home girl' and old-fashioned."

"But that's very indefinite," I had replied. "How tall is she?"

"Oh-a, she's about five feet, six—about your height, and has long, red hair—I suppose it's still long, and she's rather fat, and—"

"Fat," I had gasped, "your sister fat?" And then I had visions of Raymond Garfield's expression when he should see standing under the mistletoe, this old-fashioned, fat, red-headed girl who was to be his partner at all of the parties.

"This is my own pen, and 'W. W.' stands for my name, Willie Woodrow," "Willie Woodrow," I gasped. "This girl!" Then hiding my true thoughts, I hastened to greet her, explaining: "I'm Willie Woodrow, Charles' wife."

I wrote my check while Willie put things back into my pockets, and we walked from the store together.

"But, Willie dear," I exclaimed after we were on the car, "Charles said 'red hair, and fat.' And I added mentally, 'faded blue serge.'"

"Exactly, dear—look at me," Willie commanded.

"I'm looking," I smiled, "but what I see is fluffy golden hair crowning a plump, but not too plump, pink-and-white face from which shine two magic blue eyes, and—"

Then I remembered the holiday parties I had planned for Charles' "home-like, old-fashioned" sister, and I pictured the fascinated gleam which would come into Raymond Garfield's eyes when he saw Willie standing under the mistletoe.
