New Deal Warning.

Washington. — Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National committee said in a statement that the outcome of the Maryland primary and the Maine election demonstrated the New Deal "cannot buy its continuance in power" with taxpayers' money.

"Confused, uncertain, and bitterly quarreling among themselves over the debacle of their policies, the new dealers only had left their reputed ability to influence the course of this year's elections by shoveling out the taxpayers' money," he said. "Now that New Deal asset is gone."

Hamilton said that in Maine, Lewis J. Brann, the Democratic candidate, sought the governor's office primarily on the promise that he would get for Maine its share of the Washington porkbarrel.

Of Maryland, he said: "There the leading Federal job holders were dragged by the administration into support of Senator Tydings' opponent opened his campaign addresses with announcements of the millions which the United States Housing authority had just decided to spend in the state."

"What further evidence is needed to demonstrate that with its power to buy elections gone; the New Deal is through?"

Representative Martin of Massachusetts, chairman of the national Republican congressional committee, issued this statement:

"Maine and Maryland tell the same story. After six years of patient waiting the people realize there is no chance under the present set up of getting the 12 million unemployed back to work at American wages. In their desperate plight they are demanding that somebody else can be given the chance of solving the big problem of the day—putting people back to work."

Some Facts About Control.

You probably recall that there were five major crops which it was proposed to bring under control: cotton, tobacco, corn, wheat and rice. We wonder, however, whether you know that the Administration has already abandoned control so far as corn and wheat are concerned.

The law provided that if the production of the above two crops should come to a certain amount, quotas should be established and a vote should be had. Production has passed the amount, but the quota referenda have been recalled and there will be no vote, no quotas and no control.

So at present, we have control of crops that are grown exclusively in the South, but no control over those crops that are raised in the West and North.

Not only that, but North Carolina farmers cannot expand their live stock, dairy products and poultry. The agricultural act forbids the expansion of productions of these items. North Carolina's cotton crop this year will not be worth more than $25,000,000, but we will not be allowed to substitute live stock, dairy products and poultry, because such action on our part might be detrimental to the welfare of farmers in other parts of the country.

And so it would seem that while the rest of the country is having more or less of a free rein in these matters, the South now finds itself securely shackled.—The State.

First Use of Great Seal
The great seal of the United States was used for the first time on September 16, 1782.

Seems Not To Have Worked Out.

Secretary Wallace and the other agricultural authorities and experts associated with the Administration are being pictured to the public in these days as scratching their heads and knitting their brows and worrying no end.

And not without reason.

It is becoming increasingly clear that the labyrinthine farm program which was ushered in back yonder in 1933 hasn't turned out to be what had been hoped, and, more than that, the policies of the Administration relating to farm regulation are taking on even new and more trying perplexities.

For one thing, as Secretary Wallace and his associates look back over the record established by means of farm control from 1933 through 1937, it must be entirely clear to them that in one major objective, the plan has fallen totally to pieces.

All know that the farm program was undertaken for the purpose of increasing farm income and this increase was to be brought about by raising the prices of farm products.

From 1933 through 1937 Federal expenditures in this field have aggregated three billion six hundred million dollars over and above the routine departmental operations of the Department of Agriculture.

This money was spent for the primary purpose of increasing the price on farm products. What has the result?

The average price of wheat 1921 through 1932 was 1.07 dollars per bushel. The average price of wheat 1933 through 1937 was 85¢ dollars, a decline of 16.2 per cent. During the same period, oats declined 6 per cent, rye 18.2 per cent, cotton 34.7 per cent, cattle 17.1 per cent, lambs 30.1 per cent, veal calves 27.4 per cent, potatoes 26.9 per cent, wool 21.2 per cent. That's the record, and one which gives the regimentists real reason for self-rebuke.—Charlotte Observer.

Was Blind But Now Can See.

Eleven years ago Robert S. Carpenter, then 70-years-old, of Falls town, Cleveland county, lost his eyesight. One day recently just after eating dinner the aged man was led out into the yard and sat down under a tree. He struck at a fly that lit on his nose and suddenly let out a shout that he could see. He saw his hand moving in front of his face. Since that time his eye sight has steadily improved and Thursday of the past week, his birthday, he had a number of friends and relatives at his home to celebrate the return of his eyesight and enjoy a birthday dinner. He can now easily recognize friends and relatives that he knew 11 years ago when he lapsed into darkness.

A Fallston physician said that he can not explain the restored sight unless it was a growth which ripened and disappeared, or a certain tension which, as he grew older, was released, allowing the organs to function properly again. He steadily refused to see a specialist.

Restored sight is not the only miracle which has happened to Carpenter. Fifty-eight years ago when he was a mere lad of 23 years he was shot with a shot-gun in the chest near the heart which took him near death.

He recovered and now has several children. He was shot from the chest which he coughed from his lungs years after he was well. The shot are in a bottle in his home.

Sago From Borneo
Sago comes from Sarawak, Borneo. This country also supplies birds' nests to a soup-loving world.

IN ANCIENT times, Halloween, or the Vigil of Saman, the god of death, fell on the thirty-first of October. On this night, Saman was supposed to call together the souls condemned during the past year and assign them to the bodies of animals. It was a time of fear and apprehension and the pagans wore hideous masks and lighted bonfires to keep away the ghosts and witches which were supposed to wander the earth freely on this night. At the advent of Christianity, it became the Vigil of All Saints day and lost its bogey meaning but the custom of celebrating the night in a macabre manner still persists.

Riddle To Manage Jonas Campaign.

Charles A. Jonas, of Lincolnton, Republican candidate for United States Senator against Bob Reynolds announced Saturday that he appointed J. Bennett Riddle, Jr., of Morganton, President of the Young Republican Organization of North Carolina as his campaign manager.

Jonas has already established his campaign headquarters in the Selwyn hotel, at Charlotte, adjacent to the headquarters of the North Carolina Republican organization.

Selection of regional campaign managers for the State will be left in the hands of Riddle, Jonas said. Riddle has already written letters making plans for eight regional meetings to make a Republican roll call, during which efforts will be made to raise campaign funds, add recruits to the party, and plan generally for the fall campaign.

Jonas said that much of his appeal will be directed toward the young men and women of the State, who will be required to pay the great burden of the national debt we are piling up under the present administration.

Riddle declared that the Republican campaign for United States Senate will not be one of vilification, but will be one of appeal to one of those who "wish to return to American form of government."

Neither will the campaign be one of numerous speeches, but Jonas will seek to meet with as many of the people of the state as possible and will hold numerous conferences with people of the state who are in accord with his views of "sane government."

Booze Caught On Fire

While Iredell county officers were pouring confiscated liquor into the gutter at Statesville Saturday an onlooker dropped a match into the stream of intoxicating liquid and there was an underground flare-up.

The stream caught fire for some distance, the smoke gushing out the gutter cross the street at the Walnut street intersection. The aid of Statesville firemen was requested and their prompt work was effective. It was learned that Deputy Hayds had caught two loads liquor getting a total of 185 gallons in the two hauls. There were no arrests, the men in charge making their escape.

Kicking Machine Will Be Rebuilt.

New Bern, N. C.—T. Haywood is going to build a new, bigger and better kicking machine to replace the one that has booted thousands of disgruntled customers in the last 14 months.

The old "self-kicker" which Haywood set up in a roadside "shrine" near here when he tired of hearing people say, "I could kick myself," is worn out. But before it lost a couple of spokes and became rickety it wore out four pairs of shoes—two pair at a time—

Leather belt and other parts that go to make up the windlass operating machine.

Haywood, a Craven county commissioner, said thousands had made use of the kicker in the last year, that at times there have been as many as 30 rueful clients standing in line at once, and that the popularity of the device keeps growing.

"A man from Belfast, Ireland, was here recently," Haywood recalled, "and he said he saw my picture at the kicking machine in Irish papers last summer. We have started a self-kicking club of America, but it has members from many foreign countries as well as in almost every state. One member from Puerto Rico has been to see us twice. Our motto is, 'If we kick ourselves more we will kick others less.'"

Gov. Clyde Hoxey and Lieut. Gov. W. P. Horton inspected the kicker last summer but did not try it.

Most of the kickers are reluctant to discuss their reasons for kicking themselves, Haywood says. Most of them, who ascribe their reasons blame themselves for voting for the wrong officeholder.

The new kicker is going to be the latest thing in its particular line. The whole device will be more durable. Solid iron spokes will replace the old ones, which were a mere one-inch hollow lead pipe. There will be a new belt. And of course a new two pairs of shoes.

Not all the emphasis will be on sturdiness, however. Haywood promises the machine will be a futuristic design. And next summer he says for the girls in shorts and other dainty beach togs he will have some pads handy for attachment to the shoes so that maidens ruing the mistakes will be able to kick themselves in complete comfort.

Keeping the home fires burning will take on a new significance one of these days, as the coal bills will so convincingly prove.

Florida State in 1845
Florida came into United States possession in 1821, became a state in 1845, seceded in 1861, underwent reconstruction in 1866-67 and was established in the Union in 1900, when civil government was restored on July 4.

Lengths Of Sermons.

The Biblical Recorder, newspaper organ of the Baptist denomination in North Carolina, is exercised over the lengths of sermons delivered by sundry ministers. It says:

Martin Ross, in one of the circular letters that in early days were appended to minutes of association, warned preachers not to preach too long, and advised them not to undertake to exhaust their subject in one sermon; it was sufficient, he thought, to develop one aspect of it and leave the others for consideration in later sermons. It took a hundred years for his successors to learn the lesson he gave them; men still living tell of hearing sermons two hours and forty minutes long; until well after the turn of the present century the normal sermon was forty five to fifty minutes in length, sometimes a full hour, but today hearers begin to grow restless when they have listened to a preacher for thirty minutes. Sometimes a preacher compresses his thoughts into a discourse of twenty minutes, but with the risk of leaving many of his congregation with a sense of insufficiency in his treatment of his subject. In the following taken from an article by the Rev. Lee J. Benyon, of Minneapolis, in "The Making of a Sermon," in the watch-man-Examiner, are some good words on the length of sermons which are singularly like Ross said 150 years ago, and along with them some other suggestions which are interesting to preacher and hearer alike. He says:

A sermon should have a definite theme, properly introduced, carefully developed, and resolutely terminated. An audience is entitled to know what you have been talking about when the message is done. It is not expected that in one sermon you will declare the whole counsel of God. It is to be expected, however, that over the period of a pastorate that whole counsel will be declared. Advanced thinking—chronologically I mean—will enable you to cover the truth. Since in our Baptist churches we have no scheduled preaching year in which, Sabbath by Sabbath, there is a laid-out plan by which the phases of Christian life and growth are taken serially, there is the necessity of each pastor so envisioning what he believes to be the coverage of truth that his ministry become cumulative in its spiritual effect. One sermon is supposed to be one sermon, and to attempt to tell all you know in one deliverance—although it may unfortunately be done—is poor judgement and poor efficiency. Save some something for the next sermon, for another Sunday is coming. It will help the preacher and it will be easier on the people.

More Changes!

It was not so very long ago that Senator Bailey was being severely criticized and there was talk of reading him out of the Democratic party because his "conservation" stand regarding certain instances relieved from some Republicans.

Now President Roosevelt comes out with a declaration that he will not object to the election of liberal Republicans over Democrats in certain instances, which is apparently an invitation to support Republicans in preference to those legally-nominated Democrats who will not play "yes men" to the President.

All our lives we have heard "party loyalty" preached and proclaimed by all, from the head of the party down to the smallest precinct chairman, but now it suits the plans of the party's titular head, the President, to endeavor to get rid of every one who does not see eye to eye with him, we presume it is perfectly all right for him to change all this too.—Greenville Reflector.

Talmudic Law

The whole criminal procedure as recorded in the Talmud of the Jews had the aim of making execution an impossibility, for the commandment "to judge" was interpreted by the rabbis of the Talmud as a commandment meaning "to rescue." If, notwithstanding this, however, an execution could not be prevented, the accused had the benefit of the precept, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Despite the fearsome thunderings of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, a paradox of war-mad Europe is that the foes of Germany and Italy have far superior military equipment.

Though Rome and Berlin may shout and boast, a cold analysis of comparative strength shows that the inevitable "allies" can eventually defeat them in a war which might last as long as two years.

This fact has long gone unnoticed. It was not brought out until a few weeks ago when Germany opened her autumn maneuvers and began looking with hostile eyes at little Czechoslovakia, whose Sudeten German minority has allegedly been discriminated against.

Though Czechoslovakia herself is weak, though even Great Britain has a surprisingly small armed force, the mighty power of Russia and France is something to be reckoned with.

Russia cannot afford to throw her entire weight against a European foe, because the threat of Japan necessitates maintenance of a good-sized force in the Far East. But the Soviet military machine is a wonder of the modern world.

In her weakened condition from the Chinese conflict, Japan cannot be considered an important factor in any current European war. The above figures on comparative military strength—furnished by the United States army and navy departments—do not even list Japan's land forces for this reason. Tokyo's only power lies in whatever "nuisance value" she might provide in Siberia to help her Fascist allies, Germany and Italy.

U. S. by Comparison.

Figures on America's military power are provided only for comparative purposes. Though the United States has abandoned her policy of complete isolation, her neutrality position is stronger than it was in the World war, when American aid was deemed necessary to crush Germany's imperialism.

Thus the lineup of great powers finds Germany and Italy on one side, opposed by Great Britain, France and Russia. Such European countries as Yugoslavia, Rumania and Hungary are minor factors. Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland have avowed their intention of escaping complications.

Here, then, are the figures. In actual army strength—including standing forces, airmen and reserves—Russia, France and Great Britain have 26,725,000 men. Italy and Germany have less than half, or 10,785,000.

Great Britain's navy is alone bigger than the combined fleets of Italy and Germany, whose tonnage is 1,107,032. Britain's 1,758,478 tons, plus 699,342 tons from France, makes an opposition force of 2,457,820 tons. Some of this naval equipment will not be ready to use for several months, but the actual ratio at the present time is about the same.

In air strength, the "allies" have 15,400 planes, while Germany and Italy together have 11,500.

A Week or a Year.

It is interesting, though admittedly horrifying, to contemplate how long a general European conflict could continue. Several years ago the Italian general staff made the rash prediction that the next war would be finished within a week. This belief was based on the rising importance of fast planes, gas, long-chemists who can manufacture "ersatz" or substitute materials of war. These products relieve them of some worry in the event of blockade, but there are certain essentials—like oil and cotton—which every nation must have to carry on successful warfare.

The discouraging inevitability of war has been growing in Europe's consciousness for five years, and out of that inevitability have arisen new methods of defense unparalleled in history. England, which is especially invulnerable to modern aircraft, has developed her "ARP" (air raids precaution) program to the point where almost every man, woman and child knows how to handle a gas mask. She has built bomb-proof and gas-proof cellars with feverish haste, constructed new coast defenses and trained expert anti-aircraft gunners.

But these precautions are minor compared to those of France, Germany and Czechoslovakia with their amazing "lines." Between 1929 and 1938, France employed 15,000 men to construct the Maginot line, a series of underground fortifications which extend from Belgium to Switzerland, aimed to protect the country against invasion from Germany.

When the September crisis first broke, France rushed hundreds of thousands of men into this line and Germany answered by hastening work on a similarly startling series of fortifications, the Siegfried line.

distance guns and other fiendish implements of Mars.

But the theory has not been borne out in the three conflicts the world has seen these past five years. Italy's campaign to capture Ethiopia lasted an amazingly long time, considering the crude type of opposition offered by Haile Selassie's forces. And in China the Japs have met with similar resistance. Shanghai was not captured overnight by a terrific bombing attack; the campaign lasted closer to five months.

The most striking example of modern warfare is in Spain, where two powerful forces are fighting their battles along tactics similar to those used in the World war. Madrid was bombed hundreds of times and still found itself able to hold out against Generalissimo Franco's rebel troops.

Thus, militarists of 1938 are of the opinion that warfare has not changed much in the past 20 years. As in the World war, the doughboy is the most vital factor in land conflict. A similar comparison can be made on the sea, where the battleship is still the backbone of the fleet despite mighty naval planes.

"Ersatz" to the Fore.

Perhaps the major difference between 1918 and 1938 is that gold is not now so important. The "allies" have behind them a gold reserve almost 30 times the value of that of Germany and Italy, but the latter two countries now boast of their

Aunt Tibby's Trunk

"BUT, Mazie," remarked Bert Howard to his pretty little wife, "it isn't quite fair that Aunt Tibby should want to come back so soon; it's less than three weeks since she left, and she had been here six months. I have no objections to your aunt; she's a nice old lady, if a bit eccentric, but you always work so hard entertaining her that you wear yourself out. Between worrying over her comfort and fussing about the safety of that old cowhide trunk, home becomes a place of torment for me instead of a haven of rest."

And then Mazie, whose bobbed crown of glory was decidedly of the shade beloved by Titian, and with a temper to correspond, replied thus: "If you were properly interested in the welfare of your family you'd want to keep Aunt Tibby here all the time! Do you fancy that she herself would be so particular about that old cowhide trunk, as you are pleased to call it, if it didn't contain valuables? She told me—no, I won't say she exactly told me, but she gave me to understand, and I know all the family have the same impression—that in it she carries her stocks and bonds. She has bequeathed the trunk to the one in whose home she happens to die."

"Mazie!" exclaimed Bert, putting his arms around his wife, "waiting for 'dead men's shoes' is sorry business! Do what you can for your aunt without making your family unhappy, but put all such ideas as you've just mentioned out of mind; they are unworthy of you!" and Bert stopped to kiss his wife good-by.

The first evening of Aunt Tibby's arrival Mazie began, "Barbara! do sit still! You'll make Aunt Tibby nervous!" or "John! don't walk so heavy!"

Aunt Tibby had been with them several weeks when she came down with a cold. The doctor called pronounced the trouble pneumonia. "Which at her age," said he (Aunt Tibby was 86), "is a serious matter. You had better get a nurse." Aunt Tibby had been so humored by her niece, however, that the nurse could do little to suit her, and Mazie was obliged to fetch and carry, to run up and down stairs until, ten days later, Aunt Tibby sank into her last sleep.

After the funeral the relatives who had gathered from far and near demanded that the will be read at once. So the old cowhide trunk was brought down to the living room and opened in the presence of all. It contained Uncle David's army uniform, a few books, half a dozen packages of old newspapers—and a long letter written by Aunt Tibby herself. This was addressed to her relatives in general and was a sort of confession. In it she stated that her income since Uncle David's death had been limited to a pension of $6 a month. That in some way the story had been circulated that this old trunk contained valuables and she had never contra-

It is a curious trait in human nature that we will take off our hats when a woman enters an elevator, and be most apologetic if we bump into somebody inadvertently; but the instant we get our hands on a steering wheel we damn all mankind—woman and man alike.

Too often, we are inclined to look upon traffic guides and regulations as irritating restrictions designed primarily to keep us from having a good time, when the truth of the matter is, they have been devised solely for our convenience and comfort.

dicted it, fearing if she told the truth some one might put her in an old ladies' home, an institution she detested. She trusted her relatives would pardon her and that the old trunk would be kept for her sake; that it might prove a magic casket to the owner, just as it had to her.

The trunk was left with Mazie, as she was the only person who displayed the least desire to possess it. After everyone had departed she threw her arms around her husband's neck and cried, "Oh, Bert, can you ever forgive me?" Judging by the sigh of contentment she uttered Bert's answer was satisfactory.

Aunt Tibby was right; the trunk did prove a magic casket for Mazie. It stood in the upstairs hall where she had to pass it many times a day and whenever she was seized with envy, stubbornness or a desire for finery she could not afford, one glance at the old trunk was sufficient to dispel such feelings in a twinkling.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—This writer has always thought it would be a good idea for the newspapers of a city to make an award every year to the person who had provided them with the most good copy. In New York, I would nominate Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, for 39 years curator of mammals and reptiles at the Bronx zoo, almost any year. He has just left for Trinidad to catch some parasol ants, which he has been craving for a long time. It has been generally supposed that the ants pack leaves and petals for shade. Dr. Ditmars puts us right on that. They gather them only for food.

The curator has exploded many myths, but usually substitutes something even more interesting. Reptiles haven't the slightest interest in sweet music and aren't soothed by it, monkeys will return to cleared jungle if it grows again; the mother snake does not swallow the little ones in times of danger.

But, being thus disillusioned, we learn from Dr. Ditmars that there are sea serpents, great schools of them, in the Indian ocean and the western tropical Pacific. They are as gaudy as an Elks' parade, with cold, beady eyes, and emit a dreadful venom. Dr. Ditmars carries them on the books as hydrophinae.

There are flying snakes, fish that climb trees, fish that shoot down bugs out of the air by expelling pellets of water like an air gun, frogs that can swallow rats, frogs with vocal power 1,000 times that of a man, insects which are carried by jungle people for flashlamps, animals which can travel 60 miles an hour and animals which never lie down.

Dr. Ditmars is 62 years old. At the age of 15, he began gathering insects for the Museum of Natural History. He had a year of newspaper work before joining the staff of the zoo, which may account for his being a friendly Santa Claus to reporters.

It is recalled that Homer Martin, the fighting parson who contends with John L. Lewis in a Faustian struggle for the body and soul of the automobile union, was the world hop, skip and jump champion just a few years ago—and may be still. It is only three years ago that he quit the pastorate of the Leeds Baptist church in Kansas City, got a job in the Fisher plant, organized the local of the United Automobile Workers' union and became its first international president.

His battle soon turned from the bosses to the left-wingers of the union and that's the issue of his contention with Mr. Lewis. Getting under way, he eloquently plastered William Green of the A. F. of L. and it is not clear where he would be headed in case of a final break with the C. I. O. leadership.

He is tall, athletic—once a track star for the Illinois Athletic club—with a wide, ready smile and shell-rimmed glasses. He gets $3,000 a year for a whole lot of trouble and strife, but seems to enjoy it. He is 36 years old, born and reared on a southern Illinois farm.

THIS writer knew quite a number of early-day aviators, including Lincoln Beachey, Art Smith, Bob Fowler, St. Christopher and others, and he always wondered why in splashes of gay colors.

They all were as drab as so many gray moths, while their role certainly called for a dash of color. One thought of the sartorial dash of d'Artagnan, Porthos and Athos if they had been riding the skies.

Col. Roscoe Turner, who recently lifted the Thompson trophy at Cleveland, for the second time, winning $22,000, satisfies a long-felt want. His flying toys are modeled on the old-time pousse cafe, calculated to give him protective coloring against a flaming sunset, but high visibility from below.

For years, off and on, he has been picking up records in pink pants and a lavender tunic, or in an ensemble blending many shades of blue, cerise and henna, with a rakish English officers' cap, ruddy face, Grover Whalen wax-tipped mustache and a couple of octaves of fine teeth. Here, as the old books on decorum would have it, is an outfit which would take you around the world.

Colonel Turner is of California background, the title being a dispensation of the governor of that also colorful state.

Lesson for October 9

SPIRITUAL WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:4-6; 32:1-6; John 4:19-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.—John 4:24.

"The First Commandment" bids us to worship God exclusively; the Second bids us to worship Him spiritually. The First Commandment forbids us to worship false gods; the Second forbids us to worship the true God under false forms" (Farar). Israel had lived among the Egyptians, a people known for their worship of images, and was about to enter into Canaan where there were many false gods. The Lord was therefore careful not only to forbid the worship of other gods, but also to forbid the making of images of any kind, whether they represented the many gods of heathendom, or were attempts to symbolize the true God. In studying this lesson we need to exercise care lest we miss the point by talking only of the gods of wood and stone which the heathen worship, and fail to apply the truth to any improper use of images which may prevail in our land and in the present day. Let us lay aside any preconceived notions and face the facts in the light of God's Word.

I. True Worship Required (Exod. 20:4-6).

This commandment expressly forbids idolatry in any form. The injunction is twofold. (1) Men are forbidden to make any material likeness which to them represents a being to be worshipped. It matters not whether it be an image of what men believe God to be like, or the image of an angelic being, a heavenly body, in fact "anything that is in the heaven above," or on the earth—such as a man or animal; or under the water—such as a fish. (2) If such objects have been made either by ourselves or others we may not, bow down to them, nor render any service to them. Let us all examine our religious ceremonies and practices in the light of God's commandment.

Observe that obedience to this command brings rich blessing to "thousands" (v. 6), whereas disobedience is a curse not only to the man who disobeys, but also to his descendants. Spiritual light so often runs through whole families, while spiritual life just as often blesses those who follow us. Blessed is the man who gives his children and his children's children a true spiritual heritage, but woe be unto that man who passes on the darkness and spiritual death of unbelief to his children!

II. False Worship Established (Exod. 32:1-6).

It comes to us as a real shock that a people so highly privileged, so well-instructed and so ably led as Israel should turn to idolatry. The story reveals the depravity of the human heart. Their excuse that Moses was gone was only an excuse without foundation. They did what their hearts wanted to do, and they used his absence to put forward their wicked desires.

Let us be careful lest we be misled or indeed, mislead ourselves into creating a God after the concept of our own heart and mind. We, like Israel, may be tempted to "make us gods" to which we will bow down and worship. It may not be out of place at this point to warn against a folly which seems to have laid hold of the church, that of almost deifying our Christian leaders. A man who is called to speak for God is a highly privileged man, worthy of our support and our respect. But let us remember that he is only a servant, an instrument in God's hand, and let us never be guilty of worshipping and serving "the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed forever" (Rom. 1:25).

III. True Worship Defined (John 4:19-24).

One would suppose that a truth so vital and fundamental as that stated in these verses would long since have been completely saturated the life of the church as well as of the individual believer. "God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

Even in this year of our Lord 1938, countless men and women still believe that worship has something to do with place (vv. 20, 21) or race (v. 22) or some other external device or formula. What a pity that this should be true when the gracious and delightful way to worship is through personal spiritual communion between God and man.

Deadening formalism is not our only enemy. There is the powerless preaching of modernism—and in all honesty must we not admit that even some so-called fundamentalism has in many respects lost the true spirit of the faith for which it truly contends. We who cherish the truth of God's Word will snuff modern liberalism. We may not be tempted to obscure the worship of God by formalism. But we may be in danger of a dead orthodoxy, being as someone said "orthodox about everything except I Corinthians 13"—or failing to worship God in spirit and in truth and not living out that spirit in loving service to our brethren.

Star Dust

★ Hidden Ambitions

By Virginia Vale

ZASU PITTS has been having a lot of fun on her personal appearance tour, and has learned a good many things about her own box office value.

She has brought crowds to the theaters where she has appeared, and motion picture exhibitors have told her that it hasn't been their fault that they haven't shown her pictures. They've begged for them. Any picture that she is in makes money for them, it seems, no matter who else appears with her.

"But you just haven't been making any pictures, Miss Pitts," they said to her.

There's a good reason why Miss Pitts hasn't been making pictures, these last months. A number of other actors, also big ones, haven't been making pictures either. Not that she really wanted to play. But the companies who sent for her wanted to cut her salary to the bone. These days the big money is, likely, it seems, to go to newcomers to the screen—foreign importations, cute girls who are being built up. Some of the big players have to swallow their pride, and do, and take the cut; others stay off the screen. Maybe that's why you've been missing some of your favorites.

Miss Pitts has two opportunities to make her debut in New York as an actress; one in a musical show that, because of its authors, is practically sure to be a hit, the other in a play. If her husband and children weren't so firmly established in California she wouldn't hesitate about accepting one.

Remember passing mention that was made here some time ago of Charlie Chaplin's new screen find, Dorothy Comynore? He had seen her in a little theater performance at Carmel-by-the-Sea, where he had gone to work out the script of a new picture.

Just in case you have wondered what happened next, she has changed her name to Linda Winters, and you'll see her in "Trade Winds" with Joan Bennett and Fredric March. Here's a chance to see if you agree with the great comedian on what constitutes good screen material.

When you see "The Great Waltz" you'll see some lovely bits of scenery used as background, American scenery in Genesee, N. Y. The reason is that Richard Rosson, Metro director, lived there for a while when he was a boy; now he's back in the old home town, shooting it for the public.

Cal Timney has had such fun on the air with his "If I Had a Chance" broadcasts that he's been tackling his co-workers in the studio and quizzing them about their hidden ambitions. Fred Allen said he'd like to run a grocery store in a small town in Maine, and Jack Benny declared that he'd like to be a racing driver, and find out what it's like to tear across the salt flats at Bonneville, Utah, at 350 miles per hour. As for Cal himself, his suppressed desire isn't so hard to attain; he just wants to learn to play the piano.

ODDS AND ENDS—"Carefree" isn't up to the usual Rogers-Roscoe standard. Jon Hall was rushed back from New York to Hollywood in order to be sent to England to make "The Thief of Bagdad." "Sing You Sinners" is such a good picture that it's a hit in London—first time that's happened to a Crosby picture—and Paramount will make a sequel to it. The Voice of Experience took a vacation that included a tour of Oregon and a visit to Joe E. Brown in Hollywood, and now is back in New York and on the air. Remember "Asia," the dog in "The Thin Man" and its sequel? You'll see him soon with Constance Bennett in "Topper Takes a Trip." Spencer Tracy has another grand part in "Boys Town."

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Sugar, Sirup and Molasses; Describes Correct Use of Sweets, Peerless Body Fuel

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE is an old saying that good things come in small packages. That is particularly apt when we pause to consider the nutritive value of sugar in its various forms. For two scant tablespoons of sugar supply as much caloric value as does three-fourths cup of cooked farina, or one and one-third eggs, or the lean meat of one lamb chop.

Sugar is a highly concentrated fuel food which burns quickly and completely in the body furnace.

The Sugar Bowl Is a Dynamo

It has been said that our present day civilization could not have reached its present heights without the driving force that sugar gives to men and women. And it is a fact that until comparatively recent times, only the very wealthy could afford this quick energy food which we now consume at the rate of more than 4,000,000 tons a year, or more than 100 pounds annually for every man, woman and child.

This peerless fuel food was once regarded almost as a medicine because of its ability to relieve fatigue and sustain vitality. And no wonder! For sugar is transformed into heat and power in less time and with less effort than any other foodstuff.

A Real Stimulant

While starchy foods require an average of from three to four hours for digestion, the body begins to burn a ration of sugar from 10 to 30 minutes after it is eaten.

It reaches the blood and muscles in a few minutes—as rapidly in fact as alcohol! That is why concentrated sweets, which are largely sugar, are so effective in combating fatigue.

Athletic coaches are well aware of the unique power of sugar as a stimulant and restorative of energy. That is why school and college youths are so frequently given highly sweetened beverages and other concentrated sweets before engaging in athletic competition.

Military leaders also appreciate how it increases endurance, and sweets are an important part of the soldier's ration. During the World War civilians were urged to reduce their consumption of sugar in order to make larger amounts available for the army, and most people found it difficult indeed to forego this agreeable food.

Indispensable for Most People

Sugar is such an indispensable ingredient in cakes, cookies, pies, puddings and ice creams, it is so necessary in beverages, on breakfast cereals and with fruits that it seems a great hardship to do without it even for one meal.

We are extremely fortunate, most people will agree, to live in an age when sugar is so high in quality and so reasonable in price. In the Thirteenth century when sugar was introduced to England through India, it cost the equivalent of ten dollars a pound in the monetary terms of today.

Refined sugar is now priced at a few cents a pound and one pound supplies over 1,800 calories! Moreover, when you buy a branded product, backed by a well-known name, you have the assurance that quality and purity are of the highest.

Moderate Use Desirable

Like all sources of great power, however, sugar must be handled with care. Too much sugar may prove as disastrous as too little. Possibly because of this, several false notions have grown up regarding this splendid food.

It is often charged that sweets cause indigestion, and it is true that when consumed in excess, they may ferment and result in irritation. Therefore, moderation should be the watchword.

But that is an excellent rule to follow in regard to all kinds of foods. For when consumed in excess, any food ceases to be beneficial.

It has also been charged that sweets are harmful to the teeth. But recent investigations suggest that the teeth are far more likely to deteriorate because the proper minerals and vitamins have not been included in the diet.

It is, however, desirable to restrict the amount of sugar given to children. That is because it quickly satisfies the appetite and may therefore decrease the consumption of other good and necessary foods, particularly those containing an abundance of minerals and vitamins. Children therefore can best take sweets in the form of sweetened puddings, gelatin, cooked and fresh fruits, and fruit juice and milk beverages.

A Food of Many Forms

The quick pick-up of sugar can be obtained in many forms besides the sparkling crystals of granulated sugar with which we are most familiar, or the brown sugar which is quite similar in composition, except for a larger moisture content, despite popular notions to the contrary.

Most fruits contain easily digestible sugars, the percentage in dried fruits ranging from 50 to 75 per cent. Milk sugar is also easily digested. Honey, molasses, corn sirup and the popular blended sirups are usually eaten in combination with other foods and are therefore unlikely to be consumed in too large amounts.

Corn sirup is often added to milk, fruits, vegetables, cereals, breads and desserts. It helps to make these foods more palatable and adds 60 calories with every tablespoon. It is so easily digested that it is often used in infant feeding.

Molasses provides significant amounts of both calcium and iron and is a good sweet for growing children. One and one-half tablespoons of molasses supplies as much calcium as one and one-half cups of diced carrots. It is a wise mother, therefore, who uses it in making the cookies that children like so well.

The mixed or blended sirups that are so popular with griddle cakes and french toast on cool fall days, also add palate appeal and energy values to the diet.

For in whatever form sugar is consumed, it remains nature's shortcut to press-the-button heat and quick, healthful stimulation.

HOW to SEW RUTH WYETH SPEARS

M. S. writes: "I followed the directions in Book 2 for a fabric hat and it was so satisfactory that I wonder if you could tell me how to use a piece of woolen material that I have to make a hat for my little girl who is just starting to school?"

Here is a cunning hat that is easy to make. Two pieces of goods are required—one for the hat and one for the lining. They may either match or contrast. Each piece should be 1-inch longer than the measurement around the largest part of the child's head. The depth of the pieces should be half their length. The diagram at the upper right of this sketch shows how to make a paper pattern for the hat. Cut a square piece of paper 1/2-inch wider and deeper than half the head measurement. Mark point A on the right edge half way between the top and bottom as shown. Points B and C are marked at the center top and bottom of the paper. The dotted lines are guide lines to help shape the curved lines between A and B and C and D. Point D is the center front of the top of the hat pattern and is placed on a fold of the goods in cutting each of the two layers. The diagonal line from A to C is the center back seam line.

Stitch the back seam of both hat and lining and press it open as at

E. Now, place the two pieces right sides together and stitch as at F. Turn right side out, baste along turned edge and stitch as at G. Gather the top as at H and finish with a ribbon or a stitched fabric bow and a feather.

NOTE: Use what you have on hand to make things of real value. You can save by doing—instead of doing without. Mrs. Spears planned Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery—to help you. Every page contains complete, clearly illustrated directions for things you can make at almost no cost. Enclose 25 cents and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Smart New Fashions
For Fall and Winter

BOTH these dresses are so pretty and so simple that you will want to make them up several times, in different colors. And with such beautifully simple designs, whose whole charm is a matter of line, you can use colors as gay as you please, now that fall colors are smart, and they look so pretty in the fall. If you've never done much sewing, here's a chance to find out what a satisfaction it is to make yourself something. These designs are so easy to do.

A Charming School Dress. This is a classic style in which growing girls always look pretty. The snug waist and flaring skirt are so becoming, and just grown up enough to delight them! In wool crepe, cashmere, gingham or jersey, with fresh white collar and sleeve bands, it will be your daughter's favorite school frock. Make one version of it in plaid.

Scalloped-Trimmed Day Frock. You should certainly have several dresses made like this—it fits so beautifully and looks so smart. Darts at the waistline give it becoming slimness. The high square neckline and "shrugged shoulder" sleeves are very new. It's the useful kind of dress you can wear for shopping and business as well as around the house. Make it up in silk crepe, flannel, sheer wool or home-keeping cottons.

The Patterns. 1454 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years; Size 10 requires 2½ yards of 39-inch material without nap. Collar and cuffs in contrast required. ½ yard. 1576 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 39-inch material. Fall and Winter Fashion Book. The new 32-page Fall and Winter Pattern Book which shows photographs of the dresses being worn is now out. (One pattern and the Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents.) You can order the book separately for 15 cents.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

"I thought possibly you had gone over later," continued Kelsey. "I took it up with Washington, but never got anywhere. Every time I had a chance to get to Middleton I did, for Mrs. Cameron's sake. On my last trip I found I had missed you. You found her dying and you took the boy away with you."

Farwell nodded helplessly. He did not trust himself to speak.

"I see it all now. Mrs. Cameron was not able to tell you what had happened. The neighbors did. They explained how I had come there with Elaine and Dale. That was enough for them—and you. I never dreamed."

Kelsey's voice trailed away. There was silence in the room, a silence broken by the slam of a distant door. Farwell seized the arms of his chair in his two hands. He pulled himself erect. There was a stern quality in his deep voice.

"Is that the truth, Wade Kelsey?"

"You know that it is," was the quiet answer. "I always wanted to find you, I think. I told myself that I would some day. That, after all, you had the right to know that Elaine's last thought had been of you. I didn't know where you were. I lead a busy life and a lonely one. Then Dale walked into the room where I sat talking to John Payne. It was like looking into Elaine's eyes again. Everything came back. I had no rest until I came here. I only wish I had been in time to spare Dale. We must think of him now."

Farwell lurched forward suddenly. He covered his face with his hands.

"Elaine . . . Elaine . . ."

Kelsey relaxed in his chair. He found his own eyes suddenly wet. After a moment he crossed over and laid a hand on the other man's bowed shoulders.

"We've both been hurt, Jonathan. It's over now. It's up to us to help that boy. He'll come back when he gets over the shock. And now you'll be able to tell him it's all right. I'm going down to the hotel. I'll stay for a little. If you need me I'll be waiting."

There was another ringing of the paragon bell in the early afternoon. A second and hesitating push of the button brought Jonathan Farwell to the door. He walked with a steady step, displaying his usual composure. His voice betrayed no surprise as he greeted the caller.

"Good afternoon, Miss Brady. Will you walk in?"

"Good afternoon, Doctor Farwell." Lee colored faintly under the steady scrutiny of the minister's dark eyes. She gathered herself together quickly, speaking in a voice that matched the man's for evenness. "I would like to speak to Mr. Mulgrew if he is here."

"I am afraid Pinckney is out at present," was the grave reply. "Is there anything I can do for you? Perhaps you will come in."

"Just for a moment then." And when the door had closed behind her, she wanted to know if it was Pink who had found Dale. He said he had. I didn't hear anything . . . Lee's voice trembled a little in spite of her effort to control it. "I couldn't bear it any longer." Her brown eyes looked up appealingly into Farwell's.

"I see. Please sit down." Lee shook her head, waited. "When was this, Miss Brady?"

"Last night after dinner."

"Last night . . ." The minister repeated the words with an effort. "Then he must have told you."

"He did. Where is Dale? Hasn't he come back at all?"

"Not yet. Pinckney must be searching. Something tells me he will bring Dale with him. I am waiting."

"Oh, if we only knew where he was! If he was all right! Lee's small hands clenched helplessly. "It wasn't his fault. I'm so afraid he thinks he mustn't love me any more. He may even think that I don't love him now. And I do! I do!"

Farwell took a step nearer. One of his hands came out to rest on her shoulder.

"As much as that, my child?"

"Of course," she told him, looking bravely into his eyes. "I will always love him."

"I believe you, Lee." His voice quivered a little as he said, "I never have known of a greater love. Save one. My dear, you will not be put to the test. Either of you."

"Oh, what . . ."

"I have learned the truth today. It might have been too late. But now I know that God will bring my son back to us. Will you wait for a little here? Wait with me! It will not be long."

"Oh, yes. Please let me stay."

Along the wooded slope of a high hill some five miles from Locust Hill a small figure was clawing its way doggedly through the heavy undergrowth, engaged in a zig-zag ascent. It was Pinckney Mulgrew.

"Queer how the kid ever found that trail," he muttered. "It must be around here somewhere." He squinted thoughtfully at the summit, revealed through an opening among the trees. "Must be," he repeated.

After a brief progress, his searching eyes were rewarded by a faint path leading in the desired direction. With an exclamation of relief, he followed it. Within a quarter of an hour he found himself nearing the final sheer ascent, a bald face of rock that rose almost perpendicularly. The explorer moved warily now, making as little noise as possible. From a thicket, he peeped cautiously across a small clearing.

There, propped against a boulder in the sunshine, was Dale.

"Hi," Mr. Mulgrew said casually, and stepped into the open.

Dale looked at him without speaking or stirring.

"I was out taking a stroll," Pink anticipated. "Thought I'd drop around this way. Nice little place you got here." His survey included a shallow cavern in the face of the rock and a small spring outside the entrance. "All set for housekeeping. What's the matter with that ankle?"

"Turned it on a rock. What do you want?"

"Shut up until I fix you." He knelt down and untied the soiled handkerchief Dale had bound about his bare ankle. "Wait . . ."

Pink reached for his coat and tugged a parcel from one of its pockets. "Brought myself a sandwich, but I ain't hungry. You eat it."

"I don't care for it. Thanks."

"Eat it anyway."

Pink moved over to the spring and dipped the handkerchief in the icy water.

"Maybe that'll make her feel better, kid. You didn't have it tight enough nohow." He applied the bandage with practiced fingers.

"It's no good, Pink." Dale remarked wearily. "Why did you come all the way up here? I want to be alone for a while. What made you look for me here?"

"That Saturday afternoon you took me explorin'. You said if you ever saw a hermit you'd come here. I figured it out." Pink, his ministrations finished, settled back on his heels. "Now, you and me's goin' to have a talk."

"No we're not. There's nothing to talk about."

"Listen, kid. You're goin' to hear what I got to say because I got good news for you. It's . . . Everything's all right!"

"What do you mean?"

"The dominie—he had it all wrong, kid."

"Pink! Do you mean it! He—no, he couldn't be wrong."

"But he was, I'm tellin' you. It ain't so easy to wise a guy, but oh, hell. He's your dad. That's what I'm tryin' to say. He always was. That bird Kelsey squared everything. He showed up this mornin'. Right after breakfast."

"Kelsey is here!" Dale said it unbelievably. "That's strange."

"Sure. He beat it down here right after you. I'd have got here sooner, but I wanted to hear what he had to say. I was sort of scared to leave him and the dominie together, everything considered. So I hung around to make sure they weren't goin' to mix things. I clamped my ear right to the door. When I was sure everything was on the up and up, I beat it."

"Tell me!"

"No, sir. I done my part. You want to hear that from your dad. And say, kid, when you and him get together, go easy. He's been hit longer and harder than you. And it wasn't his fault. I'd have done the same thing, I reckon. So would you. But you can take it from me, it's all right now. Next thing's to get you home."

"I can walk."

"Guess you'll have to. I didn't pass no cabs comin' up. I'll cut you a stick and help you. There's somethin' else I'd better tell you, maybe." Pink stood with his feet apart, slashing the branches from a substantial length of scrub oak.

"Before I give you this stick."

"What?"

"It's bout the girl friend. I seen her last night. She's waitin'. Made me promise I'd fetch you back."

"You mean . . ."

"Sure I told her. And, kid, I want to take back any knockin' I ever done about dames. That's all. The journey back to Locust Hill was slow. Dale, his face set grimly, limped over the uneven ground with the aid of his cane and Pink's willing shoulder. Frequent halts for rest were made.

To add to Pink's uneasiness, the sun had disappeared. Clouds were gathering thickly, a threat of more rain in the air. It wouldn't do the kid any good to get wet. When they got nearer town, he'd figure out a short cut that would bring them in behind the burial ground. No use giving the villagers a treat. The first big drops of rain were falling when Pink assisted his charge up the steps of the back porch. He hung open the door with a sigh of relief.

A swift little rush across the floor of the half-dark kitchen.

"Dale! Dale . . . You've come back!"

"Oh, Lady Lee!"

Pink made hasty exit into the dining room.

Lee was close in Dale's arms, her face buried against his shoulder.

"I waited and waited, Dale darling . . . I . . . I couldn't have stood it much longer. Are you all right?"

"Everything is all right now," he whispered, his cheek against her curls.

"I know. And it would have been all right. No matter what happened. Don't you know it? Didn't you know!"

Famous Trees in Various Parts of the Country Are Memorials to Great Events

A few trees of the millions which people the forests, farms and towns of the United States have been singled out by history to play famous parts and to stand as memorials to great events in the life of the country.

"Symbolizing fully as well as tablet or pillar could do, some significant achievement, these trees represent the peculiar fitness of trees as memorials, and it is especially appropriate that they should have a hall of fame of their own."

says the Forestry Almanac of the American Tree association. It is from the almanac that most of the following information about famous trees has been taken.

Some distinguished trees stand out by reason of their age, such as the General Sherman Sequoia in the Sequoia National park of California. Its age is reckoned at 4,000 years, and it has a diameter of 33 feet and a height of 280 feet. Many of the redwoods and sequoias are as old or nearly as old as this one.

When Charles Sumner was senator from Massachusetts he sent to the czar of Russia an acorn from a tree near the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon. This acorn grew to an oak in the palace grounds in St. Petersburg, and an acorn from it was planted in the White House grounds in Washington in 1904 and is now a prosperous tree.

Washington has several other famous trees, including the Treaty Oak, under whose branches an important treaty with the Indians was signed.

In North Carolina is the great Battle Ground Oak, which viewed the battle of Guilford court house. Near Bath, Pa., stands the Washington horse-chestnut, which was presented by George Washington to General Brown of Revolutionary fame, who planted it in front of his home. Several other trees associated with the name of Washington stand in New York state. One is the White Plains sycamore near his headquarters at that place, and another is at his headquarters at Pawling.

Another famous tree in New York state is a balm of Gilead which has given its name to the village of Balmville. It marks a fork in an early colonial road, and is known to date to at least 1640. At Rome, N. Y., is preserved the Fort Stanwix tree, from which, according to tradition, the first American flag used in battle was flown in 1776. At Schaghticoke, N. Y., is the "tree of peace" which was planted by the British Governor Andros, and a party of Indians as part of the ceremonies of a peace meeting.

Near Chadds ford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is the Lafayette sycamore. Its branches overhang a stone house occupied by General Lafayette as his headquarters on the eve of the battle of Brandywine. He was laid under this tree when wounded in the battle.

While the Washington elm in Cambridge, Mass., where the general took command of the colonial army, is no more, a commemorative tablet marks the spot where it stood so long.

Fleur de Lis From French
The name fleur de lis which is commonly used for the stately wild iris was borrowed from the French, and means "the flower of Louis." The name is derived from its selection by Louis VII of France as the emblem of his reign. First named the fleur de Louis, the spelling later became corrupted to fleur de lis.

Before your newspaper is put to bed

When we talk of putting a newspaper to bed we aren't trying to be humorous. It's shop parlance for going to press—the final step in the production of a newspaper.

Before your newspaper is ready to go to bed there's a long series of steps, representing the collective efforts of many minds and many hands. The issue you hold in your hands, for example, involved the gathering of hundreds of news items, editing, putting into type, proofreading, making up the type forms and, finally, printing. It could not be done without trained minds, trained hands and a heavy investment in expensive equipment.

There are many other things, too. The selection of features that make your newspaper more informative... more entertaining. Each one of these features is carefully chosen with the thought that it will prove interesting to all or part of our readers.

Some newspapers seek to lessen the effort and expense of production by limiting their coverage of news and features. Skeletonized newspapers are cheap and easy to produce. But we prefer to offer our readers a complete newspaper. That is why you find in our columns the work of many of today's greatest newspaper names. And complete local news coverage—of course!

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Sanford are rejoicing over the arrival of a fine daughter at their home last Friday morning.

There are five cases of scarlet fever in and near town. Four of the cases have about recovered. All the cases have been quarantined.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sanford, of Chattanooga, who have been spending some time in town with home folks, returned home last week.

Stamey Cranfill, who is stationed at Camp Sevier, Greenville, S. C., spent a few days last week with his parents in Clarksville.

Duke Spry and Miss Lena Faircloth, both of Shady Grove township, were married Sunday at the home of C. B. Carter, the presiding magistrate.

Mrs. M. D. Brown and daughters Misses Bonnie and Catherine, and son Rufus, motored to Hickory Sunday and spent the day with relatives and friends.

Rev. Leary Cashwell, of Statesville, preached an interesting sermon at the Baptist church Sunday evening.

The editor is in receipt of a letter from P. R. Kimbrough, who has been stationed at Fort Screven, Ga., for some time. "Cleve" is now at Watertown, N. Y., and writes that he will soon arrive at a French port.

W. C. Lowery and G. A. Cauter left Thursday morning for Camp Jackson. These boys were to have gone Wednesday morning, but one said he slept too late, and the other did not receive his notice until Wednesday.

J. W. Sherrill sold the first bale of new cotton at Statesville, Sept. 29th. It weighed 490 pounds and brought $148 50, or 25¢ a pound. The seed brought $1 per bushel.

S. C. Gowan, of R. 5, was in our midst Thursday. He had been to Winston with a load of tobacco, and told us that he sold 368 pounds of the weed which brought him the neat sum of $108.94.

The following boys will leave for Camp Jackson Saturday morning at 5 o'clock: Lawrence Summers, Archie Potts, Duke Smith, Samuel Tutterow, Wade Leifer, J. Frank Hendrix, John Peoples, W. G. Berger. The board exempted David Roscoe Stroud and J. W. Hendricks.

The Straw Ballots.

The Gallup poll, for instance, has this year predicted accurately in advance the result of almost every contest. And two years ago the Gallup system was equally successful. Of course there was the ill-starred Literary Digest poll that went haywire because its questionnaires were addressed to a list of voters that was not at all representative. But the modern scientific method of poll taking is significant in more ways than one. For one thing it is a serious matter for Washington newspaper correspondents who specialize on analyzing the trend of public opinion in advance and whose public now pays them little mind. The straw poll then is serious competition for them.

Yet these straw ballots become a definite threat when they serve two well the calloused politicians' purpose. There are those who use it to determine the course of the "bandwagon", those who want to be winning side more than they want to be right; willing to join the winner whoever he may be. And then there is the disadvantage to party or candidate whose weakness is shown by the poll. These become disheartened when they face the apparent futility of their cause.

When Washington politicians use the straw doll as a guide for their legislative wisdom, it can be made to serve a good purpose or the reverse, depending on many things. A good purpose when Dr. Gallup accurately sums up public sentiment on this bill or that, and when the representative, eager to follow the wishes of his constituents employs it as the only available channel of information and casts his vote as the rank and file want him too. A bad purpose when a poorly informed public registers its sentiments, and the legislator follows them, on something that turns out to their detriment.

There is always the danger that these samplings may build a reputation for accuracy, and then sell out to the highest bidder. We are sure the charge was unfounded that the Literary Digest poll was doctored, yet there was plenty of criticism. Anyhow these straw polls may have both uses and abuses, but apparently they are here to stay.—Ex.

Reward At Last.

A 10-year court fight brought $65,295 to 62-year old David Graves George, of Danville, Va., the past week for writing the song entitled "Wreck of Old '97."

A final decree, ordering the Victor Talking Machine company to pay George that much as the author of the ballad, was handed down by Federal Judge J. Boyd Avis in United States district court.

The money was half the royalties on the sale of more than a million records. George got half because the "Prisoner's Song" was on the other side.

It will have to be remembered that "Old '97" was the Southern crack mail train that was wrecked at Danville, several years ago when 14 people, mostly mail clerks, were killed; and 10 others seriously injured. George claims to be the original author of the song which he alleges was appropriated by the Victor Talking Machine Co., and now after a decade it seems that his claim has been established and he will get the money for his poetic effusion.

"British Empire" Not Official. The name "British Empire" is not official, it is only the popular and convenient term used to designate the aggregation of the territories and separate governmental units under the British crown. The king of England is not spoken of as the "Emperor of the British Empire."

Davidson Republicans Militant.

Davidson county Republicans believe that this year they will redeem the county and elect their full ticket. The recent rotten disclosures in the way the Democrats hold elections even in their own primaries in that county has given new life to the Republicans and they are going to ask some very difficult questions for the Lexington ring to answer.

In times past the Democratic machine has run rough shod over the Republicans and the Democrats having been in charge of all the election machinery the Republicans were helpless.

Since it has been shown that in the July 2 Democratic primary the Democrats voted people from far and near and that some 700 were sick (?) on primary day and one physician attended them all it is certain there is something rotten up the branch.

Republicans are still flanking over the fact that in the election four years ago when it appeared that the Republican candidate for sheriff was elected how the returns were held back from one big Lexington precinct until four o'clock in the morning and after every other precinct in the county had been heard from to see how many votes were required to put the Democratic ticket especially the sheriff across and when the returns finally did come in the trick has been turned and all Democrats were counted in. The Davidson Republicans have issued a campaign handbook which carries brief sketches of the county candidates and congressional candidate, attacks the Democratic administration on tax valuation, the conduct of the welfare department and other matters affecting the taxpayers of the county. It also reviews the charges made following the congressional primary.

The Republicans have a golden chance to put Davidson in her right place in November and will do it if they get an honest ballot and a fair count and too many people don't get sick on election day and the absentee ballot is not raped.—Union Republican.

Most Editors are mortal men who have to stick through thick and thin, just human beings like the rest and trying hard to do their best.

When one gets tired and out of sorts, he grows around and kicks and sports, but he goes on and prints the news with more or less his honest views.

Most Editors would like to hear a word or two of friendly cheer, they only print the news that's made and can't be blamed when it's off-grade!

Just try them out with news worthwhile and watch these newsmen spread their style; they'd make your paper twice this size if it required to emphasize.

The men who run the hungry press are mortal sure, I must confess, so give them things to brag about and bet your boots they'll sing and shout!

Did You Know?

All our 100 counties have white farm agents.

Home agents in 82 counties.

There are 29 negro farm agents.

There are 15 negro home agents.

The first bale of cotton sold in 1928 brought 17 1/2 cents.

That many of us wish those good old days were here again.

That 88 counties in North Carolina have higher tax rate than Davie.

What's the Answer?

WHAT ARE DREAMS AND WHY DO WE DREAM THEM?

DREAMS are the means by which Nature insures to us the rest which we should otherwise lose if we do not dream. When the entire brain is unconscious during sleep we do not dream. But when a portion of it is awake and some force from the conscious penetrates to it, a dream is set into motion. For instance, we are asleep in a hammock on a hot day. The sun creeps on us and the heat of it causes that portion of our brain which is not entirely asleep to start dreaming that we are on a hot dry desert. The glare of the sun becomes the bright blinding glare of the desert. Were the dream not set into motion, the sun would awaken us.

A Significant Election Fact.

Not a single United States Senator who voted against the President Supreme Court bill has been defeated in the primaries for re-election so far and no others are now threatened. The fact is significant.

How much the position of these Senators on this particular issue had to do with the warm endorsement they received at the hands of their respective electorates is, of course, a pure problem in speculation. But there can be no doubt that this rather unique fact hints strongly of a popular disapproval of what the President of the United States wished to accomplish when he sent a measure over to Congress by which he would have been given the authority to load up the Supreme Court bench with his own hand-picked jurists.—Charlotte Observer

True Co-Operation.

At a recent meeting of business men, a speaker was trying to impress his hearers with the value of real co-operation between all business men. A man in the audience asked him for his idea of what really genuine co-operation would be like, and could he cite a real case of co-operation that would prove to be genuine and not sham.

The speaker thought for a minute or two, and then said:

"This to me would be real co-operation. When you a Methodist bishop umpiring a Sunday baseball game between the Knights of Columbus and the Ku Klux Klan for the benefit of the Jewish Charities, that is true co-operation."

John Coolidge Honored.

John Coolidge, only son of the late President Calvin Coolidge, has been elected a delegate from New Haven to the Connecticut State Republican Convention. John said that his election as a delegate was without his knowledge and promptly disclaimed any desire to follow in the footsteps of his famous father.

Young Coolidge said he was going to the convention this month, but as for seeking public office or a full-time career in politics "that's not for me." "I've got a job to do," he said, referring to his work in the "New Haven" railroad which began in 1928 after he got his sheepskin from Amherst College. "I haven't got time to be dabbling in politics."

My Little Girl.

The following letter was written by Phil Braniff, of Okla., in the interest of safety. It is appropriate anywhere:

Dear Driver:
Today my daughter, who is 7 years old, started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue gloves. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is "Scott," sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the folly of education and she waved "goodbye" and started off to the halls of learning.

Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, the girl with yellow curls and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces. She told me about her teacher, who has eyes in the back of her head, and about the trees in the school yard, and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things, tremendously vital, unimportant things then we studied spelling, reading and arithmetic, and then to bed.

She's back there now, back in the nursery, sound asleep with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm. You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see, I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken, I can fix it, but when she starts across the street, then she's in your hands.

She's a nice kid. She can run like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time. But I can't be with her all the time, I have to work to pay pay for her clothes and her education. So please drive slowly past the school and intersections, and remember, that children run from behind parked cars.

Please don't run over my little girl.
PHIL BRANIFF.

Pressure For New Taxes.

Says the Syracuse, (N. Y.) Post Standard: "Expenditures 9,000,000,000, revenue $5,500,000,000."

"This record of annual finances of the federal government is evidence enough that there will be continual pressure for new taxes at Washington. It furnishes the background to the report that Undersecretary Roswell Magill and other Treasury Department office are busily engaged in studying a new tax program. "And taxes absorb purchasing power. Today, taxes are taking 25 per cent of the nation's income. If they take more, purchasing power will be decreased, effect upon the unemployment situation."

War Boomerang Deadly Weapon. The war boomerang, which does not return like the type used for amusement, is a deadly weapon. When properly thrown, says a writer in Collier's Weekly, it travels in a straight course and at such speed that it can inflict a fatal wound from a distance of 500 feet.

Those Proposed Amendments.

When the voters go to the polls in November they will have the opportunity, the privilege or the duty, either way they want proposed amendments to the Constitution. Usually very little thought is given to the merits of constitutional amendments until the voter finds a ballot in his hands and then it is too late for him to act intelligently.

It is well then that we be thinking about these two, and not wait until that day when poll workers and campaign interest gums up our thinking machinery.

One of these amendments would provide for the establishment of a state department of justice; the other would increase the terms of office of sheriffs and coroners from two to four years.

As for the first, this step may easily be regarded as a progressive one. True there may be an overlapping of agencies if this department is established, but an overlapping that would provide a check-up that does not now exist. At present the general's office rarely has anything to do with criminal cases. Practically everything is left to the lower judiciary, where there is a conflict of procedure and often the employment of a dripping whitewash brush. With a state department of justice whose purpose would be the prosecution of crime and the administration of the criminal laws of the state, obviously many faults would be remedied.

As for increasing the tenure of sheriffs to four years, the benefits of that outweigh the disadvantages. As a matter of fact there is little rhyme or reason why all county offices should not be put on that basis. But sheriffs in particular, could render a more acceptable service under this longer term. As it is now the sheriff hardly takes the reins of office until he must chart his course for re-election, and they are mighty few who do not build their fences at the expense of good law enforcement. Four-year terms then would provide at least two years of service divorced from the urgency of politics, and that would help some.

But, so far as sheriffs are concerned, there must first be more public concern about the special fitness of the man for the job, else we would be fastening some misfits on our counties for four years where now we can get rid of them in two. But that disadvantage is eliminated if we measure the candidate by his qualification rather than by his personality or ability to backstab. The notion here is that a "yes" vote for both of these amendments would serve the state well. But by all means the voter should be giving them careful study, to the end that he may vote intelligently on them.—Elkin Tribune.

Sad News for Henry Ford.

A German motor car manufacturer has gone Henry Ford one better and is putting on the market what he calls a "Volkswagen" or people's car, which sells for about 950 marks about $380. The car is sold on the installment plan at the rate of five marks or about $2 weekly, which puts it in the reach of any wage earner. The new car, which seats five persons, and will make forty miles on a gallon of gas, has a maximum speed of about 62 1/2 miles an hour on smooth highway.

CHAPTER I

Hale settled deeper into the office chair and kept his brown eyes on Casper Kneeland's face. Kneeland had been "Uncle Cass" the last time they met. That was 18 years ago, out in the Northwest, when Hale himself had been a boy of ten. Kneeland was not "Uncle Cass" now. He was an impressive, successful, middle-aged New York business man. He had made a fortune by inventing a simple article widely known as Kneeland's Safety Catch. He was busy, preoccupied, and rather short of memory concerning ten-year-olds. He had welcomed Hale into the office suite of his factory with a handshake and a business-like smile. Now he was "making talk," and Hale resented it.

Kneeland might have forgotten a ten-year-old godchild, the caller told himself. He should not have forgotten that godchild's father. Hale Senior had been Kneeland's first partner and the closest friend of his youth. It had been a fine friendship. Yet here, 18 years later, was a Casper Kneeland equally vague in memory of the Hales, father and son, and talking too smugly, the young man thought, about his interests.

Listening to him, as the man sat at his handsome flat-top desk and poured out his trickle of small talk, Hale realized that "Uncle Cass" had not yet wearied of the flavor of his success. He rolled it on his tongue. He betrayed a tendency to enumerate his various possessions.

"We're at our Camp now, but of course I keep my town house open all summer," Kneeland was saying, apropos of the unseasonable June heat. "Joan, my niece, is always running into New York for a day or two, even in the hottest weather. And Hosanna (my sister, who joined my family after we came East), would live in New York 12 months a year if I'd let her. She doesn't care much for seashore life. It suits me down to the ground. I'd like nothing better than to put up at Halcyon Camp the first of June and stay there till the first of November. Can't quite manage that, of course, but I come as near it as I can."

"I can usually get away from here Friday night and stay at the Camp till Monday," he went on, as Hale merely nodded. "And I always put in all of August there. Greatest place in the world to sleep. Pines and spruces around and behind you, the whole Atlantic in front of you, good boating, fishing, swimming. We've got a modest place, but plenty of room. Say—by Jove!"

He stopped short under the impact of an idea that had just hit him, and stared at his caller.

"Why don't you get out of this oven and make the Camp a visit?" he rushed on after a second's hesitation. "The newspapers say this will be the hottest June we've ever had. It will do you no end of good to loaf awhile. Didn't you say you had just had a stiff bout of pneumonia in Spain?"

That pneumonia is ancient history now," young Rex assured Kneeland. I was all right again a week before I sailed for home."

"Landed this morning, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir, and I'm hustling out to Chicago. But I once promised Dad I'd never go through New York without looking you up."

"Glad you did, my boy," Kneeland spoke absently, his mind full of the sudden idea that had come to him. "What are you going to do in Chicago?" he added in the same tone.

"Get a job, I hope."

"June is no time to make a start," Kneeland pointed out, "in Chicago or anywhere else. By the way, what's your line?"

He didn't even remember that, Rex reflected, though Hale Senior had written him about it some years before with paternal pride.

"Civil engineering," Kneeland nodded.

"No use trying to find a job now," he underlined. "It can't be done. Everything's dead—till fall, anyway. I'll tell you the thing to do. You're a big athletic chap, but you need building up. You're too thin for your six feet, and your color isn't right. Come down to Halcyon Camp and spend the summer there. It will buck you up. I call it Halcyon Camp," he added complacently, "because I want it to be a serene and happy place. I want everyone to be comfortable there."

Hale was surprised and showed it. "Oh, thanks awfully," he said, "but I couldn't do that!"

"Why not?" The question was sharply imperative. Evidently Kneeland was not a man who liked opposition.

"It's awfully kind of you, sir. It takes my breath away. But I can't unload myself on your household. The women of your family might not like it."

"The women of my family are my sister, Hosanna, who is fifty, and my niece, Joan, who is twenty-one. They realize that I'm boss of the house. Julia, my wife, died 10 years ago. Your mother's dead, too, isn't she?" he broke off to ask.

"Yes, sir. She died very suddenly just after I entered college. I couldn't even get home in time to see her."

"Any brothers and sisters?"

"No, sir."

"I remember Rex writing that your mother was gone. It was the same year my wife died."

That, young Hale reflected, was why he remembered it. Kneeland's memory would not long hold anything not directly connected with his own interests.

"You ought to remember my wife," he brought out.

"Yes, sir, I remember her well. She was mighty good to me," Rex the youngster's face. The smile was more likable than the first glimpse of it had been. It banished the expression of anxiety that sat so oddly on the manufacturer's round disc. He was suddenly a good-looking man in the early fifties, plump, slightly bald, pleasant-featured, human and engaging. Five minutes before he had seemed a harassed and nerve-worn man in the sixties. Rex did not know that a similar change had wrought its miracle in his own face. He waited eagerly for his host's reply.

"In lots of ways. For one thing, I've no secretary at the Camp. My son Herbert, twenty-two now, was supposed to do that job. But he's no good this summer—always 10 miles away when I want him. He make myself useful if I can. But I won't go tonight, thanks. I'll stay over tomorrow and get a few things I'll need for camp life. Naturally, I didn't bring much in the line of clothes back from Spain."

"Then that's settled. Go any time you like. I'll telephone Hosanna that you're coming. Wait. I'll give you a check for expenses."

"Nothing doing, thank you. I'll pay my own way till I see how much bluff you're giving me about this job. I suspect that you're putting over today's good deed."

"Nothing like it. There will be work for you, all right."

The haggard look abruptly returned to Kneeland's face. For an instant he seemed old again, and very tired. There was something pathetic in the eyes he fixed on Hale. Then he suddenly recalled that the good-looking young giant before him had been a damned nice kid.

"I can't thank you enough, Mr. Kneeland," Hale got up.

"Uncle Cass," my boy. That's what it used to be a thousand years ago."

He had remembered his godson at last.

"Thank you, sir. By the way, where is the Camp?"

"Down on Long Island," Kneeland laughed and wrote the address for him.

Hale put in the next day shopping. The experience decreased his supply of ready cash but increasingly raised his spirits. He was not an economical young man, and even before the prospect of a camp visit he had realized that he must start his new life with a suitable American wardrobe. There were not many temptations to be sartorially dashing in Spain. There were plenty today, and he yielded to them with an abandon that endeared him to clerks. Moreover it was a pleasure to salesmen to fit him. They let him grasp their impression that he would do credit to the suits and shirts and ties and shoes and knickerbockers he was buying. His figure was excellent and his copper-colored hair and brown eyes would set off his heather mixtures he selected for outdoor wear. He would look well in his white flannels, too. He was clumsy about shirts and ties, and the clerks who served him in those departments respected his knowledge. This young man knew what went with his coloring. Hale explained his satisfaction in his new purchases with an engaging grin.

"Besides," Kneeland interrupted, "you can make yourself useful."

doesn't seem to be interested. Flocks by himself and that sort of thing. He isn't even much use to Joan. He's off on his own affairs, whatever they are. Another young man around the place will be a god-send to the girl." His smile widened.

"I'll pay you a salary, of course. Just thought of it," he added candidly.

Hale shook his head.

"We won't talk about salary till I find out whether there's really anything for me to do. I'll go, and

Buda and Pest Are United by Fifth Danube Bridge; Built by Hungarians

The fifth bridge to span the Danube between Buda and Pest is open to the public, writes the Budapest correspondent of the London Sunday Observer. The bridge, which stands near the Horthy Miklos road, is a plain solid structure designed by Hungarian architects and built from Hungarian materials by Hungarian workmen. It indicates the swift development of the capital in the last 10 years, for it opens new prospects over a district which not long ago was marshy land.

The fifth bridge commemorates both the World War and the post-war period and brings the history of the city up to date. A hundred years ago the only means of crossing the Danube was a bridge made of 42 boats, which was taken apart and stored in winter. When the ice formed the citizens walked across the river from one town to the other.

The first bridge to be built was the chain bridge, below the royal palace, after Count Szechenyi had struggled for seven years to carry through the plan. The chain bridge cost 6,500,000 florins, and the toll was four farthings. It was opened in December, 1849.

Twenty-seven years later the Margaret bridge was built by a French engineer named Gouin; not by Eiffel, who was then director in the firm which employed him. The bridge was opened by the suicide of several persons who threw themselves down from its parapets, and immortalized by Arany in his ballad on the scene.

The Francis Joseph bridge was built in 1896 for the Hungarian millennium and was opened by the emperor hammering a silver nail into the construction. During the revolution this nail was lost, but was later found, and may now be seen under glass.

Weather Affects Bird Flight
Weather conditions affect the altitude of bird flight. On nights of rain and fog, birds fly close to the earth. Wind currents also are a great deterrent to bird migration, as head winds increase the labor of flight and, if at all strong, cut down the speed of flight. Moderate cross, quartering or light winds from other directions seem to offer the best air-movement conditions, according to experts in bird lore.

The party should have been gay

... but something sinister hung over this rich man's summer estate—over the owner's sister Miss Hosanna, "a pin cushion of a woman;" over his niece Joan, and his son Bert; over a young scientist, Dr. Craig; over a man named Ainsworth and over Mrs. Spencer Forbes, a neurotic, sharp-tongued, social-minded woman.

Grim and threatening mysteries develop and are shrewdly and logically solved by young Rex Hale, hired to find out what ailed these unhappy people. In doing so, he found romance and happiness himself. It's the smoothest mystery-romance you've ever read!

C. Houston Goudiss Relates the Romance of Wheat and Discusses Flour, the Basic Food

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THE story of wheat flour is the story of civilization. Before man learned to cultivate this golden grain, he was obliged to move from place to place, with the seasons, in search of food to sustain and nourish his body.

Then, on one happy and momentous occasion, perhaps 6,000 years ago, an inspired nomad plucked the kernels clustered at the top of some waving grasses, observed that they had a nut-like taste, and passed along the far-reaching discovery to his fellow tribesmen.

The beginnings of wheat cultivation are lost in antiquity. But we do know that for thousands of years, it has been one of the most important crops in the world—so necessary to man's well being that the supposition, "Give us this day our daily bread," has summed up his most fervent desires.

Food for the World

Today, nearly three quarters of a billion people use wheat as food. And modern methods of milling have developed flours of such superlative quality that breads are more appetizing and more attractive than ever before; special flours make cakes and pastries light as the proverbial feather; and there are prepared mixes available for biscuits, waffles, muffins, griddle cakes, pie crust and gingerbread.

For Energy and Vitality

The form in which wheat flour makes its appearance on the table is of less importance than the fact that it is and should be an essential item in the family food supply. That is because it offers a rich supply of fuel value at little cost. The different types of flour contain from 61 to 76 per cent carbohydrates, from 11 to 15 per cent protein, and varying amounts of mineral salts and vitamins.

It is necessary to know something of the structure of the wheat kernel and to understand how the various flours differ, in order to select the flour best suited for each purpose. A kernel is made up of several outer layers of bran; a layer of cells high in phosphorus and protein, just inside the bran; the endosperm composed of cells in which starch granules are held together by proteins; and the germ. The starch cells are so small that one kernel of wheat may contain as many as 20,000,000 granules.

White and Whole Wheat Flours

White flour is made chiefly from the endosperm. Whole-wheat, entire-wheat and graham flours are loosely applied terms which refer both to products made by grinding the wheat berry without the removal or addition of any ingredient, and also to a flour from which part of the bran has been removed or to which bran has been added.

One of the most prolonged discussions of the last two decades has involved arguments for and against the use of white or whole wheat flour in making various types of bread and muffins. As a result, many people have been confused and misled—often at the expense of their enjoyment in meals.

Here are the facts: White bread contains important energy values, proteins, some minerals, chiefly potassium and phosphorus, and when made with milk, it also supplies some calcium. It is easily and almost completely digested, tests indicating an average digestibility of 98 per cent.

Bread and other bakery products made from whole wheat flour also contain proteins and carbohydrates, plus good amounts of iron, copper, phosphorus and potassium; and vitamins A, B and G. The whole grain products are less completely digested than those which are highly refined, however, so some of their nutrients may be lost to the body.

When the two types of flour are considered as sources of protein and energy alone, they are regarded by nutritionists as practically interchangeable. Whole wheat flour is conceded to be richer in minerals and vitamins, but where white bread is preferred, these elements easily can be supplied from other sources.

As a matter of fact, foods made from both types of flour belong in the well-balanced diet, where they add variety and splendid food values at minimum cost. And it goes without saying that for many purposes, only white flour is suitable.

Bread Versus Pastry Flour
Different types of wheat differ in their proportions of protein and carbohydrates, and that accounts for the difference between bread and pastry flours. Bread flour is made from wheat containing a large amount of gluten, which gives elasticity to a dough and helps to make a well-piled loaf. Pastry flour contains less gluten and more starch and has a lighter texture that produces fine-grained cakes. All-purpose flours, as their name implies, are usually a blend of different types of wheat and are designed for general household use.

A Symbol of Progress

It is a tribute to American enterprise that the world's largest flour mills are now to be found in this country, and that tremendous staffs of technicians and research chemists supervise every step in the preparation of the flour which may pass through as many as 17 grindings and be subjected to 130 separations.

Experts begin by checking the quality of the grain while it is in transit to the mill. But their work does not end when the flour emerges pure white in color and unbelievably fine in texture, after having passed through silk bolting cloths of 100 mesh or finer. After that, there are baking tests, day after day, to be sure that every sack which is sold is of uniformly high quality.

Self-Rising Flours

An interesting development of recent years has been the self-rising flours and other ready-to-use mixtures. Some of these contain only a leavener; others include dried milk and eggs; fat; and baking powder, so that only a liquid is needed. All are planned to save the homemaker's time and maintain her family's interest in the most important energy food—the products of wheat—the foremost cereal grain.

Questions Answered

Mrs. F. B. L.—Flour should be stored in a moderately cool, dry, well ventilated place, and should be protected from vermin and insects. It should not be exposed to excessive heat, nor to freezing temperatures.

Miss F. B.—You are right! Rye flour is next to wheat in popularity, though it is usually mixed with wheat in making bread. Flours or meals are also made from potatoes, bananas, soy beans, lima beans, buckwheat, barley and rice, though the percentage is small compared to the amount made from wheat.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging headache, persistent headache, stiffness of muscles, getting up nights, swelling, puffing under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

If the office-seekers would make fewer promises and do more work, the voters would rise up and call them blessed.

Well, boys, it begins to look like the world is going war crazy—everybody wanting to fight and nobody able to find out why.

The last war this country got mixed up in was war to end all wars, but it seems that somebody threw a monkey wrench into the machinery.

President Roosevelt will go down in history as the president who made and broke more promises than any other president since the days before G. Washington.

President Roosevelt talks like he might vote the Republican ticket this fall, or for at least some Republicans. We couldn't imagine a greater blow to the G. O. P. We hope he continues with the New Deal.

What has happened to that 15 cent cotton and dollar a bushel corn? With the smallest cotton crop for the past 37 years the price is standing around 8½ cents for lint cotton. Another broken promise, and the end is not yet.

The 357 Davie county boys who enlisted and were drafted into the world war were told by the late lamented Woodrow Wilson that they were being sent to Europe to fight to make the world safe for democracy. We don't know what has happened to democracy—it is all New Deal now.

The Record doesn't propose to cut its advertising or job-printing rates to the point where we will be doing the work at a loss just to keep our presses running and the legitimate firms from making a fair profit. Our rates are as low now as it is possible to charge, considering the price of every thing that goes into producing good printing. For years we have maintained our present rates, despite the mounting cost of ink, paper, type, etc., together with the high cost of living. Our rates will not be cut. Fair prices and honest work is our motto.

Col. J. C. Sell, editor of the Coolemees Journal, celebrated his 73rd birthday last week, and enjoyed a big dinner, and had plenty of music and speech making on the side. Colonel Sell has been the editor and owner of the Coolemees Journal for the past 32 years. The Journal is the oldest paper in the county with the exception of The Davie Record, which was established in 1899, just seven years before Col. Sell began the publication of the Journal. The Record joins his friends in wishing for him many more years of usefulness, and trusts that he will live to be a hundred, and that his paper will never die.

Most newspaper reporters are given courteous treatment by most officers. For nearly half a century we have been interviewing various town, county and state officers in regard to court news, arrests, trials, etc. We have not always had the cooperation of all officers. We find it very hard sometimes to get the facts in regard to arrests. For this reason we have not always printed the court happenings. When it comes to printing the crime news, The Record sees no difference between the richest man in the state who goes wrong and gets into trouble, than when the biggest bum and crook in the state does the same. We can't afford, and would not attempt to play any favorites. It has been said of old that the poor devil gets his name printed when the law catches him, but that the influential and wealthy citizen can frequently escape publicity on such occasions. There is no doubt much truth in this statement.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Miss Louise A. Boyd, wandering far from sunny San Rafael in California, pushes farther up the East Greenland coast than any American ever went before. She was a comely woman of 30, skilled in the rubric of serving tea and all the niceties of Victorian etiquette before she shoved into the ice pack and began pot-shooting polar bears—nine in one day. She might have felt like the late William James who, free from a long stretch at a Wisconsin chalet, asked passersby if they could direct him to a nice Armenian massacre.

For the last 12 years she has been equipping stout little Norwegian sealers for her Arctic expeditions. She has trained herself in scientific observations and her findings are published under scientific auspices. She holds decorations from two foreign governments and the American Geographical society has published two of her books. She surveyed a stretch of the Greenland coast, previously uncharted, and for this the Danish government named the area Miss Boyd Land. She has ventured farther north than any other white woman.

She dislikes publicity and has little of the histrionic sense common to explorers. So far as the reporters are concerned, she might just as well make an expedition to Flatbush. At great labor and expense it has been ascertained, however, that she takes a nice wardrobe north with her and that she always powders her nose before going on deck. She probably was trapped into these indiscreet admissions as she has made it clear that all this is nobody's business.

Weaving through ice packs on an Atlantic voyage gave her her big idea. One of her chief interests on her northern voyages is photography. She is the daughter of John Boyd, wealthy Californian. The old manse at San Rafael, which this writer has seen on occasion, is a citadel of decorum, from which it would seem, none would ever wander, so far and so dangerously.

THOSE who liked Thomas Mann's "The Coming of Democracy," will find in Dr. Cyrus Adler, who celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday just the other day, a living statement of the theme of Herr Mann's theme. A scholar and humanist, he has given his life to an exemplification of democracy as an ethical and cultural aspiration and not a political formula—which is Thomas Mann's impassioned thesis. This writer thought of that when he read the book, and spotted up Doctor Adler's birthday in the future book for attention here.

He is the only president of two colleges, Dropsie college of Philadelphia and the Jewish Theological Seminary of New York. A fellow of Johns Hopkins university, where he obtained his doctorate, he taught at the University of Baltimore. He has been a staunch defender of science and the humanities against bigotry and insularity through the more than half-century of his teaching, writing and speaking.

At his retreat at Woods Hole, Mass., he is still creative, alert and vigorous. He is saluted here as the proprietor of one of our most important birthdays.

DR. GEORGE D. BIRKHOFF, professor of mathematics at Harvard, seems to be the first to note the competition in the academic world from the influx of superintelligent refugees from Europe.

As the doctor sees it, mathematicians won't be worth a dime a dozen if these highly gifted men keep on coming. However, his observations indicate no narrow insularity on his part. He is all for the enrichment of our intellectual life, but notes that somebody may have to ride on the running board with all this overcrowding.

When Einstein began bating his hot relativity grounders this way, Doctor Birkhoff was one of the few men in America who could field them. He is a prolific writer in the overlapping zone of mathematics and philosophy, one of the most heavily garlanded men in the scholastic world, a distinguished Catholic layman holding high papal honors for scholarship. He is a native of Michigan, educated at the University of Chicago and Harvard.

IT BEGINS to look as if the various actresses who refused to play the heroine in "Spawn of the North" were smart girls. They probably remembered that it's dangerous to work in a picture with a clever animal, because nine times out of ten the animal steals the picture.

Mention "Spawn of the North" to someone who has seen it, and he—or she—won't reply: "Wasn't the battle between the salmon fishers and the pirates exciting?" or exclaim over the icebergs or the excellent performances of John Barrymore and Lynne Overman. Not if he—or she—runs true to form. The exclamation points will all be for the trained seal, Slicker.

Slicker deserves the enthusiasm, and his owner and trainer deserves the good break that he gets through Slicker's performance. He is H. W. Winston, a veteran of vaudeville; he and his trained seals, on one of their tours of the Continent, played a command performance for British royalty.

Another animal who became a star overnight is the terrier who played "Asia" in "The Thin Man." He'll appear with Constance Bennett in "Topper Takes a Trip," a sort of sequel to "Topper." In fact, he'll replace Cary Grant, in a way. Grant is too busy and too expensive for the new "Topper" picture, so the dog will be Miss Bennett's companion in this one.

Tyrone Power is gathering bouquets from those who know about band leaders for his performance in

TYRONE POWER

"Alexander's Ragtime Band." A little group of musicians was discussing it recently, and they said that he wasn't merely standing up there and waving a baton, as movie stars whose roles require them to turn band leader usually do. They maintained that he was actually leading the band.

Incidentally, Paul Wing, whose "Spelling Bee," impressively sponsored, goes out on a nationwide book-up at 5:45 Sunday afternoons, has an effective way of taking radio-acting apart and putting it together again for those who want to act in broadcasts.

Mr. Wing takes a play—one that he wrote some years ago, when he was well known as a playwright—and rehearses the aspiring actors in it as it would be done on the stage; then he coaches them in it as it would be done in a broadcasting studio, bringing out the many differences in technique.

Elaine Carrington was put gently but firmly in her place recently by her son and daughter (Robert, aged ten, and Patricia, aged fourteen). Mrs. Carrington, in case you don't know, is one of radio's most successful writers; for years she has done the script for "Pepper Young's Family," which is broadcast on two nationwide book-ups, on Monday and Friday mornings and afternoons. She made her name as a brilliant short story writer before she took to radio, selling to the biggest magazines.

But—Patricia and Robert are now publishing a magazine, "The Jolly Roger," (at their mother's expense), and getting contributions from friends and family. The only stories that they've insisted on having re-written, (and they didn't like even the re-written versions too well), are these by the famous Elaine Carrington!

ODDS AND ENDS—Two of radio's most promising young singers, Marie Louise Quelli and Felix Young, have just recorded an album of Jerome Kern's music... The "Alice in Wonderland" skating sequence in Sonja Henie's new picture, "My Lucky Star," makes the picture worth seeing; the rest of it isn't quite up to her usual standard... Don't miss "You Can't Take It With You"; in some respects it's better than the stage version that New York raved over! © Western Newspaper Union.

Practical and Pretty At-Home Wearables

YOU'LL be indoors more from now on—busy at your own fireside. So it's time to make yourself some pretty new work clothes. Here are some that combine comfort and practicality, and they are so easy to make that even if this is your first sewing venture, you'll succeed beautifully. The dress, you'll notice, is a diagram design that even the inexperienced can finish in a few hours.

Slenderizing House Dress. Everything about this dress is designed for working comfort. The waistline, although it looks slim because it's drawn in by darts, is unhampering and easy. The skirt gives enough leeway to stoop and climb and stretch. The armholes are ample, the sleeves short and loose. This dress is easy to do up, too, because it fastens in the front, and can be laid out flat on the board. Its utter simplicity, long lines and deep v-neck make you look slimmer than you are. Make it of calico, percale, linen or gingham.

Three Pretty Aprons.

Any of the three of them will be mighty handy to have all fresh and ready, when you want to prepare afternoon tea or a hasty pick-up supper for unexpected guests. Each of them protects the front of you efficiently, and looks so crisp, feminine and attractive. Make several sets—you'll want some for yourself, and also to put away for gifts. They're so pretty for bridge prizes, and engagement remembrances. Any woman who ever so much as makes a cup of tea will love them. Choose batiste, dotted Swiss, lawn or dimity.

The Patterns. 1615 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material. Contrasting cuffs would take 1/4 yard.

1595 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires, for apron No. 1, 1 1/2 yards of 35-inch material and 6 yards of ricrac braid; for apron No. 2, 1 1/2 yards of 35-inch material with 5/8 yards braid; for apron No. 3, 1 1/2 yards of 35-inch material, with 11 yards of braid.

Fall and Winter Fashion Book. The new 32-page Fall and Winter Pattern Book which shows photographs of the dresses being worn is now out. (One pattern and the Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents.) You can order the book separately for 15 cents. Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

PASSING JUDGMENT

... on others can often get us into "hot water" when we do not know all the circumstances.

By WINFRED WILLARD

MAN, orange and bunch of boys on the lower East Side of New York. The man tossed the orange to see the boys scramble for it. One chap, about 10, fought like a young tiger, tooth and nail, eyes flashing, face grim, fists hitting furiously—all for an orange. The man who had tossed it told his wife at home: "I saw the meanest boy in the world this morning. Didn't care for anybody or anything except to hog an orange himself."

Business took that man later the same day to a pitifully poor room. On a cot in the corner a little girl's cheeks flamed with fever and her body was wasted with suffering. The door flew open. In bolted that little chap, the "meanest boy in the world." Breathless with running, he tiptoed up to his sister's bed and whispered excitedly, "Here's an orange I brung ye, Sis; fought for it 'cause I thought ye'd like it." How her eyes sparkled! Tiny hands reached eagerly for it. Parched little lips craved the refreshment it offered.

The man went home, sat long slumped in his chair. Then he called his wife and with shame and regret struggling in his voice blurted out: "You've married the meanest man that ever lived. That little shaver I told you about, the one I said was the meanest boy in the world, fought for my orange to take to his sick sister and I'm lookin' for somebody to kick me round the block!" He didn't know the whole story before he sat in judgment; that's all.

Films Evidence

A big bishop spoke rather caustically and disparagingly about a woman in public life who traveled the nation and who had an exceptional salary. "Why doesn't she wear better clothes?" he asked. "Same old things season in and out; that hat certainly's been on the road winter and summer two solid years." It had. She knew it better than the bishop. But he just didn't know that her money was spent instead for nurses and comforts for her sick father whom she adored. What did a new hat matter if father needed what the cost of a hat could provide? Just judging on flimsy evidence!

For months two people dodged each other. Each knew the other was haughty, unapproachable, cold and undesirable. Finally they met. Didn't want to; tried to avoid it and couldn't. Almost at once barriers began to fall. From the dislike of misunderstanding, they got proper appraisals of each other; they surprised satisfaction, each began to enjoy, then to admire the other. For the first time they saw behind the scenes and found only what was good. Nearly always so!

Case of the Railroad Man

It seemed strange that the man who lived in Washington breakfasted ungodly early, walked four long blocks, took a street car across city, then rode the tiresome train every day to his Baltimore office. We could all have told him how much shorter, simpler and more sensible for him to step into the bus in front of his house and out at his office; most anybody would know enough to do it this easier, quicker way. Then we learned that he is of the railroad staff and it is his professional responsibility to take the train. Buses weren't his line. Trains were! We sat in judgment without knowing what we were talking about.

So easy to turn our imaginations loose on any pretext or person; so easy to see what isn't there; to misunderstand and misinterpret; to see the little lad fighting for an orange for his sick sister as "meanest boy in the world"; so easy to be critical instead of kind; to tangle human threads that need straightening, not snarling, and thus to spoil many a lovely pattern of life.

A world of saving wisdom abides in the old philosophy that reveals "there's so much good in the worst of us and so much bad in the best of us" that it scarcely behooves any of us to say things against the rest of us." Just another way of suggesting that it's better all around to "judge not." It keeps things from boomeranging on us!

Palms in Coat of Arms

The palm is in the coat of arms of South Carolina. Legends have it that the Virgin Mary commanded the palm to bend its leaves over Christ during the trip into Egypt. Palms were not only with food, but also oil, fuel and shelter. One of the superstitions pertaining to palms, notes a writer in the Rural New-Yorker, is that if one would make a cross of leaves he would be free from injury during a heavy storm. People in some sections of the country believe that it will drive mice away from granaries; that if leaves are eaten it will cure fever, or that if a palm leaf is put behind the picture of Virgin Mary on Easter morning it will drive away all animals without bones.

Lesson for October 16

REVERENCE FOR GOD

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:7; Matthew 6:33-37; 12:33-37.
GOLDEN TEXT—Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.—Matthew 6:9.

Character reveals itself through the words and deeds of a man. He may try to conceal his real spiritual condition and may assume an outward appearance of piety but he need not say many words; nor meet many of life's problems, before his true condition is revealed.

Our lesson for today touches primarily on the matter of the words of men, presenting first God's command that in speaking we are to show reverence for His name, and then leading up to the expression of that reverence in abstinence from swearing and from idle talk.

I. Reverence Commanded (Exod. 20:7).

The forbidden thing is the taking of the name of the Lord "in vain." Our use of the word "vain" carries the meaning of "useless, without purpose or meaning." This is part of what is in mind in this commandment, for the name of Jehovah is sacred and is to be revered as standing for the eternal God. It is never to be used carelessly, or for a frivolous purpose. All too often we tell jokes or stories which have no real purpose or meaning except to elicit a laugh and in them we use the name of God. We all need to exercise care at that point.

The Hebrew word translated "vain" has the additional meaning of "evil" and "falsehood." Men are so bold that they may even use the name of God to support themselves in a lie. God hears and will in no wise hold them guiltless.

II. Swearing Forbidden (Matt. 5:33-37).

The Sermon on the Mount (so-called), from which this portion of Scripture is taken, is difficult to interpret to the satisfaction of all. Some disregard its evident application to the kingdom and, attempting to apply it in the midst of an ungodly generation, fall into such inconsistency that they abandon the effort and regard the teaching of the passage as impossible idealism. Others, who rightly interpret the passage as presenting the laws and principles of life in the kingdom of God when it shall be fully set up on earth with Jesus as King, fail to make any application of those principles to the life of those who are now living in this world—though not of it—but rather have their citizenship in heaven. This is also an unfortunate error.

We who follow the Lord Jesus are not to swear by either things sacred or things that might be called secular. Perhaps He has in mind that our lives should be so true that men will not need to have any kind of an oath to be assured of our sincerity and honesty. Some believe that all oaths even in court are forbidden, while others, with due respect for the feelings of those who hold this view, regard the taking of oaths in official matters as not being in mind. All would agree that the careless and almost sacrilegious use of God's name in administering oaths would be taking His name in vain.

Swearing is also entirely beyond the pale with Christian men and women. It is all too common with both men and women. A great church has organized a "Holy Name Society" to keep its members from using the name of the Lord in profanity. What a telling comment on the times in which we live!

III. Judgment Assured (Matt. 12:33-37).

Jesus had cast out a demon who had possessed a man and made him blind and dumb. The Pharisees could not deny the miracle but attributed it to the power of Beelzebub, prince of the demons. Jesus closed their mouths by pointing out that Satan did not work against himself, and went on to speak solemn words regarding their and our responsibility for what we say.

A day of judgment is coming, when we shall answer for the idle and wicked words which we speak. While we would not bring condemnation upon those who indulge in the innocent pleasantries of life by making too severe an application of these words, neither should we destroy their evident import by failing to apply them to our daily conversation. One need but listen to the casual small talk of men and women in public places to realize that we need to give attention to the matter of elevating not only the conversation of others but our own as well to a nobler and more helpful level. Surely Christians should speak for the glory of God on every occasion and in each circumstance of life.

The way to accomplish this worthy purpose, and the only way, is to have the heart and life filled with the good treasure of God's Word, for verily out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. What do your words and mine indicate to others regarding what is in our hearts?

Fashion Embarks on Wild Color Career in Fall Garb

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION is about to go on a great color spree. For that matter the new clothes have already started out on a mad color career that promises to outcolor even the most colorful seen for many a year.

Not that this color orgy writes finis to the simple black foundation dress that provides such dramatic setting for stunning costume jewelry and for accessories that splash color accents in vivid highlights. No indeed! The black dress with dashes of color is holding its own.

The intriguing thing about the colors exploited this season is that they are distinctively out of the ordinary. The colors heard most about and seen dramatized throughout Paris collections are the purples and pinks, the mauves and violets and fuchsia shades. In fact the entire gamut of violine shades is run. Comes next in the limelight the much talked of teal blue and fog blue and that rapturous blue made famous in the ever-beloved Blue Boy portrait painting. In fact, we are to enjoy a season of "blues" that are subtle and lovely beyond description.

The suit of refined elegance which you see pictured to the right in the picture is made of an imported wool in an exquisite scarab blue tone. It is trimmed with sheared beaver, a fur which is very much in use this fall. Self bow tie at the collar and belt which is significant for much emphasis is given to tie-fastenings throughout current costume design. Two wide bands of shirred, matching silk are set into the top part of the dress underneath.

Wine dregs is a shade that is making special appeal with American women. There are also a number of fascinating greens in the present fashion spectrum, notably bronze, hunter, laurel and tapestry greens. Autumn rust and copper tones are also going big.

Coats are yielding to color to a surprising degree. Leading stores are devoting entire window displays to coats in purples and deep plum or wine-dreg tones. These are superbly colorful and with opulent furs present about the handsomest array of coats are seen.

As to the gorgeous plaid or striped wool coats so outstanding in the new fashion picture, the only way to resist them is to close your eyes and flee their color glory. Better still, why not make up your mind to indulge in a richly colorful plaid or striped (fashion favors both) wool coat at the very start. The striped coat centered in the group above reflects rich autumnal colors that take on an added note of luxury in a trim of luxuriant fur.

The swank jacket suit pictured to the left abounds in color intrigue. The color formula adopted is blue spruce and dark brown. The dress, the trimming on the coat and the hat are of lightweight woolen in the subtle blue spruce. The short swagger coat is brown in a new deep shade that looks velvety and soft. The velvety wool weaves are among the smartest shown this season and fashion is placing considerable emphasis on them.

Fur Jacket Adds

Chic to Costume

For ultra chic on an autumn day the smartest formula calls for a dress of an alluring wool weave topped with a youthful and jaunty fur jacket. No-end versatility is expressed in these voguish fur-jacket costumes.

A likable model includes a conservative black dress of handsome dull-finished velvet, surfaced deep pile wool. With this milady wears a swank short skunk jacket. There is a huge gold jewelry piece at the throat and the belt of the dress is detailed in gold.

A gray tweed coat dress is topped with a gray kidskin lumber jacket. A bolero of sheared beaver surmounts a dress of brown cloque weave and so on.

Even Trimmings

Turn to Jewels

The fair for jewelry display is reflected in the new jeweled trimmings that are worked about the necklines of many of the newest daytime dresses. The latest models are arriving, bedecked with necklace effects that are jewel-appliqued right on the very fabric itself. So realistically is this done to all appearance it seems like an actual necklace or perhaps huge pendant suspended from a chain.

The idea is clever and presents no-end opportunity for ingenious design. Not only jewels but metal cabochons and locket effects and leaf motifs combine to add a decorative note.

Femininity Note

The feminine lingerie effect is not limited to blouses and vests but frequently characterizes the whole dress.

Trends for Fall

Day dresses for fall show a tendency to wider flared skirts with accentuated hip lines.

Drape Technique

Much of costume design in the new fall fashions is based on a draped technique that is designed to slenderize the figure. Below in the picture is an example of adept draping in slate blue silk jersey which sort of intertwines the material in a manner much approved by designers. Illustrated at the top is an unusual draping of royal blue acetate jersey against the black sheer of a sheathlike frock done in the latest bi-color manner. In every dress collection the bi-color theme is widely exploited. The ostrich trimmed tricorne and the doeskin gloves are royal blue.

FARM TOPICS

WEAK EGG SHELLS LACK VITAMIN D

Requirements of Birds Are Of Great Importance.

By Prof. C. S. Platt, Associate Poultry Husbandman, Rutgers University, New Jersey.

A lack of sufficient vitamin D in rations for laying flocks can be determined far more readily by egg shell quality than in the number of eggs produced. Egg shells become weak before production is in any way impaired when vitamin D is deficient. With an adequate supply of the vitamin, the number of cracked and weak-shelled eggs produced in a day should not exceed 3 per cent. This means that with a collection of 400 eggs daily, there should not be more than about one dozen cracked or weak-shelled eggs. If the number exceeds this, the indications are that the vitamin D requirements of the birds are not being properly met.

To correct this condition, the cod liver oil content of the ration should be increased. Normally, the use of 2 per cent of a high grade, natural cod liver oil in the mash will provide a sufficient amount of the vitamin for good results. If this amount is being used and the number of cracked eggs still exceeds 3 per cent, it is possible that the quality of the oil is not up to standard.

Egg production alone is not a very good criterion of the needs of the birds for vitamin D, because under most conditions the birds obtain a sufficient amount through the ordinary open windows of a poultry house to meet their requirements for egg production.

Most Fires on Farms

From Common Causes

Farm fires in the United States take about 3,500 lives and destroy $100,000,000 worth of property each year, says a recent United States department of agriculture publication, "Fires on Farms."

Eighty-five per cent of this loss is from such commonplace causes as defective chimneys and flues; sparks on combustible roofs; lightning; spontaneous combustion; careless use of matches, smoking; careless use of gasoline and kerosene; defective and improperly installed stoves and furnaces; faulty wiring; and misuse of electric appliances.

Four simple precautions that the author, Harry E. Roethe, of the bureau of chemistry and soils, gives to reduce needless waste caused by farm fires are: Use fire-resistant roofing; dispose of waste and rubbish; never use gasoline or kerosene to start or revive a fire, and guard against overheating of stoves and furnaces and clean smoke pipes at least once a year. He also suggests that major buildings be equipped with lightning rods.

In addition to removing the fire hazards, Roethe suggests preparations to fight a fire should one occur, that is, fire-fighting equipment on every farm, kept in a handy place ready for instant use.

Many Eggs Do Not Hatch

About 300,000,000 good eggs a year, which would be enough to feed thousands of persons, are wasted every year because they will not hatch. Most of these can be saved in edible condition, according to the claims, by a device recently patented which will detect whether an incubated egg will produce a chicken or not before it has a chance to spoil. It is claimed that from 15 to 20 per cent of all the eggs set annually in the United States never hatch.

Rug From Old Coat And Scraps of Felt

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE directions for making the rug in my book—SEWING for the Home Decorator, have brought many letters from readers describing rugs that are new to me and very interesting. The reader who shares with us this idea for using pieces of heavy woolen and scraps of felt, tacked her rug to the side of the house and took a snapshot of it which she sent me.

The finished rug is 34 by 23 inches. Half of it is shown here at the upper left. The foundation (1) is made of the back width of a very heavy old coat. An allowance was made for a hem to add weight to the edge. The foundation may be pieced if a large section of heavy cloth is not available or felt purchased by the yard may be used for it.

Next, circles of felt in two colors, cut from old hats and discarded school pennants, are sewn together with heavy black thread as at A. These are then sewn in place as at B beginning at the center of the foundation. The large circles in the three center rows are two inches in diameter. Those in the next two rows are 2 1/2 inches. All the small circles are one inch.

You can make slipcovers, all types of curtains and many other things for the house with the help of Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator. Just follow the pictures. Step by step you learn to make the lovely things you have been wanting for your home. Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery—illustrates 90 stitches; also dozens of things you can make in your spare time to use or to sell. Books are 25 cents each. If you order both books leaflet on crazy-quilt quilts will be included free. Address: Mrs. Spears, 20 S. Desplaines St., Chicago.

CONSTIPATED?

Don't Let Gas, Nerve Pressure Keep You Miserable

When you are constipated two things happen. FIRST: Accumulated wastes crowd up the bowels and press on nerves in the digestive tract. This nerve pressure causes headache, a dull, lary feeling, bloated abdomen, loss of appetite, and dizziness. SECOND: Farty gassed food starts to decay forming gas, causing on your stomach, acid indigestion, and heartburn. Bloating you up until you sometimes gas for breath. Then you can't eat. You can't sleep. Your stomach is sore. You feel tired out, groggy, and miserable. Adverts stress you the DRUGS ACT on you need. This efficient cathartic cathartics ridges that awful GAS almost at once. It usually cleans the bowels in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight relief. Sold at all drug stores.

Be Kind To Children And Old People.

I got in a car and traveled ten miles to Farmington to see Mr. Bill James, who is 88 years old. He is one of my best friends. I have always loved Mr. James. He has been a good friend to me for 50 years. He told his son that he could just see Tilden Augell and sit and talk with him, he would be satisfied. We talked for some time about old times, and I took him by the hand and asked him if he was ready to meet his God, and he told me he was, with tears in his eyes. I left, telling him we would walk the golden streets together.

I then went down below Advance to see Mr. Alex Hege, who is 85 years old. He is another of my good friends. We talked over old times. He was glad to see me, and it did my heart good to see him. I took him by the hand and asked him if he was ready to go to the better world, and he told me that he was ready and just waiting the time. I told him goodbye, and left for Fork, where I stopped to see two brothers, Ed and Houston Davis. The former is more than 81 years of age, and the latter is 80. I talked with them until the going down of the sun. They are first cousins of my father. I came home and went to church, feeling like I had been through a revival. When you read this article don't forget to cheer up all you meet and come in contact with, for the sake of your Saviour and mine, the Lord Jesus.

Home Talent Schemes.

Waynesville Mountaineer.

It is just about this time of year that a representative of some production company, from away off, blows into town and contacts some organization with the idea of putting on a home-talent show, as a benefit.

Too often the heads of organizations, desperate for funds for the treasury, will swallow the smooth line of talk handed out by the representative, who promises every thing under the sun, in order to get a name on the dotted line.

There has been few exceptions, where the sponsoring organization realized enough from such a scheme to justify the time and worry connected with it.

The producing company usually sends some amateur director, and several trunks of dirty, flimsy costumes, and for this, get the major part of the profit as their guarantee.

Not for one minute would we turn our thumbs down on home-talent shows. We think they should be encouraged, but at the same time we feel that the shows can be successfully put on by local people and justify more support, than to have some outsider come in just to fill their pockets.

Already one or more organizations have been approached this year on a proposition like we have just mentioned. So far all schemes have been turned down.

If the time comes when an organization finds it absolutely necessary to put on a show to raise funds, we suggest that they organize and put it on, and keep all the profit at home.

And if it becomes necessary to employ one of the professional promoters to stage the performance, then for the sake of keeping the record straight, and not mislead the public, why not be frank enough to say that the show is for the benefit of the company putting it on, and if anything is left of the proceeds that the sponsoring organization gets it.

Gives Something To Think About.

David Lawrence, one of the most astute writers in the national capital in a copyrighted article to the daily press makes some of the most amazing as well as the most startling revelations by which the Roosevelt Administration may entrench itself in power at the expense of the taxpayers of the nation.

Lawrence says that "official confirmation has come at last of the amazing number of voters who are receiving financial benefits of all kinds from government. There are 6,500,000 families receiving public aid, and assuming that there are at least two votes to a family—the average is really higher—the total number of votes involved is in excess of 13,000,000.

It is as Harry Hopkins, avers 90 per cent of the persons on WPA are in favor of the administration in power, then it follows that approximately 11,700,000 votes can be won by the Democrats, which is more than enough to swing any national election and virtually all the state elections.

No such balance of power has ever before been held by an administration through governmental favors or benefits. The figures which have just been announced have been collected by the social security board in Washington from other federal agencies and from State and local authorities. While the number of families aided in July is given at 6,500,000 the board estimates that about 20,800,000 persons were covered by the range of government checks.

Many previous estimates have been made unofficially, but not until the social security board, which has better access than any other government agency to the data, came out with the verifed data could it be said that as many as 20,000,000 persons are in one way or another directly related in a financial way to government now-days.

To get at the actual increase that this all means to the Democrats, it must be assumed that the voters hitherto were in large part Democratic anyway. If it be supposed that, in 1932, the Democrats had 60 per cent of any given number of voters—which is a high percentage—then out of the 13,000,000 voters receiving benefits, the Republicans had about 40 per cent, of 5,200,000. If the ratio today is as Hopkins calculates it, namely 90 per cent Democratic and 10 per cent Republican, then the Democrats, by reason of the financial aid given, have increased their vote from 7,800,000 to 11,700,000, or about 4,000,000, which is a sizeable quantity in a national election.

The effect on state elections can also be appraised. The Republicans now have the unprecedented total of only seven out of the 48 states; the Democratic administration at the capital either controlling directly or being allied with all the state machines in the other 41 states.—Ex.

Bully for Tax-Eaters!

It is said that, in 1850, one out of every 100 Americans got their living from the public trough; in 1900 one out of every fifty; in 1920, one out of every seven, and now one out of every three either directly or indirectly. No wonder taxes are mounting from year to year!

WHEN you are tickled on the feet or anywhere else you might be sensitive, a certain set of muscles and nerves are set into action. This action sends to the brain a spontaneous reaction causing a laugh. This same set of muscles and nerves are set into motion by a funny sight or sound causing the same reaction—a laugh. Just as when one person presses certain strings on the violin and draws a bow across them a certain sound is produced, so will the very same sound come forth when another person sets into action the same strings and pressure and bow.

Leonard On The War Path.

J. Paul Leonard, of Statesville, secretary of the North Carolina Fair Tax Association in an address before a civic club at Mount Olive, Thursday night, criticized what he termed the mounting cost of government and the increasing amount of taxes required to operate it.

In recent years," he said, "we have gone to such extension of the functions of government that a veritable army of people are on the public payroll and the cost of government had advanced far beyond what many of us feel can be justified as necessary, wise or expedient, necessitating the levying and collecting of increased taxes all out of proportion to the ability of the average citizen to pay."

A democracy like the United States, he said, "lends itself easily to exploitation of new methods of taxation, because of its many local subdivisions; and for that reason it is absolutely necessary that taxpayers who become the particular victims of special taxes set up a counter influence."

In reference to the state sales tax, Leonard said it is "sapping the very life blood of the merchants, as well as working a hardship on their customers on low income," and declared the retailers should "join together and fight for their very existence."—Ex.

Long Sunday School Attendance Record.

Children and grand children of Mr. and Mrs. Haywood Lucas, of Erwin, Harnett county, have a Sunday school attendance record of which they are proud.

Six grandchildren and one son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas have attended Sunday school at the Erwin Presbyterian church for a total of 73 years. The son, Auburn Lucas, has the longest record, 19 years, with a grandson, William Harrington, following a close second with an attendance record of 17 years. On down the line is found Myrtle Harrington with nine years; Ger-aldine Harrington, with 10 years; S. H. Harrington, Jr., with seven years; Irene McPhail, nine years; and Carol Beth McLean, who will soon complete two years.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

Offers New Real Estate Tax Plan.

A plan that will revolutionize the payment of taxes on real estate in North Carolina by shifting the tax burden from small property owners without decreasing by a dollar the revenue from such property is being devised by a group of "liberals" nominated to the 1939 session of the General Assembly.

J. B. Vogler, of Charlotte, one of the three Democratic nominees to lower house from Mecklenburg county and a member of the group sponsoring the plan, revealed the salient points this week in the Charlotte Observer.

It will be developed around one single principle that taxes upon real estate should be paid by the owner of the property.

"The present laws providing for the payment of taxes upon real estate are not based upon that principle," added Vogler. "Taxes upon real estate are now paid in a great majority of the cases by the people who do not own it. That may sound strange, but when you look into it you will see it is the case."

The new tax laws, he pointed out, will require that taxes paid on real estate be paid by the actual owners rather than the persons in whose name the property is listed. In that way mortgage companies or individuals holding mortgages on such property will pay taxes upon that property in proportion to the interest they hold in it.

"Here is a man who has a home valued at $5,000 and assessed at about $3,800," explained Vogler.

He pays $500 down and so much a month or year. Under our present plan this man pays taxes on the entire property, although he holds but equity of $500 in it. Under the new proposal the mortgage company would pay the taxes on $4,500 and the home owner on $500. As the home owner paid off the debt and increased his equity in the property he would increase his taxes proportionately, and the taxes paid by the mortgage company would decrease until the property was clear of debt and the home owner—who would then actually be a home owner—would pay all the taxes.

"Such a tax plan on real estate, as anyone can see, would not decrease the revenue from that property. Nor would it be a switch in taxation from one group of citizens to another group. All it would do would be a placing of the tax load upon the shoulders of those who owned the property taxed. And it would be a great aid to the small property owner and at the same time fair and equitable to the mortgage holder."

Vogler said he could not forecast what support might be expected for the proposal. With 65 new members of the lower house entering it next January, its complexion is still a matter of considerable doubt. But a strong group of the more liberal element of the membership is already supporting the plan and working upon its elaboration, he said, and he was hopeful that it might be enacted into law at the next session.

Bond Issues Defeated.

The taxpayers of Greensboro, Thomasville and High Point, were in no mood Tuesday to vote additional bonded debt on themselves and their children.

A proposition to vote $325,000 in bonds for a municipal auditorium at Greensboro was defeated five to one. At High Point taxpayers defeated a $220,000 bond issue to be added to a $180,000 government donation, which would have to be paid later, for the erection of a hospital. High Point already has two fine hospitals and doesn't need a third. And a Thomasville taxpayers defeated a $70,000 bond issue for a recreational center. They were not fooled by the supposedly gift of $56,250 by the PWA which their children would have to pay in the coming years.—Ex.

Confederate Drum.

D. M. Holcomb, who lives in the Harmony section of Iredell county, has a big bass drum that saw service during the War Between the States, and is now nearly 100 years old. The drum was handed down from P. A. Holcomb, father of D. M., who was a soldier in the Confederate army. Col. Thomas Holcomb, grandfather of D. M. Holcomb was also in the Confederate army and before war was declared had charge of the muster ground at old Williamsburg, in Iredell county.

D. M. Holcomb says since boyhood he has known the old drum, has heard it beat out its hollow call at many a serenade in his youth and because of its familiarity, its connection with things of his life he asked his father to pass it on to him. He says somewhere in the old home there are papers or letters telling to which regiment the drum belonged—he thinks vaguely a 33rd company was mentioned—but he isn't very clear about its history beyond his own family.

Like the old flag its purpose has been served but like the old flag its honor grows with the passing of the years.

Hard On Educated Girls.

Entire Town On Relief.

The town of Glibert, Minnesota, in that state's iron mining district, saw its last of three iron mines close some time ago for lack of orders. Of the former miners, 175 are on the W.P.A.

The city has put 150 to work as policemen, firemen, street, etc. Another 200 have been given jobs as part-time janitors in the schools. They average three to ten days a month.

Here is perhaps the first town or city which has its sole source of income and is existing entirely on local, state and federal tax-raised funds, while waiting for better times to return.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—G. Ward Price, British war correspondent, who is Adolf Hitler's friend and supporter, and who has traveled, lunched, dined and visited with him off and on for years, is England's most authentic news source as to Der Fuehrer's plans. Lord Rothermere's paper, the London Daily Mail, which employs Mr. Price, has been scooping the ears off the other London sheets on Hitler stories.

Mr. Price previously has related how he and Lord Rothermere were two of four guests at Mr. Hitler's first formal dinner party after he seized power. That was December 19, 1934. It was about this time that Lord Rothermere, reaching 80 per cent of the British reading public, through his newspapers and press associations, began his unceasing campaign for fascism in England. A third guest at the dinner was E. W. D. Tennant, of the Anglo-German fellowship, a fellowship which Lord Rothermere and Mr. Price have diligently fostered, with their Apologia Fascisma.

Mr. Price, educated at Cambridge university, is a seasoned and richly garlanded British war correspondent. As foreign correspondent of the Daily Mail, he was with the Turkish army in the first Balkan war; he was an official correspondent at the Dardanelles, he was with the British army at Salonika. He has long been a quasi-official reporter for the British empire. He writes concisely, clearly and expertly, with a keen alertness for revealing little human touches and with little concern for the dry imponderables of political or economic theory.

His book, "I Know These Dictators," published in this country last year, was, in the view of this writer, big news, and should have stirred up a lot of excitement. Principally about Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, it builds out of intimately observed minutiae of their minds and persons a synthesis of virtue, charm and heroism.

Mr. Price, in this book, reports that Adolf Hitler is genteel, humorous, courageous, chivalrous, abstemious, profoundly intellectual, kindly, forgiving, unselfish, tender, a clever story-teller, and loves dogs and children.

DR. NORBERT WIENER challenges Milton, or Pope or whoever it was that observed, "Chaos umpteenth sits, and by decision more embroils the fray." At last, says this famous savant of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, scientists "can now predict what will happen in states of complete confusion."

As Dr. Wiener explains the new outreach of the calculus, at the fourth international congress for applied mechanics at Cambridge, it seems to clock everything, from a case of hiccoughs to Adolf Hitler, just so long as it is "pure" chaos and not a mere adulteration. That ought to let in most of Europe.

He read English at the age of three and Latin at five, and entered Tufts college at the age of 11, finishing in the class of 1910. He took his master's degree in 1912 and his doctor's in 1913, both at Harvard.

At the age of 19, he was an assistant professor at Harvard, lecturing on "The Theory of Knowledge." Dr. Wiener has kept on steadily gathering laurels in the groves of Academe.

EVENTS of the last few weeks have, of course, flushed many half-pint Hitlers in Europe, chief among them being young Leon Degrelle, of Belgium.

A Petticoat Putsch Is New Threat Counted out last year, he now bounces back with some show of power; enough, at any rate, to make a martial stir of men and horse in Brussels, with word that he might start delivery on the "terror" which he has been promising for several years.

Thirty-two years old, of the type of a healthy and husky high-school lad, he is the best-looking of all the Hitler apprentices, and there's no knowing but that he might start the world's first great petticoat putsch. Comely young women have flocked to his banner in shoals, and much of his support has come from women. He has both allure and showmanship and few of the stigmata of the paranoiac, unless it be his apparent determination to scare everybody to death.

He tried to seize Brussels in October, 1936, stirring up considerable violence. His party is the "Rexist."

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Significance of Fruits and Vegetables; Tells the Truth About Canned Foods

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

A GENERATION ago, except in mid-summer, fruits were a luxury that only appeared, with nuts, at the end of a festive meal, and vegetables, except for the root crops, had no regular place in the daily diet. But when scientists established the importance of mineral salts in human nutrition, these two groups of foods assumed a position of commanding importance, because next to milk and eggs, they are the chief conveyors of minerals from the soil to man.

With the discovery of vitamins they achieved new distinction, because in their content of these vital substances, they rank with milk and eggs as "protective" foods.

Foods That Safeguard Health

In addition to providing nutrients that are indispensable for buoyant health and normal growth, they possess another important virtue: the indigestible cellulose or bulk yielded by the fibrous framework of the leaves, stems and fruits of plants, has a natural laxative value which helps to insure normal elimination. And finally, they are extremely useful in helping to maintain the acid-base balance of the body, for all vegetables and most fruits yield an alkaline-ash following digestion.

Green Vegetables for Iron

Fruits and vegetables supply varying amounts of practically every mineral element the body requires.

They do not compare with milk as a source of calcium, but substantial amounts of this bone-and-tooth-building substance are to be found in leaf and stem vegetables, carrots, oranges, figs and strawberries. Moreover, investigations have demonstrated that calcium from vegetables is well utilized by adults.

Green vegetables, in general, are outstanding as a source of iron. And it has been further established that their iron is better absorbed and becomes more completely available for nutrition than iron from some other sources. Some fruits are also valued for their iron content, the more notable including oranges; tomatoes, which are botanically a fruit, though they are classed as a vegetable; strawberries, blackberries, raspberries and huckleberries; and dried figs, dates and prunes.

Vegetables for Vitamin A

We usually think of milk and other dairy products as our most important sources of vitamin A. But recently, it has been determined that the thin green leaves of vegetables are also outstanding in this respect. Weight for weight, when fresh, escarole is more than five times as rich as butter. Young green peas and green string beans are also a good source of this vitamin as are tomatoes, carrots, and sweet potatoes.

Sources of Vitamin C

Vitamin C, which is essential for maintaining the health of teeth and gums and for preventing the degeneration of muscle fibers generally, is obtained almost entirely from fruits and vegetables. The principal sources of this vitamin are the citrus fruits; raw and canned tomatoes and canned tomato juice; strawberries; raw carrots, onions and yellow turnips.

As this vitamin is easily destroyed by heat in the presence of oxygen, the amount present in any fruit or vegetable is greatly reduced by the average home cooking methods. On the other hand, this and other vitamins, as well as minerals, are usually well retained in commercially canned fruits and vegetables.

What About Canned Foods?

I frequently receive letters from readers who question the merits of canned foods. They ask whether it is true that canned foods are devoid of vitamins; whether canned foods are wholesome for children; whether or not canned foods may spoil on the grocer's shelves; and if it is dangerous to eat foods that have stood in the can for a few minutes after being opened.

To discount the value of modern canned foods is to display a lack of knowledge as to how these foods are harvested, prepared and packed. And the failure to use them may result in depriving your family of essential minerals and vitamins.

There are available in cans today, 46 varieties of vegetables, 33 kinds of fruit, and 10 different juices, besides soups, numerous specialties and several kinds of fish. Every one of these presents a healthful and nutritious food in a form that is often superior to the same foods cooked at home. That is partly because of the methods employed and partly because canned foods are processed at the peak of their flavor and freshness.

A Superlative Canned Food

An outstanding example is canned salmon which has been called by one of America's leading food experts, "the cheapest and most nutritious animal food that can be had for children over six."

Very little fresh salmon finds its way into our markets and even then it may be far from "fresh" after a considerable journey packed in ice. On the other hand, salmon canneries have been established in close proximity to the waters from which salmon are taken, so that only a few hours elapse between the time the fish are removed from the water and the moment their rich nourishment is sealed in cans.

Similarly the fruits and vegetables designed for canning are allowed to mature on tree or vine. This means that they develop maximum flavor and vitamin content. Then they are picked, rushed to nearby canneries and hermetically sealed in cans. The sealed cans are then cooked at high heat so as to destroy any bacteria which might be present. Because they are protected from the air during the cooking process, and because the cooking liquors are sealed in the cans, they retain a maximum amount of minerals and vitamins. It is because canned foods are so definitely superior in this respect that physicians encourage the canning of strained fruits and vegetables for infants and young children.

Fallacies Disproved

Canned foods will keep indefinitely without spoilage, as long as nothing occurs to make the can leak. It is not necessary to remove canned food from the container as soon as the tin is opened, though many homemakers often do so because the food presents a more attractive appearance in a dish or bowl. A hissing sound when opening does not mean that the contents of a can are spoiled, but rather that there was a vacuum in the can, which the air is rushing in to fill.

Thus canned fruits and vegetables are not only "as good as" fresh ones, but are often superior in food values. Every homemaker should see to it that she uses both liberally in the diet of every member of her family, as a means of providing liberal amounts of minerals and vitamins.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. B. M.—There is not the slightest reason why a normal person should not drink coffee after middle age unless the beverage has been expressly forbidden by a doctor. On the contrary, many people find both coffee and tea extremely comforting in their later years.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Uniform Sized Fruit.—If fruit is preserved either whole or cut into pieces, each one should be uniform in size, so they cook in the same length of time and look better in the jars or cans.

Breaking in New Shoes.—Sprinkle talcum powder into the new shoes. They will seem more comfortable when worn for the first time.

Sift the Flour.—Flour is one of the easiest ingredients in baking to mismeasure. For best results always sift flour and measure by spoonfuls into a cup, being careful not to shake the filled cup.

Dishing Up Fish.—When baking fish, place a piece of clean muslin or cheese cloth in the bottom of the pan; then when fish is baked it can be lifted out of the pan and turned over on the serving plate without breaking.

Firmly Anchored Straps.—If the shoulder straps on slips are not anchored below the lace or trim on firm reinforced material, they are sure to pull out and perhaps ruin the slip entirely.

IF YOU'RE interested in writing—or learning to write—for the movies, take a tip from Hal Roach, who certainly ought to know what he is talking about.

He recently conducted a survey, as a result of which he announces that 72 per cent of the themes of current films have been taken directly from newspaper clippings. Here is his report: General news (including aviation, maritime disasters, divorce court proceedings, depression stories and natural catastrophes) 40 per cent; crime news, 8 per cent; letters to editor, 4 per cent; love-learn columns, 3 per cent; editorial columns, 2 per cent; sports, 2 per cent; comic strips, 1 per cent.

Mr. Roach, at present, is filming a story called "There Goes My Heart," which concerns an heiress, (played by Virginia Bruce) who runs away from the Riviera in her grandfather's yacht, arrives in this country and goes to work in her own department store; Fredric March is the reporter assigned to cover her story.

Here you have, says Mr. Roach, a romantic comedy, not a straight drama, and it combines general news, society news and love-learn column material. Better study it with that in mind, if you're interested in seeing how film stories are put together.

Remember Corinne Griffith, 'you old-timers? Not that your memories need go so very far back; it's not so long since she was a popular star. Corinne is one of the really happy retired stars. Her husband, George Marshall, owns one of the big professional football teams, and he and she travel with the team during the season.

And she has those two little girls whom she adopted a few years ago, taking them from an orphan asylum, and taking two when she'd meant to adopt just one because they were sisters. Needless to say, she's bringing them up beautifully—or thought she was, until she discovered that their favorite game is "G-man"; that, when left to themselves, they make the nursery ring with "You won't talk, then—you rat! Take that—and that!"

Another young devotee of gangster life is Sabu; remember him in "The Elephant Boy"? This young Indian arrived in New York from London for the opening of his latest picture, "Drums," the new Alexander Korda release. When Robert Flaherty discovered him in India, while searching for a youngster to play the title role in "Elephant Boy," he was just one more young Indian, an orphan, poor; you should see him now!

He loves American slang, which he picked up from the Hollywood technicians in the English movie studio where he worked. And he is wild about the movies, especially American gangster pictures. His enthusiasm also includes war films and any method of traveling fast, particularly planes. And three years ago he was riding elephants and liking it!

Seth Parker, with "Ma" and their Jonesport neighbors, is back on the air on Sunday evenings; people all over the country feel as if old friends had returned to them. Phillips Lord, who is "Seth," plans to revive many of his first successes—the old-fashioned singing school among them. And, of course, there are the Sunday night gatherings in which the Parkers and the neighbors sing hymns.

Fathers all over the country are turning the radio on late in the afternoons so that their sons can listen to "Dick Tracy"—and not admitting that they did it because they wanted to listen themselves. For "Dick" has returned to the air, more energetic than ever in his battle against criminal activities.

ODDS AND ENDS—When Fred Waring finished making "Varsity Show" in Hollywood with his band and returned east he had practically no band left; his singers (Priscilla and Rosemary Lane), his arranger and his hot trumpet, Johnny "Scat" Davis, had abandoned him for movie-making, and others just dropped out on the way home. . . . Bert Lahr is spending his spare time trying to look like a lion; has to play the Cowardly Lion in "The Wizard of Oz" without benefit of animal skins or heavy make-up.

OUR DAY OF REST

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8-11; Luke 13:10-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.—Exodus 20:8.

Rest—how full of meaning that little word is when we recall that it means quiet for the struggling one, calm for the troubled, repose for the weary, tranquillity for the disturbed, cessation of labor for the worn-out one. God in His infinite wisdom saw that without rest man would soon destroy himself, and He made provision for one day in seven when labor should cease and man should be free for that re-creation of soul and body which should fit him for the labor of the week. Men in their greed have coveted the time God gave for rest and have used it for themselves, and the ragged nerves and broken bodies, to say nothing of the impoverished spirits of our day, testify that it can be done only at our peril.

Our study centers around Scripture passages which have to do with the Jewish Sabbath, but since it was essentially a day of rest, and afforded an opportunity for the worship of God, the principles surrounding it are applicable to our day of rest—the first day of the week, the Lord's Day.

I. Why We Keep a Day of Rest
(Exod. 20:8-11).

1. God commanded that there should be a day of rest—one out of seven—and that should be sufficient to cause His people to "remember" the day "to keep it holy." It is cause for grave concern that Sunday has become a day of swimming, hiking, auto-driving, golfing, and one might go on with the list almost indefinitely. Many men or women who have had built into their own characters the stalwart virtues nurtured by family attendance at the house of God, have not only forgotten their own need and responsibility but are destroying every vestige of interest in divine worship in the hearts of their children. It is serious business to go astray oneself, but infinitely more serious to mislead one's own children.

Notice that the day of rest was to be not only for the family but also for servants and for visitors. The employer who operates his factory or office on Sunday violates this commandment. Note also that the man who is to rest on the seventh day is supposed to work on the six days. Some folk neglect to do both.

2. God's command is strengthened by the divine example (v. 11). We are not able to do all things that God does, but here we are privileged to follow His example.

II. How We Keep the Day of Rest
(Luke 13:10-17).

The incident recorded by Luke does not give us an exhaustive list of things to be done with our day of rest, but it is interesting to note that our Lord was

1. In the house of God (v. 10). Jesus was in the synagogue. The distinguished Apostle Paul never became too great or too good to attend church (if it is at all possible for us to do so) to fellowship with others in the things of Christ. Let us have a revival of church attendance, and not only on Sunday mornings, but also on Sunday night and for midweek prayer meeting.

2. Alert to the needs of others (vv. 11, 12). It is not indicated that the woman asked to be healed. Jesus saw her need and met it. We can not do what he did, but there are needs that we can meet if we are but alert to see them and willing to help.

3. Active in service (v. 13). In spite of the criticism which He knew would come from the lazy and helpless standers-by, Jesus did the work of God. We may glorify God by being ready—yes, anxious—to serve in the church. Our daily work is set aside on the Lord's Day not that we should be indolent, but that we should be free to do the Lord's work.

4. Contending for the faith (vv. 14-17). Jesus met the unjust criticism (which, by the way, was leveled at the poor woman because the critic feared Jesus) by a masterly appeal to the law of the Pharisees (vv. 15, 16). But He did more than that, for He ably defended the rights of humanity as superior to the formalities of man-made law. The law is always supreme until the Lawgiver comes, and no law can hinder Him by its letter, as He fulfills its spirit.

We may not speak as Jesus did, that is to declare what the law is, but we may in His name, and by His grace and power declare the full counsel of God, defend it against its critics and withstand those who while bearing the name of Christian leaders only hinder the work of Christ (compare II John 9, 10). For such service we need His guidance, His wisdom, His power, and His grace.

The Wise Man

The wise man is like the druggist's chest, silent but full of virtues; and the blockhead resembles the warrior's drum, noisy but empty.—Sadi the Persian.

LINES...

Each of us has a place in life's line, to do with what we will. Are you making the most of yours?

By WINIFRED WILLARD

HE WASN'T much to look at—short, squat and a bit sinister. But he was something to remember. It was St. Louis, the ticket window of the Union station. I rushed for tickets. Ominous line ahead. Nothing to do but take my place and wait my turn. Through slow fifteen minutes, we had inched along until I stood second from the ticket agent. As the one ahead took his change and stepped from line, this other man slid in ahead of me. "It is my turn," I said. Looking me full in the face, he leered, "Well, what you going to do about it?"

I might have tried what the woman in Washington did one matinee afternoon last winter. It was Christmas time. We were to see "Little Women." Our hearts were in the proper state of sublimation for renewing acquaintance with Beth and Jo and Meg and Mother March. But office furniture moving in and heavy pedestrian traffic broke the box office line. We stopped to see where it really was, then stepped into what we supposed was our proper place. No sooner done than a militant woman hurtled herself at us—didn't we know we belonged at the end of the line? Who did we think we were to break in like that? Why didn't we stay at home until we knew how to get into a line? Efforts to explain our right intentions fell flat in the face of her wrath. I wonder whether this tirade woman has a husband. If so, the Lord have mercy on his soul!

Manners

We were all in a hurry to get our letters one day last summer and to be in our seats before the morning symphony began. Eight ahead of me was a man. Down the plaza, up the stairs we moved with the measured pace of such a queue. My eighth-ahead man was all right until at a distance he saw somebody whom he wanted to see close range. So, saying that he guessed his mail could wait, he left his place in the line. We bristled up, considerably encouraged. He found his friend, delivered his message, chatted with half a dozen others, then came back to the letter line and as if by merit of right, stepped into his former place. He knew better. He showed the embarrassment that goes with doing a trick like that. We were a well-mannered group. Nobody said a word. But who can deny there was a heap o' thinkin'?

Isn't a line a section of life? Isn't a line a stage where we play our parts, informally and often unaware? And aren't we revealing of our inmost selves in the ways we play? Have I more right to take your place in the line of life than to rifle your purse? Neither belongs to me.

Life Gives Us Much

One of the lovely things life gives us is a place, a job for himself, to make what he may of it. Some people make beauty spots out of their life places. Some let theirs stay all dreary and bare, putting no plan, no thought, no work, no love into them. Whatever my place is in life's line, it's mine! And that is much! I decide by the way I handle it whether it shall be insignificant or something greatly to be desired.

Good fortune to somebody else often devours us with envy. I had two college mates like that. To this day, they can't endure to know that anything fine and gracious has come to anybody else. They want their places in the line to be the best and themselves to be the biggest. Of course they're unhappy. Of course they're difficult. Of course they're lonely.

Box office, railroad ticket or mail delivery waiting lines have their unwritten ethics to the end of an even chance for everybody. The line-of-life is not so simple. It often gets tangled and twisted, sometimes all but out of hand. But in it, I have my place. If yours is better, I can take that as example and standard by which to make mine measure up. I can work hard and be loyal and fair and faithful in my own place. And I shall not break the rule of the line by taking what does not belong to me.

'Oglethorpe Trail' Dates

Back Before Revolution

The old Indian trail and highway known as the "Oglethorpe Trail," dates back to pre-Revolutionary war days when General Oglethorpe, founder of the state of Georgia, established a thoroughfare from Savannah to Augusta in 1733, following his famous treaty conference with the Creek Indians at Coweta.

The British designated the trail in 1780 as a military road, and in 1791 President George Washington traveled the road during his southern tour.

Rich in scenic sites which pass through deep, jungle-like river swamps abounding with game and fish, the trail also winds through rolling hill territory and along the banks of the Savannah river.

It Must Be Admitted Waiter Was Not Tactful

The customer was raging and fuming as the manager came up. "What is the matter, sir?" asked the manager. "Discharge that waiter at once!" demanded the diner. Regarding the boiled egg which had been served, the manager said:

"I'm very sorry about this egg, sir, but I can't discharge the waiter for that. After all, he wasn't to know that there was a chicken in it."

"Perhaps not," snapped the customer. "But when I told him there was, he needn't have taken away my spoon and brought me a knife and fork."

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 5 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vitality to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them! Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. The man who will steal a dollar from an editor or a preacher, is not fit to hold any kind of a public office.

The Republican county candidates are busy these days, with appointments in various sections of the county almost every night. The public is given a cordial invitation to go out and hear the issues discussed. Large crowds have been attending the meetings.

With the election less than three weeks off the boys seem to be taking things easy. This has been one of the dearest, most lifeless campaigns that we remember since coming to Davie county away back in 1907. Up to this writing none of the candidates on either side have accused their opponent of stealing sheep, robbing blind men or stealing from widows and orphans.

Solicitor John R. Jones, who lives in the state of Wilkes, is the Republican nominee for Congress in this district. Mr. Jones has been waiting since the first of July to find out just who his opponent is. The New Dealers have been in a muddle over the nomination of Dean and Burgin, caused by too much crooked work in the primaries last summer. Solicitor Jones has a fine chance of being elected to Congress on the 8th day of November, provided we get a fair deal at the polls. Of course our friends, the enemy, have all the election machinery in their hands, and can vote as many absentees in some counties as the Republicans can muster all put together. With an honest election this fall, the Republicans have a good chance of electing two Congressmen—one in the 8th and one in the 10th district.

Registration Books Open

The registration books for the November election, opened Saturday in the various precincts in the county. They will be open all day on Saturday, Oct. 22, and Saturday, Oct. 29. Saturday, Nov. 5th, will be challenge day. All persons who have moved from one precinct to another, and all persons who have become of age since the last election, must register, or they cannot vote. If you have moved from some other county to Davie since the last election, you must register. To be eligible to vote you must have lived in the state 12 months and in the county or precinct four months preceding the election. Be sure your name is on the registration books.

No reason is assigned for the act. The deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Benson, and is survived by his parents and the following brothers and sisters: Hubert, Leroy and Frank Benson, Mrs. Jack Winecoff, all of Cooleemee; and Mrs. Margine McGinn, of Charlotte.

Alleged Thieves Arrested.

Deputies David Graham and Arthur Shuping of Sheriff Krider's office Tuesday afternoon arrested two young white men, Roland Stanley, of Route 2, Mocksville, and W. E. Cook, of Yadkin county, on charges of larceny. Both were placed in jail in default of bond. The youths were driving a V-8 roadster. They were picked up on the streets of the city and in their possession was found several electric drills. In the car was also found a side of meat and a can of cylinder oil.

Cook is credited by officers with admitting that the drills were stolen from the Bait Basket company of Yadkin county, and that the side of meat, chickens and the cylinder oil were also stolen in that county. No chickens were found in the possession of the young men and it is believed they had sold them before they were apprehended. They were returned to Yadkin county. The car belongs to Cook. — Salisbury Post.

SYNOPSIS

Young Rex Hale calls on Casper Kneeland, friend of his father, in New York, and finds him proudly successful but strangely preoccupied. He tells Hale of his wife's death while insane, invites him for the summer to Halcyon Camp, his home on Long Island, and promises him he will be "useful" as his secretary there.

"This is the first American outfit I've had for several years," Hale told the clerk. "Been living abroad. There's a certain satisfaction in starting from the ground up."

The clerk agreed and led him firmly to the socks, underwear and pajamas. Hale bought a lot of them and threw in a new dressing-gown. He'd give his old one, he decided, to the chap who cleaned his boots at his modest hotel. It was certainly in hand-me-down condition. He paid the bills with undiminished cheerfulness and went to a popular restaurant at one o'clock for needed rest and refreshment. The restaurant was one Kneeland had recommended in the final moments of their interview.

He ate his excellent luncheon with open enjoyment. It was great to eat well-cooked food again.

A hand fell on his shoulder. "Hello, old man. Maxim ought to keep you here in his restaurant as a permanent exhibit. You look like the cat that gobbled the canary."

"I feel like her. So would you if you had been eating omelets and tough beef in Spain. I got back from there yesterday."

"So Kneeland said."

"Oh, you know Mr. Kneeland?" "Rather! He sent me here to look you up. Said he had advised you to lunch here today, and he thought you would."

The newcomer dropped into the chair Hale indicated.

"What will you have?" Hale asked.

"Nothing but a cordial, thanks—apricot brandy. I've had my lunch."

Hale summoned his waiter and ordered the liqueur. He was not enthusiastic over the encounter, but it was pleasant to see almost any familiar face. He had had to think a minute to remember who this fellow was. Someone he had known at Chicago? No. At Cornell? Yes—he had him now. Ainsworth, Frederick Ainsworth. He looked exactly as he had looked then—dark, thin, sleek, green-eyed, cat-like, sardonic.

"What's on Mr. Kneeland's mind now?" he asked conversationally. Ainsworth's reply showed that he had changed as little in character as in appearance.

"A good deal, I fancy," he said lightly, as he sipped his liqueur. "But nothing to pass on to you. That is, he didn't send you any message. I think he told me to look you up because he wanted to get rid of me. I dropped into his office at twelve, and he didn't care to take me out for lunch."

"He's been very successful," Hale murmured.

"Yes." An odd expression fell over Ainsworth's smooth face. It was like a dark mask settling into place. He stared into the small glass he held in his hand.

Somewhat ostentatiously he changed the subject. "He tells me you're coming to Halcyon Camp."

"Yes, I'm going tomorrow afternoon."

"That's good. I'm out there myself. It will interest me very much," Ainsworth purred, returning to his liqueur, "to see what you make of us. You're in for some surprises."

"That sounds rather cryptic," Hale smiled.

"It's a cryptic place. On the surface, everything is sweetness and light. You'll be charmed tomorrow night by our carefree manner and our sunny faces. But don't scratch the top. You're apt to find some ugly crawling things underneath."

"That's a queer way for a guest to talk," Hale said stiffly. His early dislike of Ainsworth was increasing with every word the fellow uttered. Then he pulled himself up, remembering that for the moment he was the fellow's host.

"Mr. Kneeland told me he had three house-guests," he went on more naturally. "Who's there now, besides you and the family?"

"Only two more," Ainsworth had plainly decided not to be offended by the other's criticism. "There's Miss Hosanna's friend, Mrs. Spencer Forbes, an ash-blond lady with a Past."

"Who's the other guest?"

"Doctor Craig, a friend of Bert's. He's another mysterious person, if you ask me. But we're all mysterious, as I've hinted. You'll find us an interesting study, in our romantic setting of sea and sky and woods. Halcyon Camp is quite off the main arteries, as I suppose Kneeland told you." He laughed. "Halcyon Camp!" he quoted ironically.

"Kneeland says he wants it to be a serene, happy place." The contrast between the Camp as it really is, and as he meant it to be, is awfully funny—if he knew it."

"Doesn't he?"

"No. He's too absorbed in his own big problem. He's an unhappy man, and with good reason. But he wants everyone around him to be contented. He has always seen himself as a benevolent god in the machine, working his miracles to benefit others. It is to laugh!"

Hale moved abruptly in his chair, and Ainsworth took the hint. He had finished his liqueur. He got up. "I'll be off now," he said. "See you at Halcyon Camp. Shall I tell Miss Hosanna you'll join our happy band in time for dinner tomorrow night?"

"Yes, thanks."

"The dinner hour is half past seven, and the run down takes almost two hours. You'd better come on the half-past four train."

"I will. Thanks again."

They shook hands and with a strong sensation of relief Hale watched Ainsworth's departure. He

"He wants a new car," Mrs. Nash explained when she had returned to her seat after the jerk. "He thinks if he wrecks this, he'll have one. You won't, darling," she assured the boy. "I've often reminded you that my annuity dies with me. You'd have to go right to work, probably on a truck. And, darling, please don't turn to point out the beauties of nature to us when you're driving at this speed. There's no sight more beautiful to me than a young driver who keeps his hands firmly on the wheel and his eyes on the road."

The cub turned and waved a careless paw. He was lightly clad in a low-necked khaki shirt, khaki shorts, and a pair of dirty white tennis shoes. He had a brown skin, brown hair, and brown eyes.

Mrs. Nash turned her full attention to Hale, and gave him a few details about the neighborhood.

"They're very casual at Halcyon Camp," she told him, when she willing to be approached or disturbed. It spread over a lot of ground. A large screened-in veranda ran along the entire front of the frame building. Another extended along the right side. French windows opened on these. There were a number of outbuildings. Several tents were set up on pine board foundations and entered by roughly built steps. There was an impressive outdoor oven for camp cooking. Down on the beach he saw what were evidently private bath-houses, a boat-house and a pier. A good-sized float loomed up some distance from the shore. Yet with all this, Halcyon Camp did not suggest a hospitable home.

Throughout his life Hale had been subject to what, for lack of a better word, he called "hunches." His hunches were sudden and strong convictions. Without understanding them he had developed a certain respect for them. He had a hunch now, and he did not like it.

It was a long time since he had experienced a hunch so definite and disturbing.

told himself irritably that the fellow had pricked his balloon, and the next instant reproached himself for being so susceptible to the man's influence.

Hale finished his shopping and saw an amusing play that night. It diverted him even more successfully than the shopping had done. He took a calm mind to bed with him and into dreamland. But his dreams were troubled.

Kneeland had told him to leave the train at a certain station, adding that it was three miles from the Camp and that probably he would not be met. Hale left the train at that station shortly after six the next evening and was not surprised to find no one in sight who seemed to be looking for a red-headed stranger. It was a lonely little station and only one passenger had got off with him. This was a slight woman, coolly dressed in blue voile. She had bent a furrowed brow over a note-book during most of her journey. She seemed to be unsuccessfully adding columns of figures that annoyed her. A small sedan car with a youth at the wheel was waiting for her. On her way to it she heard Hale question the station agent, who stood on the platform, as to the direction of Halcyon Camp. She turned and came toward him. She was a woman in her forties, with prematurely white hair, a youngish face and a worldly smile.

"You must be the young man Miss Kneeland is expecting today," she said cheerfully. "Hasn't anyone met you?"

Hale jerked off his hat and returned her smile with warmth. He liked her on the instant.

"No, but it isn't far to the Camp. I'll enjoy the walk."

"You won't enjoy three miles of it with all that luggage. Put it in my car and I'll take you to the edge of the camp clearing. I don't like the road that leads to Halcyon Camp itself. I can drop you when we come to that road, within a quarter of a mile from the house."

"That's awfully good of you. My name is Hale."

"I know. You're the young engineer who has just got back from Spain. Miss Kneeland told me about you last night. I'm Mrs. Wilbur Nash, one of her neighbors. This is my son, Wilbur, better known in the neighborhood as 'the Nash cub.'"

Hale had put his luggage into the car. Now he got in himself, and took the seat Mrs. Nash indicated beside her.

The boy started the car with a jerk that lifted his passengers from their seats and sent it along the narrow rutted country road at almost 50 miles an hour.

reached that point of interest. "It never occurs to them to meet guests, or to get them to trains, for that matter. Time means nothing to them, and they're no respecters of persons. Mr. Kneeland talks about living close to the soil. He lets his guests do it, but he makes himself thoroughly comfortable. You won't catch him ploughing through the underbrush and along muddy country roads to the Camp. Miss Hosanna and Joan do it half the time. Mr. Kneeland keeps his car for his own journeys back and forth. Bert has a four-wheel wreck that he disappears in every day, when he isn't off in his motor-boat. Here we are. Sorry I can't take you to the door. Follow those excavations at the right. They represent a road."

Hale thanked her and jumped out of the sedan. He grasped the bags and his hat-box and started off along the branch road that ran at an angle to the so-called highway.

At a rather unexpected turn in the road, he saw the Camp. He stopped, put down his luggage, and looked it over. It was not a camp or a bungalow, but a big mid-victorian house set in a wide clearing. Seen at that short distance, it had something of the effect of a brooding gray hen with outspread wings, crouched close to the earth, and un-

Hale straightened, drew a quick breath, and picked up his luggage. It was a long time since he had experienced a hunch so definite and so disturbing.

He approached the strangely silent house. There must be a number of human beings in and around it, but not a sound suggested their presence. Many of the windows were open, and their chintz curtains billowed in the breeze. Not a voice was heard, not a note of music came out to him, not a dog barked. One would think they'd have dogs in a place like this. If they had, the dogs were inside, hidden like the humans.

Hale strode up the wide steps leading to the front veranda, passed through the screen door, reached the double front doors, and pressed a compelling finger against an electric button on a side-panel. Light steps came along the inner hall and the right-hand door swung open. A young and pretty girl, in a maid's uniform, gave him a welcoming smile and stood aside to let him pass, even before he spoke. She was so pleasant to look at, so matter-of-factly reassuring, that the newcomer experienced an absurd sense of relief. He smiled at her as at a familiar friend.

Bird That Builds Nest Used by the Chinese for Food Found in Philippines

Science has finally come to one of the Philippines' most exotic industries, but not with a labor saving device.

A kind of swift, one of whose species is the swift-flying small bird that may be seen rising sharply from American chimneys, has at last been identified as the bird that makes the edible nests which Chinese consider a delicacy.

But the business of collecting edible birds' nests will not see any machinery, Canto G. Manuel, of the Philippine Commonwealth Fish and Game administration, indicates in the Philippine Journal of Science.

For the birds' build their nests in all but inaccessible caves, which collectors must reach today in precisely the same manner as their forbears—by climbing patiently over slippery rocks and deep chasms. And, once inside, the collectors use the same primitive torches to light their way as they maintain a precarious balance while they carefully remove the nests from hollows in the cavern walls.

The species is prevented from becoming extinct by the fact that many of the birds build their nests in caves that are actually inaccessible.

No estimate of the size of the business, which centers at Bacuit, Palawan, is possible, for the local Chinese merchants who ship the product to China constitute a close-mouthed monopoly. Reason for their silence is fear of larger licensing fees.

Collecting is done by Filipinos who work on their own, selling all they take to the corporation. Each nest weighs less than ten grams (about a third of an ounce) when removed from the cavern wall, and loses a considerable portion of its weight in the drying process. The nests are gelatinous in nature.

Jerusalem's Cities

The present city of Jerusalem is the eighth to be built on this site. In southwest Judah is a mound which reveals 11 distinct strata, each stratum representing the remains of a city. When a city was conquered the buildings were leveled to the ground. Since they were mostly built of clay, they formed a layer of soil on which another city rose.

A Slim Waist for Glamour

HERE are two charming new designs that give you the tiny, Victorian waistline—almost an hour-glass effect—that's so fashionable right now. Both accentuate it, too, with perked-up sleeves and full skirts. Both give you a most feminine and appealing look! And it's so easy to make these carefully simplified designs. Each includes a detailed sew choose challis, silk print, taffeta or cashmere—preferable in some of the new, rich, warm, lively colorings.

The Patterns.

1498 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 42 and 44. For long coat, size 16 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material. For short, 4¼ yards. 1½ yards grosgrain ribbon to trim.

1617 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material. ¾ yard for contrasting collar, if desired. 1¼ yard braid to trim. 1¼ yard ribbon for sash belt.

Fall and Winter Fashion Book.

The new 32-page Fall and Winter Pattern Book which shows photographs of the dresses being worn is now out. (One pattern and the Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents.) You can order the book separately for 15 cents. Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

chart that carefully explains every step of the way.

Heartside Coat.

You can relax so thoroughly in this charming design. It will give you the inward peace that comes of knowing you look particularly pretty. The fitted-in waistline, the sweep of the full skirt, are too flattering for words! Make it of taffeta, flannel, challis, moire or velveteen—choosing colors that do nice things to your eyes and hair. This pattern is perforated for short length, too.

Daytime Dirndl.

Of course you want a fall-into winter version of the flattering dirndl—and here's the way to make it. With a tailored collar, big buttons down the bodice, Victorian sleeves and (a highlight of charm!) the shirred waistline that looks so delightful on young and supple figures. For this,

Bryan's Brevity Likely Influenced the Opinion

William Jennings Bryan, silver-tongued orator, used to enjoy telling of a comment which he once overheard about himself during a Chautauqua season. "A local speaker preceding Mr. Bryan had talked for one hour and a half. So when Mr. Bryan finally got the floor, he simply raised his hands and pronounced the benediction. Later two old fellows were discussing the program. "That was a great speech Mr. Blank made, even if it was too long," remarked one. "Yep," agreed the other. Then, after a pause, he added: "That last fella that followed him was pretty good, too."—Boston Globe.

Before your newspaper is put to bed

●When we talk of putting a newspaper to bed we aren't trying to be humorous. It's shop parlance for going to press—the final step in the production of a newspaper.

Before your newspaper is ready to go to bed there's a long series of steps, representing the collective efforts of many minds and many hands. The issue you hold in your hands, for example, involved the gathering of hundreds of news items, editing, putting into type, proofreading, making up the type forms and, finally, printing. It could not be done without trained minds, trained hands and a heavy investment in expensive equipment.

●There are many other things, too. The selection of features that make your newspaper more informative... more entertaining. Each one of these features is carefully chosen with the thought that it will prove interesting to all or part of our readers.

Some newspapers seek to lessen the effort and expense of production by limiting their coverage of news and features. Skeletonized newspapers are cheap and easy to produce. But we prefer to offer our readers a complete newspaper. That is why you find in our columns the work of many of today's greatest newspaper names. And complete local news coverage—of course!

Daniel Boone.

Harry Z. Tucker, in The State.

The story of Daniel Boone is as much a part of North Carolina as are the sand dunes of Hatteras, or the fame of towering Mt. Mitchell, and it is just as imperishable. Moreover, any story concerning this intrepid frontiersman is always interesting, not only to the people of North Carolina but to the nation as well. Daniel Boone ranks along with Washington as a national figure.

While we have often tried to follow the career of the great hunter and outdoorsman, it seems that ever and anon some new and interesting event of his life is cropping up in connection with his spectacular roamings, his eventful days and ways. However, according to the general consensus of opinions, the true story of the life and career of Daniel Boone varies but little in detail wherever it is heard.

It was in 1750 that Daniel Boone came with his parents from Pennsylvania to settle on the Yadkin River.

In this wilderness region, cut off from the social contacts he had been accustomed to cherish, the sixteen-year-old boy found succor from a growing ennui by roaming the woods and streams. It was along the environs of the Yadkin River that Boone learned the accurate and first-hand knowledge of the ways of Nature. He also learned here the life and manners of the Indians, things, which served him well in the future he was to experience.

Though the parents of Daniel Boone virtually turned him loose in the great forests of Piedmont North Carolina, they were, unlike many of our pioneer settlers, by no means illiterate. Daniel's father, Judge Squire Boone, was one of the first justices of Rowan County, an infinite stretch of territory which extended from the Yadkin River to the South Sea. From the original Rowan County, incidentally, more than thirty of the present counties of Western North Carolina were carved.

The position of judge in frontier days was one of great trust and importance. Settlers who filled this public position had to be men of probity, education, and far-sightedness. In several instances the judgeship is known to have been filled by conferences with the king. The position is said to have been a lucrative one in pioneer days, carrying about the same prestige as a Judge of the Superior Courts of today.

While the Boone family is reputed to have been regular communicants of the Quaker Church in Pennsylvania, it is a matter of record that they founded and built a Baptist Church on the Yadkin—"Boone's Ford Baptist Church."

The site of this early place of religious worship is known, being included in the present Davie County.

Although Daniel Boone won his spurs as a soldier under the sagacious Indian fighter, General Hugh Wadell, Daniel Boone was, himself, a type-figure in American history. Even if he did serve as a wagoner and blacksmith under Wadell in the French and Indian War, he had such comrades as George Washington and Thomas Sumpter and John Findlay. The French and Indian War man of Daniel Boone.

It was the expansion period following this seven year conflict of nations that enabled Boone on his bosom. He had been told many times, around the camp fires in the Ohio Country, of the beautiful Indian lands that lay to the westward.

John Findlay, his informant, had been there. It is easy for us of today, knowing Daniel Boone's nature as we do, to realize with avidity he listened to Findlay's tales.

often boastful and captious. Findlay had been where not one of his comrades had ventured—to Kaintuck.

Home from the war, Daniel Boone grew restive. He craved to visit the Indian's "Kaintuck." So he turned his faced westward, across the serrated and mystic mountains. Into this unknown land the nomadic Daniel pushed farther and farther, contented with the stern freedom of the frontiers.

It was probably in 1763 that he made his first trip of exploration into the unbroken West for the Transylvania Company of North Carolina. It is a matter of record that he sold his property in Rowan County on February 21, 1764, consisting of a home and forty acres, and set out with his wife toward the sunset.

The parents of the great American explorer and colonizer, Daniel Boone, are buried at historic Joppa Cemetery, near Mocksville. In order to preserve their gravesites from vandals and huncers of souvenirs, the plain little soapstone markers have been enclosed in a framework of cement. Judge Squire Boone was born in 1696; died in 1765. Sarah, his wife, was born in 1700; died in 1777. The gravestone of Judge Boone is unique in that it has the word "the" spelled in three different ways, and not once correctly.

Although Daniel Boone wandered afar, strayed far from the house of his father, he never once forgot North Carolina. Records extant show that he often made visits to the Yadkin Valley. He came to visit his relatives. He came on business. It was on February 17, 1771, that a warrant was sworn out at Salisbury by one Ebenezer Frost, declaring that Daniel Boone was in arrears to him for more than fourteen pounds, adding that "Boone had privately moved out of the country."

All through the years of 1771 and 1772 the officers of Rowan County kept vigilance for the appearance of the woodsman, but it was not until November 9, 1772, that he was apprehended at the home of his mother and brought to Salisbury for trial. Boone was found guilty and paid the fines.

Daniel Boone probably paid his last visit to North Carolina in 1804, when he appeared in court at Morganton to prove the will of a dead friend.

A place of rendezvous for Boone, on his periodic trips to and from the lands adjacent to the Mississippi, was the Saplin Grove Tavern, kept by Colonel Evan Shelby, where the town of Bristol now stands. It was here he always stopped for several days to talk with the traders and pioneer settlers bent westward, before plunging into the ever formidable and unknown area beyond the mountains. Boone's visits to the tavern were so frequent he opened an account with Colonel Shelby.

In his plea to the Kentucky legislature, in 1812, Daniel Boone said he could claim without arrogance to have been primarily responsible for the method by which the county a long the Mississippi River was settled. Although Daniel Boone died in the solitudes of Missouri, his body was claimed by Kentucky, in 1880, and thereupon removed to Frankfort, where a fitting monument marks his grave.

Cost Of Food For Week

After a long investigation as to the smallest amount of food required to save families in the lowest income groups from starvation, the New York Budget Council, composed of fourteen representatives of charitable, civic and industrial organizations, has reported that $3.73 will buy enough food to sustain such a family, including two adults and three children for one week.

What's the Answer?

By EDWARD FINCH

LONG ago, a barber served in two capacities—barber and surgeon. He "bled people"—i. e., when a man felt sick he thought he had too much blood in his system and he went to the barber to have some of that blood removed from his body. The barber pole stood for the staff the patient held as he was being bled. The red and white stripes were for the bandages used in the operation, the white for the bandage used before the operation, the red for the dressing of the wound after it was over. The gold ball at the top of the pole represented the other end of the business—the brass basin from which the customer was shaved.

Jonas Predicts G. O. P. Victory.

Dunn.—Charles A. Jonas of Lincolnton, continuing his campaign for Bob Reynolds' seat in the United States Senate, declared in an address here that the Republican party would make more gains in Congress this year than in any election since Roosevelt took office.

Officially opening the Republican campaign in Harnett county, Jonas spoke to 1,000 persons. Jonas sounded a note of optimism for the Republicans and declared, "Even Jim Farley will admit that the tide is changing. We are making great gains every day and this nation will see a new day when the result of the November election is announced."

The Republican candidate was introduced by County Chairman E. C. Geddie, who is also district's candidate for Congress against Bayard Clark.

Lambasting "pump-priming," Jonas accused the New Deal of "playing politics with human misery," but declared the day of swamping food and clothing for votes was at an end.

"They're going to take the New Deal's money and vote according to their convictions," he declared. "No longer will the poor working people of this nation submit to political slavery."

Cotton Farmers To Vote

Washington.—The nation's 2,225,000 cotton growers will get another chance December 30 to express their opinion of the new crop control program.

They will take part in a referendum on establishing marketing quotas on next year's cotton crop. Last March they voted nine to one to invoke quotas on the 1938 yield.

Coming at a time when the administration's efforts to restore agricultural prosperity are under attack in several quarters, the election will be watched by both supporters and foes of the new deal.

The results, said officials of the agriculture department, may have an important bearing on congressional efforts to substitute outright price-fixing for the present legislation.

Two-thirds of the farmers voting must approve quotas in order to make them effective. Their purpose is to restrict production and sale of farm products when excessive supplies exist. Growers who produce more than their quotas are denied government subsidies and are assessed tax penalties if they market in excess of their quotas.

Carolina quail hunters got a two-weeks' earlier season last week as the State Board of Conservation and Development in a meeting at Waynesville approved earlier opening dates for the Tar Heel hunting seasons.

Quail and turkey opening dates were advanced from December 15 to December 1. The season closes February 15.

Rabbit hunting was advanced from November 20 to November 24, closes February 15; opossum and raccoon hunting with dogs opens October 1 and close February 15.

Not The Man To Talk Peace.

Mr. Liles is saying that it is time for business and government to stop their quarrelling, shake hands, make peace and get down to a basis of understanding and co-operation.

We have said as much a hundred times and a saying it again for the hundred and first.

But this desirable basis of peace and understanding and co-operation between business and government will come much more quickly if Mr. Liles steps aside, shuts up and keeps his irritating voice out of the equation.

He is no more the sort of man to stop war than Mephistopheles.—Charlotte Observer.

Says Roosevelt Plan Failure.

Jacksonville, Ill.—Stephen A. Day, republican nominee for congressman-at-large, declared the Roosevelt administration had failed and had called for a check on this mad rush toward dictatorship.

In an address at the Morgan Court Fair, Day said:

The planned economy of the New Deal has failed. The New Deal five-year plan has failed. It has failed in relief of the farmer—prices of basic farm products are the lowest in history.

It has failed to help labor—more millions are unemployed than ever before in our history. It has failed business and industry. The banks are overflowing with money, but there is no confidence and no one will venture into business activity.

Day said that the president, faced by these glaring failures, "has engaged upon a bitter attempt to purge from office all those who will not say 'yes' without the privilege of discussion or reflection."

It has about come to the point where there is little need to hold elections. The straw ballot has been perfected to such fine precision that the results of political contests are foretold almost to the dotting of an I and the crossing of a T.

Hitch-hiker Bites Helping Hand.

Harry Stroud, manager of the United Variety store, will one with plenty of emphasis that picked up hitch hikers is not the best policy—not by a long shot.

In fact, Mr. Stroud is just about to believe that being a "Good Samaritan" has its drawbacks and its penalties.

Few days back Mr. Stroud was returning from down country where he had taken the wife and children for a visit with homefolks.

Stopping in Hickory he was accosted by a nice appearing young man of about 20 who asked for a ride. Always ready to accommodate, Mr. Stroud let the young chap ride in his car, and in course of conversation found that the youngster was on his "uppers," and was trying to make his way back to Georgia where he said he had people who would care for him.

Arriving in Brevard late in the evening, Mr. Stroud permitted the lad to remain in his home during the night and next day, next night, and for several days. About the third day the chap was missing from the Stroud home so were some of Mr. Stroud's clothing, some of Mrs. Stroud's prized possessions, and worst of all, 1,200 "Indian Head" pennies which Mr. Stroud collects.

Officers soon discovered that the young man had caught the Smoky Mountain Bus and a telephone call to Highlands located the young man clothes, trinkets, and most of the pennies.

The young hitch hiker is now whiling his time away in Transylvania county jail, awaiting trial at the December term of court and Mr. Stroud has most of his belongings back but he is a sworn disciple of the "I Won't Let You Ride A Tall A-Tail" order.

Community Sanitation Project In Davie County Resumed.

This project is a county wide project consisting of the construction of new pit privies and also the rebuilding of old privies that are not in a sanitary condition.

Free labor for the construction of these pit privies will be furnished by the WPA provided the necessary materials are placed on the premises by the property owner.

The N. C. State Board of Health has designed a new type of privy which consists of a concrete floor, sills and seat riser, all of this concrete part is reinforced, precast, and can be moved when necessary. In order to obtain the free labor on this project this type of privy must be constructed.

Mr. R. D. Brown has been appointed supervisor of this project and will be in charge of the construction.

For any information concerning this project contact either Mr. Brown or your local inspector at the Health Office in the Meroney Building, Mocksville, N. C.

Iredell School Bond Issue Defeated.

In the special bond election held in Iredell county to issue bonds to the amount of $150,000 for a new school building at Statesville, the issue was overwhelmingly defeated. Statesville was the only precinct voting for the bonds. In Mooresville only 20 votes were cast for the bonds and every rural precinct in the county voted no. Just why Statesville thought the county would vote bonds for a new school building for that city has not been revealed.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK. — Barring world champion prizefighters, Thomas E. Dewey probably has received more publicity than any other American of his years. He is only 36, but almost everything about him is old news. However, as the New York Republicans nominated him for governor, the whole country seems hungry for information about the cock of his eyebrow, his gold fillings, if any, the set of his suspenders and whether he runs down the heels of his shoes. Friends from the West and Far West have told me, and some have written, that there is more talk about Thomas E. Dewey for President than about all the other possibilities put together. These informants say the talk is not partisan — that New York's young racket-buster is becoming the national symbol of a "happy issue out of all our afflictions."

This reporter hereby hands him the agrarian vote: on the banks of the Shiawassee, near Owosso, in the state of Michigan, he was a demon cow milker. People would come for miles to see and hear him milk a cow. Musically gifted, he could make the powerful milk stream ring a tune in the pail as he sang "La Boheme," or "Il Traviata." His father ran a country newspaper. As to the industrial East, he is a cagey bridge player who never takes his partner out of a business double. He is a squash player in winter, and a tennis player in summer. He sings baritone, a safe vocal as well as political range, and was trained as an opera singer, first in New York on a musical scholarship. There's nothing showy about him and he never makes a play to the press coop.

He appears to be, to this observer, the answer to Stuart Chase's plea for a new kind of politician. In a magazine article printed about a year ago, Mr. Chase tore all political dogmas to tatters and said we would get nowhere until we began to isolate and attack given problems and settle them according to their immediate requirements, without regard to their political or philosophical context. Big town racketeering is one of those "given problems" and then some. It is interesting to note that, in his acceptance speech, Mr. Dewey renounced "political dogma."

On most of the specific political issues of the day, Mr. Dewey's opinion has not been revealed. He has been slated as "liberal" and "progressive," but, in the days of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too," the country esteemed fighting men and apparently still does.

GREECE has had several associations to get the Elgin marbles from England. They're still there. The Association of Men With Wings seems to have better prospects of reclaiming for America the original Wright brothers' airplane. Orville Wright, who, for quite human and understandable reasons, let the plane go to England, now joins the association in its effort to bring it back to this country.

When and if they succeed, it will be another feather in the flying helmet of Col. Charles Wayne Kerwood. Ever since he stopped daredevilism as one of America's most spectacular and adventurous aviators, he has been plying to get that plane, even if he has to kidnap it. That was why he formed the above association, of which he is president.

He flew and fought with the French in the World War, with the Greeks against the Turks in 1922, was wounded and grounded more than once, turned to barnstorming and sensational knockabout flying, and became president of the International League of Aviators. He is a native of Chicago, big, bronzed, moustachioed, once a flying and fighting buddy of General Franco, against the Riffs.

THIS department would like to come out boldly against something. An unfinishing stand against red fingernails looks pretty safe.

Lesson for October 30

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND WHERE THEY END

LESSON TEXT—Ecclesiastes 2:1-3, 10, 11; Romans 6:15-22; 14:21.
GOLDEN TEXT—What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?—Romans 6:15.

"Personal liberty"—what endless misuse was made of that expression in the days when men seeking the right to again flood this country with intoxicating liquors were attacking prohibition. One would think that some of our political leaders and our newspaper editors would blush for shame when they see what has now been accomplished in the name of personal liberty.

My liberty ends, as someone has well said, where yours begins. I have the personal liberty to swing my arms as far as the tip of your nose, but there my liberty ends. All of life is, and necessarily must be built on that principle. For the Christian there is an even higher measure of responsibility—his relationship to God and his consequent heart interest in the welfare of his fellow men.

Our Scripture portions for today present a sharp contrast. Man without God, but with every earthly advantage is pictured in Ecclesiastes in his fruitless search for real joy. Then man as the glad bond-slave of Jesus Christ is spoken of in Romans as truly free and joyful.

I. The Way of Emptiness and Disappointment (Eccles. 2:1-3, 10, 11).

1. Physical pleasures do not satisfy (Eccles. 2:1-3). Men who have tasted the distress and disappointment of life are prone to think that if they only had all the money they wanted, and an opportunity to partake of life's "thrills" they would be happy. Solomon had everything. He deliberately set himself to prove the pleasures of this world. He planned to "enjoy" intoxicants—doing it "with wisdom"—that is, not in a drunken debauch that would bring remorse. Note it, you who advocate the moderate use of alcohol (whatever that may be) Solomon found it to be only vain emptiness. (See Prov. 23:31, 32.)

What is true of wine is also true of the attempt to satisfy oneself by the gratification of any physical appetite. Those who live for the pleasures of the flesh can reap only corruption (Gal. 6:8). The hectic search for such satisfaction by countless men and women today reveals that they, like Solomon, cannot find it. If they did, they would cease their wild searching. It just is not there.

2. Pleasures of the mind do not satisfy (Eccles. 2:10, 11). Solomon sought real joy in labor, in accomplishing worthy ends. There is a satisfaction in work well done, but that joy is only lasting when the doing of the work is for the glory of God. Work for its own sake—yes, even wisdom for its own sake (Eccles. 1:12-18)—is not enough to satisfy the soul of man. The great poet Goethe, who set himself to enjoy the higher pleasures of life—art, science, and literature—came to his seventy-fifth year to testify that he had "never had four weeks of genuine pleasure." Satisfaction is not in the pleasures of the aesthetic nature.

II. The Way of Victory, Peace, and True Joy (Rom. 6:17-23; 14:21).

We say with Paul "God be thanked" that there is a way for men to find freedom from the sin and disappointment of life. It comes by

1. Personal allegiance to God (Rom. 6:17-23). Clear thinking on spiritual matters recognizes that the man who boasts of his personal liberty, his freedom from God's control over his life is in reality the slave of sin (vv. 17-19; Titus 3:3). On the other hand, the one who is a willing bondsman of Jesus Christ is free. The way of victory and peace is to yield to God, even as the way of defeat and disappointment is to yield to sin. The first way leads to joy in this life and eternal fellowship with God. The other way results in ultimate ghastly disillusionment in this life and eternal spiritual death and separation from God.

2. Recognized responsibility for others (Rom. 14:21). It should not take two minutes of intelligent consideration for any man to understand that "none of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself" (Rom. 14:7). Yet that is the obvious assumption under which men live, leaving behind them not only their own wrecked lives, but carrying along in the stream of their personal influence their acquaintances, friends and members of their families.

The principle stated in Romans 14:21 should govern all of our actions. Paul was speaking of meat offered to idols, which he could have eaten with a clear conscience. But if he ate it someone else would be caused to stumble, and he was rather willing to do without it as long as he lived. One wonders what would happen in the Christian world if every professed follower of Christ would thus evaluate not only the use of intoxicants but also his every personal habit.

IT LOOKS as if the skids had been put beneath another foreign star. Columbia has had Dolly Haas on the payroll for a year—at $1,250 a week, which maybe is a tidy little sum and nothing more to Columbia, but is a lot of money to a lot of us—and she was scheduled to play the lead in Lubitsch's "The Shop Around the Corner." She didn't make any other pictures; just waited for that one.

So Lubitsch recently moved into the Selznick-International studio, ready to begin work on the picture, his first as head of his new unit in association with Myron Selznick. But he wanted, not Dolly Haas, but Janet Gaynor, for the lead. A disappointment for the lovely Viennese, no doubt. Incidentally, the demure Janet goes right on increasing in feminine charm all the time.

Janet Gaynor

Ronald Colman's marriage to Benita Hume rather startled a lot of people, who felt sure that he'd never marry again. It wasn't exactly the sort of ceremony that might have been expected, but Colman's knowledge of the publicity that attends any star's wedding no doubt prompted him in keeping his application for a license secret, and having a police judge perform the ceremony.

Ever since 1920, when he and his first wife separated, there have been rumors to the effect that the dashing hero of "If I Were King" was going to marry someone or other, although he has never been one of those young men about Hollywood who used rumored romances as a sure-fire way of garnering publicity. The beautiful Benita is just the wife one would select for him—best wishes to them both!

The fates seem to be again Ralph Bellamy, so far as owning a home is concerned. Last winter the California floods washed away his $50,000 home in North Hollywood. This summer the Connecticut hurricane washed away the house and much of the land on his farm in that state. Looks as if he'd have to buy him a trailer and settle down in that.

I like Kate Smith; I like her new radio program Thursday nights, which keeps her right up there with the topnotchers. But I do not like her when I am waked up at the crack of dawn to receive a pale blue turtle with "Greetings From Kate Smith" across its painted back, accompanied by a box of fish food.

Any time the movies need a young and handsome man to conduct an orchestra—and really conduct it, too—they can't do better than to raid the field of radio and take Mack-in-Marrow. He has been guest conductor of practically all the big symphony orchestras but the Boston and he is undeniably both young and handsome. What's more, it was accidentally discovered, the other day, that he screens well.

A friend of his got involved in making a commercial movie. She took a look at the young man sent by one of the model agencies, and they wouldn't do at all. Then she remembered him. Unlike many radio big-timers, he was delighted to do it, just for fun and to oblige a friend. With that picture serving as a screen test he should be able to sign his name to a Hollywood contract if he ever wants to.

Dorothy Thompson, our most famous woman news commentator, has also discovered something about herself as the camera sees her. She's on the air now on a program that includes Phil Spitalny's orchestra, and the other day a picture was taken of him leading the orchestra, with her at the microphone. It couldn't be sent out to the papers; the dignified Miss Thompson—or Mrs. Sinclair Lewis, just as you like—looked exactly like a pretty blues singer, instead of an important commentator on world affairs!

Harry Duncan of the "Radio Rubes" declares that he can tell which parts of the country are having bad weather by the amount of fan mail he gets from those sections. During New England's hurricane week the "Rubes" averaged two hundred letters a day, and he knew that the storm was really terrific when the postman brought four layer cakes. Think all New England must have been moored to their radios.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Charlie Farrell's next song, as his come-back, will be the male lead in "Tallpin." With Alice Faye . . . "Drums" ought to go down on your list of the new pictures that you must see . . . Paramount won't too pleased when their starlet, Ellen Drew, told Philadelphia reporters that she has a three-and-one-half-year-old son.

PULLETS DO BEST IF HOUSED EARLY

Ample Space, Cleanliness, Good Ration Necessary.

By H. H. Alp, Poultry Extension Specialist,
University of Illinois—WVU Service

With higher egg prices in prospect, poultry producers will find it doubly important to see that pullets are in their winter quarters a week or 10 days before laying begins.

Failure to observe this fundamental rule has many times resulted in lowered egg production when pullets are confined to winter quarters.

If the poultry house is in good shape, if the pullets have ample space, at least four square feet a bird, if the house is kept clean, if there are ample feeders and if a good ration is provided, well-matured pullets can be confined to houses all the time and maintain good production.

In the event that the poultry house is not particularly satisfactory and where a good clean range with plenty of young tender green feed adjoins the house, pullets might well be allowed outside at least the latter part of each afternoon until snowy weather arrives. However, confinement following range privileges and during good egg production is likely to cause a drop in production. Once pullets become accustomed to being kept in they can be expected to lay well if properly fed.

All things considered, pullets will usually do best when they are kept separate from older hens. Many poultry houses can easily be divided into two rooms by using poultry netting as a partition.

Off-Flavor of the Milk

Not From Well-Fed Cows
If the milk from cows becomes off-flavor because they eat weeds, the remedy lies in providing feed other than that in the pasture, advises W. B. Combs, member of the St. Paul university farm dairy staff.

Experiments at University farm indicate that cows may not eat enough weeds to flavor milk if other palatable feed is available. In working with well-fed cows, it was necessary to starve them to the weeds, says Combs. When pepper grass flour in milk or cream, the cow has likely consumed as much as 80 pounds of the weed daily. University dairymen believe, for it was difficult to obtain more than a mild off-flavor in milk or cream by feeding 60 pounds of pepper grass. This would indicate that when pepper grass flour occurs in milk, the animals are receiving little more feed than the weed itself.

When cows eat such weeds as French weeds, wild onion and pepper grass, the milk they produce becomes almost worthless. This not only leads to a loss for the individual dairyman, but to the industry as a whole, since in products from weed-flavored milk and cream, the off-flavors are intensified.

Combs reports that if pasture is supplemented by a grain ration, and some hay or silage, cows are less likely to eat enough weeds to flavor the milk.

Group Pullets by Ages

When pullets in the same stage of maturity are placed in the one pen they are much easier to handle, and produce better results than when birds of various stages of maturity are mixed. Because pullets all of the same age can be fed to better advantage, production will often climb to 70 or 80 per cent, because they are all laying at the same time. When production begins to drop the whole pen may be given the same change in management at the same time, to bring the pullets back into laying. This change to artificial lights, wet manure or any other phase of management may be made to better advantage.

Sore Shoulders on Horses

Clean cold water is very effective in washing sore shoulders on horses. Where animals are troubled with tender skin, advises the Indiana Farmer's Guide, it is possible to bathe the troubled areas noon and evening with a mild astringent wash as follows: Lead acetate 4 ounces and zinc sulphate 3 ounces in 1 gallon of water. This solution should be shaken well before using. At first an attempt should be made not to work the horse too hard for a time. Frequent currying and brushing, clean collars, well-fitting collars and constant attention will do much to keep shoulders in working condition.

Laying House

One has a considerable investment in the pullets raised this year. And a little bug or two can upset the profit card so easily, says Hoard's Dairyman. The laying house should be given a pretty thorough going-over inside. Use a lye solution or other good disinfectants. And don't neglect the feed hoppers and water utensils. They need a real cleaning up. Repair nests and put in new shavings or other nesting material. Shavings usually keep eggs cleaner than straw.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Vitamins And Vision; Explains How and Why You Should Feed Your Eyes

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

FOR a number of years, scientists have stressed the importance of a well-balanced diet as a means of maintaining health, promoting growth and preventing disease. Recently, an even more significant development has occurred. It has been determined that a carefully chosen diet is absolutely necessary to preserve the general health and efficiency of every bodily function and that there is a close relationship between a good diet and good eyesight.

Your Food and Your Eyes

Many people regard their eyesight as one of the five senses which operate in some mysterious manner of their own! If they suffer from indigestion, they recognize that it is quite apt to be due to something they ate. If they are troubled with stomach, liver or kidney complaints, they quickly appreciate that prolonged dietary indiscretions may be at the root of the trouble. But it never occurs to them that what they eat may affect the eyes just as profoundly as it affects the internal organs.

It is not uncommon, during an attack of biliousness, to suffer a disturbance of the vision. But that disturbance usually disappears with the disorder that caused it. On the other hand, a deficient diet may produce eye troubles that have a far reaching effect upon health, efficiency, and even personal safety.

Night Blindness Explained

For example, it has been established that there is a definite relation between your vision and the vitamins in your diet; between your ability to drive a car safely at night, and the amount of vitamin A-containing foods that you consume.

To understand this astonishing fact, it is necessary to know that vision under faint illumination is accomplished by means of chemical changes in the pigment at the back of the eye. This is known as the "visual purple" of the retina and one of its important components is carotene, which is the active form of vitamin A.

The visual purple might be compared to the film in a camera. When you are in a dim light and the eyes are suddenly exposed to bright light, the visual purple is greatly reduced or bleached. This change results in a stimulation of the optic nerve and enables you to see clearly.

When an adequate supply of vitamin A is present in the body, the visual purple is rapidly regenerated. But when the supply is inadequate, a much longer period elapses before the corrective chemical change takes place. During the intervening time, many people find it difficult to see.

That is the condition known as "night blindness." And it accounts for the fact that a large proportion of serious motor accidents occur at night. Victims of this deficiency disease are first blinded by approaching headlights, then cannot quickly readjust themselves after the oncoming car has passed. Their ability to drive safely is subsequently impaired for they cannot clearly see the road ahead, and they may miss dangerous curves, pedestrians or other vehicles.

A Common Complaint

Unfortunately, the prevalence of night blindness is not generally recognized, though it is held that urban dwellers are more conscious of it than those living in the rural areas. This is borne out by the fact that ocular disorders from vitamin deficiency are less common in urban than in rural areas.

Children Often Victims

Since the discovery of the close connection between vitamin A and the ability to see in dim light, scientists have tested large numbers of school children to determine whether vitamin A was present in their diet in adequate amounts. It was revealed that from 26 to 79 per cent of the children examined had incipient night blindness.

The same deplorable conditions were found among adults. Mild to moderate degrees of vitamin A deficiency were present in from 10 to over 50 per cent of each group tested.

Yet here is the remarkable thing—in nearly every case, a diet rich in vitamin A for a few weeks restored the vision to normal.

A Significant Experiment

An even more striking example of the power of food to affect the eyesight is to be found in the report of an experiment in which breeding sows were given food in abundance but lacking vitamin A for 160 days before and for 30 days after breeding. In three litters of 35 pigs, all were blind. In another litter of 14 pigs, all were sightless. But under normal feeding, the same animals produced litters of pigs with normal eyes and vision. This experiment justifies the conclusion of one of our most noted food scientists, that the deficiency of essential food elements may so alter vital processes that even pre-natal changes may occur.

Cause of Other Eye Disorders

Night blindness is not the only eye disease caused by an improper diet. Xerophthalmia or conjunctivitis, characterized by excessive dryness of the eyeball, has long been known to be caused by a vitamin A deficiency. It is also well known that a liberal amount of this vitamin will prevent that serious disease and will even effect a cure where destruction of the cornea has not progressed too far.

This suggests the tremendous importance of including in the diet foods rich in vitamin A—cod and other fish-liver oils; milk and other dairy products; green leafy and yellow vegetables; and egg-yolk.

Experiments with rats, whose dietary requirements are similar to those of man, show a close connection between cataract and a deficiency of another vitamin—vitamin C. This is found most abundantly in meat, milk, eggs, fruit and vegetables.

Were she concerned about protecting the blessing of good eyesight alone, that would be sufficient reason why every homemaker should plan meals that are rich in vitamins. But it is not only the eyes which are dependent upon vitamins, for they have many other functions to perform.

An improper diet may cause people to drive automobiles blindly at night so that they are dangerous not only to themselves and their passengers, but to everyone on the streets and roads. A deficient diet will also send them through life with half-efficient bodies, half-efficient brains, half-efficient senses.

That is why I urge you to learn everything you can about food, so that in planning meals you will not only feed your eyes, your husband's eyes and your children's eyes, but will take advantage of the wonderful discoveries of nutritional science to make every member of the family so efficient that they will enjoy the best of health each day of their lives.

Questions Answered

Mrs. G. C. L.—Yes, indeed, nutritionists do approve of a mid-afternoon snack for most school children. A glass of milk and a slice of buttered bread with jam or preserves; fruit juice and oatmeal cookies; or a chocolate milk shake and graham crackers will provide fresh energy for late afternoon play. With the between-meal lunch, some children become so fatigued that nerve strain results. Take care, however, that the snack does not destroy the appetite for the evening meal. ©—WNU—C. When Cooking Greens.—If a piece of fat about the size of a nutmeg is added to the water in which any kind of greens are being cooked there will be no boiling over and no stirring will be required.

To Press Ribbons.—Dampen ribbons and iron them between tissue paper.

Bright Clothes for Children.—You may not like vividly colored clothes, but they are the safest thing to wear in traffic. It is advisable to dress children in such costumes to help protect them from accidents.

Save Salty Water.—When water in which salt has been boiling is poured over coal, it makes good coal last longer and improves bad coal.

Keeping Paint.—If a can of paint has to be left open, stir it thoroughly, so as to dissolve all the oil, then fill up with water. When it becomes necessary to use the paint pour off the water and you will find it as fresh as when first opened.

Or Else—
The man's conduct was suspicious, and the watchman asked why he kept hanging about the gunpowder factory?
"I want to make myself give up smoking," replied the man.

Salt Improves Coffee.—The flavor of coffee is improved if a little salt is sprinkled on the bottom of the pot before the coffee is put in.

Well-Fitting Hose.—Children's stockings ought to be selected carefully. Short ones cramp toes and will eventually make them crooked. Too long ones wrinkle and twist, irritating toes and heels. Also, children should be taught to wear a fresh pair of stockings each morning. Don't allow your youngsters to wear gashers in the house or classroom.

Apples for the Winter.—To keep apples through the winter, bore holes in the bottom and sides of a barrel and store on a dry platform a foot or more from the ground. Where only a few apples are available for storage, a good plan is to carefully wrap them singly in paper, then pack them in layers three or four deep in shallow boxes and place them in the coolest position in the house or outbuilding.

Just how much cash the Federal Government is going to put out to keep this country safe for the New Deal is beyond our knowledge. It is hard to find any group of individuals who want to kill Santa Claus.

The more cotton this country exports the more money the cotton farmer gets. Believe it or not, according to government figures, we are exporting about 13 per cent less cotton today than we were in the good old days before the New Deal.

Jones May Win.

North Carolina may have one Republican Congressman. John R. Jones who is seeking the election from the eighth congressional district as yet has no opposition.

Mr. Jones, age 56, native of Stokes County, worked his way through high school and college, studied law at Wake Forest, married Miss Rose McNeil, daughter of the Rev. Milton McNeil, Wilkes county. Mr. Jones located in North Wilkesboro in 1910, forming a partnership with Johnson J. Hayes, who is now federal judge of the middle district of North Carolina. Jones and Judge Hayes were law partners for 17 years. In 1926 Jones was elected solicitor of the 17th judicial district, which office he held for 12 years. Mr. Jones holds the distinction of being the only Republican solicitor in the state, and is so well liked in his district that at the last general election he had no opposition.

Mr. Jones lives in a "log cabin home" on his dairy farm about 6 miles out of North Wilkesboro. He is known throughout the state as a dairy farmer and is proprietor of the famous, "Meadow Brook Dairy," one of the outstanding grade A dairies in North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Jones had no child-

SYNOPSIS

Young Rex Hale calls on Casper Kneeland, friend of his father, in New York, and finds him proudly successful but strangely preoccupied. He tells Hale of his wife's death while insane, invites him for the summer to Halcynon Camp, his home on Long Island, and promises him to be "useful" as his secretary there. Hale is joined at lunch by Fred Ainsworth, an unpopular college mate, also at Halcynon, who leaves him with a premonition of unpleasant mystery. He is met at the train by Mrs. Wilbur Nash, whom he questions about the man, and experiences a disturbing premonition.

"Is Miss Kneeland at home? My name is Hale," he said.

The maid responded promptly to the smile.

"Yes, sir. Miss Kneeland is expecting you. If you will leave your luggage here in the hall Joe will take it up to your room. Miss Kneeland is in the living-room."

Hale dropped the luggage with a sigh of relief, hung his hat on a rack, and followed his guide. In the past ten minutes he had been repenting some of those purchases of yesterday. Probably he wouldn't need any of them here, except knickerbockers and a bathing suit. But the atmosphere of the house was unexpectedly luxurious. The living-room into which he was ushered was full of charm and beauty. There were admirable pieces of furniture in it, good pictures and fine old rugs. There was a small log fire in a huge grate. Two women sat before the little blaze. Hale took them both in, while one of them rose and came to meet him.

She was a plump person, probably in her fifties, with pompadour white hair, pink cheeks, and pale blue eyes. She had a pleasant welcoming smile and an unexpectedly firm grasp as she shook hands with him.

"You had to walk," she said regretfully. "I'm so sorry. I can't understand why Casper—"

"Only as far as the clearing," Hale explained as he smiled down at her. "One of your neighbors, Mrs. Wilbur Nash, gave me a lift."

"Trust Helen Nash for that," Miss Hosanna said appreciatively. "Come and meet Mrs. Spencer Forbes. You must be surprised to find it so cool here."

Mrs. Spencer Forbes had been sitting with her gaze on the fire. She looked up and nodded as they came toward her.

"How do you do, Mr. Hale?" she asked languidly. Languor seemed to be her note. It contrasted as sharply with Miss Hosanna's brisk New Englandism as her tall very thin figure did with Miss Hosanna's plumpness. "It's too late for tea," she went on, as Hale bowed before her. "But we might give this young man a few cocktails and a sandwich. I'll have some cocktails, too, Hosanna. Side-cars, I think, if Mr. Hale likes them. But do remind Banks not to put in too much lemon juice."

Miss Hosanna summoned her butler and ordered the cocktails and sandwiches. Now she sat with her pale eyes on her friend's face. Her expression was expectant, almost rapt. Later, Hale learned that to Miss Hosanna Mrs. Spencer Forbes' conversation was as the music of the morning stars singing together.

"It's ten years since I was in Spain," Mrs. Spencer Forbes said dreamily on learning that Rex had just returned from there. "I'm not optimistic enough to think it has changed."

"Every train still starts about dawn," Hale admitted.

"And stops at Bobadilla at high noon and lets its passengers stew for two hours on the broiling station platform. I know. I've done it."

Banks brought in the cocktails. He was, Hale learned, a man of fifty who had been with the Kneelands for 15 years. He was soft-voiced, soft-footed, deferential, and sorely tried by Miss Hosanna, with whose high housekeeping standards he was not always in sympathy. Mrs. Spencer Forbes straightened with the first real interest she had shown.

"Not too much acid this time, Banks?" she asked alertly. "I hope not, Madam. Banks' glance slid past her face and fastened on Hale. Hale took a cocktail and a sandwich from the tray the man offered him. Miss Hosanna had waved it from her with the simple but eloquent word "Poison!" Mrs. Spencer Forbes, who had already drunk one cocktail, apparently in one gulp, took another from the tray Banks had thoughtfully left on a low table beside her. Her outlook on life brightened.

Cocktails over, both ladies started toward the door. Hale went with them.

"I'm going upstairs, so I'll show you to your room," Miss Hosanna said with her comfortable matter-of-factness. "You have half an hour to dress for dinner."

They went along the central hall and up a wide staircase at the left of the front entrance.

"Who is he?" Mrs. Spencer Forbes asked Hosanna in a piercing whisper. She added before her slower friend could answer, "Any way, he's a personable youth, and he seems to be alive. That will be a pleasant change at Halcynon Camp. Has anyone warned you, Mr. Hale, that you are visiting Long Island's most remote and least interesting mausoleum?"

"I don't think you ought to say such things," Miss Hosanna protested affectionately. She gave Hale a glance that directed his attention to the charm of her friend.

"We're all dead except Joan," Mrs. Spencer Forbes said calmly, "but most of us don't know it. Joan is beginning to look livid and I give her about three months more. A revival, Mr. Hale. This is my chaste bower."

She nodded and vanished through an open door in the upper hall at

On the blue and orange silk cover of his bed, near the foot, a wad of paper lay. It was crushed and soiled and it looked sadly out of place. Strange that he had not seen it before, or that Miss Hosanna, evidently a typical New England housekeeper, had not observed it during her presence in the room. He went to the bed, picked up and unfolded the grimy sheet with some reluctance, and read its penciled message. This was printed. Its characters straggled unevenly down the page, as if they were the first effort of a child. It read:

THIS PLASE IS DANJERUS. GET OUT QUICK.

Hale frowned, then grinned. He tore the paper into small pieces and dropped them into the waste-paper basket beside the desk. His next the left of the staircase. Miss Hosanna led the guest to a door on the opposite side of the hall.

"Don't pay any attention to what Ruth says," she advised Hale as she opened it. "Everything that comes into her head pops out through her mouth. She has always been like that, even when we were girls at school. She loves to shock people. It's harder now than it used to be," she added comfortingly.

"Almost everybody seems to be trying to shock everybody else. The competition stimulates Ruth and the things she and young Mr. Ainsworth say to each other. . . ."

She left the sentence unfinished, evidently a habit of hers. Hale hardly heard her. He was gazing with pleasure and a dawning sense of proprietorship around the big comfortable room they had entered. It had three windows. Two looked over the sea. The third, at the rear, faced west. There was a long divan between them. There was a fireplace for cool days; and a brass wood-box full of logs stood near it. There were easy-chairs; there was a flat-top writing table with many drawers.

"Casper says you're going to be with us all summer, so try to feel at home," she invited. "That door leads to a closet as large as a small room. The door near the side window leads to your bathroom. I will say for Cas that he put in enough bathrooms when he built his house. He wasn't as foresighted about closets. It takes a woman to think of them, but I wasn't consulted. I think Banks has unpacked for you," she went on. "He usually unpacks and puts the cases away."

She crossed to a highboy and pulled open a drawer.

"Yes, here are all your ties and socks and handkerchiefs," she went on. "How bright and cheerful they are!"

"That's the colorful influence of Spain," Hale laughed. He felt self-conscious. He hoped Miss Hosanna would not go through the other drawers. She didn't, but she opened the closet door. It revealed suits on hangers and shoes on pegs. It also revealed his new dressing-gown, which caught the last of the sun's rays as they entered the west window.

"You do like beautiful colors," she said, regarding it approvingly. "So do I. I hope you won't find it dull here," she added in a different tone. "Try to like your room."

"It's the ideal guest room," Hale said warmly.

"I'm glad you think so. Now I'll leave you to get dressed. You'll hear the gong at half past seven."

He followed her to the door, observing again her erect shoulders, her proudly held white head, and her surprisingly light, quick step. He opened the door for her and slowly closed it after her. Then for a long moment he stood very still, hands in his trousers' pockets and eyes on the room's thick blue and orange rug, trying to analyze his impressions.

Suddenly he stopped and stared impulse was to hasten into the bathroom and wash his hands after handling that note. He followed it. The note, of course, was someone's idea of a practical joke. Or, on second thoughts, it may have been some servant's revolt against the additional work made by an extra guest. It may have been hurled through the open window, or through the transom above his door, or brought into his room and dropped on his bed. In any case it was plainly not worth another instant of thought. Nevertheless, his mind touched it as he dressed.

"QUIK." "DANJERUS." Those words upheld the spelling standards of Joe the porter, whom Hale had not yet had an opportunity to tip. He must repair that oversight. He must placate Joe. With that resolution the little matter dropped from his mind. He whistled a Spanish tango as he went on with his toilet.

CHAPTER II

They were all in the living-room, except Casper Kneeland, when Hale went downstairs in response to the summons of the gong. He entered a trifle self-consciously, abashed by the gaze of so many strangers. Instinctively he made for Miss Hosanna and Mrs. Spencer Forbes. They now seemed to him almost like old friends. He skirted Joan on the way and took her in with a quick side glance. Miss Hosanna had risen and was doing the honors.

"My niece," he heard her say. "Doctor Craig, my nephew, Herbert. Mr. Ainsworth says you and he are old friends."

Discovery of Radium Revealed That Atom Was Shattered With Explosive Violence

The discovery of radium and the phenomenon of radio-activity turned the course of history for Twentieth century physics, writes John A. Maloney in the Scientific American. With its discovery came the knowledge that the atoms of certain heavy elements were not permanently stable, but broke up with explosive violence. The inner structure of the atom, which had defied the mind of man since the days of the atomists in ancient Greece, the discovery of isotopic elements—elements identical in their physical and chemical makeup but differing in their atomic weights—these, and many other secrets of matter were solved by the discovery of radium.

Men were excited about the possibilities of this new substance. The energy that it gave off was staggering to the imagination. It was natural that the question should arise as to how this energy could be harnessed and put to work. Flannery and the others thrilled with the possibilities. Were not such eminent physicists as Sir Ernest Rutherford writing essays on harnessing the energy of radium and its future as a source of power?

"Old acquaintances is what I really said, Miss Hosanna," Ainsworth purred as he lounged forward to shake hands. "We were at Ithaca together, but Hale never liked me."

"Another bond between Mr. Hale and myself," Mrs. Spencer Forbes said sweetly. "I've felt strangely drawn to him from the first. You needn't tell us any of Mr. Ainsworth's bad habits at college, Mr. Hale. We can easily imagine them."

"Sorry to disappoint you, but he hadn't any," Hale testified cheerfully. "He was an exemplary young man in every way, and always knew his lessons."

Hale was increasingly uncomfortable. What an extraordinary lot these people were, with their deliberate rudeness.

"If you're hinting that I was a grind I'll admit it," Ainsworth said sharply. "I was there to work, and I worked. I was no popular idol, like Hale here." He smiled unpleasantly. In his evening clothes he looked more than ever like a sleek black cat. "You must have missed all that adulation when you left Ithaca and got into real life," he added unpleasantly.

Hale wanted to kick him. The fellow was intolerable. He turned away from him and smiled at Joan Kneeland, with a sudden lift of the heart. (She was a charming thing, a pleasure to the eye. Her small bobbed head was beautifully shaped. She had the blackest hair he had ever seen. It fitted her head like a black satin cap. Her eyes were deeply and vividly blue. It was not until he saw her smile, however, that he gave himself wholly to her spell. Her smile was enchanting. It was also fleeting. It disappeared almost as quickly as it had come. Hale felt as if he had watched the door of a house swing open, had caught a glimpse of light and warmth inside, and had seen the door close again.)

Joan had said a few words to Craig when they sat down. She was now listening to what seemed an overlong story of some medical experience of his in Paris.

"You psychiatrists have your work on your mind all the time," Ainsworth remarked. "Is it true that most doctors and workers associated with the insane, eventually go off their heads themselves? I've heard that theory a dozen times."

"Your application of it is too general," Craig said coldly. "Most doctors and other workers don't do anything of the kind. A few do. They're usually the neurotically inclined, and those very susceptible to suggestion. I remember . . ."

"Oh, come now, Craig, don't get started on your cases again!" Young Kneeland spoke so irritably that Craig's eyebrows rose. "Sorry," Kneeland jerked out, "but that stuff is depressing to most of us."

Ainsworth's tone was purring again. He was plainly enjoying his dinner, which was excellent. He appeared to be at peace with the world.

Joan raised her blue eyes and looked at the speaker. It was a long look and a strange one. Ainsworth met it and smiled again.

Can't Eat, Can't Sleep, Awful Gas PRESSES HEART

"Gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. I even passed on my heart. A friend suggested Adulika. The first dose brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine, and never feel better." Mrs. J. E. Miller, Adulika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels, and never irritates your intestinal system, a real cleansing, bringing out waste matter that may have caused GAS, BLOATING, sour stomach, headache, nervousness, and sleepless nights for months. You will be amazed at this efficient intestinal cleanser. Just one spoonful usually relieves GAS and constipation. Adulika does not grip, is not habit forming. Recommended by many doctors and druggists for 25 years.

Before your newspaper is put to bed

When we talk of putting a newspaper to bed we aren't trying to be humorous. It's the parlance for going to press—the final step in the production of a newspaper.

Before your newspaper is ready to go to bed there's a long series of steps, representing the collective efforts of many minds and many hands. The issue you hold in your hands, for example, involved the gathering of hundreds of news items, editing, putting into type, proofreading, making up the type forms and, finally, printing. It could not be done without trained minds, trained hands and a heavy investment in expensive equipment.

There are many other things, too. The selection of features that make your newspaper more informative . . . more entertaining. Each one of these features is carefully chosen with the thought that it will prove interesting to all or part of our readers.

Some newspapers seek to lessen the effort and expense of production by limiting their coverage of news and features. Skeletonized newspapers are cheap and easy to produce. But we prefer to offer our readers a complete newspaper. That is why you find in our columns the work of many of today's greatest newspaper names. And complete local news coverage—of course!
