Does anyone know what our sidewalks are costing the government, the property owners and the tax payers? It is much easier to spend public money than it is when the cash comes out of the individuals' pockets.

Democrats who were sniffling their shirts for the "Happy Warrior" in 1928 are now busy cursing Al because he mopped up with Roosevelt in a speech a few nights ago. Well, we didn't vote for Al in 1928, and have no apologies to make. Had we voted for and sworn by him in 1928 as some of the boys did, we would keep our mouths shut about him now.

We are reliably informed that tobacco farmers can sell the remainder of their tobacco without having to pay the process taxes. Pity the farmers didn't find this out before they had sold all their tobacco. We thought this tax would be taken off as soon as the U. S. Supreme court declared the triple A unconstitutional, but it seems that at least a few of our farmers had to shell out this excessive tax money after the law was declared unconstitutional.

So far as we can find out nearly everybody in this burg is rejoicing with the soldier boys since they are to be paid their bonus money this summer. The Davie boys will receive around $200,000 of this money. They cannot thank President Roosevelt for this money for he did everything possible to keep them from getting this money. When voting time comes next fall thousands of the ex-soldier boys will remember this when they march up to the polls to cast their vote.

Officers Capture Men And Booze.

Officers Lagle and Hoots captured two men, a Ford coach and 13 cases of moonshine liquor shortly after noon Thursday in Clarksville township. The driver of the car was making too much speed and failed to make a curve. The car was badly wrecked and one case of the liquor was smashed. The occupants of the car, said to be Pat Mahon, and C. W. Tucker, of Charlotte, were brought to Mocksville and given a hearing before Esq. Sheek. Mahon was placed under a $200 bond and Tucker under a $400 bond for their appearance at the March term of Davie Superior court. The booze appeared to be of an inferior grade, and retailed at $1 per jar, so Mahon told this reporter.

Spring Is Nearly Here.

Well, winter is on its way out and spring is almost here, despite the fact that Davie county is covered with a mantle of snow which fell last Wednesday night and Thursday. Sunday was ground-hog day, and that critter didn't see his shadow. Snow fell practically all day Sunday, but melted as it fell, the temperature registered around 35 degrees above zero most of the day. Just why the ground hog would want to roam around through the snow Sunday we don't know, but it has been said of old that if the sun was not shining on Feb. 2nd, when the hog came out of his winter quarters, that he would remain out, and that the backbone of winter was broke. This was the first Feb. 2nd that the sun didn't shine at some time during the day, since Feb. 2nd 1918, when it rained all day.

The Sunny South.

This section was visited by the fourth snow of the winter last Wednesday night and Thursday morning. The ground was covered to a depth of about 3 inches. Temperatures were far below normal most of last week. We are all hoping for the best but preparing for the worst. Friday morning the mercury dropped to 24 degrees below freezing, which was 8 degrees above zero. This was the second coldest morning of the winter. The lowest temperature reading this winter was on the morning of Tuesday, Dec. 31st when the mercury dropped to one degree below zero in Mocksville and 3 below zero in Winston Salem. The mercury took another drop Saturday morning, registering 6 degrees above zero, which was 2 degrees colder than Friday morning.

Annual B. & L. Stockholders Meeting.

The fifteenth annual meeting of the Stockholders of the Mocksville Building & Loan Association was held in the office of the Association January 23, 1936. The same Board of Directors which served in the year 1935 were re-elected for the year 1936.

The year 1935 marked one of the best years business in the history of the Association. A number of loans were made for the purpose of new construction, purchasing property and other purposes. The Association is a great asset to this community. It has enabled scores of members to own their own homes which they probably would not have owned otherwise. It has also proved a profitable investment for the investing members and is commended by the State Supervisory Authorities as being one of the best Associations in the State.

We desire to express to the membership of the Association the highest admiration and appreciation of their loyalty, and also, to the gentlemen composing the Board of Directors. These men have worked diligently and enthusiastically to the interest of the Association, and at no time has the element of selfish interest been apparent. They are performing their duties at a sacrifice and are entitled to your highest commendation.

Ex-Soldiers--Attention!

There will be a special meeting at Davie County Court House next Friday night, February 7th for the purpose of making out your application for your BONUS.
Bring your adjusted service certificate or if you have already had a loan, necessary papers so that application may be properly filled out. No charges made by persons in charge.

Illiterate Persons in U. S. Number More Than 4,000,000

Illiteracy is commonly understood to mean the inability of adults to read, write, or both. In some countries the basis of the calculation is the number of men and women married who cannot sign the register; in others the ability of army recruits to read; there is therefore no trustworthy method of making comparisons in different countries on this question. Cardui Helped Three Times

"I used Cardui when a girl, for cramps, and it helped then," writes Mrs. Ike Wright, of Sealy, Texas. Next, after marriage, she reports having taken Cardui when she felt weak, nervous and restless before her children were born. And during middle life, it helped her again. "I was miserable," she explains. "I did not have an appetite. I was very blue and upset. I remembered Cardui had helped me, so I took it again and soon began to pick up. I ate and had more strength. I kept up the Cardui and did not have any more trouble. Is it any wonder that I recommend Cardui to all my friends?" Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. P. B. FITZPATRICK, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, & Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for February 9

JESUS INSISTS ON RIGHTEOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 6:39-49. GOLDEN TEXT—Why call ye me, Lord, and do not the things which I say?—Luke 6:46. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Tells Us What to Do. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Code for Helpers. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Overcoming Our Faults. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Test of Our Religion.

In verses 20-26 Jesus sets forth the inner spiritual condition of those who are members of his kingdom. In the lesson text for today he sets forth the principles governing the life of his followers.

I. Love Your Enemies (v. 29).

Love here is not mere natural affection. Love is not sentiment but is the sincere desire for the welfare of another, and the willingness to do all in one's power to accomplish that which is good for the individual. To love friends is easy, but to love enemies is only possible to those who have been born again.

II. Do Good to Them Which Hate You (v. 27).

Love is positive in its nature. The disciple of Christ will not merely refrain from doing injury to one who hates him, but will be concerned with and engaged in doing good to him.

III. Bless Them That Curse You (v. 28).

To bless means to speak well of, to invoke a blessing upon.

IV. Pray for Them Which Disrespectfully Use You (v. 28).

It is obligatory upon the Christian to pray for those who heap abuses upon him. The best commentary on this is Christ's own example. "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do" (Luke 23:34). When Christ was reviled he reviled not again; "When he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously" (I Pet. 2:23).

V. Patiently Endure Wrong and Injury (v. 29).

The Christian is not to bristle in defense of his rights, but rather to suffer insult, injury, and even loss. This expresses the law which governs the individual's action and should not be pressed so far that evildoers go unchecked. Rightly constituted government has been ordained of God for the protection of the innocent and punishment of evildoers (Rom. 13:1-8).

VI. Give to Every Man That Asketh of Thee (v. 30).

This text does not authorize promiscuous giving, neither does it mean that any request made by the idle, greedy, and selfish should be granted. There is a giving which injures the one to whom the gift is made. It would not be proper to give a man money to buy whiskey. The principle enjoined is to give the thing needed to the one asking. The supreme need of every able-bodied person is to be given a way to earn his living.

VII. Do to Others as You Wish Others to Do to You (vv. 31-35).

This is called the Golden Rule. It is the sum total of Christian duty as it pertains to human inter-relationships. If this rule were lived up to, the problem of capital and labor would be solved, war would cease, international relations would be peaceably adjusted, and all profiteering in business would end.

VIII. Be Merciful (v. 36).

This means to be filled with pity and compassion; to enter into sympathy with every need of others. Our supreme example is the Heavenly Father.

IX. Censorious Judgments Condemned (v. 37).

This means that the evil or false in others should not be sought out. We should not sit in critical judgment upon the action of others. This does not, however, prohibit the estimation of others by their deeds.

X. Compensations of Right Living (v. 38).

The believer who gives freely of money, loves sincerely, makes the Golden Rule the standard of his life, shows mercy and kindness to others, and refrains from impugning the motives of others, will be fully rewarded.

XI. Danger of Following False Teachers (v. 39).

The teacher who does not know God and the way to heaven will lead others into ruin. Only such as know God should be followed.

XII. Those Who Reprove Others Should Live Blameless Lives (vv. 41, 42).

Evil doing should be removed from our lives before bringing others to account.

XIII. The Sin of Profession Without Fruitbearing (v. 43-46).

The one who is in fellowship with God will practice the principles which reveal God's nature.

Ant Oddities

Fight to the Finish Between Red and Black Ants.

Light in the student's quarters a reddish ant, which from its general character was assumed to be the male of the species.

He had talked about Emeryella schmitti so much that it became well known to the scant white population of the island under the name of "Mary Ella Schmitt," and when he finally reported its discovery there was a great celebration among his fellow Americans, railroad men vacationing at Port-au-Prince.

Another missionary priest, Pere Salle, had sent to the Museum in Paris from Haiti a curious nest of vegetable fiber, not unlike a wasp's nest.

At a scientist, while rummaging about among the specimens, found it and tapped it on a piece of white paper. Several dead and dried ants dropped out. They belonged to the genus Macromischa, the most exquisitely formed of the ants and with beautiful metallic coloration—purples, greens, and reds. The genus is interesting, too, because it alone of the ants of the West Indies has developed into numerous species. About thirty are known from Cuba alone.

At the Mias Carlota, in the Sierra de Trinidad of Cuba, an ant hunter attempted to turn over a large rock to see what was living underneath. The rock split in the middle, and there, in the very center, was a half teaspoon of brilliant green metallic ants glistening in the sunshine. They proved to be an unknown species of this genus.

Fire Ant is a Stinger.

The fire ant (Solenopsis geminata) is such a good traveler that one rarely or another is found throughout the warmer parts of the earth. It gets its name from the painful, burning sting it can inflict. A colony contains vast numbers of workers. They have recently been reported as doing great damage to young quail in the southeastern states. The birds, incapable of defending themselves, are stung to death.

Fire ants nest in almost any kind of locality and are extremely prolific. Even floods cannot dampen the fire ant, for it has been reported in Brazil that when the water rises and washes out a colony, the ants form a ball, queen and brood in the middle, and this living ball floats away to a tree or to higher ground.

The tailor ant (Oecophylla smaragdina) and a few other ants (Polyrhachis) are unique among all the earth's creatures, so far as is known, in that they use their young as tools in nest construction.

Few adult insects spin silk, but the larvae of many have this ability to enclose themselves in silken cocoons. From which they will later emerge as fully formed adults. Oecophylla utilizes this accomplishment of its young in making its nests. Scientists have often torn one of the leaves that form its box-shaped nest and then watched the proceedings.

At first there is a wild sort of on the part of the ants, all in fighting mood. They cannot sting, but they bite annoyingly. After they have given up trying to find and destroy the intruder, worker ants seize larvae in their mandibles and bring them to the damaged portions. Other workers seize the edges of the leaves and pull them together, while those with the larvae pass them back and forth, stimulating the grub to exude silk, which sticks and holds the pieces of the leaves together.

After their silk has been used for the common good, the luckless larvae have to sleep naked! The tailor ant lives throughout the Old World tropics and is one of the few ants that are greenish in color, though some of its varieties are red, and one, in West Africa, is brown almost to black.

In the American tropics legionary ants are encountered on every walk in the woods, yet the discovery of one of their queens is an entomological event. The female is wingless, an ungainly creature, blind like the workers, her abdomen greatly enlarged.

The one duty of the queen is to lay eggs, and this she does almost continually, the colony increasing in number and in strength. She may have a long life, for there is one record of a queen confined in a glass observation nest who had survived for 17 years.

Some Club Luncheon Ideas for the Puzzled Hostess

It Is a Sensible Custom to Serve at Regular Meal Hour.

Herewith is given a menu for a very simple club luncheon, to be served before the afternoon bridge. It is such a sensible custom to serve a luncheon at a regular meal hour instead of refreshments at an hour which will be so near dinner time that appetite is lost.

Another good reason for serving beforehand is that most women feel it necessary to get home before the children's supper hour, and when there is a distance to be traveled, they are anxious to leave as soon as the game is over.

As far as the hostess herself is concerned, it is usually easier for her to serve before bridge than after. She can then play her hand without worry as to whether the coffee is boiling over or the sandwiches drying out.

For a club that is original in its idea of what may be served at luncheon, the hostess of the day invited the eight members to a breakfast party served at ten o'clock. She provided melon as a fruit course and then served coffee, small baked sausages, creamed potatoes and waffles. There were plenty of waffles and they made the dessert as well when the sirup was passed.

Another woman, who had been sent a Virginia ham from her southern home, gave her guests ham and eggs and hot waffles with grapefruit as a starter.

The clever hostess does not feel that she must follow accepted formulas for refreshments for her parties, and her guests always agree with her.

Luncheon Menu.

- Chicken turnover
Celery
Pickles
Ice cream with meringues
The meringues can be bought at the bakery. As they are often rather long for an afternoon service, the small "kisses" can take their place.
Tomato Shrimp Jelly.
2 cans tomato soup
1 can boiling water
2 tablespoons gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
1/2 pound shrimps
12 stuffed olives
Heat the soup with the boiling water. Soften the gelatin in the cold water, add the soup, stir until dissolved. Arrange several shrimps to use alternately in a mold and add carefully a little of the gelatin mixture. Place on ice to harden, and repeat. A ring mold is attractive when it is turned out—and then the center can be filled with sliced cucumber mixed with whipped sour cream seasoned with onion and tarragon vinegar. When the mold is set, turn out on a platter and garnish with lettuce or romaine. Pass the sour cream dressing or mayonnaise.
Chicken Turnover.
Cut pastry into long rounds and spread with a filling made of minced cooked chicken seasoned with onion juice, salt, pepper and moistened with cream. Fold the pastry over, press edges together, brush with milk and bake about ten minutes until brown in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit).

Long Live the King! Edward Makes Promises Real Spending Ahead Tribute to T. R.

Arthur Brisbane

King Edward the Eighth, now solemnly proclaimed king, will be remembered as the first king of England that ever flew through the air toward the throne.

He took a separate oath "to respect the Church of Scotland." There is hard fighting back of that.

Edward the Eighth will mount the throne for the first time at a joint session of the lords and commons, and solemnly promise to "maintain the true intent of your enactments to the best of my powers."

After his coronation the king must formally declare his adherence to the Protestant church, and his obligation "never to marry a Roman Catholic." That dates back to the Stuarts.

King Edward, who is not supposed to contemplate marriage, is the official head of the churches of England and Scotland, and "defender of the faith."

From all the world, "subjects" of the new king and emperor send greetings. Representatives of diverse power, churches of every religion, Mohammedan, Hindu, Buddhist, Chinese, Christian and Jewish, speed the dead king on his journey and welcome the new ruler.

If the soldiers get their bonus money there will be some quick spending, enough to quicken the pulse of business while it lasts.

Merchants will get more than $600,000,000 owing on past accounts, and the observer will notice many new overcoats, dresses and automobiles.

At the opening of New York's $3,500,000 memorial erected to honor the late Theodore Roosevelt, one speaker praised President Theodore Roosevelt as one who "saw the necessity for keeping both the legislatures and the courts in his proper place."

That perception showed a high spirit, but if some future Theodore Roosevelt should go too far in that direction it might become necessary for the legislatures and the courts to keep that President in his proper place.

Gen. Robert Lee Bullard says this country expects to escape the next war, but Europe plans to drag us in. Besides air bombing and poison gas, General Bullard expects in the next war attacks with disease germs to spread deadly epidemics in the enemy's country. Bubonic plague, scattered from airplanes, infected rats scattered plentifully, might be helpful.

Sometimes literature pays. Kipling left several millions. In America alone his official publishers have sold 3,500,000 copies of his books. At the time of his death "The Jungle Books" alone paid him ten thousand pounds a year.

When you hear foolish talk about "revolution" and getting rid of the Constitution, a remark made by Washington, as he signed the Constitution, may be recalled:

"Should the states reject this excellent Constitution, the probability is that an opportunity will never again offer to cancel another in peace—the next will be drawn in blood."

Mrs. Alinda French of St. Louis, one hundred and four years old, attributes her long life to "hard work in her youth and a dutiful son in her old age." She gets along without spectacles, is "not interested" in politics. "People get over that," says she, "after they reach one hundred."

The human race gets used to everything. Once our ancestors shivered, fell flat on their faces, when lightning flashed and thunder growled. They thought some demon was after them. Now men put up lightning rods, properly grounded.

Once the comet was considered an avenging messenger aimed straight at sinful man. Today its coming and going are understood and predicted, its path marked out.

Something unpleasant is bound to start somewhere on the earth, with all the new theories, new hatreds, new armaments, new deadly weapons. It might start on the border between Russia and Japan's Manchukuo. When you read, "Russia uses force to halt Japanese," you know the explosion might come at any time.

All would regret bloodshed, but it would be historically interesting to see the ancient autocracy of the Mikado at war with the modern autocracy of Stalin. It would be a long fight, probably.

Edward VIII Becomes Ruler of the British Empire; Substitute for Unconstitutional AAA Rejected by Senate Subcommittee.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GEORGE V, king of Great Britain and emperor of India, died in Sandringham house, peacefully and painlessly, in his seventy-first year. Immediately on his passing, his eldest son, Edward Albert, who had been prince of Wales, succeeded to the throne, which by British law, is never vacant.

Next morning the state council, consisting of the queen and her four sons, which had been created by a decree which George signed a few hours before his death, proclaimed the accession of the new ruler as Edward VIII. His first official act was to notify the lord mayor of London of his father's demise.

King George, who had been on the throne almost twenty-five years, was the best loved and most democratic of the world's monarchs, always just, solicitous for the welfare of his subjects, and living a simple and almost faultless domestic and official life. The new king, a confirmed bachelor, knows his vast empire intimately, having visited practically every part of it, some regions many times. Decidedly different from his father in his tastes and ways of life, he still, as the prince of Wales, has been a great favorite of the people, and in recent years, realizing that he would soon have to mount the throne, he steamed down and took an increasing interest in the affairs of the empire. He is especially liked by the laboring classes, in whose welfare he often has shown deep sympathy. That he never married has been a disappointment to the British people. Now for the first time since the reign of William IV there is no prince of Wales.

Next in the line of succession is the king's brother, the duke of York, and second comes the duke's little daughter, Princess Elizabeth. There will be six months or more of official mourning for George's death, and Edward VIII will not be crowned for about one year.

The body of the dead ruler was removed from Sandringham house to the little church of St. Mary Magdalene in Sandringham. Thence it was to be taken to Westminster abbey, there to lie in state. Intermment is to be in the Albert Memorial chapel at Windsor, beside the tombs of George's father and mother.

THE New Deal's substitute for the unconstitutional AAA, a bill empowering the secretary of agriculture to pay farmers who co-operate voluntarily in a program of soil conservation, was introduced in congress by Senator John R. Bankhead, Democrat, and Representative Marvin Jones, Democrat, Texas. The bill was referred to a senate subcommittee. The members of the subcommittee jolted the constitutionality of the new measure and directed Secretary Wallace to write a new bill. The bill rejected by the committee stated its purposes:

1. Preservation and improvement of soil fertility.

2. Promotion of the economic use of land.

3. Diminution of exploitation and unprofitable use of national soil resources.

4. Provision for and maintenance of a continuous and stable supply of agricultural commodities adequate to meet domestic and foreign consumer requirements at prices fair to both producers and consumers.

5. Re-establishment and maintenance of farm purchasing power.

Secretary Wallace was requested to write a new act that would provide a plan of co-operation with each of the 48 states, and set up a permanent program on AAA policies. Chairman Smith, Democrat, said, "We said in effect to Secretary Wallace, 'Make it constitutional,' because we have the responsibility to pass it."

THE compromise bill providing payment of the soldier bonus, whipped through congress by crushing majorities, was passed on to the President, who is expected to veto it.

Congressional action on the measure was completed when the house voted 348 to 59 to accept the senate substitute for the bill it had previously passed. The senate vote was 74 to 18. Leaders of both houses claim they have sufficient votes to override a veto.

The original house bill did not provide a method for paying the cost of the bonus, which is estimated at $2,337,000,000. The senate suggested the issuance of the $50 "baby bonds" which will bear interest of 3 per cent annually until 1945 if the veteran elects to hold on to them.

Each veteran will receive the 1945 value of his adjusted compensation certificate in $70 bonds with a government check for odd amounts. Interest owed by veterans upon loans unpaid on their certificates is canceled, but there will be no refund of interest paid upon such loans.

THE present federal relief program, depending principally on work relief, CCC and public works, is alone costing approximately as much as the fourfold program which went before and which embraced these three items plus direct relief which has now been returned to the states, according to a study of the relief problem and the government finances by Kendall K. Hoyt in the Analyst.

For immediate purposes, at least, there is no prospect of much reduction in the rate of federal expenditure, according to Mr. Hoyt. In order to prevent the states from trooping back for more relief funds the government must keep the pledge to employ the arbitrary three and one-half millions of persons which have been carried since last November principally under WPA and CCC. In dollar terms this means that, according to budget estimates, the outlay for recovery and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, will be almost the same as that for the preceding fiscal year, namely, three billions in round numbers, or an average of 250 millions per month.

It is within expectancy, therefore, that costs to the country will reach a new high unless economic conditions improve more rapidly than can now be foreseen.

APPARENTLY "authentic" administration sources are credited according to Democrats in congress, with a report that Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, may become secretary of the treasury. It was said that Henry Morgenthau, present secretary of the treasury, may be made confidential adviser to the President.

One congressman, who keeps abreast of developments in government financial circles, said he was sure to change already has received some consideration from President Roosevelt. Another added that it was "a 100-to-1 shot that it is under consideration."

The reports were discounted to some extent, however, by the fact that the President has just renominated Jones for two more years as chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

One Democratic representative argued that on the basis of his past record Jones could carry into the treasury the respect and confidence of both business and "the man in the street." He described the RFC chairman as sufficiently liberal to command the support of liberal elements and yet not leaning so far in that direction as to alarm conservatives.

PREMIER NESSIM PASHA, weary of his job since the anti-British riots started November 13, has handed the resignation of his cabinet to King Fuad I. The resignation was accepted.

Nessim found it exhausting to keep an equilibrium between the conflicting forces of the throne, the British residence, the nationalists and their compatriots. But the final blow, dealt him by the British government at London, was the thinly veiled ultimatum to Egyptian Nationalism, in the form of verbal instructions for negotiations for an Angli-Egyptian treaty. The sting to Egyptian pride was in the warning that if the present negotiations fail, the British consider their hands will be free and will revise their Egyptian policy.

FACTORY sales of automobiles manufactured in the United States rose to 467,804 in December, bringing the year's total to 4,909,488, the Department of Commerce reports. The total compares with 2,753,111 in 1934. At the same time the department reported an increase of $7,488,914 in exports of automotive products during the month of November from the preceding month. November auto exports reached a valuation of $22,403,722. This is the peak figure for any corresponding month since 1929, when the export total amounted to $27,129,903.

AFTER several months of governmental stability Premier Laval has handed to Albert Lebrun, president of France, the resignation of the entire cabinet. Leaders expressed fear of a financial crisis.

The radical Socialists: Minister of State Edouard Herriot, Minister of Commerce George Bonnet, Minister of Mercantile Marine William Bertrand, and Minister of Interior Joseph Paganon, composed a letter of resignation condemning the domestic and foreign policies of Laval. Their colleagues, Minister of Finance Marcel Regnier and Minister of Pensions Maupiol, refused to sign, declaring they would resign only with the cabinet as a whole. The Nationalist Minister of State, Louis Marin, also dissented from the resignation.

Laval, informed of what was going on, handed the president the resignation of the entire cabinet.

Washington—Headline hunting—a term originated by the distinguished writer, Floyd Gibbons—has long been a senatorial pastime. It is a practice, a game, which has been used by some senators over and over again to obtain for themselves personal publicity, usually at the expense of private interests which always is smeared in senatorial investigations whether justified or not.

Lately, however, headline hunting, as a pastime, took an awful blow on the chin. And when headline hunting was the recipient of a flare-back from the senate figures in the whirlpool of the senate. Probably one of the senators was largely responsible for the terrific explosion that took place and he caught the full force and effect of his own statements as they came in reverse gear.

The incident to which I refer occurred in connection with the investigation of munitions makers and bankers by Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, and the special committee of which he is chairman. This investigation has gone on for some fifteen months and has cost approximately $183,000, $98,000 of which came out of funds appropriated to feed the hungry of New York city. It has disclosed some questionable practices by some of the small dealers in munitions. But as a whole, I believe the consensus in Washington is that Mr. Nye's investigation, called a fishing expedition by many newspaper correspondents, has added little or nothing of a constructive character.

Once before in these columns I reported to you how Senator Nye was proceeding about the country making speeches in which he charged munitions makers and international bankers and even aircraft and shipbuilders with being instrumental in promoting war. Indeed, he asserted numerous times that bankers and munitions makers had forced the United States into the World war. He and investigators, employed by the committee, were constantly engaged in telling capital correspondents of terrible things which they mulled through private files of banks and business houses. These brought plenty of headlines, but now that the munitions investigation is virtually over, one can hardly agree in making an appraisal of the committee's work that the charges have been substantiated.

Senator Nye is an advocate of peace and he had many opportunities, therefore, to appear in the roll of a peace leader in speeches before various organizations interested. It developed, however, that he received honoraria, gifts of money or fees, for the speeches.

But to get back to the headline hunting and how it flared back, the climax of the munitions inquiry was the investigation of the gigantic New York financial house of J. P. Morgan and company. It was while the Morgan partners were on the witness stand that the explosion came—and it did not involve Morgan in any way. The incident around which the storm blew hardest came when Senator Clark of Missouri, a son of the distinguished late Speaker Clark, read into the committee record documents showing how President Wilson had diplomatically evaded informing a senate committee of the existence of treaties among the allies by which there would be a division of the colonies of Germany and Austria-Hungary if the allies won the World war. Subsequently, documents showed that Mr. Wilson was aware of those treaties and when this was disclosed, Senator Nye charged in a committee hearing that Mr. Wilson had falsified the records.

There followed the explosion. Word reached the floor of the senate, then in session, and Senator Connolly, Texas Democrat, blew off the lid. He openly accused Senator Nye of besmirching the names of Mr. Wilson and the late Secretary of State Lansing, and charged at the same time that the North Dakota senator was a publicity seeker.

Senator Clark was criticized also and the inference was cast out in the vicious senate debate that the Missouri senator was indirectly biased because his father had lost the Presidential nomination to Mr. Wilson in that famous and bitter 1912 Democratic convention. Thus Senator Clark got caught in the mess but not to such an extent as did Senator Nye because Senator Glass, the Virginia Democrat and a leader in the Wilson administration, also took up the cudgels and lambasted the youthful North Dakotan without the names of Mr. Wilson and Senator George of Georgia, both stalwart Democrats, withdrew from the Nye committee proceedings. In doing so they read a statement explaining their position which, though tactful, was none the less direct in expressing their dissatisfaction.

In the meantime, the Morgan partners, headed by J. P. Morgan himself, in the witness chairs with nothing to do. They sat for three days with virtually no questions being put to them.

From their standpoint, I believe their climactic appearance as witnesses was quite fitting. The committee that had started out with bales and bales of records from which the investigators were going to prove how terrible was the House of Morgan had found it was giving them a rather clean bill of health. They found that the committee, instead of proving that they had brought on the war, was proving for the House of Morgan that it had served the United States government; that its policies were of more value to this country than they ever had been publicly shown to be before and that in the end they had enabled the governments of Great Britain and France to maintain their strength and fight off the Central Powers until the men and money from the United States were brought into play.

Through the long years that J. P. Morgan and company has operated in New York, the name has been synonymous with Wall Street. It was synonymous with Wall Street because demagogues and those politicians who profit by baiting big business as a popular sport had created that impression. Always when it was profitable for a representative or senator to conjure up a picture to win votes for himself you could find allusions to the "mighty power of Morgan."

It will be recalled how in recent years two former senators, Brookhart, Republican of Iowa, and Hefflin, Democrat of Alabama, made nice meat of the "money changers of Wall Street." Always, the "money changers" were headed up by the house of Morgan. I mention these two former senators because their attacks are typical. There are those in the senate today who do the same thing and for exactly the same purposes.

The committee investigation of the House of Morgan showed that the institution had profited by acting as commercial agents for the allies and that in handling about three billion dollars in purchases of wheat, cotton, coal, oil, shells and other munitions of war for the allies, a commission of 1 per cent had been paid to the House of Morgan. The inquiry also revealed the extent to which Morgan and company had taken bonds of the French and British governments and had sold them here. Evidence showed that after the United States entered the war, the United States government took over the job of financing those nations whose business and financial transactions had been handled by the House of Morgan prior to April 6, 1917.

So, the munitions investigation, instead of smearing the House of Morgan, apparently has told for the first time the details of how it functioned during a period when the United States government could do nothing, a period when the vast majority of our citizens were proved to have been sympathetic with the allies against the central powers.

At the outset I said this investigation had flared back on its sponsors. Time alone will tell how significant this explosion has been, and time alone will disclose whether it will have the effect of reducing the number of senatorial excursions into the affairs of private business.

The senate has vast powers and they are susceptible to abuse. There are many untrained students of government who hold the conviction that there have been unwarranted investigations by the senate and that these investigations amount to persecution of private business. Obviously, some inquiries have turned up real dirt. Take the oil scandal that came out of the Harding administration, for example. The facts in that conspiracy probably never would have been disclosed except for the vigorous job done by the late Senator Walsh, Montana Democrat. There are other illustrations of the truth of the statement that some investigations are valuable. On the other hand, it seems to me that headline hunting as such, represents a game somewhat outside of the rules of fair play.

If the bitter feeling that was developed from the situation centering around President Wilson's war-time action serves as a lesson for the future I feel sure that there will be fewer senatorial inquiries. It shows, or ought to show, that there should be some basis established before a senate committee goes whole hog after the hides of any business men, whether they be great or small.

Cactus in Ethiopia Came From Somewhere in America

American barbed wire manufacturers are said to be refusing orders from the belligerent powers in Africa. But something from America, almost as wicked, was at the front long before Romans and Ethiopians began taking pot-shots and spear-jabs at each other. Cactus in Ethiopian war zone. Machine-gun nests are shown flanked or half-jointed prickly pear plants of flat-spines—menacing alike to Italian uniforms and Ethiopian chameaux, beneath them.

All true species of cactus are of American origin. The prickly plants were unknown in the Old world before the voyages of Columbus. But once cacti were introduced from Mexico and South America they became established all around the Mediterranean shores in amazingly quick time, and from there they spread throughout the dry lowlands of northeast Africa and southern Asia, until now they seem normal, native parts of the landscape.

Birth of Holmes.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Boston's famous physician, author and wit, father of the late Justice of the same name, was born August 29, 1809, and it seems that when born, he was treated as but a mere trifling incident by his own father. For, on the leaf of an old almanac, opposite the date, August 29, his father put an asterisk, and at the foot of the page, "S. S. B." and that is all.

Sunrise in the Virgin Islands.

Early risers in the Virgin Islands see the sun come up at the moment people see it set in the Philippines.

From their standpoint, I believe their climactic appearance as witnesses was quite fitting. The committee that had started out with bales and bales of records from which the investigators were going to prove how terrible was the House of Morgan had found it was giving them a rather clean bill of health. They found that the committee, instead of proving that they had brought on the war, was proving for the House of Morgan that it had served the United States government; that its policies were of more value to this country than they ever had been publicly shown to be before and that in the end they had enabled the governments of Great Britain and France to maintain their strength and fight off the Central Powers until the men and money from the United States were brought into play.

Through the long years that J. P. Morgan and company has operated in New York, the name has been synonymous with Wall Street. It was synonymous with Wall Street because demagogues and those politicians who profit by baiting big business as a popular sport had created that impression. Always when it was profitable for a representative or senator to conjure up a picture to win votes for himself you could find allusions to the "mighty power of Morgan."

It will be recalled how in recent years two former senators, Brookhart, Republican of Iowa, and Hefflin, Democrat of Alabama, made nice meat of the "money changers of Wall Street." Always, the "money changers" were headed up by the house of Morgan. I mention these two former senators because their attacks are typical. There are those in the senate today who do the same thing and for exactly the same purposes.

The committee investigation of the House of Morgan showed that the institution had profited by acting as commercial agents for the allies and that in handling about three billion dollars in purchases of wheat, cotton, coal, oil, shells and other munitions of war for the allies, a commission of 1 per cent had been paid to the House of Morgan. The inquiry also revealed the extent to which Morgan and company had taken bonds of the French and British governments and had sold them here. Evidence showed that after the United States entered the war, the United States government took over the job of financing those nations whose business and financial transactions had been handled by the House of Morgan prior to April 6, 1917.

So, the munitions investigation, instead of smearing the House of Morgan, apparently has told for the first time the details of how it functioned during a period when the United States government could do nothing, a period when the vast majority of our citizens were proved to have been sympathetic with the allies against the central powers.

At the outset I said this investigation had flared back on its sponsors. Time alone will tell how significant this explosion has been, and time alone will disclose whether it will have the effect of reducing the number of senatorial excursions into the affairs of private business.

The senate has vast powers and they are susceptible to abuse. There are many untrained students of government who hold the conviction that there have been unwarranted investigations by the senate and that these investigations amount to persecution of private business. Obviously, some inquiries have turned up real dirt. Take the oil scandal that came out of the Harding administration, for example. The facts in that conspiracy probably never would have been disclosed except for the vigorous job done by the late Senator Walsh, Montana Democrat. There are other illustrations of the truth of the statement that some investigations are valuable. On the other hand, it seems to me that headline hunting as such, represents a game somewhat outside of the rules of fair play.

WOMEN ARE NOT SO "EASY" AS MEN IN FLATTERY GAME

"What do you think of the claim that women like admiration and flattery as much as men and are no less fools than men in the hands of one of the other sex who uses that method of getting into their good graces?"

I think our reader has hit upon an important truth in the relationship of the sexes.

I do not doubt for one moment that women like admiration as much as men—that is admiration from the other sex. Indeed I believe this is in a way a more important factor with women than with men.

It is not that women like flattery less, but they have more difficulty than men in putting entirely to sleep their intelligence and common sense!

SYNOPSIS

Kerry Young, a lad of seven, is prepared to flee the burning lumber camp of his benefactor, Jack Snow, who took the youngster to live with him at the death of Kerry's mother. Tod West has instructed Kerry to come with a file containing the camp's records should it be endangered. Flames attack the office, and Kerry, hugging the precious file, and Tod race to town. Tod acts queerly. At the bank the file is found empty and Kerry is blamed with taking the wrong one. Snow, his headquarters and money gone, is ruined, and soon thereafter dies, leaving Kerry to the Poor Commissioner. Kerry suspects Tod and swears to even the score. In a St. Paul office Kerry, now in manhood, and an expert woodsman, learns of the whereabouts of West. Kerry rescues a lovely girl from a scoundrel, who proves to be West. Tod threatens to pauperize the girl, Nan Downer.

"Smart," echoed Young, and looked down at her. Her face was averted and a flush stained her cheeks. "Whatever a girl says to a stranger who has helped her out of a situation that's at once uncomfortable and, perhaps, dangerous... whatever is to be said, I should say to you." She was fighting desperately for self-control. "I... I'm very grateful. Is there more to be said?"

"That wasn't necessary," he replied. "Not even that. It was quite a privilege to throw Tod West into the river." He reached out to take the line from Tip. "Good dog," he muttered. "Go ashore and shake." The girl had turned toward him. "You know Tod West?"

"A long time ago I thought I did. And for a good many years I've wondered how well anyone in that country knew him. But just on suspicion, it was good to suspect him. I believe," he added, "that he ruined the best friend I shall ever have."

"So I'm not the first! After all that he's seemed to be with us, he has a past, has he? ... And a future too, perhaps," bitterly. "I took it, from his parting shot, that he had some devilry foot."

"Devilry?"—in an angered whisper. "Was it just because I happened along and took a hand that he's going to make you a pauper?" She shook her head. "No. That moment when you came. It was after I wouldn't... I wouldn't barter myself to save my property that he seemed to lose his head; that he became quite something else from what we've always thought him to be."

The boat grated on sand and Kerry sat down, looking hard at her. "I have a particular and peculiar interest in this bird. A man doesn't change, you know; if he's a rascal today, he was yesterday; if he is today, he will be tomorrow."

"Do you mind telling a stranger what this West's game is? I don't want to pry, but..." "You're not prying. It is little enough for me to tell you. I'm in your debt, you know. Yours and Tod West's!"

She stretched one pac-clad foot so the warm sun could dry it better and appeared to ponder on where to begin. "It's better to give you the whole picture, I suppose. I'm Nan Downer. I came into this country four years ago with my father. Maybe you've heard of him? Cash Downer? No?" She sighed.

Then, one November night, my father was killed and the money he was bringing out to pay to Tod West was stolen. "Murdered, you mean?" "Murdered," she said lowly and paused. "That, of course, put the undertaking in a bad way. Just now it's very difficult to refinance a timber operation of any sort; also it's hard to find men with money to spend on their expensive toys, which is what these camps will amount to, if and when the plan develops. Tod West seemed very sympathetic, though, and told me to take my time and that he wouldn't see me lose."

"But this summer he commenced to hint and then to ask and then to crowd. He has other timber. He has had to stop a big pulp operation because of the market. He needs money. I am doing my best to interest prospects and get the cash together to pay him but so far I haven't had much luck..."

"And then today he followed me up here and said... said that if I would marry him he would forget that..." She bit her lip and stopped. Young drew a hand slowly along one thigh. It was a gesture almost of satisfaction and he nodded slowly. "That checks with the guess I've had... as to the sort of bird he really is."

"When you wouldn't agree to that?" The girl gave a shuddering shrug. "You saw a part of it. He seemed to go insane and then I realized that all along, for months, perhaps for years, he's been... well, thinking things about me..."

"Where were you, anyhow, that you saw?" "Up above. At the head of the rapid. I was just going to—" "But you didn't carry? Why?"—startled—"you mean you ran Dead Bear?"

"If that's what you call the rapid, I did." He laughed at the astonishment in her eyes. "You ran that water to help me, a stranger?" His laughter rose higher. "I'd have sworn it to help anybody if I'd known Tod West was the party making trouble!"

"Then you must have known him far better than most people here do." "Quite a figure, is he?" She considered. "A... a king, in this country! He owns most of it. Most of the people in it are dependent on him, in one way or another. He isn't a man to take lightly."

"Then I sure am glad it was the Mad Woman I picked out this summer!" The girl eyed him curiously. "You're just going through, then? Your objective wasn't near here?" "I have no objective when I put in. Now, I have. I've a question. I want answered. When I've done that, then perhaps I can go on."

He rose. "You're shy an oar, aren't you?" he asked, glancing at the one in the boat's bottom. He turned to Tip, locking himself ashore. "Here, boy!" The dog leaped up attentively. Young picked up the oar. "Oar gone, boy! Fetched the oar!" He waved a hand down stream and the dog, rigid, eyed him. "If there's no objective when I put in, however, he plunged into the stream, head high, searching the surface."

Kerry was conscious as he stood there watching Tip go about his errand that the girl's eyes were on him. He turned and perceived a look of admiration on her face. "There! He's found it!" Nan cried. Tip was straining back through the screen of low hanging alder branches, blade of the oar in his jaws. "If you're going to stay on here," she said, "we'd be glad to put you up. We have accommodations for fishermen, you know. It's part of our job. That's why I'm here, now. Two of our prospects are fishing the heavier pond up the creek,—nodding toward a small tributary which debouched above them. "That is why I happened to be here."

"Nice of you. But I've my tent. Shingles and windows bother me." He drew his canoe close to the skiff as Tip approached. "The latch string will be out, though. Please believe that I'm truly thankful for all you've done."

Kerry remarked as he stepped into his canoe that the flush lingered in her face; also, that the high color became her superbly.

cately for trout that began to rise as the sun touched the tops of swamps timber to the westward. He shared his supper with Tip, washed his few dishes in the stream, scoured them bright with sand, cleaned on a jacket which matched his shirt and breeches of forest's green and lighting a straight-stemmed pipe, and for a time watched the afterglow fade. "You watch camp, Tip," he said as he rose abruptly. "We'll go see... what we can see!"

He launched his canoe, paddled across and up the murmuring river and landed under the bank where yellow lights showed through the gathering darkness. The white front of the town's largest store loomed above and he stood outside a brief interval, looking about. This was the heart of Tod West's dominion, West's Landing by name. It was here that the man had established himself as a king, here he, perhaps, had laid the foundations for a kingdom on the money that he had taken from Jack Snow by ruthlessly clever theft. He drew a deep breath and entered the place.

The store was well filled. An Indian was buying grub and stuffing his purchases into a pack-sack; a bearded man was trying on shoes; before the small post office wicket two men and a little girl awaited the deliberate service of the beefy-faced man within. In the rear, a stud game was in progress. Kerry's eyes picked out these details quickly and then fastened on the back of the one card player whose face, at least in part, was not revealed to him. The man was Tod West.

Several loungers watched the game and as Young leaned idly against the counter two of them left and came toward him. "Jim shouldn't be in there," one muttered. "Hell, no!" his companion agreed. "You can bet your life if I had a kid in the shape his is, I wouldn't be stacking 'n' what little I had against a lucky dog like Tod."

"You Ran That Water to Help Me, a Stranger?"

The taller man resumed: "Doc's out now, ain't he?" The other nodded. "Over at Jim's. They sent for Jim but he put 'em off. He's bent stayin' in the game. He's been losin', lately, 'nd seems to be havin' a run of luck again. Wants to get even, I expect."

Young lounged toward the rear and took up a position against the wall, behind and to one side of West's chair. Five were in the game. West was dealing and talked as he distributed the cards. "An ace to you, a nine to you, a deuce for Jimmy, a jack for Sawyer and nine to the dealer... which bets him out?"

His voice was good-humored, tolerant, the sort of voice that wins the confidence of men. Always, that had been characteristic, Young thought. Back yonder through the years, men had liked the then young Tod West. Jack Snow had trusted him implicitly. He folded his hand, now, and awaited the betting. One of the players chanced a dollar, his companion Sawyer, Jim raised five and the man, Tod West, shoving the deck to the dealer, lighted a cigar with a hand which was not just steady.

A change came over the play, too. Of a sudden, it was more intent, a seasoning of savagery in the betting put there by West's sudden silence and the sharpness of his gestures. Kerry played cautiously. His luck was not good. Through the first half dozen deals he stayed only once after the second card. Jim Hinkle, at his left, lost repeatedly and, losing, his tension increased.

In a new game, a strange game, a man with wit watches everything. So Young watched Tod West's hands. His eyes never left Tod West's hands as the man dealt but despite the fact that he detected nothing to arouse suspicion there he passed tens, back to back, and let Jim Hinkle fight it out with West. Jim lost again and, thumping his bills, muttered savagely: "Back where I started tonight." Kerry stayed for the first time. He won and laughed. He had won with fines. The line of spades, his hole card, had a bent corner. He remarked that.

West began to talk again, making an obvious attempt to resume his banter which had been soured by Young's dealing. He succeeded badly. "Tod and Hinkle clashed again; Hinkle won. A few moments later, he lost most of what he had gained. West was watching him closely, Young observed."

Again Young studied those faces about the table. Sycophants, most of them; they were fixed eyes as Tod West kept up his talk. Their interest was on what he said, not on what he did. "What, Sawyer? A whole buck on the queen? Let's see, now... Hum,"—peeking at his hole card. "Well, I've got just enough here to string along." He came in for his dollar and again called the cards he turned and once more that top card kept sliding back and forth over its changing neighbors.

Three cards in each hand were face up, then. Again Sawyer bet his queen, tossing in a five-dollar bill from the little pile of money before him. "Now, I'll help build a pot for you, Sawyer," said West. "Leave it to old Tod! There's a five-spot. But don't do too much faith in women. I'm tellin' you, don't trust 'em or bet too high on 'em!"

He chuckled but there was no mirth in the sound, Kerry thought. He judged that Sawyer had another queen in the hole; he was the aggressor and a bit too aggressive for a man with only the high card showing. No pair was in sight; the queen dominated the board. Before Tod West were exposed an innocuous four and five and nine-spot of three suits.

Jim Hinkle and another had dropped out. "So we spin 'em for the final heat," drawled West. "We drop a jack to you, neighbor, and Sawyer catches himself a six and I... Take a look! I draw myself a large ball of fire!" The top card had finally dropped. It was the ace of diamonds and Kerry straightened slowly. West's hole card had been dealt from the bottom; surely, it was another ace!

"Now, with this large ace showin', it puts the bet to me, I take it... Hum... Sawyer, you got a queen showin' and you're proud of her. I wonder what else, if any, you've got... But this old ace of mine... Now, it'd be a downright insult to bet less 'n ten dollars."

The tourist folded and Sawyer eyed Tod's hand. He was breathing just a bit rapidly, Kerry noted, and fingered his remaining bills in a manner which proved him ill at ease. "But me, I got only eight bucks left, Tod," he said. "Then I'd be pretty sure I had something before I used 'em. Honest, Sawyer,—with a grin—"I'd stay out until I was sure I had 'em."

But that was no sincere advice. It was a goading, an invitation, a challenge. He knew his man. "All right! For the eight, then, call!" Sawyer shoved in his money and turned his hole card. "Pair!" he said, showing the second queen, and leaned forward.

"I warned you," chuckled West. "I told you to stay out. All along, I had him." He turned the ace of clubs. The man rubbed his chin. "Well," he said, "guess I better. That cleans me out, as the feller said. It just ain't my night, I guess."

"So you're leavin' us flat, Sawyer?" put in West. "Four handed's not so good. Anybody else want to try his luck just to keep the game goin'?" "It's too rich for my blood!" a youth giggled.

"Anybody else? Last call!" He looked up and around, grinning, and the grin changed, ran into a stiff sort of grimace as Kerry Young moved out from his position against the wall. "If the game's open," he said, "I don't mind trying my luck now and again."

Eyes were on him, not on Tod; so the group missed one half the exchange of glances which followed. Emotion chased emotion across the older man's eyes: surprise, hatred, chagrin and a malevolent sort of inspiration; one after the other they flickered against those gray depths. "Why, sure," Tod said but could not keep the grudging quality from his tone.

Young moved, then, to the chair just vacated by Sawyer, seated himself and, thrusting a hand inside his shirt, drew a packet of bills from his money belt. A change had come over the place. The onlookers had ceased their idle talk; the two fishermen from Nan Downer eyed Young appraisingly and Tod West, shoving the deck to the dealer, lighted a cigar with a hand which was not just steady.

Find 800-Year-Old "Bow!" Where Games Were Played Discovery of a large oval "bow" where prehistoric America's exciting games were played 800 years ago is announced at Flagstaff, Ariz., by Dr. Harold S. Colton of the Museum of Northern Arizona. The discovery, pronounced amazing, was made in northern Arizona near Flagstaff, by a joint expedition of the Museum and Arizona State Teachers College of Flagstaff, led by J. C. McGregor.

The find surprises archeologists, because never before has it been realized that ball games—national sport of Mayas, Aztecs, and other Indians of Mexico—were popular over so wide an area of ancient America. The game court now excavated is an oval bowl about 100 feet long and 45 feet wide, with slightly pointed ends. The sloping sides, Doctor Colton said, must have been seven or eight feet high, and the floor was level. A goal was made of four rocks in the floor.—Science Service.

McIntyre Sees 1936 as Year of Super-Thrills The year 1936 is going to be one of super-thrills and vast excitements. The most exciting, I firmly believe, we shall ever live through. Old nations may die and new nations may be born. Europe may be in flames, and unless we watch our step, we may find ourselves tinder in the consuming blaze.

I'd like to be the medium of transparency for a little more sweetness and light but I don't like the looks of things. To me it's a black picture and the only consolation I can offer is that I'm usually wrong.—O. O. McIntyre in Cosmopolitan.

Watch Your Posture; Has Vast Influence in Health

"How you feel, how much you get out of life and how long you live depends to a surprising degree on the proper functioning of your vital organs, and their health is largely controlled by your posture—at any rate, improper posture will crowd or dislocate internal organs and interfere with functional efficiency. Many mysterious ailments are traceable to this, says Rex Beach in Cosmopolitan. He passes on these tips regarding posture from Dr. Stanley Green, who has worked them out according to the principles of "body mechanics." Don't sit on the feet. It twists the pelvis, and may eventually produce a postural spinal curve. Sit with weight on base of pelvis, leaning forward from the hips, knees not crossed, head up.

At the office, don't slump with weight on base of spine or middle of back or with feet elevated. It crowds the vertebrae and causes eye strain, headache, neuritis, lame back and other ills. Sit well back in chair, weight on the buttocks, head up. If necessary to lean forward, bend at hips—not at neck or waist. Standing with weight on one leg causes a pelvic twist, spinal curvature, and flattening of the arch. Stand with weight on both legs, broad erect, feet parallel or slightly turned out.

It is Stylish, Ah! Nothing in clothes, feminine or masculine, that is recommended merely because it is sensible, ever becomes the vogue.

BEGIN THE New Year RIGHT

By Placing Your Advertisements in The DAVIE RECORD

The Paper That The People Read.

For more than 36 years this paper has been going into the homes of the best people in Davie county. Many of those who don't subscribe, borrow their neighbor's paper, for when we make a mistake they are the first to tell us about it.

Your father and your grandfather read The Record and carried their ads with us. There is but one business firm in Mocksville today that was here when this paper was founded--C. C. Sanford Sons Co. They were among our first advertisers, and have continued with us for all these years. The merchant who advertises is the merchant who gets the most business. This fact was demonstrated during the Christmas season. The local stores were visited frequently, and the ones who advertised were the ones who had to employ extra salespeople to take care of the rush.

If You Haven't

Been advertising in your local papers in the past, why not turn over a new leaf and give them a trial. The cost is cheap and the results will surprise you. Write or phone us, and we will be glad to call and talk the matter over with you.

Make So Many Laws They Can't Count 'Em

The Administrator for Industrial Recovery, during the first year of the life of the National Industrial Recovery Act, issued about 3,000 administrative orders approving or modifying codes and covering other activities under the operation of that law. A special committee of the American Bar Association reported that in addition to the 3,000 administrative orders during that year, numerous regulations were to be found among about 6,000 press releases.

During the second year of the National Industrial Recovery Act so many thousands of administrative orders and regulations of various kinds were issued that the officials confess their inability either to estimate the total or to segregate them in groups. The American Bar Association committee estimated that the NRA alone produced more than 10,000 pages of administrative "law" in a single year.

NEWS OF LONG AGO. More Gossip From 293.

What Was Happening in Davie Before the Days of Automobiles and Rolled Hoses.

Davie Record, Feb. 10, 1915.)

L. Sheek made a business trip to Winston Monday.

Mrs. W. W. Stroud, of Winston, visiting relatives here this week.

M. Call, of Asheville, came in Monday night to spend a few days at home folks.

Miss Blanche Click, of Statesville, was in town with her mother, Mrs. T. F. Ratledge.

Miss Louise Williams, a student at Salem College, spent the week-end with her parents.

Mrs. Swannie McBride, of Waynesville, spent last week in town with her sister, Mrs. Boone Stone.

Miss Mattie Sterling, of Winston, was in town Saturday and Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Willie Smith.

Miss Bernice Wilson is spending a few days in Winston with her mother, Mrs. J. P. Cloaninger.

Miss Brandy Foster and her mother, Mrs. Brenegar, spent the day in town with home folks.

Miss Nicholson and little son, of Mocksville, were in town Sunday on their way to visit relatives at Wilmington.

G. Allen has purchased the new ice market near the depot.

Unknown parties broke into the store Sunday night and stole one gallon of liquor, some tobacco and some other things. This is the first time the store has been robbed since Christmas.

E. Clodfelter, who has been visiting relatives in the county for the past month, left Wednesday for Asheville, where he has a position with the Southern Railroad.

Thomas Cartner, of Kappa, was in town Thursday on his way home to Winston, where he went to see some tobacco. The weed is selling at the lowest price in many months.

The above title is really a misnomer, it is cold hard facts which the reporter is about to report.

We had been threatened for weeks with a visit from the powers that be from Raleigh, and Winston and Salisbury. We were determined to do every thing that we knew and that any one else knew to make a hit with those women.

Accordingly, on New Year's morning, one of our accommodating men friends crossed our threshold before we dared to enter. We cooked our pot of peas in the work room, and realized too late that we had omitted the dime. The attendant calamity which that oversight might have caused was remedied by crossing our fingers when we ate the peas.

We thank Mrs. Marsh Horn for loaning us the saucers and spoons. Every afternoon we swept the dirt just a little further under the counters, and placed the very best and prettiest garments on the tops of the various piles. Having thus fortified ourselves, we resumed our normal routine and awaited in suspense the day of doom. It came. And as per schedule the most inopportune unexpected time.

Not one cob web, not one grain of dirt escaped those X-ray eyes. We know now why they have they have their jobs. And would you believe it? They passed those beautiful and perfect garments on top with a casual glance (those women have bought peaches and strawberries in the crate room many times to be fooled) and delved to the bottom bringing up the only dress in which the hem was not up to standard; the only boy's suit on which the pockets had not been placed with a carpenter's square. (One of the workers told the supervisor later that she felt so sorry for her, she thought she was going to faint!)

Not one of our skeletons but was brought out into the open and dusted. We recovered quickly, rallied our forces, remembered our manners, and invited them to sit and visit in our nice easy chairs around our fire for a friendly visit. (Have you ever tested a goods box for its merits in lieu for a chair? It is wonderful especially if upholstered with a pillow stuffed with scraps. But for pure solid comfort we recommend kegs. Just plain nail kegs.) Under such auspicious circumstances even the most austere official must thaw out. They did, said a few kind words, gave numerous orders and departed. We got busy immediately on some of those orders, and now our room has lovely green print draperies at all of the windows, and heavy curtains all across the back of the room, behind which fuel, packing cases, cleaning equipment etc., are hid.

We still believe in Santa Claus, here at the end of Jan and we believe that he rides up and down the highways in a bright blue truck, and that he never passes without leaving something for which we have asked him and then some. Brand new Singer sewing machines, bolts of the gaisest security gingham, yards and yards of the brightest prints, cases of outing, and even that is pretty, and the pride of the room—a gorgeous black metal First-Aid kit! Every woman has vowed her intention of running a machine needle through her finger to have the privilege of being the first to use the kit. So far the courage has been purely mental. Sight of sights! One afternoon recently every woman with some part of her body all bandaged up in the most approved manner. Oh no, not even a minor accident, just the supervisor and pattern cutter demonstrating what they had learned in First-Aid classes. They can hardly wait to try out the artificial respiration, but have about decided to save that for disciplinary measures, since corporal punishment is frowned upon by our superiors.

Just at this point in walked Mr. Frick. He always comes stepping in with an interesting-looking package under his arm and a smile on his face. No matter how gloomy he finds us, he never fails to leave sunshine behind. He is the paymaster, you know.

Down Fork Church and Coolemees way they are making the most beautiful quilts and busy with gowns and dresses for the missus age. These projects are small but quality of their work makes up for the quantity of numbers.

In all of the county there has been but one absent this period. And she had to come down with that becoming ailment known as amumps. The supervisor asked the women if they would like to write a letter to her. With one accord the answer was "Yes." The paper was passed from machine to machine and each person made characteristic contribution. One wrote "Dear Mrs.— I am sewing on a machine." For the very first time in her life. She started on a slip made from the waste basket, she had it completed at the end of a long tiresome day and the supervisor told her she could have it for her baby. Do you wonder at her message? She made slips until she knew them by heart, and to let her rest, she is now making pillow slips. The next thing in her education will be an outing gown for an infant. One budding artist drew as her message a picture of the victim with the mumps.

The supervisor was struggling with another one who said that all of the sewing she had ever done was hemming sheets and pillow cases. That woman put in and took out one whole day. The whole personnel was so sorry for her they would gladly have made the garment, but that's not the style everyone must finish what he begins. Finally in desperation she said, Mrs. Mac "my stomach hurts." Of course she was allowed to stop that job until the next day when she really made that gown. Now she has a machine all by herself.

We are keeping a register of our visitors. One of whom went away and sent us a box full of new patterns. Were we proud? We are planning to have a fashion show in the near future. We want to have a fashion show in the near future. We want to have some of the children in town to model our garments.

Once every two weeks the law requires a written report which is known as "The Physical Progress Report." On this is enumerated every article made, how many hours and which kind of labor were required in the making (there are four classes of labor.) Taking a tip from this we have what we are pleased to call "the Mental Progress Report." Every once in so often different ones are asked what she thinks of the work room, what improvements could she suggest, is she learning any thing, what would she like to learn to learn to make etc. As a result, if any woman has a pattern from which she wants a dress made, she can bring that pattern, the pattern cutter helps her to cut a dress by it, (property of the shop) but she knows how to cut hers and how it will look when made, the changes in size and so on. Once a week the Sunday school lesson is taught—and so it goes, each day brim full of work, new interests, fun, pleasures, pathos, but life is made up of all these different ingredients, and come they must, and it is the ambition of 293 to meet each issue with chin up.

We take this opportunity to thank the Enterprise and the Record for publishing so liberally our items.

Two Sides To Old Age Plan.

We have been pulling for some sort of an old-age pension plan, not necessarily, however, the Townsend plan, which seems to be a little too big for our small comprehensive powers and ways of figuring things. This newspaper holds that after a man has done 65 years of work he is entitled to rest and take life easy, regardless of the fact that there have been diverse conditions which preclude his having sufficient income to have enabled him to store up for the "rainy days" of old age.

But we are bound to give more than passing notice to the "other side", especially when it is presented by the nationally known editorial writer, Bruce Catton. Humanitarian thoughts prompt us more than the "better business" side of the question to be on the pro side of the old age pensioners.

Bruce Catton, writing in The Hendersonville News, while agreeing with our line of thought that there ought to be some provision for the old people looks at the "better business" side like this: "Suppose that you have 10 persons earning $100 a month each. Their mass purchasing power is $1000 a month.

"Suppose, now, that these people are taxed $10 a month each to pay a $100 pension to an eleventh person. This person now has $100 a month in purchasing power which he did not have before. "But it is not new purchasing power; it is offset by the $10 which has been knocked off the monthly purchasing power of each of the other 10 persons. Total monthly purchasing power of the 11 is the same as that of the original 10—$1000. The gain in purchasing power is nothing.

"It is the same, Flynn asserts in a wider field. The Townsend plan would put some $19,000,000,000 worth of annual purchasing power in the hands of the aged; taxes to provide these pensions would take $19,000,000,000 in purchasing power away from the wage-earners.

"In the end, we would be right where we started. We would simply be taking in one another's washing on a national scale."—Breard Times.

World Peace: It's Price.

World peace, ladies and gentlemen, has its price; if you want it you must buy it. As 1936 opens up one cannot help but observe the threats of war that dot the face of the globe or ignore the feverish haste of nations to arm themselves. The world is far from international peace even if all of us recognize the danger to civilization itself that a new war entails.

The people of the United States, as a whole, applauded the recent utterance of President Roosevelt insofar as it dwelt upon our neutrality and endeavors to keep out of another armed struggle. Appreciating fully the peril of useless and senseless combat, the great loss that it causes and the human suffering that accompanies it, our people have firmly resolved not to become embroiled in the warfare of other peoples. By this means, they hope to remain without war altogether.

Be Honest With The Public For Once.

From Raleigh comes the prediction that the 1937 general assembly may repeal the sales tax and then turn around and re-enact it in "invisible" form, "so that the merchants cannot constantly remind the public of it and thus keep sentiment stirred up against it."

The tax, in its new form would be a sort of "privilege tax" on all retail merchants, based probably on 3 per cent on all their purchases from wholesalers and manufacturers on the bases of their invoices, and this levy they would be expected to pass on to their customers, costing them nothing more than the trouble they now have of acting as unpaid collectors for the State of North Carolina.

State officials continue to be much concerned over the fact that the merchant insists on concealing the sales tax as a separate item instead of covering it up in the purchase price. Why should Governor Ehringhaus' sales taxers fret about a but this? Are they ashamed of their pet sales tax, which they so loudly proclaim saved the schools of the state? Do they recognize in it a nauseating pill that because of its continued taking, must be sugar-coated to assure its permanency as an easy revenue getter? Else why should they so earnestly covet that the public pay the tax without knowing it?

It is pointed out that Virginia has a sales tax that the peoples don't know about; that Illinois has a 3 per cent sales tax which the merchants are not allowed to mention, the Supreme court of that state claiming that such mention would be unconstitutional. Think of that!

It is not enough to argue that there are other indirect taxes which the public generally doesn't know about. As a matter of fact practically every tax imposed upon industry is passed on to the consumer, either in curtailed value or increased price. The public always pays the bills in the end, in spite of the fact that industry, as represented by the big corporations, continues to cry out that it—not the public that pays—is being strangled by excessive tolls.

The staggering net earnings appearing in the year-end balance sheets of certain large industries in North Carolina indicate that they either successfully passed on government imposed taxes to the consumer or that their profit margins are sufficiently wide to make big money in spite of these tolls.

Without pausing to argue for or against the justification of desirability of a sales tax, we would remind that here is one levy at least that doesn't sneak up on the blind side of John Q. Public and gypsy the cash out of his wallet. For once let's be honest with him, and is this tax, invented in "emergency" must be a permanent burden, let's not try to make it smell sweeter under another name. It might be that he doesn't know that he is already bearing more than his share of the load and might resent it if this privilege to contribute were denied to him.—Statesville Daily.

Tell Them, Brother.

Not so very long ago Democrats took great delight in ridiculing Hoover's "two chickens in every pot" slogan. But as for a grand and ingenious fizzle no chicken ever suffered such a set-back as did that ramshackled, bedraggled, bumfusticated Blue Eagle, hatched from an egg laid by Communists and incubated by the New Dealers and later heaved into the ash barrel of oblation by the U. S. Supreme Court.—Yellow Jacket.

The Dregs.

Somewhere in our remote periphery we recall this allegorical expression, "The more heartily we drink, the sooner we reach the dregs." What a sermon there is in that brief sentence! How it could be applied to so many of our shortcomings and indulgences!

We know a man who, early in his life, was left about $30,000 in cash upon the expiration of his father. The young man quit school. He quit work. He bought a team of fine buggy horse as it was before the time of automobiles. He bought a fine, rubber tired, sport model buggy. He dressed his horses up in showy harness, hitched them to his sporty rig, and he set out to taste life in its fullest according to his own ideas of living.

He smoked high priced cigars and cigarettes. He drank fine liquors. He gambled and lost. He spent much of his fortune on girls who gladly accepted his attentions while he was splurging about in his fine rig wearing flashy clothes and making a big show.

He "drank heartily" while his cup was filled. Today he is attired in the shabbiest habiliments. He lives in a house that is a tumble down shack, a remnant of his father's estate that once housed a tenant or laborer in his father's business. He owns no kind of vehicle. He is dependant upon an occasional common laborer's job and the assistance of the welfare department in his home county. He has reached the dregs.

That is not the saddest part of the story. Before he had quite run through with his fortune and still had enough money to carry on the show of luxury, he married a fine girl. Two daughters were born to them. Their father had made no investments with any part of his fortune. It was soon spent. It was exhausted before the wife or daughters could receive much benefit from any part of it. The mother has managed to keep her daughters in school and they have helped too by working at odd hours; but they all have had to share the dregs which were reached too soon. The mother and the daughters can not take their places in society with the people of their class.

To make it all the more embarrassing for them, they have such a striking contrast right there in their home town. The man's sister received a like amount when their father died. She did not "drink heartily" of her good fortune. She cared not for a splurge. She invested wisely and built up her fortune. She continued to complete her education and she entered into a remunerative occupation when she had prepared herself for the work. She married, but she lost her husband later. Now her son can enter sort of society without the feeling that he, probably, is not as well dressed as his associates or that they are superior to him in any way. His mother owns her nice home and she owns a number of other nice homes which bring her a substantial income through rents. They can still drink without reaching the dregs because the mother did not drink too heartily when her cup was filled.

Her brother sometimes performs menial tasks about her home for a pittance. If he had drunk less heartily of his brimful cup, he could be on a par with his sister in her wealth.—Statesville Record.

Ash Cheese Factory Doing Well.

Over 500 farmers sold 3,000,000 pounds of milk to the cheese factory at West Jefferson, Ashe county, the past year to be processed into 290,000 pounds of fine cheese, says F. R. Farnham, dairy extension specialist at State College. This is the largest volume of milk delivered to the factory since it was established in 1929, and the cheese production was increased 40 per cent over 1934.

Our own advice to those who are seeking the Republican nomination for the presidency next summer is that they keep ahead of a man named Hoover.

Seems to us that Secretary Wallace doesn't think much of the members of the U. S. Supreme Court. Brother Wallace thought for a while that he was bigger than the Supreme Court but he found out that he wasn't.

While we don't agree with Senator William E. Borah at all times, yet we believe he has been right oftener than he has been wrong. At this time it seems that Senator Borah will be nominated for president on the Republican ticket in June. The party could go farther and fare much worse.

There is some talk of holding the coming Republican State Convention at Raleigh in April. Here's hoping that the convention will be held at Charlotte, which is the logical city. Two thirds of the Republicans in North Carolina, live west of Greensboro, so why hold this convention in the east among the Roosevelt worshippers. Let's go to Charlotte where both democrats and Republicans will give us a royal welcome, and where the city papers will give us a square deal.

The Winston Journal doesn't seem to be as strong for prohibition as it once was. The Journal editor is a worshiper of President Roosevelt, who used all his power to bring back the legalized sale of liquor. The Journal couldn't support Al Smith, because he was a wet man, but has no trouble in swallowing Franklin at one gulp. The Journal also carries a bunch of beer and wine advertisements, if we are not badly mistaken. Oh, consistency, thou art indeed a jewel.

Governor Talmadge, Georgia's chief executive, wants to run for president. He thinks Roosevelt has deserted the democratic party, and is determined to see that Franklin doesn't get the nomination for president at the Philadelphia convention. It has often been said that when thieves fall out and fight honest men get their dues. This doesn't mean that either of these esteemed gentlemen are thieves, but it does mean that there isn't much harmony in the democratic party at the present time.

Funifool Simmons, once United States Senator from North Carolina, who bolted the democratic party when Al Smith ran for president in 1928, has come out in a statement endorsing Franklin Roosevelt, and predicting that the said Franklin will be elected by a bigger majority this year than in 1932. Simmons wouldn't vote for Al Smith because he was a liquor man, but swallowed Roosevelt, who was and is just as wet as Al if not wetter. Some of the democrats who repudiated Simmons eight years ago are now slobbering over this aged and infirm false prophet.

Borah Becomes Candidate.

Washington.—Senator William E. Borah, figuratively donned the robes of full-fledged candidate for the Republican presidential nomination and announced a pre-convention campaign unique in the annals of American politics.

The Idahoan told newsmen, coincidentally, that he expected to have some national convention delegates from the south and possibly the northwest.

Borah's initial precedent-making announcement was that he would have no individual campaign manager.

Where Is That Hog?

For years The Record has defended the groundhog while others have cussed and abused him from one year to another. Last week we announced that winter was practically over; and that spring, like Roosevelt's prosperity, was just a round the corner. We were mistaken. The next time you hear a fellow say we don't have big snows in the light of the moon, call him a liar. The moon was supposed to have been shining all night Thursday, and this section was visited by the worst snow storm or blizzard in many years. The sixth snow of the winter began falling at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and fell most of the night. Friday morning the ground was covered on the level to a depth of about ten inches and some of the drifts were from one to two feet deep. Temperature readings at 6:30 a. m. Friday were 23 degrees above zero. All the county schools, including Mocksville schools, were suspended Friday on account of the weather conditions.

The question now is, what has become of the groundhog? It is a well known fact that he did not see his shadow on Feb. 2nd. If he remained out of his winter quarters as he was supposed to do, there is grave fears that he has frozen to death. If he is dead, then what kind of weather are we supposed to have for the next 30 days? We are going to leave this question to some one who knows more than this scribbler. We are still hoping for the best but preparing for more winter, despite the fact we have always defended the groundhog. If anyone knows anything about the whereabouts of the said hog at this writing, please get in communication with The Record at once.

The mercury dropped to 14 degrees above zero Saturday morning. But little snow melted during the day. Saturday night a light snow, followed by sleet covered the ground, and Sunday morning it was difficult to either walk or travel in autos. Bus schedules were annulled and passenger trains were behind schedule.

From South Carolina.

The New Deal, must indeed be worse than we thought. A gentleman from South Carolina, in renewing his subscription to The Record, writes:

"Hope Senator Borah is nominated! The New Deal is a rotten deal."

This wouldn't have been news had it come from any other state than South Carolina.

We Are Waiting.

"It is not known yet, when Mocksville will get a new postmaster, or who the postmaster will be. About eight or nine persons stood the examination which was held at Winston-Salem last fall," says the Davie Record. We are satisfied that the Mocksville appointment has already been decided upon by Congressman Lambeth and the Mocksville Democratic machine for haven't the executive committee already endorsed a certain Mocksville Democrat for the place? But perhaps it is like another office in Lambeth's district, the favored one failed to make the grade in the examination. Just possess your soul in patience Brother Stroud, an "acting" postmaster will soon be named for your little city.—Union Republican

Dowell May Run For State Post.

Willard L. Dowell, executive secretary of the North Carolina Merchants association and recognized as probably the most active and powerful opponent of the sales tax in North Carolina, may become a candidate for the office of State Auditor in the approaching Democratic primary. Miss Edith Neaves, secretary of the Elkin Merchants Association, announced Monday.—Elkin Tribune.

DEATHS.

Stonewall Jackson Kimball.

Stonewall Jackson Kimball, 74, died recently at his home near Rock Hill, S. C. Mr. Kimball is survived by his widow and two children, a son and daughter, and two brothers D. J. Kimball, of Statesville, and J. R. Kimball, of Macon, Ga. Mr. Kimball lived in Mocksville when a young man, and has visited here on several occasions in recent years. He had many friends throughout this section who were saddened by the news of his death.

Mrs. Noah Brock Taken By Death.

The family ties of perhaps the oldest married couple in this and surrounding communities were broken Saturday night, when Mrs. Noah Brock passed away at Culver hospital, Darlington, Indiana following an operation.

Mrs. Brock, at the time of her death was 88 years of age, while her husband will celebrate his 100th birthday in August, and had she lived until April 10th, the couple would have been married 70 years.

Funeral services for the elderly woman were held at the home near Darlington Tuesday morning, with Rev. A. L. Miller of the Methodist church in charge.

Mrs. Emily Brock, eldest child of Richard and Salena Church was born in North Carolina, December 31, 1847 and at the time of her death was 88 years old. On January 25, 1936 she passed away at Culver hospital in Crawfordsville.

On April 10, 1866, she was united in marriage to Noah M. Brock, and to this union were born four children, all of whom have preceded her in death.

She was a member of the Potato Creek M. E. Church, and although in later years was unable to attend, still her love and interest in the work of the church continued. She was a devoted Christian and tried to live by the Golden Rule. So many times we have heard her say "Right is right, and wrong is wrong; draw a line between the two."

Mother was a woman of great courage in each trial of life both great and small, was always looking for the silver lining. She was devoted to her home and family. She was very unselfish and was always trying to make everyone within her reach happy.

Mother leaves to mourn her loss, her husband; a daughter-in-law Mrs. Edith Brock; three grand children Mrs. Belle Dowe and Mrs. Florence Parker of Grand Rapids Michigan, and Lee Painter of Darlington; and two great grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Brock were natives of Davie county, but moved to Indiana many years ago. Mr. Brock, who is nearing his 100th birthday, has many relatives in Davie who will sympathize with him in the death of his aged wife. He is an uncle of Mrs. Geo. Sheek and Mrs. J. L. Sheek, of this city, Mrs. D. K. Furches, of near Farmington, and A. M. Kimbrough, of this city.

William Bivens Dead.

Willie Bivens, 75, died at his home near Ephesus Wednesday afternoon, following a stroke of paralysis, which he suffered on the previous Saturday. Funeral services were held at Liberty Methodist church Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, conducted by Rev. M. G. Ervin, and the body laid to rest in the church cemetery. Mr. Bivens is survived by his widow and five children, three sons and two daughters. One brother, Walter Bivens, of High Point, also survives. Mr. Bivens spent practically all his life in Davie county, and had many friends who will be sorry to learn of his death.

When the citizens of a community are not concerned with its growth why should anyone else take any interest in it?

The tournament is being promoted by Alwyn Morrison sport editor of the Statesville Record, through the co-operation of Mitchell College Athletic Association and the Statesville Record.

Outstanding high school basketball teams of girl and boys of Iredell county are expected to take part in the tournament that will name champions of Piedmont North Carolina, one of the leading sections of basketball in the State. Teams from class B schools in town and counties surrounding Iredell and including Iredell county are invited to enter the tourney.

The ten counties eligible to enter teams are as follows; Alexander; Catawba, Cabarrus, Davie, Iredell, Lincoln, Mecklenburg, Rowan, Yadkin, and Wilkes. Educate Child in Safety;

Safe Home Is Important

The modern mother is confronted with a more baffling problem in protecting her children from the dangers of the world than ever before. Children of today face most of the long established dangers such as fire, poisons and stabs, sharp objects and cutting tools, and in addition nearly 25,000,000 automobiles waylay them on streets and highways. It is certain that the improved methods of recording accidents makes the mother more conscious of their appalling extent than ever before.

One of the first principles of child safety, according to Curtis Billings who writes on "Teaching Your Child to Be Safe" for Hygeia, is the establishment of a safe home by the mother. To have a safe home is at least as important as to have a clean home.

The second fundamental is that safe habits must be painstakingly taught to children. Safe habits cannot be instilled in them by intermittent and impatient scoldings and cross "don't's," nor are threats of disaster effective in preventing mishaps to children. For instance, children may be taught through actual and repeated demonstrations how to cross a street safely.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches, or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

SYNOPSIS

Kerry Young, a lad of seven, is preparing to flee the burning lumber camp of his benefactor, Jack Snow, who took the youngster to live with him at the death of Kerry's mother.

"Dama Mel's cigars!" said West beneath his breath, tossing his smoke away and making a wry face.

He rose and went intently out and Young wondered. Did West so much dislike confronting him even across a poker table after what had happened that afternoon that he had fled?

On his return to the table, the good-natured atmosphere which had prevailed for those last few hands disappeared.

West was sitting back in his chair, smiling coolly. The place had grown very still. Well over two hundred dollars had been bet so far and West was smiling at the distraught Jim Hinkle as a man will who is most sure of himself.

held the deck. But his other hand slid a second deck from beneath his belt and when he came up the one pack was thrust into the little stein shelf beneath the table top while it was the new one he thrust toward Jim Hinkle for the cut.

Kerry Young did not know this. But his heart rapped smartly with suspicion. "Cut 'em, James!" the man said.

"And a dollar!" said Jim Hinkle promptly and Tod nodded wisely. "That queen must be proud of herself again. Queens ruined Sawyer, James. Well, I'll trail along."

The rest, also, saw the raise. Tod set the deck on the table before him, ostentatiously, Kerry believed. He hitched his chair closer to the table and dealt, taking cards one at a time from the pack.

The showing king drew a ten spot; the four caught a nine, Young was given a deuce and beside Hinkle's queen dropped another. "Oh-oh!" muttered Tod. "You must've felt 'er coming!"—turning himself a king.

Excitement showed in Jim Hinkle's sallow face. Why shouldn't it? With queens back-to-back, and now a third? And two kings showing in two hands?

"Well, now, James... I'm just a little bit proud of what I've got. I've beaten those dam' queens once or twice tonight. I'll just tilt it a mite this time to try my luck. Let's bet twenty-five and keep the retailers out."

He counted his money slowly and said, "I'm betting fifty dollars, and as he shoved in the last of his money Young heard the breath catch in his throat.

Tod West began to laugh. "Them queens!" he said. "You boys have to learn about women from me! I bet 'em with sees once tonight. Now, it's kings... Kings beat queens, Jimmy? Three? You got three of the gals?"—and Hinkle strained forward as West began turning his hole card.

"Three queens," the man said huskily. "That's what I figured, along at the last. So I just called, you bet!"

ing. But I've an interest in it beside that. I've been sitting in the game and when I see a man stripped of his last dollar on a crooked deal—"

Tod was on his feet, a rush of crimson rage flooding his face, and his right hand was whipping at his breast, jerking open the shirt. Buttons gave, exposing the sweat-soaked strap across his chest and the segment of shoulder holster.

It happened quickly; with such desperate quickness that Young could not hope for escape by flight. Before him was the table. To right and left were seated card players, too amazed and shocked and fuddled to be aware of what impended, let alone to be able to move quickly.

And so he did all that there remained to do. He rose, with a swift, flowing movement. As he rose, his hand dropped into his coat pocket.

"Stop it!" he snapped and his voice was a rasp and as West's baleful eyes caught the lift of that coat, saw the rigid projection within the pocket, he added in a half whisper: "Put 'em up, Quick, or I'll..."

The great hand, clutching at the pistol grip in that shoulder holster, hesitated. Young's voice was imperious, his manner commanding.

"Up, now! Smartly, Tod West!... High... Higher than that!" Slowly, West obeyed, panting as he stood there, swaying just a little; and then the rest stampeded for safety.

The two stood there, facing one another across the table, West's eyes glassy, a stinger of spittle at the corner of his mouth; and Kerry Young, the stranger, hand steady in his jacket pocket, was smiling oddly.

"Next," he said, "you will turn around so I can take your toy away. You won't be harmed, but neither will I. Now!"—as West hesitated. "Face to the wall, or I may have to..."

decks? ... Course there are! You c'n find a half dozen on the stein shelf!" But his bluster was not convincing.

He had not regained his self-possession. "Perhaps," said Kerry with a shrug. "Perhaps, West. You may be able to alibi yourself neatly, but you know and I know!"

He went slowly forward a few steps. "Know me, West?" he asked. "Know me? Never saw me, so? ... Maybe, then, it'll refresh your memory to recall things."

"After I saw you steal from Jim here; after I saw you cheat a poor man for a few dollars, Tod West... after I saw your smallness now, I say, then I knew that I didn't take the wrong letter-file the day old Jack Snow went broke!"

Color drained from Tod's face but into his eyes came a glitter, a craft, covering and subduing the gush of insane temper such as had swept them when he reached for his gun, yonder at the card table. He did not speak at once.

"I see. But... step carefully, Tod West. I've solved seed tonight; some seed always sprouts!" He hitched at his belt with a frankly swaggering gesture.

"After all these years, the job was done quickly; in mere hours. And now I... I can be on my way." He turned on his heel and made slowly for the door.

A buzzing murmur filled the room. Eyes were on Kerry, on Tod West, standing there with much seething in him. He had a role to play, this West. He had a reputation at stake, loyalties to consider... perhaps things to fear.

He found voice at last. "Hold up there, you!" Kerry was at the threshold. He turned, smiling that bitter smile. "You're a rat!" West said again heavily. "You're a... damned rat! What's the idea, tryin' to make me out a crook? Blackmail?"

Washington Monument Has Defied Lightning for Years

High winds and electrical storms invariably bring calls to the weather bureau from citizens wondering if the Washington monument is still intact. People wonder why no serious damage has been done to the monument by the heavy static discharges.

The aluminum tip was placed over the projecting point of an iron rod, to which are attached wires leading to the ground as lightning conductors. The ground wires end in a 40-foot well immediately below the elevator shaft, thus precluding any possibility of damage.—Washington Post.

NATIONAL TOPICS INTERPRETED
By William Bruchart

Washington.—The American Liberty League has laid aside its swaddling clothes and has put on long pants in the field of politics. Although comparatively new as a group and promoted consistently as non-partisan, the league can now be said to have plunged headlong into the political warfare. If its first big rally can stand as a criterion, its influence is due to be felt in an important way in the forthcoming national elections.

This rally that really marked the league's campaign debut was a picturesque thing. It was held in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower hotel here where two weeks earlier President Roosevelt had addressed about the same number of persons at the Jackson day $50-a-plate dinner. As a further note of interest, attention might be called to the fact that the meeting was presided over by Borden Burr, a lifelong Alabama Democrat, and the other speakers were Dr. Neal Carothers, a Southern Democrat, head of the economics department of Lehigh university in Pennsylvania, and former Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson of Louisville, Ky., a Republican.

I referred above to Mr. Smith as being a colorful speaker, and from all of the comments I have heard, it seems to be the consensus that never has he justified the description better than in his league speech. He was introduced by Mr. Burr as "Al Smith of America" and proceeded to assure his audience that included millions listening by radio that he placed patriotism above party, that he was a candidate for no office under the sun, that he had no axe to grind and that such critical shots as he might take were purely personal animosity for anyone. But he did not pull his punches when he pilloried the New Deal and showed no mercy when he drew the deadly parallel between the Democratic platform of 1932 and the policies which Mr. Roosevelt had carried through. I believe it may be said that he reached the peak of his speech when he laid on the speaker's stand copies of the Democratic platform of 1932 and the Socialist platform of the same year and in his best East side strain he challenged anyone to deny that Mr. Roosevelt had been elected on a Democratic ticket and had carried out the Socialist promises.

The President's "breathing spell" utterance, his message to congress on the state of the Union, his staff of advisers, his monetary policies formed other meaty subjects which the former governor of New York picked to pieces in his own inimitable way. He begged congress to assert itself again and quoted from the Bible in his plea it should return to the father's house and be again one of the three branches of the federal government. He said it look courage for a lifelong Democrat to say the things he was saying, but there is no gaining by he displayed what it took.

Through the speech was Mr. Smith's chosen theme that a great danger lies ahead, a danger that the New Deal will destroy everything which he held had made America the outstanding nation that it is. He accused the President of having arrayed class against class and asserted that what the nation faces is the most gigantic tax burden ever known. To this he added that it will not be the rich who will pay, nor the poor, but that vast army of individuals with incomes from a hundred dollars a month to five thousand dollars a year.

Finally, in conclusion, Mr. Smith said: "Let me give this solemn warning: There can be only one capital, Washington or Moscow. There can be only one atmosphere of government, the clear, pure fresh air of free America, or the foul breath of communistic Russia. There can be only one flag, the Star and Stripes, or the flag of the godless union of the Soviets. There can be only one national anthem, 'The Star-Spangled Banner' or 'The Internationale,' there can be only one victor. If the Constitution wins, we win. But if the Constitution—stop, stop there—the Constitution cannot lose."

But what of the significance of the league dinner and the Smith speech? Prior to the dinner, the league's executive council met in secret. Whether it committed the league to a definite stand was not formally announced, yet surely there are grounds upon which to base a statement that it means to support candidates and platforms on the conservative side. With equal emphasis, it can be said

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

IF THE romance between John Gilbert and Greta Garbo had worked out into a happy ending, everything might have been different for the fallen male screen idol. There is no doubt that they were in love with each other. I recall that, when she returned from a trip to Sweden, she rushed to her hotel suite, locked the door—and called Gilbert on long distance immediately.

And people who knew him are saying that, no matter what the doctors say about his physical condition, he died of a broken heart.

They are saying that about another well-known figure in the theatrical world—"Roxy," who died in his sleep. They say that he was beaten by the failure that came after such great success. But Roxy had a new radio program set, and plans for a come-back in the theater. He deserves credit for so many innovations in the staging of motion pictures. And, of course, he was first to work out the intimate, friendly manner of chatting to his listeners on the radio; before that the pompos, hot-potato-in-the-moustache style of delivery was the most favored one.

Roxy started broadcasting with his gang in 1923, at the Capitol theater, in New York, and it's said he was opposed to the idea of broadcasting, at first. Many of the members of Roxy's Gang have achieved fame. Most of them you know on the radio: Jessica Dragonette, Frank Black, Erno Rapee, Evelyn Herbert, James Melton, Frederick Pearce, and a great many others.

Yascha Bunchuk worked with him. Eugene Ormandy used to conduct the orchestra; recently he's been made conductor of the great Philadelphia symphony, one of the greatest orchestras in the world.

Knowing Roxy was exciting; just having dinner with him in his apartment at the Ritz theater, or in the more magnificent one at the R. K. O. Music Hall, was an experience. But his life was exciting from the time when he staged "shows," as a child, to the years when he was one of the biggest figures in "show business."

Yet I believe that he'd rather be remembered, not by the men who followed his lead in the theater, but by the millions who heard him over the air—for he really meant it when he said, at the end of each broadcast, "God bless you."

One of the causes of speculation these days in movie circles is whether Greta Garbo will ever be forced to make an effort to be nice to the newspaper reporters and camera men whom she now avoids so sedulously. It seems unlikely—yet it's happened to other people. Constance Bennett, who not so long ago collected $30,000 every time she made a picture, hasn't a contract now—and has a desire to be nice to the boys who can print things about her. Katherine Hepburn, who almost got killed when she ran from a plane, on arriving in New York, rather than face the newspaper boys, is posing very willingly these days.

York Francis is on her way to New York to visit Mrs. Richard Barthelme, who is there because Dick is going to do a stage play. Miss Francis' fiancé will be there, too, but they both stick to the Hollywood traditions and swear they're not going to be married in the East.

Shirley Temple is going to sing grown-up songs in "Poor Little Rich Girl"—and what a song plugger Shirley is! Every song that she had sung in a picture has turned into a hit. She even revived the popularity of that old, old favorite, "Rolly-Wolly-Doodee," by singing it in "The Littlest Rebel."

Given Freely, but Most Scrupulously Taken: Advice
Advice is almost the only commodity which the world is lavish in bestowing and scrupulous in receiving; we seldom ask it until it is too late, and still more rarely take it while there is yet time to profit by it.

Great tact and delicacy are required either in conferring or seeking this perilous boon for where people do not take your counsel they generally take offense; and even where they do, you can never be quite sure that you have not given pain in giving advice.—Chaffield.

Stuff a Cold and Starve Fever' Wrong, Says Doctor

I do not know who was responsible for the slogan, "Stuff a cold and starve a fever." Perhaps the same one who started, "Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die." To follow the former would probably result in dying, though perhaps with little merriment. It is unfortunate that slogans have so strong a hold on people and so powerful an influence on conduct.

Don't stuff a cold or starve a fever! Eat not by slogan but to meet the particular situation. In that way lies intelligent treatment. But don't try to treat a fever, or a bad cold either, without expert advice. Consult your family doctor and follow his directions.—Dr. Walter H. Eddy, director Good House-keeping Bureau.

A Grave Mistake for a Mother to Make

GIVING CHILD UNKNOWN REMEDIES WITHOUT ASKING DOCTOR FIRST

GIVING your child a medicine or remedy you don't know all about—without asking your family doctor first—is a bad risk for any mother to take.

Doctors and child authorities say health, and sometimes life itself, depends on this. So—when you're offered a "bargain" in a remedy for your child; ask your doctor before you buy it. Do this for your child's sake and your own peace of mind. Ask him particularly about the frequently used "milk of magnesia"—about Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. He will tell you that for over 60 years physicians have endorsed it as SAFE for your child. The kind of remedy you want your child to have.

Remember this when you buy, and say "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" to your druggist. Comes now, also, in tablets that taste of peppermint, that children like to take.

NOW, ALSO IN TABLET FORM
You can assist others by refusing to accept a substitute for the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Do this in the interest of yourself and your children—and in the interest of the public in general.

The Crown Remains Veterans Reach the Top The Useful Red Cross Oxygen Is Life

Behind the gray walls of Windsor castle, on the hill above the Eton school, where young England learns discipline and cricket, King George's coffin was lowered to the vault to lie beside his father, King Edward VII, and his grandmother, Queen Victoria.

Arthur Brisbane

The services were broadcast, new feature of a royal funeral. The simple Church of England burial service, read by the Archbishop of Canterbury, was heard far over the earth, wherever Britain's 400,000,000 subjects live.

Veterans having successfully climbed the long, long road, the government began the biggest "pay-off" job in history, the printing of two billion four hundred million dollars' worth of bonds, to be distributed among 3,518,191 World War veterans.

Now government wonders what new taxes can be invented to pay the two and one-half billions.

Interesting news from Ethiopia sent by an American correspondent says the residence of Haile Selassie's son has on the roof a large red cross, although it has nothing to do with the Red Cross. Associated Press sends news of a Swedish "field hospital," captured by Italians in the South, carrying ammunition on five trucks adorned with Red Cross flags and insignia.

"The Blood Is the Life," according to an old Hebrew saying, and oxygen is the life of the blood. No oxygen means death, in three minutes or less; too little oxygen means premature death, inferior health meanwhile.

The Dionne quintuplets are marvelous in their health. The marvelous babies sleep outdoors every morning and afternoon; on one occasion the temperature was 30 degrees below zero.

All five walk, all have gained weight during the past month, and have new teeth. Annette has three new ones, twelve in all. All have beautiful big eyes, high foreheads, pretty faces and look as French as the Marseillaise; get plenty of oxygen, but wrap up well.

Lloyd George says the new king, Edward VIII, has the magnetism of his grandfather, Edward VII; that he comes to the throne with such great troubles ahead as few kings have ever encountered, but "his courage and his sure instinct will not fail him."

O. K. Allen, Huey Long's governor of Louisiana, died of a cerebral hemorrhage. He remained in succession to Senator Long, leader of the Long party, a short time only. Perhaps they are together now, both aware that nothing happening on this little earth is important; Huey Long wondering why he made such a fuss about it.

The unnecessary air disaster in Hawaii, two United States bombing planes destroyed in collision while flying "information" and six men killed, causes aviators to say that they object to night formation flying. They may well object; nothing more densely stupefied could be imagined than sending up planes to fly at high speed, almost wing to wing, inviting disaster and death. Even in these busy times there ought to be somebody sufficiently intelligent to stop that nonsense, at night, and in daytime also.

Mr. John Horan of Milwaukee, called by his fellow workers "Soda Ash Johnny," first used soda ash to clean locomotive boilers, a discovery that should have made him rich, but did not.

"Soda Ash Johnny," a proud man, refused to let his son accept a pension, told the authorities: "I am still able to work, and no boy of mine is going to the county."

It will surprise you to hear that the son, aged sixty-six, had applied for an old age pension.

The statement that "imagination is worse than reality applies to everything—death included, let us hope. When a colony of nudists moved to San Diego, Calif., the strongest protest comes from San Diego's Brattle club an organization of blind people. They could not actually know whether the colonists were dressed or not, but they do not like the idea.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Southerners Launch Talmadge's Presidential Boom—Kansas Offers Landon to Republicans—Bonus Bill Passed Over Roosevelt's Veto.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

TWO THOUSAND or more "grass root" Democrats, representing 17 southern and border states—though most of them were Georgians—gathered in Macon, Ga., and with wild yells launched the boom of Gov. Eugene Talmadge for the Democratic Presidential nomination. They adopted a platform asking him to run as a constitutional Democrat who is opposing what they called "the theorists, crackpots, brain trusters and professors" of the New Deal.

Gov. Talmadge

The platform adopted by the meeting called for preservation of the Constitution, of state sovereignty and of the American form of government. It accused President Roosevelt of abandoning faith in the Constitution and the doctrines of Thomas Jefferson and "repudiating, abandoning, and sidetracking" the platform on which he was elected in 1932.

"We do not regard the occupant of the White House as a Democrat. He has broken the pledge of our party and violated the platform of 1932.

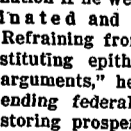

"We here today affirm our faith in that doctrine. It is not easy yet to estimate the possible results of the Talmadge movement. The administration leaders refuse to take the Georgia governor seriously or to admit that he can imperil their control of any of the southern states.

The situation in the South is further complicated by the sudden death of Gov. O. K. Allen of Louisiana. He was the devoted and complaisant adherent of Huey Long and had been selected to fill out the unexpired term of the late senator. Lieutenant Governor Noe succeeded to the governorship, but who will now be the leader of the Long forces was not immediately determined.

WHAT is known as the Bankhead-Jones bill for soil conservation, the administration's substitute for the AAA, was given the hesitant approval of the senate agricultural committee by a vote of 15 to 2, although Chairman Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina said he "personally had some doubts as to its constitutionality. The measure would enable the secretary of agriculture to remove 30,000,000 acres from cultivation and give him even wider powers than he had under the AAA. It was evidently headed for a hot debate on the senate floor.

Secretary Wallace let it be known that officials of the Agriculture, Treasury and Justice departments were co-operating in an effort to collect for the government the $200,000,000 ordered returned to processors by the Supreme court, but he gave no details of the plan. In referring to this court order in a radio talk, Mr. Wallace went further in criticism of the Supreme court than has any other official of the administration. He declared it was "the most gigantic legalized steal in history." Representative Allen T. Treadway of Massachusetts asserted on the floor of the house that "any official who will make a statement of that nature about the Supreme court ought to be impeached." Mr. Wallace may not have heard the last of this.

KANSAS Republican state committee members, the Kansas Day club and many party leaders from the Missouri valley region, celebrating Fourness' day in Topeka, presented to the country Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas as their choice for the Republican Presidential nomination. In a speech to the banqueters the governor told what he hoped to do for the nation if he were nominated and elected. Refraining from "substituting epithets for arguments," he offered a program for ending federal extravagance and restoring prosperity.

Gov. Landon

Replying to the query "What would you do?" Mr. Landon proposed relief for agriculture through a soil conservation program with the honest purpose of saving the fertility of American farms and not merely that of providing a blind for further dispensation of AAA checks.

The governor pledged himself to old age pensions. He recommended extension and improvement of civil service, and the utilization by the federal government of specially trained minds as he has used them in Kansas—"to collect facts, not to administer theories." His own best recommendation of himself he gave in three succinct paragraphs summarizing his budget balancing achievements.

PAYMENT of the veterans' bonus by means of baby bonds, payable on demand was enacted into law by congress, and the money for the ex-soldiers may be available on July 1.

The Harrison compromise bonus bill that went through the senate and house easily, was vetoed by President Roosevelt. The house immediately and enthusiastically re-passed the measure. The senate was a little more deliberate, but within three days it, too, had overridden the disapproval of the Chief Executive, and the bill was made law. The vote in the senate was 78 to 19. In the house it had been 324 to 61.

It was a notable fact that all the senators—95 in number, for Huey Long's successor has not yet taken his seat—were present and voting. Notable, but not strange when one remembers this is an election year. Fifty-seven Democrats, 16 Republicans and 3 Radicals—La Follette of Wisconsin, Shipstead and Benson of Minnesota—voted for the bill, while 12 Democrats and 7 Republicans voted against it.

The galleries were filled and there was wild cheering when the vote was announced. Republican senators amused themselves and the spectators by twitting the Democrats on their failure to stand by their chief, the most volatile of the twitters being Senator Hastings of Delaware.

Informed of the vote, President Roosevelt at once ordered government departments to prepare for payment of the bonus certificates as quickly as accuracy will permit. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said that the payment would be the most difficult mechanical task the treasury had faced in its history. He said the treasury would need $2,500,000 and the veterans' administration $5,000,000 to increase the force to take care of the job. More than seven million interest calculations will be necessary.

"WE CAN either take on the mantle of hypocrisy, or we can take a walk; and we'll probably do the latter."

Al Smith

These words of Al Smith in his speech at the American Liberty league dinner in Washington were perhaps the most interesting and significant of his utterances on that occasion, for he professed to be speaking for "the disciples of Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland" and concerning their action in the Democratic national convention next June when the delegates are asked to endorse the doings of the Roosevelt administration. There could be no misunderstanding Smith's meaning, and he must now be considered the leader of the conservative Democrats in their revolt against the policies of the New Dealers. The concern of the administration Democrats is now as to how extensive will be the bolt; and whether the conservatives will put up their own ticket, support the Republican nominee or merely stay away from the polls. Of course in any case the Republican cause will be aided materially, unless the guesses of its leaders are all wrong.

New Deal Democrats were quite undismayed by the Smith speech, which they declared was weak and ineffective. They announced that Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson of the senate would deliver the official reply in a radio address.

Mr. Smith in his Liberty league speech never once named President Roosevelt, but he specifically put on that gentleman the full blame for repudiating most of the planks in the Democratic platform of 1932, which he declared was the best ever put forth in this country.

Senator Robinson's reply to Al Smith's speech consisted in the main of quotations from previous utterances by Smith in which he advocated a course just as radical as that pursued by the New Dealers in combating the depression. He jeered at the New Yorker for abandoning the streets of the city for the palaces of Park avenue and trading his brown derby for a silk topper, and denounced him as a deserter in the face of the enemy.

ACTIVITIES of the Townsend old age pension advocates are proving most annoying to many congressmen, and it is likely they will be investigated. A resolution for such an inquiry was introduced by Representative Jasper Bell of Missouri, Democrat. It charged that for several years "individuals and groups" have "conceived and promoted numerous schemes under the pretext of obtaining pensions for the aged and needy" and that now "several groups of fraudulent promoters are enriching themselves by working the so-called pension plan racket."

IF PLANS announced in St. Louis by leaders of world Jewry are carried out, there is to be another exodus, this time from Germany where the Jews are greatly oppressed by the Hitlerites. Sir Herbert Samuel, eminent British Jew, attending the national council of Jewish federations and welfare funds, said a definite method would be formulated soon to provide for the gradual emigration of at least 100,000 of the German reich's estimated 400,000 Jewish population. The undertaking will be financed by a fund of about $15,000,000 raised by English and American Jews.

WASHINGTON wants to know who ordered the United States Marine band to walk out at the women's patriotic conference on national defense. Probably it was Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt, but he would say nothing, so a resolution was introduced in congress demanding an investigation.

The difficulties arose out of a speech before the women's conference by Bainbridge Colby, a Democrat who said unkind things about the New Deal. Thereupon the band walked out, and certain navy officers refused to deliver scheduled speeches before the conference. The Republicans did not overlook the opportunities offered by the incident.

NOTEWORTHY among recent deaths is that of George W. Wickersham of New York, who was attorney general of the United States in the Taft administration and for many years one of the country's leading corporation lawyers. He was seventy-seven years old, and died of heart disease in a taxicab.

Mr. Wickersham was chairman of the famous Hoover commission named to investigate prohibition and other law enforcement in 1923. The commission's report opposed repeal, but the document was accompanied by the members' individual statements in which a majority urged repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment. The net result was confusing.

Much good work, overlooked by the public in the controversy over prohibition, nevertheless was done by the commission. Its exhaustive reports, filed early in 1931, covered many phases of the crime problem and were regarded as important contributions in that field.

DR. HUGH S. CUMMING announced that on February 1 he would retire as surgeon general of the United States public health service, "because of long service and health that isn't too good." He has been in the service since 1894 and has had four terms as his head. His administration is credited with completion of the quarantine system; inauguration of preimmigration examinations at American consulates; establishment of a national leprosanarium and national narcotic farms; and construction of eight major hospitals.

It was believed in Washington that President Roosevelt would appoint as the new surgeon general Dr. Thomas H. Parran, Jr., state health commissioner of New York and assistant surgeon general on leave.

A JURY in the United States District court in New York returned verdicts of guilty against acting Capt. William F. Warmus and three co-defendants in the criminal negligence trial resulting from the disastrous fire that swept the Morro Castle off Asbury Park, September 8, 1934, taking a toll of 134 lives.

Besides Warmus, those convicted were Eben Starr Abbott, chief engineer of the burned ship; Henry E. Cabaud, executive vice president of the New York & Cuba Mail Steamship company, operators of the War Line, and the New York & Cuba company itself.

FRANCE'S new government, under Albert Sarraut as premier, it is hoped will stand up until the spring elections. If it does, the results will not be happy for Italy for it will take a much stronger stand in support of the League of Nations than did that of Laval. The new foreign minister is Pierre-Etienne Flandin, noted for his pro-British tendencies; and Joseph Paul-Boncour, the minister of state concerned chiefly with league affairs. In other respects there is nothing especially notable about the Sarraut cabinet. Regnier is retained as finance minister, and he is committed to the Laval policy of defending the franc.

Albert Sarraut

Flandin went to London for the funeral of King George, and it is rumored in Paris that he would sound one British bankers on the subject of a loan of three billion francs which the French treasury sorely needs. With Laval in the discard, the British might look on this suggestion with favor.

A DOLF HITLER has just completed three years as the ruler of Germany, and the anniversary was celebrated by the Nazis with triumphant rejoicing. Addressing 26,000 Nazi storm troop veterans, the reichsfuehrer declared:

"Whoever opposes us now does it not because we are Nazis, but because we restored military independence to Germany."

Hitler spoke 25 minutes, claiming the Nazi movement has brought unity to the nation and adding:

"We seek peace because we love it, but we insist on our honor because we do not live without it."

MAJOR reductions in naval tonnage are "out" so far as the London four-power conference is concerned, owing to the unsettled condition of world affairs and the defection of some progress toward an agreement on the sizes of ships and calibers of guns when the Americans, French, and Italians accepted a new British compromise plan as a basis for discussion. The plan proposes battleships with a maximum of 35,000 tons, the existing limit; 14 inch guns instead of the present 16 inch ones, which are eliminated; and an entirely separate category for destroyers, placing them in a classification with small cruisers.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY LESSON

Lesson for February 16

JESUS' REPLY TO JOHN THE BAPTIST'S QUESTION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 7:19-28. GOLDEN TEXT—I believe; help thou mine unbelief.—Mark 9:24. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Answers John's Question. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Answers John's Question. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Meeting Doubts With Faith. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Jesus Answers Honest Doubts.

The title, "Jesus Helps a Doubter," given by the lesson committee, is not a good one. John was not a doubter, though somewhat perplexed. Jesus specifically defends him against such a charge (see Matt. 11:7-11 as well as the present text). It is to be hoped that no teacher will perpetuate this error. John was a great man. In announcing his birth the angel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord." He was great, also, when measured by the standards of men. In teaching this lesson a survey should be made of John's life and work.

1. John's Birth and Ministry Foretold (Isa. 40:3; cf. Matt. 3:3).

He was thought about and his work planned long before he was born. He came as God's messenger.

11. John's Character.

1. Humble (Luke 3:4). He did not seek human praise and commendation, but shrank from them. His supreme concern was to proclaim Christ.

2. Courageous (Luke 3:7). He faced a great multitude and struck hard at their sins. He did not trim his message to suit the crowd.

111. John's Preaching (Luke 3:3-8).

1. He sounded forth a ringing call to repentance (vv. 3-6). Suddenly emerging from his seclusion, he came into the region of the Jordan as a messenger of God, calling upon the people to repent as a means of preparation for the coming of the Messiah.

2. He demanded proofs of repentance (vv. 7, 8). He insisted that their false prophets had to be abandoned, their sinful hearts had to be renovated, showing them that the vile passions of their souls must be uprooted. The turning of a soul from sin to God, was necessary.

IV. John Sent a Deputation to Jesus (Luke 7:19-23).

1. Their question (v. 19, 20). "Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?" Because John did not see the interval between the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow—between the cross of Christ and his second coming—he was perplexed; therefore, he sent a deputation to Jesus for light. This perplexity was not something culpable in John because the prophets did not see, or at least did not make clear, the interval between the crucifixion of Christ and his second coming. The Messiah, he knew, had to be the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world (John 1:29). The trend of events puzzled him. It was not a lack of faith, but confusion of mind, that prompted his inquiry. There were two lines of predictions concerning the Messiah; the one set him forth as the suffering One, as in Isaiah 53; the other as an invincible conqueror, as in Isaiah 63. Indeed, in Isaiah 60:1, 2 the two are joined together (Luke 4:17-20).

2. Jesus' action (v. 21). In that same hour, doubtless in the presence of John's disciples, Jesus cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits, and to many were blind he gave sight.

3. Jesus' message to John (vv. 22, 23). Jesus said to them, "Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard."

V. Jesus' Defense of John (Luke 7:24-28).

1. He declared that John was not vacillating like a reed swayed by the wind (v. 24).

2. John was not doubting because of the hardship of prison life (v. 25).

3. John was not a mistaken prophet (vv. 25-28). He makes John equal to the greatest of the Old Testament prophets by declaring that among those born of women there hath not arisen a greater prophet than John.

4. The response of the people (v. 29). The people who heard this defense, even the publicans, accepted it as a vindication of John. They justified God. They not only accepted the vindication, but were baptized with the baptism of John.

VI. John's Martyrdom (Mark 6:14-29).

While John was in prison Herod had frequent interviews with him. John boldly told him that it was unlawful for him to have his brother's wife. He did not mind matters even with a king. This so enraged the licentious Herodias that she caused his death.

Love and Faith

As love is deepest in the being of God, so faith is the mightiest principle in the soul of man. Let us distinguish their several essences. Love is the essence of duty, faith is the essence of humanity which constitute it what it is.

Humility and Pride

Humility is the true proof of Christian virtues. Without it, we retain all our faults, and they are only hidden by pride, which conceals them from others, and often from ourselves.

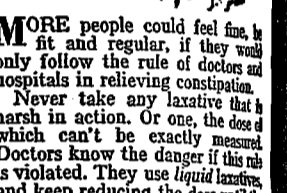

German Castle Scene of Novel Rescue by Women

Not far from Heilbronn in Wurttemberg, Germany, is the ruins of the Castle of Weibertren, concerning which is told one of the most curious tales of the Middle Ages. It appears that in the Twelfth century the castle was captured by a feudal chief, who, holding the male inhabitants within its grim walls, planned to put them all to death.

As a parting gesture to the women, who were similarly captured, he gave them permission to leave the castle and take with them only the most valued piece of property. In the victor's astonishment, the women marched across the drawbridge to freedom, each carrying her husband on her back. For this reason, she says the old legend, the old fortress came to be called "The Castle of True Wives."

When It's Unnatural It's rather trying to be expected to set a good example.

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel free, fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation. Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. One of the best which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and it doesn't give you absolute relief, it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

Black-Draught's Reputation

The confidence people have in Black-Draught, built up from factory use so many years, is shown in its being handed on from one generation to another. It must be good to have such a strong following.

"We have used Black-Draught for twenty years," writes Mr. Fred Richardson, Harshboro, Ohio. "My mother has used it for fifty years. It is the best cathartic I know anything about. I take it for my stomach and constipation, or when I feel sluggish and bad. Black-Draught is a good did to regulate the bowels, cleanse the system of waste matter, rid the system of constipation. I expect to use it twenty-five years more if I live and it gives satisfaction as it has always given."

THIS IS LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY.

Abraham Lincoln, one of the greatest men that America has ever produced, was born Feb. 12, 1809. More than 72 years ago he delivered his Gettysburg speech, a masterpiece, which follows:

"Fourscore and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us,—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the full measure of devotion,—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain,—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom,—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

A number of Davie citizens will go to Greensboro tonight to attend a Lincoln Day banquet. Senator Dickinson will be the speaker of the evening.

Frank Knox Public Citizen

Services to Nation Make Him a Presidential Possibility.

"Oftentimes the people of this country refer to the government of the United States as 'the biggest business in the world.' It is increasingly so since the World War. Practically every issue of consequence affecting the welfare of the nation since 1920 has been either economic or financial in character. One has only to recall the legislation, mandates and dictum coming from Washington during the past two years to realize to what extent the government has entered into the daily lives and business of all people.

And yet—up to this time—the people of the United States have relied on office holders of reputation, politicians or military heroes to administer the office of President. They have never elected a business man to run the business of the United States.

In Frank Knox, the Chicago publisher, the Republicans of Illinois who have unanimously made him their "favorite son" candidate for the Republican nomination for President of the United States this year, have sought to fill this aching void. They know Knox is a budget balancer and a business builder, as his continuous success in business attests. They know he knows how to meet a payroll and has never had trouble with his employees, union or otherwise. They know he practices thrift and that his progress in life from a newspaper to the head of one of the largest metropolitan newspapers in the country has been achieved on savings, character and ability alone.

But Knox's scope is not merely that of making a success of his own business. As a newspaper editor he has, to use his own words, been "administering a public trust."

As a result, upon Frank Knox has been conferred the title of "public citizen." While never an office holder he has, nevertheless, been a student of and a contributor to government all his life. Backed by his newspaper he has helped elect good men to office and to defeat bad ones. He has been "backstage" on many public policies, national, state and local, for which the office holders got all the credit. Always on the progressive and liberal side of any issue, he has fought hard for fairness and equality for the farmer, for labor, for racial and religious groups suffering from discrimination, and for individuals who stood for good principles with clean hands. Upon all the issues now before the American people he is one of the best informed.

Knox was a child of depression. He came to manhood in depression. He learned in other depressions of lesser magnitude a few fundamentals of success; pay your debts; never spend more than you can earn; don't make promises you can't keep; and keep the promises you make. One executive who worked with him in a vast newspaper enterprise, said of his attitude toward these simple rules: "He never forgot an order; he never passed the buck." And that about sums it up.

He was born in Boston in 1874 when his country was doing a bad job recovering from the panic of 1873. His parents, sound Scotch-English folks, like their forebears when confronted with an insurmountable obstacle, moved to Grand Rapids, Mich., when Frank was six years of age. At 11 years of age Knox was delivering newspapers for $3.75 a week. This was not enough to help the family. At 15 years of age he quit school to go to work and soon became a travelling salesman at $15 a week. The depression of 1893 cost him his job. At the urging of friends, including his pastor, he went to Alma college, Alma, Mich., and worked his way through doing any job that came to hand. There he met his future wife, Annie Reid.

Two months before graduation the Spanish-American war broke out. Knox enlisted as a private and took twenty of his college mates into the army with him. While on leave attending the funeral of a relative, the Michigan regiment was filled up and Knox arrived in Tampa, Fla., in uniform but without definite assignment to any outfit. There he met Lieut. David M. Goodrich, former Harvard oarsman, who introduced him to Theodore Roosevelt. The colonel looked him over carefully, asked him if he would care to join the Rough Riders and personally administered the oath of a soldier to Knox. He served at Roosevelt's side throughout the campaign which ended at San Juan hill, finally to fall a victim to the heat and tropical ailments.

Trooper Knox returned to Grand Rapids to find himself face to face with the newspaper business. During his absence, many of his letters to the mother, setting forth the lighter side of the Cuban campaign, had been published in the local newspapers.

"You have a nose for news. I'll put you on at $10 a week," said one of the editors.

Thus Frank Knox found the profession which was to be his life work. On his meager salary, he married Annie Reid, "the girl he left behind him" when he marched off to war. In three years he became city editor and circulation manager of the paper. Then, with $500 as capital, another thousand of borrowed money, and a partner, John A. Muehling, with a like amount, he bought the Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., News.

In ten years on that job Knox "cleaned" up one of the toughest towns in the country, helped nominate and elect Chase Osborn, one of the first of the progressive Republicans as governor of Michigan, and himself became chairman of the Republican state committee. In 1912 Frank Knox supported his old commander, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, for President. At the conclusion of that campaign he sold his Michigan paper at a handsome profit and, prompted by the urging of Gov. Robert Bass, another progressive governor, with his old partner Muehling he bought the Manchester, N. H., Leader. This he combined with another local paper, and, together, they still own and operate the Unio-Leader, two of the progressive newspapers of New England.

Always constructive, always looking for some way in which to make things better, Publisher Knox became aware of the difficulties in which agriculture and industry were finding themselves in the New England states. It was his idea that, to protect their interests, these states should act as a unit and to that end he took a leading part in forming the New England Council, one of the country's outstanding examples of co-operation by a large group. It has survived economic stress and successfully fought off dictatorship from Washington.

Over-age for the draft, able to command influence if he wanted an officer's commission or a softer berth, Frank Knox enlisted as a "buck private" in the New Hampshire militia in 1917 when the United States became involved in the World War. No militarist, but a profound patriot when his country needed men, Knox, qualified by his previous service in Cuba, quickly found himself in an officer's training camp over his protest. He served throughout the war with the artillery train of the 78th division, participating in the St. Mihiel and Argonne campaigns. He came home this time with his hearing slightly impaired, although it was believed for weeks that an unexpected discharge of artillery had deafened him for life. The first day home he reported for work in a long-tailed coat, all he had saved from his "wives" before going to war a second time.

Knox's success in New Hampshire attracted the attention of Publisher William Randolph Hearst. When invited by Mr. Hearst to take charge of his Boston papers, Knox, who was in no sense a candidate for the job, fixed what he regarded as a prohibitive price on his services. To his astonishment, Mr. Hearst agreed and Knox ran the papers for a year with such success that he was tendered the general management of the entire Hearst chain of papers. In that job Knox applied the same general rules of budget balancing and editorial integrity which he had followed all his life.

Once again, Knox found himself traveling the length and breadth of the land, acquiring and applying a knowledge of local affairs, sectional interests and meeting the leading business men, statesmen and politicians everywhere. When he retired from this post in 1928 he expected to settle down in Manchester with his wife in a new home especially adapted in design and site to a troublesome throat ailment from which Mrs. Knox had suffered for several years. But Knox found he was not the kind of a man who can retire until the last horn is blown.

In 1929 Walter A. Strong, publisher of The Chicago Daily News, suddenly died. The newspaper was an institution in the city of Chicago, devoted to the public service, independent, read and believed in by the citizens of that city. Under Victor F. Lawson and Strong the paper had set a standard for American journalism for more than fifty years.

Knox, without enough money of his own to buy such an expensive property, came into the picture with Theodore T. Ellis, a successful manufacturer of press accessories. Theirs was not the highest bid. It was sold to them after the executors and directors had canvassed the country for a man of character eligible to conduct a newspaper on the high standards it had acquired. The principal editors and publishers of the country individually assured all inquirers that in Knox the right man for the job had been found.

Knox has run the Chicago Daily News on the same principles that made him successful at the $50 and in Manchester. He has stood manfully behind the forces of law and order which has brought the underworld in Chicago to its knees—the same old fight he fought at Sault Ste. Marie in his earlier days. His campaign for a new political conscience, in which courage and common honesty stand out as its chief characteristics, is showing results. He has improved the financial position of his newspaper, retiring in the first four years, over $4,000,000 in bonds and preferred stock. This, too, is a throwback on his life-long ability to balance budgets, save money and, at the same time, give quality service.

He has continuously fought the "New Deal" as contrary to some of the things he found to be fundamental American principles: "You pay your debts; you don't spend more than you earn; you make no promises you cannot keep; you keep the promises you make, and you tell the truth unspicily about things as they are."

Illinois Republicans agree with Knox and believe in him. "They think he is the type best suited to present day needs—a business man with a statesman's viewpoint and experience; a fresh, up-to-date 'public citizen,' full-qualified to apply the homely virtues and fundamentals to modern conditions.

A friend asks us to define what Roosevelt's crowd means by the "Nation's permanent investments." Well, our own opinion is that the billions of dollars the Wilson administration loaned to the foreign governments might be called "permanent investments." The money's over there for keeps.—Yellow Jacket.

For more than 36 years this paper has been going into the homes of the best people in Davie county. Many of those who don't subscribe, borrow their neighbor's paper, for when we make a mistake they are the first to tell us about it.

Your father and your grandfather read The Record and carried their ads with us. There is but one business firm in Mocksville today that was here when this paper was founded—C. C. Sanford Sons Co. They were among our first advertisers, and have continued with us for all these years. The merchant who advertises is the merchant who gets the most business. This fact was demonstrated during the Christmas season. The local stores were visited frequently, and the ones who advertised were the ones who had to employ extra salespeople to take care of the rush.

If You Haven't

Been advertising in your local papers in the past, why not turn over a new leaf and give them a trial. The cost is cheap and the results will surprise you. Write or phone us, and we will be glad to call and talk the matter over with you.

Did Hopkins Prevaricate.

Harry Hopkins, head of the WPA, has been declaring that there was no politics in the distribution of Federal work funds. Just read what the McIntosh, Okla., Democrat, a partisan democratic paper, says:

"Hope for additional WPA funds for Oklahoma brightened Monday as the Oklahoma congressional delegation decided to call on the President, James A. Farley, patronage chief, and Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, to request greater allotment. The action was taken by the delegation after Congressman Jack Nichols, of the Second district, cited complaints made to him about the hiring of some Republicans to minor office in the WPA set up in his district. With the unannounced intention of pointing out to the President and Farley, if not Hopkins, that additional funds are needed if Oklahoma is to be kept in the Democratic column the delegation decided to clean up all complaints at the same time.

"It was reported that discussion of a probable successor to W. S. Key, WPA administrator, who plans to resign in March, is scheduled with Farley and the President. Apparently none of the delegation has objection to E. M. Fry, former city manager of Oklahoma City, favored by Key as his successor. Although none of the congressmen would discuss it it was apparent that there would be a general movement to 'clean out the Republicans' in the WPA set-up. Several expressed themselves as satisfied with the work being done by Republicans in minor offices, but Nichols is determined to have a few changes in his district. The Congressman made it plain that they are pleased with the general policies of Key."

Three Highway Deaths Per Day.

Certainly the need for concerted effort to reduce the highway death toll, such as that in which the leading newspapers of the state are now engaged, is forcefully accentuated by the fatality list for 1935.

According to figures released by R. R. McLaughlin, of the motor vehicle bureau of the Department of Revenue, one thousand and ninety-five men, women and children, were killed in automobile accidents in North Carolina last year. That would be three lives snuffed out for every day in the year.

And these 1,095 deaths from highway accidents for the year were more than the number of North Carolinians killed in action during the world war.

In addition to those killed on the streets and highways of the state, there were 5,386 persons reported injured. The December toll was 115 killed and 722 injured. Of the 115 killed, 46 were pedestrians, 20 were killed in collisions between automobiles, 9 were killed when trains hit cars, 12 died when cars hit fixed objects, 28 were killed in non-collision accidents—the result of speeding, reckless driving or carelessness.

It is significant that drunken drivers figured in accidents which took the lives of thirteen people, while hit-and-run drivers killed the same number. Important too, is the fact that approximately one-third of the number killed on the highways during the year were pedestrians. Many of these pedestrian deaths may have been the fault of the drivers, of course, but those who drive cars have grounds to agree that in many cases the pedestrians themselves are to blame. For this reason, it might be well, after the newspapers have pledged everyone to drive carefully, to inaugurate another campaign for pledges by pedestrians to "walk carefully."—Statesville Daily.

President Attempts To Retain 115,000 AAA Workers.

Dr. Charles W. Burrett, in Baltimore American

Washington advises show clearly that despite the Supreme Court decision against the AAA. New Deal leadership now proposes to continue—

Crop reduction, although we have found it necessary to import huge quantities of foodstuffs; the regimentation of farmers, apparently on a more extensive scale than heretofore been attempted; and—

Payments to farmers for not growing food, though nearly one half of our people now are on a third or fourth class diet.

The bureaucrats do not intend to get out of their swivel chairs without a fight to keep intact the most gigantic political organization ever created in this country. This organization carries a campaign of ward and precinct intensity into the farm areas. In it are 115,000 local committeemen, or an average of nearly five to a township.

These are "New Dealers," paid $5 a day—but not out—but not out of party funds—to deliver copies of Roosevelt political speeches, Farley tirades and Wallace sermons, while trying to fasten upon our farmers policies distasteful to and opposed by an overwhelming majority of them.

Following reference to agricultural policies, the President said in his Jackson Day address: "We will not retreat." On May 31, 1935, following the NRA decision, he said: "Are we going to take the hands of the Federal Government off the effort to adjust crops, and we are going back to the old thought that every farmer is a king and can do as he pleases?"

Clearly, Mr. Roosevelt thinks that no longer should farmers operate their farms as their own judgment dictate; nor should they enjoy the freedom of action that has been their right since our forefathers sought these shores, to establish liberty and justice.

On Oct. 28 1935 Professor Tugwell, Under Secretary of Agriculture, used in Los Angeles these words: "Our best strategy is to surge forward with the workers and farmers of this nation"

These words were almost identical with those which have come from Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin before their raid upon the Russian people.

What A Man!

A tall, gaunt young man entered the office of the manager of the carnival. "I want an engagement with your outfit as a freak," he said.

"What's your act?" inquired the manager, as he peeled a hardboiled, skeptical eye on the stranger.

"I'm Enoch the Egg Cain," answered the freak. "I eat three dozen hen's eggs, two dozen duck eggs and one dozen goose eggs at a single sitting," he said, proudly.

"I suppose you know our policy," put in the manager. "You know we give four shows each day, while on Saturdays we often give six or more. Can you do it?"

"Sure thing," said the freak.

"And on Sundays and holidays we sometimes give a show every hour. Your appetite wouldn't give out, would it?"

The lean young man hesitated. "In that case," he finally said. "I must have one thing plainly understood before I sign up."

"What's that?" snapped the manager.

The slim freak replied: "In that case, no matter how rushing the business may be at the carnival, you gotta give me time enough off to eat my meals at the hotel."

Wanted To Go To Jail.

Charlotte, Jan. 30.—Well, Avery Martin Sherlin, 31, finally landed in jail.

He said he was under federal suspended sentence for stealing pistols from a national guard unit at Berryville, Va., that he was cold and hungry and figured jail would be best. It's an old story but—

Sherlin said he went into a clothing store, just picked up a suit and walked out (hoping to be caught) but nobody said anything. Still wanting to be jailed, he pawned the suit, got drunk and when he got sober he was still free.

So he went to headquarters and admitted his theft, his drunkenness and police of his violated Roanoke, Va., suspended sentence, and "the police laughed and told me I would have to do something worth while to get in jail in Charlotte."

"I tried for work but couldn't get it," Sherlin said, "and I couldn't get any charity, so I went into a cafe, ate a big meal, got a pack of cigars and then told the cashier to have me arrested because I was broke. The cashier just sympathized and said it was all right. I insisted and finally a cop was called and the cop said it wasn't against the law for a hungry man to eat."

"So I went out and got a screwdriver and found a jeweler's window, and I unscrewed several screws from the show case window door and finally I got it open. Nobody paid any attention to me. I took a handful of watches and circulated them around and last night the law came for me."

"Here I am in jail, warm and not hungry. Here I am in a place I'd been trying to get for four days. Am I happy? Who wouldn't be?"

Potato Law Given Its Death Blow.

The death blow was given in Congress to the potato bill which Lindsey Warren, North Carolina's piker playing Congressman, got through the House last year, when that body refused to appropriate $1,250,000 to enforce the act.

The item was struck from the deficiency bill after the Representatives declined to approve a $1,000,000 appropriation asked by Warren to gather and disseminate information relative to the vegetable.

Previously the House refused to adopt an amendment by Representative Woodrum which would have reduced the Warren request to $500,000.

Warren asked the $1,000,000 appropriation in lieu of demanding the $1,250,000 for enforcement explaining it was his opinion that the Supreme Court would hold the potato law unconstitutional were a test case brought.

He declared the action of the House in voting down both requests ended any possibility of enforcing any part of the potato act, which levies a tax of 75 cents a hundred pounds on potatoes sold in excess of sales quotas.

Warren, after admitting that the bill would have no standing in the Supreme Court, fired a parting shot at his detractors when he said: "I realize that this bill has been made the football of partisan politics. I realize that untrue statements have gone out in part of the press throughout the nation, but I still say that you members who represent potato growing sections know that it was earnestly and ardently desired by the potato farmers who have been reduced to a state of absolute bankruptcy.

An income of 7 per cent. on the investment was the highest record ed by farmers of Graham county who kept records last year.

Calls Wallace An Unbalanced Fanatic.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., son of the late President Theodore Roosevelt in a recent address at Oklahoma City, Okla., denounced the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, his fifth cousin whose wife is also his first cousin, as one destroying the production of wealth, and assailed Secretary of Agriculture Wallace as an "unbalanced fanatic."

In a belligerent address before the Young Republican clubs of Oklahoma the son of the fighting "Teddy" asserted that prison penalties of the administration's potato control act constituted the "crowning atrocity."

"This act is not merely the essence of idiocy—it is the essence of tyranny," shouted the New York Republican leader and former governor general of the Philippines.

"It is blood-brother to the edicts in Russia, Germany or Italy. Any man proposing such an act, any man in sympathy with it, does not belong in a free nation such as America was and we should retire him definitely and permanently to private life."

Young Roosevelt accused the President of deceiving the nation with catch phrases such as "an ample life for all."

"It is a noble sentiment but fine words amount to nothing unless they are backed by fine actions," Roosevelt said. "As a matter of cold fact the policies of the present administration under the direction of President Roosevelt are not laying the ground work for an ample life for all men. Rather, the ground work being laid is for a harder, more circumscribed life for all, and particularly for our children."

"Higher living costs were named as an example of the 'harder life.' Colonel Roosevelt said the increase resulted from such policies as the NRA and AAA. Of the latter, he said:

"For sheer lunacy, nothing more extraordinary has been attempted."

Goes After Beatrice.

We were greatly amused to read an account by a certain woman editor in this state of the doings at the Mayflower hotel in Washington, when she paid her $50 for a ham sandwich and a cup of coffee with a Jackson Day dinner. In telling of the wonderful (?) address by President Roosevelt. She was so enthused that she bubbled over and among other things in her account of the address said: "I have seen and heard the President on several occasions and can say without hesitancy that in manner, delivery and the subject matter his Jackson Day dinner address surpassed anything I have ever heard from him before."

And now listen to this taken from the Washington Merry Go Round, written by two wideawake and alert Washington writers who would not embellish it to the world if it were not true. According to them, Roosevelt didn't write the wonderful (?) speech about which the national committeewoman from North Carolina so nearly lost her head. Listen at this:

"Author of the President's Jackson day dinner speech was Steve Early, White House secretary for the press relations. Steve brought the speech in to the President on about 8 p. m. of the day it was to be delivered. Roosevelt read it over carefully, commented:

"Pretty good, Steve, but it's too dry. Take it out and put some humor in it."

"So Steve did; after which it passed presidential muster—except for Marvin McIntyre, other White House secretary, who thought it was 'lousy.'"

"It is a pity to blast such a wonderful fiddle but it seems that it has got to be done. Wonder if the committeeewoman will print this?—Union Republican."

There are some people who think there is still equality in the old world, where any little boy has a chance to grow up and become the unknown soldier.

Married Women School Teachers.

For several years there has been a debate going on over the question of whether married women should be employed as school teachers in the North Carolina schools. In some cities the married women have been banned and in at least two counties that have come under our observation would married women school teachers were denied employment.

The question is again being agitated and at a meeting of a Greensboro civic club the past week, Dr. John H. Cook, head of the department of education of the Woman's College, discussed the question should married women be allowed to teach school? The college professor declared in answering the question that "the sort of woman with the personality and understanding that a man selects to become the mother of his children is undoubtedly best fitted for the responsibility of teaching children. Let a woman go ahead and marry and have one or two children if she cares to; then she is all the better prepared to work with children of others."

Dr. Cook spoke on the subject of training training teachers, and he outlined four essential qualifications the good teacher should possess, namely, personality, a broad cultural background, a knowledge of the profession and an "internship" of teaching practice.

Teachers should love their work, Dr. Cook said, and further than that they should try to understand children. Many children are unlikable by teachers and consequently do a poorer grade, of work despite the fact that every pupil has some redeeming features, he said.

Such a responsibility of knowing and obtaining the best from children demands a well developed personality on the part of the teacher, said Cook.

There were other factors in the teaching profession that drew criticism, such as the low salary scale and the emptiness of the future. Teachers should have a living income and a permanency of tenure that would preclude the influence of politics and allow participation in the progressive life of the community without so much fear of the public opinion.

There are many who will disagree with Dr. Cook in the matter of married women teach in order to provide a living for a sorry husband. We have known of married women teachers, who were first class teachers, would rank at the top in their profession and would not teach were it not for the fact that they had to live some way, being handicapped by a trifling, no-account husband who did not think it a disgrace to loaf around while his intelligent and energetic wife was laboring in the school room.

Another objection to married women teachers is that they crowd out the single women that are just as good teachers but are unable to get a job on account of their married status who are holding down the jobs.

We note though that there are also many single teachers who get married at the first opportunity if they have and quit the teaching profession and make a home for their husbands. These are to be commended.

When Hoover left the White House there were ten million people out of employment in this country. Three years later there are eleven million people out of employment, and the country is in debt ten or twelve billion extra dollars. No one can deny these facts.

The ordinary business man wouldn't think of paying a young fellow two or three hundred dollars per month to distribute circulars, to run errands, write form letters or deliver groceries, dry goods and notions to the rich or poor folks in the community. Under the New Deal some of the young folks are getting rich—provided their politics is of the right brand.

A law was passed by the last North Carolina legislature making it mandatory for all drivers of motor vehicles to procure a driver's license before they could operate a car. The driver must be over 16 years of age, with sense enough to keep a car somewhere in the road. When a person is caught driving a car while drunk he is supposed to have his license revoked for one year. Up to this writing nearly 1500 drivers have lost their driving privileges as a result of driving while under the influence of intoxicants. So far as we have been able to learn not a person in Davie county has been deprived of his or her license on account of being arrested and tried for being drunk.

Some time last year two or three of Captain Farmer's patter-rollers or highway patrolmen, descended on Mocksville and arrested five or ten persons for driving without lights, driving while drunk or in some way violating traffic laws. The day for the trials came along, and if we remember correctly, Esq. Fred Leagans presided. All of the cases were thrown out of court and the defendants turned loose. So far as we know not a single arrest has been made in Mocksville by a patter-roller from that day to this. We would be glad if some of the "rollers" would visit our town once in a while. Most of them are mighty fine young fellows, and we like them. Of course, we have always thought that the state made a mistake by hiring these young men. Pity they are not engaged in doctoring, lawyering, selling goods, or operating machines in mills or factories. Since the number of these officers was increased from 66 to 120, deaths by autos have increased amazingly in North Carolina. The officers are not responsible for the deaths, but so far as we know, they have never prevented an accident. Well boys, come over and see us once in awhile whether you arrest or convict us.

Want Girls To Eat More.

David J. Lybrook, of Advance, R. 1, who is President of the Davie County Fair Association, was a Mocksville visitor Thursday. Mr. Lybrook rounded up Clerk of the Court Hartman and The Record editor, who sponsored the pretty girl contest at the Davie fair last fall and sprung something new on us. Mr. Lybrook wants the pretty girl contest at the fair next fall to be conducted on a new and different line. He says the girls who enter this contest should not be over 16 years of age, and should weigh not less than 150 pounds each. The idea is to get all the girls in the county to eat more, so that they will create a better market for all kinds of farm products, which will cause the farmers to produce bigger crops which will bring them more cash to spend for necessities and home comforts, thus creating a wave of prosperity in this section. Mr. Lybrook admitted that this idea wasn't original with him. We explained that we didn't believe this plan would work; that the sponsors wouldn't be able to get the portly girls to enter contest. But regardless of this, we are glad that Mr. Lybrook rounded us up, for we managed to get a frog skin from him.

John F. Graves.

Mr. John Franklin Graves, aged 67 years, died Thursday morning at his home near Mocksville, death resulting from injuries sustained when he fell from a wagon, together with complications.

He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Graves, of Davie county and is survived by the following: His wife and six sons.

They are: G. O., L. M., R. F., and H. D. Graves, all of Davie county; J. K. Graves, of Greensboro; and R. M. Graves, of Kernersville.

There are two brothers, Henry and George Graves, of Davie county who also survive.

Mr. Graves was a member of the Mocksville Council Jr. O. U. A. M., also a member of the Mocksville Baptist church.

The funeral services were held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, from the Fork Baptist church, and interment followed in the church cemetery.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. W. Turner, and the body was laid to rest with Junior Order honors by Mocksville Council No. 226.

Mr. Graves had many friends in this section who were sorry to learn of his death. The Record extends sympathy to the bereaved family.

Obituary.

Mary Eleanor Turner Swicegood, daughter of Pinkney and Sarah L. Brown Turner, was born July 3rd, 1881, near Mocksville, in which community she was residing at the time of her sudden and untimely death, which occurred at noon Jan. 10th, 1936. Funeral services were conducted by W. L. Reeves, at her home on Sunday, Jan. 12th. Interment was in the Turner family cemetery, attended by a multitude of friends and relatives.

She became a Christian when 17 years of age, was strong in the faith, grew in knowledge, added the Christian graces and lived a faithful life through all of her days thence after spent on earth. She was brought up in the congregation of Jericho, near her home, and spent most of her time there. Her father was an elder of this congregation for a number of years. He was absolutely endowed with a profound intellect. He read extensively, studied his Bible much, taught school for years, lived one of the most elegant, exemplary lives until his death eight years ago. Her mother, a most amiable, saintly woman, still survives. Her husband, Maxie Raymond Swicegood, to whom she was married on July 27, 1919, still survives to grieve over his sad loss. To this marriage one son, Maxie Raymond, was born Jan. 20, 1926, and died Jan. 24, 1926.

One sister, Daisie Turner, and one brother, Brown Turner, survive. God endowed Mary with a brilliant mind which she delighted in cultivating. From a child she read, along with her Bible, good books, and gathered knowledge and wisdom which was necessary to make her that useful, worthy being which she was. This, combined with her loving, cheerful disposition, made her ready to sympathize and lend a helping hand to those in distress. She had a pleasant smile and greeting for all, manifested the spirit of benevolence to all who came her way, and was never happier than when she fully accomplished all that she felt was her duty. Like David, she was a "Sweet singer of the Spiritual Israel of God." Her God-given talent, music, singing God's praises, she cultivated and used as Christ directed in these words: "Teaching and admonishing one another in Psalms, and Hymns and Spiritual songs." (Col. 3:16.) Such as this David says, please God more than sacrifices of an ox. (Psalm 69:30, 31.) Besides this talent she was a gifted artist, and made pictures after her own design. So thus her life was spent in filling the mission for which God gave her these talents, consequently she has left a memorial worth while—to improve your talents and not bury them, as an example to all who were fortunate enough to be associated with her. Solomon described her in this: "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness." (Prov. 31:27) Her husband, a member of the Church, will miss her all the remaining days of his life, but he certainly will feel that his life was made better and happier by having such a noble companion as she proved to be to him. Our hearts are yearning for the genial warmth of her sweet companionship and constant devotion. She was, indeed, a sunbeam to those who loved her, cheering and brightening up their way.

Fond memories of her can never grow dim, but will remain with us vivid as noon-tide sun on a bright summer day, on down through the meander of time.

Teachers School Held In Davie County.

Last Tuesday, February 11, a school for training food teachers in Home Demonstration clubs was conducted by Miss Sallie Brooks, State Food and Nutrition Specialist assisted by Miss Florence Mackie, County Home Agent. The meeting was held in the Home Economics Department of the Yadkinville High School. Miss Arant North, Western District Agent, was also present at this meeting.

In Miss Brooks, Lecture Demonstrations, on Fruits for Health, she said that fruits should be included in the diet twice a day because of their great importance for growth and upkeep of cells forming the nerve, muscles, bone, teeth and blood. Other reasons why we should eat fruits are that they are an excellent source of fuel; they supply minerals especially lime, phosphorus and iron. They also serve to stimulate the appetite, aid digestion and the elimination of body waste.

Miss Brooks discussed various ways of preparing and serving fruits. Some ways mentioned were: Fresh, steamed, canned dried and combined in various ways with other foods. For her demonstration she prepared tomato juice, fruit-cup, brown betty, hard sauce and fruit juice sauce.

Our Food Specialist will be back with us again in April.

SYNOPSIS

Kerry Young, a lad of seven, is prepared to flee the burning lumber camp of his benefactor, Jack Snow, who took the youngster to live with him at the death of Kerry's mother.

"Hullo, Jimmy! Evening, Elsie. All ready to be measured up for the brace, eh? Well, well; we've come along so far and have got kind of a leg left. Now we'll start on the job of making a silk purse out of . . . something."

instinctively drawn to this old man. "Also, I heard about what happened this afternoon. I added that to what I know about you."

"Well, that's a new one on me!" He laughed. "Coroner's clerk? Why—let me explain this a little. I have to pop it right at you without any preliminaries because it's . . . it's an emergency, I guess. Nan didn't go into detail about the killing of her father. I want you to know that. You've got to know it. That is, if you're going to consider my proposal."

"You see, Downer was a queer old duffer. Salt of the earth, but queer; eccentric. It was one of his eccentricities that led to his murder. He never would deal with a man except for cash. Kept a bank account and all, but when he did business checks didn't go."

"He had this payment due to West last November. The fifteenth, it was. That was pay day at his mill, too. The day before he drove into town and drew the money from the bank, started home about dusk and was killed not three miles from here by a bullet in the brain. The money, in one of these tin boxes, was taken out of his car. It amounted to over twelve thousand dollars."

"You see, I'm coroner here. I started an investigation and the sheriff, he fussed some, but that's about the extent of his abilities: fussing. "Two men, only, that we knew of, had the slightest motive. One was Jim Hinkle, whose money you got back for him tonight. He'd been working for Cash, had been fired the day before and first with gusto, which was Downer's way. But he was playing cribbage with Tod West all that evening and stayed in West's house all night, his family being away. So with West being what he's thought to be,—drily—"Hinkle was counted out."

"West was quite active in this thing. He wanted his money and Nan, Downer's only heir, didn't have more to pay him. He dug up the information that Holt Stuart had had a run-in with Cash early in the week. Holt was working for Cash. Well, it seems that Holt's pretty well struck with Nan. He's a good boy, but Cash was a cantankerous old cuss and he rode the boy pretty hard because of where he'd let his interests stray. As a sort of punishment, he'd sent Holt out to a cabin on Townline Lake to do some mapping and made him stay there all alone."

Hinkle, who was seated and whose eyes remained averted. "And now it's up to you," West said heavily. "I guess it's my right to expect that much from you."

"I'll look like hell, for me to do that," Jim protested. "After what he thought he done for me. . . . How'll I go at it? Besides, he's nobody to fool with."

"Never mind that. I'll take care of that"—nodding meaningfully. "And about how it'll look: you mean because he made a play at getting your money back?"

"Well . . . You see . . . " "Don't hedge! You can't pull wool over my eyes. Listen here, spite of all your talk in the store about not wanting to take your money back, you still think he did you a favor, don't you? If you had the guts to say what you believe you'd say, after all, that you thought he was right, that I did deal crooked?"

"Well, no! I tell you, I only—" "Shut up!" West gestured savagely. "Because a rat comes along and frames me so I'll look like a crook, you'll forget all I've done for you!"

"Well,—with a show of sullen defiance—"what if I do think it wasn't a frame-up against you? What then?" West leaned forward, face darkening, mouth settling in a cruel line. "So that's it, eh? So that's how you feel! Well, when you've forgotten everything else about me, remember this: I lied for you once, didn't I? I told 'em all I played cribbage with you the night Downer was killed, didn't I? And nobody knows I found you wandering around so blind drunk" if you was doin' me a favor. Instead, you put me in a hell of a hole. You nor nobody else, can make me think that Tod West would cheat at cards!"

"And if I shouldn't . . . what then?" Hinkle shrugged. "Well, I'd figure I'd done all that anybody can do for you by comin' here." He advanced a few steps, his voice moderating. "I'm not handlin' you anything, Young, I'm just doin' you a friendly act. This country thinks a lot of Tod, and there's men here that won't stand to see anything done against him."

"Plenty!" Young let his head drop backward and laughed. "So that was that! He had been spied upon since day-break, had been warned to clear out by an emissary who did not say all that he thought and felt. Such items should be pondered over, but first he had other things to do."

He and Ezra had decided that since he had an official if secret standing now, it would scarcely do for him to remain in the country with no better excuse than "the proclaimed intention of defying Tod West. So Kerry decided to apply to Nan Downer for work."

"Not long after Jim Hinkle's departure Kerry set out, Tip following at his heels. Nan Downer looked up from her desk and listened to Kerry's brief speech explaining his presence. "A job?" she asked, and surprise in her face. "It was not the surprise which made the deepest impression on Young. It was the quick coloring of her cheeks, the changing light in her eyes which indicated an interest in him over and above any amazement or regret or enthusiasm which his question might have provoked."

"Yes, a job. You know how it is, I guess: I've sort of got to stick around a while; and when I'm in one place, I don't just bunter to loaf."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for February 23 PEOPLE BEFORE PROPERTY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 8:26-37. GOLDEN TEXT—No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to one, and despise the other. "Thou shalt serve God and mammon"—Luke 16:13.

After his teaching by the parable of the soil and the lighted candle, Jesus exhibited his credentials, enforcing his teaching by demonstrations of his mighty power.

1. Jesus asleep (v. 23). While the disciples were sailing the ship the Master fell asleep. 2. The frightened disciples (vv. 23, 24). The storm seems to have been an unusual one. These sturdy men were used to storms, but as their ship was being filled with water they awoke Jesus with their cry of fear.

3. Jesus rebuked the wind and water (v. 24). At his word there was a great calm. We can with confidence put our trust in Jesus Christ. 4. Jesus rebuked the disciples (v. 25). After rebuking the raging elements, he turned to the disciples. He did not rebuke them for waking him, but for their lack of faith.

11. Jesus Casting Out Demons (vv. 26-30). In this mighty act Jesus' power over demons was demonstrated. Demon possession was in that day, and it is today, an awful reality. The characteristics are often similar to cases of insanity, and many are called insane, who are really demon-possessed.

1. Jesus met by the demoniac (vv. 26-29). This poor man's suffering was dreadful. He abode in the tombs without clothing. At the sight of Jesus he made an outcry and fell down before him and besought him not to torment him. There is no doubt in the mind of demons as to the reality of a place of torment.

2. Jesus' question (v. 30). He asked him, "What is thy name?" His purpose was to bring the real man to consciousness, to enable him to distinguish between himself and the demon who held him. The answer shows that the man thought his case was hopeless. He said, "Legion," which meant that many demons had entered into him.

3. The demons' request (vv. 31, 32). They asked permission to enter into a herd of swine. 4. Their request granted (vv. 32, 33). Just why this was done we do not know. Since Jesus did it, we must believe that it was right and wise. 5. The effect upon the people (vv. 34-37). The keepers of the swine went and made it known in the city and country.

Our Relation to God Vice and virtue chiefly imply the relation of our actions to men in this world; sin and holiness rather imply their relation to God and the other world.

Mr. Green, American Federation of Labor head, warns the miners' union not to split up the federation. Mr. Lewis, leader of the miners, tells Mr. Green, in substance, "You mind your own business." A labor split seems near.

Arthur Brisbane

Union labor should consider the fate of the dying peasant who summoned his sons and showed them how they could break small sticks separately, but could not break them when all were tied together.

Louis XI's motto, Divide et Impera ("Divide and rule"), in dealing with powerful nobles, is not unknown to the enemies of union labor, or Goethe's Divide and rule! Powerful word. Unite and lead! Better word.

A lonely English soldier living on an island in the Indian ocean wrote that he wanted a wife, saying, "I have hazel eyes," nothing else about himself. Already 250 English girls have offered to marry him. The 249 disappointed may find comfort in a better marriage, picking out somebody with blue eyes. It annoys many, but it must be said that practically all the great men in history had blue or gray eyes, even men from dark-eyed races, like Napoleon from Corsica, Caesar from Rome.

To save answering questions, here is a short list: Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Edison, Henry Ford. Look up the others.

Near Tampa, Fla., a schooner loaded with men, women, children, on the way to establish a nudist colony in the Virgin Islands, ran aground. Navigators were unwilling to sign for a nudist enterprise, afraid, perhaps, of catching cold, so the ship ran ashore.

Nudism is a queer atavistic craving. The human race began that way in the Garden of Eden, and each of us starts out as a nudist at birth. The struggle is to keep clothed thereafter. It is a strange demoralization that makes some long to run about undressed; the more strange because they look so hideously ugly.

Discouraged by incompetence that wrecked two dirigibles, this country decided that lighter than air machines are not necessary. It was necessary to borrow a small privately owned blimp to take food to 3,000 Tanager Islanders, cut off from relief by ice. No heavier than air plane could land there before the blimp, which landed easily.

Mussolini threatens to leave the league if it includes a ban on oil in its sanctions. In modern war, no oil, no war. Mussolini may buy old American ships to use as floating gasoline storage tanks. Had he come a little sooner he could have had plenty of them at a bargain, about one thousand million dollars' worth of expensive steel floating "junk," built when this country's foolish entrance into the World war found it unprepared.

England and Russia were getting along nicely, and now the Russian envoy, Litvinoff, attending the late King's funeral, commits the British unpardonable sin.

After talking with the new king, Litvinoff, instead of expressing admiration for the overwhelming royal intellect, remarked that the new king, Edward VIII, was "just a mediocre young Englishman" and repeated what the young king had said to him, something "not done."

Mr. Norman Thomas of the Socialists, leading his President sometimes call it says the "New Deal" is leading to Fascism, a dictator.

In Italy, Socialism, and doctrines even more radical, led to the rise of Mussolini, aided by cancer oil and other methods. If our dictatorship comes, some radicals will look back sadly to the good old days when you could speak your mind without being shot or put to work.

One man's frostbite is another man's good news. New Jersey fruit growers say the extreme cold, freezing the ground two feet deep, will destroy orchard pests, including the gypsy and codling moths. The cold, which has not injured trees, is expected to discourage larvae of the Japanese beetle. Some day scientists will show fruit farmers, including this writer, how to penetrate the earth by radioactivity, or otherwise, to the necessary depth and kill the hibernating pests. A remedy for horrors would be welcome. Radio power should solve the insect problem.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh spent his thirtieth birthday in Wales, his wife and one son with him. He must have felt as though he had already lived 100 years, and have wished, almost that he had been content to remain in the airmail service, apart from the Hmelight.

Senator Borah Throws His Hat in the Republican Ring—Administration's Revamped Farm Bill Introduced—Farley Assails Liberty League.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
Western Newspaper Union

WILLIAM E. BORAH, the liberal Republican senator from Idaho, is now a full fledged candidate for the Presidential nomination. He formally put himself in the running by announcing that he would enter the primary in Ohio which will be held May 12. That state requires that the candidate shall declare himself in writing, and this Mr. Borah said he would do.

Senator Borah

The senator's statement follows: "After a thorough survey of the Ohio situation I am convinced that the people of that state should be given an opportunity to express their choice in the Presidential primary on May 12. Under the so-called 'favorite son' plan this privilege is denied them. "To obtain an expression of popular will it is my intention to place at least eight candidates or delegates at large in the field. "I shall make a number of speeches in Ohio and present the issues as I see them."

It is understood by his friends that the senator will make a contest for delegates in almost every state having a preference primary. He says the G. O. P. conventions have been dominated by the old conservative leaders through the operations of the "favorite son" scheme and this control he intends to destroy if possible. It is his opinion that only a liberal Republican can defeat President Roosevelt next fall, and few will deny that he is the outstanding liberal in his party.

IN HIS press conference President Roosevelt announced that a billion dollars' worth of lending authorized by acts of congress would not be carried out. For example, the Home Owners' Loan corporation has passed on nearly all proposed loans and will not need between 500 million and a billion dollars, the President declared. Applications for HOLA loans closed last June 27. Outstanding loans of the agency amount to near 2 billion 900 million dollars.

HEADS of various government agencies concerned with housing have submitted to the President a nationwide, low cost program based on cheap federal loans to local communities. According to authoritative sources, this undertaking would contemplate:

1. A long-range building program.
2. Interest rates perhaps as low as 1 per cent on federal loans.
3. Construction of facilities for as many as one million families.

Full control of management and condemnation proceedings would be lodged with local officials under the plan, the plan being to decentralize activities from Washington.

CONFORMING to the request of the President, both senate and house passed measures repealing the cotton, tobacco and potato control acts. In the house nine radicals and John J. O'Connor of New York voted "no" as a protest against the Supreme court after Marcatonio of New York had delivered a violent attack on that tribunal.

Following this action, the senate agriculture committee rewrote and introduced the administration's substitute farm bill. The revamped measure provides that the federal government must make grants to the states just as it does now under the roads act. The states in turn would designate some agency, to be approved by the secretary of agriculture, to distribute the money to individual farmers. This money would be distributed on a formula taking into consideration:

- Average of crops.
- Area of soil improving or erosion preventing crops.
- Changes in farming practices.
- Percentage of the normal production of any one or more agriculture commodities designated by the secretary of agriculture, which equals that percentage of the normal national production of the commodity.

EVERY Presidential possibility these days must have some plan for the salvation of the American farmer. Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, often mentioned for the Republican nomination, now brings out his permanent farm program which he says would divorce the farm problem from "bureaucratic control" in Washington. His plan would embrace erosion control, soil conservation, and restoration of fertility of lands. Administration would be handled jointly by the states and the federal government "in a manner similar to highway construction."

The Dickinson program, similar to that advocated by former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, includes payment of the balance due signers of AAA contracts, a higher tariff on farm products, continued corn loans, and extension of farm mortgages at a low rate of interest.

INFLATIONISTS in congress, led by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma and Representative Patman of Texas, were all prepared to wage a great battle to force the printing of new money. They were just waiting for the introduction of a new tax program, declaring they would try to block such legislation if it were attempted. It was believed that, if the tax issue were not raised soon, the fight would start over the Frankel-Lewis farm mortgaging re-financing bill.

The forces behind this bill, which calls for the refinancing of farm indebtedness on easy terms through the issuance of up to $3,000,000,000 in new money, had succeeded in getting 219 signatures on a petition to force a vote in the house. Only 218 were needed and its backers were pressing for the three majorities.

Administration leaders were confident they could defeat the inflationists by a wide margin. SENATOR VANDENBERG of Michigan has grave doubts of the economic necessity or value of the ship canal that is being dug across central Florida, and offered in the senate commerce committee a resolution for investigation by a special committee. In support of his move he produced letters from eleven companies operating steamships saying they would not use the canal if it were not checked.

Work was started some time ago on the canal, which, if completed, will cost between $140,000,000 and $200,000,000.

TWO attacks on the American Liberty league were made in one day. The strongest was by Postmaster General Farley who spoke at a Roosevelt dinner in Miami, Fla., in the presence of the Liberty league. He said Farley, "would rule America. It would squeeze the worker dry in his old age and cast him like an orange rind into the refuse pail. It would continue the infamous policy of using the agencies of government to create a plutocracy that would perpetuate the sorry business of the Mellons and the Morgans in reducing 95 per cent of the people to the status of serfs at the mercy of the exploiters at the top."

J. A. Farley

"The American Liberty league speaks as conclusively for the reactionaries and their party as do Mr. Hoover, the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Manufacturers' association. "Its program is frankly plutocratic and asks for the rule of money over men, as during the 12 years before Roosevelt's administration. "It demands that workers and farmers be 'put in their places' and made to understand that they are mere hewers of wood and carriers of water. "Its idea of the 'American way' is to maintain a system under which all the wealth of the nation was being concentrated in the hands of a very few—5 per cent of the people."

At their convention in Washington the United Mine Workers took a crack at the Liberty league, adopting a resolution denouncing the organization as "inimical to the interests and people of the United States."

FIVE of the members of the new federal reserve board were inducted into office with due ceremony. A sixth, Ralph W. Morrison of Texas, was to arrive later and be sworn in. The seventh member had not yet been named by President Roosevelt. Mr. T. S. McClellan, appointed chairman, and M. S. Szymczak of Chicago, were holdovers. The others besides Morrison are Ronald Hanson, Atlanta banker; John McKee of Ohio, former chief bank examiner for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; and Joseph A. Broderick of New York. The reserve board, which has been called "a supreme court of banking," has powers unparalleled in American financial history. Among these is authority to double present margins that member banks are required to maintain against deposits; the dominant voice on the open-market committee, which charts the system's participation in the government bond market; and over which it had no authority under the former law; power of veto over the heads of the various reserve banks, which insures the selection of a president who will co-operate with the board, and the power to fix margins governing relations between banks and brokers.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—If ever there were a time other than when the nation was at war when money dominated the situation at Washington, it assuredly is now.

Money dominated the situation at Washington, it assuredly is now. One can go where he chooses about the government departments, to the White House or to Capitol Hill and the subject under discussion is or soon will be money.

A year or so ago, we heard a great deal about money. We heard of it in connection with an appropriation of $4,800,000,000, the greatest single one-time voting of money in our history. And, likewise, we heard money discussed when the President used his power to devalue the dollar in its relation to gold.

Now, however, the subject of money is discussed in a slightly different vein. The question that is paramount is how can the government get the money it needs. In other words, we are now getting around to the question of taxation, and it is a question that neither the President nor his lieutenants in congress like to face. It is an election year and a tax increase in election year is not what the politicians would call smoothing the highway of a campaign.

Passage of the legislation providing immediate payment of the veterans' bonus brought conditions to a head. The President vetoed the bonus bill and congress promptly overrode that veto. So the President promptly told congress that something had to be done about it; that the only funds the treasury could muster would be by borrowing; and that since congress had yielded to the vocal minority represented by the greatest lobby ever to populate the Capitol, it thereby captured for itself a problem of raising the money.

Of course, the President must assume some responsibility even though he vetoed the bonus for the reason that some of the funds which must be raised will go to pay the crop control benefits or bonus resulting from liquidation of the processing taxes and the Agricultural Adjustment act. The President, as well as the political leaders in congress, want to continue that payment and they also want to pay farmers on commitments previously made because they regard them as moral obligations under the AAA contracts. Yet the country is likely to think in terms of the bonus for the war veterans and pay little attention to the smaller amount scheduled to go to the farmers and, indeed, the veterans' bonus is almost six times that which the administration desires to pay to the farmers.

There was in this situation a development to which I believe attention should be called.

"It's Up to Henry" Through many years congress has been an easy spender. Through the same years it has avoided at every turn laying taxes to offset the money it voted out of the treasury. The Roosevelt administration has reached the peak of easy spending has been with a voracious "aye" on every spending proposal sent to the Capitol from the White House. The congressional attitude to which I have referred came up in bulk at the time of the bonus vote. Every time a bonus opponent inquired where the government would get the money to pay the two and one-half billion to the veterans, the answer from the bonus supporters was, in effect, "It's up to Henry."

I can recall a familiar slogan, current when I was a boy, that was used always when someone desired to shift responsibility to pass the buck. It was "let George do it." In the bonus controversy, Senator Bankhead, Democrat of Alabama, was the first member of congress whom I heard say "It's up to Henry." He meant that the job of raising the money belonged to Henry Morgenthau, secretary of the treasury, but Senator Bankhead spoke more than that. He put into words a thought which permeated the minds of a vast majority of unthinking representatives and senators.

Perhaps I should not say unthinking because those men were, in truth, thinking very deeply. Their thoughts, instead of turning to song in the spring, were turning to votes in November. That was the reason for passage of the bonus. Senators and representatives seeking re-election were in a state of mind to vote for the bill and had a weather eye out for the forthcoming campaign and the votes the bonus might bring.

Then consider the activity of Senator Borah. I believe the Idaho senator is too smart to feel that he can be the Republican nominee against Mr. Roosevelt, but he is going through all manner of gyrations just the same. He has purposes and objectives in mind, obviously, but they are not the Republican Presidential nomination as he leads his various audiences to infer. It is to be recalled that Senator Borah has not at any time actually said he was a candidate. We have also the circumstance of Senator Robinson replying to Al Smith over the same radio and through substantially the same number of broadcasting stations.

same time damning the New Deal spending policies, so I fancy that such an argument will be rarely advanced.

It is entirely probable that there will be no tax bill this year unless the President's letter to Speaker Byrns pointing out the necessity for raising revenue causes an unheard of number of senators and representatives to do a flip-flop. No imagination is required to see that a representative or senator is in a tough spot when he goes back home asking the suffrage of his constituents and must tell them at the same time that he added to the tax burden which they must pay.

Well, if that be true, how is "Henry" going to get the money? It will have to be borrowed and it will have to be borrowed on government bonds which add up into an increasing government deficit. It means that instead of a deficit of around three billions in the next fiscal year, the treasury will be confronted with a deficit of more than five billions and the public debt, in the meantime, will have been correspondingly increased. It means, in addition, that the banks of the country will have to pile more government bonds on top of the government bonds they have thus far absorbed in financing a policy of spending our way out of the depression.

The tragedy of the situation in congress that brought about Senator Bankhead's remark of "it's up to Henry" is that it indicates that congress has been looking upon the treasury as a source of revenue. It is not and it never has been. Government is non-productive. It can get funds only by taxation, by taking them away from the people—or by borrowing and if it borrows it has to pay back. In either event, new taxation must come and if congress doesn't have the nerve to pass tax legislation in this session, it must lay taxes in the next session.

The newspapers throughout the country have been full of reports concerning the early start of the political campaign. The Al Smith speech, coming from the man who made it, brought about a sudden expansion in the political fire. It really opened up the fight and henceforth we are due to be surfeited with this claim or that, this charge and that denial or counter-charge, as the various leaders marshal their forces.

Thus far, in addition to President Roosevelt's Jackson day speech to the $50-a-plate diners and Mr. Smith's Liberty cage dinner outburst, we have had active campaigning by former President Hoover, by Governor Taggart of Georgia, by Senator Borah, the Idaho Republican; by Governor Landon, the Kansas Republican, and by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate, who spoke in reply to Mr. Smith. Others are in the offing for the Republican and Democratic national committees are engaging radio times in a big way.

As speeches and statements increase in number, and as fanfare grows louder, I find myself getting a bit callous to them all. I have been wondering whether the American people have lost their sense of humor completely, because the situation really has a humorous side. Unless the people's sense of humor has been dreadfully seared, it seems to me they ought to be highly amused and indulgent statements now being made on one side of the fence or on the other. Take for instance, Mr. Roosevelt's handwritten bonus veto message. It presented something a bit unusual because in my time in Washington it had happened only once before that a President vetoed a bill with a handwritten message to congress. Of course, it was intended to be dramatic—and it was. But the point is this: A year ago when congress passed the bonus the President made a personal appearance in the halls of congress and read his own veto message. He made his vigorous fight and he rallied his supporters in line to sustain his veto. There has been so much talk around Washington since the handwritten message went to congress that the President really was not vigorously opposing passage of the bill over his veto that I am coming to believe that was true. In other words, he thought that immediate payment of the bonus was wrong but he had a weather eye out for the forthcoming campaign and the votes the bonus might bring.

Then consider the activity of Senator Borah. I believe the Idaho senator is too smart to feel that he can be the Republican nominee against Mr. Roosevelt, but he is going through all manner of gyrations just the same. He has purposes and objectives in mind, obviously, but they are not the Republican Presidential nomination as he leads his various audiences to infer. 800,000 Now on New Deal Rolls

Growth of the Emergency Bureaus Suggestive of Permanence.

Continued and heavy increases in the number of employees of the executive branch of the government is shown by the latest report of the United States Civil Service commission. The total number of employees in this one branch is now 800,075, or an increase by the New Deal of 236,582 over the number on the rolls when Mr. Roosevelt assumed office. The pay roll for this branch alone was $116,094,004 in October, 1935, and for the month of November it was $118,650,384.

Not only has the cost of supposedly "emergency" bureaus steadily increased but recent addition of thousands to the pay rolls has raised the question in Washington as to whether the administration has not definitely determined to make the bureaus permanent. In October 21,281 men and women were added to the "emergency" rolls and 8,210 more were added in November. At this time the administration was announcing that recovery was well on its way and that the "emergency" relief goal of the New Deal had been achieved.

The situation has important political significance for the reason that civil service laws do not affect the great army of new employees. They are selected on a basis of their party regularity. Chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee having ruled that applicants expecting appointment must have the endorsement of Democratic committees in their home districts or counties.

Thirty new bureaus have been added to the complex machinery of the administration since March, 1933. Experience has proved that they are more easily created than abolished. It is difficult even to reduce them, even if reduction is desired. The NRA, declared unconstitutional in May, 1935, still carried 2,575 persons on its pay roll in the following December. It was in that month that the famous steam-roller was broken up and its staff was distributed among other "emergency" bureaus.

In July, 1935, Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell announced that his Resettlement Administration was going to discharge 8,000 of its employees. The Tugwell administration had inherited something like 18,000 employees from other agencies. Apparently the process of elimination was only temporary. The following shows how the Resettlement rolls progressed:

Month	Number of Employees
July	11,592
August	14,094
September	15,809
October	14,023
November	14,037

It has been estimated that if only the employees of the new bureaus created by the New Deal were to be placed under one roof, they would require the biggest office building in the world.

The growth of the bureaus, with their immense pay rolls, is attracting more attention of late because it is these costly bureaus that have been largely responsible for billions in red ink on the administration's books.

New Deal Blows $230 a Second

Takes in $130 a Second in Jamboree of Spending and Borrowing.

By DR. NEIL CAROTHERS
Director of the College of Business Administration, Lehigh University, and Member National Advisory Council of the American Liberty League.

Our Federal Government is spending money at the rate of more than 7,000 millions of dollars a year, but it is getting in revenues not much more than half that. The rest it is borrowing, just as a man living beyond his income may borrow for a while to keep up with the Joneses. Our government is, roughly, spending $230 for every second of every minute of every hour of every day and every night. It has been doing this for two years. But it is taking in less than $130 per second. It is borrowing at the rate of $100 a second.

The government is borrowing these incredible sums chiefly from the banks. This automatically results in a swollen and morbid condition of bank reserves and bank credit. The combination of an uncertain currency system and a bloated credit condition is as explosive as dynamite. It may explode in a national inflation.

Inflation Hits Wage-Earner. The first consequence of inflation is a rapid and feverish rise of prices, in stocks, in raw materials, in retail goods. This rise of prices is always far ahead of the wages and salaries of the great mass of the people. The immediate result is a rising cost of living. This is a practical thing. There is no theory about it. It falls most heavily on the wage-earner, the small married man, the man or woman on a small income. It means that the children of the poor have a little less to eat, that houses are a little colder in the winter, that father does not get a new overcoat.

As inflation progresses it eats into savings accounts. Even a small inflation will take away all the interest on savings and then cut pieces off the account itself, faster than the owner can add to it. As it moves on, inflation reduces the value of all fixed incomes, from bonds, building and loan shares, preferred stock, and life insurance policies. Slowly but surely it eats away the living of the widow and orphan, takes boys out of school and college, sends old people out to hunt work or charity, and destroys the life-long accumulations of thrifty and hard-working people. It destroys universities and hospitals, charities and pension systems, wills and intertestances.

Inflation's Ultimate Result. In the final stages of a ruinous inflation a nation's trade is destroyed, its industries paralyzed, its capital eaten out. A merchant will sell all his goods at a handsome profit week after week, only to find himself bankrupt at the end. A workman will labor all week and find on Saturday that his wages have been going down every day. There is a popular notion that inflation hurts the rich but not the poor. Inflation hurts everybody, rich and poor. But it falls most heavily on the wage-earner, on the little fellow. In Germany inflation drove the plain people to black bread and paper clothes, but it also destroyed the prosperous classes. No class can escape, unless it be a very small class of manipulators and gamblers.

Knox Versatile Out-of-Door Man

Business Man, Editor, Party Worker Keeps Fit as He Works Hard.

In Frank Knox, the Chicago publisher, Illinois Republicans, who have unanimously endorsed him for the Republican nomination for President, have offered to the country the most versatile man in public life since Theodore Roosevelt. Unlike Roosevelt, however, Frank Knox has had an outstanding business and professional career and has never held public office. He is recognized as one of the best business men in the newspaper business. As an editor, his editorials have revealed an intelligent, alert and vigorous personality which have made him a public figure. In the metropolitan press of today such a combination of business acumen and editorial ability in one man is uncommon.

While engaged in making a success of his newspapers, Knox has achieved distinction in many other directions. He made an enviable record as a volunteer soldier in two wars. He has been in politics for thirty years, serving as precinct worker, state chairman, national convention floor leader for a Presidential candidate and has stumped two-thirds of the Union for national, congressional and state candidates.

On business, financial, economic, social welfare and political issues, Knox has always been on the liberal and progressive side of the argument. His public record of battles against monopoly, for social justice, for the betterment of farm and labor conditions and against un-American, coercive policies, fully attest this fact. In all his endeavors he has manifested vision and vigor as well as a keen sense of moral and spiritual values.

Knox plays as he works and it is in his out-of-door life that he has shown a versatility even greater than that of Theodore Roosevelt. Knox has not only been a hunter and a fisherman, but has paddled his own canoe through most of the rapids of the upper Great Lakes. He has driven his own pack train over the plains and mountains of half a dozen western states, ridden horseback over the mountains of New England and has followed a "chuck-wagon" and helped the Apaches in their fall round-up. He has visited every Indian reservation in the country. Knox can sail a boat, run a launch or automobile. He was an early devotee of the ski, the skate and the toboggan and is an expert swimmer. Nowadays he packs a heavy bag of golf clubs and has used them on links in all parts of the country.

Early in his married life Mr. and Mrs. Knox explored the Great Lakes and Hudson Bay country. Moose and deer, trout and the "musky" fell before their prowess with rifle and rod. Mrs. Knox proving an expert fly-fisherman. From his log cabin home on the St. Mary's river, Knox went to work or to cruise in his launch, sail-boat or canoe. There he learned the ice and snow sports. In New England he added horseback riding to his accomplishments. As a member of the Board of Indian Commissioners he made his renowned riding expeditions to the out-of-the-way Indian reservations with Mrs. Knox. They studied the Indians and took steps in Washington to remedy their living conditions; an interest they still continue.

While engaged in this work, Knox cleared the Montana range of 30,000 useless wild horses which were canned and sent to Japan. In their place he had the army remount service send blooded stallions to be bred with the rugged cow and Indian ponies of the Northwest. The result has been better mounts for the army and better horses for the Indians.

Although Knox has never held public office, with this record in front of them, Illinois Republicans do not hesitate to proclaim the qualifications of their candidate as an all-around, up-to-date, constructive man and statesman.

When you touch the pocket book nerve of the average citizen dynamite comes to life.

BEGIN THE New Year RIGHT

By Placing Your Advertisements in The DAVIE RECORD

The Paper That The People Read.

For more than 36 years this paper has been going into the homes of the best people in Davie county. Many of those who don't subscribe, borrow their neighbor's paper, for when we make a mistake they are the first to tell us about it. Your father and your grandfather read The Record and carried their ads with us. There is but one business firm in Mocksville today that was here when this paper was founded--C. C. Sanford Sons Co. They were among our first advertisers, and have continued with us for all these years. The merchant who advertises is the merchant who gets the most business. This fact was demonstrated during the Christmas season. The local stores were visited frequently, and the ones who advertised were the ones who had to employ extra salespeople to take care of the rush.

If You Haven't

Been advertising in your local papers in the past, why not turn over a new leaf and give them a trial. The cost is cheap and the results will surprise you. Write or phone us, and we will be glad to call and talk the matter over with you.

There are a number of cases of smallpox in Davie county. About 20 cases are reported in the Smith Grove and Redland sections. Up to this time no deaths have resulted.

What's The Rush.

It is not easy to understand the frantic activity on the part of the administration leaders in Washington to enact farm legislation to supplement the invalidated AAA. Considerable discussion in the death of the bill is such as to invalidate the AAA. Legislative conditions are so dire that immediate ill effects are being felt. Changes have been made in the bill. Contrary benefits are being realized. It is true today, the close students of agriculture can see, there is a little of any detrimental effects developing for at least some time.

In view of these facts it would seem that the wise things for Congress to do would be to make haste slowly, seeking to find a sound and permanent solution of the agricultural problems instead of trying to pass stop-gap legislation of questionable and experimental legislation, and Congress should now address itself to finding solutions sound in character, workable and lawful.

The bill introduced in Congress this week as a substitute for the AAA program is clearly a make shift proposal. In substance it is but another experiment. In fact it is but a hurried attempt to offset the political ill effect of the defeat of the administration program. Even its sponsors recommend that its life be confined to only two years, evidently being quite doubtful as to the merits of the program.

The very title of the bill shows the insincerity of its percentage. It is put forward as a soil conservation program, which however meritorious is a longtime undertaking and wholly undatable as an emergency measure. Its applicability to the North is exceedingly doubtful, although it may present a workable form in the South, where conditions are entirely different from in the North. That at best it is but an effort to circumvent the decision of the Supreme Court invalidating the AAA is indicated by the fact that Senator Norris, of Nebraska, staunch supporter of the New Deal, declared in the Senate when the bill was introduced that in his opinion the act would be unconstitutional.

There is no question as to the need of legislation which will remedy the inequalities inherent to agriculture. It is one of the most important problems confronting Congress. But this relief cannot be provided by hasty and ill-advised action, nor by further questionable experiments largely predicated upon political expediency. It deserves and demands thorough and careful consideration, and Congress should tackle the problem in this spirit, seeking permanent remedies instead of temporary makeshifts.—Rock County Herald, Luvenc, Minn.

A Different Meaning.

An item in Saturday's Daily told of the capture of a large quantity of "bottled-in-bond" liquor, and you probably read that "the liquor is being held for future disposal by the court." But originally it was not written that way. "Future distribution" instead of "future disposal" was the way the newsgatherer put it until the big fellow who edits the copy made the significant change. Maybe the wish to share in the "distribution" was the father of the word, but anyhow "disposal" is the more appropriate word. It probably saved the court from its friends, because our people have a habit of believing what they see in this paper.—Statesville Daily.

Don't Like New Deal.

Dear Stroud.—I have had your notice of the expiration of my subscription several days, but I have been trying to get hold of a dollar that I could spare. As I do not have a Federal job nor have not been on relief roll, I can hardly pay my groceryman.

When I renewed my subscription two years ago I told you the dollar was not a New Deal coin, but one that had been laid back under the Old Deal. A year ago in renewing again it was the same. Now all my Old Deal dollars are gone. These four years of Brain Busting Rule have left all who are not on the Federal pay roll in the lurch. If there is not a change of administration next November, you will just have to cancel my subscription when it expires again.

Three years ago every man in this country of ours, regardless of race, creed or politics, put their shoulders to the wheel and gave 100 per cent. support to our President in his first alphabet blunder. At that time many knew and thousands of others thought it was unconstitutional, yet all said we will help him if he is sincere and can better conditions.

This first alphabet experiment was soon followed by other set-ups creating Federal departments and commissions so fast and furious no one could figure what it was all about. Hundreds of thousands were added to the Federal pay roll. It took 80 cents of a dollar to give some poor starving family 20 cents. Billions of dollars, that our great-grand children will be paying back was placed in the hands of our president. In many instances this dollar power was wielded as a club, beating states and municipalities into line where they bucked on bending their knees to the Powers on Capitol Hill.

Today the unemployed is as big a problem as it was three years ago, although the Federal government has employed near a million as clerks and administrators of the many fool and unconstitutional set-ups. These unemployed cannot eat parks, concrete stadiums, dance halls or monkey homes. I just today read that the PWA was building a ten thousand dollar monkey home in Memphis, Tenn. Perhaps it can be used as an old age home for the New Dealers. Thanks to the same Americans that sit on the bench of the Supreme Court of this country of ours, all these alphabet symbols can soon be expressed with three letters WAS.

So find enclosed one dollar. Let the old Record come on. Whooop it up for Borah, Landon, or any good American. Let us have an American for President of America.

With best wishes for you and yours, I am,

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

A Good Town Plus.

A Good Town Plus, is a town that its citizens believe in. A town whose merchants are up-to-date, modern and so co-operative and considerate of the patrons of their respective places of businesses, that "home-folks" just simply have't the nerve to go to nearby cities and spend their money.

A Good Town-Plus, is a town whose newspapers are natural boosters of each and every phase of its development, exploiters of its present and future present and future possibilities; reliable in their present and future possibilities; reliable in their presentation of facts and subscribed to and supported by the home-town constituency.

A Good Town-Plus, is a town with fine churches, able ministers and a church-going people.
A Good Town-Plus, is a town of fine schools, trained and efficient teachers whose student body has loyalty and devotion to their school, its teachers and studies.

A Good Town-Plus, is a community of civic-minded business and professional men whose association one with another, is that which marks and sets-up a degree of fellowship where in friendships become stronger and more enduring as time adds to the calendar of their affiliation in the civic, social and business circles and contracts. A Good Town-Plus, is a town where "knockers" die young and meddlers, gossippers and jinglers of ill-will stiff to death in the stillness of their own loneliness.

A Good Town Plus, is that town whose officials are not unmindful of their duty, yet courteous and appreciative to a public who regard for them is responsible for their position of trust.

From The County of A. D. Watts.

Most anything can be expected from a county that produced such a political manipulator as the late Alston D. Watts. In Iredell county a few days ago, as related by the Statesville Landmark, this occurred.
"Considerable improvements had been made on the buildings and grounds of one of schools in North Iredell, through the generosity of one of the governmental agencies. The teacher was proud of the appearance of the place when the work was completed and sought to impress some of the little folks with a proper respect for the source of this aid.

"Who gave us this comfortable new class room," she asked the primary class.
"Mr. Roosevelt," came the answer from a half a dozen.
"Who gave us the paint to beautify the whole building?"
"Mr. Roosevelt," again was the right answer.

"And who made it possible for us to have those trees and grass to increase the beauty of our lawn?" she asked.
"God," came the answer from a little fellow on the back seat. Whereupon the red-headed scrapper of the class showed his political leanings with "Say, teacher, whadya say to throwing that Republican outa here."—Ex.

Poker-Playing Wives Lectured.

A Philadelphia police magistrate the past week lectured 11 poker-playing wives and mothers and fixing the aote at $300 each, bound two of them over to the grand jury. This business of playing cards with grocery money while husbands and children wait for their meals has to stop, Magistrate Jacob Dogole told devotees of the indoor pastime with his best poker face.

"You women ought to be ashamed of yourself," he went on. "You are all mothers," but instead of staying home and caring for your children, you go out losing money on cards. I understand a number of you don't bother getting your husband's supper when you have a game on. As a husband, I can appreciate what that means."
"Mrs. Catherine Seltzer, 26, and Mrs. Anna Segal, 48, who "entered" in their kitchens, police said, and took a "cut out of the pot," were ordered bonded, the other nine women, and a man, were sent home.

Philadelphia police were uninvited kitchen visitors at the Seltzer and Segal homes. The women were herded off to a police station.
"I have had a complaint from a husband who is here in the room," Magistrate Dogole announced at the hearing. "He doesn't want to testify and I don't blame him."
Police said he wasn't the first husband who complained.

Buying at home, whenever possible, is one way to help make Mocksville successful.

More Liquid And More Drunkenness.

Bill Arp Lowrance, editor of the Mecklenburg Times, attended a meeting of the Virginia Press Association, at Richmond, recently and returning home gives his observations of the handling of the liquor problem in Virginia. He says:

"If anyone should try to tell you that there is just as much drinking here in North Carolina as there is in Virginia don't believe them for there is not one iota of truth in their statements. We have just returned from a few days in that state and there is more drinking there than in any other state we have visited recently, and a great deal more than they had a year or two ago. Certainly there had to be a lot of drinking for the ABC stores sold over $12,300,000 worth of whiskey during the past year (beer and wine is not sold by the ABC stores but just as it is in this state and is not included in the above figures.) Many of those who did favor the controlled sale of whisky are not fearful of the outcome. We understood from some Virginians that the Control Board authorities were fearful that the General Assembly, now in session, might try to revise some of the regulations, and if they do it might be taken to the people to decide and if the people had an opportunity to vote on liquor or no liquor at this time, the majority might vote dry.

"Of course, the revenue from the sale of whisky is a big problem and they do not want to lose this income. The ABC Board has a gross profit of about 50 per cent of the amount of the sale, and after all the cost of the department has been paid there is a considerable income for the state.
"In commenting on the report of the Richmond Police Department in reference to drunkenness, the Richmond Times-Dispatch says:
"That portion of the annual report of the Richmond Police Department which deals with arrests for drunkenness in 1935 will be disturbing to those Virginians who had pinned their hopes on the ABC system of distributing intoxicating liquor not only to reduce lawlessness, particularly bootlegging, but to promote the cause of temperance itself. The figures are not alarming, nor do they indicate anything like a collapse of the experiment, but at least they are sufficiently significant to arrest the attention and to interest legislators in remedial measures, if it be found that conditions in the capital city reflect the situation throughout the State.

"In 1935, despite concerted efforts to bring about safer traffic conditions, arrests for drunken driving took a sharp upward turn. The number of cases was 840, as compared with 280 for the preceding year. Total arrests for drunkenness jumped from 5,715 in 1934, to 6,078 in 1935. And it should be remembered in this connection, that the ABC stores were in operation for just a little more than half a year in 1934, while they were running full blast during the entire twelve-month period of 1935. If prohibition was repealed, and the State monopoly system, instituted in an effort to promote temperance, it would seem, on the face of Richmond police figures, that the experiment has failed, so far to get the desired result."
"It is easily seen that they still have a problem to deal with and one which we think is a harder problem than the one we have in this state."

1935 Population Of The United States Estimated.

Washington.—The 1935 population of the United States was officially estimated today by the census bureau at 127,521,000.
The official count is taken as of the middle of the year—July 1. The new figure represented a gain of .71 per cent from 1934 and 4 per cent from 1930 when the last actual census was taken.
Sleep may be a waste of time but it is necessary if you plan to have much time.

Shoots Corpse During Burial.

Newton.—An exciting incident took place Sunday afternoon during the burial of Uncle Mose Derr, colored, of Newton, whose remains were laid to rest in the Liberty Hill Baptist church at Claremont.

A Newton negro, said to have been drinking, who was attending the burial services, pulled a pistol out of his pocket and stated that he believed he would "finish Uncle Mose up," whereupon he shot several times through the hearse in which the body was being carried.

The shots caused considerable disturbance among the negro mourners.
The negro with the gun was said to be a youth 18 years old, son of Jess Williams.

According to rumors, the negro youth declared he had been threatened previously by Uncle Mose.

The young negro is said to have walked up to the hearse while it stood in the church yard, whipped out a gun and fired three shots through the casket and the dead body of 'Uncle Mose.'

"Uncle Mose threatened to kill me once, so I just want to make sure the old devil is dead," the negro was quoted as having exclaimed following the shooting.

Spray Your Fruit Trees.

Brown rot is one of the most common and destructive diseases of peaches in North Carolina. This disease is present on practically all trees whether in large orchards or small. Small brown specks on the fruit which rapidly enlarge is the first symptom on the fruit. On defoliated trees the disease is easily distinguished by hard shriveled dead fruit, commonly called "mummies." Practically everyone who grows peaches is familiar with this mummified fruit. Where a spray is not used the loss from brown rot is as high as 75 per cent in many cases.
Brown rot can be effectively controlled by large and small growers at a very small cost per tree. There are two necessary steps in the control of this disease, namely; sanitation and a spray schedule. Sometime during the dormant season all "mummies" should be removed from the trees and destroyed by burning, or by plowing them under to a depth of four or five inches.

Lime-sulphur and wettable sulphur are effective and practice to use. 12½ Pounds of dry-mixed lime-sulphur to 50 gallons of water is the formula generally used. Dry-mixed lime-sulphur can generally be purchased already prepared. The wettable sulphur can also be purchased ready to mix with water.

Ordinarily three applications of one or the other sprays is recommended. The first application should be made approximately four weeks after the blossom petals have been shed. A second application four to six weeks later and the third application ten days to two weeks before the fruit is due to ripen. In some instances four applications are made when rot is severe.
For the average size three two gallons of spray will give complete coverage. Equipment for spraying, of course, depends upon the number of trees to be sprayed. Generally spraying well pays for itself.

Right But Mistaken.

Senator Nye, chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee is implicitly correct when he states that all food stuffs should be included in a list of embargoes against a belligerent nation; but shows ignorance of the preeminence of the economic motive when he expresses the belief that the farmers of the country would, presumably in all circumstances, back such a comprehensive neutrality program.—Ex.

Only sixteen more days of winter weather is supposed to be ahead of us, but keep your eye on your coal bin or woodpile and take no chances.

The Record has for many years backed up the groundhog while other folks cussed him from morning to night. But we are through. A hog that will lie like that hog has done this winter deserves no sympathy from anyone.

It was reported some time ago that all the Emergency Relief Administration offices and employees had been put out of business, and that no more direct relief would be available. Perhaps so. But when we look around we see many of the old crowd still drawing their pay checks. A rose by any other name is just as sweet.

The Republican county convention will be held at an early date. This convention will elect delegates to the State, Congressional and Senatorial Conventions, and will also elect a county chairman and a county secretary. It is thought the convention will meet some time next month. There are several whose names have been mentioned for chairman, but it is not known just who the convention will select.

The nine members of the U. S. Supreme Court are mighty good fellows now, according to what the democrats are saying. They are not the nine old men who are dishing out partisan decisions. This great change was wrought when the Court decided last week that TVA was constitutional. This was one of Franklin's pet hobbies. When the Supreme Court declared the NRA and the triple A unconstitutional, the democrats raised a mighty howl. The old saying that the hit dog howls, still holds true.

Some fellow, writing to the Winston-Salem Journal, says that "James Ananias Farley has wrapped the American flag around a liquor barrel and sent us hellward." Well, perhaps this same fellow voted for Franklin Roosevelt for president, knowing just how wet he was. We have no sympathy for any man who claimed to be a prohibitionist, who voted for Roosevelt. Everybody who had sense enough to vote, knew that Roosevelt was a liquor man—that the big plank in his platform was to repeal the prohibition laws if he was elected. Fact is, this is the only plank in the 1932 democratic platform, that has been carried out.

The great objection to the New Deal alphabet was the fact that thousands of those who really needed help didn't get it, and that other thousands who didn't need assistance, were given the best jobs. At one time an investigation was talked of, as some of the relief boys thought they didn't get a fair deal. Just what happened to stop the investigation we didn't learn. There were many persons on relief who never did an honest day's work in their lives. There were others on relief who spent their earnings for liquor instead of groceries. A report was sent out that no person who got drunk would be retained on the relief rolls. So far as we know this ruling was never enforced in North Carolina. We are all hoping for the day to soon come when all this alphabetical foolishness will be thrown away—when the honest man can get an honest days work, and the farmer can plant his own acres in what he sees fit without having to get the consent of some little political officeholder. The majority of the citizens of the United States believe in a Republic and not a monarchy.

Promises, plus cash, carry elections.

New Drug Store.

Dr. Stacy B. Hall, and A. M. Kimbrough, Jr., will open the Hall-Kimbrough Drug Co., in the new Hanes-Johnstone store building just west of Hendrix' store, about the first of March. The new store will carry a full line of drugs, proprietary medicines, magazines, tobaccos, toilet goods, stationery, fountain drinks, etc. Dr. Hall has held a position as pharmacist with LeGrand's Pharmacy for the past seven years, and has made many friends since coming to Mocksville. He has had more than ten years experience as a registered druggist, and will have charge of the prescription department. Mr. Kimbrough is a son of A. M. Kimbrough, of this city, and has spent practically all of his life in Davie county. The Record is glad to welcome this new store, and bespeaks for it much success.

New Variety Store.

The Mocksville Community Variety Store, featuring merchandise in the price range from 5 cents to $1.00, will occupy the store room in the new Hanes-Johnstone building adjoining the Princess Theatre. Mr. F. C. Barnes, who will manage the new store, was here this week to arrange for the opening, going from here to Baltimore to buy a complete new stock of merchandise. He expects to have his new business open within two weeks. Fixtures are now being installed. It is understood that Community Variety Stores, Inc., plan to open other stores in the state.

Mr. Barnes, who is a native North Carolinian, formerly lived in Statesville, but has been engaged in business in Florida for several years. He has rented the T. B. Bailey residence, near the depot, and will move his family from Jacksonville early in March. The Record is glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Barnes and children to our town—the best town in all the world.

Letter From Iowa.

Editor of The Davie Record:—I read in a late issue of your paper about the cold weather you have been having. I thought I would describe, if I can, our weather. You people will probably say, "It is unbelievable." But come and see for yourself.

In the last 30 days, it has been below zero most of the time. It has been down to 32 degrees below zero at Marshalltown, and around 12 degrees below often. A few times for a few hours at a time during these 30 days it got up to 6 above zero. It snows nearly every day, and then wind blows, drifting the snow. Feb. 8, 9, and 10th all highways and most all railroads were completely blocked. The awful blizzard made it impossible to see to run the snow plows, and besides, the snow would blow in plows. Even the snow plows have to be shoveled out by crews of men. Only the main highways are being opened. The coal situation is critical. Nearly all schools, churches, unnecessary public buildings, and many stores are closed on account of coal shortage. Families are moving together. The extreme cold caused a shortage, then after the Iowa miners consented to work one more day each week, the snow blocked the delivery. Most of the town dealers around here report, "No Coal." When Marshalltown dealers get any it is distributed from 1/2 ton and often 2 bushels to a family. When a physician is needed, many willing men go along to open the roads, or get him to his patient in our any way possible. We enjoy the Davie Record very much.

Over the radio noon news broadcast on Feb. 17th, it was reported that it was 54 degrees below zero in North Dakota last night and headed this way. It is blowing and drifting hard now. People can't open roads, so are cutting fences and going thru the fields. It is 14 degrees below now, and going down. Zero is warm weather. Usually, good crops follow a hard winter, so we are looking forward to unusually good crops. Not much influenza but diphtheria, scarlet fever and smallpox are breaking out. People are in cheerful spirits, in spite of the hardships.

MRS. FLOYD ALLEN,
Marshalltown, Iowa.

Loans Now Available To Farmers.

An office of the Statesville Production Credit Association, which in reality is a farmer's bank supervised by the Farm Credit Administration, has been opened at the County Agent's Office in Mocksville on Monday and Tuesday of each week, beginning February 17, for the service and convenience of farmers in Davie County.

The Production Credit Association lends money to farmers at a minimum cost for purchasing fertilizer, seed, workstock, and provides other necessary funds for other expenses incurred in connection with the production of crops. At the present time the rate of interest is 5 per cent per annum, and any farmers in Davie County who are interested in securing a loan should contact a representative of the Production Credit Association in Mocksville on the dates heretofore mentioned.

Republican State Convention.

A State Convention of the Republican Party of North Carolina is hereby called, to meet in the city of Raleigh, at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, March 24, 1936, for the purpose of transacting all business that may properly come before the Convention.

In accordance with the Plan of Organization, the Chairmen of the County Executive Committees of the several counties are respectively requested to call their County Conventions, to select delegates to the State Convention and the several District Conventions.

Miss Meek Neely Is 98 Years Old.

Miss Meek Neely is 98 years old. Sunday the 16th was her birthday, a birthday celebrated very quietly this year and just counted "another day" by Miss Meek herself who used to say she would do her celebrating when she reached 100.

Born at the old Neely homestead in Davie county, daughter of Washington and Providence Neely, Miss Meek was known as an outstanding teacher for many years and has hosts of friends scattered about through the adjoining towns and counties who were the pupils of earlier days. Since retiring from the class room she has kept up an alert interest in all the matters of the time, has visited the sick, taken long walks and enjoyed company at any hour. Her home for some time has been with her devoted niece, Mrs. W. J. Stinson who has been an entertaining companion and most careful nurse. For a few months past Miss Meek has showed some signs of failing in her physical activity, she says the winter time is hard for her but she expects to be up and out with return of spring time. Not really sick she has required more constant attention and care and because of the illness of Mrs. Stinson it was found necessary to remove her to the H. F. Long hospital Saturday, so this 98th birthday was celebrated over there with the "girls" as she calls her nurses. It is her very first experience with a hospital and she is finding it a very satisfactory one—is perfectly content to stay on... "resting up a bit and getting a little change" as she would put it.—Statesville Daily.

A 6 room bungalow, owned and occupied by Miss Mattie Stroud, 509 W. Bell St., Statesville, was badly damaged by fire Sunday afternoon. The contents were saved. The damage amounted to several hundred dollars. Miss Stroud is a sister of The Record editor.

NEW TALKING PICTURE TO BE SHOWN

Greater Farm Profits and Getting the Most from Tractors Are the Subjects of Two New Sound Pictures To Be Shown By Local Implement Dealer.

Martin Brothers local farm equipment dealers will hold open house for the farmers of this vicinity to see the new talking motion picture, "Sheppard & Son", a sequel to "Partners" shown last year. He will be aided by representatives of the John Deere organization.

a short course in modern farming, with new and better ways of doing things, new ways of saving money, new methods to increase crop yields. The picture is a continuation of the story of Mr. Sheppard and his son, Dick, who made such a hit last year. A feature of the picture is the trip through the ten great John Deere Factories and shows you how modern agricultural implements are made. The picture also takes you out into the fields to see how each of these machines operate and what it will do.

On the same program will also be a picture, "Murphy Delivers the Goods", a service picture which shows you how to get the most from your John Deere Tractor, with animated drawings of the working of the motor and cooling system. This picture is declared to be decidedly worth while, and suggests many helpful hints in adding to the economy and satisfaction to be derived from a tractor.

The meeting will be in session from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. on Saturday Feb. 29th in the Princess Theatre in Mocksville.

"We invite every farmer in this section to be our guest and we particularly want the boys to come," says Martin Brothers.

"We are planning to make this a sociable affair, but at the same time a very worth while one to farmers and their families. We are counting on a big crowd coming in to enjoy the big day with us."

John Deere Day is proving exceptionally popular with farmers as evidenced by the picture above which shows an interested group at one of these meetings. A free barbecue dinner will be served at Martin Brothers store immediately after the show Saturday.

Borah Challenge Gets No Reply

New Deal Fails to Disclose What Amendments It Proposes.

By JOUETT SHOUSE
President, American Liberty League.
Glib talk about making the Constitution more "flexible" constitutes a major item in the stock in trade of the present administration.
From the President on down, administration spokesmen have been voluble on this subject. So far they have not "written the amendment" in response to the challenge to do so issued by Senator Borah of Idaho following the President's lengthy speech to newspaper correspondents voicing his displeasure because the Supreme Court invalidated NRA codes. However, if the utterances of administration spokesmen have any meaning at all, it is that they favor abolition of the power of the Supreme Court to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation.

Would Nullify Constitution.
Such an amendment, if adopted, would mean the practical nullification of the Constitution. It would mean that Congress and the President could then do anything which they might choose to do with the rights and privileges of American citizens, as guaranteed by the Constitution at present. It would mean—and this is not in any way a far-fetched suggestion—that a dominating President and a rubber stamp Congress could transform our present American constitutional system into a one man dictatorship.

What the 'Stakes Are.
What have the American people at stake in this possibility?
In the circumstances outlined, Congress could establish a state religion and tell us at what church we must worship. It could prohibit free speech. It could abolish a free press. It could prohibit citizens from assembling to petition the government. It could prevent a citizen from having arms for his own protection. It could provide for the quartering of soldiers in our households in time of peace. It could authorize the searching of our homes and the seizure of our goods and papers without cause or reason. It could authorize the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of any citizen at the whim of some official and without any supporting oath or affirmation. It could provide for the seizure of property without compensation. It could abolish the right of trial by jury and the supreme right to an impartial trial. It could provide for cruel and unjust punishment and for excessive bail and fines.

In other words, every protection which the Constitution has thrown about the individual citizen for whose benefit it was adopted would be entirely withdrawn and the people of America would be subject to the autocratic whim of the temporary governing body just as are many of the people of Europe today.

Your father and your grandfather read The Record and carried their ads with us. There is but one business firm in Mocksville today that was here when this paper was founded---C. C. Sanford Sons Co. They were among our first advertisers, and have continued with us for all these years. The merchant who advertises is the merchant who gets the most business. This fact was demonstrated during the Christmas season. The local stores were visited frequently, and the ones who advertised were the ones who had to employ extra salespeople to take care of the rush.

If You Haven't
Been advertising in your local papers in the past, why not turn over a new leaf and give them a trial. The cost is cheap and the results will surprise you. Write or phone us, and we will be glad to call and talk the matter over with you.

As far as the compromises worked out, it appears that the leaders are willing again legislation directed at crop-control in a semi-compulsory manner. forthcoming, the new law act be nothing more than a disguised attempt to circumvent prohibitions laid down in the court opinion holding the AAA unconstitutional. In any event, the in the situation appears to be the absence of clear thinking, the circumstances we see represent a political cowardice of the worst.
It is to be remembered the session of congress more than a year since President Roosevelt died, there exist a greater number of cross currents of opinion than in the past. A great deal in opposition to the New Deal sponsored by the New Deal political reasons the individual oppose these things dare not show their disapproval of policies as such. Thus, a has arisen among Washingtoners that representatives and concerned with directing end new farm legislation are like up the situation rather than with a definite and workable plan.
The situation at the White and in congress in connection with agriculture probably is not as bright as it once was. Washington.—Five important stones in the New Deal recovery arch have been torn from their moorings now and from all of the commentaries I have been able to pick up, it appears that the general situation has been clarified thereby. Two of the major New Deal laws—the NRA and the AAA—have been tossed overboard by the Supreme court of the United States and Congress, at the request of the President, now has thrown three others into the limbo of unnecessary things by repealing the legislation for control of cotton, tobacco and potatoes. These three with their parent, the Agricultural Adjustment act, represented all that was basic in the New Deal farm program.

The importance of the President's act in repealing three of the three compulsory crop-control laws cannot be minimized. Mr. Roosevelt recognized, when the AAA was invalidated, that the other three crop-control laws would be of no further use because they were predicated upon the national law. He recognized further that to remain adamant would be only to perpetuate delay in invalidation of those laws because they were all headed for an adverse decision by the Supreme court anyway. In seeking their repeal, therefore, Mr. Roosevelt simply took time by the forelock and girded his armor for a fresh start on farm relief legislation.

Where or in what form the new farm legislation will finally emerge, none can foretell. The house and senate will pass some kind of legislation to supplant the laws invalidated by the court or repealed by Congress. Necessarily, this new farm legislation will be of a stop-gap character and I don't think that any of its ardent supporters can tell you exactly what the result will be in so far as its effect upon agriculture is concerned.

As far as the compromises have been worked out, it appears that some of the leaders are willing again to enact legislation directed at crop-control in a semi-compulsory manner. If that is forthcoming, the new law actually will be nothing more than a thinly disguised attempt to circumvent the prohibitions laid down in the Supreme court opinion holding the AAA unconstitutional. In any event, the tragedy in the situation appears to me to be the absence of clear thinking, or else the circumstances we represent political cowardice of the worst type.

It is to be remembered that in this session of congress more than any other since President Roosevelt took office there exist a greater number of these cross currents of opinion; partisan jealousy. A great deal of it is in opposition to brain trust policies sponsored by the New Deal but for political reasons the individuals who espouse these things dare not openly show their disapproval of Presidential policies as such. Thus, a consensus has arisen among Washington observers that representatives and senators concerned with directing enactment of new farm legislation are likely to mess up the situation rather than come forth with a definite and workable proposition.

The situation at the White House and in congress in connection with agricultural policies probably is the best illustration to a definite, tangible form, of how many important federal policies are being dealt with in a partisan political way rather than as they should be, in a scientific manner with partisan politics in the background. I need not recall how many pieces of legislation have been put through congress bearing the New Deal tag of "must." Of course, Mr. Roosevelt cannot be blamed entirely for issuing orders when congress is willing to obey. It is a fact, nevertheless, that time after time and with reference to the major New Deal experiments, the legislation has been drafted by men serving under a Presidential appointment in executive departments, the copies forwarded to congress representatives or senators and instructions passed along that the administration will take no substitute. It wants the specific measure and in that form.

The result of all of this has been that in numerous cases legislation was passed without more than a few members of the house and senate, having even read the bills before they were asked to cast a favorable vote on their passage.

Now, representatives and senators are seeking to dodge the responsibility for their acts. This was shown conspicuously in the celerity with which Congress repealed of the three crop-control acts named heretofore. I know personally a considerable number of representatives and senators who were delighted at the opportunity to vote repeal of those laws. They never did like them—after they found out what they had passed. But a politician is the mistakes in the world to admit his mistakes and the representatives and senators who voted for repeal of the crop-control laws with such enthusiasm were no different than the others. The repeal request simply gave them an opportunity to get out from under a thing which, if the legislation had gone through processes usual and normal for congress, they would never have taken in the first place.

President Roosevelt likely will receive some credit for seeking repeal of the discredited laws. He said if he made a mistake he would be the first to admit it. So, now he has in a way admitted that he made a mistake in approving those laws although his statement concerning the repeal request was that these were useless without AAA.

It is to be noted, however, that long before the Supreme court outlawed AAA there was a growing volume of discontent with the principles that law sought to apply. It cannot be that Mr. Roosevelt was not aware of this growing dissatisfaction and that his political advisers smelled a rat because a good many plans for modification had been under discussion privately among AAA advisers long before a Supreme court decision was in prospect. Practical men working with Secretary Wallace and Administrator Davis were steadily trying to accomplish changes in administration of the AAA law, and the three others as well, to make it workable. They were confronted, however, with a superabundance of brain trusters who could make a beautiful case in print for their views and during that time the brain trusters had the ear of the President while the practical administrators were left out in the cold.

It is thus that we see a development under the New Deal whereby most of the responsible people are attempting to dodge the responsibility that belongs to them. Some of them are attempting to clean their own skirts, or make their skirts appear clean, by damning the Supreme court; others are blaming our "system" for failure of the theories to work in practical application and still other groups point the finger of scorn at those charged with administration of the agricultural policy, blaming them for the failure. Things like this have developed before in Washington and have died down in due time but I believe that seldom, if ever, has occurred a situation in which the responsibility was so general and the blame so generally denied by those responsible.

Washington observers are watching the President's latest maneuvers on government finance with considerable interest. The President, you know, already has told agencies of the government that they must reduce this borrowing. He has, in effect, withdrawn from them authorization that would have permitted the borrowing of about $1,000,000,000 during the next year.

During the last few weeks, the Chief Executive has been concerned also with reduction in governmental spending and at the same time with plans to raise additional money. He has presented a tax bill to congress, an obstinate congress. Representatives and senators do not like to campaign after passing a new tax bill so they frankly do not like the idea of new taxes at this time.

It is too early to forecast the full importance of the President's latest moves. There are those who insist that Mr. Roosevelt is making a sincere effort to cut down government spending and to convince the nation that he is seeking to reduce the waste that is naturally attendant upon such a volume of disbursements of money as has taken place in the last three years. There are others who take the position that the President is simply building up a picture which can be shown to the voters when election time comes. They say that Mr. Roosevelt wants to be in a position to point to an accomplished reduction in federal expenditures and to assure the voters that he had permitted only such expenditures as were necessary to bring the country out of the depression.

An unbiased conclusion is that a little of each claim is true. If expenditures actually are reduced, obviously the action will be welcomed by the taxpayers. On the other hand, the ballyhoo that went out from the White House and executive departments concerning the withdrawal of borrowing power was rather unjustified. It was unjustified for the reason that the move was simply a bookkeeping proposition and, further, there was even a hint that such agencies as the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the Home Owners Loan corporation had no plans for borrowing summer and fall.

If one looks into the future in connection with the Presidential program of curtailing borrowing and cutting expenditures, it is rather difficult to escape the thought that a continuation of policies such as have been sponsored by the New Deal in the last three years will force a renewal of these expenditures in due course. In other words, the administration course respecting these expenditures is going to depend upon the results of the November election: If Mr. Roosevelt is returned to the White House and the administration with a substantial Democratic majority in congress, there is no reason to believe that present spending policies will be entirely abandoned.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

THERE is a fortune waiting for anyone who can write short sketches, or plays, which can be done on the radio. Practically every actor and actress who isn't broadcasting wants to try it. Hollywood is full of people who have succeeded on the screen and yearn to do the same on the air. Now that stars of the stage and the radio have shown that they can walk into a movie studio and become a success, practically overnight, no motion picture star is as secure as he was in the old days. And the only remedy for that situation is a career on the air as well.

But comparatively few can sing well enough to broadcast successfully. The answer to that is a sketch. And good sketches are, alas, all too few.

For example, take our friend Mr. Robinson, of "Little Caesar" fame. When he was on the Vaudeville hour recently, he had to fall back on a sketch that had been done not too long ago—only last summer, if a memory not backed up by notes is reliable.

So—both in Hollywood and New York, anyone who can manage a typewriter is besieged by people begging for "something I can do on the radio." If you can fill that demand, go ahead, and good luck to you!

We may not see "It Can't Happen Here" on the screen after all. The Hays office has requested that the making of it be deferred, at least, the reason being that the political situation in this might cause mob trouble—and all this after thousands of dollars have already been spent on it!

Money also went down the drain when "Elegance" was abandoned. Joan Crawford and Clifton Webb were to have made it—Webb is famous for his work as a dancer on the stage. He was at the studio for three months, on salary, working on dance steps. And, then, came to find out, Joan had been working on an entirely different type of dance steps. So they had words, and now the picture won't be made at all.

Weep for Claudette Colbert. Her Paramount contract permitted her to make an outside picture, (she can do one each year,) so she did "Cigarette," in "Under Two Flags," the pay check being $150,000, $50,000 more than she gets on the home lot for a picture. Taxes will cut that down, however, to a bit less than $25,000.

When John Barrymore finishes "Romeo and Juliet" he'll go to Alaska on his yacht for two months of fishing—which recalls the way that Dolores Costello Barrymore used to feel about that boat. She loathed taking long trips on it—said that sometimes she felt that she couldn't bear it much longer if she couldn't be somewhere where she could have her hair washed and take all the baths she wanted to—the water supply on the boat not being too plentiful.

Loretta Young, who has been off the screen so long because of illness, will have "Unguarded Hour" for her return to the screen.

On special occasions ornaments of turtle shell are hung in the homes. After marriage and birth the most important customs relate to death. There are elaborate funeral rites and ceremonies, which are practically identical for both men and women.

Funeral Rites. As soon as the dying person's heart ceases to beat, the mother, wife's daughters, and other female relatives give way to long-drawn-out wails at the top of their voices. The wails never cease, except in pauses for breath, until the corpse is under ground. The louder the wails, the more the other relatives are pleased. Indeed, if the wailers are not loud enough, neighbors and villagers are noisily critical and foretell that the ghost of the dead man will be annoyed and send sickness.

Natives of Leuanua, Ontong Java, do not conceive of any causes of illness except the supernatural. All diseases and deaths are caused by the evil intervention of the spirits of those already dead. The corpse is taken into the road in front of the house and washed. It is then returned inside, the hair is cut, and the body is rubbed thoroughly with coconut oil. Turtle-shell ornaments are put in the ears and, if the dead person is a man, larger specimens of these ornaments are hung from the holes in the ala of the nose. In the case of a woman, a small shell ornament is hung from the hole in the septum. Garland are hung around the neck and bound on the brow.

Ceremony of Mourning. After the evening meal, which is taken about 7 p. m. or slightly later, the mourning ceremony begins. The corpse is laid on a new mat in the center of the house. At its feet, with their backs to it and their faces to the fire, sit the sons and daughters-in-law. The rest of the house is filled with the other relatives of the dead person. If he was a man of wealth and importance, as many of the villagers as can possibly squeeze in will go so and many others crowd around the doors. In a climate like that of Leuanua, which is only five degrees south of the Equator, a small house containing a corpse and a huge fire and packed with people, and with all the normal ventilation blocked by others, the atmosphere soon becomes almost intolerable.

The relatives and friends—except the closer female relatives, who continue weeping aloud, frequently drowning the other voices—sing dirges all through the night. The latter embrace the corpse and at intervals rub it with oil. In the course of the wake the family of the dead man give tobacco to all and sundry. Almost everyone in the village will come to the wake held for a wealthy man, sure of getting a few free sticks of tobacco for a dirge.

With the dawn all save the immediate relatives depart. Preparations are then made for burial. Burying Their Dead. There are five cemeteries at Leuanua and at least one on almost every one of the other larger islands.

Moldering headstones stand in rows running roughly north-south, for the feet of the corpse must always be toward the setting sun. Each family has its own ground. Because of the large number of deaths recently, many of the graves have more than one occupant. Indeed, grave-diggers, with their canoe-paddle shovels, not infrequently disturb as many as three skeletons to make a resting place for a corpse.

The corpse is deposited on the ground and the mats are removed, so that the widow can have a final weep while the last sleeping place is being prepared. The body, after being well oiled once again, is smeared with turmeric. Each mourner embraces the corpse, generally throwing the shroud over himself as he does so. Then the wrappings are again replaced and the bundle is lowered into the grave with ropes.

The men retire and allow the women to fill in the hole, the closest relatives actually standing inside it and beating the earth flat with their open palms. Then they all wade into the sea and bathe.

Offense and Defense

The Supreme court says: "The free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the government and the people. To let it be fettered is to fetter ourselves."

Arthur Brisbane

Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, repeating what Aristotle said before him, said civilization needs a leisure class, and defined as the "leisure class" those that keep a hired girl.
Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, thoughtful and wise, improves that definition; a leisure class for her is made up of individuals that "have sufficient economic security and sufficient leisure to find opportunity for a variety of satisfactions in life."

Charles Fourier, French philosopher, said it long ago, and elaborately, Henry Ford said it well, advocating a short work week, with two days off, that men might have time to spend pleasantly the earnings of five days.

All that will come, and more. In the past men worked too hard, while paid and fed too little, and never dreamed of Mrs. Roosevelt's "varied satisfactions," while the prosperous, as a rule, concentrated too much on foolish satisfactions.

All that knew him learn with sorrow of the sudden death of Charles Curtis, former Vice President of the United States. He was an American, a real one, proud of the red Indian blood in his veins. As a boy he rode horse races well and honestly; as a man, he rode the political race fairly. As Vice President he was content with the position that the American people and Constitution gave him. He would have made a good and loyal President had destiny so willed it.

The newspaper heading, "Britain is redoubting her defense plans to offset Germany," should interest somebody in America. This country is not planning to "offset Germany," but it has all Europe, including Russia and all Asia, to think about in these flying days. We should perfect our "defense plans" and particularly our attack plans. Then we should ask the world to look over our equipment and realize that it would be foolish to attack.

Senator Pittman of Nevada sees Japan shutting us out of China, "even at the risk of war"; says our business men "have been run out of Manchuria already." Japan might reply that her workmen have been run out of the United States.

The map will comfort Senator Pittman. Gigantic Manchuria, bigger than all of old Japan, leans up against Outer Mongolia and Soviet Russia. Japan will not invite trouble with those countries, and war with the United States would invite it.

If you wonder "where all the tax money goes," read this: "In six months the state of New York paid $801,612 for official automobile expense."

And that does not include automobiles for the department of mental hygiene. One official discharged his chauffeur, paid by taxpayers, accusing him of cheating the state out of $2,000 in one year through dishonest gasoline and repair vouchers. That is almost "a business."

"Charlie" Schwab may be seventy years old, but he still "knows his way around." The government tried to get $10,054,536 from Schwab's Bethlehem Steel company, alleging profiteering. Instead of giving the government $10,000,000, the "special master," hearing evidence, says the government must pay $5,000,154 to Schwab and Bethlehem Steel. No wonder Carnegie, who was Scotch, thought a good deal of Schwab.

Dr. G. A. Stevenson, "fellow" in the University college of Oxford, suggests to the London Times that the pax Romana ("Roman peace") ancient times, when Rome ruled the world and would allow no fighting, should be followed now by a pax Britannica ("British peace"), England ruling the world, telling everybody what to do.

American Olympic athletes appearing on the field in Germany met with gloomy silence, contrasting with applause for European and Oriental Olympic squads. The Americans, who defeated Germany at hockey, score 1 to 0, will survive the silence. Had they been wiser, they would have stayed at home. A German-Jewish player, Rudi Ball, by the way, was the star hockey player for the Germans.

Lesson for March 1

VISION AND SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 9:23-42a.
GOLDEN TEXT—He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit.—John 15:5b.
PRIMARY TOPIC—On a Mountain Top With Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—On a Mountain Top With Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—With Jesus in Prayer and Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Worship and Work.

The subject of this lesson as chosen by the lesson committee needs to be most rigidly held to its place as set forth in the Scriptures. The lesson should not be taught in a general way as pertaining to vision and service. The particular vision herein set forth is the unveiling of the majestic person of the Son of God, with an epitome of the messianic kingdom.

Jesus took with him Peter, James, and John, and went into the mount to pray. His chief aim in retirement was to get the disciples into a state of receptivity so that he might show them the reality and method of his kingdom. Before going into the mount, he declared that there were some standing in his presence who would not taste death until they should see the Son of man coming in his kingdom (Luke 9:27; cf. Matt. 16:28). That their drooping spirits might be revived and their confidence restored, he was transfigured before them. Two men from the upper world were sent to converse with him about his approaching death in Jerusalem (v. 31)—the very thing about which the disciples refused to talk. Then, too, God's own voice was heard in words of approval of Christ's course, directing them to hear the Master. Surely they cannot doubt his ability to carry to execution his kingdom plans. The purpose, then, of the transfiguration was to give the disciples a fore-glimpse of the coming kingdom, to enable them to see the kingdom in its embryonic form. That this is true is not only shown by the context and circumstances, but by the inspired interpretation of one who was with him and knew all that transpired (see II Pet. 1:16-19, R. V.). Let us, therefore, note the outstanding features of the kingdom as displayed in the transfiguration.

1. Jesus Christ the glorified King on Mount Zion (v. 25, 29).
Jesus glided on the mount to which they went to pray was intended to symbolize the messianic kingdom as it will be when Christ returns literally to the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem (Zech. 14:4-17).

2. The glorified Saints With Christ (v. 30, 31).
1. Moses, who was once denied entrance into Palestine, appears now in glory, representing the Redeemed of the Lord who after death shall pass into the kingdom. Many thousands of the redeemed have fallen asleep, and at the coming of the Lord shall be awakened to appear in the kingdom with him.
2. Elijah, now glorified, represents the redeemed who shall pass into the kingdom through transfiguration. Many shall be living upon the earth when the Lord comes, and shall, without dying, be changed, and thus pass into the kingdom (I Cor. 15:50-53; I Thess. 4:14-18).

3. The topic of conversation (v. 31).
It was the death of Christ, the very thing the disciples refused to believe.

4. Israel in the Flesh in Connection With the Kingdom. Represented by Peter, James, and John (v. 28).
Israel shall be called from their hiding place among the nations of the earth and shall be gathered to Jesus Christ, the King, as the central people in the kingdom (Ezek. 37:21-27). Christ is the King of the Jews.

5. Peter's proposal to build three tabernacles (v. 33). The Feast of the Tabernacles looked forward to the glorious reign of Christ. Peter caught a glimpse of the significance of the transfiguration. His proposition showed that he apprehended the meaning of the Feast of the Tabernacles and, therefore, his proposition substantially was, "The millennium is come; let us celebrate."
2. The divine voice (v. 35). At this time God himself uttered words which assured them that the transfigured one was his Son, Jesus Christ.

6. The multitude at the Foot of the Mount (v. 37-43).
"The people here were grievously oppressed by the devil, as illustrated by the demon-possessed lad. There are times when the devil is especially active in the affairs of men. The multitude at the foot of the mount is representative of the nations, which shall be brought into the kingdom which shall be established over Israel (Isa. 11:10-12).

Norris Urges Congress to Curb Supreme Court—Oratory on Lincoln Day—Death of Charles Curtis—Long Newspaper Tax Invalid.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

SPEAKING in advocacy of the administration's substitute farm bill, Senator Norris, the independent Republican from Nebraska, scathingly attacked the Supreme court's AAA decision and urged congress to use its right to curb the court's power. He argued that the 6 to 3 decision itself was unconstitutional by the court's own reasoning and shouted "It cannot stand."
"The regulation of agricultural production," he said, is unconstitutional because not mentioned in the Constitution, Norris asserted. "Nowhere in that great document is there a syllable, a word, or a sentence giving to any court the right to declare an act of congress unconstitutional. Hence, when the court indulges in that pastime it is itself violating the Constitution according to its own words."

Senator Norris

Norris quoted from the majority opinion of the Supreme court holding that the regulation and control of agricultural production was a local affair reserved to the states and beyond the power of congress. Under that decision, he declared, not only the pending bill but "a large portion of the laws which congress has passed during the last hundred years are absolutely unconstitutional."
Of the later decision ordering return of processing taxes to the processors, the senator said Secretary Wallace perhaps was too severe in calling it the greatest legal steal in history, and added: "But it is a gift, the greatest gift since God made salvation free."

Norris urged that congress pass a law requiring unanimous decisions by the Supreme court to overrule the acts of the legislative branch of the government.

LINCOLN day was the occasion for a flood of oratory, largely by Republican opponents of the New Deal. Herbert Hoover spoke at Portland, Ore., on the "State of the Union," which he said was a state of confusion in thought, government, economic life and the ideals of liberty. "The New Deal," said the former President, "has been a veritable fountain of fear. The day after the New Deal was given life at the election of 1932; began the great fear which created the bank panic of March 4. The stock boom today is not from confidence in the future; it is partly from fear of inflation."
In Greensboro, N. C., Senator Dickinson of Iowa warmly defended the Supreme court as "the only remaining guardian of the liberty of the people," and inveighed against what he said was the New Deal's "planned economy" and its "attempted bribery of the states" through the invalidated AAA and its proposed substitute, the soil conservation measure.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan was a speaker in New York city, and like his fellow Republicans he fiercely assailed the administration, terming it the "blind party now in power."
Among the party now in Democrats heard was Secretary Wallace, who, in Indianapolis, defended the administration. Referring to the Constitution, he declared that "most of us" thought the agriculture adjustment act was valid, and "some of us, including three justices of the Supreme court, think so still."

CHARLES CURTIS, former Vice President of the United States and senator from Kansas, died suddenly of heart disease at the age of 61 at Washington home of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Gann. He was seventy-six years old, and was the first man of Indian blood ever to preside over the senate. He was of-quarter Kaw Indian, his grandmother having been Princess Julie of that tribe who married a French voyageur. In his boyhood Curtis was a jockey, and later a reporter. Having studied law, he became a prosecutor at the age of twenty-four in Shawnee county, Kansas, and was elected to congress in 1892. He was made senator in 1907; was defeated in 1912 and two years later was again elected senator. He was elected Vice President on the ticket headed by Herbert Hoover, and was reappointed for that position in 1922.

Charles Curtis

VICE PRESIDENT Garner said: "I was always fond of him. I was associated with him in the house and senate. He was a fine man and a good friend."
Funeral services for Mr. Curtis and the interment were in Topeka, Kan.

ONCE again the Supreme court of the United States comes to the rescue of a free press. Unanimously the nine justices ruled that the Louisiana law imposing a punitive tax on the advertising of the principal newspapers of that state is unconstitutional. The law was passed by a legislature controlled by the late Senator Huey Long. The court said it: "It is unconstitutional because, in the light of its history and of its present setting, it is seen to be a deliberate and calculated device in the guise of a law to limit the circulation of information to which the public is entitled in virtue of the constitutional guarantee."
"A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the government and the people. To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves."

"In view of the persistent search for new subjects of taxation, it is not without significance that, with the single exception of the Louisiana statute, so far as we can discover, no state during the 150 years of our national existence has undertaken to impose a tax like that now in question."
"The form in which the tax is imposed is in itself suspicious. It is not measured or limited by the volume of advertisement. It is measured alone by the extent of the circulation of the publication in which the advertisements are carried, with the plain purpose of penalizing the publishers and curtailing the circulation of a selected group of newspapers."

LETTERS have been sent by President Roosevelt to the heads of the Latin-American governments inviting them to participate in a Pan-American conference, probably in Washington, the purpose of which will be to organize the peace machinery of the western hemisphere. Our State department says the meeting will endeavor to provide means for adjusting international disputes by peaceful means. The conference may bring up the Monroe Doctrine for a new definition through multilateral endorsement.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM L. RANSOM of the American Bar association, with headquarters in Chicago, announced that Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, has accepted the chairmanship of the association's special committee on co-operation between the press, radio and bar against publicity interfering with fair trial of judicial and quasi-judicial proceedings.

The creation of this special committee to define standards to be recommended to lawyers, newspapers and radio broadcasters in the matter of publicity as to court trials, said the announcement, is an outcome of the incidents arising in the course of the Bruno Hauptmann trial and various proceedings before governmental boards and bodies. "It is hoped that such standards can be made effective through rules of court or through legislation."

ACCORDING to the London Daily Herald, a secret decree providing for expulsion of all Jews from Germany as rapidly as possible has been prepared by Nazi leaders and laid before Chancellor Hitler for his signature. The paper said the decree provided for the confiscation of all property of expelled Jews.
"This story may not be true, but there is no doubt that Hitler and his associates are determined to extirpate all the organizations and groups which they consider in opposition to the Nazi regime, and Hitler himself has declared the Jews are to blame for all the troubles of the reich in recent years. Scores of Catholic youth leaders have been arrested, charged with co-operation with illegal Communist groups, and it is predicted their organizations will be dissolved. The campaign is carried on with great secrecy. It was announced in Berlin that district governors henceforth would take orders from the Gestapo, the secret state police. This was interpreted as an indication of an immediate carrying out of promises by Nazi leaders for more ruthless, more determined action against enemies within the reich."

PRESIDENT LAZARO CARDENAS of Mexico went to Monterrey to investigate a stoppage of business and industry in protest against labor troubles attributed to Communists. He issued this ultimatum: "Employers who are fatigued by Mexico's social and economic struggle can turn over their industries to the workers or the government—that would be patriotic. But stoppage of activities cannot be countenanced."

AMERICA'S delegates to the naval conference in London consented to an agreement that would bind this country for five years or more to refrain from building any more cruisers in excess of 8,000 tons in size. When the news reached Washington there was immediate and loud protest in congress against what was termed a "colossal blunder."
High ranking navy officials refused to comment officially upon the London agreement, but said privately that any program which does not include the co-operation of Japan and Germany would be a failure.
Any agreement will not affect the navy's present building program, these officials pointed out, and they refused to be alarmed about the prospect of future limitations.

TRIAL of the assassins of King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseilles came to an end at Aix-en-Provence, France, with verdicts of guilty for the six defendants. For three of the band of Croats, members of the secret Ustachi society, who were apprehended, mercy was recommended and they were given sentences of life imprisonment in French Guiana. The others, who never were caught, were sentenced to death. One of the latter is Dr. Ante Pavelich, reputed head of the Ustachi.

ELMER B. O'HARA, Democratic state chairman of Michigan and former clerk of Wayne county, which includes Detroit; State Senator A. J. Wilkowsky and 16 others of lesser prominence were convicted in Detroit of having attempted to steal the 1934 election. Eight defendants in the recent case, which had been on trial for nearly 12 weeks, were acquitted. Two other defendants previously had pleaded guilty, thus bringing to 20 the number facing sentence for their part in the vote recount conspiracy.

For O'Hara, the verdict came as the culmination of a series of calamities in a brief political career. Last November a jury in Macomb county, adjacent to Wayne, found him guilty of bribery in a drainage transaction in connection with real estate deals he had made before 1932 when he entered politics and was elected Wayne county clerk. He awaits sentence under that conviction. After conviction he was removed from office.
In the recent case O'Hara was found guilty on three counts, permitting others to alter ballots, conspiring to permit others to conduct the recount in an unlawful manner and change the result of the November, 1934, election by putting Democrats in office instead of the Republicans elected.

LEADERS of congress hope for an early adjournment, by May 1 at the latest, and therefore they pushed the new farm bill forward, trying to get it through both houses without much delay. In their desire to get away from the Capital, they already had decided to let the proposed permanent neutrality legislation go by the board.

The farm bill as rewritten by the senate agriculture committee is based on the soil erosion prevention scheme. Some Democrats joined with many Republicans in opposing the measure, one of them being Senator Walsh of Massachusetts. In a statement issued to the press he declared it was a "dangerous" bill conferring "autocratic and blanket authority" on the secretary of agriculture. He said the measure was "neither valid in law nor valid in economics."
Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee said he expected definite word from the White House or treasury soon on the amount and kind of taxes that might be imposed to finance the new farm program.

Spencer Byrns said he could see no reason why the tax measure should not emerge from the committee by the end of February.

ACTION against John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee when Al Smith was the Presidential nominee, and who is now president of the American Liberty league, has been begun by the government for an alleged deficiency of $1,026,540 on his 1929 income taxes. The New York case was filed in an amendment to the recently filed litigation recently filed against Pierre S. du Pont two days before Al Smith had bitterly assailed the New Deal. In the petition, which Raskob described as "New Deal persecution," Mr. du Pont was alleged to have understated his 1929 income by $2,997,832 and an additional sum of $617,516 was asked. In the amended petition accusing Mr. Raskob, it was alleged that he and the industrialist engaged in "fraudulent" sales of securities, one to the other, to a total of about $30,000,000 for the purpose of showing losses.

MRS. HURV P. LONG, widow of the slain senator from Louisiana, took her seat in the senate to complete Huey's unfinished term, becoming the second woman member of the upper house. After eleven months she will be succeeded by Allen A. Alexander, speaker of the Louisiana house of representatives, who was nominated for the regular term.

SYNOPSIS

Kerry Young, a lad of seven, is prepared to flee the burning lumber camp of his benefactor, Jack Snow, who took the youngster to live with him at the death of Kerry's mother, Tod West has instructed Kerry to come with a file containing the camp's funds should it be endangered. Flames attack the office, and Tod race to town. Tod acts queerly. At the bank the file is found empty and Kerry is blamed with taking the wrong one. Snow, his headquarters and money gone, is ruined, and soon thereafter dies, leaving Kerry to the Foot Commissioner. Kerry suspects Tod and swears to even the score. In a St. Paul office Kerry, now in manhood, and an expert woodsman, learns of the whereabouts of West. Kerry rescues a lovely girl from a scoundrel, who proves to be West. Tod threatens to jeopardize the girl, Nan Downer. She thanks Kerry and tells him of the robbery, and murder of her father and of Tod's advances. She is operating a lumber tract which her father had purchased from West. Kerry makes camp at the general store in West's Landing, he finds Tod engaged in a poker game. Jim Hinkle, timber employe, loses heavily. Kerry exposes Tod's cheating and disarms him. The crowd is unconvinced of Tod's duplicity. Kerry identifies himself to West, who denies knowing him and advises him to leave town. Nan tells Dr. Ezra Adams of Kerry's rescue of her from Tod, and of West's threat. Ezra, who is coroner, visits Kerry, and appoints Kerry coroner's clerk. Suspicion of the murder had rested on Holt Stuart, employe of Downer, and upon Jim Hinkle, who was cleared by Tod. The doctor has the fatal bullet and the serial numbers of the stolen bills, one of which has just been paid to Adams. It came out of the poker game. Tod orders Jim to run Kerry out of town. Kerry discovers he is being spied upon by a "bred." Jim comes to Kerry with a warning to clear out. Nan hires Kerry.

"He likes me!" the girl laughed happily.

"Why shouldn't he?" Young asked with all society. "That dog's got sense!" Then he laughed at her discomfort.

He started back toward his camp, and had gone half-way from Nan's headquarters to the mill when he saw a man running along the railroad track toward the trestle. Then another. And from West's Landing, three more were crossing rapidly. . . . Then a scream reached his ears. "Something's a-burnin'," he muttered, and began to trot.

"What's up?" Young called to a man.

"Somebody fell in!"

A woman's scream cut the air sharply, and Young saw a man grasp her arms, holding her from hurling herself into the swirling current below.

"Kid, I'll bet, Tip!" he muttered.

Sure enough, a child, "Little girl!" a boy answered excitedly when he asked the question again. "Dunno who!"

He kicked savagely, rolled over, cluded the clutch and shot upward. He dashed a hand across his eyes, gulped air through open mouth. A rod below him the swarthy man rose, spitting, and turned up-stream. He gave Young one glance, and the dark eyes shone with malice.

Trying that! And now, of all times! The fellow was not even attempting to find the child; he was intent on bringing harm upon one who was. A bitter loathing sang in Kerry's heart for a moment, but he drove it away. No time, this, for personal animosities.

He took a deep breath and went down again, water hurting his ears, pressing against his throat. . . . And once more that vague blotch of lighter color. . . . Sand? A Boulder? A clay ledge? He expelled the air from his lungs and put all his will, all his heart and consciousness into a final downward stroke. His reaching hand touched something soft; his fingers entwined there. It was cloth! The current bore at him; his grip on the fabric held.

He dragged himself against the current, flailing at that garment, battling to dislodge it. . . . His head buzzed; a quick nausea spread through his vitals. He felt that this was his last instant of consciousness. His tortured lungs expanded, and water gushed into his throat. He wrenched mightily with the one hand, as a new, inner darkness engulfed him, and then gave up. . . . yielded, let his lungs have their way, and was shocked to find himself breathing sweet air.

He was on the surface, barely able to float, but he was not alone. In the crook of his arm was a limp, light body!

Up-stream he heard screams and shouts. None had noticed that he came up with a burden. He drew the child's head to the surface, got a hand beneath her chin, and kicked feebly. He tried to shout for help, but his voice was only a gurgle. He redoubled his efforts, but his strength was spent. And then a white in his ear, and hot breath on his cheek, and Tip was there at his side.

"Good—" he gasped. "He!"

He fastened fingers in the mat of stiff curly hair; the dog angled across the current towing his master; Young's floundering feet touched bottom, and he reeled to the bank.

He dropped to his knees beside a log. He threw the little girl face down across it. He hooked a finger in the mouth, prying open the set jaws, fastening the tongue, and bore his weight down on her back. Water dripped from the mouth. Again he drove water from the small lungs, and again, while strength poured back into his own body.

Others were coming now; help was on the way. A man was almost to him; more streamed behind. But there was a job to do, and he knew how to do it, the task that would give strength to this last and perhaps waning hope.

Roughly he lifted the small body, with arms and legs so pitifully lifeless, and stretched it on the log, head lower than the feet. He jerked one of the child's arms beneath her face, rolled her head to one side, and straddling the log placed his great palms across the lower ribs and pressed firmly. . . . He held the lungs compressed an instant and let the ribs spring outward. Down again went his weight, and water trickled from the mouth.

A distracted woman burst through the growing group. She tried to hurl herself on Young, on the child, and the men took her gently away.

"Keep 'em back," he gasped. "She'll want . . . all the air."

Steady he worked, watching that waxy profile for signs. Down. . . . Hold. . . . Up. . . . Down again. . . . The group was quiet now, watching with tensely stamped on faces. Women had the mother—because, surely, such distress could only have been a mother's—on the high bank. Her sob had taken on a high-pitched wailing. . . . Ten minutes passed. Men were looking at one another, shifting from foot to foot restlessly.

"What do you think, Young?" someone asked. They knew his name!

He twisted his head doubtfully, and a sharp pang of dismay ran his heart. It was not nice doubting his own ability to restore life to a child, so slender, so tender. A lump swelled in his throat, but he drove it down.

The girl's one arm, hanging inert over the log, swayed dully as he worked.

Fifteen minutes; the watchers were moving and muttering. "The child's eyes were half open. . . . Brown eyes, he saw."

Twenty minutes.

Figures were running along the high bank. The woman screamed again. A man hurried down toward them, and the crowd parted to let him through. It was Jim Hinkle, panting, his face the color of saut. He stopped abruptly. His lips parted, one hand swinging meaningfully. His eyes, large and desperate with query, turned to Young. This must be his child!

"Can't tell, Jim," Kerry replied to the unspoken question. "We should have an outside chance. And we won't quit!"

His shoulders and back ached. The inside of one knee had rubbed raw on the log. It was nothing, though, compared to what Jim Hinkle was feeling.

And then Nan Downer was there, standing just inside the circle of men. One hand was at her lips and her eyes were dark with suspense. He smiled assurance at her as he worked. . . .

The little girl's hair was drying in the breeze now. Golden, it was, and in dappled about the small, motionless head.

A full hour had passed since he carried her from the water. Now and again Jim looked at Young, and his lips would twitch. Others were talking lowly, moving about, their tensely gone. Kerry could see shrugs and heads shaken. They had given up hope.

"Don't you think," Mel Knight, the storekeeper at the Landing, asked as he came close, "that it'd be as well . . . You see, they got to realize it sometime."

"No, we won't quit."

"But man, you can't keep on hangin' to hope."

He had just started the pressure, but relaxed it. He held his hand on the small back and turned his head, intently waiting for what he had thought he felt to come again. Then leaned low, held so in a strained silence. . . .

Then it came again . . . just the whisper of a cough!

"Careful, Jim! Steady, now!" He held the trembling father back with one arm, and began to chafe one of the little girl's wrists rapidly.

He beckoned Nan to him.

"Get over the feet," he said quietly. "She's on her way."

"You, Mel. Rustle up hot blankets and things."

Ten minutes later Kerry gave the moaning child into her father's arms and stood beside Nan, watching her carried tenderly away. The look on the mother's face, the vast relief and thanksgiving which showed in the very set of Jim's shoulders, touched things within Young. Nostrils smarted; his throat constricted and a mist came into his eyes.

A "bred had turned to join the ragged procession moving up the bank. "Who's the Injun?" he asked the girl, eyes following the great frame of the man, strength of which could not be concealed by the cotton shirt and faded overalls and moccasins.

"His name is Bluejay . . . Frank Bluejay," she answered, and then, as if pointedly, "Why?"

He shrugged. "He was spying on me from across the river this morning."

A slight gasp escaped her.

"Bluejay too! He's a bad citizen," she whispered. "My father used to say he believed him the cruellest man he had ever known. Everyone distrusts him except Tod West. He works for him, when he works."

A hard smile came into Young's eyes and he nodded.

"When he works, eh?" he asked.

They parted then. Nan going toward the mill, Young mounting the trestle about slowly.

"Hi, Bluejay!" he called.

The "bred turned, standing on the ties.

"What you want?" he asked, with the accent of his race, and his look was clearly a belligerent one. Young did not answer until he had covered the distance between them. When, at arm's length, Kerry stopped, he said quietly:

"I want to know this: why were you watching me from cover this morning? And when I've found that out, I'm going to ask you why you were fighting me under water down there?"

A cigarette dangled loosely from the other's lower lip, and now the upper one curled slightly.

"Who's askin' that?" he asked.

"You? Huh! I tell you; I say to you, it's none of your dam' business what I do!" He nodded slowly, head thrust forward. "I say something more to you, eh? I say these; you get to hell outta here before something very bad catch up with—"

He did not finish the threat. Sure long feared will be, he was unprepared for Kerry's quick move.

He swung sharply and stoutly, putting all his strength into the swing. His palm caught Bluejay on the ear with a stinging smack; the force of the blow rocked the man, swayed him off balance. He threw out his arms, teetering on one foot; he clawed the air twice, writhed and strained an instant to get the other foot down in time, and, falling, hung himself sideways for the river in a half fall, half dive.

The impact of his body on the stream made a mighty splash. He came up immediately, shaking his eyes clear and treading water.

"Wh-what you 'ink you doin', eh?" he gasped. "What you—"

"I think I knocked you loose from yourself as a beginning!" Kerry said hotly. "And I'm standing here to wait for you to come up again. I'll knock you in as fast as you come up, Injun. . . . That is, if you come up on this side. If you want to keep out of double with me, you swim yourself across yonder and stay there! Got that? Stay there!"

"Ho! So you 'ink—"

With a defiant curse the man started swimming for the forbidden shore, and Young, hitching at his belt, followed slowly along the trestle, ready for a second encounter. But Bluejay had not gone far, looking upward at that dark and infuriated face, when he hesitated, spat angrily and turned, striking out for West's Landing, swimming like an otter.

CHAPTER VII

A job and some enemies, and at least the beginnings of some friendships.

Young pondered those possessions as he spent a dizzy afternoon making his camp permanently. And after dark, as he sat in Nan Downer's office and talked to her and Holt Stuart, he wondered just where this quick-spoken, high-strung youth was going to fit in with his scheme of things.

Holt appeared to him as one who will normally come to rapid decisions; firm, perhaps, snap judgments. And yet Kerry had the feeling that in his case the forester was holding back, reserving his estimate and opinion.

When Holt's eyes rested on Nan, a hunger of long standing appeared in them. Not the lust that had been on Tod West's face yesterday afternoon up river, but a clean, upright respect. . . . and something deeper than that.

Stuart withdrew after a time, leaving Nan and Kerry alone. The door to the great lounging room of the headquarters was open. Logs smoldered on the hearth there.

"It's damp," the girl said; "let's finish our talk near the fire."

So she curled in a massive armchair on one side of the hearth while Young sat opposite her and continued the talk of the job. Tip, with a sigh of contentment, stretched on his side before the fire, and when a pause came in their discussion of timber estimates and mapping the girl's eyes rested on him.

"What a lovely creature!" she murmured and the retriever, opening one eye, rapped his tail as if understanding and appreciating the compliment.

Nan and Kerry laughed and Tip stretched and sighed luxuriously and flopped his tail again.

It was late when he left Nan, an agreement reached and ready to report in the morning to work at the big drafting board.

A light rain was falling, and after-noon had said her good-nights to Tip. Kerry threw a balloon silk 'slicker' about his shoulders and walked away in the darkness.

He had not gone far when he felt Tip come a bit closer, and then a vague figure detached itself from the shadow of a pine tree.

The hall, when it came, though cautious and low, was not unfriendly.

"Young? That you, Young?"

"Yo! What's up?"

The other approached and then Kerry halted.

"It's Jim Hinkle, Young."

"Oh, hullo, Jim! How's the girl?"

"Fine! All right!—looking about cautiously. 'I. . . . I wonder if I could get you to stop here a minute? I got something I got to say to you, Young!'"

He was wholly sincere, and not at all at ease. That belligerence which had been on display early in the morning was wholly gone.

"Well, when a man's got to talk. . . . Won't he just get to talk, hasn't he? Won't you walk on down to my camp? We'd be snug—"

"Lord, no! You see, that wouldn't do, Young. I. . . . I don't want certain parties over to know I hunted you up, friendly-like."

"I'd be a skunk if I didn't say it, after what you done for us. I ain't even thanked you yet for givin' Elsie back to us." His voice shook. "That's all I can say about that. . . . that-I thank you. . . . A man can't say anything else when. . . . It's his own kid, Young."

"That's all right, Jim. You needn't even have said that much."

"Oh, yes! I had to say that. But that's the smallest part of it. I. . . . I got other things to say, Young."

"I'm no good, you know. I'm a hell of a citizen. I drink and I gamble and I don't pay attention to my debts like I ought. I don't amount to nothin'! But it's only when something happens like happened today that I git thinkin' about it much."

"And I got this to say. . . . because of the things I've been thinkin' this afternoon: I was lower'n a snake's belly to come to you like I did 'd try to drive you out of this country?"

Pause.

"You see it's different, now. I. . . . That is, I come to you just after sun-up like I. . . . like I believed what the rest of 'em believe: that you framed up something on Tod."

"And you knew all along that it was real? That he did cheat?"

SLAVE BADGES AN EXPENSE IN 1834, OLD LAWS REVEAL

A study of Charleston's tax laws shows that although Charlestonians in 1834 did not have to buy auto tags nor pay a gasoline tax, other means were employed by the tax gatherers to get their money. One of these was the sale of slave badges.

Badges or licenses for slaves had to be purchased from the city treasurer in January for the ensuing year and the penalty for hiring out slaves without badges was $20.

The rates for slave badges were published in "A Digest of the Ordinances of the City Council of Charleston from the Year 1783 to October, 1844, to which are Annexed the Acts of the Legislature which Relate, Exclusively to the City of Charleston," prepared under resolution of city council by George B. Eckard. Some of the rates were as follows:

Handicraft tradesmen, $7; carter, trawman, porter or day laborer, $4; fishermen, $4; fisherwomen, $2; house servants or washerwomen, $2; seller of fruits, cake or "any article not prohibited," $3.

Jiffy Knit Sweater With Matching Hat

PATTERN No. 5512

Any four-to-eight-year-old will be warm as toast in this sweater and cap set. The sweater's a "jiffy" knit—just plain knitting combined with yoke and sleeves of easy knit stitch, and finished almost before you know it. The cap done in a straight strip, gathered at the top, also includes these two stitches, adding a pert pompon for good measure. Choose a colorful yarn, and there'll be no "insisting" she wear it!

In pattern 5512 you will find complete instructions for making the set shown in sizes 4, 6 and 8 (all given in one pattern); an illustration of it and of the stitches needed; material requirements.

Universal Is Pouring Out Its Wealth to Lover of Nature

Daily the lover of nature gathers the fruits of seed sown in the beginning of the world. For him no season is dull, for each is successively absorbing. In spring he is enraptured by the awakening of myriad forms of life; summer reveals the maturity of all creation; autumn brings the fulfillment of earlier promises; winter lulls life to sleep, with its assurance of the resurrection. All weathers are one: The rains of spring nourish all nature; the heats of summer mature and ripen its fruits; the frosts of winter give rest and peace; in all he rejoices. Each day is good. In the morning life awakens with him; and quiet of evening shades their benediction upon him.

He knows no dull moment; he seeks not to hurry time. If he be delayed he may discover something never before seen by man and his impatience is forgotten. His youth is filled with the joys of discovery; in middle age the marvels about him hold his interest undimmed; he awaits old age with calmness, for he is one with the universe and its content.—Edward A. Knox a Soldier in Two Wars

Volunteer Rough Rider and Artilleryman But No Militarist.

Soldiers, particularly in the heat of battle, develop a philosophy which is peculiarly their own. To those who have never had their experience, the observations of these veterans sometimes sound cynical or fatalistic. As a matter of fact, they are neither. There never was a good soldier who has not admitted that there were many times when he was thoroughly scared. Consequently, one of the conversational pastimes of the veterans of the World War has sometimes been to tell each other "when they died," meaning that they had been confronted some time or other by situations from which there appeared to be no escape whatever.

Captain "Eddie" Rickenbacker, premier aviator ace of the American army, and Frank Knox, now Illinois' "favorite son" for the Republican nomination for President, once swapped such yarns at a meeting of American Legionnaires, both being among the founders of that organization. Rickenbacker's story was that he thought his time was up when, caught in a "dog-fight" between American and German planes several thousands of feet in the air, the Germans nearly shot off one of the wings of his plane, which began to fall rapidly out of control. Rickenbacker quickly disengaged himself from the cockpit, crawled out on the sound wing and managed so to balance the plane that it partially righted itself. A few hundred feet from the ground he grabbed the control "stick" and landed between the American and German lines in a complete smashup, but without injury to himself.

Knox served with the artillery brigade of the 78th Division. He enlisted as a private in the New Hampshire militia, was transferred to an officer's training camp, having seen service in Cuba, and finally became captain and then major of artillery. When the war ended he was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel and is known to his old buddies as "Col. Knox." His division served in the St. Mihiel sector early in September, 1918. Two weeks later found it in the battle of the Meuse-Argonne with Sedan as the objective.

When it came Knox's turn to tell his story, he recalled that any soldier quickly learns to know by the whirr of a shell or the sting of a bullet whether "it has his name on it," as the soldiers say. In his tent, at Apremont late one night Knox heard a "big Bertha" with "his name on it." Almost instantly his little tent was deluged with rocks, dirt and debris which nearly tore it from its fastenings—but nothing else happened. The next morning Major Knox was invited by his orderly to look outside his tent. A few feet in front of the entrance was the big shell nearly buried in the ground. It had failed to explode.

Knox's narrowest escape, however, was in the Spanish-American war. Volunteering in Michigan at the age of 24, he reached Tampa without being sworn in or assigned to duty with any organization. At Tampa he was introduced to Theodore Roosevelt who promptly swung him in personally as a member of the Rough Riders. Knox participated in all the engagements of that famous regiment up to and including the battle of San Juan hill. In that engagement, the Rough Riders were bombarded out of their first position by the Spanish artillery, waded in to the San Juan river and took refuge in water up to their waists beneath a protecting bank, and later stormed and took several hills, including San Juan hill itself, where the Spanish finally ran up the white flag.

In this battle the Rough Riders would charge and lie down and then charge again. The intervals between two of these charges was a little too long for the impetuous Knox, who was tired of lying out in the hot sun. He raised up to sight the enemy and promptly got a bullet through his campaign hat which took a lock of his Scotch gold-red hair along with it. At the end of the battle Knox was detailed to carry dispatches of the victory to the rear. Enroute he was overcome by the heat, developed some tropical ailments and was invalided home just before the final surrender of all Cuba. Mrs. Knox retains the campaign hat among her prized possessions.

In the last war Col. Knox had another surprise which nearly cost him his hearing. Leading up an ammunition train to the support of the guns, he emerged into a field of barbed wire. Just as he rose in his stirrups to locate the guns, a camouflaged and well-concealed battery gave the Germans a blast from a brush-heap only a few yards away. Knox was partially stunned, his horse made frantic and for several minutes he had his hands full keeping the horse and himself out of the barbed wire. When he did dismount, he was stone deaf and remained so for several weeks. In time, however, he regained his hearing almost entirely. After the armistice Knox came home and was chairman of the committee on resolutions at the meeting at St. Louis which resulted in the organization of the American Legion. Knox is neither a Jingo nor a militarist. He believes his country should be in shape to defend itself against all comers at anytime. He has volunteered in every war of his country in his lifetime, but he rarely ever talks about them.

Political Life of Frank Knox

Active Party Worker and Campaigner Since Spanish War.

In his busy and colorful career as a newspaper editor, soldier and party worker, Frank Knox, candidate of the Illinois Republicans for the nomination for president, has been one of the most widely traveled public men in the country. Not only has he been in every state in the Union, some of them many times, but his interviews with the heads of governments in Europe last year resulted in a series of editorials in his newspapers on the trends of governments at home and abroad which attracted both national and world-wide attention.

He has been a sectional or national figure in every national political campaign for a quarter of a century and in the past two years, in an effort to rouse Americans generally to the dangers he felt were fundamental in the "new deal" policies, Knox has made speeches in more than half the states of the Union. As a result of this task undertaken, for the most part, in answer to specific invitations for his services, he finds himself today projected into the political limelight in an honorable, although personally unsought, manner.

Starting as a precinct party worker in Michigan in 1898, Frank Knox helped nominate and elect Chase Osborn a governor of that state and was state chairman of the state committee in 1910. That fight was made by progressive and liberal Republicans, with Osborn and Knox in the lead, against monopolies that were dominating the state. In 1912, feeling that President Taft had lost his popularity in the state, Knox declined to become Taft's state manager and frankly told Mr. Taft he favored Theodore Roosevelt. He directed the Roosevelt pre-convention headquarters at Chicago and in that capacity came into intimate contact with party leaders from Ohio to the Pacific coast.

When Theodore Roosevelt became the candidate of the Progressive Party for president, Knox followed him, but at the same time got from Mr. Roosevelt a promise that the Progressive Republican state officers of Michigan should be renominated and only a Progressive electoral ticket placed in the field by the new party in that state. As chairman of the state committee Knox called the state convention to order and was elected its chairman. Thereupon Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, national chairman of the Roosevelt campaign, to the utter astonishment of Knox, made a speech demanding the nomination of an entire Progressive Party ticket from Governor down to constable. This was wholly contrary to Knox's understanding with Roosevelt, but in a hasty conversation, Dixon insisted he was carrying out orders from Roosevelt given him in Oyster Bay only a few days before.

With characteristic honesty, Knox promptly advanced to the rostrum and resigned both as chairman of the convention and as chairman of the state committee. He was followed to his room by party leaders who begged him to accept the nomination for Governor, but he refused. A year and a half later, when Theodore Roosevelt heard the facts he admitted he gave Dixon the orders but added: "Frank, I forgot to except Michigan." When Roosevelt died a letter was en route to him from Knox in France thanking him for his generous praise of Knox's record in the World War.

In 1916 Knox campaigned in New England for the election of Charles E. Hughes for president. He had, in the meantime, acquired a newspaper at Manchester, N. H., which he still owns. He did a like party service for Harding and for Coolidge, besides assisting in the nomination and election of numerous governors, senators, members of Congress, state and local officers. In 1912 President Taft made Knox a member of the Board of Indian Commissioners.

As general manager of the Hearst chain of papers in 1923, Knox did not participate in the party politics of that year but his business interests took him into every section of the country. It is noteworthy that Mr. Hearst that year brought his newspapers to the support of the Republican ticket.

In 1931 Frank Knox, in partnership with Theodore T. Ellis of Worcester, Mass., bought The Chicago Daily News. When the panic of 1929 began Knox was national chairman of the drive against the hoarding of gold and, as such, visited many sections of the country. He was strongly urged to accept the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee and so peremptory was the demand that, when in Europe in 1934, he had to decline the honor categorically. The same year he assisted both the Republican Senatorial and Congressional committees in an advisory capacity and spoke for Republican candidates in Maine, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois.

In this way Frank Knox has not only a wider personal acquaintance than most public men of the day but, through his wide travels and his newspapers, he is also intimately informed of public opinion in all sections of the country daily. This information is reinforced by a monumental personal correspondence and numerous callers from all walks of life.

Now we understand why those nasal radio ditties are called "cow-boy" songs. They resemble the bawling of a cow's little boy.

A Kansan, paralyzed from the waist down, was arrested for posing as a war veteran. And not, as might be imagined, a CWA worker.

BEGIN THE New Year
RIGHT
By Placing Your Advertisements in The DAVIE RECORD
The Paper That The People Read.

For more than 36 years this paper has been going into the homes of the best people in Davie county. Many of those who don't subscribe, borrow their neighbor's paper, for when we make a mistake they are the first to tell us about it.

Your father and your grandfather read The Record and carried their ads with us. There is but one business firm in Mocksville today that was here when this paper was founded---C. C. Sanford Sons Co. They were among our first advertisers, and have continued with us for all these years. The merchant who advertises is the merchant who gets the most business. This fact was demonstrated during the Christmas season. The local stores were visited frequently, and the ones who advertised were the ones who had to employ extra salespeople to take care of the rush.

If You Haven't
Been advertising in your local papers in the past, why not turn over a new leaf and give them a trial. The cost is cheap and the results will surprise you. Write or phone us, and we will be glad to call and talk the matter over with you.
