Mr. Mauos will spend about six, months with his aged mother, brother and two sisters. This will be his first visit to his old home in 20 years Mr. Manos came here more than 12 years ago and opened The Davie Cafe, which he has operated very successfully. During his long stay here he has made many friends who wish him a pleasant journey and a happy visit with his loved ones in his native land beyond the sea. During his absence The Davie Cafe will be operated by Dennis Silverdis a relative. Dennis will be glad to serve you in the same efficient manner that has characterized this cafe since it was opened in January.

Veteran Editor Dead.

John B. Sherrill, veteran editor of the Concord Tribune, died at his home in Concord aged 70 years. Editor Sherrill suffered a stroke of apoplexy, on Monday preceding his death. He entered the newspaper business 54 years ago. Funeral and burial took place at Concord Friday afternoon.

Robert Cain Dead.

Robert Cain, 77, well known citizen of upper Davie, died Feb. 25 at his home and the funeral was held Tuesday morning at the Bear Creek Baptist church. He was a member of a prominent Davie family, the son of the late Patrick H. Cain and Susan Cheshire Cain. Survivors are a brother, Marshall Cain, and a number of nieces. Another brother, Dr. John M. Cain, died several years ago.

Seems like the measles have taken a fresh start in Mocksville. Many new cases developed last week. A few cases of mumps are a's) reported in town. The city schools were closed last week on account of the power lines being out of commission and the water cut off for first two days. On liccount of bad weather and much sickness the board decided to dis pense with the classes for the en tire week. The schools reopened Monday morning.

There was no heat in the court house Monday and Tuesday-of last week. The county officials ried to stay on their jobs, but found it a trying proposition. One of the officers brought his books to The Record office and established head quarters. The other officers droped over every few minutes to warm their frozen feet and hands by the good old fashioned Record office stove which is heated by c al. We were glad to have the boys with us.

HAVE CONTROL OF THE TURKEY FLOCK

Need Free Range Before the Laying Season Starts.

It is important that the turkey breeding flock be well controlled during the season of egg production. Free range may be allowed until about a month before the birds start laying. As this time approaches, advises a correspondent in Successful Farming. they are best put under control so that their instinct of stealing away to nest does not cause a serious loss of valuable hatching eggs.

In the north well-managed turkeys start to lay early in the spring. There fore, it is well to place the breeding flock under control early and feed a good laying mash. Manage it the same as a flock of laying chickens should be

Provide as large a range as possible so long as it keeps the birds under control and does not allow them to steal away to nest. A good shelter is necessary for them while the weather is still cold and blustery, but as the genson grows warmer they may be allowed to roost in an open shed protected from storms. A successful method of encouraging garly egg production from turkeys is to provide lights for the breeding flock the same as for chickens. So long as the weather is bad all feeding and watering equipment should be kept indoors and cleaned often. After that it is well to keep the feed and water sunply away from the buildings.

Nests for turkeys may be made of barrels. Little individual huts roomy enough to be comfortable are also satisfactory. Broody turkeys are much easier to break up than broody chickens. Confinement for one to three days usually cures them of the notion, after which they soon resume laying. A good turkey will lay between 35 and 40 eggs

Hatchability of Eggs

Is Influenced by Feed Because proper sorts of feed for the poultry flock influence the hatchability of eggs, some hatcheries in Ohio pay premiums to poultrymen whose eggs hatch the most chicks, according to R. E. Cray, extension pecialist in poultry husbandry for the Ohio State university.

Hatchability of eggs depends in part upon three factors which are under the control of all poultrymen. More fertile eggs are obtained from flocks fed a green food, milk, and supplied vitamin D. savs Crav.

Green food may be supplied either n the form of alfalfa or soy bean hay, or by adding alfalfa leaf meal to he dry laying mash.

Feeding both milk and green food metimes increases the proportion feggs that hatch as much as 10 or 2 per cent. Feeding one and not the ther increases hatchability slightly. Vitamin D may be supplied either in cod liver oil or by submitting the flock to direct rays from the sun on the range, cod liver oil beneficially affects hatchability.

Choosing Breeders

Vigor and health are more imtant than all else in selecting a turkey breeding flock. Vigorous, fast flowing, early maturing, blocky young toms are preferred for breeding. Young hens are preferred to old ones because they generally lay earlier and lay more eggs, except in the case of specially selected layers. Cod liver oil fed to the turkey breeding flock insures bealth, shell texture and higher hatchability and livability of the poults, acording to the Nebraska Agricultural llege. A good laying mash kept beore the hens at all times will stimuite earlier laying as well as greater roduction. Boxes about 30 inches luare or barrels laid on the side ake suitable nests. Brush piled ever lese makes them more tempting to e hens. Seven or eight nests should enough for 30 hens, adds the col-

Hatchable Pullet Eggs

if pullets have been in production 10m 60 to 90 days before the eggs are cted for hatching and have been mated with vigorous cocks the chicks hould be satisfactory, according to North Carolina State college. The factors of good management for the illets, however, will have considerable bearing on the question. A bal-anced ration should be fed, reinforced with a blologically tested cod-liver oil here green feed is not available. The mses should be well ventilated.

Feed for Producing Hens Hens will not lay many eggs on any ations unless they have all the oyster or other lime-bearing material need for the formation of shell. ley must also have a reasonable nt of green feed in the form of regetables or clover, preferably alfalfa round or fine chopped form. Oats ad barley have good qualities, but are beartily relished with the hulls on. heat and cracked corn are both irishing and fattening; so, should be it only moderately to layers.

Crisp White Neckwear's the Thing

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SUCH an exciting season of striking | the perfectly adorable neckwear fancrisp white neckwear as is this! Seems as if most of spring and summer costume interest is centering about neckwear treatments. It really is not overstating the matter to say that frilly, frivolous and altogether fascinating details at necklines sleeves, shoulders and wrists are just about to "steal the show."

That oft-repeated theme of blackand-white comes to us for spring in terms of chic black frocks which are lavishly enlivened with the most beguiling crisp white neckwear fancy can picture. For that matter, wheth er the dress be one of the new black or dark blue crepes or a swanky thin pastel woolen, or a print done in the new bizarre coloring, the first thing to strike one about it is almost sure to be the feminine frilly white neckwear which adorns it.

As to the materials for these allimportant neckwear items they include most everything from tailored piques, taffetas and washable crepes to sheerest of transparent mousselines and organdles. And there's lace! Don't forget lace, for any amount of pretty lace fixings are in promise, ranging from Irish crochet and allover patternings to daintiest valen ciennes.

Possibly it is the frilly little sheer pleatings which are assigned the leading role in this play of neckwear. Anyway "oodles and oodles" of wee pleatings are running rlot about necklines and sleeves and up, down and around front fastenings. The illustration presents a few neckwear highspots. Since these sketches speak so dramatically for themselves. instead of describing them individually we would much rather tell you about tasies which are designed to simulate flowers. For example, a capelike bil effect is formed of a mass of long spearlike petals suggesting the chrysanthemum motif. Then there is the daisy collar which is made of long petal tabs. A cala lily theme is in terpreted via a series of corpucopia rolled tabs of white pique. Tulips orchids and roses are also copied in various white weaves. Of course mère words do not do them justice: they have to be seen to yield to their magic

We have not attempted to picture by word or sketch the multitudinous tailored fashions which are featured on the vast neckwear program mapped out for the coming months. Plentiful versions appear in starched and stitched linen and pique in plain and embroidered organdie and there is a big showing of printed silk neck togs. Outstanding in this class are the clever scarf and bib effects made of gay Mexican silk stripes.

For afternoon wear there are collar and cuff sets fashioned of metalbarred and embroidered taffetas stressing bright greens and reds and other primary colors, likewise blacks and navies with gold or silver patternings, with gold on white being an outstanding favorite.

Huge bows either of gay silks or fashioned of sheer white weaves are receiving lots of attention. Very elaborate lingerie bows are made of masses of little "val" edgings or work embroidered organdie and lace to-

Poise Named as Secret of Charm

But It Must Be Admitted Pleasing Quality Is Hard to Define.

On behalf of a well-known charity there is to be a series of lectures given in New York on the intriguing subject, "What is charm?".

"Experts" on the subject of charm have been recruited to talk on their specialties. There is to be a wellknown beauty specialist, an actress a society woman, an important dressmaker, a poetess and "prominent women from the world of art home decorating and the screen"! And they will endeavor to answer the question, "What is charm?"

I doubt if they can—if anyone can. The moment you try to track down the quality to definable terms it eludes you. "That sounds like it," you will say, "but So-and-So would not answer quite to such a description, and yet she has charm." Or someone who does answer doesn't have quite that something that sets her apart and makes everybody, men, women and children-oh, yes, the women and children, too, recognize real charm-her slaves.

A woman may be very beautifuland not have charm. A woman may be very brilliant—and not have charm. So many brilliant women don't. A woman may be very good and ditto! A woman may have cleyerness or vivacity, even "personal ity"-and not have charm!

And yet you have met women who are neither beautiful nor brilliantnor even too good-who had charm What is it? It reminds me of that famous question of Mrs. Teall of the Newark Evening News. "What quality do you vibrate?" It is a quality that some women vibrate but I doubt that any one "specialist" can quite catch it-it is compounded of so many things. Something of goodness, of course, of charity and understanding, and something of humor and calm and objectivenes of interest in other people and a stability and sufficiency within oneself-a sort of inner hold and control that can maintain always the same poise, that vibrates strength and gives help, but never needs it. That is the reason for the air of mystery that one sometimes feels about wemen-with real charm. They are so self-sufficient they never reveal themselves, never state them-

"Let's see some of it."

Doris could feel Rocky's nervous inward tremor while she listened to his assumed belligerence: "What's this all about?" "We'll come to that."

Are we under arrest?" "Nothin' like that. We just got to take you up to the station if you don't mind, mister..."

Rocky cut in crisply. "But I do mind. I've been driving all day and my wife is tired."

"Veeh but mister in a case like this we gotta be mighty careful. And we got this tip-' "If you want to arrest us. that's your lookout," said Rocky. The fat-faced cop pushed his face into the car, looking over the wheel at Doris. "We'll go up to St. Gardens'

I'll drive." said Rocky gravely. The cop grunted. He walked around the car and got in beside Doris.

K. Let's go.' The man on the motorcycle sent his machine leaving ahead of them.

The cool air came rushing grate fully to Doris' pale cheeks as the car got under way. Her shoulder was tucked under Rocky's like a small chicken nestling under its mother's wing. What was the name of the girl the police wanted? Anne Somebody. Was that her real name? Had her real self been found at last. And was she a criminal? Doris put these thoughts away. Suposing they accused her of the worst of crimes. How could she deny them? What, oh what could she have been in that other lost life of hers? They turned at last between stone gate posts.

"This is the place all right," said the cop. They rode for three-quarters of a mile before the lights of the house appeared. At last Rocky drew up before the door of the great house. He shut off the engine, opened the door and

"Come on. Doris."

"Looks like her, Murphy, all right!" The motorcycle cop drew up beside "I want to speak to the young lady." them. "Not so fast."

Doris knew then that the policemen were still suspicious. Rocky had run ahead up the steps of the house, and was ringing the bell. Doris with a policeman on either side of her followed more slowly.

Her heart was beating wildly. The door opened slowly. A blond impassive face looked out.

"Hello, Swenson. Is Mr. St. Gardens in?"

The butler swung the door open. "Yes, Mr. Du Val. Come in." Rocky motioned to Doris. She went into a square hallway. The policemen came too.

On a landing above a short, square set figure appeared. He had on a dressing gown, and held a book in his hand. He stared at the group for a minute in amazed silence. "Rocky! Is it Rocky, for heaven's sake?" "It's Rocky. I've brought my wife." Rocky was bounding up the stairs to the landing. Doris saw him take the short square man by the shoulder and say something. Then St. Gardens turned and came down the stairs with outstretched hands. "Doris! It's so nice to see you again. I was wondering when you would turn up. You must be tired from your journey. Been traveling all day?"

Doris was confused. She took St. Gardens' hands gladly, smiled at him without speaking, but it was the vague act of a bewildered and exhausted child.

She sat down in the nearest chair. The room was going round and round. She hardly heard the policemen She knew that everything was being arranged. Everything was all right.

Rocky had fixed things. The policemen went away. The door was closed. "Beatrice isn't in. Someone's giving her a dinner and dance at the country club. I didn't stay. I just got in, said St. Gardens. "Lucky I did, too, Wasn't that a rummy thing—those dumb cops picking you up like that?"

"Terrible," said Rocky. "They were so suspicious I thought it would save a lot of trouble if you pretended you had already met Doris. May I introduce her now?" Doris roused herself. St. Gardens was holding out both his hands. "This is a great pleasure, my dear, Rocky has always been like my own son to me."

Doris put her hands hastily across her own eyes. She knew she was acting badly, but it was all so puzzling to her tired mind. "She's exhausted," said Rocky apologetically.

St. Gardens apparently didn't know her. He had pretended to recognize her in order to save her from the police. He thought she was the real Doris. She was to fool him as she had fooled the Du Vals. She rose trembling, a hand pressed against her

"No. no!" "What's the matter?"

They could not follow her thoughts She was being stupid. She could not pretend to be the real Doris any more She was really that girl-that criminal the policemen were seeking. She looked at Rocky with widened eyes.

"I can't stand it. I'm-" St. Gardens took her elbow. His voice rich and caressing, spoke to her softly: "You are very tired. You have been through a dreadful ordeal. I can see that. And now you want to "Let me take her upstairs," said Rocky. "You are right. She needs to go to bed. She's knocked out."

"It's enough to knock anybody outbeing mistaken for a murderess." said

St. Gardens sympathetically. Doris looked at him. A murderess

That's what she had done. She had committed a murder. The room was still rocking, but she no longer felt tired. St. Gardens' words had galvanized her. New life, like second wind coming to a tired swimmer, flooded her. She looked at Rocky in agony. What did St. Gardens mean? Rocky read the question in her eyes, but he deliberately ignored it. "Come, you must go to bed." Doris wanted to speak but her mouth felt dry. Meantime Rocky, as if anticipating her purpose, had begun to talk hectically about their trip. And he was pushing her up the stairway. A maid came. Locky went out to get her bags, leaving her standing at the top of the stairs beside St. Gardens. She looked at him with twisted brows.

"What did you say a minute or two ago about a murder?" St. Gardens smiled. "Oh nothing was just referring to the stupid business of the local law enforcers in mistaking you for what's her name in this chapter of Matthew the "mysteries" of the kingdom are unfolded (v. 11). By "mystery" in the Scriptures is meant truth undiscoverable by human reason, made known by revelation The teaching set forth In these parables sets forth the admixture of moral and spiritual interests which characterize the period between Christ's rejection and his triumphant

I. The Mustard Seed (+v. 31, 32). 1. Its unimportant beginning (v. 31). It begins as the least of all seeds. Not only was Christ, king, of humble parentage, but his disciples were unlettered fishermen.

2. Its vigorous growth (v. 32). Though small at its inception, the work inaugurated by Christ, has become wide in extent and mighty in

3. Its lodging capacity (v. 32). The birds which find lodgment in the tree represent predatory individuals who have found shelter in the church but are not part of it. The birds which lodge in the branches are the "fowls" which devoured the seed that fell by the wayside (v. 4).

II. The Leavened Meal (v. 33). 1. The meal. Meal in the Scriptures means something nutritious and wholesome. Examples of its character and use are found in Gen. 18:6:I Kings 4:22; Il Kings 4:41. Also it was used in one of the sweet sayour offerings which typified Jesus Christ (Lev. 2:1-3

2. The woman. The woman is the administrator of the home. Her responsibility is to take the bread provided by the head of the home and prepare and distribute it to the chil dren. Observe:

a. Her act. She hid the leaven in the meal b. Its issue. It leavened the meal The meal was not turned into leaven but was affected by the leaven. 3 The leaven In the Scripture leaven is invariably a type of evil (Exod 12:15, Matt. 16:6, 12; I Cor. 5:6 8: Gal. 5:8, 9). The teaching of this parable, therefore, is that in this age the truth of God, and the wholesome institutions established by God would be corrupted by error, worldliness and unbelief. The woman representing the administrator of affairs in the world would introduce false doctrine and thus corrupt the children's bread III. The Hid Treasure (v. 44). The field (v. 38) Christ's own interpretation makes this to be the world. 2. The treasure. This doubtless means (Israel the chosen people (Ps. 135:4; Deut. 7:6-8).

3. The purchaser. This repres Jesus Christ (John 3:16). 4. The purchase price (I Pet. 1:13. 19). This was the precious blood of Jesus Christ, God's heloved Son. IV. The Merchantman Seeking Goodly Pearls (VV. 45, 46), 1 The merchantman is Christ (Luke 19:10). The Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was

2. The purchase price (Phil. 2:6-8). Christ impoverished himself in order to purchase the pearl of great price. 3 The nearl of great price (Col. 1:18). This is not Jesus Christ but the Church purchased by his blood.

V. The Dragnet (v. 47-50). 1. The sea. Sea in the Scripture denotes people and multitudes (Dan. 7:3: Rev. 17:15). 2. The dragnet cast into the sea (v 47). This means the sowing of the Word by the Son of Man (v. 37). 3. The dragnet drawn to shore when full (v. 48). When God's purpose is made full concerning the pres ent age, an account will be made. 4. The separation (vv. 48, 49). separation is made by the angels, and will take place at the end of the age. 5. The destiny (vv. 49-50). The angels, God's ministers, shall separate the wicked from among the just and shall cast them into the furnace of fire where there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. The good shall be

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

His a "National Monument" IT TOWERS nearly a thousand feet above the surrounding country, a silent sentinel over the beautiful valley of the North Platte river. It was a landmark for many a pioneer in the Covered Wagon days of the old Oregon Trail. It is a landmark today for many an automobile tourist speeding west, for when he reaches the city of Scotts Bluff, Neb., he sees off at the south across the river this huge mass of sandstone which hears the name of Scotts Bluff and perpetuates the name of Hiram Scott. As a member of General Ashley's famous fur-trading expedition up the Missouri in 1823, Scott had first seen this mountain which was to become his monument. Then he became a free trapper and later a partner with Nar cisse LeClero in a company of trap pers which reaped a rich harvest of peltries along the headwaters of the Platte. In 1828 they started for St. Louis to market their furs. A hundred miles up the river from the mountain Scott was taken ill and left behind with two trappers Roi and Bissonette, who were to bring him down the river by bull boat. But soon after they launched the clumsy craft it unset and all their provisions and ammunition were lost They managed to reach Laramie fork, 60 miles up the river from the moun tain where LeClera and the others were to await their coming. They were half-starved and, leaving Scott in camp the other two set out in search of food. Then they came across LeClerg's trail and deliberately decided to follow it and leave Scott to his fate. When they overtook LeClerq they told him that Scott had died, so he pushed on toward St. Louis. Back at his camp near Laramie fork the realization soon came to Scott that his friends had deserted him. So he set out to follow them. A year later Bissonette and old Joe Robideaux, seeking water from the spring that gushes from the southern slope of Scotts Bluff, found a skeleton not far away. From the buttons on the fragments of clothing still clinging to the bones and from other trinkets Bissonette recognized the skeleton as that of Hiram Scott. Then the story of the betraval of the tranper by his two comrades came out. Tradition is that Bissonette and Robideaux buried the remains of Hiram Scott there and from that day the the goal of his weary journey was known as Scotts Bluff. A few years ago a tract of 2,300 acres surrounding was set aside as a public reserve and this natural memerial to Hiram Scott became a "national monument."

GOVERNOR of the state of Franklin: six terms governor of Tennessee; four times elected to congress; a projector and hero of King's Mountain · 35 battles—35 victories · his Indian war cry was: 'Here they are!

tory—that of John Sevier. chucky Jack." Born in Virginia in 1744 of a French Huguenot family, Sevier emigrated to James Robertson's Watauga settlement in eastern Tennessee in 1773. Almost immediately the young Virginian be came a leader in various forays against hostile Indians. By his audacity and the swiftness and unexpectedness of his attacks on the Indian towns. he broke the spirit of the Cherokees and their allies and prevented their being used by the British in a rear attack on the colonies during the Revolution. He used the same tactics in one of the most brilliant victories over the British during that war. He was one of the leaders of the mountain men in their swift dash to trap Colonel Ferguson and his troops at King's mountain before they could receive aid from Cornwallis, and thus contributed to the victory at Yorktown. After the Revolution the Watauga settlement became an orphan. Neither North Carolina nor the new federal government seemed to want it. So in 1784 the settlers organized the independent state of Franklin, a commonwealth unique in American history, and elected "Nolichucky Jack" as their governor. When North Carolina tried to assert its authority over the region again, the settlers resisted. Their governor was singled out for nunishment, treacherously betrayed. captured and placed on trial at Morgantown, N. C., for high treason. And at once more than 1,000 of the mountain men assembled to rescue their beloved "Nolichucky Jack." A civil war seemed imminent. But Sevier made a spectacular escape from his captors and a short time later his people elected him to the North Carolina legislature. There was some protest over seating him but eventually he was allowed to take office.

From that time on he was never long out of public life—as congress man from North Carolina, as the first governor of the new state of Tennes see, and then repeatedly re-elected and thrice re-elected to congress. He died as he had lived-in the harness and in the field. The end came in 1815 in a tent on a surveying expedition for the government, surrounded by his

When a family preserves records of its history, it is generally done in the family Bible or album, says the Boston Post. But a woman in Sussex. Wis., hit upon a strange family record. She made a quilt of transparent silk. Under the silk pieces she sewed old records, letters and family mementos. The records can be read served.

King Albert of Belgium, Killed by Fall While Mountain Climbing, Succeeded by Leopold-Three Great Powers Protect Austria.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONE of the best and most beloved of the few remaining kings, Albert I of Belgium, met a tragic death while practicing for his favorite sport, mountain climbing. He

King Leopold was plunged in genuine mourning, and all the world sympathized, for Albert had won high esteem by his heroism during the World war and his just government of his people.

Albert is succeeded by Crown Prince Leopold, duke of Brabant, his eldest son. Leopold is thirty-two years old and was married in 1926 to Princess Astrid of Sweden. They have a daughter and a son. The new ruler was probably one of the youngest soldiers in the World war, enlisting as a pri vate when he was thirteen years old. He was treated as an ordinary soldier, seeing active service in the trenches, and was a sergeant when the armistice was signed.

The dead king's funeral was of course a stately affair. The procession from the Brussels palace to the cathedral of St. Gudule was led by mounted gendarmes who were followed by British, Italian and French troops. Then came the Belgian troops with crepe-draped flags. Albert's personal colors were carried just ahead of the gun carriage that bore the casket, and his favorite charger followed, the saddle empty and field boots reversed in the stirrups. Next walked Crown Prince Leopold, his brother, Charles, and their brother-in-law, Crown Prince Umberto of Italy, the latter carefully guarded by police because of the attempt to assassinate him in Brussels

In the throng of notable persons in the processions were representatives of all nations. Ambassador Morris was there for the United States; President Lehrun and Premier Doumergue headed the large French delégation; from England were the prince of Wales, Field Marshal Lord Allenby and Admiral Sir Roger Keyes; Germany was represented by Dr. Friedrich von Keller, and Poland by Ignatz Paderewski.

Next day Leopold was crowned. with Astrid on the throne beside him. The parliamentary reply to the new ruler's speech from the throne thanked the new queen for having given hirth to two children, insuring the permanence of the dynasty.

King Albert was the third of his line. He was born in 1875 and ascended the throne in 1909. Throughout the war he was one of the most active members of the Belgian army continually at the front to help his troops and often in imminent danger of death. After the armistice he go the task of reconstruction well under way and then, with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leonold, took journeys to the United States, England, France, Spain, Brazil and other countries to study trade conditions and find new outlets for Belgian products.

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN is moving from capital to capital in Europe on the rather hopeless mission of reviving the disarmament negotiations

In Paris he was told by the seven big men of the French cabinet that France was unwilling to reduce her military power while the Nazi menace continues, and the French government had already coldly refused to discuss the matter with Hitler "while Germany is rearming." Concessions recently offered to the German chancellor had been met with inconclusive arguments, and with demands for a German army of 300,000 effectives, which France rejected. The most the French statesmen would say was that they "looked forward in a most general manner toward the possibility of an international accord, equally hoped for by both parties on the question of disarmament."

Discouraged but persistent, Captain Eden went on to Berlin and Rome for further conversations based on the British plan for reduction of arma-

FOR the time being the danger of a European war arising from the Austrian Socialist rebellion is over. Great Britain, France and Italy have united to safeguard Austria's independence and while that holds no other nation dare attack. Long conversations were held in Paris by British Ambassador Lord Tyrrell, Premier Donmergue, Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, and representatives of Italy, and the outcome was this statement to the

"The Austrian government has inquired of the governments of France Great Britain and Italy as to their attitude with regard to a dossier which it prepared with a view of establishing German interference in the internal affairs of Austria and communicated to them. The conversations which have taken place between the three governments on this subject have shown they take a common view as to the necessity of maintaining Austria's ance with the relevant treaties." This pronouncement was proposed by Premier Mussolini, who seeks to keep Austria intact as a buffer state between Naziism and Fascism. It is of course, directed to Hitler, who hopes that the government of Chancellor Dollfuss may be overthrown, if not by force, then in elections.

TREASURY reports reveal that all L sources of internal revenue showed large increases during the first seven months of the present fiscal year as compared with the same period of 1933, with the exception of corporate income taxes.

Total receipts for the seven months' eriod ended January 31 amounted to $1.397.950.474, a gain of $566.708.061 as compared with the year before.

For the seven months the government's collection of taxes on distilled spirits, wines, and beers amounted to $120.547.399, as compared with $4.379,-586 in the same 1932 period.

SENTIMENT in favor of the immediate payment of the veterans bonus is so strong among the Democrats in the house that the promise of a veto by the President did not deter 145 representatives from signing a petition to take the Patman bill from the committee and bring it up for a vote on March 12. Speaker-Rainey had been to the White House and returned with this message: "I am-authorized by Wright Patman the President to say that this is not the time to pay the bonus and that he cannot approve any legislation to that effect."

But the members went right on signing. Mr. Rainey was visibly disturbed. but said, in reply to inquiries, "We're going to let the house do just as it

Wright Patman of Texas, Democrat. author of the bill, told the house the neasure would provide the administration with the mechanism for carrying out the inflationary program it already has embraced, and that it would save the government billions of dollars in interest. It seemed most likely that the bill would be passed by the house, and it may also get through the ate, for the sentiment for it has been steadily growing in that body.

O'NLY seven members of the house voted in the negative when the $258,000,000,000 tax revision bill came up for passage. It is expected the enate will make many alterations in the measure for the purpose of further fortifying the statutes against

Of principal interest to the average taxpayer is the bill's readjustment of the income tax rate structure to provide a new normal rate of 4 per cent and surtaxes starting at 4 per cent on net income above $4,000 and ranging in graduated brackets to 59 per cent on incomes of $1,000,000 or more. The new tax rates, however, will not be effective on 1933 incomes.

Generally the bill is designed to prevent such tax evasion methods as were disclosed during the recent investigations of the senate banking and currency committee into stock market

OFFICIALS of St. Paul and Minne apolis were considerably angered by a statement made by Attorney Gen eral Homer S. Cummings in which he said the Twin cities were "breeding grounds of crime." Mayor Mahoney of St. Paul telegraphed to Mr. Cum mings demanding that he amplify his charges, but the attorney general's only reply was to say that he meant what he said. Thereupon the mayor gave the Ramsey county attorney a list of twelve persons, including Mr. Cummings, whom he wished asked to appear before the grand jury, which is now in session. It was said legal complications probably would prevent the subpoenaing of the attorney general and other national officials.

GEN. AUGUSTO SANDINO, for years the leader of rebels in Nicaragua until a year ago when he made peace with President Sacasa, was murners of the guard at Managua. The crime was denounced by Sacasa and an investigation was ordered, for the government had guaranteed the lives of Sandino and his followers while in the capital.

EVEN in a republic the people like to read about the doings of royalty, so there has been much interest in the romance of Prince Sigvard, twenty - six - year - old son of Crown Prince Gustav Adolf of Sweden. Sigvard fell in love with Erika Pat-

and told Sigvard he would be disowned if he persisted in his plan. Nevertheless the young man, unable to get the necessary papers in Berin, went to London with Erika and it was reported the wedding would take place there on March 8. The prince is well aware that if he narries the German girl he will forfeit his royal rights and thenceforth will be just "Mr. Bernadotte," but he apparently is ready to give up everything for love. In 1932 his cousin. Prince Lennert, married the daughter of a Stockholm industrialist and is now known as Mr. Lennert Bernadotte.

F JAPAN and Russia do not get into a war, it will be the fault of neither. The latest development in their growing hostility is a row over fishing rights in the north Pacific. The Japanese government is enraged because Moscow has doubled the ruble rate of exchange with the yen and has rejected Japanese bids on the Kamchatka fishing grounds based on the old rate. This, the Tokyo foreign office says, is a flagrant violation of a solemn agreement between Baron Shidehara, former foreign minister, and Alexander Troyanovsky, former Soviet ambassador to Japan.

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

since Franklin Delano Roosevelt carried his "new deal" A Year of the program into the Ex-"New Deal" ecutive Mansion at Washington and the country has witnessed, in that time, many of the most revolutionary changes in its economic and social and inancial structure that could be imagined. Indeed, in a nation that has tradition of being largely conservative, some of the things that have happened, or have been brought about by the new dealers, could not even be imagined except by those who dwell in the house of the theorist. But they have come; they are with us, and without commendation or criticism, it is being asked: what have we?

For one thing, in the past twelve months, we have observed the slowly stretching tentacles of the federal government reaching out into hitherto unknown functions; we have seen those same tentacles taking over more and more the rights of individuals and of states and lesser divisions of government, and we have witnessed what some persons hold to be an absolute destruction of that basic difference between one nation and a union of our several states. That is, according to the view just set forth, we are for the period of the emergency at least, just one people instead of peoples of the 48 states and the District of Columbia. Also, I think it is true that never in our history have we known a time when the President of the United States was possessed of such power either legally or politically, as now.

In the preparation of this weekly letter, I consulted with men and women of thought and vision, and I believe there was no exception to the conviction that none can accurately forecast what the ultimate results of these changes are going to be. Economic and social changes are slow to mature into their full effect. It is natural that they should be. So it is going to be some years before we can know whether the theories and the plans of the new dealers will be accepted into the basic structure of American lives. Of one thing we can be sure: if all of the changes, or even half of them, are knitted permanently into our so cial structure, the accomplishment of these last twelve months in that direction will have been greater by many times than the changes that have oc curred in any other century, indeed, in several centuries combined.

Take, for example, the principles of NRA, AAA, and the others of the "alphabetical organizations." Every one of them has injected into American life projects and propositions which were rejected in one form or another in their basic ideas in years gone by. Under the desperation of the depression, they were hurled into the whirlpool of our social structure with varying success, as measured by the results thus far. Nearly all of the principles injected into the commercial lifeblood of the nation are of a character to promote group or unit action distinguished from individual action that was developed with the opening up of American resources after formation of the Union. We never have known, for instance, a time when our government told business in so many words that it could work together as a unit, if it met certain requirements nor have we ever known a time when our government said to agriculture that it had to cut down its produc tion in a monopolistic agreement in order to force higher prices. One could go on and on with illustrations Now, to repeat the earlier question what have we?

There is, and can be, little doubt of economic progress in the last few months. The coun-Noticeable try has emerged Progress from the depression, to some extent at least. I believe no one can say with assurance, however, that we are far enough on the road to recovery that we can be sure of no relapse. But those persons who are best in a position to appraise conditions certainly feel there has been a gain.

As to the cause of this improvement. one can pick up an argument almost anywhere. The ardent supporters of the new deal assert the Rosevelt policles are responsible, while those opposed to the Roosevelt policies claim there is a probability that some or all of the progress made came from the natural wearing out of the depression. That is, history records the same course for all depressions. Stocks and supplies are exhausted and production starts up of its own accord to meet the demand.

So we are starting in on a second year of the new deal, as I see the picture, still uncertain as to the outcome but equipped with greater confidence than obtained among the rank and file of the people a year ago. It will be recalled how many times President Roosevelt has said, in presenting new items in his new deal, that here was something else to try. He has experimented. The law of average might seem to indicate that part of them will work, and obviously a part of them have been influential in the economic progress that has been made. But who can say with assurance which they were and how much influence each had? It is my conviction that

Washington.-It has been just a year | anyone attempting to make an unqual ified statement of these results at this time is either biased or inclined to stupidity. Human nature has changed slowly through the centuries.

> While we are looking into the extent to which the Roosevelt policies have carried the fed-Wide Powers eral government in for Wallace individual affairs, it is proper to call attention to the far-reaching, even sensational, proposal to give Secretary of > Agriculture Wallace authority to control the amount of cotton that may be produced each year. The legislation. known as the Bankhead bill, is undoubtedly the most important proposition yet devised for extending federal power, because it not only invades rights hitherto respected but it provides the secretary of agriculture with power to force cotton farmers to obey his orders in limiting the cotton production.

Succinctly, the Bankhead bill with which congress is now wrestling would limit the production of cotton in the United States to nine million bales for the crop year of 1934-35, and in order to prevent the production of a greater amount there is a destructive sales tax provided for application to the surplus. The tax is fixed at twelve cents a pound for the amount in excess of nine million bales, and that figure, of course, is higher than the value of the cotton itself. To enable the secretary of agriculture to control the production, each farmer who planted cotton would have to obtain from the secretary what is described as a certificate of exemption for the amount he intended to produce. That is to say, the farmer would be given a certificate exempting so many pounds of cotton from the operation of the sales tax, and it is presumed that the certificates of exemption will be issued only for the required amount

From this brief outline, it must be apparent that never before has there been such a drastic proposal for control of individual businesses of men in this country. Under the present crop reduction plans, the proposition is voluntary. There is a contractual arrangement into which the producer voluntarily enters. But under the new proposal, the limitation is placed directly in the hands of the secretary of agriculture and be is given power at the same time to see that his decisions as to total production and restrictions are obeyed. I have heard all of the arguments favorable to the bill and some of them against it, but none of them have made clear to me what can be done in poor crop years or in years when there is a bumper crop. What I mean is this: the total for the crop year of 1934-35 is fixed at nine million bales on the acreage of a "normal" or average year. But assume there is especially favorable weather in the year and the production is far above the average, then will the farmer be penalized by having to destroy that part of his crop in excess of the amount'stated on his certificate of exemption? Or what benefits will he gain when nature has smiled on his crop?

There is also the converse of the proposition. Assume there is another drought of 1930 pro On the portions and the cot-Other Hand ton crop is virtually destroyed. How is the cotton producer going to be rewarded for having reduced his acreage, and where will the country get its supplies of cotton? Obviously, a short crop will enhance the price. Yet with a small acreage, will the farmer get even a fair return from the higher prices?

Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture called attention to another possible result of the bill. He told a congressional committee that he feared there would be a regular business of dealing in exemption certificates develop from that feature of the bill. One can only guess where that would lead Mr. Wallace said that the value of the exemption certificates obviously would fluctuate along with the rate o the tax on the excess, and the higher the rate of the tax the greater would be the value of the exemption certi-

"In so far as the exemption certificates are of high value." he said. there may be a tendency to shift the emphasis from cotton production to an emphasis on procuring of exemption certificates. These certificates themselves might become a commodity. This could mean that various persons who in the past have engaged in the production of cotton and would be entitled to exemption certificates, may prefer to remain out of cotton production and to rely for part of their income normally received from cotton upon the sales values of their exemption certificates."

The secretary likewise pointed to mother vital spot in the statement that there was no due allowance made for differences in soil conditions or weather, between the north and south lines of the cotton belt, and other such purely local phases. © by Western Newspaper Union.

THE YEAR

Is Going to be Just About What We Make It.

It will take a lot of work to get this old world back to normal. Everybody will have to put their shoulder to the wheel and push. Our country is in debt billions of dollars, and the foreign nations who owe us are not meeting their obligations. Hundreds of farmers are quitting the soil and working on Federal aid projects. A re-adjustment will have to take place.

Davie Record

Is going to do everything in its power to bring prosperity back. We are all in debt---states, counties, cities, towns, corporations and individuals. We are going to spend every penny we make in paying our debts, purchasing our supplies in this section whenever possible, and teaching other folks to do like wise. We will not keep any money out of circula. tion during the year 1934. Our creditors wouldn't let us even if we wanted to do so. The money we take in comes from our advertisers, our subscribers, and from those who patronize our job printing department. This paper is owned and edited by a Davie county man who believes in his town and county and has been boosting them for the past 27 years. If we make any money it stays here to help build up the best county in the state. The Magic Current.

One is reminded by experiences through which some of our neighboring cities have been passing that the electric switch comes near being the magic key to present mechanical civilization.

Greensboro, Winston-Salem, High Point, and surrounding communities could elequently testify to the vital niche which electric current fills in the modern order of life.

They went without it a day or two due to the phenomenal glaze that the weather pitched over them, breaking down the transmission lines felling treen and otherwise creating dam age that is estimated to run into the hundreds of thousands.

Without electricity! People walking to the top floors of tall buildings because elevators were idle; newspaper plants silent because he dynamos were inactive.

Factories standing still for lack of power; kitchens with non-productive stoves, and over the vast creations of modern device and convenience of living a pall of silence falling because no current was coming in!

One can easily imagine the plight of such communities when deprived tension specialists at State College; by President Hoover in November, of the battle with the "shrinking of such vital source of their mechanifault had been found with the man-ner in which Mr. McCrary had dis-crl energies. LESSON TEXT-Matt. 13:54-58-14:13, men, unacknowledged in his own country. Even his own brothers did not believe in him until after his resurrection (John 7:3-8; cf. Acts 1:14). Because of this unbelief only a limited work could be done there. II. Jesus Responding to the Faith of the Multitude (Matt. 14:13, 14). 1. He retired to the desert (v. 13). The news of the cruel death of John the Baptist brought grief to the heart Jesus and he withdrew to a place quietness to commune with the heavenly Father. Jesus accepted John's death as typical of his own. 2 Followed by the people (v. 13). The people were so greatly interested in him that they followed him on foot out of the cities.

3 Jesus healing the sick (v. 14). although the rulers had broken with im, he did not abandon his work. Though desperate and hopeless cases were brought to him, none was found oo hard for him.

III. Jesus Responding to the Faith a Woman of Canaan (Matt. 15:21-

The daughter was he one who was afflicted, but it was he mother who carried the burden. to doubt this Gentile woman had heard of the fame of Jesus. His power to heal had come to her notice and loubtless many times she longed for im to come her way that her daughter might be healed. Now that he was in her neighborhood she came straightray to him.

2 The mother's fervent appeal for elp (vv. 23-25). She humbly fell at ils feet and pleaded for mercy. She esought him to cast the demon out. ler appeal may be considered as a model prayer.

a. It was sincere and earnest. From the depths of her heart she cried to the Lord for help. b. It was brief and definite. In a few well chosen words she besought the Lord in behalf of her daughter. c it was personal and humble. The lord is pleased when we beseech him in behalf of personal friends as well as ourselves. She came humbly, for fording to Mark's account she fell at his feet (Mark 7:25). d It was believing and persistent. Though she was outside of the covepant people, she believed the Lord accept Christ are his covenant people. She persistently begged help of the Lord. She would not accept a refusal. The Lord is pleased with the soul who all not let him go until the blessing granted (Luke 11:5-10, 18:1-8).

3. The woman's faith rewarded (vv. a Jesus' apparent refusal (v. 23). le answered her not a word. This eems strange that to her distressing my he was irresponsive. Scarcely ever did anyone have to ask the second time. Frequently he did not wait to be asked. The reason for his silence was that a real difficulty lay in the way. He was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. This woman was a stranger to the covenant people. Her appeal was on the wrong basis. She addressed him as the son of David, which only a child of the kingdom, an Israelite, had a right to do. h The woman's quick response (vv. 5-27). As soon as she perceived the difficulty she worshiped him as Lord and cried for help. While only the Israelite could approach him as the ton of David, all can come to him and own him as Lord. She willingly took er place as a Gentile "dog." alizing that salvation is of the Jews.

The word for dog is a diminutive term ased for the pet or household dog which had a right to the crumbs which fell from the table. c. The glorious issue of her faith 7. 28). She received more than she asked. Her daughter was healed at once while the instructions she received were worth much to her. She sees down in history with the Savior's amendation of her faith.

When Age Comes Now they that are younger than I have me in derision, whose fathers I would have disdained to have set with the dogs of my flock. And now I am Job 30:1, 9.

solution of the problem is a coat and a suit. There are times when a coat is absolutely indispensable, and smartly clad indeed is she who tops a dashing midseason print frock with an advance spring coat which flaunts the latest touches

As for a suit, with a good supply of tuned-to-time-and-place blouses (some strictly tailored, others as feminine and frivolous as frilly jabots and lacy details can make them) it is as recurrent a springtime theme as the "first robin." Speaking of blouses reminds us of a fad which is going the rounds. It is the blouse made of vivid bandana kerchiefs.

The girlish suit of quality-kind grayish green flannel in the picture is one of those refined types which are making widespread appeal this season. Its outstanding claim to high fashion is the fact that it is a raglan type and utmost emphasis is being placed on these loose unbelted effects.

As to coats there is a lot being said and done in regard to furless types for spring. These gain distinction through artful fabric manipulation which achieves shapely lines through ingenious seamings and queer little turns and quirks of the cloth which result in unusual necklines, likewise clever shoulder and sleeve silhouettes.

While the two coats illustrated give the impression of extreme simplicity, in the final analysis they are ever so revealing as to actual style trends. The thing to observe about the coat to the left is its clever collar and scarf combination. This is in keeping with the idea prevailing among designers that if a coat be fura cry of need. All who less there really ought to sort of scarf treatment in evidence.

Poorhouse Author Misbehaving A Big Man's Family 6. Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE HAVE received an unusual letter from a man I do not know, and who lives in a distant state. He says: You once wrote that a book entitled The Autobiography of a Failure might meet public favor. I enclose an attempt at such writing, and, as a preliminary, tell you my qualifications. spent ten years in an insane asylum, but was never discharged as cured. At present I am in a poorhouse, and half blind, in addition to being somewhat palsied and rheumatic. I am sixty-four years old, and have never married. My manuscript was typed by anc er inmate of the poorhouse where I live."

Probably no editor would consider this writing for publication, as it is carelessly written and arranged, but 1 believe any of them would read it, as I did. Curiously enough, this author is conservative, and quotes with approval some of the most noted writers of history who have denounced radicalism. He grumbles at the rich a good deal, but admits the ordinary facts of life with considerable intelligence.

Altogether, I do not believe this man is insane, or ever has been; he displays, indeed, more than average sense in his thinking. I think his trouble is fallure to properly manage his mind and his body, which is the fault of millions of other unfortunates. I have not been more interested in a writer in many years. At times he is almost brilliant in his observations; nowhere is he vulgar or foolish, but frequently commonplace, as all are outside or inside of poor houses or insane asylums.

In the unexpurgated edition of the Memoirs is printed a letter Silerius once wrote. Apparently the correspondent had written that he was handicapped in life because of his having been divorced, of his drinking a good deal, and being known as an atheist. In his reply Silerius said: 'I have been divorced twice, but, long after I am as well thought of by my neighbors as either of the women I divorced; and both are good women. I am an atheist, but neither has that injured me. I have experimented freely with liquor, and solved the problem by quitting both drinking and talking about the subject. I do not believe you state your real problem in writing to me. Mine has always been to better manage my own mind and body, and thus gain the respect of those with whom I associate in small and great things."

There is argument as to whether my preaching is sound. I wish it to be, and to say I am occasionally commended. A man thirty-five years old recently wrote me: "I have liked your articles for some years, but the finest, most beneficial sermon that ever reached me (and my father was a clergyman) was printed lately. You said: 'The ambition to behave, sound ly based on the selfish (not noble) knowledge that it is finally the best and easiest way, will supply all the human service a human can hope for

I think I now understand what you have tried so well to make plain, to-wit: that actually it is a stubborn fact, counting the after costs in conscience, disrupted plans, shocked nerves, time lost forever, and injury to others, good behavior is easier than mishehavior. I thank you, sir. for help in my weak endeavor to become a better man."

A noted Big Man lately appeared at an airport with his wife, a son of fourteen and a daughter of seventeen. The Big Man was rushing from one important duty to another, and chafing at the delay of forty minutes, when a reporter found him. The Big Man loved publicity, and talked freely. He had enormous ideas, very much better than professional writers put into books and magazines. But members of his family were tired of his talk. "Start fanning," said the impudent boy; "dad's turned on the hot air." The wife and daughter, expressed almost equal impudence and disapprov al of the Big Man's talk. . . I re call that, when a child, we were all very tired of my father's talk, we heard it so much, and it was always the same. But we were poor people; I had supposed that Big Men talk so wisely that members of their own families listen with awe and interest. It seems they do not.

We are commanded to love all alike, including our enemies, but I often sin, and confess I have favorites. Some people annoy me so much and unnecessarily I cannot love them; a few others treat me well, and I specially like them. . . And I think I'm right about it; I do not believe the command that I love my enemies as well as my friends had any great authority back of it.

Every morning I feel fine and energetic and determined to do a lot that day on the Great Book I am engaged in writing.... But after looking over the mail, scribbling a few things of no importance, and attending to the usual complications that arise in a life be tween seven and ten o'clock of a usual morning, I am worn out, and put it off agam until tomorrow.

I hate to be imposed on, and there is no use trying to argue me out of it. should have a nobler disposition, but killed in operations connected with the carrying of the air mail have supplied the Republicans with ammu nition for attacking the administration that they are not neglecting. President Roosevelt himself is distressed by the casualties, and it is believed his supporters will hasten to offer in congress a bill giving the air mail contracts back to private companies. Postmaster J. A. Farley Géneral Farley has had to shoulder the greater share of the blame, if blame there is, and though he has steadily defended the cancellation of the contracts, he probably would be glad to see the army air corps relieved of its new task. There is no question as to the courage and ability of the army flyers, but it is evident they have not had the peculiar training to fit them for carrying the mails, and their airplanes are not suitable for the work. Of course, the weather has been against them, but little attention is paid to that fact by those who are making political capital out of the deaths of the five.

Mr. Farley, appearing before the sen ate committee investigating air mail affairs, declared that no one deplored the fatalities more than he, but that the Post Office department had felt it must cancel the contracts and had acted on the basis of the law and the conditions under which it found the contracts had been made. He assured the committee that as rapidly as possible the department would work out a new policy in the public interest with respect to the air mail and would take into account the interests of the oper

The postmaster general had been summoned especially to confront his predecessor. Walter F. Brown, and to consent to Mr. Brown's repeating a remark he said Mr. Farley had made to him about Senator Hugo L. Black, chairman of the committee. This was: "He's just a publicity hound. But don't tell anybody I said so, becaus I've got to get along with him.'

Mr. Farley immediately denied that he had said any such thing, and, scarlet faced, he departed for York amid roars of laughter. His denial was necessary, doubtless, but it didn't seem to impress anyone.

Speaker Rainey says the army air corps is inefficient and poorly trained, and for this he blames the three previous Republican administrations. He indicated he would support a resolution already approved by the house rules committee calling for investiga tion of War department methods. Mai. Gen. Ben Foulois, chief of the Army Air corps, defended his men warmly.

I OW the President proposes to carvealed at a press conference. In addition to continuation of the CWA in cities, relief of distressed families in rural regions is to be placed on a new basis, and the government is to undertake the transportation of entire communities from non-operating coal mine localities and similar centers of unemployment to the subsistence homestead colonies which are being created with $25,000,000 of public

In rural regions families in distress are to be helped to raise enough food for subsistence and to get part time employment in industries and on road building and other public works.

Communities of miners out of work because of the closing down of coal mines, the President calls "stranded populations." They were left stranded when work gave out and there is no prospect of a resumption of mine operations. In most cases the mines have been exhausted. The President said the undertaking would be to move an appreciable number of such families to localities where they can maintain themselves on small tracts of land with incidental industrial employment, which is the subsistence home stead idea now being tried out at Reedsville, W. Va.

Concerning that Reedsville plant, a pet of Mrs. Roosevelt's, it is interest ing to read that the house refused by a margin of 165 votes to approve the construction and operation there of a factory to make post office furniture. The project was denounced as " plunge into state socialism."

DRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in a speclal message asked congress to create a new federal commission to regulate the wire, cable and radio communications systems. He proposed that the new commission take over the duties of the federal radio commission and the functions of the Interstate Commerce commission which deal with telegraph and telephone regulation,

Mr. Roosevelt said the new body should be given "full power to investigate and study the business of exist ing companies and make recommenda tions to the congress for additional legislation at the next session This means that if the President's desires are carried out, as they undoubtedly will be, the question of com-

DEATHS of five army aviators | munications mergers will go over for determination next year.

Senator Schall of Minnesota, Repub lican, was aroused to strong protest against the proposed commission, asserting that it meant the newspapers would be subjected to censorship by the administration and that "not one word of the skullduggery committed in Washington could reach the people of the United States.'

THERE are signs indicating that the administration is going to modify its stand and that of its predecessors concerning the war debts. Some Republicans in the senate tried to put through a resolution offered by Robinson of Indiana asking the President, if not incompatible with public interest, to inform the senate by what agreements he had accepted token payments from Great Britain, Italy and Czechoslovakia and had recognized them as not in default. It also asked what steps, if any, have been taken to induce defaulting nations to pay; whether any understandings have been reached concerning revision; and whether any assurances have been given linking debt payments with tariff concessions.

The Democratic leadership in the senate succeeded in having the resolution sidetracked into the foreign relations committee. Senator Robinson of Arkansas made a speech openly referring to the necessity for some further concessions on the part of the United States if any further payments are to be obtained, but he denied *hat negotiations looking to revision had taken place yet.

The vote on the motion to commit the resolution showed there has been a considerable change from the opinion held in the senate in December. 1931, when the Hoover moratorium resolution was passed successfully only after it had been amended to include a reservation refterating congress' unalterable opposition to revision or cancellation of the debts.

THREE export-import banks are to be set up to help American exporters to finance shipments abroad, and George N. Peek announced, after a White House conference, that he would be the head of these institutions. The banks will all be owned by the government. One will deal with Russian business, one with Cuban, and the third with credits for all other foreign countries.

THERE'S a new emperor in the world and a new dynasty has been founded. By direction of Japan, Henry Pu-yi, who in his infancy was the "boy emperor" of China and who has been the chief executive of Manchukuo, has been enthroned as emperor of that puppet state. The young man-he is twenty-eight — as sumed the name of Kang Teh, which being interpreted is "tranquillity and virtue." He probably is Emperor virtuous, but the Kang Teh tranquillity is problematical in view of the way Japan and Russia are snarling at each other, for if those nations go to war the scene of the conflict will be the newly established empire which used to be Manchuria. Great preparations were made for the coronation ceremony, but Henry's Japanese sponsors were so apprehensive of attempts on his life that the public was not admitted to the rites in Hsinking, the capital. The emperor rode the five miles from the palace to the "altar of heaven" in an American bullet-proof automobile and the route was protected by barbed wire stockades and lined with thousands of troops. SECRETARY OF WAR DERN, probably following the ideas of General MacArthur, chief of staff, told the military affairs committee of the house that he was decidedly opposed to con-gressional plans for an independent and greatly enlarged air corps. He was arguing against two bills introduced by the committee providing for the purchase of 4,384 military airplanes and for the separation of the army air corps from the jurisdiction of the general staff, and the granting to officers and enlisted men of the air corps special compensation and rank. . Mr. Dern held that the air corps was only a co-ordinate part of the army, that its flying officers and men were not heroes of glory any more than the infantry and the artillery, that the whole army organization must proceed in balance and that the air corps has had more than its rightful share of progress in recent years.

ONCE more the tariff comes up as a leading issue, for the President has sent to congress a request for nev powers permitting him to fix the tariff within wide limits. The legislation he asks is designed to expand trade and would give the Chief Executive authority to shift the tariff up or down by as much as 50 per cent so that reciprocal tariff treaties with other nations may be negotiated. Furthermore these treaties would not have to be confirmed by the senate, and the tariff commission would not be consulted The new authority would be limited to three years and no article could be placed on the free list or removed from it. It was predicted that many Republicans and some Democrats would oppose the scheme, but that it would get through congress after long NDER the management of Gen Hugh Johnson, the NRA opened a series of public hearings in Washingganizations that wanted to present suggestions or complaints concerning policies or administration of the NRA codes. The possible benefits from such hearings appeared to be lessened by the restrictions decreed by General Johnson. He ruled that all speakers should be considered as "witnesses" that only facts might be presented and that no argument would be permitted.

General Johnson opened the proceedings by admitting NRA had many faults that he hoped would be corrected. Then came the flood of complaints, starting with those of small business men who assert the codes have operated against them and in favor of the large concerns. Mrs. Pinchot, wife of the governor of Pennsylvania, unexpectedly appeared and declared the government had been defeated by the "steel trust," and she was supported by Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, Mrs. Pinchot said that in the cases of the big steel companies the workers had been betrayed by the NRA, and she made a bitter personal attack on General Johnson Next day the cause of labor was brought more prominently to the front by Mr. McGrady and others who declared employers had been evading the code provisions at the expense of their

At first only two men were arrested, for making seditious speeches. They were Tom Mann, veteran Communist, and Harry Pillitt, of the same ilk. An icy rain helped the authorities to preserve order during the great mass meetings in the park, but serious trouble was anticipated late in the week.

The demonstrators wanted to call on Prime Minister MacDonald, but he refused to receive them, explaining that the house of commons was handling the unemployment situation. The marchers were protesting against the condition of the unemployed generally and also against certain features of the bill before parliament. Their orators attacked members of the royal family but were careful not to mention the king. They sang the "internationale" and were dominated by the Communists.

NRA and the Ford Motor company are tangling up in another fight The company was charged by workers with having refused to bargain collec-

National Topics Interpreted

Agriculture has laid down another barrage of accusations Picking on against a group of the Packers large meat packing concerns, but the fight thus started promises to transcend the charge of crookedness on the part of ten corporations cited. From the undercurrent of information around Washington, one can readily believe that questions of policy may become the focal point of the current controversy. While the packers may fold up their tents, admit some of the charges and not fight back any further, the situation is fraught with possibilities of politics that lead directly to an attack on Roosevelt administration New Deal policies. Fundamental ly, these questions involve determination of how far the people want their national government to manage business affairs.

CHAPTER IX

---15---They were in a large room with twin beds. Rocky turned on a light over a dressing table.

"Now, Rocky. Don't you see I've got to be told everything now?" "In the morning."

"No. Now, Am I what's-her-name -a girl who shot her husband at a wedding?"

The words were out. Had she killed someone? And was that the reason Rocky wanted to get her away from places, because if she were caught she would be hanged, electrocuted?

She sat down in a chair and stared at him. Had she cut off the life of someone—killed her own husband? "Oh G-d," she begged silently, "say it isn't true. I couldn't have done that!"

As Rocky still did not answer she rose and threw open the window. She inhaled deeply. She could breathebut someone else couldn't because she had-"Rocky, don't you see I've got to know now, or else go crazy?"

Rocky came and stood beside her Don't feel so, Doris. You're tired. If you get a good night's sleep, I'llwell maybe I will tell you about it in the morning.'

She turned up a suffering face. "T von't sleep, Rocky. I've got to know now. Tell me the truth. Truly, I can bear it now.'

Rocky avoided her eyes. "There's eally not much to tell." "Anything is better than this uncertainty." "Perhaps that's true." Rocky gently removed her hand from his arm. He ran his brown fingers through his hair. "Can't von trust me Sweet?"

Sweet! For a moment she felt a lifting of spirits. Rocky's tone was so tender. But then he used words like that all the time to all women. She gave a little laugh that she could think of that now. It was a bitter sardonic little laugh.

"You can't shut me out from my past forever. Besides—" she sat down on the bed. "I'm not a coward." She was silent. Rocky sat down beside her, took her hand.

"Please wait-" "No, no." She got up. "I-I can't wait. I have a right to know... Pll— I'll ask Mr. St. Gardens what it's all about. I'll tell him everything I remember. He will tell me. He won't keen me in agony any longer. I can't bear this uncertainty. Anything is better." She controlled herself, looked at him gravely. "Did I-Rocky? Did I dothat awful thing?"

Rocky looked at the carpet miserably. "D-n it, how do I know? I can only guess-like everybody else. "Then it isn't a sure thing?"

"Oh, they think it's sure, all right." His lips drooped unhappily.

"I couldn't kill anybody." "I know you couldn't." He patted her head, against his knee. "I've always known that about you." "Then why-" she turned suddenly to him "Why is there such a mysterious silence about me? Why were we arrested? Why have we been racing like mad away from New York?" She stared at his quiet face for a terrified second. "I know! I'll ask the police. I'll go to the station! I must find out." "Wait-don't you see, Doris? I'm only trying to help you." She stared into his eyes then. Her hand dropped suddenly to her lap. "I did, then. I did kill someone." Rocky's silence was terrible to her. She drew close to him. "I didn't, Rocky. I didn't. Tell. me I didn't. Why, I couldn't have killed anybody, Rocky. I know that much about myself, don't I?" She looked at him it tightly. After a while he said huskily. "That's the way I feel, Doris. That you couldn't have." "Please tell me how it happened." Still Rocky paused. At last, his cheek close to hers, he said slowly. "It's-been in all the papers. It happened the day I sailed. So I didn't see much about it until I got back. Then-of course your picture has been everywhere—"

"My picture." He nedded. "It's you, all right. I didn't see it until that night you fainted when you saw it. But-you didn't remember when you came to, again—" She brushed her hair back from her damp brow. "But Rocky, what didwhat am I supposed to have done?

Rocky cleared his throat and tried to speak in a matter-of-fact way. "Why, this girl is supposed to have shot her husband with her father's gun and then-" She could not speak. She had shrunk away from him, covered her face with her hands.

"Then she disappeared;" went on Rocky. He leaned over and tried to take her hands. "Must I go on?"

Rocky, and I was afraid of him, but you remember, don't you, how I left him? I didn't shoot him." Rocky's hand pressed nervously over his hot brow. "I think you-perhaps

"How did you know? I mean how have you learned anything about me?" "I-I thought you guessed. The pa pers have been full of it." "What do they say?"

Rocky looked away, as if he were detaching the subject from her. "Why, they say this girl is supposed to have killed her husband on her wedding night," he said again.

"Oh!" She clung to his eyes for sympathy. "Oh! And you think I did that?" Rocky took her hands pityingly, but she drew away. "Doris, I didn't—but your photograph—" "Why did you want to take me to Canada?" "Why did I want to take you? I am taking you. The first thing tomorrow. If I can get you to Quebec I can get you on a boat and—well, I think you'll be safe enough in Paris." But Rocky— He looked at her inquiringly. She wanted to ask, "But why are you doing this for me-" Something in his eyes made her unwilling. She said police. You have been formally indicted for murder in the first degree. You'd even be denied bail. You—I'm afraid you'd collapse completely."

"I won't go to pieces again." She eaned her head on her arms confi-"Now that I know what I have to fight-well-I'm going to fight it. Do you really think I'd deliberate ly let you in for a thing like this-?" Rocky whirled and looked squarely at Doris. His lean features twisted bitterly. "Give yourself up, then. I'll go with you to the police the first thing in the morning. But don't forget this. You speak about implicating me. I'm already implicated. More than that, St. Gardens is implicated. I don't say we can't get him out of it, but it will be a nice thing to have happen to him just as his only daughter is about to be married. Beatrice is marrying the son of a governor-Rhode Island or Delaware some little state, but they're getting plenty of publicity—it's one of the biggest weddings of the year. A little murder publicity-"

Doris cried out, "Oh I won't spoil her wedding. I'll go away—I won't do it-" Her voice stopped in the middle of the sentence. She was thinking that she would have to slip away from Rocky, too. A shiver ran up her spine. She knew then that most of her new-found courage sprang from Rocky's friendship. When she left him, what would become of her-police—prison—death?

Rocky grasped her elbow. He had read her thoughts. "You mustn't try to run away from me. Whatever happens you'll stick with me. Promise?' "I can't promise that." She looked up at him. His eyes were full of tragedy. "But don't look like that, I'm afraid I haven't the courage to run away from you." Relief flooded his face. He smiled. "Then listen, Mrs. Conscientious. I've got an idea. I know you're right in everything you say. You ought not to run. You ought to fight. Here's another idea. Supposing that you stay here quietly for a few days. I could leave you with Beatrice. Then I'll go back to Morristown. New Jersey, and

GOLDEN RULE IN PLACE OF REIGN OF SELFISHNESS

Recently we heard a learned publicist discoursing eloquently on the joys of human service. He pictured the great satisfaction he had himself experienced in doing things for others. In fact he was so pleased with the idea that he urged everybody to imitate bis example.

Here was a good man who thought had discovered something new. He was as tickled with his discovery as a boy with a new pair of skates. He was almost as proud as if he had found the secret of perpetual motion. Evidently he didn't realize that all he had done was to rediscover the Golden Rule. Very likely he didn't know that Jesus had laid down this rule as one of the foundation principles of Christianity, and that Socrates and many other great moral leaders in different ages had preached the same

This man has probably never lived in the country or in a small town, where people all know their neighbors and where they have to be mutually helpful. He has probably always lived in cities, where the people are so self-satisfied that they will have nothing to do with their next door neighbors. Suddenly the realization has come to this man that a life of smug isolation and personal seclusion and selfishness is wrong, and that human beings should think more about their brothers. To this man this feeling has come as a new revelation, and he is so enthusiastic about his discovery that he thinks he has found the universal key to peace and happiness. This is splendid. The more leaders there are who get up and preach such doctrines the better things are going to be. The world needs new enthusiasms like that. It was just such a sudden revelation as that which made the apostle Paul turn from business and go to preaching and making converts. It is a great gain when we behold our public men urging people to hold out a helping hand to their fellow beings, without stopping too much to count the cost. Even if they imagine they have discovered something new, we do not need to quarrel with them. They should be encouraged and upheld in every way.—Pathfinder Magazine.

—use a liquid laxative

Can constinution be safely relieved? "Yes!" say medical men.
"Yes!" declare thousands who have followed their advice and constinution with salts, pills and consupation with saits, phils and tablets, or any habit-forming cathartic. But you can safely relieve this condition just by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

Why Hospitals use a liquid laxative

The dose of a liquid laxative can he measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit your individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Nor will it irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid lexative will bring a perfect movement, with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The unwise use of strong cathartics may often do more harm than good.

In buying any laxative, read the label. If it contains a doubt-ful drug, don't take it. If you don't know what is in it, don't chance it. The contents of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is stated plainly on the label; fresh herbs, pure pepsin, active senna. Its very taste tells you Syrup ful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. Drug, stores have it, ready for use, in big bottles.

THE TEST:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels," but strong cathartics! First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used.

woods. "A car is coming." "I expect it's Beatrice coming home from her party. It's so late. Doris. You ought to get some sleep."

"What's my real name?" "Diane, But I'd rather not call you that?'/ Is it so absolutely sure that I did this? Do you suppose losing my memory has transformed me into an entirely different sort of person?" "I don't know what to think. I think you ought to get some sleep." "If I married this man-I must have loved him, mustn't I?"

Rocky nodded gloomily. "I sup-"Say I didn't," argued Doris. "Say I hated him. Even so-I hated the man in the cab. But I didn't want to hurt him. I wouldn't kill him if he walked into the room right now." She shivered slightly. "I don't know. It seems odd to me. I feel certain I couldn't kill anybody." "It isn't that I don't believe in you, Doris. I believe in you beyond all sense. The thing that worries me is Doris raised her face. "But Rocky, what you would have to go through-don't you remember I was with my once you were in the hands of the

to talk to her, too." "All right." Rocky opened the door. 'Wait. I'll bring her back up here." When Rocky had gone. Doris turned out the light and sat down by the windows. In spite of all that he had said she knew that there was only one thing for her to do. She must not repay his great friendship by involving him in her trouble. The time must come when she would go on alone.

"But not tonight," she whispered. "Perhaps it's awfully cowardly. But not tonight." What was Beatrice saying in answer to Rocky's disturbing story? Would she think Rocky was crazy to have done so much for a criminal and a murderess? At the thought of Rocky the dark outlines of the room dissolved. A host of magic particles illuminated the blackness, assaulted her senses. She lost herself in a dream. She heard Rocky at the door, and sprang up. She turned on the light as he came in with Beatrice St. Gardens. Beatrice stared fixedly at Doris for short moment. Then she turned her head and looked at Rocky. "This child! You mean-she's Diane Merrell?"

Rocky nodded. Beatrice smiled. "Nonsense!" she said vigorously.

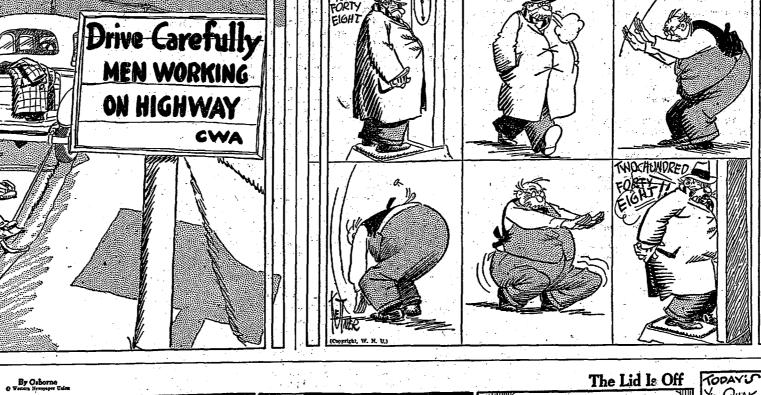

"You think she isn't?" "Of course she isn't. She never murdered anybody. Any person of sense can see that." She held out her hand to Doris cordially. "Forgive me for talking about you as if you were deaf, dumb and blind-but it's all se extraordinary. Anyway, I'm gla.

THE YEAR

Is Going to be Just About What We Make It.

It will take a lot of work to get this old world back to normal. Everybody will have to put their shoulder to the wheel and push. Our country is in debt billions of dollars, and the foreign nations who owe us are not meeting their obligations. Hundreds of farmers are quitting the soil and working on Federal aid projects. A re-adjustment will have to take place.

The Davie Record

Is going to do everything in its power to bring prosperity back. We are all in debt---states, counties, cities, towns, corporations and individuals. We are going to spend every penny we make in paying our debts, purchasing our supplies in this section when ever possible, and teaching other folks to do like wise. We will not keep any money out of circulation during the year 1934. Our creditors wouldn't let us even if we wanted to do so. The money we take in comes from our advertisers, our subscribers, and from those who patronize our job printing department. This paper is owned and edited by a Davie county man who believes in his town and county and has been boosting them for the past 27 years. If we make any money it stays here to help build up the best county in the state. If you help us with your advertising, your subscription or your printing, you are helping to build up your town and county.

THE RECORD IS ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR.

Caution Always Best.

The Gastonia Gazette gives good advice in an editorial calling atten tion to the fact that one of the queerest things about automobile traffic is that whenever there is a spell of nasty winter weater, which coats the streets with ice and makes most certain to find the accident rate dropping abruptly.

One good sized city gave a grap hic illustration of this last month.

Its police traffic department is day at Advance in the interest of undermanned, and it does not or dinarly keep its traffic situation very well under control. Since the visited relatives in and around start of the year, fatal automobile accidents has been occurring at the rate of about one a day.

A Mighty Truth.

The Concord Tribune is very much mused because forsooth Republicans are charging that President Roosevelt has assumed authority the American people never intended him to have and proceeds to ask if the American people want a return to Hoover and such an administration as he tried to give the people. This much can be said of Mr. Hoover underfoot. He never thought him-Attorney-General Brummitt took self a dictator. He never overturnnever at any time attempted to be the whole show and drive Congress debt in the history of the country, a debt that unborn children will have and Republicans, that is being given Roosevelt the country would not have been in the condition it is today and if he had been voted onethird the money that has been given Roosevelt there would have been no serious depression in this country, although the depression was in a measure world-wige. Now put that n your pipe and smoke it for awhile.

Has No Place In Republican Primary.

Governor Gifford Pinchot, will enter the Republican primaries in Pennsylvania as a candidate for the U.S. Senate against Senator David A Roed and offers as his platform support Roosevelt" If this is Pinchot's idea of party regularity he should not be allowed to participate in the Republican primaries in Pennsylvania. If he is so wedded to the "support Roosevelt" fallacy then let him enter the Democratic primaries. The same situation exists in California where Hiram Johnson has received the blessing of President Roosevelt and the Democrats will not put a candidate in the field against him Johnson's trritorous philosophies of this army of Americanduct in 1916 led to the defeat of can citizens who are eating at the Charles E Hughes for President and the election of Woodrow Wilson and "The big question is now not so in 1932 he again, like the viper, bit much what it is costing or how much the party that had befriended him. and refused to support Hoover for re-election and voted and worked for Franklin -D. Roosevelt. We trust there are enough stalwart Republicans in California to encompass the defeat of Johnson at the election

> The same state of affairs exists in Wisconsin where the LaFollettes hold dominion. In 1932, Phil LaFollette was defeated for re-nomination for Governor and Senator Blaine was also knocked out in the Republican primary for re-nomination. LaFo!lette and Blaine both refused to support their victorious opponents although they had taken an oath to abide the result of the primaries yet both basely deserted their party and voted and worked for the Democracratic candidate and for the first time in a long period of history Wisconsin has a Democratic Governor Folette, also comes up for re-election this year and like the rest of his traitorous friends in the Badger State is asking the Republicans to return him to Washington although he bolted the ticket in 1932 and voted for Roosevelt against Hoover. The Republican party cannot afford to keep such men as LaFollette. Johnson, Pinchot, Brookhart and others of that type in their ranks and the sooner they are repudiated the better it will be for the party.

By ED HOWE TALKED lately to a cautious, conservative man who had just made an automobile trip to Florida. He an automorphism at one place a new perfect pad was encountered, 74 miles long. in traveling the entire distance, not a half dozen other automobiles were a nan divided Probably the bonds isencounter to build the road are in default. The cautions, conservative man sat beside the driver, and says that except at turns, the entire distance was made at the rate of a mile a minute; that and this speed seemed a little slow. They had picked out a certain town to reach by nightfall, and since there was nothing to hold them, why not get along? The conservative, cautious, radually grow in recklessness. on the trip a call was made on a man in Georgia who lives in a palace of nink marble costing a million dollars. He owns nearly all of a county. a town, and a marble quarry. Such a man would seem lucky. This man wasn't; three days later he was hurried to a hospital, for a dangerous operation. The "lucky" man was seventy-nine years old. At another place a call was made on a man twenty-five years old who had three thousand turkeys gobbling about his

For several days the conservative, cautious man did not see a newspaper, or hear a radio, and almost no conversation. The country through which he passed was so fine. and the people so polite, he almost had hope for his country again. No starvation, no rioting anywhere; but on reaching the end of his journey. the newspapers were again available: and again the conservative, cautious man was greatly disturbed, fearful of the future. almost without hope.

One of the troubles with civilization

is it doesn't have enough private watchmen to aid the police. I have noticed that most of the more important business men employ private watchmen at night, and these watchmen carry pistols. We have adopted all necessary laws to help civilization. thus recognizing the truth that such laws are just and sensible, and for the greatest good of the greatest number. But worthy citizens, good enough, and in the majority, are too careless in seeing that the laws are enforced. Every good citizen should daily he a private watchman, and assist in correcting the ill-behaved in the minority. If necessary to establish their authority and the law of God, the good citizens should form vigilance committees, and be rough on occasion. I go so far as to believe the younger men should form militia companies, and without expense to the state or anyone become a force for the common sense morality that has lately been breaking down. The first thing we must do in the present crisis, if we hope for hetterment, is for the wellbehaved majority to control the commention for who violate the law as vagrants, disturbers, house-breakers. tramps, radicals, flop-house patrons. and in general attacks on the civilized rules of conduct. A great fight has been going on over the world for a long time, and with growing intensity during the past decade. Friends of decency should realize that the proletarians have achieved the victory and wipe out the disgraceful defeat they have suffered. The North, the East the West, has suffered another Bull Run. We must have another Appomator; another win for the majority, and the peace long experience has recom-

THIS HOME FROCK PATTERN 1,625

Home frocks are no longer any thing like those worn a few years ago-the mode demands models that are attractive, as well as neat, practical and comfortable, and in which one may easily greet unexpected visitors. This model is simply divine! Notice that the yoke and sleeves are cut in one, handy pockets are present, and the waistline is adjustable to every type of figure. Ruffling and buttons make a dainty trim. So few parts to put together—they spell success to even the most inexperienced sewer! We know you'll use this pattern again and again!

Pattern 1,625 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and. 44. Size 16 takes 31/4 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

LAST SILK DRESS OF CONFEDERACY MADE WAR PRIZE

A recent acquisition of the Army Aeronautical museum at Wright field is a small portion of the gas bag of a balloon used by the Confederate army for observation purposes. This is a portion of a larger piece presented to the National museum in Washington by the son of Prof. Thaddeus S. C. Lowe, the latter having figured very prominently in the aerial activities of the Union army.

This piece of cloth is valuable not only as a reminder of the use of aircraft in the Civil war, but of the ingenuity displayed by a povertystricken army in providing equipment. General Longstreet, in "Our March Against Pope," relates an interesting bit of history in this connection as experienced by the opposing forces.

"It may be of interest," he wrote, "to relate an incident which illustrates the pinched condition of the Confederacy, even as early as 1862. The Federals had been using balloons to examine our positions, and we watched with envious eyes their beautiful observations as they floated high in the air well out of the range of our guns. While we were longing for the balloons our poverty denied us, a genius suggested that we gather together all the silk dresses in the Confederacy and make a balloon. It was done, and soon we had a grotesquely patterned ship of many and varied hues which was ready for use in the seven days' campaign. We had no gas except at Richmond, and it was the custom to inflate the balloon there tie it securely to an engine and run it down the York River railroad to any point at which we desired to set it up. "One day it was on down the James river when the tide went out and left the vessel and halloon high and dry on a bar. The Federals gathered it in and with it the last silk dress in the Confed eracy. This capture was the mean-

SMALL HOME NOW ADVOCATED TO END DEPRESSION

The very best thing to complete the rout of the depression would be a nationwide building program, adding 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 rooms to American homes by use of private capital. So said President Henry I. Harriman of the United States Chamber of Commerce at Buffalo a few days ago. Such a program, he insisted, would do for business what the automobile did a few years ago. And this would be no sudden spurt, for, in Mr. Harriman's opinion, it would take ten years to build merely the houses necessary for a minimum standard of decency and comfort. He estimates the total cost of construction alone at close to $40,000,000,000 And to that may be added more billions for furnishings.

A survey conducted by the National Association of Real Estate Boards in 273 cities reveals a shortage of single family houses in 27 per cent of the cities, and a shortage of apartment space in the smaller cities. The home shortage is more pronounced in the smaller cities and is especially noticeable in New England, the Pacific coast, and the West South Central section.

What this country needs, declared the Southern Lumberman, is not model apartments but small individual homes. And by small homes it does not mean houses costing around $9,000-for which there is, indeed, a market-but houses costing in the neighborhood of $3,000 or $4,000. For these there is a much greater de mand, and "the architects and builders and promoters seem to have for gotten that there ever was that kind of a house."

The Southern Lumberman thinks that if means could be found to finance such building it would open a very large untapped field of activity.—Literary Digest.

Whose Fault?

If a Child Won't Play with Others?

Parents who understand children know where to place the blame when a youngster mopes, keeps to himself, or is "ugly" toward others. Sluggishness ruins any disposition, and that's what is usually wrong. But it's just as wrong to dose that child with sickening cathartics. Until 15—or older—a child's bowels need but little aid—a very mild form of help. Stronger things often upset the stomach or weaken the bowel muscles. For the happy solution of this problem see what to do, in the next column:

Doris took her hand shakily. "You're awfully sweet," she said. Beatrice sat down. "Then let's talk quickly, because I can see you're tired to death. Rocky has told me everything. You know Rocky is just like my brother. We spent all of our vacations together as children, so I hope you won't mind his having told me. I don't think anyone else should know-

"Your father-" began Doris "No. I don't think so. I'm sure he'd approye, but if anything comes up, it's better if he doesn't know. I have a small sitting room with a porch of my own downstairs. You shall spend your time there. I have everything planned. You need see no one except Mary, a maid who's been with us a long time, and is practically blind besides. And Rocky shall go and see your people."

"But your wedding-" said Doris. "Yes; I'm afraid I shall be rather busy. I won't be able to see as much of you as I'd like. But it's not until Saturday. That's four days, and that's oceans of time for Rocky to get to New Jersey and back. He'll take the train. The bishop is arriving Saturday morning—so he'll be in time for the wedding rehearsal which is to be at eleven on the day of the wedding. And Friday night my bridesmaid is coming from Mount Kisco, and several friends of father's are coming-the Du Vals, of course, will be here," "Oh I don't think we ought to stay," said Doris. "But we'll get away long before the wedding."

"Qh no! You must stay for the wedding. Rocky shook his head gravely. "I will have to get Doris away before then. She'll be recognized." "That's true, isn't it? But surely you'll have everything cleared up by then." Doris said: "If I do stay, couldn't I write letters for you-or do something useful?" "That's an iden. I'll have about a million letters to write. You are an angel." She rose. "Now you must sleep. This is Wednesday night. Rocky will get a train in the morning and be with your family-if it is your family, which I doubt-by tomorrow night. He ought to be able to get back here by Friday, and you can leave then, if you feel you must."

She took Rocky firmly by the arm. "We must go now. And let the poor child sleep.'

"I don't know why you're all so considerate of me," said Doris, who was trembling on the verge of tears. "It's Rocky who needs rest, really. I've dozed in the car a lot, and he's been at the wheel since three o'clock this

"Yesterday morning," said Rocky. He stood for a minute looking down at Doris when Beatrice had left the room. "Good night. I probably won't see you again until I get back."

His curt tone startled Doris. He was biting his lips nervously. His jaw twisted unpleasantly.

"What's the matter?" said Doris in astonishment Rocky held out his hand. "Goodnight," he said in a businesslike tone. Doris bent her head. "Good-night." As the door closed behind him tears sprang to her eyes. He had been sonot exactly unfriendly-but so matter of fact. She hardly knew what she had expected him to do. But certainly she had not looked for this abrupt impersonal good-by.

She crept between the sheets forlornly.

The sun was streaming in her room when she woke. Beatrice was standing beside her with a loaded tray. "It's ten o'clock," smiled Beatrice and I thought you might be hungry." Doris sat up, opening and closing her eyes. They still smarted from the strain of her long drive. "Oh. You're nice to bring up this-but aren't you terribly busy?" "Busy calming the maids. You'd think each individual one was being married herself!" "Has Rocky gone?" "Yes, quite early—I have to run now.

But I brought you this." She gave Doris the morning paper. Doris read it as she drank her coffee. At first she didn't notice the story though it was on the front page. Then the name "Diane Merrell" caught her eyes. She set down her cup with a gasp. It was a double column heading on the front page of a New York morning paper. Some young reporter had done his best to make a humorous incident out of the stopping of Mrs. Rockwell Du Val on the road to Rockwell St. Garden's house. The story was sympathetic to Doris and Rocky. : Lacking a picture of young Mrs. Rocky Du Val, they had printed one of Oscar Du Val with the caption. "Son's wife taken in false arrest." Doris read it through twice. It would have been a good story-a good joke on the police—if only she had been Mrs. Rocky Du Val.

She finished her breakfast slowly. At the end of the story was a paragraph which said that Mrs. Du Val was the fourth wrong Diane Merrell to have been discovered.

"Why couldn't one of those girls have been Diane Merrell instead of me?" she thought as she got out of

She would ask Beatrice to get her some old newspapers. She would like to read about Diane Merrell. She was bathed and dressed when Beatrice came back. "I'm afraid I've been a long time, but there's such a lot to do." There was a busy little frown on her broad

"I wonder, Beatrice, if you could dig up some old newspapers for me to read--"

"Of course." They went downstairs together to Beatrice's pretty little room, done in flowered chintz. "This has been my own special place since I was sixteen," said Beatrice.

"I'm sure there are some newspapers in the basement. I'll send them up." A few minutes later, an elderly maid came in and put down a huge pile of old newspapers on the table.

Doris rose unsteadily. She felt a little faint as she put out her hands to touch them. Here lay her own story-or did it? Would she have the courage to read it? The first paper was recent, and yielded nothing. As she continued her search with a beating heart, she came upon great glaring headlines:

"Shoots Groom After Wedding. So ciety Girl Kills New Husband and Disappears. Note Found."

She read feverishly. She had been married at an afternoon wedding on May 19 to a man named Howard Valery. Immediately after the wedding reception, which had been at her father's home, she had gone out by a side door where her own motor was parked, loaded with her luggage. The groom had been with her. As they were about to step into the car she had shot him, and driven away.

As she read, a stronger and stronger feeling of antipathy for this girl Diane Merrell developed. Was it possible that she had ever been a girl capable of all this? She was a heartless, coldblooded criminal. For the note proved that the crime had been premeditated

She studied the note again. It had been found in the pocket of the poor boy whose body was discovered sprawled against a flowering lilac bush. It read: HOWARD:

This marriage can't go on—it cannot.
You must be crazy. I don't want to kill you.
Do something about it for heaven's

Could any girl have written such a note and forgotten it? Surely, surely if she were Diane Merrell, she would remember something now. But not a faint glimmer of recollection enlight-

Could it be that she had two sides to her nature, and that that other. darker side was hidden from her now, sleeping quietly? Some day it might wake again, and she would find herself a killer. She would be capable of shooting somebody she loved,-capable of shooting Rocky.

She was sick and frightened. She lay at full length on the gently swaying couch. Then she propped her head on her hands and took up another paper. Diane Merrell had driven herself to New York. Her ca parked on Forty-sixth street the day after the murder.

She saw a large picture of herself.

Yes, it looked very like her. There was no doubt about that. She went back to her reading. There was a description of the wedding. It brought back nothing at all. Doris tried not to think any more about Diane Merrell. Surely Rocky would discover something that would help her. He must be nearing Morristown by now.

She went to bed early. The next afternoon would bring Rocky back. That would have to settle her fate. Now she felt numb and exhausted. In spite of everything she slept.

CHAPTER X

Rocky did not come the next afternoon. Instead came a telegram saying that he was catching a train that night and would arrive Saturday morning.

That would be the day of the wedding. Doris had developed a streak of hopefulness. Rocky would have unraveled some clue, and would bring back the miraculous news that she was not Diane Merrell. Or he would have discovered that Howard Valery had not been killed, or that he had committed suicide. No, that would not do. The experts said that that was impossible. She remembered reading that. Besides, Diane had left a note. But how stupid she had been to put down on paper such an intention and then to carry it out, leaving note for the police to find. Of course she hadn't meant it for the Friday passed in a stew of speculation. She woke at dawn next morning with a heavy heart. After breakfast she waited on the little porch beside the sitting room for Rocky. Her feeling of uncertainty deepened. After all, if she was Diane Merrell what could Rocky do for her? Whatever happened, a long-life of loneliness stretched before her; that.

or death. "Mrs. Du Val sees no one." It was

The butler answered, 'I have told her that."

"The doctor's orders are that Mrs Du Val cannot see anyone." "I told her. But she won't listen." Doris started to her feet. Who could be wanting to see her? Was it Rocky? No, it was a woman. As she hesitated, she heard Beatrice come in to the sitting room. A new voice said loudly: "But I'm going to see her."

Where had she heard that voice before—a strong husky girl's voice? "Believe me," the voice went on, "you'd better not try to stop me if ou know what's good for you."

Doris peeked in. The girl was some one she had seen before—a brown eyed girl in a tailored suit of green linen. Doris had seen her before-but where?

"Plenty of good reasons-" "Whom did you wish to see?" Beatrice was speaking in a crisp impersonal tone. I want to see the girl calling herself Mrs. Rockwell Du Val." The gir eyed Beatrice, unimpressed by the lack cordiality in her manner. "Plenty of good reasons why she don't want to see me I know-"

"Then why do you try-?"

"Plenty more why she'd better." Doris recognized her. She was the girl she had seen at the clam standthe friend of the real Doris. Rocky had called her Molly.

The big brown eves looked full of de termination. She was looking Beatrice full in the face belligerently. "There's no use trying to high-har me. Are you Mrs. Du Val?" "No," said Beatrice quietly. "I thought you weren't. I have ar idea who she is. And I intend to go through every room in this house to The quiet vouthful voice of Beatrice was in marked contrast to Molly's insistent tores. "Won't you sit down and tell me what it is you want to see Mrs. Du Val about?"

"That's my business," said Molly sullenly. "Supposing you tell it to me."

"Like h-l I will." "Then I'm afraid you can't see her. Molly's tone held a jeer. "Oh yeah? Well, supposing I tell you I'm a friend Beatrice said nothing. "That gets you. doesn't it? Now perhaps you'll understand why I want to take a squint at the girl who is palming herself off as Doris Du Val." "I'm afraid I don't," said Beatrice quietly. "How did you find out about "Doris saw it in the papers. Mrs.

Du Val arrested. And that made her wonder, as the saying goes. She sent me a wire.". "You are here then as Mrs. Du Val's agent? Am I to understand that?"

Molly sat down and crossed her legs Yeah. That's about it." "Where is Mrs. Du Val?" "That's my business, too."

"Rocky said that Doris had left him. Do you know where she is?" "Supposing I do?" "Does Doris want to get Rocky to ome back to her?" Molly disdainfully inserted her tongue between opened lips and blew vigorously. "H-l, no," she remarked when she had finished the exercise. "I'm sorry. I don't quite under-stand." Molly, searching in the untidy depths of her very large hand-bag, brought out a paper package of cig-

"Gee, I've smoked my last one." She crumpled the bright green wrapper in her fist. "Have you got

Beatrice rose and handed her a silver box filled with the small white cylinders. Molly seemed cheered as she lit her cigarette, and much more favorably impressed with Beatrice. "Tell you now it is—this is just between you and of course-but Doris wants me to dicker with the girl financially-see?" Astonishment showed in Beatrice's hreathless "Dicker? Financially? Do you mean that Mrs. Du Val wants to get a divorce from Rocky?" "That's it. I knew you'd get it. I knew you'd get it." "But-I should think that would be a private matter for her to discuss with Rocky." Molly blew a smoke ring very carefully. This done, she looked at Beatrice pityingly. "You look like a girl who would think a thing like that." "I am awfully sorry. I'm afraid you'll think I'm a bit stupid. But what inancial transactions are you talking about?" "In a couple of words, baby: alimony." "Alimony !"

Doris could not stand any more She stepped out from behind the curtains. "I'd like to say a word or two." Beatrice rose. Her face was horrified. Molly's big brown eyes half closed in a veiled, critical stare. "I thought you'd turn out to be the girl. I wrote Doris about meeting you down among the clams. And was she pleased? She's been trying to get something like that on Rocky for months! The Du Vals have got plenty, and she'll take a big cash settlement.

she's willing to be big-" Doris was seething. She clenched her hands together and spoke with difficulty. "I have nothing to do with and that will be the end. You know-all this." "On now, what's the use of taking that attitude? Some girls wouldn't be generous like Doris. With what she's got on you now-she could get allmony for the rest of her life-see? But she won't-say listen, Girlie, you're in the movies, aren't you?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-

IC-What Think Ye of Christ? In order to obviate a break in the studies in Matthew and still have an Easter lesson, the review should be omitted and the lesson for April 1 taken instead. I. Jesus Christ the King, Taking Account of His Ministry (vv. 13-17). 1. The place (v. 13). It was at Cesarea Philippi, the northern limit of Jewish territory. It was significant that the announcement concerning the Church should take place in this region. 2. The time in Christ's ministry. It marked a turning point. His ministry was largely restricted to his disciples after this. The cross was a short time ahead. The Messiah had already been rejected. They had already charged him with being in league with the devil and sought to kill him. It was highly important that the disciples should have clear views as to Christ's person in order to stand the test of the trial and crucifixion of Jesus. 3. Peter's confession of Jesus (vv. 13-16).

a. The occasion (vv. 13-15). Two questions asked by Jesus provoked this confession. (1) As to the opinion of the people concerning him (vv. 13, 14). They recognized him as a teacher and prophet of more than human authority. Today, as then, there is a diversity of opinion concerning Jesus. Some think that he is only a man; others that he is a great teacher but nothing more. It was his persistent claim to be the Godman, the very Son of God, that sent him to the cross. (2) As to the personal opinion of the disciples (v. 15). It was no enough for them to be able to tell what opinion the people held concerning Jesus. It was necessary that they have clear personal knowledge.

b. The content (v. 16). It consisted of two parts. (1) "Thou art the Christ." This means that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah, the fulfiller of the Jewish hopes and expectations.

(2) "The Son of the living God." This acknowledged him to be divine. It was the recognition of his glorious person in keeping with the Jewish hope (Isa. 9:6. 7).

4. Christ's confession of Peter (vv. 17-19). Peter had made a noble confession. Now Jesus confesses him. Those who confess Christ shall be confessed by him (Matt. 10:32, 33).

5. Christ's charge to the disciples (v. 20). He asked them not to tell any man that he was the Messiah. The time was not ripe for such testi-

ii. The New Body, the Church, Announced (vv. 18, 19). Following the confession of Peter, Jesus declared his Intention of bringing into existence a new body. To the members of this body he promised to give the keys of the kingdom. Pe-in this body. The keys entrusted to him were used at Pentecost and again in the case of Cornellus. Christ has the keys of Hades and death.

ter was to have a distinguished place

III. The King Predicts His Death (vv. 21-23). This prediction was no doubt startling to the disciples. They did not yet realize that redemption was to be accomplished through the passion of the cross. So unwelcome was this announcement that Peter cried, "This shall not be unto Thee." Later Peter saw through the darkness the sunlight on the hill tops beyond the cross. Redemptive victory through Christ's death is yet the stumbling block to many. IV. The Cost of Discipleship (vv. 24-26).

To follow Christ means suffering.

To follow him is to turn one's back upon the world. 1. There must be denial of self. There is a wide difference between self-denial and denial of self.

2. "Take up his cross" (v. 24). This cross is the shame and suffering which lie in the path of loyalty to Christ. To do our whole duty will bring suffering (II Tim. 3:12). 3. Follow Christ (v. 24). This means to have the mind of Christ, to be like Christ. All such shall be rewarded when Christ comes in glory. Religion Gives Confidence confidence born of close touch with the center of all things. "I can do all things." says the Christian. "through Christ who strengthens me." is not this worth while?

Religion gives the religious soul the Army Air Mail Service Is Suspended, Safer Schedule Is Planned—Cummings Starts Criminal Action Against Mellon on Income Tax Evasion Charges.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

air mail operations by the army air corps were suspended by Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the sent out word: "The continuation of deaths in the army air corps must stop." He ordered that the carrying of air mail cease except "on such routes, under such weather conditions and under such equipment and personnel conditions as will insure, as far as the utmost care can provide, against constant recurrence of fatal accidents."

General Foulois, Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of air mail operations, and various Post Office department officials built a revised "safety" route with the trans-continental line from Newark to San Francisco as the main line, other routes feeding into it. The intention was to reduce the number of trips on all schedules and to permit less night flying.

Colonel Lindbergh aroused interest by visiting Washington for two days and conferring with Secretary of War Dern. Soon after the secretary named the colonel, Orville Wright and Clarence Chamberlain on a committee to investigate the army carrying of the General Foulois has been working on a plan by which army flyers could join with commercial pilots in receiving training. The step follows a suggestion by Mr. Roosevelt that "because military lessons have been taught us during the last few weeks," army aviators should train with those who "later on will fly the mail" in "night flying, blind flying and instrument flying."

Meanwhile committees of both house and senate were working out legislation along the lines of the President's request that the flying of the mails be returned to private companies under a new contract system.

The President's prompt action in the air mail matter, virtually admitting an error had been made, took some of the wind out of the sails of his opponents but did not entirely stop the attacks. Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronautic association and formerly Republican senator from Connecticut, demanded in a public state ment that Mr. Roosevelt tell who had misled him as to the fitness of the army air corps and its planes to carry the mails. Both General Foulois and General MacArthur, chief of staff, were quoted in interviews as saving the army was equal to the task, but learn, the President had not consulted either of them before ordering the air corps.to undertake the assignment.

CRIMINAL action for alleged evawas ordered by Attorney General Cummings to be brought immediately against Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury and one of the world's wealthiest men; T. L. Sidlow of Cleveland, law partner of Newton D. Baker; Thomas S. Lamont, son of the noted financier Thomas W. Lamont and a member of the J. P. Morgan banking house, and James J. Walker. former mayor of New York.

Andrew W. Mellor

Mr. Cummings announced that th Department of Justice had conducted secret investigation of the tax af fairs of these four men and had turned the information gathered over to United States attorneys in New York, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, Grand jury action in each of those cities was expected to result. Cases against more than a score of other men were being prepared by the department's tax divi

Mr. Mellon was quick to place his case before the people. In a long statement he denied ever having failed to pay his proper income taxes and said that in the last twenty years he had naid more than $20,000,000 in this form of rates. He characterized the attor ney general's action as "politics of the crudest sort." He continued:

"I feel very strongly that before the attorney general of the United States against me I, like any other citizen should be given proper notice in the manner provided by law of the government's intention to assess addition al taxes and should have been afforded an opportunity to meet such charges in the customary way.

"In all my years of experience in the administration of the tax laws I have never known of a single instance in which such unfair and arbitrary action has been taken."

Several times since last May, when

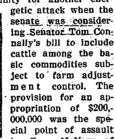

BY DIRECTION of the President, all | Congressman McFadden made charges against Mr. Mellon based on informa tion given by one Olson, regarding what was called a specific tax evasion. Mr. Mellon said, he has request ed Mr. Cummings to make a full investigation and received nothing bet ter than an evasive response. In conclusion Mr. Mellon said: "I am glad the issue is joined at last and am quite content to leave the outcome to the courts and to the good sense and fairness of the American people when all the facts are known."

> Two hundred and thirty-one Demo-cratic members of the house kicked over the traces and, with the aid of 59 Republicans, passed the Patman bill calling for the immediate payment of the veterans' bonus with greenbacks. The President has repeatedly expressed his opposition to the measure and indicated that he would veto it if it got through congress. Its passage by the senate was considered most doubtful.

There were only two reasonable explanations for the revolt of the Democrats. One was put in words by Representative John Y. Brown of Kentucky, a Democrat, who was in oppo sition. He said: "You are buying veterans' votes. You are holding out this piece of bait to get veterans' votes this summer. There is not a man in the house who believes this bill will ever become a law, and yet you sit here and vote for it for your own political welfare."

The other explanation was that many of the Democrats are resentful of the "rubber stamp" label that has been put on congress and welcomed an opportunity to break away from dictation and, as one of them said, vote as their consciences directed Fred Britten of Chicago, Republican, charged that the Democrats supported the measure with the secret under standing that they would not vote to over-ride the President's veto.

SENATOR SIMEON D. FESS of Ohio is one of the most voluble of the administration's critics, and he found opportunity for another ener by Fess, McNary of Senator Fess Oregon, Dickinson of Iowa, and Carey of Wyoming and Vandenberg of Michigan, all of whom agreed that the Agricultural adjustnent program has been a complete failure. The Democrats, with the excention of Connally, made no reply to the verbal barrage.

prices had fallen instead of risen that the prices of farm commodities not under the AAA had in many cases risen faster and higher than the so called basic commodities.

"That sort of thing is nauseating to any decent person who wants business to be done in a business way," he said alluding to the hog buying program "It's time to stop this foolish experi mentation, time to take the heavy hand of government off business and let business recover."

Senator Vandenberg and Senator McNary could not understand why $200,000,000 were required for cattle when only $100,000,000 were asked in the original bill covering six com-

HARRY PIERPONT, one of John PRICE FIXING BY Dillinger's gang, was convicted at Lima, Ohio, of the murder of Sheriff Jess Sarber in a jail raid in which Dillinger was set free by his comrades, and was sentenced to death in the electric chair. The commander of the Ohio National Guard took every precantion to prevent the rescue of Pier pont by his resourceful chief, for Dillinger was still at large, presumably in or near Chicago. At Crown Point, Ind., a special grand jury began investigating the easy escape of Dillinger, a special prosecutor having been named to conduct the inquiry. At present only two men, Deputy Sheriff Ernest Blunk and Turnkey Sam Cahoon, have been accused of aiding Dillinger in his jail break.

CHICAGO'S most sensational mur-der trial in recent years resulted in the conviction of the elderly Dr. Alice Wynekoop who was charged with killing her daughter-in-law, Rheta. presumably to get the insurance on her life. The jury fixed her penalty at 25 years in the penitentiary, which amounts to a life sentence. The first hearing of the case resulted in a mistrial because the defendant was to ill for its continuance.

Doctor Wynekoop, a member of a family of physicians, had practiced medicine in Chicago for many years and her crime astounded her numerous friends.

The position of the exchange is that the mere declaration by congress that "transactions in securities as commonly conducted upon securities exchanges are effected with a national public interest" does not make this so as a matter of law. Such transactions as "commonly conducted" are not transactions in interstate commerce, according to the lawyers for the exchange, and congress, they declare, "cannot by legislative fiat ascribe to them legal characteristics which they do not otherwise possess."

STATE IS UPHELD

New Deal Scores Again in Supreme Court.

Washington - The United States Supreme court, for the second time since the New Deal came into being, decided 5 to 4 in favor of a major principle of the Roosevelt program. A five dollar fine imposed upon as insignificant Rochester. N. Y., store keeper became, through the majority opinion of the court, a vital factor in the future determination of the constitutionality of such national policies as those of the agricultural adjustment administration and the NRA.

The decision upheld the right of the New York state milk control board to icense milk dealers and fix the prices they must charge their customers

As in the recent 5 to 4 decision in the Minnesota mortgage moratorium case, the court declared that the interest of the public was paramount to any private right. And as in that earlier case and others where the division has been over the so-called issue of "conservative" versus "liberal," the split in the court was the now well known one, setting Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justices Brandeis, Roberts, Stone, and Cardozo on the liberal side, and Assoociate Justices Van Devanter, Sutherland. McReynolds and Butler on the side of conservatism.

Justice Roberts delivered the maority opinion, so important to the Roosevelt economy of centralized planning and control, which held that government might regulate any business might prescribe rules for the conduct of any portion of that business including the setting of prices, so long as due process is observed, and the means taken are relevant and not discrim-

Justice McReynolds handed down the dissenting opinion with its warning that to abrogate the bill of rights under plea of every emergency is to destroy the Constitution at the very time it is most needed.

Dr. Sarah Dean Convicted of Killing Dr. Kennedy

Greenwood, Miss. - Convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment, Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean won her fight to remain free on her $10,000 indictment bond pending court action on a motion for a new trial.

The court granted 90 days for prep aration of arguments on the motion and tentatively set a further hearing for June 2 at Indianola, Miss. Doctor Dean's attorneys told the court she was ill, suffering from a chronic stomach ailment.

The verdict, representing a rejection of the woman physician's sworn testimony that she did not poison her admirer, Dr. John Preston Kennedy, with a whisky highball, came after 13 hours and 52 minutes of deliberation. The trial lasted five weeks.

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.-Topics of general disussion in Washington obviously range the whole category More Critics; of subjects that go More Noise to make up the "New Deal," but I have been impressed lately with the predominant place now held by two questions in the conversations one hears about the streets, offices, clubs and other places where men meet Largely to the exclusion of other matters, one hears people trying to figure out whether a turn has come in the Roosevelt political luck, as one topic and growing comment on the prevalent confusion within the administration as the other subject of comment. True, they constitute questions to which the final answer is not yet apparent, but the thought I am trying to advance is that possibly the New Deal is un-

Attention should be called again to the all-embracing control which President Roosevelt hitherto has exercised almost without effort. Anything he said, anything he did, or anything he proposed, was accepted. There were few critics, and those who did criticize cannot be described as highly vocal. Now, however, it is a fact that there are more critics and they are making noise that is not hushed. There are open opponents of the administration policies, not only in the Republican ranks where it is natural they would be found, but among the Democrats as well.

dergoing some sort of a transition aft-

As nearly as I can ascertain, the wave of criticism that has come forth into bloom is traceable to one of Mr Roosevelt's acts, directly. The confusion that has followed seems, at the same time, to have been given birth as a result of the unexpected criticism Or to state the proposition in another manner, the administration efforts to fend off the criticism are viewed by some observers as having formed the basis of the confusion. I can reporonly that which I can ascertain to be fact and, on appearance alone, it seems Mr. Roosevelt acted hastily on the air mail contract cancellation and his action unloosed an issue over which individuals can take sides. It is really the first time he has provided the opposition with a peg on which they can hang their hats.

While the official spokesmen of the administration say there is no connec tion between the back-fire resulting from the contract cancellation and the several moves made by the President since, in his far flung efforts to ge us out of the depression, I am told that these declarations are having no effect on those who want to criticize the Nev Deal schemes. The NRA revision program, the substitution of a new billion dollar program of a relief character for the CWA which Administrator Hopkins now concedes has been some thing of a flop, and the battles for legislation in congress, all are accepted as showing the desire of the President to accomplish a change in the attitude of the critics. It is axiomatic that if The first will be April 1, the second July 1 and the third October 1.

> But it has not succeeded vet Whether it will remains to be seen.

It is to be observed that, for the first time, criticism of the New Deal plans includes a sizable attack on the Hit at Expenditures vast expenditures being made. Mr. Roose velt has been spending money as fast. if not faster, than was spent during the World war, and many persons are now coming forward with the assertion that "spending our way out of the depression" may leave the government with such a debt that our children's children still will be paying on it. But right in the face of these attacks. Mr. toosevelt has brought forth the CWA substitute and a request that congress appropriate $950,000,000 to pay for it.

In the meantime and while the confusion has become worse confounded, it is to be noted that orders have gone from the Executive offices to the Democratic leaders in congress to get new air mail contract legislation through in a hurry. This legislation is predicated on the theory that private airlines shall carry the air mail. Further, there is every reason to believe now that the companies whose contracts were cancelled so hastily will be allowed to bid again for the jobs.

Postmaster General Farley maintains the President was acting in accordance with law when he ordered the mail contracts canceled. Mr Roosevelt has said so in several different languages. The fact remains, how ever, that it always has been the practice to accord an opportunity for a hearing, whether the charge be one of Charleston, S. C.-United States Dis- fraud or whether it be some other allegation. No hearing was granted the ty-eight, was found hanged to death in air mail contractors. Indeed, they were given less than two weeks of time before they were off of the job, For several months Judge Cochran and the army pilots were doing the work. According to the discussion in congress, it is quite evident there are many influential persons throughout the country who feel the contractors ger marchers" have left for their homes were not given a fair shake by the

They have come, accerated speaking, "from all over town," in the numerous agencies, administrator bureaus, departments and so forth m scattered that widely.

Here is an illustration of how then change: from the various sources & information which the administrates has set up, the correspondents were led to believe that the Civil Weth administration plan of relief was p ing along all hunky dory. Then me er suddenly, there came the tappenty which I predicted some months and namely, a lot of petty graft. Sat, Mr. Hopkins, the administrator, can a rather clean breast of the thing, say ing. in effect, that the CWA by flopped.

But few of the correspondents was prepared for the sudden announces from the President that a substitut plan had been evolved. The Presider had been planning to eliminate CW relief with the return of wards weather. Something had happen however, with which the correspets ents were not made acquainted. The was development of a conclusion its industry, despite the NRA and other New Deal plans, was not absorber, workers as rapidly as had been a pected. Hence, the President decide to continue the CWA program, but is different form.

It ought to be said here that indes try has not been entirely to blank Industry is recovering. Of that, then can be no doubt. But the progress to been just as slow as progress that takes place when a human being re covers from a long illness. Some the economists in the government have been frank enough to tell me that tief had been too optimistic: they were justified in their belief that recoref was under way, and it is happening but their guess had been wrong as the

From this outline, would appear that there had been great change in the method of dealing out relief, compared with the present system. As far as I can get facts of this new program, however, there is actually little difference. It may som to create a feeling of new progress and it may serve to get rid of some the appointees whose work has go been satisfactory, without causing p litical strife, but I believe the sought will be no different than the CWA plan.

Cigarette Tax Change Would Help

The Ways and Means Committee of he House of Representatives has tudied the proposal for several weeks end a special hearing will soon be iven by a sub-committee, of which Representative Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky is chairman.

Importance To Growers

It would be hard to over-estimate he importance of the 10-cent cigarette manufacturers to burley growers t was only about two years ago that few manufacturers started making 10-cent digarettes. Up to that time four big companies had 95 per cent of the cigarette business. During ter venrs manufacturers' profits had been going higher and higher and farmers' profits on tobacco had been falling lower and lower.

"It was in 1931 that the price of bur ley dropped from 15.59 cents to 8.63 cents. Cigarette consumption had been decreasing and the farmer was getting the worst of the deal. To make matters worse, there was no competition between the buyers on the tobacco market.

The next year the 10-cent cigarette came along. It was just what the poor man needed and cigarette consumption began to increase again.

"Buvers for these independen makers of low-price cigarettes pu some competition into the loose leaf market. Of course farmers aren't getting what they should for their tobacco now, but it is hard to tell what might have happened if the 10-cent cigarette hadn't been put on the mar-

As I understand it, the makers o this sort of cigarette, have been able to sell the cigarette at such a low price because they don't go in for extravagant, ballyhoo advertising, because they don't use so much expensive foreign tobacco as is used in the more expensive cigarettes and because they are satisfied with a modest profit.

Before the big manufacturers had to cut prices to meet competition of the ten-centers, it is estimated they were making 100 per cent gross profit on the cost of their products before

This is interesting," continued "I knew I'd seen you in the movies-in the news reel it was." Beatrice found her voice: "You're mistaken. "Am I really?" She turned to Beatrice. "What part will you play in the hig scene, young lady? Isn't there some law about concealing a criminal? I wouldn't be in your shoes for the world-Miss St. Gardens. I really wouldn't."

"I think you'd better go," said

"After I've telephoned the police, Boy, will this be a sensation! Am I lucky? I can see my picture in every paper in the country. Along with yours, of course." She inclined her bead to Doris mockingly. "I see it all now. Schoolgirls together. Rocky the big Galahad. Nobody would ever think of looking here for Diane Merrell! No wonder you didn't want to see me." Beatrice turned to Doris. "Rocky ought to be here soon, Perhaps h can talk some sense into her."

"I'm a woman of impulse,"; said Molly, "and I feel a strange whim rushing over me to call up the police." Beatrice closed her eyes. Then she said in a calm tone: "Let me show you the telephone."

Molly with a small sneer on her pretty mouth took a last look at Doris and followed Beatrice.

Beatrice opened a door. It led to s small clothes closet Refore Molly quite knew what was happening Bea trice had pushed her in.

She locked the door. "It will give you time to get away. Doris. My roadster ls right outside."

Doris clutched Beatrice by the hand. "All right. Only-I'm going to give myself up-in the nearest town." "No-don't. Wait. I'll give you some money. Drive toward Canada, and Rocky will overtake you at-atlet me see—at Burlington." "No. Beatrice. It's too late. And

"Tes. Please. You've done so much. I can't stand it. It would break my heart if you got in trouble.' Beatrice had found her purse. She gave it to Doris.

"The key to the car's inside."

Doris ran through the door on the screened porch, and out over the lawn to the side road. She slid into the seat, and inserted the key. The car started. Her hands were on the wheel. her feet at home on clutch and brake. She did not stop to think that she knew how to run a car. She drove. She came out on the highway and lesitated for the fraction of an instant to the right lay the town, St. Gardens' town—the place where Rocky was known. She must go the other way, then.

A car was coming from the town. It might be bringing Rocky from the train. She could not resist a fleeting glance. It was not Rocky's car-and he would be in his own car because he and driven it to the train. She drew a deep breath. Did she hope Rocky would come and save her? She must not allow herself to think that.

She turned away from the approachng car—a mud-spattered black sedan. She had not seen who was driving. If wasn't Rocky it didn't much matler. Now she was on the smooth cement, and finding that Beatrice's car could certainly go.

She was doing seventy, and the eedometer was slowly mounting. Perhaps she would be arrested for speeding. All the better. Then she would be able to tell the cop who errested her herself. She wouldn't even have to think about giving herself up. As she drove she caught sight of another car in the mirror. Was she being pursued after all? Her foot on the accelerator, she soon lost sight of the car behind. Now the signs of a town were appear ing at last. And here was the little hidden road she had hoped for. She turned sharply and began pumping over a dirt road toward a broad bend. Here she brought the car to a standstill and left it. If that sedan was really pursuing her, this ought to throw it off the track.

She climbed a fence, and found herself in a cemetery. A small breeze sighed gently, the odor of white phlox came from behind a white stone. It was time to find an officer of the law, time to give herself up.

She must do it. If she didn't, Molly would do it, and involve Beatrice and Rocky.

She had come out on the road by now, and was approaching three halfgrown men who were standing under a large elm tree and staring at her curiously. She stopped before the boys, "Can you tell me where I can find a policeman?" The boys looked harder than ever. Perhaps they had already guessed why she had come.

A dark eved stocky boy jerked his head sideways, "You want the constable. That's him." Under a nearby tree a tanky old man was stretched out with a policeman's cap tilted down over his face. "Hey, Vance, someone wants to see von!"

It seemed a long time before the tail skinny constable roused himself. As he got to his feet slowly Doris saw that he was a very old man with a stoop in his thin shoulders. He straightened his hat and blinked for a minute inquiringly. Doris hurried toward him.

"Wa-al now," said the old fellow amiably as she came near, "you want to see me about something?" The faded hazel of his eyes twinkled down at her kindly.

Doris looked at him, unable to speak

"You're the officer of the law in charge in this town?" "I guess you might call me that,"

drawled the old fellow slowly. "I'm-I'm-" It was hard to say who she was. It seemed so ridiculous- get into trouble." ly untrue-"I'm Diane Merreil. The

"Yes, I know. I-" "I'm going to ask you a few questions, and if you can prove to me that you're Diane Merrell, darned if I don't arrest you-" He grinned, showing brown stumps of teeth. "Yes, sirrather ma'am, I should say, darned if don't arrest you. Let's see. Now if you are Diane Merrell, you can tell me a few things about yourself, can't

"Why yes, I suppose so-but I shouldn't think-"

"Wa-al, first of all, what's your father's full name?" She racked her brains. Why hadn't she noticed that when she was reading the papers?

"Why-let's see. Charles-no, John

"Let's see? Where was it you went "Why I went to-look here, what is the use of all these questions? If I give myself up for murder, that ought to be enough, isn't it?" The constable swung himself back to his desk. "Wa-al next time you give yourself up you better get more information. Mr. Merrell's name is Samuel, and I remember you went to Vassar. Now you go on back to your mamma and your papa, I expect they're looking for you right now." Doris rose. She would have to go on to the next town, find a bigger place. There must be hundreds of policemen who were willing to arrest "Don't know as I ought to let you go. Somebody will be around lookin' hurry." "But--" "So you're the little girl that done the murder?"

"Yes." "You don't look so terrible fierce." "Please-this is hard for me. I-" She could not make out the old man's attitude. He was stooping over on the ground fumbling for something he had dropped. He found it at last and straightened. It was a pipe. Then he began a long search in his trousers pockets for a pouch full of tobacco. When you've been in this world as long as I have," he said slowly, "you'll learn it don't pay to get yourself excited." "But don't you understand-" "Why, you're all worked up. You come on into my office and we'll see if we can't straighten this thing out." Dazedly Doris was beginning to realize that the old man had not taken her seriously. Perhaps he had never heard of Diane Merrell. He turned and began walking very slowly toward a ramshackle store that was nearby. Doris followed him. There was no one in the gloomy interior of the dark store. At the back was a door with "Constable" marked in large black letters. It led into a small office where Doris followed the old man. He seated himself in a swivel chair very deliberately. "'Pout everybody's been in for their mail, so I guess we won't be interrupted," he said. "I'm afraid you can't have taken what I said very seriously, Constable," said Doris abruptly.

"Wa—al now, let's talk a little blaabout it. What makes you think you're Diane Merrell? You know there have been lots of girls found, don't you?" went on the constable. "Why now, if I was to arrest you and send you on up to the police in New Jersey you'd be about number ten on the list." He chuckled. "Don't know a girl should want to be in her shoes, though." Doris felt that she was wasting time. The office was a blurred jumble. How was she to convince him of her earnest. ness?

he could make up marched out.

As she made her way through the empty store she noticed the sign, "Western Union." She could send a telegram to her father collect: Samuel Merrell, Morristown, New Jersey. Then if the old man wanted to hold her there, let him. He was pottering along after her slowly.

"Where's the telegraph operator?" "Wa-al now, you want to send a telegram?" "Yes, certainly."

"Who you going to telegraph?" Doris looked at him silently. She felt that she was being rude to the old man who was being kind to her in his way, but her patience was ebbing. "I'll tell that to the telegraph oper

"But--" "Yep. I'm him. I'm the postmaster, too, and the storekeeper here. You see I'm quite a fellow in these parts. Wouldn't think it to look at me now, would you?" He handed her a telegraph blank. "S'pose you want to send it collect?"

"Yes," said Doris furiously. "All right. Write it out. Let me see what it is."

Doris took hold of the blank angrily. When this old fellow found out the truth he wouldn't be quite so sure of himself. She wrote rapidly:

"Samuel Merrell, Morristown, New Jersev. "I am here in-"

She interrupted her work to ask, What is the name of this town?" "Cherry Corners, Vermont."

Doris wrote-"Cherry Corners, Vermont. I want to give myself up to the She signed the message police." Diane. She handed it to the aged operator, who scrutinized it closely for

Woman's Right to Thought of Self

Weakness in Self-Sacrifice Is Without Sense of Proportion.

A school to make wives selfish! That is the demand of Mary Pick

"Women," she says, "ought to be taught how to be reasonably selfish; there ought to be a school where they could learn. "Kindness is sometimes the most devastating and weakening influence And wives especially make this mistake. It is the unselfish ones who ruin themselves and everyone depending upon them."

One New Year's resolution she made, says our own Mary, and that was to treat herself as well as she treats the persons she likes best.

That is not a bad resolution. Every wife and mother should show herself the consideration she shows those she cares for—consideration for her health, consideration for her disposition, consideration for her looks. Her husband and children will benefit by all of that.

But this writer takes issue with our own Mary. No woman, and no human being on earth should be taught or learn how to be selfish. No than two hundred prizes before that. wife ever made a mistake in not being selfish, nor can she do any good to anyone else or to herself by being.

If a school is necessary to correct such faults in women and wives, then let us have one by all means. But let us not confuse them with lack of selfishness, and let us not condone or approve or suggest to anyone that selfishness might be anything but what it is-something ugly and destructive and unsatisfying.

Wolf Wins Honors as Super "Police Dog"

Around the world has gone the fame of a wolf, probably the sole illustrious wolf on record, and it is in a Chinese magazine that one learns of him now, though he lives in Austria, and rates as Europe's smartest, says the Literary Digest. He was a cub in the Bosnian woods when a Vienna police clerk, out hunting, captured him six years ago, and began to train him with animals already in service. Last year the wolf took first prize at an international police dog show, making not a single mistake in tests for training, skill, and accuracy. He had won more

Well, the Republican county tonvention is now a thing of the past and no one was killed or injured so far as we know

From the scarcity of money a mong the court crowd last week it is hard to convince the good people in this section that times are pros noble liars.

We see some stange things occasionally. A certain man owes us three or four dollars. We have mailed him two or three statements this year but received no reply. We watched this same fellow shell out one day recently for a paper that isn't printed in Davie. Maybe he got a razor, pocket knife or a pair of scissors. We believe in foreign missions, but believe in home missson first.

Judge Wilson Warlick, who presided over the March term of Davie Superior court made many friends during his three day court term aere last week. Judge Warlick believes in tempering justice with fore him may yet live to call him blessed. His Honor settled all jury, with the exception of two divorce cases, and the jurors did not have to leave their seats to decide these cases. The Judge was in such a fine humor that we thought of asking him to try us at accused of during the coming year. The Record editor has known Judge Warlick since he was a barefoot boy in knee "britches" and we were glad to welcome him to our town and chat with him about the good old days in Hickory when we both knew every man, child and dog in the town. DEFINES BANKERS' PART IN RECOVERY

Head of American Bankers Association Assures the President of Confidence and Desire to Cooperate Among Bankers

WASHINGTON, D. C. - President Roosevelt in his address before the NRA conference here on March 5 announced that he had received the following telegram from Francis M. Law, President of the American Bankers As-

"On this your first anniversary please allow me in behalf of the country's banks to express our full confidence and our sincere desire to cooperate in your courageous efforts to bring about recovery. The banking structure of the country is sound and liquid and banks have never been in stronger position to function effectively. Conditions have improved to the point where it is no longer necessary for banks to be super-liquid. There is a definite call now for banks, not to extend loose credits or to make improper loans, but for a most sympathetic attitude toward legitimate credit needs and for a recognition of responsibility for their proper and vital part in the program of re-

The Soundness of Banking

In an address before a recent trust conference of the association's Trust Division in New York, Mr. Law said: "A depression cannot long survive a sound banking structure if the banking structure is responsive to legitimate needs and functions in a way that is virile and alive. The most cheering fact of the present situation is the knowledge that banks are in strong position.

"Recovery, even to the most pessimistic, is no longer a myth or a rumor nor is it merely psychological. Abundant evidence and proof lie on every hand-tangible proof. With a return of confidence the wheels have begun to go round and a great many well managed businesses may look for a profit during this calendar year with fair assurance at least. For what has been achieved let us thank the President, who has labored with courage and patience and vision. Let us thank the Congress, whose members during the emergency have put the public welfare above par tisanship. Let us thank one hundred twenty-five million of our own-citizens who have refused to be stampeded, but rather who have kept alive the divine spark of faith and hope.

BANK LOANS AND BUSINESS RECOVERY

Official Describes Efforts of Reserve Banks to Bring Out Deserving Borrowers-Present Situation Typical

Apropos of the part that an expansion of business loans by banks occupies in the early stages of the business recovery which is now gaining headway, a Federal Reserve Bank official recently gave an interesting review of the experiences of his institution in this connection. In 1932 the Federal Reserve Banks were empowered by law to make direct loans to individuals in unusual circumstances when they had been unable to obtain loans from a commercial bank, he pointed out. From the middle of 1932 to the end of 1933 there were 1,286 applicants for loans at the New York Federal Reserve Bank under this law. The great majority of these applications proved on examination to be for funds for capital purposes, which are properly supplied as an investment in the business, or else were mortgage loans or others unclassifiable as commercial.

Only Fourteen Qualify

Only 250, or less than 20 per cent, were of the type which merited detailed investigation. The amount involved was $9,525,000. After further study of these, the Federal Reserve Bank was forced to turn down the applications of 236, finally offering credit in the sum of $1,417,000 to 14 prospective borrowers. Of this amount, only $806,000 was actually loaned, more than one-half of which was still outstanding many months later. Two of the borrow ers went into receivership.

"Since it was the special endeavor of the Federal Reserve Bank to make every possible loan under the emergency provisions of the amendment, and since their best efforts resulted in the extension of so small a sum as to have no effect on the total volume of commercial loans, it is a reasonable assumption that eligible borrowers entitled to bank credit are being provided for by the commercial banks," says the American Bankers Association Journal in commenting on this episode.

It is characteristic, as shown by studies of past business cycles, for changes in the volume of commercial bank credit to follow behind either contraction or expansion of business activity, says a financial writer in the New York Times. This was manifest recently in England's recent recovery where there was a lag between increased business and increased commercial loans.

Says the North Carolina Christian Advocate: "With the repeal of that uncertainty does not haunt them. the 18th amendment most of our lawlessness was to go What folly. Why Children Need Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from unwise dosing with harsh cathartics may cause bowel strain, and even set up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid larative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be safely relieved in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say mendical advice: I. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the howels are moving regularly until the bowels are moving regularly without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent reparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too.

Doctors Give Creosote For Chest Colds

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on.

Creomulsion with creosote and six other highly important medicimal elements, quickly and effectively stops coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Creomulsion is powerful in the treatment of colds and coughs, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take.

Your own druggist guarantees Creomulsion by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creomulsion as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creomulsion on hand for instant use. (adv.)

Lesson for April 1 THE CHRIST RISEN (Easter Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-29,
GOLDEN TEXT—If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.—Col. 3:1.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR
TOPIC—Living With the Living Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Resilty of the Resurrection.

The resurrection of Christ is one of the foundation truths of Christianity. It is the grand proof that Christ was what he claimed to be, the Messiah, the Son of God (Matt. 12:29-40; John 2:19-21).

IC-The Reality of the Resurrection.

I. The Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10). John does not enter into a description of the resurrection of Christ, or give any proof other than the empty tomb and that Jesus had repeatedly manifested himself afterward. To see the body of Christ disfigured with a spear thrust and nall prints, and the empty tomb, was all that faith needed. In this lesson John describes the processes of his own conviction touching Christ's resurrection. 1. The testimony of Mary Magda lene (vv. 1, 2). This woman, out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons (Mark 16:9: Luke 8:2), announced the fact of the empty tomb to Peter and John. Prompted by great love to him for his kindness to her, she went early to the tomb even "when it was vet dark." She had realized great good at his hand, therefore she could not rest until she had done her utmost for him. The measure of one's service for Christ is the degree in which he real izes the benefits conferred.

2. Personal investigation by Peter and John (vv. 3-10). The news of the empty tomb which Mary brought so moved John and Peter that they both ran to investigate. Their investigation assured them of the reality of the resurrection. The removal of the stone from the sepulcher, and the arrangement of the grave clothes, convinced them that this would not have been done by an enemy.

II. The Manifestations of the Risen Lord (vv. 11-29).

1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 11-18). a. Mary weeping at the empty tomb (v. 11). Peter and John went home but Mary could not. She stood there weeping. She really should have been rejoicing that the grave was empty. b. Mary questioned by the angels (vv. 12, 13). Through her tears she saw angels at the tomb who inquired as to the cause of her sorrow. c. Jesus revealed himself to Mary (vv. 14-16). She first saw the angels and then her eves lighted upon the Lord. She did not recognize him in his resurrection body but his voice was familiar to her. As soon as he called her by name she recognized him and fell at his feet weeping.

d. Jesus forbade her to touch him (v. 17). This showed that she was now coming into a new relationship to him. Besides this, the disciples were still in doubt and sorrow. "Go tell my brethren" was the message she must carry. e. Mary's testimony (v. 18). She told

a. When Thomas was absent (vv. 19-23);

(1) His message of peace (v. 19). He did not come with censure for their failure and desertion. Their conduct merited censure, but his consideration was too tender for that.

(2) He showed his hands and his side (v. 20). Having calmed their fears he gave them unmistakable evidence of his resurrection.

(3) He commissioned them (v. 21). "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." This commission was not simply to the eleven but to all the believers (Luke 24:33).

(4) He bestowed the Holy Spirit upon them (v. 22). He breathed on them and said unto them, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." Only as empowered by the Holy Ghost can a disciple go forward as a successful witness for

(5) The disciples' authority (v. 23). This authority was not by virtue of office but by virtue of having the Holy

b. When Thomas was present (vv. 24-29). His absence deprived him of a vision of the Lord. (1) The victory of sight and touch (vv. 24-28). Jesus graciously supplied the evidence which Thomas needed. (2) Greater blessing for those who see only by faith (v. 29).

With Accents of White for Spring | Howe About: BLIZZARD GIVES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

To MOST women there is nothing more flattering than a dash of white to enliven the costume, be it either in the form of fetching little trimming details or worn in an accessory way. Wherefore, the prospects are that the fair sex will be appearing at its loveliest during the coming months, seeing that the new suits. frocks and ensembles are being prettyfied with the most winsome white accents creative genius can devise.

There are so many phases of the white vogue to be considered, one scarcely knows where to begin to tell the story. For instance, there are the frothy little necklines which are making even the simplest spring daytime print and crepe, likewise sheer woolen frocks, take on infinite charm. Masses of flutings, ruchings and fine pleatings of sheerest organdies, swisses, mousselines and nets make it seem as if milady's spring-hatted head was rising from out a halo of billowy whiteness. Lace fixings, too, are lavished about throat, shoulders and arms as if to tell an admiring world that fashions, this season, are going decidedly feminine. Then there are the new lace and net jabot blouses, it is indeed a winsome touch of white which they are contributing to presentday modes.

In response to this hue and cry for white the new suits are being adorably trimmed with details of dainty white fur or perhaps topped with neckpiece of snow-white fur. A very attractive the disciples that she had seen the suit which expects to go stepping in the gay springtime is shown to the left in the picture. The material which tas ions this costume is a cord-tucked rabbit woolen in black and white. This fabric, with rabbit fur woven into it is very soft to the touch and its corded surface brings it right up to the moment in chic. Then, too, it is un-believably light weight, which is an other reason added to its good looks why style creators are showing such enthusiasm for these weaves. The white galyak scarf adds a touch of infinite chic. Its flyaway lines take their cue from the much discussed airplane and wing effects. The hiplength box-jacket with swagger sad dle shoulder is a high-style note. With its horizontal use of the striping the zontal stripes of the jacket. Rippled revers of ermine, a white ribbed satin blouse together with a patrician styling makes the suit to the right an outstanding number. The manner in which the jacket fastens with a tie of self fabric is characteristic of new fashion trends. The hat with a forward movement to the briw has made its entry into the milliners

WEAR FLOWERS By CHERIE NICHOLAS

With the return of feminine elegance and charm, women are again wearing real flowers. A single orchid secure in one of the very new and practical tube pins is the smart thing to wear on the shoulder of your chic bouclet suit, as photographed in the picture herewith. Orchids should always be worn stems down. With tailored clothes the small cypripedium or ladyslipper orchid is correct and ultra. What could be lovelier for formal oc casions than a beautiful corsage of orchids, the aristocrat of the flower world? For evening, a corsage of two strength and skill that God has given or three orchids simply fied with ribbon matching the flowers or stems is in high fashion.

Now, the Shankless Shoe,

Hardly Anything at All Here's the latest development. After years of experimentation a shoe has been turned out that to all appearances is completely shankless. That means that in under the arch of your foot the sole simply vanishes into nothingness.

A black kid opera pump, for exam ple, might have some sweet and lovely stitching as decoration which would extend right under the shoe, being joined under the arch by a seam run-ning from sole to heel. In case you haven't caught on, this new system makes a size 8 foot look about 5, and 3 practically nothing at all.

Popular Dress Trimming Hand fagotings are in high favor as trimmings for day time and afternoon dresses and jacket costumes and light weight woolen dresses and costume are especially attractive when treated with this type of embellishment.

THE last empress of Russia was a I good woman; never a breath of scandal against her. She was devoted to her children, to her church, and actually loved her husband. Every day of her life she did charity work. or talked about it. She believed in sending missionaries to convert the heathen. She loved art, and lived in an emotional and sentimental atmosphere all her life, to the entire neglect of practical common sense and education; she talked incessantly of justice for her subjects, and actually treated them so badly that finally they beat her to death, together with her husband and children.

Katherine, also of Russia, was not a beautiful character; in fact, a good deal of a tom boy, but no one ever charged her with being a sentimental fool. She was so much devoted to on sense that she invited Voltaire, master of it, to her court: she bid against Frederick the Great in an attempt to buy him, that he might give her subjects the benefit of his

No fortune tellers or mystics were admitted to her circle of friends or advisers: had she invited a Rasputin to her court by the back stairway, she would have slapped his mouth had he talked the nonsense Rasputin talked to the last empress of Russia.

I don't know there is any moral to this, but it is a curious incident in history I often think about.

"A woman's idea of Utopla," a wife writes, "Is to have her husband far smarter than she is in the necessary activities of life. Such a husband earns more money than she could, and spends and invests it with better sense. He makes it possible for her to be with interesting and important people. He flatters her constantly, and considers it definitely his business to make her life a success. She has time to keep herself decorative." . . This will flatter the men a little, and the poor devils get so little of it I have gone to the trouble of reprinting it.

From the beginning of the human race every man of reasonable intelligence has finally admitted that natural law is the supreme power, and cannot be changed. What we call the Capitalistic System (and which so many say is tottering) is natural law. Every race of men has practiced it, hated it; millions have said there is no death, but every one has defeated his own argument by dying. . . . Get food, clothing, shelter; extract from life such comfort as is in it. That is the law of Nature and of the Capitalistic System. Living in idleness off the neighbors is the doctrine of a rebel thrown out of God's kingdom. At one time Silerius was in effect dictator of old Rome. Silerius nowhere says this in his writing, but the introduction to the memoirs says Siler ius was head of the army, and close adviser and friend of the emperor, a weaker man. In that ancient time Silerius was in the position of the modern Mussolini in Italy, or Hitler in Germany, although not an equally

Silerius confesses in his memoirs that were he free to completely order the affairs of the people, he could not think of a plan better than the plan they had worked out for themselves. He often thought, he said, of an ideal world, but the old human nature always intruded, and he could agree on no plan that would probably work better. Silerius was a vigorous, adventuring man with women, and thought much of better relations between the sexes but concluded at last that a new and better way, offering less quarreling and suffering, could not be devised. "The charges of the men and women against each other are true," he said, "but I can think of no remedy."

In his time the political parties were distinguished by colors; the radicals were called blues, the conservatives greens, etc. He sided with neither; charges of both were true, he decided, as were the charges of the poor against the rich, the charges o the rich against the poor, but he did not bankrupt his government trying relief plans, as he could think out no remedy promising success.

"Give me one more day, month or year," a man usually says to God in his prayer, "and I will become great. L feel I have it in me. if given time to get it out. I know what the trouble is with the world, but somehow I have not yet convincingly framed and pointed it out. I love the higher life, but somehow the lower has swamped me. Give me until tomorrow again, and I again promise to do better."

The sun has always come up regu larly every morning in my lifetime. am more interested in working in the light it affords, and in properly resting in the dark hours when it is hidden, than in wrangling with my neighbors as to the origin of the sun.

HORSES DAY OF REAL "COMEBACK"

An incident of the winter, when many parts of Massachusetts were "snowed under," drew the following interesting editorial commen from the Cleveland Plain Dealer: "The people of North Adams. Mass., are sleeping peacefully these anowy nights thanks to the vigilant loyalty of Maggie and Maude. Severai years ago Maggie and Maude went over the hill to the poorfarm. That was when North Adams joined the procession of modern cities and motorized its fire department. That meant from hose cart to dump cart for Maggie and Maude. In view of their long service they were given light work and liberal oats by way of old age pension.

"Their career was drab enough until this winter's fury piled blizzard upon blizzard for the hill towns of western Massachusetts. The snow became too deep for North Adams' snappy fire equipment. But the chief remembered Maggie and Maude.

"They were brought back to the old station. Spare tires and retired checker tables were cleared out and their old stalls were bedded down. One fancies they looked in vain for the familiar hanging harness and probably gazed disdainfully at the oily drip pans under the fire engine. But when the hose truck they had hauled in other days was fixed up with runners, Maggie and Maude may have exchanged a ladylike equine chuckle over the belated recognition of their worth. "Nor are Maggie and Maude the only herses to have the laugh on their modern rivals. Throughout the deep snow zone of the East, sleds and cutters are passing up stalled autos and trucks, and the pleasant ring of sleigh bells resounds where it had not been heard for many years. Up in Vermont and New Hampshire where they never try to explain away deep snow the horses have their day every winter:

"But it takes an old-fashioned winter to demonstrate the old-fashioned reliability of Maggie and Maude. One wonders what North Adams will do if it has a similar blizzard in, say, the winter of 1954-"

President Roosevelt Asks Congress to Provide for 12 Banks to Help Small Trade—Mussolini Predicts World Fascist Era in 60 Years-Rickenbacker Causes Stir.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a letter to the senate and house banking committees, asked congress to set up twelve industrial credit banks which he had been told would safeguard the jobs of 346,000 persons and create work for 378,000 more. Immediately after the President's wishes were known legislation was introduced in both houses giving the federal re serve system authority to create the banks, financing them by selling $140,-000,000 of stock to the treasury.

The plight of the "small or medium size" industrialist was stressed by the President, and he cited results of a survey indicating that such industry was badly in need of $700,000,000 working capital.

The President asked for "early consideration" of his proposal, pointing out that the situation called for "immediate relief."

The President's letter to Chairmen Fletcher and Steagall of the senate and house banking committees said the proposed banks would be controlled by directorates a majority of which will themselves be industrialists. Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I have been deeply concerned with the situation in our small industries. In numberless cases their working capital has been lost or seriously depleted.

"We have afforded much aid in the recovery of agriculture, commerce, our larger industries and our financial institutions, and our improved condition nationally furnishes full instification for these efforts. We must continue in behalf of the medium size man in industry and commerce."

The credit banks proposed in the bills introduced would be chartered by the existing Federal Reserve banks and be operated subject to the regulations of the reserve board. They would set up branches.

SPEAKING before an assembly of 5,000 cheering chief Fascists Premier Mussolini outlined a 60-year program of internal and external expansion which, predicted, would in the Twenty-first century give Italy the "primacy of the world." That century, he said, will be a "black shirt era."

"In this age of plans," Il Duce declared, "I want to lay before you a plan not for five years or ten years but for 60 years carrying on to the Twenty-first century, at which time Italy will have the primacy of the world.

"Italy has no future in the West and North. Her future lies to the East and South in Asia and Africa. The vast resources of Africa must be valorized and Africa brought within the civilized circle.

"I do not refer to conquest of territory but to natural expansion. We demand that nations which have aleady arrived in Africa do not at every step Italian expansion."

Here, it was said, he was referring particularly to France. Internally, Mussolini said, immediate objectives are completion of swamp reclamation by 1940, new aqueducts and highways, plans to recreate Italian municipalities, complete rebuilding of 500.000 rural houses and repairs to 930,000 rural houses, a work of 30 years.

"Every rural person will have a clean and healthy house," he asserted. "Only in this way can the rush to the city be combated."

In the midst of a pandemonium of applause Mussolini said Fascism "be came universal in 1929."

"But in this phenomenon," he continued, "it is necessary to distinguish positive from negative Fascism. Positive Fascism knows how to destroy the old and rebuild the new, whereas negative Fascism knows only how to destroy."

SECRETARY MORGENTHAU reported to President Roosevelt that income tax receipts for the first quarter of the year were well above estimates and far more than a year ago. Fayments to the close of business

March 15, the day when all returns were due, were $147,794,000. In announcing this tigure on the basis of telegraphic reports from collectors, the treasury said corresponding collections last year were $99,847,000.

In 1933, however, the date for filing returns was extended from March 15 to March 31, after the bank holiday. Treasury estimates of income tax payments for March are $250,000,000 as compared with $174,000,000 last

A Rickenbacker, famous war ace, DEMAND by Col. Edward V that President Roosevelt "purge his official family of traitorous members who advised him to cancel air mail contracts, threw the senate post office committee into an uproar Saturday. Chairman McKeller charged Rickenbacker with making a "political speech" and accused him of "attacking the President." Rickenbacker replied: "I am not attacking the President. It is my confidence in him that I do not want destroyed."

Rickenbacker's statements came extemporaneously after reading a prepared statement denouncing cancellation of contracts as "unfair and un-American," and after cross-examination, arising from the witness chair, he declared cancellation had "caused doubt in the minds of millions of Americans." He continued:

"It is the doubt in the minds of millions whether ail the President has so ably accomplished, such as the NRA, CWA, gold content and others, has been proven or has had time to be proven, or whether they are as big a mistake as the cancellation of the airmail contracts; whether tomorrow that also may be questionable."

Rickenbacker agreed with Lindbergh and Chamberlin that a federal aviation commission should be named to take charge of the industry at once and that the proposed bill is "destructive to industry."

TRACTS urging the public to donate cash to promote the sport of flying in Germany were circulated in Berlin Sunday. Under the Versailles treaty public funds are not permitted to be used to stimulate aviation, but the leaflet points out that the treaty does not refer to private initiative, and "We are unable to construct military planes, but the development of the sport of flying and training German people as flyers is entirely dependent upon ourselves and our readiness to make sacrifices."

Premier

The demand for a German air force was also emphasized by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia and reichsminister of aviation, in speaking at a flying exhibition at the Essen airport. Goering declared that Germany can enjoy no security, no -peace, no equality until she is granted the right to defend herself in the air. This demand cannot be altered, the air minister proclaimed.

"If other countries are permitted the heaviest weapons of attack in the air, Germany at least must be given the right of defense," he said.

Secretary of Labor Perkins joined with Wagner and other witnesses before the board in urging the passage of Wagner's bill which would create a permanent labor board and outlaw employer influence over the organiza tion of employees. Representatives of the American Federation of Labor demand that employers be forced to recognize the unions and predict gen eral strikes especially in the automobile industry unless prompt action is taken to satisfy the men.

DESPITE the fact that President Roosevelt phoned personally to a number of senators of both parties seeking to persuade them to vote for ratification of the St.

Lawrence waterway treaty, the pact was ate by a vote of 46 to 42. Thus the affirmative vote was far be low the required two thirds of those voting. Party lines were disregarded. Twenty two Democrats voted Senator Lewis along with 20 Republicans. In favor of the pact were 31 Democrats, 14 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was said in Washington, was decidedly vexed by this defeat of a major administration measure, and he began preparations to resubmit the treaty at a future session of congress. Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, Democratic whip of the senate and one of the leading opponents of the rejected treaty, predicted that Canada would soon offer the United States a substitute treaty. This may be true, but dispatches re veal that in Montreal, at least, the defeat of the pact was hailed with joy because business men there think th project too expensive to be undertaken at this time. The President's warning that Canada would, on its own initative, build an all-Canadian waterway seems to be met by this news from Montreal.

Chicago and the Mississippi valley are blamed by Mr. Roosevelt for the rejection of the treaty, and there is no doubt that their arguments against the proposed restriction of diversion of water from Lake Michigan to 1.500 cubic feet a second were potent. This amount, according to Senator Lewis and other Middle West senators, would be wholly inadequate to maintain navigation on the Mississippi waterway. The Atlantic seaboard senators, too were almost solidly against the treaty If the treaty is resubmitted, the clauses concerning the sovereignty of Lake Michigan and the Chicago diversion may be omitted; but Senator Lewis said: "So far as I am concerned -and I believe I speak also for sev eral others—I shall not be satisfied with a mere omission, but shall de mand that internationalization of Lake Michigan and the limitation of the sanitary district diversion shall be specifically renounced by Canada."

most famous aviators to investigate the army air mail service and to help strengthen the country's air defense. Secretary of Wa. Dern appointed Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Col. Clarence D. Chamberlin and Orville Wright to a committee to investigate the army's attempt at mail carrying, which cost ten lives before President Roose velt curtailed operations.

Lindbergh declined to serve on the ommittee, reiterating his opposition to the carrying of the air mail by the

The President himself held a lunch on conference with Gen. William Mitchell, former chief of the air corps and long a champion of a unified air force. Mitchell's visit caused belief the President might be considering a mified air force as a means of eliminating weaknesses in the army corps Meanwhile post office and army officials prepared a skeleton air mail service on nine routes, as bitter controversy waged in congress both as to administration handling of air mail matters to date and also as to proposed permanent air mail legislation hich has administration backing.

With criticism of its wholesale can cellation of air mail contracts still echoing, the administration proposed to congress that a new ship subsidy plan he substituted "gradually" for the existing ocean mail system.

The proposal was transmitted to ongress by Secretary Roper. It sugested inauguration of an outright sub sidy plan accomplished "if possible through mutual agreement to prevent demoralization of the industry.

Gets 99 Years in Prison Chicago.-Basil (the Owl) Banghart, machine gunner of the Touny gang, was found guilty by a jury in Judge Walter Steffen's court of kidnaping John Factor, wealthy speculator, His punishment was fixed by the jury at 99 years in the penitentiary, the same penalty that was recently imposed on three of his confederates in the crime -Roger Touhy, Albert Kator and Gus Schaefer.

Earlier in the day forces outside the law had disposed of Charles (Ice Wagon) Connors, another Touhvite who had been identified as one of those involved in the Factor abduction. National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.-As I look back on vents that transpired when President Roosevelt took office New Deal a year ago, it is "Digging In" striking to note the similarity of action then and in the two weeks subsequent to the opening of his second year in office. The "New Deal" opened its econd year in the midst of a series of events that were comparable, in my opinion, with those of the historic inaugural week of 1932. And as the 'New Deal" was all-embracing as regards our economic and social structure, fust so were the events which I am reporting now definitely linked with the very fundamentals of our individual and national existence. We became accustomed, during the dark days of the World war, to reading about this army or that "digging n" to hold the ground gained. It appears to me that the outstanding fact with relation to the opening of the New Deal's second year is the digging in process represented by the latest developments. Let us examine

First there was President Roose relt's momentous speech in which he calmly told the country that the principles of NRA were here to stay; econd, there was a decision by the Supreme court of the United States peyond which none can go for legal adjudication, by which the New York milk licensing law was held constitutional, and a few days later the congress gave approval to the so-called big navy bill which can be construed no other way than a reflection of solid nationalistic feeling.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech, of course, stood out, but had the Supreme court ruled that the state of New York had no right to fix a minimum price for milk, there can be no doubt that the basis of much of the New Deal would begin to crumble. Had the congress turned away from the big navy ideathat is, ordering construction of our navy to the limits of treaty agreement it would have dented that nationalistic policy seriously, although the New Deal schemes generally have not touched on the question of defense. Rejection of the big navy plan necessarily would have had the effect of raising some doubt as to the President's control, and one hears about Washington the suggestion that Mr. Roosevelt will have plenty of trouble if congress gets too independent.

As a part and parcel of the President's enunciation in the speech, General Johnson, of "We Are Not NRA, called upon Going Back industry to reduce hours and raise wages further. The militant "crack down" Johnson was not as suave in his statements as was Mr. Rooseveli and words of protest boiled right out of the meeting where he spoke. But whether the industries represented in the conference with General Johnson are willing or able to do as he declared was necessary, every one in Washington is convinced that Mr. Roosevelt meant exactly what he said when he solemnly declared

"One thing is very certain. We are not going back." The President was equally unequivocal in his assertion that the principles of recovery, embodied in NRA must move forward. Industry. can well take notice of that, if Washington opinion may be taken as a criterion. The President holds that the NRA principles provide for a balanced recovery and that without a balance, there can be no permanent good times. So it is the proposition that Mr. Roose velt has determined to go on, that a majority of the highest court in the land has found one of his basic ideas, although embodied in a state statute, to be in accordance with the Constitution, and he has a congress that is thus far under his control for enactment of the bulk of his New Deal leg-

The effect? As far as I know, there ls no person of super-intelligence now living, and that would be the only human being capable of foretelling what the results wil be. The changes made under the New Deal are brand new, different than anything economists have ever seen, and time alone will reveal which of them holds the things that fit our country's normal life.

Politically, it is quite apparent what the effect will be. Every mother's son in the Democratic party in congress is going back to his bailiwick to seek re-election under the Roosevelt banner, as distinguished from the old Democratic flag. Espousing Roose velt's program will be popular in the bulk of the districts, and the Republican opposition will just as obviously have to be predicated on issues built up against what the present administration has done, is doing or proposes

The "big navy" bill is a five-year proposition. It contemplates that the American navy will "Big Navy" be expanded by the Program construction of sufficient ships of the various types to place the totals just inside the limitation of the London and Washington treaties by which tonnage was limited. So, according to naval authorities, our government will soon set out on construction of about 100 new destroyers and submarin something like 1,000 airplanes and on something the trees an phases and on aircraft carrier, the airplane's mother ship. We have nearly all of the heavier gunboats now that are per mitted under the arms limitation of the treaties mentioned. But the may strength respecting destroyers and sale marines is far be ow the total that in Before the senate passed the bill it included an amendment that is duces profiteering on construction Jobs, to some extent. I have a bund that the big shipbuilding corporation will find a way to get around part of the provision, but obviously they will not be able to gain the profits out of the construction work that main otherwise obtain. Succinctly, the provision requires that no contractor ca gain more than 10 per cent profit for his risk and investment, but enforce ment of such a rule is not as simple u it sounds. It will be recalled that there were "cost-plus" contracts and during the World war construction and it also is a matter of general knowledge that the government paid dearly as a result. The contractor were willing to pay any kind of wages and hire any number of workers they could get, because when the costs wen totaled, they simply added their 10 per cent, and collected.

From some of the letters I have to ceived from readers. I gather that the felt I was a bit jingoistic a few weeks ago when I predicted that there is war brewing and that it is likely to engulf some parts of the world before the end of this year. I was reporting at that time just what authorities Washington knew of world condition and signs they could read.

While our own congress was anthorizing construction of a treat-size navy, consider the developments that same week abroad. They include: the French chamber of deputies naval conmittee approved a project for constrution of a 26,000-ton man-of-war, to be a sister ship of the gigantic Dunkerque that is now being built. It also ordered construction of two new submaries and a destroyer. The British at miralty presented 1934 estimates for four more cruisers and twenty other ships, and an increase in naval personnel of 2,000 men. These additions will cost roughly $282,000,000.

In addition to these moves by the British and the French, the Italians took quick cognizance of the action of their rivals, the French. While it wu not officially communicated to Washington, my understanding is that the Italians are making plans to build a 25. 000-ton battleship. This, of course, would offset the new Dunkerque that the Paris government will commission

Over in Japan, war plans go of apace. And Japan is making faces at Russia. For example, the Japanese war ministry sent a note to Russia the other day, telling the Soviets, in effect, to stay on their own side of the international border. It seems the Soriel planes had been doing a little figlag over Manchukuo, the new state set of by Japan out of territory taken for China, and the Japanese apparently didn't want the Russians playing in their back yard.

Now, concerning General Johnson's demands on industry, it certainly can be said that his Johnson's theme song, as they Warning say of the mories, was burdened with threat. He did come down off his high horse long enough to say "we car not succeed without public support. That was quite a condescension by the general. Yet, he had previously sale to the folks, who are the personnel of the code supervision, that they were going to compel industry to cut the hours of labor and increase wages at the same time.

"Of course," said General Johnson, we can't succeed without public support of what we are trying to do, and I was to warn non-compliers that we are not only going to revive public sent ment for the Blue Eagle insignia, M under specific orders from President Roosevelt we are reorganizing to ex force the penal sections of the re covery act."

The administrator went on to st that he had been "too gentle." feels, apparently, that he has not cracked down sufficiently hard. Sa he is going to see that more employ ment is made by compelling industry to take on more workers, and the whole import of his attitude appear to this observer as being one that sil enforce that employment whether the particular industry needs the added workers, or whether it can pay then if it hires them, or whether it mill handward at a car bankrupt the firm if it obers. From this position, it appears to many offi whom I have talked that General Johnson has put industry right h tween the devil and the deep blue set and there is little choice left

The general obviously was more to go the distance he did by definite character of Mr. Roosest assertions which were that were not going back, and the recou principles are here to star. which is very strong language different language than the Am nation ever has heard from Washing

County Key Bankers

Describing the activities of the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association, the Director, D H. Otis, says: "With 2,500 agricultural-In minded bankers designated as county key bankers, there is enlisted a tremendous force for the improvement of agriculture. These key bankers bring organized assistance to progress sive bankers, who are led to see the possibility of agricultural work in their communities. Banker-farmer tours are emphasized as a means of acquainting bankers, farmers and other business men with first-hand knowl edge of how agricultural improvement methods are working out in practice These give an opportunity for the key bankers to contact country bankers and work out new ideas."
