"PICKING THE GOOSE"

Editor Enterprise:-

I am working on the minute dockets and will in the next issue present some figures showing where the peoples taxes go in part in Davie County. It would surprise the average taxpayer if he had the time to examine these dockets and see where his money is being wasted and appropriated for things for which I contend the Commissioners have no legal authority to spend it, the taxes levied upon the property of the people are for specific purposes, and when it is diverted from those purposes there should be legal authority for such inversion. There are certain people and interests who care very little about where the money comes from just so they have their hands in the pockets of the taxpayers, such methods have got to stop and we must awaken to the importance of informing ourselves of what is going on; to my mind from the investigation we have made, a species of political graft has grown up in this county most reprehensible, is it going to be continued is the question? I have passed the three score and ten age and realize that only at the best can I be of service to the people for many years longer, but I have resolved, that the remaining years of my life in part is going to be dedicated to the service of my countrymen and the welfare of our people. It is a fact, and we had as well realize it, a few people do the thinking for the masses and unless they are good men, unselfish men, the wants and wishes of the people are going to be betrayed for it is self-evident that the world is growing more and more selfish and inhuman, the dollar in the minds of most people is chief the desire, and nothing seems to come between the selfish interests and the dollar. "Man does not live for self alone." When you find the driving force behind the average politician,its power, money and self. I am hoping that there are enough upstanding men in the Legislature to enact some laws for the relief of the people from the terrible burdens that have been heaped upon them by the issuing of millions of bonds and increasing expenses in my mind, unnecessary to the hurt of the average taxpayer. Our slogan should be from now on: TAXES MUST BE REDUCED, EXPENSES MUST BE CUT, SALARIES AS WELL AS OTHER EXPENSES. Years ago I read what a noted foreign politician said, "The science of Taxation is the means of picking the most feathers from the Goose with the least amount of squawking. The old Goose has begun to squawk. Politicians take notice—E. H. Morris, Mocksville, N. C., January 24, 1931.

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

Luke 4:38-44; 5:12-16

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Jesus is now well started in the second year of His public ministry and the work centers in Galilee. During the year, following the Temptation, He wrought in Judea. One incident is remembered by all; the conversation with Nicodemus which gives us the great truth in John 3:16. The rejection by His fellow townsmen in Nazareth caused Jesus to make Capernaum the center of activity.

The months that follow cover the period of popular favor. In the language of today, the Nazarene was first page news. This was due in part to the frequency of His miracles. People were alert to see what He would do next.

Simon Peter had been called as a disciple, and later as one of the apostles. As Jesus entered that home in Capernaum He learned that the mother-in-law was bedridden with a prostrating fever. With a word of divine power the Almighty spoke her into health which was so complete that this woman could at once assist in the hospitality made necessary by the guests. Likewise salvation and the forgiveness of sins is an act rather than a process. When conditions have been met, Jesus speaks and it is done.

Modern medical missions are prophesied in the marvellous work of the Healer that afternoon. When people learned that the Great Physician was in their midst and was ready to help any, kindly friends hastened to bring the sick of all that community into His presence.

Even the dread disease of leprosy was subject to His word of power. From that miracle Jesus withdrew that He might maintain His spiritual strength through personal prayer unto the Father.

AMONG OUR READERS

Short letters of interest to Davie county citizens will be appreciated if our readers feel like expressing themselves through this column each week. Write about anything you wish, but SIGN YOUR NAME. This column is free to all who want to help us tell the world about Davie County.

Editor Enterprise:-

For several weeks I have enjoyed the poems and other things written for the space "Among Our Readers." But what impresses me most of all is this nearly all who have contributed Bible verses, poems, quotations, etc., have been young people.

Now doesn't this seem to mean that the young are more interested and more willing to use the opportunity for good, than older people?

On almost every occasion [illegible] older people are gathered. We hear this "Isn't it awful the way young folks are conducting themselves these days?"

Now lets ask ourselves this question. Isn't it a shame, to we who are older and who should speak a kind word of warning to those same young people whom we make remarks about and try to show them their mistakes? And we do not.

As I see it the young are making an effort to do good. They make mistakes to be sure. But haven't we? Then lets get busy and help make the world better by using our influence for good in every way possible, and a letter or anything that might help some one on the right way printed in this column, may be our best opportunity.

Following are a few questions which I hope may find their way to some who are all out of heart possibly and ready to quit trying, to be better.

Are you polite and courteous? Are you thoughtful and considerate? Are you truthful and honest and undustrious? Are you sowing tares or wheat? Are you scattering sunshine or casting shadows? Are you wasting your summer vacations on the streets and city playgrounds; or are you engaged in some useful work? Do you attend Sunday School and Church? Are you qualifying yourselves to do things well and put more in a job than was ever put before?

The well organized business of the country are looking for men and women of good character and fitness, and they don't want to start with them unless they can meet the test.

"There is going to be a vacancy above you later on. Some day you will find the foreman or the Superintendent gone.

And are you getting ready when that shall be the case. To quit the past you're holding now and step into his place?"

—Mrs. John C. James.
Farmington, N. C.

A NEW KIND OF COASTING

A little boy, named Samuel, who had several friends, liked all kinds of out-of-door sports, [illegible] and his friends all were very fond of winter time, because when it snowed they could go sliding, coasting on snow-balling.

One day it snowed fourteen inches deep. It was very cold and the snow was frozen on top enough to walk on.

Samuel didn't go to school that day because the snow was too deep. He stayed at home and played snow-balling until nearly two o'clock in the afternoon. Then he decided to go over to Marvin's house and play with him the rest of the evening: Samuel asked his mother, but she would not let him go. He got mad and sat around the house all the afternoon.

The next day it was as cold as ever and the snow was still frozen on top enough to walk on. Samuel ask his mother could he go down to James' house to play with him. She said he might go, but be back before dark.

Samuel went and ran all the way for he wanted to play snowballing and go skating or coasting.

Samuel and James played snow ball, and Samuel thought of some thing new that he had never done or seen anyone else do. He called it a "new kind of coasting."

He and James worked together and James worked together.

1926 County Exhibit Contains Many Startling Facts; High Priced Printing

(By J. F. Leach)

If ignorance were bliss it would be folly to be blistered." This is just what our competitor said a few weeks ago when he attempted to answer one of our many editorial comments on the front page of this newspaper which referred directly to his racket.

Now, good people, "it seems to us that the Record editor should have been more careful in his replying to our article which referred to his outrageous charges to the county for printing. He knew very well that they had been charging the county just about twice as much for printing these "exhibits" as they would have charged anyone else for them. Their rates are filed with the clerk of the court (according to their own statement) at 30 and 40 cents per inch. If this be true the Davie Record received $69 and one-half cents per inch for the exhibit which they printed for the county for the year ending December the 6th, 1926.

The figures which appear in the printed sheet (the exhibit) for the year ending December the 6th, 1926, show that the Davie Record received $499.50 "for exhibit and sheriff's ads." The exhibit does not show, however, the exact amount for either the exhibit or for the sheriff's ads. They are both totaled together. This, we suppose, is due to the fact that the Record did not want anyone to know just what each got the county. We would like for him to tell us thru the columns of his paper just what this exhibit cost the tax payers of the county. We have one of the copies of the paper before us now, and the space used for the exhibit is just about 711 and ¾ inches. This would mean that they received about 69 one-hundredcents per inch for the space used instead of their 40 cent rate as is filled with the clerk of the court.

It could be true, possibly, that the sheriff's ads were a hundred dollars, or even more, but after further down this column, you will think it impossible for the sheriff of Davie County to use as much advertising space as mentioned in the said exhibit.

After reading over the exhibit very carefully we find the following items listed for the sheriff: "Stationary or sheriff $61.50; Tax ads for sheriff $20.00; County exhibit and TAX ADS for sheriff $499.50; Ads for sheriff ETC., $22.00; Stationary for sheriff $10.25; Tax sales $48.30; Tax notices for sheriff $6.70; Stationary for sheriff $7.00; Land tax ads for sheriff $128.70; Envelops for sheriff $5.00; THREE HUNDRED LETTER HEADS FOR SHERIFF $2.00.

This gives a total (if we made no mistake in our addition) of $801.20 that the county paid to the Davie Record for costs to the sheriff for the year ending as above stated. Now don't you think that is entirely too much advertising for the sheriff to do. And, if you add any part of the $492.50 referred to in the exhibit you will find that the sheriff did quite an amount of advertising during the year. (He must have been a very good friend.)

We don't know just what this newspaper received from each county under the administration of the Citizens' Ticket, but we are perfectly willing for the Record editor to check up on us, and if we have ever charged the county a rate of 50 cents per inch or more, we will give them a perfectly good check for a refund on the ground, that we have defrauded the county out of a certain amount of money.

The Davie Record would do us, and all other taxpayers, a favor if they would kindly tell us in their columns just what the rate is that they have been charging the county for printing of all kinds, and then tell us what they charge private business houses for the same advertising. We

Republican National Committee Oppose Payment Soldier Bonus

(By J. F. Leach)

Now dear readers we want you to read every word of the following which was taken from a slip sheet sent out by the Republican National Committee with the hopes that every Republican newspaper in the United States would copy and help pass their "bull" on to the general public:

"REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE
"Weekly News Letter
"Editorial

"To date there are more than 50 measures before the Congress proposing immediate cash payment of World War Veterans' adjusted compensation certificates. General Hines, administrator of Veterans' Affairs, estimates that full payment now instead of in 1945 would cost the government, which is to say the taxpayers—three and one half billion dollars. Not one argument offered by those advocating such a conversion is sound nor is there one that cannot be refuted. On the other hand there are any number of overwhelming good reasons why the Congress should reject all of these proposals.

"From an economic standpoint the payment of three and a half billion dollars at this time would be little short of a calamity working against the interests of the veterans as well as the country as a whole. It would be a paralyzing blow to business at a time when it is just beginning to recover. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has testified that such payment could only be realized through a huge bond issue. The amount required for such an issue represents more than six months' normal bond financing for the entire country. Such an issue coud not fail to depress the whole bond market. Business, being largely dependent on a good market for new securities to supply the needs of new enterprises, would receive a critical set-back. Every dollar diverted into the bond issue would leave one dollar less to carry on the thousand and one enterprises that keep the wheels of the nation in motion. If any one of these measures is enacted into law we can expect a business depression and a period of acute human misery the like of which this country has never known."

The writer was in the service of the United States army for more than a year, at $1.00 per day salary in the States and at something like $44.00 per month while in France for more than eleven months. Of course our alotment and $6.60 cents per month was deducted from the $44.00 which gave me a salary of about $27.50 per month to lodge bullets from the guns of

Another Campaign Pledge Is Fulfilled

Representative John P. LeGrand has succeeded in the passing of a bill in the North Carolina General Assembly to have Davie County put under a primary law and the morning papers of Tuesday said in part that "Davie was put under a primary law without discussion."

Mr. LeGrand promised you this law during the campaign, and he has given it to you and you can rest assured that the next nominee for sheriff in Davie county will get nominated before the 64th ballot is taken.

Now, good readers, cheer up. The next important thing we hope to tell you of is the abolishment of the office of county accountant and welfare. Don't get discouraged, because this will be done just as soon as possible. We know that it will be sad news to some, but it will be HAPPY NEWS TO THE TAXPAYER.

We trust, also, that Mr. LeGrand will pass a law prohibiting more than one member of any family being on the pay roll of Davie county at one time, thus giving all taxpayers a fair chance at the road jobs—and all other jobs that might arise.

DAVIE COUNTY MAKES VERY IMPRESSIVE RECORD; ARE NOW "LIVING AT HOME"

Davie county made an impressive record during 1930 by increasing production of all but two food and feed crops, according to a preliminary survey of five Piedmont counties made by the North Carolina State College Extension Service. The other four counties were Randolph, Chatham, Davidson and Rowan. The total increase in value of food and feed crops in Davie county was $175,656, while the total of such increases for the five counties in 1930, over 1929 figures was $1,060,656, or an average for each county of $212,130. Considering the population of Davie, its record is even more impressive.

The farmers of Davie county are boosting the "Live-at-Home" program and did much to help in the increase of food and feed

Local Legion Post Hold Enthusiastic Bonus Meeting

In line with the program adopted by the North Carolina Department of THE AMERICAN LEGION for contemporary meetings throughout the State, Davie County Post No. 174 met in the court room Thursday night and listened to a thrilling address by Legionaire Robert S. McNeill on the subject of immediate payment of adjusted compensation certificates and then went into an executive session for the transaction of much important business. At the same hour and on the same date 131 other posts in the State held similar meetings the purpose being to bring to the attention of all veterans of the World War the valuable work being done for them by THE AMERICAN LEGION and to emphasize the importance of every veteran's associating himself or herself with the organization to the end that THE LEGION may truly represent all of the men and women who were in Uncle Sam's military or naval service during the World War.

In his exhaustive discussion of THE LEGION and its activities since 1919, Mr. McNeill related many details hitherto unrevealed to the members of his audience. His remarks disclosed a remarkable familiarity with Legion history and the organization's achievements in behalf of the disabled and their dependents since the date of its inception. His treatment of the legislation now pending in Congress designed to relieve the economic condition of each veteran by cash payment of adjusted service certificates was particularly enlightening and pleasing to the Legionaires, who gave him frequent applause. At the conclusion of Mr. McNeill's address, the meeting voted unanimously in favor of the immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates at their present face value, which is the maximum amount appearing on the face of each certificate.

On motion, duly seconded, Messrs. Robert S. McNeill and Grady N. Ward were appointed as a committee to draft and forward to Department Headquarters suitable resolution protesting against the indifference and lack of attention to duty on the part of the present officials of the U. S. Veterans Bureau at Charlotte. It was pointed out by the post service officer that claims were not receiving the consideration which they deserved at the hands of the Bureau; that unreasonable delays almost generally occurred and that physical examinations conducted under direction of the Bureau were constantly superficial and perfunctory.

The meeting Thursday night was largely attended and much

ANNUAL REPORT OF LIBERTY SUNDAY SCHOOL DURING THE YEAR OF 1930

We had an average of 85 in our Sunday School during the entire year. An average of enrollment 170. Paid to Sunday School 100.00. Paid to Childrens Home $41.07. Visitors to our Sunday School 338. Number of visits made to the interest of the Sunday School, absentees, none. Sunday School goers and sick was 1136. Number of scholars present every Sunday 32. One of 5, father, mother, and 3 children made perfect attendance during the entire year. And they had to drive four miles of which two miles was a bad country road.

We hope to do better work during the coming year than we did in the past year of 1930, and if anyone wishes to join or visit our Sunday School, we extend a hearty welcome to do so.

THAT SALES TAX AGAIN

We all seem to shy at the idea of a states sales tax. The merchants especially dread the idea, and there are good grounds; for keeping up with taxes on goods sold would be a great big job. But as a matter of fact a sales tax would be the easiest way of collecting revenue for public purposes. We kick when the sheriff pokes a bill under our nose for a specified amount due on taxes. We pay it only because we have to, but how we do smart. It looks like highway robbery to most of us. But we buy goods on which there is a tax, or a tariff, pay for the goods and the extra tax, all going under the head of the price of the goods or the article and we think nothing of it. The same is true with regard to taxes, or revenue, raised by the national government. We pay no direct taxes to the national government as such, that is, no national tax on property. But think of the big amount of money raised annually by this government. And with the exception of income tax, inheritence tax and such like we pay no money to the support of our army and navy and to pay the other millions and billions of expense of running our national government, save in what is in effect nothing but a sales tax. We pay it in the way of tariff. The tariff is laid on the goods, paid and the extra cost—to with the amount of tariff levied is charged up to the consumer and paid by the consumer. Take sugar for instance. It figures only as a minor item of expense to the average American family, and yet last year every American paid a sales tax on sugar of $2.23, but how many of them knew they were paying that sales tax. Here is the way, as told by the Cleveland Star:

"The consumption of sugar in the United States during 1930 was 11.7 pounds for each inhabitant, or a total amount of 12,246,000,000 pounds. This was an increase over 1929 of 40,000,000 pounds. Sugar is cheap, but however cheap it might be there is a tariff duty of two cents per pound on sugar which means that every man, woman and child paid last year in the Federal government $2.23 toward the operation of the government. This is a small item if it were all, but is one of many ways the consumer pays for government.

The new tariff enacted under the Hoover administration raised the tariff on sugar, ostensibly to protect the sugar industry in this country. A gentleman from a Western sugar beet state recently informed The Star that the government could better afford to pay the American sugar beet growers $500 per acre not to plant any sugar beets, then take off the tariff and save the consumers in the United States many millions of dollars. Most of our raw sugar comes from Cuba where it is now selling at $1.35 per hundred pounds. Sugar growers are in the same fix as the cotton planters."

And yet we squirm and shy and grunt when our state legislature talks about a sales tax law.

ALL THE LOCAL NEWS

Did you notice that front page of the Enterprise last week, that every article carried was purely local? That's what we are sure our readers want. We can't compete with the big dailies in carrying the state, national and world wide news, but we do claim that we can surpass the most aggressive of them in carrying the news of Davie County. We want to make this newspaper purely a local sheet, one in which shall be recorded all the worthwhile happenings of this entire county worth printing. Our friends can be of great service to us in this effort, as can also our various community correspondents. So come on with your news items.

SIGNED CONTRIBUTIONS

We invite readers of this paper who have something they would like to say through our columns over their own private signatures to send in their copy and we will see that it is printed. Recently we have carried numerous contributed articles and we believe these are proving popular with our readers. The only suggestion we would make would be, make it as brief as possible and don't be any more abusive than may be necessary. Just talk about anything you care to. You have a right to express your opinion and remember that others who would read your communication in the Enterprise will also be interested.

OUGHT TO HELP LAND OWNERS

It looks like the state is going to take over the cost of six months public schools. That will help the land owners some. In fact, it should take the taxes levied by the counties down considerably. And if any thing in the country needs relief from burdensome taxation it is farm property. A land owner who rents out his farm can hardly get enough income from it to pay taxes levied on same. That ought not to be the case. The state should do all in its power to encourage agriculture, for upon successful agriculture must the state and all businesses therein largely depend for prosperity.

TALKED TOO MUCH

General Butler indulged his tongue too freely when he went off in a talk at Philadelphia, we believe it was, telling about Mussolini running over a child and not even stopping his automobile. The Italian government raised a kick and Secretary Adams of the Navy ordered Butler under arrest. But why is it that a man in this country can say about anything about the president he pleases, but gets arrested when he talks ugly about the big Italian director?

But maybe we better hush up lest Mussolini might procure our arrest some day soon.

WOULD HELP DEPOSITORS

The state Corporation Commission has brought suit against the directors of the Bank of Union, Monroe institution which went broke last April. Asking for a verdict against them of five hundred thousand. The law is mighty strict on bank directors and no doubt the Monroe officials may be forced to take some loss along with the others who had more than three quarter million dollars deposited in the Bank of Union when it closed its doors. That five hundred thousand which the corporation Commission is asking would help the depositors quite a bit.

Press Comment

CANNON'S BEDFELLOW

Cleveland Star.

Writing under the head "Embarrassing. To Say The Least," The Asheville Citizen has this to say:

"Josephus Daniels, staunch Democrat as well as staunch Methodist and prohibitionist, cannot refrain from gloating over the fact that Bishop Cannon's political bedfellow in Virginia, Judge Anderson, in his individual report as a member of the Wickersham commission turns his back on the Eihteenth amendment and recommends the setting up of a national dispensary system modeled after that of Sweden.

"The Anderson plan may not be identical with that advocated by Governor Smith in the 1928 campaign but the kinship is certainly close. Has Judge Anderson changed his views in the past two years, or why did he and Bishop Cannon join forces against the Smith candidacy? Bishop Cannon at least said that they were fighting to save prohibition."

DEPENDS ON WHOSE OX IS GORED

Gastonia Gazette.

Tax reduction is a good thing—for the other fellow. That is the way The Morganton News-Herald sizes up the economy talk that comes from Raleigh these days.

Everybody wants taxes reduced and salaries cut, that is, everybody's but his own. Says the Morganton paper:

"If you will try to get a detached view of the present situation in North Carolina and let your sense of humor assert itself, you will find during these months when the legislature is in session, some degree of amusement in what you observe. Everybody is agreeing that taxes (his own taxes) must be reduced but if the salary he is receiving happens to be derived from tax money he holds up his hands in holy horror if anybody hints reducing that. The merchant is opposing the sales tax, the farmer is grumbling about land tax, the manufacturer thinks he is already oppressed and will violently oppose any further tax on his product. None of us are willing to be deprived of any of the benefits and protections which come to us from tax sources—at least none of the things which we enjoy individually—but we want somebody else to foot the bills. Many people seem to think that public funds come from some miraculous source, like manna showered from heaven, and that the collection of taxes is oppression, pure and simple.

"There is somewhat the same attitude toward economy. All of us believe it is a good thing—for the other fellow."

PRAISES COUNTRY PAPERS

Morganton News-Herald.

John Casey, associate professor in the School of Journalism of the University of Oklahoma, speaking of the county newspaper, says:

"Without its newspaper the small-town American community would be like a school without a teacher or a church without a pastor. In the aggregate, the country newspaper determines the outcome of more elections, exerts a greater influence for constructive community progress, is read longer by more members of the family and constitutes, with its millions of circulation and quadrupled millions of readers, a better advertising medium than any other group of newspapers or periodical publications.

"When properly conducted it cultivates so intensively its home news field that city dailies, farm journals and general magazines circulate in the same territory become only secondary influences.

"Through service to its community, the country newspaper will not merely survive; it will continue to flourish as the most representative, most distinctive, most wholesome type of journalism America has produced."

REDUCE LAND TAX

Jackson County Journal.

Take the heavy tax burden off the real estate and bank assets will become again liquid, the agents liquidating their affairs can realize more money with which to pay depositors and the owners of farms and homes will be enabled to again get their heads above the financial waters that are about to submerge them.

Just how this is to be accomplished is a matter for the General Assembly to work out. The people are expecting it to reach a solution. The loans that counties have made to the state highway commission for the building of the state highways must be repaid by the state, or at least the interest burden must be assumed by it. This is only simple justice and common honesty, and would furnish measureable relief to some of the most heavily taxed counties.

The item of taxation that is the heaviest is that imposed by the people upon themselves for the support of the public schools. The constitution provides for a six state system of public schools, and the time has arrived for the state to assume the burden thus imposed, and to raise the money for their support from sources other than direct tax upon property. Every child in North Carolina is entitled to equal educational advantages, by virtue of being a North Carolina child. This cannot be provided without state control and state support of the public schools.

There are several means by which money could be raised. One would be a luxury tax. It is easier for a man to pay 1 to 2 cents school tax when he buys a package of cigarettes than it is for him to pay $100 or so for that purpose, all in one lump, once a year. It would also garner considerable money from a lot of boys and girls who toil not, neither do they spin, but who smoke cigarettes, drink drinks, and use cosmetics. It would make worth at least that much to the state and the community.

Another source would be the levy of a consumption tax on electric power, such as we now have on gasoline. It would not be an onerous tax upon the people, and would raise the revenue for the state school system. It would be fair, just, equitable.

MACHINE IN CAPITAL GRINDS UP BILLIONS IN OLD BILLS

Washington, Feb. 1.—The large sized bank notes, which were abandoned 19 months ago in favor of smaller currency, are rapidly disappearing from the nation's pocketbook.

They have been replaced so rapidly that only about one-eighth of a total of nearly $5,000,000 still is outstanding.

The small notes proved so popular that use of the old currency soon stopped. It is a rare thing nowadays to receive a large note.

Bills Macerated

In the 119 months 721,000,000 bills of the old currency have been redeemed and gone the way of all old currency—to the macerator in the treasury and bureau of engraving and printing.

Much of the pulp have been dumped on waste piles, for the government stopped selling it about the time the new notes went into circulation because the price dropped so low there was no profit.

When the small currency first appeared there was $4,997,840,000 of the large currency outstanding. Since then the government has macerated a total of $4,838,000,000 of it, leaving approximately $610,000,000 outstanding.

New Money Saves

United States gold and silver certificates redeemed amounted to $1,840,778,729, federal reserve notes to $2,447,867,100 and national bank notes to approximately $100,000,000.

The government is saving money through adoption of the smaller notes. In the first year of its operation officials estimated that use of the smaller, dough-er paper saved the government approximately $2,000,000. In future years that amount may be increased if it is found the small currency outlasts the old notes.

claim that they have over charged the county, and want them to tell us whether we are right or not. We have laid charges similar to these at their door before and they have not answered, but we want them to tell the taxpayers all about it.

We charge the county 36 cents per inch for this kind of advertising, and that is exactly what we charge Bill Jones for the same thing. We have never had "a special contract" with the county, and would not charge them more EVEN IF WE DID HAVE TO SEND IT OUT OF TOWN TO HAVE IT PRINTED FOR US.

We have no axe to grind with the Davie Record, and we wish them much success in this old world, but we do contend that the rate charged the county by them should be the same rate charged any other advertiser. Check up on their bills and see if you can find a 40 cent rate to the county.

The exhibit shows that the Record received $823.85 from the county during 1926. An average of about $69.15 per month.

During the month of January, 1926, the Davie Record (according to the exhibit) received $504.60 from the county of Davie for printing. During January, 1931 the Mocksville Enterprise has received exactly $8.50.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE OPPOSE PAYMENT OF SOLDIERS BONUS

the entire German army.

While we were dodging these bullets in France for less than a dollar a day our friend Mr. Mellon and possibly every other member of the Republican National Committee were back here in the states riding in big limousine automobile and eating ham and eggs and drawing great big salaries from the United States government, or other high paying jobs while we were eating "tinwillie" and riding 60 people in a box car or hiking over the bullet riddled battle fields of France just to help keep Mr. Mellon and his rotten gang of petty politicians in a high paying job.

And we also remember that back in the days of '17, '18 and '19 that the entire country was yelling "there is nothing too good for you boys, and we will remember you when you get back."

Now Mr. Mellon and his Republican National Committee certainly are remembering us now. They are going to do all in their power to keep the United States government from paying us this compensation, when, after we have secured it, together with our regular salary while in the army for the entire duration of the World War would not amount to as much, possibly as a month's pay for Mr. Mellon.

The whole truth of this matter is that the Republican National Committee is pledged to the big interests of the country and do not give a rap whether we ex-service men now live or die. Yes, they must protect the "BIG INTERESTS" and let the soldier go to the dickens. I have been reading very interestingly about this matter ever since its first appearance, and I find that every Democratic member of the United States Senate and Congress favor the payment of these certificates right now (if they do not favor it they are certainly not going to say anything against it) while on the other hand practically every member of the National Committee Republican is BITTERLY AGAINST IT.

Now we all know that Mr. Mellon was forced by the National Committee to make the statement above refered to and he very well knows that the payment of these certificates at this time would certainly do more to relieve this dreadful depression which we are now facing than every thing in the whole world that the Republicans party has ever done, or ever will do.

What is a few dollars to the country as to compare with being a stepping block for a German cannon ball? What kind of a salary would Mr. Mellon and his National Committee wanted for their services if they themselves had happened to have been one of these "stopping blocks" or an ex-service man. Oh, you may say that's different. Yes it is different. So different that this same committee does not give a rap what happens to the ex-soldiers—both Democrats and Republicans—just so long as they can control the "Big Interests" and get what is coming from them.

Mr. Ex-service man—I mean the man that saved the country and the entire world during the years '17, '18 and '19 what do you think of this thing anyway? Are you willing to let these men continue to run the country and deny you of everything in the world that you are justly due? Let Mr. Mellon and his Republican National Committee fight war like the one we fought and then there will not be money enough in the whole world to pay even one of them what they would expect.

WHERE WOULD MR. MELLON AND EVERY MEMBER OF THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE BE TODAY IF IT HAD NOT BEEN FOR THE EX-SERVICE MEN.

enthusiasm was displayed. Messages were present from every section of the County and all in attendance pledged themselves to work for a bigger and stronger LEGION during the current year. It was decided to hold the next monthly meeting at Cooleemee on the night of February 13th. Commander Ray Moore has issued a general invitation to all Ex-service men and women in the County to attend this meeting whether they belong to THE LEGION or not.

At the conclusion of Thursday night's meeting five new members were enrolled, thus bringing the post's paid-up membership to date to 53.

for the subject has been the result among the pupils. At the beginning of the subject, "Study of Earth as a whole," we decided that we would work up a geography vocabulary before we attempted to be really study the great subject.

We now have about forty words that we call geography words having had only three lessons of this type. For each of these we can give a simple group of words on words that have the same meaning. We say, for instance that nature is another word for God, a continent is a name given to a large island. In teaching these words we have used one device that has been a great help Continent was not so easily grasped until a pan of water was brought in the classroom. When a mixture of clay and sand was deposited in bottom of pan and built above surface of water, island or continent immediately meant something to the children.

Through this process we are going to use to make clear the meaning of many other words. In order that we can study geography with a much greater understanding and more interested than we have been since school started.

Revenue For Statewide Term Is Problem Before Assembly

By M. R. Dunnagan in Charlotte Observer.

Raleigh, Feb. 1.—Rarely has there been so much interest created and so much oratory turned loose in the General Assembly of North Carolina as during the past week on the so-called act which fixes the policy of the legislative body as requiring the state to take over and operate the six month's school term, a measure which was adopted in both houses by healthy majorities. By it, direction is given to provide a bill raising the necessary revenue from sources other than ad valorem taxes.

While the school measure held the spotlight and consumed three fourths of the meeting time of both houses during the week, with three night sessions, a side skirmish, dealing with the reorganization of the state highway commission, taking over the county roads and raising the gasoline tax to six cents was fought out in committee and it gives promises of taking the center of the stage this week when Governor Gardner expects to bring it and the constitutional convention mat ter before the General Assembly.

Continue Activity

The appropriations committees have been and will continue to be active for some weeks, hearing departments, institutions and agencies of the state, which are seeking more funds for operation the next two years than the advisory budget commission allowed in its recommendations in the appropriation bill. Finance committees are considering the budget revenue bill, which increases the revenue about $3,000,000 and will soon take up the several sales tax bills which have been referred to it. From $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 in new revenue will be required to provide the state-operated schools, under the measure adopted, and a sales tax may have to be resorted to.

Active proponents of the school measure are inclined toward a sales tax, at the same time saying the power and tobacco companies should pay more taxes, income taxes should be increased and a tax placed on stocks in foreign corporations. They were successful in blocking amendments which would provide state operation of the schools, when and if sufficient revenue could be found without placing undue burdens on any of the taxpayers of the state.

Would Find Revenue

Opponents of the measure, practically all of whom said they were not opposed to the state-operating the schools thought it sensible to make every effort to find the revenue before adopting a policy which they thought not be able to carry through. Only one or two references were made to the loss of local self-government through state operation of the schools, by which county and local officers would lose all authority in school matters. The distress from the economic depression is considered the main reason for such a drastic measure.

Close on the heels of the enactment of the measure came a bill directing the state superintendent of public instruction and state board of equalization to prescribe a minimum uniform scholastic standard for a six months' term, fix uniform salaries for superintendents, principals and teachers and all costs determine the number of high schools in each county, create a central purchasing agent for the schools, start by May 1, 1932, to reassess and equalize the property values in all counties, and levy an ad valorem tax of 20 cents on the 100 property valuation all over the state, the proceeds to be paid into the state treasury and the state paying the balance of the cost. County commissioners could add 20 cents for longer terms higher salaries or other costs, and cities could supplement the term and pay teachers what they desire. The counties and districts would not be relieved of their bond and debt service.

County Government

County Government would be further improved and cities, towns and special tax districts brought under state financial control, as counties now are, by bills introduced, with administrative sanction. Uniform blanks for records and bookkeeping systems would be established in all counties by the county government advisory commission and banks named as depositors would be required to furnish surety bonds or United States, North Carolina, county or municipal bonds to cover the deposits, thus insuring safety of public money.

Justices of the peace will be limited in number and restricted in activities if two bills introduced become law. One provides for election of two justices in each township and the resident judge may appoint one additional for each 20,000 population, all to take oath before the clerk of the court and serve for two years. Commissions of all justices now serving, appointed by the governor or elected by the General Assembly would expire the first Monday in December, 1932. The other bill would require all justics to secure all blanks for processes, wants, warrents, bonds, affidavits, judgments, summonses, claim and delivery, attachment and ejectment papers, each numbered, from clerks of the court, and to account for each paper, making report of disposition of all actions to the clerk. They would have a secure certificate of the court clerk before sending processes out of the county in which they reside.

County Criminal Court

Another bill would allow county commissioners in any of the counties to establish criminal county courts, meeting monthly at specified times, with original jurisdiction in cases below felonies, and binding over in felonies. The officers would be judge, associate judge and clerk, who shall be the clerk of superior court, unless he declines, the court having county-wide jurisdiction. Jury trials would be provided on demand of either side, and appeals taken to the superior court. The bill would not interfere with present county courts.

Bus Legislation

Passenger buses and motor truck lines would have hard sledding if a batch of bills introduced, admittedly sponsored by railroads, are enacted. One would require a return of all property, tangible, intangible and otherwise, for taxation, including "roll ing stock." Another fixes the method of securing franchise laying down rules as to baggage, separate compartments for the races, stations, drivers permits and complete regulation by the corporation commission. Still another limits the length, width, height and load of trucks permitting only one trailer or semi-trailer and requiring them to operate at all time within the line of travel of the truck they follow. Speed of trucks, if the capacity is more than two tons, would be limited to 25 miles an hour.

Lawyers would be given greater leeway and fees in workmen's compensation cases by a bill introduced. It would let them and their clients agree on fees, without control by the industrial commission, and hearings would be held like those in superior courts by service of summons and filing of pleadings by both sides and the losing party would have to pay all the costs.

Cost of Foreclosures

Costs of foreclosure sales for taxes would be greatly reduced by the bill which would limit attorney's fees or allowance for such fees for attorneys regularly employed by the counties, to $8 each when not more than 10 actions are brought; $6 when not more than 20, and $4 each, when more than 20 are brought.

Other bills introduced and of general interest follow:

Increase state highway patrol from 37 to about 125, and provide funds for its operation by license tax on drivers of $1.25 for the first and $1 a year for renewals, and $5 a year for chauffeurs.

Income Tax

Raise maximum rate of tax on income from 6 to 10 per cent, remove the constitutional exemption and leave exemption to the legislature.

Provide ready method of abolishing taxes in special tax districts.

Require quarterly reports by state highway commission to all county commissioners of apportionments and expenditures of highway funds in their respective counties.

Increase pensions of disabled Confederate veterans from $365 to $600 a year, payable monthly.

Reimburse counties from state highway fund county allotments, on basis of area and population, cash donations, loans and amounts spent by the counties on highways of the state system.

Refund proportionate part of license fees paid for plates for automobiles burned or otherwise rendered useless.

Highway Signals

Prevent erection of electrical or mechanical signals on state highway system, except as approved by the motor vehicle commissioner.

Provide that certificate from the commissioner of revenue as to the owner of an automobile with specified license number and involved in damage or injury be prima facie evidence of ownership of the car and that it was operated by or at the direction of the owner.

Big increase in license fees charged peddlers and including those engaged in selling bankrupted or fire stocks of goods.

SENATE PASSES SIX MONTHS' SCHOOL BILL

Raleigh, Jan. 29.—The state senate tonight passed the MacLean school bill committing the General Assembly to state support of the six months' constitutional term, thus enacting the measure into law as it had been previously passed by the house.

The vote was 33 to 17.

The roll call follows:

For: Baggett, Bennett, Blount, Clark, Clarkson, Dortch, Folger, Glover, Grant, Gravely, Hardy, Harmon, Hatchett, Hinsdale, Johnson of Duplin, Johnson of Moore, Jones, Lawrence, Lindsey, Loyill, Lynch, McKee, McLean, McSwain, Peel, Powell, Price, Pritchett, Rowell, Uzzell, Ward of Beaufort, Ward of Craven, Zollicoffer. Total 33.

Against: Bernard, Burrus, Burt, Campbell, Clement, Dunlap, Grier Gwyn, Haywood, Hendren, Pitts, Horton, Nixon, Rankin, Umstead, Whedbee and Williams. Total 17.

The vote came after more than nine and a half hours of debate on the bill in the upper house.

Three amendments to the measure were killed, the most important being that by Campbell of New Hanover to amend the act by making it read the state shall support the six months term by taxes other than ad valorem "when feasible and without undue hardship on the taxpayers and when suitable administration machinery is set up."

May Explain Votes

Two earlier efforts to bring a vote on the bill failed. Every senator who desired to speak was allowed the floor and on the roll call vote every member was given the chance to explain his vote.

Tonight Senators Johnson, McKee, Umstead, Jones, Blount, Hicks, Gravely, Gwyn and Lynch spoke for or against the measure.

Rivers D. Johnston of Duplin, president pro tem of the senate, opened tonight's session with an appeal in behalf of the measure "for the sake of the youth of the state."

He read a newspaper clipping saying the schools of his county may have to close because of lack of funds.

Office Tax Foreclosures

Senator Johnson said the MacLean bill would greatly relieve land of its heavy burden of ad valorem taxes, pointing out there have been 2,800 tax foreclosures in Duplin county alone since 1929. He denied state supported schools was "an eastern idea," declaring no section of the state "can live to itself." Land tax reduction is absolutely necessary, he continued, adding that one way to get it was through state supported schools and state maintained roads. "We will take up roads later," he added. He argued that the school was a plank of the state democratic platform.

"I had a stubborn case of constipation after a very severe spell of grip," says Mr. John B. Hutchison, of Neosho, Mo. "When I would get constipated, I'd feel so sleepy, tired and worn-out.

"When one feels this way, work is much harder to do, especially farm work. I would have dizzy headaches when I could hardly see to work, but after I read of Black-Draught, I began taking it. I did not have the headaches any more.

"When I have the sluggish, tired feeling, I take a few doses of Black-Draught, and it seems to carry off the poison and I feel just fine. I use Black-Draught at regular intervals. It is easy to take and I know it helps me."

THE BEAUTY OF NIGHT

Little stars so clear and bright,
How do you shine every night?
At my window looking through,
How often have I gazed at you
And really wondered if you knew,
That I was looking out at you.
Big old moon that shines so sweet
Every night when we're asleep
With your smiles so bright and gay,
Lighting the world till another day.

THE SEASONS

In spring, the flowers begin to peep.
Then old winter goes to sleep.
In summer when the leaves are green,
What a beautiful sight there is to be seen!
In autumn all the leaves turn brown,
Then they fall tumbling to the ground.
Now winter comes, the flowers are dead,
The snow lies banked all over their head.

ADVICE TO A LOVER

By S. Charles Jellicoe

Oh, if you love her.
Show her the best of you;
So will you move her
To be, with the rest of you,
Coldness and jealousy
Cannot but seem to her
Signs that tempest lurks
Where was sunbeam to her.

Patience and tenderness
Still will awake in her
Blessing of new sunshine,
Though the storm break for her
Love, she will know, for her,
Like the blue firmament,
Under the tempest lies
Gentle and permanent.

Nor will she ever
Gentleness find the less
When the storm overblown
Leaveth clear kindliness.
Deal with her tenderly,
Skylike above her,
Smile on her waywardness,
Oh, if you love her!

NOW HAVE MANY TRUE AND LOYAL FRIENDS

Some twenty years ago, I came to Davie County, the native home of my husband. I did not think I would like it, but I have found many friends and true ones, and I don't think I would like to leave now for it feels like Home Sweet Home to me. This is where my boy was brought up and he calls it home.

Speaking of the young people, they are just about what the old people have made of them, most of the old people have gone astray and the young ones have no one to guide them. Our Good Book tells us we are like sheep gone astray but lets us all try to come back and let our feet stand within the gates.

Our feet shall stand within thy gates
Bright city of our God
How blest the hope that fills our heart
As we the desert plod.

Our feet shall stand within thy gates
With hearts well tuned to sing
Eternal praises to the lamb
Who did Salvation bring.

Our feet shall stand within thy gates
Our eyes shall him behold,
Who purchased us with his own blood
And gave us wealth untold.

Our feet shall stand within thy gates
And caress the golden street
In fellowship with all the saved
Who round himself shall meet.

Our feet shall stand within thy gates
Our tongues shall roll the song
Of everlasting thanks to him,
To whom all praise belong.

Our feet shall stand within thy gates
And never wander more
Our hearts shall then never feel the chill,
That now oft grieves us sore.

Lord, haste that day when thou shalt come
And bid thy ransomed rise,
To pass within those gates of light,
To share thine endless joys.
(Psalms 122:2)

CHRIST IS CRUCIFIED

(By Viola Smith)

Two days more and the Jews would keep the feast of the Passover. To do this each man took a lamb to the temple and killed it on the altar. The priest burned the fat but the man took the rest of the lamb home, it was cooked and the family ate of it in the night.

And now for the last time Jesus and his twelve apostles journeyed down from Jerusalem to Bethany, while back in the city the chief priests and scribes sat plotting how they might do away with him.

Now Satan entered into the heart of Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve. He went secretly to the chief priests and asked, "What will you give me to deliver him to you?" and they bargained with him for thirty pieces of silver, (about twenty-four dollars) which in those days was the blood money of a slave. From that hour Judas sought an opportunity to betray Jesus to him.

The day before the Passover, the Apostles asked Jesus where they should set out their feast, for they had no house or home of their own.

Jesus said to Peter and John, Go to Jerusalem, and there you shall met a man carrying a jug of water. Follow him into the house he enters and say to the man who lives there, 'The master bids thee show us a room where He shall come to eat the feast with His friends! He will show you a large room upstairs. There spread the feast."

And they went and found it just as He had said to them, and while Jesus spent the day in restful quiet in the home of Mary and Martha and Lazarus, His Apostles made ready the Pass over feast.

At evening Jesus went up to Jerusalem and to the upper room with his twelve, when the supper was ready, He laid His garments aside, poured water into a basin and began washing His disciples feet, drying them with the cloth girded about Him. But impetuous Peter drew back, saying, "Lord, dost thou wash my feet?" "What I do, thou knowest not now said Jesus to him, "but thou shalt understand hereafter."

Peter exclaimed, "Thou shalt never wash my feet," to which Jesus made answer, "If I do not wash thee, thou hast no part with me."

Lord, not my feet only, but my hands and my head also," yielded Peter.

All were reclining at the table and eating when. Jesus grew troubled and said, "In truth I tell you that one of you shall betray me."

The disciples looked questioning at one another and began to ask, "Is it I, Lord?"

Now there was one of the twelve of whom Jesus was most fond. This one was John and Peter beckoned to him to ask which one, as John lay with his head on Jesus breast, he looked up and said, "Lord, who is it?"

The Jesus dipped a morsel of bread in the dish. "He is to whom I shall give sop," he said, and handed it to Judas Iscariot, adding "What thou doest, do quickly."

As Judas had charge of the bag in which the money was kept, some of them though Jesus bade him buy things they needed for the feast or give something to the poor. When Judas had received the bread he rose and went out of the house.

And it was night.

When he had gone, Jesus said to the others, "I shall be with you but a short time, but ere I go, I give you a new law—law of love. As I have loved you, so shall ye love each other. By this shall all men know that ye love me."

"Lord, where doest thou go? asked Peter.

Jesus answered, "where I go thou canst not follow now, but thou shalt follow me later."

"Lord! why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for Thy sake."

Then Jesus said to Peter, "I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow twice till thou hast sworn thrice, thou dost not know me."

And as they ate, Jesus took bread, blessed it and broke it and gave it to them, saying, "Take and eat." Then He took some wine and in a cup and when he had thanked the son of God to do as they willed with Him.

When Judas saw that Jesus was to be put to death, he bitterly regretted that he had brought such a fate on one who had done no wrong. He carried back to the chief priest the thirty pieces they had given him and said, "I have done a great sin to give up to you one who had done no wrong." "What is that to us? See thou to that," they answered in contempt.

Then Judas flung down the silver on the temple floor and went out and hung himself.

When the men of war took off the purple robe and clothed Jesus in His own garments, they led Him forth to die.

On His back they bound the cross on which He was to be crucified, and through the streets of Jerusalem He bore it to a place called Calvary, not far from the city gates. A great throng followed, some rejoicing in the success of the plot to do away with Jesus; some through idle curiousity, a few with hearts bowed low with grief. On the way they met a man named Simon and Jesus being near to fainting in the fierce heat of the day and under the weight of the cross, they compelled him to carry the cross.

There on Calvary they crucified the Son of God, and with Him they crucified two men who were thieves, their crosses one on the right and the other on the left of Jesus. Then they sat down to watch Jesus, and the soldiers. And at the top of the cross Pilate had put up the words, JESUS OF NAZARETH, KING OF THE JEWS.

This did not please the chief priests.

Write not the king of the Jews, they objected, "but He said I am king of the Jews."

But Pilate answered bluntly, "What I have written, I have written."

Many Jews as they passed by shook their heads in derision at Him and said, "He saved others; himself He cannot save," and the chief priests and scribes mocked Him and said, "He trusted in God; let God deliver Him now.

One of the thieves jeered at Jesus, saying If thou art the Christ, save thyself and us," but the other thief said, "Doost thou not fear God when thou art so soon to die? It is right we should die for our sins, but this man has done no wrong and then to Jesus, "Think of me when Thou art on Thy throne."

"This day," answered Jesus, "thou shalt be with me where God is."

Now watching afar off were many women who had ministered to Jesus in Galilee, but near Him stood His mother and John the disciples Jesus loved most and He said first to Mary, "Woman, behold thy son," and then to the disciple, "Behold thy mother," and from that day John took Mary to his own home.

From the sixth to the ninth hour, that is from twelve to three o'clock the sun was darkened and it was as night though all the land.

As the afternoon wore on Jesus drew near to death. In Jerusalem and earthquake tore in two pieces the curtain that shut in the holy of holies in the temple.

In the temple court they began to slay the lambs for the Passover, while out on the hillside Jesus died as the lamb of God.

crops in the state over 1929. The increase for the entire state now appears certain to reach the $2,000,000 mark, whereas preliminary surveys, made hastily one month ago, placed the increase at only $19,000,000.

Davie had a decrease in its wheat crop of 29 per cent, due to the wet fall of 1929, which cut the yield in almost every county in the entire state. None of the five referred to showed a wheat increase, and Extension workers feel, that, despite the decrease, Davie and others did well. Davie had in bread sows, with a decrease of nine per cent. But this decrease was true of all the five except Davidson. Davie showed an increase in poultry, whereas there was a decided decrease in the state as a whole, as there was in brood sows in most counties. Davie increased its hay crop by 31 per cent—a good sign of the enthusiasm of the farmers of the county for the "Live-at-Home" program as a way to prosperity.

Figures on sorghum, home garden produce, commercial truck, dairy cows and barley not exact but there were increases for the state as a whole for the first three, as follows: sorghum, 66 per cent; home gardens produce, 10 per cent; and commercial truck, 6 per cent. It is believed that Davie will be found to have substantial increases for these crops, when final figures are available. The barley crop also is believed on the increase.

Davie reduced its tobacco acreage by six per cent but increased its cotton acreage by 10 per cent. In view of the fact that the county increases its surpluses of food and feed crops, these two "money" crop increases are not considered important, one way or the other, due also to the fact that no farmer made any money to speak of on cotton or tobacco this past year.

Davie increased its production of the following: cotton, 10 per cent; corn, 12 per cent; oats, 24 per cent; hay, 31 per cent; soybeans, approximately 100 per cent; cowpeas, 16 per cent; Irish potatoes, 80 per cent; sweet potatoes, 65 per cent; poultry, four per cent.

Decreases were found in the following: tobacco, 6 per cent; brood sows, 9 per cent.

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter carrier, is the domestic drudge of the humble home where her mother is also little except bemoan the fact that she has "seven days" and her sister Lil, who works in a beauty shop, lies abed late. Maggie has to get the family breakfast before she starts out to her job in the Five-and-Ten-Cent Store.

There's a new boy at the Five-and-Ten, Joe Grant. He tells Maggie that he has been assigned to work as her helper in the stock room. He seems rather dumb, but she helps him through his first day at the store and shares her lunch with him in a cubby hole of a place that belongs to a mattress factory next door to the Five-and-Ten.

They are looking over some cheap picture cards. One of them has a motto that strikes Maggie's fancy. "The way to begin the ideal life is to begin." She and Joe talk about that and Joe is surprised that the girl has higher standards than he had suspected. When he goes home that night he is thinking about Maggie. And his home is the home of the owner of the Mack Five and Ten-Cent Stores, though Maggie does not suspect that he is the boss' son.

Maggie, at home, begins to suspect that her mother's complaints are due to that lady's belief that happiness depends upon material things, while at the store she continues to surprise Joe by her appreciation of the realities of life.

Joe knew that Maggie was falling in love with him before Maggie discovered it. But he was a little slow in discovering that he, in turn, was falling in love with Maggie. But he admitted to himself that she admired him for her wax gowns, and by the time all the store began to notice something different about him

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"But now, listen, Joe," she resumed seriously, "here's what I want to ask you. Could anyone who wasn't born to it—lady—now, I mean, Frinstance, like me—my mother talks a lot about my grandmother Fetherich—but could any mother—" she hesitated—"you wouldn't say she was always puttin' others first, and thinkin-ger all of you-ger others before she does herself. You couldn't—honest!—say that, Joe. So that—" Again she paused. "Lizabeth positively is not a lady!" she admitted regretfully. "Well, anyway, I do not think Liz is a lady—not yet, anyway. Joe—do you think?"

Again she floundered. "I guess I couldn't!" she said hastily, shrinking back, gallant, and he saw she was trying to save his feelings. "You don't have to tell me, Joe," she said. "Maggie, I not only believe you could, but I believe you will!"

"Well, if you say so," she almost sang, and she rattled joyously away.

On the next Sunday he went to see her.

He reached the Johnson cottage in the neighborhood of three o'clock.

He had to wait a few, cold, wet, silent minutes before tentatively, guiltily, approaching through the house, notified him that it had been heard.

Miss Elizabeth Johnson admitted him. For years of unwilling guidance—for Lil, after a shout of "Maggie! Man here!" had almost immediately disappeared into what little proved to be her bedroom door,—Joe had followed the little hall into an empty dining room smelling of cutting apples and cake, and had put his head in at the kitchen doorway.

Ma Johnson, a heavy, woollen kimono tied about her ample form with draggled tassels, was in the rocker.

At the sink stood a nondescript, forlorn little figure that Joe could not for some minutes at all positively identify with the gallant picture he had formed of Maggie's father.

Behind the table and between the sink and the stove was Maggie. She looked at him and said obligatorily:

"Well, what do you know! I never heard you ring. Did it, Joe? Joe Grant! Joe, have you had dinner?"

"Just up from the table. Hello, Maggie," Joe said, grinning.

"This is my mother, miss you acquainted with my father; Pop, this is Joe Grant," said Maggie.

It was evident that he was not favorably impressed by Maggie's friend.

"I didn't know you expected a caller, Maggie," he said.

"Well, Ma. Sit down, Joe. You don't have to finish those if you don't want to, Pa. I hate to have you—take off your apron."

"Sometimes—my father—kinder helps me, Joe," she stammered, with her gallant little smile.

"I don't mind wipin' 'em one bit, Maggie," her father's mild voice said surprisedly.

"I'll help you," said Joe, putting his hat and coat on a chair in the corner of the kitchen and helping himself to a dish towel.

"When we haven't a maid we eat out here. I'm not ashamed, Joe, to—to—" said Mrs. Johnson. "So it don't come very easy for me to put up with this sort of thing."

"I see," Joe said, nodding. He sat down on the edge of a chair, and cleared his throat, and said politely:

"Mrs. Johnson, if you've no objection, could Maggie go out with me for a while?"

"Why, I haven't no objections," Mrs. Johnson said discontentedly, after a moment. "Maggie isn't nothing but a child, Mr. Grant, an' her father an' I don't want her to get no silly notions into her head—"

"Temp'rarily—temp'rarily she has accepted a position in a—well, in a five-and-ten," said Ma.

"It work there myself, you know, Mrs. Johnson."

"I'm a doubt you do! An I'm, no doubt it's a real nice place to—" that conceded Ma loftily. "But I ain't Maggie's sort of place. I'm the whole thing, into a nut-shell."

Mrs. Johnson was resuming tearfully, when Joe's opportunity to discover whether she was really capable of this elision was destroyed by Maggie's abrupt recentrance into the kitchen, and in another minute they were out in the dull, cold, wintry Sunday street, and she was dancing along at his side.

"I want to go to a movie, Maggie?"

"Oh, I'd love it!"

"How about The Highwayman!"

"Oh, Joe, no! That's a sixty-cent show. There are lots of nice little ones over on Chelsea Avenue here for

"Who's the other woman, Joe?" she drawled theatrically. "Go! you are a brute!" "There isn't any other woman." He believed it.

twenty-five."

They were at the window, he put down his money. But there were nothing left on this Sunday afternoon but loges, at a dollar a chair. Maggie's face fell, and immediately her eyes widened and she caught at his arm.

"Joe, don't be a fool! Two dollars! It isn't worth it!"

But he saw her give a little bounce of sheer excitement and felicity as they went to past the mirrors and marble columns and red Sunday ropes, and he thought it was. Their seats were in the very front of the balcony—deep, comfortable seats, with wide arms.

It was pleasant, somehow, to have that earnest little fragrant baby face come close to his in the dark, and that fuzzy aureole of gold brush his cheek, and that eager little whisper reach his ears.

Joe lost his handsome head bent close to hers, and leaned his shoulder even closer.

Her face was beaming with satisfaction and met with tears when they came out into the chilly dusk.

In parting he presented her with an enormous box of sweets.

"Oh, Joe Grant! Oh, Joe—two pounds! Oh, thank you—thank you!"

"Oh, hush," he said. "Now you run in and I'll watch you until you're inside the door."

She fled up the path, tried the knob of the porch door, called a joyous independent nod and thanks you!" into the dark, was silhouetted against a gush of red light, and then was gone.

Joe walked two blocks to his car, raging at himself.

"Gosh, what a fool I am! What on earth did I do that for?"

Millicent Russell, sitting next to him at dinner, was a pretty girl. From a point an inch or two below her arm pits, to a point an inch or two above her knees, she was packed into a tube of spangled satin. Her arms were heavy with links of gold and platinum, her legs looked bare, if they were not actually bare, her feet were encased dizzily upon pinnacles of gold leather. Her cheeks were smoothly and brilliantly rouged, her lips stiff with grease, her eyebrows shaved into two startling, inky arcs. Millicent's breath was that of alcohol and nicotine, her eyelids, coloured with blue oil, were lowered with fatigue and boredom, and she had no more hair than her brother had.

"I thought you had to go to prison to get a rich—like that!" she drawled. "Isn't it adorable? They call it the cocotte," Millicent told him enthusiastically.

"It's a crown of glory. If I were a girl," Joe said, with sudden fire, "I'd have hair. Beautiful braids and curls and masses of hair. It's pretty."

"Say the word, Joe, and I'll be your little covered wagon," suggested Millicent, in an odd tone, and with a darting little laugh.

"Nothing doing. I'm in coll," Joe answered.

"You're not in coll! You're working. I like you an awful lot, Joe, here, at the Carters' but, crowded, stupid party, Millicent Russell was trying to land him.

"Nothing stirring," he said briefly. "Come on, let's dance."

Millicent raised the heavy eyelids, looked at him with superb insolence.

"Who's the other woman, Joe?" she drawled theatrically. "God, you are a brute!"

"There isn't any other woman!" He believed it. Yet, even now, when his face was close to Millicent's curled, perfumed bobbed head, he had a sudden memory of Maggie, childlike and eager, in a sleazy little faded white dress, with a mop of living gold tumbling upon her small shoulders.

Sunday night. It was an actual relief to think that to-morrow would be Monday, and he would be back in the clean busy stir of the Mack again.

He told himself, when Monday arrived, and he reached the store to find a demurely radiant Maggie prettier and more endearingly proprietary in her manner toward him than ever, that this nonsense must stop. Therefore, it was with a real surprise that he found himself saying to her, late on Tuesday afternoon:

"What you doing to-night, Maggie?"

"Night school," she answered, colour and breath beginning their usual acceleration instantly.

"Night school! I didn't know you went to night school!"

"Why—why, but you told me to!" she accused him, reproachfully.

"I—when did I? How do you mean?"

Before Christmas. Just after we first began to talk. You said, 'Maggie, you ought to go to night school.'"

"Did I?" he was stricken. "What do you study?" he asked.

"Political economy and French," she said, bravely.

"That's a darn good choice!" Joe assured her. "If ever you go abroad, you don't want to be embarrassed about pronouncing words."

"Maggie!" came a harsh voice from upstairs at this point. "Maggie Johnson! What's happened you down there in the stockroom? Start your trotters up here with them felay medallions!"

"Oh, holy Nelly!" Maggie ejaculated, seizing the green cards upon which the medallions were stitched, and fleeing wildly from Joe's too seductive neighbourhood. "She sent me down for them fifteen minutes ago."

She left Joe very thoughtful. He took an opportunity, when they chanced to be entering the automat together for a bite luncheon, to say deliberately:

"Look here, Maggie. I've got something on my mind to say to you, and by George, I'm going to say it. I want to warn you. Don't waste time, at night school, taking any crush too seriously."

"Who do you think I've got a crush on, Joe?"

"I know damn' well whom you've got a crush on!" Joe growled.

"Is—is it you?" Maggie asked, flushing. "Suppose the person I had a crush on had a crush on me?" she asked.

"A person might like you a lot, Maggie, and wish for all sorts of good things for you," Joe said rather slowly. "Without—without, I say, having a crush on you!"

"Well, that'd be enough for me," she answered, still in the same audacious, high-spirited key. "I don't want any kissin', an' as for pettin' parties."

"Now, look here, you little idiot," he said, half angry and half laughing, "don't you think you can get away with that sort of thing! When your hour strikes, my dear, you won't be so sure you can get what you want! You'll be sick for more than kisses, then, Maggie, and afraid to take them. The whole world will turn itself into a sort of blur, with a man in the centre, and when he speaks you'll answer, and you'll say what he wants you to say, too. Don't fool yourself. You and I are friends—friends—friends—I was down and out when we first began to talk together, and you gave me a right steer and it kind of made you like me. I like you—I love you—I think you're a perfectly keen kid. I—but that kind of love's different. You're too young to know anything about it. Believe me, it's got a lot of pain in it, and it leaves a scar—you don't get over it—"

Local Sportsmen And Lovers Of Wild Life To Hold Meeting

Wade H. Phillips to Speak

Under a call of Hon. W. C. Reid of Richfield, N. C., the sportsmen and all other persons interested in the preservation of fish and game in Davie County, are invited to attend a meeting to be held in the court room Saturday afternoon, February 14, 1931 at two o'clock, p. m.

Mr. Lisk, who is Game Warden of the 7th District, and Mr. A. Hendrix, local game warden, urging all persons interested in the conservation of fish and wild life to attend this meeting and express their views relative to the laws of the State regarding protection of fish and fowl in the County. It is understood a meeting will be featured by interesting talks from Hon. Wade H. Phillips, former Director of the Department of Conservation and Development, Warden W. C. Reid and others on the subject of game protection in general, Mr. George Evans, former County Agent, on the subject of construction and maintenance of fish ponds. It is also understood Mr. Peter W. Hairston will address the meeting for a few minutes with respect to the matter of co-operation between the individual citizen and the Department of Conservation and Development in the effort to enforce the game laws now on the books.

The County Game Warden A. E. Lisk advises that the meeting Saturday afternoon will witness a general reelection of officers of the Sportsmen's League recently established in Yadkin County and a membership by the Department of Conservation and Development. The conservation embraces some 30 acres of land in the Eastern portion of Davie and will be used as a breeding ground for quail, pheasants, wild turkey and other kinds of wild life.

It is believed that the meeting Saturday afternoon will be largely attended and we are pleased to submit herewith on behalf of Messrs. Lisk and Hendrix, a cordial invitation to persons throughout the County to be present and participate in the proceedings.

USE FEBRUARY

The fair warm weather which has prevailed for the past week or two is making one think of the planting season which is now not far in the future. Right much plowing has been done by Davie County farmers and some farms look like spring has arrived. If the remainder of February should be anything like the last days of January we should not be surprised to see farming advanced a month ahead of normal years by March 1st. Much cleaning up along ditch banks and hedges has been done and pruning of fruit trees and vines seems the style of the month. February is a great month for making plans and getting started out right on the farm. The farmer who takes advantage of the opportunities which February often usually finds himself far in advance of the fellow who piddles his time away during this month, and this shows up as a rule the entire spring and summer. Don't waste February. Its dilligent utilization will be seen in material results at gathering time next fall.

LET US TURN LOOSE

Liberty Magazine comes out in a very able editorial in favor of freedom and self government for the Phillipines. We can turn loose the Phillipine Islands now with honor and with credit, says Liberty, but the time may come, it warns, when we might have to turn loose, to our everlasting discredit and dishonor. That's true. We have believed for some time that we are holding the Phillipines at our own risk. We can grave dangers which might grow out of our far eastern domination, while on the other hand we can not see wherein it may be to our material advantage to continue our rule in the Phillipines. It ought to be our business right away to grant self rule to the Phillipine Islands just as we did to Cuba after the close of the Spanish-American War.

HONOR TO WHOM DUE

It was very fitting that the North Carolina General Assembly should adjourn in honor of Bishop Rondthaler who died at his home in Winston-Salem last week after a long and useful life to his city, his state and to mankind. It is refreshing to note that humanity does really give honor to whom honor is due. We are learning that the greatest are not always the best advertised statesmen, soldiers and financiers, but in many instances those who work quietly in the school room, in the home, those who spend their days working in labratories, those who quietly bring light out of darkness and good out of evil, yes, we are learning that these are often the truly great. Bishop Rondthaler was one of these quiet workers, and one whose good influence, in its fullness, will only be determined by eternity.

A RADICAL CHANGE

O. D. Mull, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, and for some time executive counsellor to Governor Gardner, has resigned his position in the Governor's office and returns to Shelby, his former home, to take charge of the management of one of the textile mills there. His friends throughout this county will be interested to know this, and many will be surprised that he is making the change. For one to go from the limelight of high public office to the daily grind of a business office is rather a radical change, and we are wondering whether or not Mr. Mull will be the happier by reason of the change.

SOW LESPEDEZA THIS MONTH

February is the month to sow lespedeza. Many who have never used lespedeza on their farms have no idea of its great help as a soil builder, but those who have been using it for years are without exception its greatest advocates. And for the benefit of any farmers of this county who have never used it and who know nothing about how to sow it, we would say that it is the simplest thing in the world. Just sow the seed over your wheat and grain fields now and nature will do the rest. No need to harrow under nor attempt to cover the seed, just sow them down and leave it with the sunshine and rain.

Helen Gould is dead at 38. She was a daughter of the late Jay Gould. She married an English nobleman, and, beauty that she was, figured in London society for a number of years. She was very wealthy, having inherited a large fortune from her father, the wealthy American.

STILL GROWING IN NUMBERS

And still the deaths and injuries on our public highways continue to mount. We see accounts of them daily, but more especially do we read of them in the morning papers on Mondays. Folks out for Sunday riding, some through necessity others uselessly, cause these auto wrecks to grow in numbers as the weeks and months pass, despite the efforts of those who see that our highway accidents are taking more toll in loss of life, and in injuries, than a war. And is there nothing which can be done to lessen these accidents? Hardly. It looks like our people have many of them lost that natural sense of self preservation. Just going it blindly thinking because it didn't happen last Sunday afternoon it will not happen this.

CONDITIONS AS THEY ARE

If everybody could just fully realize that our joy ride has ended, at least for the time being, business would return to normal much sooner. But somehow a large per cent of humanity just can't decide to come down and take things for what they are. They want others to economize but they themselves want to continue to reap high salaries or high wages for about half time honest to goodness service. They want to continue the useless burning of gasoline, especially on Sunday afternoons. But most of us must check up. We must just see that we are facing times which are different and adjust ourselves to conditions as they are, not what we should like to see them.

ANOTHER AGRICULTURAL LEADER

Eugene Ashcraft, in Monroe Enquirer.

A week or two ago I made mention that I had purchased one quart of peas, paying $3.00 for them. Now, I'm going to purchase a peck of the same kind of peas, the price being $15.00.

But these peas will be parceled out to 16 farmers here in Union and they will pay me $1.00 a pint.

No, my friends, these farmers are not crazy. They are experimenters, and, Lord knows, we need more of 'em here in Union County.

For the past several years Dr. William Hansen, a veterinary surgeon of Greenville, Michigan, has been experimenting with a pea that came from one of the Balkan states, of Europe. The doctor sent me samples of this pea, showing growths at three and eight weeks. At eight weeks there were nodules, which put nitrogen in the soil, as large across as a dime. It is said to be a "world beater" for soil improvement. The vines of the pea, which is called "Hansen Nitrogen Pea," grow from 12 to 15 feet in length. The Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment station has stamped its approval on Dr. Hansen's efforts.

THE SCHOOL BUS

Charlotte Observer.

Motorists have observed with pleasure the established greater degree of safety for the school bus. It was noted out on the Concord road a few afternoons ago that the bus, distributing children at their home stations on the way from the school house, was under the proud conductorship of a young fellow who acted as flagman—and a diligent hand he proved. As the bus would slow up for a stop, he would, from his perch of observation, wave a red flag of ample proportions, to motorists ahead and behind, and motorists were not slow to heed the warning and to stop at safe distances away. School children, trained in safety exercises, are developing the best system of protection their comrades can know. They are giving the older folks excellent examples in safety-first practices.

PICKING UP

From The Hendersonville Times-News.

Developments in Hendersonville business circles indicate that the town is rapidly returning to normal conditions, and the promise of the future is for better and more substantial business conditions than have prevailed for several years past.

A NOVEL INSTRUMENT

From The Humorist, London.

A compressed air foghorn, the blast of which can be heard for many miles, has been installed in a Scottish lighthouse. No doubt quite a lot of jass-band conductors would like to know where the things can be bought.

JAKE IS BROADCASTING

The World War was fought and won by young men most of whom were paid $1.00 per day for their services. These same young men are now asking a republican administration to pay the adjusted compensation certificates in cash. The leaders of this republican administration, headed by old Andy Mellon, made millions of dollars during the World War, and are now opposing the plan to pay off the soldiers' certificates in cash.

Wouldn't the country be in a "heck" of a fix if it depended on these millionaire republicans to do the actual fighting in the next war? If Andy and the republican national executive committee insist on running the Government in times of peace, let them try their hands at breaking a "Hindenburg Line" during the next war. It would be a fine army composed of nothing but millionaires.

I would like to emphasize the fact that the work is not limited to teachers. Any one who cares to take the work is urged to do so. The purpose of the work is adult education.

I hope all who can do so will come out to the first meeting of the classes on the afternoon and evening of February 18th. A thorough explanation of the work will be given. We expect a large number of teachers to be present and ask that the teachers give an explanation of the work in the different communities of the county.

FATTEN EARLY BROILERS FOR POULTRY MARKET

Raleigh, Feb. 9.—Because there are fewer pounds of frozen poultry in cold storage at this time as compared with one year ago or with the five-year average, it may be well this spring to fatten baby chicks into fryers and broilers for early sale.

P. A. Seese, extension poultryman at State College, finds that the sale of poultry meats from the average farm represents only 27.7 percent of the total sales of poultry and poultry products. The remaining 72.3 percent comes from the sale of eggs. This was due, he explains to the low price of all poultry meats last year, especially old hens, late fryers and broilers. Few of these were sold and the income from these sources was rather low, comparatively.

However, there is about thirty-six million pounds less of poultry meats now in storage than there was one year ago in January. This means that the demand will likely get better, especially if there is some improvement in business conditions. For that reason, he advocates the purchase and growing of baby chicks for fattening.

Only chicks from blood-tested flocks should be bought. Usually the loss from these is less than ten percent. They have a high livability as compared with chicks from non-tested flocks and if a grower can market 99 per cent of his chicks as broilers he can unquestionably put them on the market at a cost not to exceed twenty cents a pound and will make money. The present low prices for feedstuffs and the increase of feed material on most farms of the State at this time, should make poultry fattening a right remunerative enterprise, thinks Mr. Seese.

Then, too, the cash from the sale of fryers and broilers is received at a time which it can be used to good advantage in the farm work.

PREDICTS HIGHER COTTON

Atlanta, Ga.,—Phillip B. Weld, president of the New York Cotton exchange, said today higher prices for cotton next summer are to be expected. Discussing business in general Mr. Weld said "the psychological change now underway should help tremendously in bettering conditions."

JESUS, FRIEND OF SINNERS

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Again the entire chapter should be read. Remember that we a studying the entire life of Chr on earth and not just a few in dents therefrom. More miracl are performed. The faith of th Centurion was commended wh that man besought Jesus to he His servant from the distance merely giving the word. Raisi a dead body is no greater pro lem than any other kind of hea ing, as is evidenced when th widow of Nain receives her so again. Then note the incide when John the Baptist sends me sengers from his prison and Jes replies by calling attention to th works and preaching which an common report.

The Pharisee who invited Je sus to his home evidently did that he might observe this Nazi rene more closely. He did not sa "Come" for Jesus' sake. Their may have been food enough bu the common courtesy of washin the soil from the feet was omit ted, though that was the work o a slave or lowly servant. A wo man who had made her living a common prostitute rejoices a the opportunity of expressing he joy in the salvation which ha come to her soul through Hi teachings.

When the Pharisee-host con demns both Jesus and the woma a deep lesson is given by a para ble-story about two debtors. The forgiven sinner was therein exal ed above the rude Pharisee. The woman was encouraged to make a new start in life, no matter what her forgiven past had been. The Golden Text explains the mean ing of it all: "Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all accep tation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." I Timothy 1:15.

Life is not measured by our years nor tears,
Nor by our worldly fears or cares,
For life is measured and treasured only by our Dreams, our Deeds, our Faith and our Prayers.

I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. Many have looked as I did and have received a spiritual reward from looking each day. When we see the hills of our country they are the same as they always were before and this is the symbol of Gods unchanging nature. Each evening when we look at them we see their familiar forms outlined against a glowing western sky and as the sun sinks lower they are clothed in the crimson mystery of heaven. In this way the hills are the revelation of God's beauty. All through the years we see them resting like some patient body of power, upholding on their shoulders all of the weight of the heaven. In this appearance they are the picture of God's strength. But there could be no hills if there were no valleys between them nor can we approach them to behold their greatness and beauty unless we come by the valley at their feet. So, also, when we look to God and cry for help, we are standing in the valley of need. We do not understand the wisdom of his ways which allows us to walk in the valleys of life's unpleasant experiences instead of always of the heights of joy but we know that if we look upward to the hills which reveal him we shall behold them as forms of glory whose radience will make every valley a ray of light. "For though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for Thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Dear friends, read the 19th. chapter of second Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah and see if they are not alike.

LET US DO YOUR JOB WORK
WE WILL DO IT RIGHT.

IN MEMORY OF OUR DEAR AUNT

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear aunt Annie who departed this life just one month ago today, Feb. 10, 1931.

We miss you from your home dear aunt,
We miss you from your place,
A shadow o'er our life is cast
We miss the sunshine of your face.

On a hillside safety sleeping,
Far away from worry and pain
May you rest on in Jesus keeping
Till in heaven we meet again.

One month has sadly passed away dear aunt,
Since you have been called away from us,
To never meet on this earth any more.

We miss your tender face,
Your voice we cannot hear,
Your love and joy dear aunt,
Goes with us every where.

Her earthly life is past and over
Her love and joy we can no more share,
But to live like her—
We can meet her over there.

She's gone to live with Jesus,
And her home is sad today
Our prayers are to meet her again,
When we go home to stay.

Out in the lonely cemetery
It was so hard to leave,
We laid our dear aunt,
And we were left behind to grieve.

Our hearts seemed to burst with sorrows,
Our burdens seemed more than we could bear,
But kind friends gathered around us
Our sorrows and griefs to share.

Some day we know we'll greet her
We hope it won't be long,
And meet our dear aunt,
Up in that far beyond.

We know she has gone to heaven
And there a golden crown she will wear,
And our memories are over there
In that home beyond the skies.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

The new Ford is an economical car to own and drive

Low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation mean a distinct saving to every purchaser

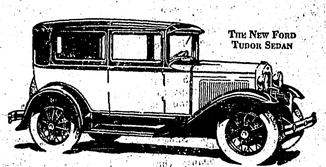
THE NEW FORD is a splendid car to own and drive because of its attractive lines and colors, safety, comfort, speed, reliability and long life.

There are, in addition, three other features of importance to every far-seeing automobile owner . . . low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

During the life of the car, the day-by-day economy of owning a Ford will amount to considerably more than the saving on the first cost. You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

The reasons for this economy are simplicity of design, high quality of materials and care in manufacturing and assembling. Many vital parts are made to limits of one one-thousandth of an inch. Some to three ten-thousandths of an inch. Throughout, the new Ford is an outstanding example of fine craftsmanship in automobile engineering.

The more you see of the new Ford—the more you talk to Ford owners and experienced mechanics—the more certain you become of this fact. . . . It brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.



LOW PRICES OF FORD CARS

Seventh Installment

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter-carrier, is the domestic drudge of the humble home where her mother does little except bemoan the fact that she has "seen better days" and her sister Liz, who works in a beauty shop, lies abed late. Maggie lies in to get the family breakfast before she starts out as her job in the Five-and-Ten-Cent Store.

There's a new boy at the Five-and-Ten, Joe Grant. He tells Maggie that he has been assigned to work as her helper in the stock room. He seems rather dumb, but Maggie helps him through his first day at the store and shares her lunch with him in a cubby-hole of a place that belongs to a waitress history next door to the Five-and-Ten.

They are looking over some cheap picture cards. One of them has a motto that strike's Maggie's fancy: "The only way to begin the silent life is to begin." She and Joe talk about that motto, and Maggie finds that the girl has subtler standards than he had suspected. When he goes on to say that night is the time to see about Maggie. And his home is the home of the owner of the Mack Five and Ten Cent Stores, though Maggie does not suspect that he is the boss' son.

Maggie, however, begins to suspect that her mother's complaints are due to the belief that happiness depends upon material things, while at the same time she comforts herself by her appreciation of the realities of life.

Joe learns that Maggie is falling in love with him before Maggie discovered it. But he was a little slow in discovering that he, in turn, was falling in love with Maggie. But he admitted to himself that there was admiration for her was growing, and the girls in the store began to notice something different about her.

Maggie's interest in her job stimulates Joe's own. He begins to think perhaps it won't be bad after all to have to work in the store. And he and Maggie begin to talk about love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

She had begun by laughing, boldly. But she had sobered, to listen to him, lashes wide, lips slightly parted, little felt hat pushed back to show a film of gold across her earnest forehead. The colour had ebbed from her face, and putting her elbows on the table, she had covered her face with her hands —those small hard, red hands that Joe found so infinitely pathetic.

"God help me, Joe!" she whispered, not meeting his eyes.

They walked back to the store in absolute silence.

One night in early February, it chanced that at the Merrill table there were sitting Miss Lucy Merrill, Howard Merrill, president of the entire chain of stores, his trusty right-hand man and general manager, Mr. Frank Flint, and the son of the owner, Joseph Grant Mackenzie Merrill.

The last named was included in the party merely because he happened to be in the house, with no dinner engagement and because a wild rain was raging. George Merrill could not say whether his son and heir came or went.

Yet he had blindly idolized his son. That young Joe had shown a lamentable indifference to society, and had flunked his college, thus disposing of a small fortune in various idiotic, if not actually harmful ways, had been a bitter blow to the father's honest, hard-working pride.

Since, however, he was actually living in the house, and for the first time in his twenty years, to permit him, in their disgust and disappointment, to find his own level.

So that on this particular evening, upon seeing three places set at the family board, his father, scowlingly interrogating the butler, merely shrugged when the answer was that the third place was for Mr. Joe.

"Oh, don't matter!" said George Merrill. "We want to talk business. But Mr. Joe's all right. He won't hear a word we say!"

"I wish he would," Frank Flint, a big, rosy, silver-headed man, said pointedly. "We want that boy in the business, some day."

Mr. Merrill responded simply: "Frank, I don't know what he's doing, or what he wants to do! They're too much for me, nowadays. He's busy about something, that's last. But while it keeps him out of mischief—or out of jail—"

"I'd be glad enough to have him get interested in the Mack. If he seems to catch on to anything to-night, as we talk, Frank, see if you can draw him out."

"Sorry to be late," said Joe, at this point, coming in.

"You're not late," his father assured him ungraciously. Sometimes, in the course of the last few years, his disappointment in this boy has risen almost to actual hatred.

But just of late, ever since, in fact, that terrible scene when his mother had called him a "communer, without one single gentlemanly instinct in his mind or soul," and when he, his father, had shouted at Joe that he was no better than a pickpocket, there had seemed to be a queer change in the boy.

"Tired, Joe?"

"I beg pardon?"

"Say you look tired, my boy. Research—" said George Merrill, with a wink for his general manager.

"Nope. Yes, I am a little tired. Not much," Joe said unsatisfactorily, falling upon his soup.

Then Joe said mildly, in a pause: "You say that it's the ruined stock that costs in the Mack Stores—not the labour. I've thought of that. It seems to me that every day enough collars and writing paper and candy and toys and socks fall on the floor and are trampled to set up a separate branch!"

"Where'd you get this, Joe?" asked his father.

"About there."

"That's Number Seven. Good for you. I hope you got service," said Flint.

"They have a great staff there," said Joe.

"That's a good store. That's a good store," Flint agreed.

"What occurred to me," Joe said leisurely, "was that you—we, I might say—could handle all that small stuff very much better with an autocrat.

"That's an idea, Joe, but unfortunately it's not practical," his father said genially, comfortably.

Then his eye and the eye of his general manager met.

"Why isn't it practical, Frank? It works all right on the food—they're opening those damn nickel-in-the-slot places all over town," George Merrill said. "They're practical."

"We-ell—" Frank Flint hesitated.

Joe broke in:

"Take the whole back wall of a store and handle the five and ten cent stuff there. Let can drop pennies for their spools and soap and ink and pencils and can openers and hairpins. You could have a girl there to exchange their money—"

"I'm not at all sure, Joe," said his father explosively, "I'm not at all sure that you haven't given us an idea."

"I could look into that, Mr. Merrill," Flint said, "it might—catch on, Mr. Merrill. It would be an exclusive Mack's feature, you know."

"Frank, the more I think of that, the more I suspect that—there's—something—in—it," George Merrill drawled, fingering his words portentously, said slowly. "When could you see Burke?"

"See him to-morrow."

"Take that up with him, will you, Frank? Find out who makes that machinery. We might as well look into it, anyway."

Joe wanted to keep that look in his father's eyes, that proud, vindicated look that said: "This boy of mine isn't —such—a—damn'—fool, after all!"

An hour later, he was reading in his room when his father came, rather shyly, rather awkwardly in. The boy had taken the trouble to come upstairs, Joe reflected, gratified.

"Joe, seen that girl who sings that 'Mouse-trap' thing in the Revue?"

"Yes, sir. Saw it opening night."

"I've got two seats." George Merrill displayed them deprecatingly, "I was going to take Flint," he said.

"I'd like to see that darn show again," Joe said.

Fifteen minutes later, they left the house together. It was the first time Joe Merrill had gone to the theatre with his father since the day of his fourteenth birthday treat.

"I passed along that idea of yours, about having an automat for the, uh, trade, to one of the heads," he told Maggie. "I took the credit for it, too!" "what made me feel rotten was that I didn't say that you had thought of it first."

"Oh, well, we sort of worked it out together, that day we were at the automat," she said, anxious to reassure him.

"Worked it out together nothing! You began it, it was entirely your idea.

"But what's the difference, as long as one of us gets the credit?" she asked innocently.

Joe could only laugh uncomfortably.

When he went downstairs an hour later, he managed his own way through the moving river of the departing employees of the Mack, and found himself beside her.

"Why so fast, Maggie?"

She raised blazing eyes to his.

"How dare you speak to me! You ought to be ashamed to speak to me! I hate you!"

"For heaven's sake, what's the matter?" Joe stammered, aghast.

But she went quickly on, shabby little untidy head held high, and disappeared in the crowd before he could catch her again.

Joe walked briskly toward his car, got in it, and drove toward Goat Hill.

"My gosh! I never saw her like that before! I wonder what the deuce I've done?" he kept saying aloud as he went.

The dinner was at the club to-night; it was for pretty little Katrina Fairchild. Millicent, next to Joe—was bearing powder into her rather coarse-pored, colourless skin with violent strokes of her elbow.

Every one in the room was bitterly bored: guests, waiters, musicians. Millicent asked languidly:

"When are we going to announce it, Joe?—Don't interrupt me, Marion," she said to another girl, who leaned across the table for a hysterical confidence. "I'm proposing to Joe Grant."

"It can't be done, I tried it myself, didn't I, Joe?" said a third girl, handsomely.

"That's an idea, Joe, but unfortunately it's not practical," his father said genially.

"I don't seem to remember that, Carol," Joe said, eating. "But some night when I've had too many cocktails one of you girls will get me, and that'll be that."

There were shrieks of laughter, and then the conversation suddenly died, and nobody could think of anything to say.

Conversations were entirely personal, usually first-person at that.

"My dear, I—well, I—well, if you take—my—advice—you'll—you'll—Mother-dear—and I—but it isn't as if I—exactly. I couldn't—I simply—if you could have seen me—"

"Marjorie, did you see Mrs. Madison?"

"My dear—wasn't that terrible!"

"Oh, well, my dear, if she would bring that impossible girl—"

"Well, exactly—"

"Oh, well, my dear!"

"Well, exactly—that's what I said to Mother."

"Listen, Maggie, you can't keep this up. Sooner or later you'll have to give it up—so tell me now, tell me what the trouble is, so why not now?" Joe pleaded.

She was in the hardware department, and was attempting to straighten up the counter. When she heard Joe's voice, close beside her, she brought her proud little chin up with a jerk, her cheeks crimsoned, and her tone was cutting, if a trifle shaky, as she said:

"You broke my heart. But it doesn't matter. Please get out of my way."

Joe was honestly staggered.

"How, in the name of St. Pete, did I break your heart?"

"We'll not discuss it," she said icily. "We will discuss it," said Joe. "I haven't done anything, and I object to your acting this way!"

"Oh, no—no!" she said, in a low, trembling voice shaken with anger. "Oh, no. You didn't take Paulo Younger to lunch, and pay for her lunch, at our place—at our place—and then walk with her, and stroll around the streets with her, and have all those horrible girls at the lunch-counter making fun of me, and saying that Paula had gotten you away from me."

"Now, listen, Maggie—that's utterly ridiculous. In the first place, I went in, alone—to have my lunch at the Old South Tea Room—but I swear to you I went in there with no more idea that Miss Younger was lunching there than you had! I saw her at an empty table—the place was packed, and, naturally, I sat with her."

"Oh, naturally!" Maggie said, trembling, beside herself.

"Well, would you have me cut the girl?" Joe asked, warming in his turn. "I sat with her, and later I paid the tip, twenty-five cents, and our bill for two sixty-cent lunches. There! If I'd known that you expected me to ask permission—"

"I'll never," she gritted between her teeth, "I'll never speak to you again!"

She had finished her task now, the hardware counter was in order, and went down to the girls' washroom, washed her hands and, after a while, her tear-swollen eyes in cold water and wiped them on the soggy lengths of the exhausted roller towel.

BIGGEST TOBACCO CROP IN STATE'S HISTORY IS SOLD

Charlotte,—For the first time in the history of this tobacco-growing state, North Carolina is going to market more than 500,000,000 pounds of the golden weed in one season.

Last year, 498,593,000 pounds of tobacco were sold in this state. Agriculture officials have estimated this season's sales at 535,000,000 pounds and indications are their expectations will be more than met.

Sales records on individual markets are being broken daily and the season still has from 10 days to more than a month to run on some markets.

Wilson, the largest tobacco market in the world, broke its own record of 84,247,000 pounds two days ago when total sales reached 84,616,680 pounds.

Sales on only five of the large-or markets, Wilson, Winston-Salem, Rocky Mount, Durham and Henderson to date total more than 210,000,000 pounds. Each has its individual sales records.

Other markets, some small, some large, are either breaking their large marks or are daily approaching them.

Price averages on the several markets have been from nine cents a pound to better than fourteen and a half cents. All prices, warehouses report, have been considerably under those of a season ago and in several markets have been the lowest on record.

Wilson's enormous crop has been sold at an average of $13.87 a hundred pounds. To date, it has brought planters selling there nearly $12,000,000.

Rocky Mount and Henderson, with seasonal averages of $14.65 and $14.34 a hundred pounds, have fared better than many other selling points in the state. The more than 51,000,000 pounds sold at Winston-Salem have brought an average of $9.52 a hundred.

DIRTY LEGS AND DIRTY NECKS

(Eugene Ashcraft in Monroe Enquirer.)

Girls are giving up the bare-leg fad. Silk hose researchers report that girls would rather wear stockings than wash their legs. And from the looks of some of their necks the collar manufacturers ought to take courage. We never could understand why a woman prefers powder to soap and water.

No doubt they're just like the rest of human nature: we're all more or less on the surface. But admitting that, why do we neglect our surfaces?

Why not, like the paint manufacturers, they "save the surface and save all?"

LIVES IN TWO COUNTIES

In the section known as "Three County Corners" in the Catawba mountains, where Burke, Cleveland and Catawba join, lives Edison Mull. His house is on the line of Burke and Cleveland and he eats in Burke but sleeps in Cleveland. The house sits on a hill and the water that drops from one side of the roof when it rains finds its way into a nearby creek, thence into the Catawba river. The water on the other side goes into a branch that empties into Brond river. Both rivers how ever, find their way into South Carolina and on to the Atlantic ocean.

WOULD MERGE 23 N. C. COUNTIES

Raleigh, Feb. 9.—Consolidation of 23 North Carolina counties into eleven is suggested by the Brookings report on county government in the state released tonight by Governor O. Max Gardner.

"It is our recommendation that a careful study be made of this question of county consolidation," says the report, "and to this end we are listing certain specific instances in which it is believed such a consolidation could be made with advantages."

The following consolidations are urged:

Cherokee and Clay counties with Murphy as county seat.

Graham and Swain counties with Bryson City as county seat.

Mitchell and Avery with Spruce Pine as county seat.

Henderson and Polk with Hendersonville as county seat.

Alexander and Iredell counties with Statesville as county seat.

Stokes and Forsyth with Winston-Salem as county seat.

Caswell and Person with Roxboro as county seat.

Hoke and Cumberland with Fayetteville as county seat.

Wilson and Greene with Wilson as county seat.

Chowan and Perquimans with Edenton as county seat.

Pasquotank, Camden and Currituck with Elizabeth City as county seat.

If such consolidations were affected, North Carolina would become a state with 88 counties instead of its present 100.

The report also suggests a uniform government system for the state's counties. The county government would be composed of the following units:

1—Board of county commissioners; 2—Department of finance; 3—Department of justice; 4—Department of education; 5—Department of health; 6—Department of highways and public works; 7—Department of welfare and; 8—An audit department (state department of local government finances.)

THESE FOLKS HAVE SIX-FINGERED HANDS

A strange village, Palazuelos, has been discovered in the mountains of Spain.

The strangeness of this hamlet lies in the fact that most of its people have six-fingered hands, two thumbs on each one. Few of the villagers ever have reached the outside world because the mountain trails are impassable to wheeled vehicles. So the world know nothing about them until recently.

Scientists from the University of Madrid have formed an expedition headed by Professor Miguel Corral, famous anthropologist who will visit the village soon and try to determine the cause of this strange physical phenomenon.

Intermarriage caused by extreme isolation is believed by some anthropologists to be the cause of the double thumbs. Other scientists call attention to the fact that since most of the men work in stone quarries and have done so for generations their labor has tended to broaden their thumbs until finally Mother Nature produced an extra member.

The villagers do not regard their double thumbs as a deformity but consider them a mark of distinction. While a comparatively simple operation would remove the extra thumb of any child and give it a normal hand, the villagers violently object to any such suggestion.

DATES ARE ANNOUNCED FOR FARM CONVENTION

Raleigh, Feb. 9.—The North Carolina State Farmers' Convention and the annual meeting of the State Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs will be held during Farm and Home Week at State College, July 28 to 31, immediately following the summer session of the College.

Announcement of the annual meeting was made last week following conference between College and convention officials. A new departure in convention affairs this year will be the meeting of all organized farm groups. H. G. Ashcraft, of Charlotte, president of the Convention, has expressed a desire for all farmers' organizations to have a meeting during the week.

Especially does he extend an invitation to such groups as the Grange, Cotton Association, Dairymen's Association, Hatcherymen's Association, Crop Improvement Association, Farmers' Alliance and others. Mr. Ashcraft also calls for a large attendance by members this summer. Of the 1,500 persons registering at the Convention last summer more than two-thirds were women. It is recognized, says Mr. Ashcraft, that the men are busy on their farms during late July, especially those who grow tobacco. Therefore, one of the questions to be decided at this meeting will be a possible change of dates until late in the summer so that eastern farmers might attend.

For the western farmers, the present dates will be maintained on alternate years but the program will be made to more nearly meet the needs of the western landowner.

The present president of the State Farmers' Convention is said to be one of the most successful dairymen and farmers in piedmont North Carolina. The president of the State Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs is Mrs. N. L. Stedman of Halifax, who has been prominent in organization work for farm women for more than 15 years.

THE PRIME, OF LIFE

By Walter Learned

Just as I thought I was growing old
Ready to sit in my easy chair,
To watch the world with a heart grown cold,
And smile at a folly I would not share,

Rose came by with a smile for me,
And I am thinking that forty year
Isn't the age that it seems to be,
When two pretty brown eyes are near.

Bless me! of life it is just the prime,
A fact that I hope she will understand;
And forty year is a perfect rhyme
To dark brown eyes and a pretty hand.

These gray hairs are by chance, you see—
Boys are sometimes gray, I am told:
Rose came by with a smile for me,
Just as I thought I was getting old.

The Way of Life
By BRUCE BARTON

PLEASANT PLACES

When he was hardly more than a boy my friend Jim Derieux, one of the editors of the American Magazine, was secretary to the governor of South Carolina.

There was a brilliant young chap in the state administration who at the age of twenty-six held the office of assistant comptroller. He had not intended to run for the comptrollership, but a political faction organized to head him off. This made him mad, and so he did run and was elected.

After holding office for only six months he asked for an interview with the governor.

"What's on your mind?" asked Jim.

"I am going to resign."

"Why?"

"I'll tell you presently."

They went in to the governor's private room, and the young official tendered his resignation. The governor was amazed.

"What's the matter?" he exclaimed. "I thought you were sitting pretty."

"I am," said the young man. "That's just the trouble."

"But I don't understand."

"Well, Governor, you know this office that I hold is a mighty pleasant place. I'm twenty-seven years old, and it's a very pleasant place indeed. I am afraid of it."

He was afraid he would settle down and become too contented. Afraid that, without hard problems to tackle and stern duties to conquer, he would get flabby and soft. Afraid that at forty he would wake up to find himself a lazy office holder with no ambition and no hope.

Nobody under fifty should be in too pleasant a place.

Robert Updegraff, the writer of business articles, uttered a profound business truth when he counseled: "Never complain about your troubles. They are responsible for the greater part of your income."

Almost any one can hold a job which presents no difficulties; hence such jobs pay small salaries. Men at the top are paid for their willingness to accept responsibility; for the problems that they tackle and the difficulties they lick.

King David wrote: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters."

But when David wrote that he was a fugitive from Saul. He was fighting through the wilderness, pursued by enemies and wild beasts. The green pastures and still waters were all in his mind.

He never did reach an entirely pleasant place. Even when he became king his life was full of problems, disappointments and hard work. But his soul gave birth to songs that are among the finest of all the ages.

FEEDING CORN TO HOGS INCREASE MARKET PRICE

Raleigh, Feb. 9.—"The most profitable method of marketing corn this year, and probably for the next two years, is by feeding it to hogs and then marketing the hogs," W. W. Shay, swine extension specialist of State College, says, in speaking of the low price of corn and the profit to be made in hogs at the present time. "Feeding corn to hogs is the safest farm investment and the surest way to make a profit in farming this year."

If the corn is produced at a low cost per bushel, Mr. Shay says that it is always profitable to feed such corn to hogs. Even, if the corn is high in price per bushel or the yield per acre is low, the feeding of corn to hogs will increase its bushel value. "When the farmer has a big loss in the cost of corn, due to low production per acre, this loss can be cut down by feeding to hogs, but not always eliminated. The person who cannot produce at least 30 bushels of corn or more to the acre had best stay out of the hog raising business.

Self-feeder demonstrations in the eastern part of the state this past year showed that corn will increase enormously in value if fed to hogs. One demonstration showed a profit of 435 per cent on corn by such feeding, despite the death of one hog during the demonstration. The h

CHRIST AND WORLD FRIENDSHIP

(By Elsie Foster)

Christ is known to most of us throughout all nations of the world. The teaching of Christ is great in most all of the states, east, west, north and south.

Christ is not known like he should be known or his life in "World Friendship," is not practiced like it should be. When Christ was here on earth, he visited places and the people. He went around healing and helping them that needed help. We believe the world would be better if Jesus was here again. The people think because Jesus has gone to prepare a place for us he will not come anymore, but Jesus is coming to this old world again, remember what he said, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto my kingdom." Christ is in Friendship with some people today. Some day right when we are not thinking, Jesus will appear among his friends and all the people. He will be known then who his friends are. When we think of friendship to Jesus, we think of Christianity. When we think of Christianity in terms of continuous growth instead of in terms of the outward "acts of joining" the church and mentally assenting to creeds and doctrines, then Christianity challenges everyone—the least and the greatest, the eldest and the youngest, to live a good Christian life is " Friendship to Christ."

The man who has the humblest job of the streets may be Christlike, and a friend to Jesus Just as the man whose responsibilities in life have to do with the affairs of state.

Christ blazed the trail leading to God and left it open for all. When Jesus was here he healed the people of diseases, killed their pains, soothed their hearts.

We have all heard of Jesus friends Mary and Martha, again take the incident which occurred when Jesus went to visit in the home of Mary and Martha, (See Luke 10:38-41) Mary's soul was hungry for the living bread. She had not thought of eating for Jesus had come and his words to her were the bread of life. He answered many questions about which she had often wondered, questions about life, pain, sorrow, death and the kingdom of God. He explained many mysteries to her that she had not understood before. The people of today who say they are a friend of Jesus do not look at him in a way that Mary did. Other things about Jesus maturity and the childishness of those about him and his friends can be found in Luke 6, 7, 9, 11, chapters. We call this, "Christ Friendship."

Intermediate friendship is like the kingdom of God, and must be built in the heart of each one to be with men

Reports Needs of Drought Victims

THIS WINTER HAS HAD AVERAGE OF FINE OLD COLD DAYS

Raleigh Times.

We see by the papers that "sun spots" have been credited with producing what is called the "warmest winter in fifty years."

Upon which we register a dissent. It may be warm on the Pacific coast. Personally we have not had any such dives in temperature, as those which accompanied the bright idea of Woodrow Wilson that in a war winter we should have "Heatless Days." But this winter has, taking it by and large, been setting a very fine batting average.

For one thing it started in early. There were November days of a severity to freeze the tail off a brass monkey. Since then we have had a consistent, if not arresting, chill.

Talk to us about the "warmest winter" and we begin to remember.

EGGS AND THEORIES

Monroe Journal.

Eggs are now fifteen cents a dozen and if our old friends, A. C. Johnson and E. G. Faust, were living, they would feel that things are getting almost right again. Mr. Johnson always contended that eggs were worth just twelve cents a dozen, one cent apiece, for eating purposes, no more no less, even though, in his business life in Monroe he bought them from five cents to forty cents a dozen. Mr. Johnson approached the subject from the dietary and not the commercial standpoint. Mr. Faust, on the other hand, approached it from the angle of the wear and tear on the hen. He held that it was no harder on her to produce a dozen eggs at one time than another, and at all times worth just ten cents a dozen.

INCOME TAXES IN THIS STATE

Charlotte News.

The Internal Revenue Bureau has issued a report of the income taxes paid during the year 1930 from which we obtain two reactions, each differing a great deal from the other.

We learn, for instance, that this state paid about seven times as much in taxes of this nature as Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina. On the other hand, it is obvious that our contribution to the expenses of the national government is more or less negligible when we contrast the $15,565,846 paid by this state to the $791,277,321 garnered from New York.

Where the South alone is concerned we stand high in the list, only Virginia of the incomplete list given outranking us and that by no tremendous margin. But when such industrial states as New York, Pennsylvania, and Illinois are considered, it is evident that our corporate organization, from which source a majority of the tax is gathered, must be added to and increased in extent before we can claim the wealth that belongs to us because of our geographical and natural advantages.

WEDDING SOLEMNIZED IN ALAMANCE COUNTY JAIL

Burlington, Feb. 4.—Dan Cupid pulled his bow string inside the Alamance county jail Tuesday, demonstrating once again "where there's a will there's a way."

Ernest L. Kizer, the happy groom of the occasion, was on the inside "marking time" like others have done as they waited for the machinery of the courts to get to them. He couldn't do much toward the arrangements other than express his desire. But—

Miss Emma Elizabeth Oldham, who became the bride, was out where she could look after such details as must be handled, among them the purchase of a license to wed. She attended to that.

To the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin's march, played on a mouth harp by Dr. Will Long, the couple entered the parlor and stood before Judge Jim Moser, who officiated. After the ceremony the couple left the jail together.

LEGISLATURE COSTING STATE $2,500 A DAY

Raleigh.—In salaries alone, Sundays included, it costs the state around $2,500 a day to support its legislature.

Not only must the state pay $10 a day to each of the 170 legislators—if the term lasts over 60 days, however, they get no time for overtime—but this present legislature is now paying 176 other employees whose job is to serve the 170 legislators.

The Senate, with 50 members, has employed to date 71 people, ranging in costs from $2.50 for pages to $7 a day for the elected officials. The House, with 120 members, has employed 57 people at the same varied pay. The enrolling office, where bills passed by both houses go, has employed 48 people so far, all at $6 a day.

Two things are causing considerable lobby talk regarding many employees, including all but one in the House, who were paid from the first day of the session, regardless of when they went to work. But the House has not added employees to its pay roll.

EIGHTEEN COUNTIES SHARE IN FEDERAL RELIEF FUND

Raleigh, Feb. 9.—North Carolina counties from which applications for loans from the drought relief fund will be accepted at Washington are: Alleghany, Ashe, Caswell, Forsyth, Franklin, Granville, Guilford, Person, Rockingham, Surry, Stokes, Vance, Warren, Watauga, Wilkes, and Yadkin. In these 18 counties drought damage was very serious. In two additional counties, Union and Wayne, farmers suffered heavy losses from hail storms.

Dean I. O. Schaub, director of extension at State College, will supervise the distribution of the fund in North Carolina but actual placing of the loans to individuals will be passed upon by a local county committee before forwarding to Washington. Mr. Schaub held meetings at Henderson and Elkin during the past week for explaining the situation to the county agents and county committees. At these two meetings it was announced that the Government is ready to begin distribution of the loans and all applications will be acted upon within 48 hours after their receipt in Washington, provided the applications are properly made out. No one person will be allowed over $600 and the aggregate loan to all the tenants of one landlord will not exceed this sum.

The money will be distributed as loans, and not as gifts, declares Mr. Schaub. All loans will be due on November 31 and are protected by a chattel mortgage on the crop. If the crop has been previously mortgaged or hypothecated in any way, waivers must be secured by the applicant before he will get a Government loan. The note securing a loan bears interest at 5 percent. Loans are paid to the farmers in installments.

The loans will be made for seed for planting, fertilizer for plant food, dust and spray for protecting the crop, feed for the livestock and oil and fuel foor the tractor. No farmer who can get local credit or has any other source of income will be allowed to participate, says Dean Schaub.

SHOULD STOP NIGHT WORK

News and Observer.

No woman or child should do night work. That is the opinion of the Textile Institute and many of the best cotton mill leaders. But there are those who will not join in ending a method of overproduction which is injurious to the health of women and children and to the industry.

The legislature should accept the Governor's suggestion as to hours of labor in mills and add that "no women or children under eighteen shall be permitted to work after 8 o'clock at night." It would be better if all the mills would join with such progressive men as William A. Ervin and cut out all night work.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp; is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

JESUS BEARS GOOD THINGS
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Once more read the entire apter to observe the context d the related teachings. Now the time when Jesus is in popular favor and crowds throng out him as he comes into any mmunity. At that time it is id there were over 200 cities d villages in Galilee and the pulation numbered two or three illions. The condition is decidly different today, though e number will be largely increased soon if the Hebrews conue to return and restablish emselves in their Promised nd.

At times the Twelve went with sus and on other occasions, ey, and even the Seventy, were nt forth in independent itinerais. The plan from the coming Jesus has been to send out individuals as personal messengers of the Gospel. Note that certain women are named. A group of women is mentioned which seems to have been a Committee on Ways and means as they helped provide the cost involved as Jesus and His workers went about. Even the simplest ways of living costs something daily and these women made it possible for the men to render their extensive services.

Many parables are given at this time which tell about the Kingdom of Heaven that Jesus came to establish. A definition that is still good calls a parable a heavenly story with an earthly meaning. The Master Teacher took many of His illustrations from things in everyday life. This time He calls attention to the seed that is scattered by the farmer. It is the same kind of seed that falls on the four kinds of soil. The application indicates our reception of that always good seed, which is the Word of God.

PUSH FARM PROGRAM THROUGH RURAL SCHOOLS

Raleigh, Feb. 16.—Distribution of over 100,000 farm food supply and feed budget sheets for use in 750 rural high schools during this week, designated by Governor Gardner as "Live-at-Home week", was made by the North Carolina State College Extension Service last week. Each child in these sheets and in one school in each county duplicates will be made and returned to the Extension office in Raleigh so as to give agricultural workers a complete cross-section of the food and feed needs, deficiences and surpluses of typical rural communities throughout the state.

During the week farm and Home demonstration agents will be busy explaining to children how to fill in these budget sheets. "The Farm to Make a Living in 1931" slogan will be explained, together with the family food budget requirements and other essentials of the "Live-at-Home" program. Then each child will figure out his own home needs and determine in what particulars his family came up to or above or fell below the requirements in food and feed during 1930. This phase of the 1931 "Live-at-Home" program is coordinating the efforts of Extension workers and school officials all over the state and bids to produce valuable results.

This work in educating the school children to the requirements of the "Live-at-Home" program is only a small part of the follow-up work of the Extension Service. The year's program began on January 6th with county-wide meetings in practically every county in the state, addressed by teams of extension workers. The program will be continued during the year by stressing the necessity of keeping accurate cost records on each farm; the upbuilding of established curb markets and the launching of new curb markets; a continued study of farm tenancy and unemployment in the eastern part of the state, particularly; the holding of "Live-at-Home" dinners; cooperation in the proper distribution of drought relief funds; and the coordination of all Extension Work.

MODERN BEGGAR COVERS HIS BEAT IN AUTOMOBILE

Minneapolis, Feb. 12.—The modern beggar doesn't waste time plodding from house to house on foot. He uses his automobile.

A judge sent him to jail for 90 days.

K. K. K. NOTE MAKES BOY KILL HIMSELF.

Gadsden, Ala., Feb. 12.—Recently Virgil Stancel, 19, received a threatening letter signed "K. K. K." and brooded over it for several days.

Yesterday his body was found in a wood near here. Beside it lay a shotgun and a forked stick still pressed against the trigger.

SOYBEANS IN CORN IS PROFITABLE PLAN

Raleigh, Feb. 16.—The practice of growing soybeans in corn is profitable to both tenant and landlord and should be followed to an even greater extent than at present, declares Enos C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College.

Mr. Blair says the experiments conducted by G. M. Garren showing that higher yields of both corn and soybeans are obtained when each crop is planted alone does not tell the whole story. Many farmers will not plant soil improving crops, such as soybeans, unless they can be used between the corn rows. Then, too, Mr. Blair contends that 20 acres of corn and soybeans together, will produce more value of the two crops than will ten acres of corn and ten acres of soybeans. He uses the figures of yields secured by Mr. Garren to support this statement.

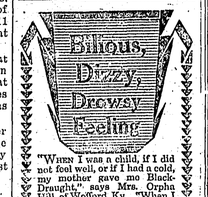
"In the experiment at the Coastal Plains station, where corn and soybeans were planted in the same row, there were 1440 pounds of dry soybean stalks left to the acre, to be plowed under for soil improvement," says Mr. Blair. "The amount of this material left after planting corn and soybeans in alternate rows was 2,440 pounds. At the mountain station 590 pounds of the material was left for turning where the corn and soybeans were planted in the same row and 1,140 pounds where planted in alternate rows. Chemical analyses show dried soybean stalks to contain about 2 percent each of nitrogen and potash and to be worth $11.64 a ton for the plant food contained. This does not consider the organic matter returned to the soil and its great value on future crop yields."

Mr. Blair says growing corn continuously on the same land without a legume will drain the land of its fertility.

11 YEARS CONSTIPATION GLYCERIN MIX ENDS IT

"For 11 years I tried to get rid of constipation," says Chas. E. Blair. "Then at last the simple mixture, Adlerika, made me regular."

The simple mixture of glycerin, buckthorn bark, saline, etc., (Adlerika) acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels, relieving constipation in 2 hours! Brings out poisons you never thought were in your system. Let Adlerika give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleaning and see how good you feel!—LeGrand's Pharmacy.



"When I was a child, if I did not feel well, or if I had a cold, my mother gave me Black-Draught," says Mrs. Orphe Hill, of Wetford, Ky. "When I was married, it became a family medicine in my own home, as it was in my mother's.

"I take it for headache and especially for constipation. When I get bilious, my skin gets yellow and I have a very bad taste in my mouth, and a drowsy feeling all during the day. My eyes burn and I get dizzy, or my head is 'swimming'. When I take Black-Draught, it seems to drive the impurities out of my system and I feel fine. I am seldom without this reliable remedy."

The Way of Life By BRUCE BARTON

DIFFICULTIES

My little tailor came to the office to measure me for a new suit of clothes.

He looked tired. It had not been such a good winter. The American people are either away up or away down in their thinking and their spending. While the stock market was boiling they bought lots of clothes. But they stopped very suddenly, so the little tailor said:

I wondered what a tailor thinks about. It must be monotonous life, going around and measuring men, sewing up the suits and trying them on, and fixing them over, and listening to a good deal of grumbling.

"Do you find life worth living?" I asked him.

His face brightened. "It keeps me interested."

"But what are your pleasures?" I persisted. "What gives you a thrill?"

"Well, for one thing I get quite a lot of excitement in overcoming my difficulties."

He went on to tell me about his difficulties, and as he talked I felt a reverence for that little tailor and a certain amount of shame for myself. How much less he has than I have. But no complaining, no self-pity, no temptation to surrender. He is playing a game in which difficulties are his opponents, and every day, in his modest fashion, he wins some victory.

When I was in Chicago a couple of years ago they told me about the late T. F. Merseles who left the presidency of Montgomery Ward and Company to become the president of John Manville. Why did he do it? He had all the money he could possibly use. Why should a man of sixty give up something which was going smoothly to tackle a new situation?

"Money had nothing to do with it," one of his former associates told me. "He called us in one day and said: 'Boys, I think I have this job licked. So I'll just say good-bye. I'm going where there are some problems'."

Many a man makes himself unhappy, I think, because he regards his difficulties as some special affliction for which Fate has singled him out.

Difficulties are as much a part of the program of life as the pleasures. You're certain to have them. The only question is, how will you regard them? As afflictions?

Or as a part of the game—like Merseles and the little tailor?

CENTRALIZATION RUN WILD

We have no desire to embarrass the Governor in his effort to secure the enactment of helpful legislation. In fact we have always been a great admirer of Max Gardner and his political policies, but somehow he appears to be a bit ultra progressive. He seems to have let some centralization influences, or force, sweep him off his feet. He is advocating legislation which, it seems to us, would be very undemocratic. And not only the Governor, but many members of the present legislature seem to have gone wild over the centralization idea. If the legislature should pass, or attempted, and advocated should all be passed, our entire state, county and township government would be centralized in a little handful of men in Raleigh divided up into boards and bureaus. They would have the governor appoint all state judges and solicitors and most of the other state officers; all the highways of the state, including the little short out of the way county roads, would be looked after by a state highway bureau of three men. Our taxing system would be reduced to a few bureau potentates located in Raleigh and if we did not like what they did we should have no way of helping ourselves. Practically everything would be like the public schools now are, centralized in a few men, located in Raleigh. We are opposed to further centralization. We have always supported the democratic ticket because the democratic party has always stood for local self government and opposed centralization. Then must the party we have always stood by now turn into the greatest centralization machine which has existed since the Carpething administration of Reconstruction days? Let the voters, who are in favor of retaining the sovereign power reserved to them in the Constitution, speak out in such a way as to convince those now gone wild on centralization that they may understand that the people are determined to continue to rule North Carolina.

FOLKS TIRED OF PAYING TO BE REGULATED

We believe the time has about come when the people of this country are sick and tired of being regulated, especially since they have to pay such high taxes for the cost of this regulation. We believe that we already have too many laws. We know that we have too many of those laws which provide for this bureau and that to look after men's private businesses; too many of those laws which are little short of what one would be which might provide that when we may desire to say our prayers we notify some bureau, or some official, or secure a high priced license for the legal right to say our prayers, and then when through be required to notify some official, or some bureau, that we have finished our daily devotions. What we are trying to get at is that taxes are too high, and one reason is that we are paying for others to regulate our businesses and our private lives. The folks are sick and tired of it all. We should simplify our government as much as possible. Men ought to be prohibited from assaulting each other, from taking by force and fraud a weaker person's property, and that is, after all, about all there is to government. And we are here and now predicting that within another decade instead of the governor naming all state officers and appointing bureaus to regulate the lives and the businesses of the state, about all he will be saying to the folks will be, "Run your own affairs for better or for worse. It is none of my business so long as you refrain from violence one against the other and render unto ever man his just dues. But run your own private lives and businesses otherwise as you please."

And when it comes to that, taxes will be lower and business will be better and government will be nearer ideal.

THE LEVEL HEADS WILL PROTECT US—MAYBE

There may be enough cool heads to hold that present legislature in check. If not there is absolutely no telling what it will do before it adjourns in March. We have observed the efforts of will legislation for years, and we have seen some terrible bills offered, but it seems to us that there have been more rash bills introduced in the present General Assembly than during the same time of any session in our memory. Of course, the level heads usually hold down these radical would be lawmakers, and we rather suspect that these are enough level heads in the present legislature to save the people from the grave danger threatened at this time by the wild ones. Let us hope so at least, for if not, may the good Lord have mercy on us all.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR HONESTY

What this state has experienced during the past year ought to convince any one that there is nothing that can be substituted for old fashioned honesty. We regulated our state banks by law, but many of them failed just the same, even those regulated. And the innocent depositors were the sufferers. Those bank which have been managed by honest, careful business men are still open for business. Not because the state regulated their conduct, but because they were run by honest and careful local business men. And those that are still in business would have been in business just as they are without any state regulations whatsoever. We are trying to get at the idea that more time should be spent in training our boys and girls to be honest for the sake of honesty, rather than put so much time on regulation and centralization and paternalistic, or coddling. THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR HONESTY IN BUSINESS OR GOVERNMENT.

JEST A "SHREWD" NUT

They may praise old Gandhi, "India's Mystery Superman," all they please, but, somehow we can think of him as little more than a faker. We do not say we are correct, but it is hard for us to understand how any one with the face and features of Gandhi could possibly be a real reformer and leader. Then, too, his cults, his habits, his mystics, contribute to the proof that Gandhi can scarcely be other than a moderately shrewd humbug playing upon the superstitions of an ignorant race. He practices periodic "sacraments" of the mystical Mahatma, he goes about garbed in a strange costume, he passes much of his time using an old time spinning wheel, he eats like a canary, his daily food being uncooked corn, raisins and milk curds. He goes into trances, which sometimes last for twenty four hours, and such like. In other words, he appeals to us as a "reasonably shrewd nut." We may have him erroneously sized up, but we doubt it.

Press Comment

ONE FARM OPPORTUNITY

Charlotte Observer.

With little prospect for very much improvement in the prices of cotton and tobacco, the two so-called "money crops," and with a disastrous year just behind them, the farmers of the Carolinas are not finding it hard to convince themselves of the soundness of the "Live-at-Home" program advocated by Governor Gardner and long advocated by the agricultural leaders of both state. It is sadly but strikingly true that numberless farm families in these two states who depend upon cotton and tobacco money to pay for their food requirements, and many of them their feed requirements even, have been having very poor picking lately. From counties all over the two states are coming reports of increased acreage being prepared for food and feed crops, better and larger gardens and an increasing interest in livestock.

Probably the greatest curse of agriculture in the Carolinas is infertile or wornout soils. When a farmer can produce even $50 per acre of cotton or tobacco he hesitates to put that acre of land in a crop merely for soil improvement. But when the product from that acre planted to cotton or tobacco is only $15 to $20, a sum that does not cover the cost of fertilizer and labor, then it would appear that it would be more profitable to put that acre in a crop for soil improvement so that when agricultural products are normally priced again larger yields and larger money values may be assured.

Of all times within the past two decades for the logical growing of soil improving crops this is the time. There are quite a number of these crops to select from. Under practically all conditions the several varieties of lespedeza constitute probably the most valuable crop. However, there is the old standby, the cowpea, and soybeans and velvet beans. Not only are all of these crops splendid for soil improving but lespedeza and soy beans particularly are actually good money crops. The farmers of Mecklenburg, Stanly, Cabarrus, Union, and Rowan counties are this year selling tens of thousands of dollars worth of lespedeza seed. The demand for these seed, and the acreage planted in this crop, have increased at a tremendous rate during the past three or four years. Last year and the year before the seed supply was entirely exhausted and thousands of farmers who really desired to plant lespedeza were unable to secure seed. There are indications that a similar condition will be obtain this year. Seed have been moving rapidly and it is evident that a constantly increasing number of farmers are planning to make a start with this crop so to increase their acreage if they have been growing it already. The planting season for lespedeza lasts through March and early April. Those farmers who are unable to secure lespedeza seed should by all means arrange to put a part of their acreage in velvet beans, soybeans or cowpeas. Planted purely for soil improvement probably the velvet bean or cowpea is superior to the soy bean, although several varieties of soy beans offer a larger opportunity for the farmer who wants a money crop as well as a soil improving crop.

We might also state that you will find the courthouse nice and clean at all times. (Davie Record please copy.)

We'll bet our last chaw of store tobacco that it is a Republican politician trying to find some of these folks who promised to vote the Republican ticket in Davie last fall.

MOTOR INDUSTRY LEADS FIELD IN MARCH BACK TO NORMALCY

New York, Feb. 15.—A tow from the motor industry helped general industry further along the road to recovery during the past week.

The business highway in mid-February, however, is infrequently in condition to permit speedy progress, and it is therefore not surprising that definite acceleration has not been experienced.

Manufacturing activity in the automobile centers continues to expand, and has reached better levels than conservative estimates at the start of the year anticipated. One of the leading producers has more workers on its payroll than at any time since last March.

The better demand from the motor makers has caused some further quickening of steel production, and output as last estimated for the entire industry was 50 per cent of capacity, against 48 per cent a week previously. Steel trade circles, however, continue to take a conservative view of the situation, and some impatience over the continuance of a spotty and uncertain demand is expressed. Nevertheless, further marked gains in steel mill activity should not, in keeping with seasonal trends, be expected until March. In the meantime, prices have shown a little wavering here and there.

While there has as yet been no statistical evidence of general improvement in the building industry, it is notable that the number trade in the Pacific northwest is receiving larger orders, and cement mills are increasing their output substantially. Orders for structural steel in the past week were comparatively small. Public works construction is still being delayed by a rather hesitant condition of the bond market, which some observers feel may persist until the soldiers' bonus question is definitely settled. In the past week, however, there has been a resumption of municipal financing in moderate volume.

Reports regarding retail and wholesale trade are rather mixed, and general conclusions are difficult. Nevertheless, a fair volume of merchandise is moving, under the stimulus of low prices, and wholesalers report moderate business in preparation for Easter trade. The textile industry has continued to increase output in most lines although prices have shown unexpected and troublesome unsettlement. Eastern shoe manufacturers were more active.

In general, commodity prices have continued to slip lower during the past week, although a strong market temporarily helped the more speculatives lines, such as gain and cotton.

Freight car loadings as reported for the last week showed a small gain, but the movement of coal continues low, influenced in part by warm weather. Electric power production, as reported for the first week of February, declined a little more than is normal for that period.

Junior Orphan Home Has A Fine Record

Reporting on the past year's record of the Junior Orphan's Home at Lexington, of which W. M. Shuford, formerly of Morganton, is superintendent, the Lexington Dispatch gives a very interesting resume, which is in part as follows:

Embodying an immense amount of work, including the expenditure of $105,000 within twelve months, the report of Superintendent W. M. Shuford, of the Junior Order Orphans home for the year ending Dec. 31, 1930, to be presented the National Board of Trustees of the Home in April will record distinct progress in this modernly constructed and operated institution for the care of the children of deceased members of the order.

The report will show that the institution, which opened March 1, 1927, had at the conclusion of 1930 the total of 32 employees. During the year just passed, 85 children were admitted to the Home and two dismissed, leaving the total number of children now there at 213, of which 116 are girls and 97 are boys. Ten states are represented among this membership.

Starting with nothing, the plant of the institution now consists of thirteen buildings, seven of which are constructed of brick. Water is at present derived from a deep well, but at an early date it is planned to connect with the city water supply.

The report shows that the children at the Home enjoyed exceptional health during the year. Careful attention is given the children by the members of the medical staff headed by Dr. J. E. Terry. All of the children are given immunization for such diseases as small pox, diphtheria and typhoid fever through the use of vaccine. Proper diet, in which milk plays a large part, is also attributed as an important factor in the good health of the Home people, 9,074 gallons of milk, produced in the Home dairy, were consumed. Had the milk been purchased it would have cost the Home approximately $4,000. Large quantities of home grown vegetables, meat and other products were also consumed during the year.

Athletics play an important part in the life of the children at the school. There is now a full-time coach, Robert Bruton, who has charge of all athletics, and all of the children are required to engage in some kind of exercise.

Educational facilities at the home are keeping pace with other growth. The school now has a faculty of five, a principal and four teachers and work is given through the ninth grade. It is planned to add a grade each year until the eleven grades making up a high school in North Carolina are all included in the Home work. Each pupil is required to do four and one-half hours of school work each day for ten months in the year. Along with the educational work, girls in the home are instructed in sewing and general home economics, while the boys are given training in agriculture and mechanical work.

The Home library is an important factor in the children's education and enjoyment. There are now over 1,600 volumes, including fiction, history, travel, not including a library of some 1,500 text books used in the school.

Religiously the Home has developed during the past year through the formation of the Junior Order Home church, of which Dr. J. C. Leonard is the pastor. The church will be supported by what is known as "contributing" members, through the order in the United States. In addition to the Sunday there is a Christian Endeavor Society, with Bible reading and daily devotional held in each class room. The Home church is non-denominational and the children are not influenced in the choice of church which they may join at a later date.

The Home is now valued at almost three-quarters of a million dollars, $726,795 to be exact. Thousands of visitors are drawn annually to the magnificent institution and without fail carry away an impression of the advancement of the ideal and magnificent way in which the Home is progressing.

GOVERNOR GARDNER'S ARGUMENTS

Morganton News-Herald.

It must be admitted that Governor Gardner is still a campaigner. He believes in taking his cause to the people and he has the happy faculty of presenting his arguments in any case in a forceful and almost non-answerable way. Monday night of this week he "went on the air," talking from the Raleigh radio station, to make an appeal to the people of the State for his roads program.

The governor, explained that the administration measure provided for the state's taking over every county road in the state, a new highway commission which would not be fettered in allocating funds to little counties by automobile registration and at least a $6,000,000 reduction in property taxes.

The governor emphasized the fact that the abolition of 150 small and inefficient road governing bodies, and shifting their duties to the efficient highway commission would greatly reduce the actual cost of maintaining the county roads.

He also pledged himself to appoint the best man available to the proposed new highway commission, regardless of whether or not they were members of the present body.

He praised the work of the highway commission but said its task was finished and a new commission should be created.

Charges against the counties included:

1. Bonded indebtedness for roads is far in excess of the value of the highways of the county systems, bonds having been issued to pay deficits.

2. Hopelessly inadequate and wasteful methods are used in many counties.

3. No records of township expenditures are kept and in a few instances the county accountant has no receipt of tax money for road purposes.

4. Fifty ter cent of the tax levy in some counties is used up in salaries, per diems and overhead expenses.

5. No satisfactory records of the cost of maintenance and upkeep are kept.

6. County authorities reported 66,000 miles of road but survey showed there were only 45,000 miles.

7. The gasoline, oil and grease bill amounted to $20 per mile—many miles showed no evidence of having benefited by maintenance.

8. For every dollar invested in equipment almost one dollar was required for its operation and repair.

9. Some counties are over equipped, others under equipped.

10. Some counties are equipped with right kind of machinery, others not.

11. Counties have paid the penalty for too close contact with super-salesmanship in road machinery fields.

12. Court costs have been paid from road funds.

13. It cost the counties $515 to keep a prisoner on chain gangs, while it costs the state prison only $279.

14. The county unit is not large enough for efficient operation.

It is well, in giving thought to the governor's argument to take one by one the charges made against the present county plan of road administration and see how many of the fourteen points he made will apply in each county. It would be interesting to have answered the questions implied in each of the points made in the governor's address. In many of them, if not all, it must be granted that he is right.

AMERICA'S WARMEST JANUARY IS BLAMED ON SPOTS ON SUN

America's warmest January in half a century may be blamed in part on the mysterious spots on the sun, Prof. Griffith Taylor, one of the nation's noted climatologists says.

Flowers are blooming in the Rocky Mountain region. Butterflies are flitting from blossom to blossom in the Pacific northwest. The city of St. Paul is wondering what to do with its fund of $100,000 for snow removal, inasmuch as there is no snow to remove. Middle Western farmers are confronted by a critical drought.

Winter, with its blizzards, below zero temperature, gales, sleet and snow merely is a memory of other years. And sun spots, said the professor, are partly responsible for this, the warmest, yes even the hottest January in 50 years.

Prof. Taylor is in charge of climatology research at the University of Chicago, where he has studied the ever changing blotches on the sun for years, and noted their effect on climate conditions here on earth.

Prof. Taylor says that during a period when the spots on the sun are the thickest, its radiates a greater amount of heat than usual thus tending to make the earth's temperature warmer and cutting down on the amount of rain in certain hazily defined belts over the globe. He hastened to add, however, that sun spots make up only one of perhaps a dozen reasons for drought and unusually high temperatures.

The lack of moisture, meanwhile, rapidly was growing critical in the Middle West still suffering from crops ruined by last summer drought.

FOUR-H CLUB WORK FACTOR IN FARMING

Raleigh, Feb. 16.—The 26,638 rural boys and girls enrolled in the 4-H clubs organized and conducted by extension workers of State College, played a commendable share in improving acre yields of food and feed crops and in handling livestock for better profits last year.

L. R. Harrill, state club leader, says for example, that there were 1,461 club members with corn projects. Of this number 1,001 members completed their work and made reports. These boys and girls grew 1203 acres of corn producing 49,467 bushels or an average yield of 49.4 bushels an acre and compared to the 20.9 average acre yield for the state as a whole.

The average yield of wheat grown by 29 club members was 16.8 bushels compared with a State average of 12.5 bushels an acre. The average yield per acre of irish potatoes grown by 127 members reporting was 141 bushels as compared with the state average of 98. The average acre yield of sweet potatoes grown by 79 club members reporting was 159 bushels an acre as compared with the state average of 97 bushels. With cotton, 322 club members produced an average yield of 675 pounds of lint an acre as compared with an average for the state last year of 233 pounds.

Mr. Harrill is especially pleased with the increased interest in the livestock clubs. He says 1040 club members were enrolled in dairy calf work last year with 802 members completing their projects. These boys and girls had 892 animals. There were also 1200 club members enrolled in the pig project and 806 reported though it was impossible to get a complete record of all pigs handled. However, 27 club members reported on their sheep projects showing 120 animals handled. With poultry 1,276 members out of 2,228 members enrolled, reported on their projects showing 43,783 birds handled.

My Best Girl

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Eighth Installment

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter-carrier, her mother a lazy woman who has "seen better days," and her sister a bootlegger's sweetheart who works in a beauty parlor, is stock girl in the "Mack" annex, the Five-and-Ten of San Francisco. A boy whom she knows only as "Joe Grant," but who is really Joseph Grant MacKenzie Merrill, son of the owner of the "Mack," is learning the business by starting at the bottom. He doesn't like the job until he meets Maggie. And when Joe and Maggie realize that they are falling in love with each other, as first Joe is impressed, however, by Maggie's intelligence and goodheartedness, and gives her advice on the subject nearest to her heart, which is the ideal life. She makes a suggestion for a better way of selling certain lines. He tells his father, as if it were his own idea, a way of pleasing the old man. He knows that the girls he used to know don't interest him as Maggie does, and when at last Maggie discloses her love in a burst of jealousy, he realizes that he loves her, too.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Her face burned, her hands were icy, her confused mind was only a blur, and her heart one heavy, unendurable ache.

It had been pretty bold of her to question him, to kindle him about Paula Younger. After all, it was Joe's affair.

Her thoughts burned, stung, writhed together. The one unbearable thought was that the half-past five o'clock whistle would sound, and Murphy begin to close the big iron doors and grills against the world, and that she would have to go home—what else could she do?—to be shrewdly questioned and bear the week-end with Joe "mad" at her.

He had already been elevated to the offices, which were placed in a position of some dignity and seclusion, on a mezzanine deck at the far rear of the store.

Sometimes, when a customer brought in a defective article, Maggie had to guide her upstairs to the wire cage marked "Complaints," and once or twice other errands had taken her to the offices. But she had no excuse to-day.

She turned the knob of the glass door rather timidly, and found herself standing at the window in the back of the room, with Simmonds, a buyer, both intent upon the inspection of some sort of material.

"What is it?" Simmonds asked sharply.

"Excuse me," Maggie faltered, "but is Miss Pope up here?"

Simmonds came toward her. And Joe—as she saw with a sinking heart—casually turned away and began to study a big, illustrated, lurating book of "swatches."

"Was Miss Pope up here?" Simmonds asked.

"Miss Pope," Joe said, in a quiet voice, "is downstairs in the music department."

Maggie's face was very red, she looked only at the older man.

"I didn't see her there," she said thickly.

And somehow she got herself out of the glass door again, and somehow flew down the stairs, and was feverishly busy instantly with a large cardboard box of jackets and chains, in the jewellery department.

And all the while her heart pounded as if it would hammer her to pieces, and her shamed thoughts almost suffocated her.

"He knew"—went up there to talk to him—what'll he think I am! He didn't want to speak to me at all—and I bluffed that Miss Pope was up there—he seen right through me! He saw right through me. Oh, I wish I was dead! I can't have him thinking like that about me! I wish I was dead. What'll I do? I can't ever look him in the face again."

She was standing at an angle of the jewellery counter that was placed in a sort of niche between columns.

Suddenly she knew that a tall, lean man was lounging on the counter beside her, his shoulder almost touching her own.

"Still mad at me?" It was Joe's voice.

"Joe——" Her voice wouldn't come. "Joe, don't be mean to me," she said in a low tone, holding her words steady, not raising her eyes.

"Was I mean to you, Maggie?"

"Of course—of course you're not, Joe! It's just that I'm—I'm an idiot! It's none of my business who you lunch with—and I'm sorry I—blew up."

"It is your business, if you care, Maggie," he said, nicely, kindly, even a little gruffly.

"But I am going not to care."

Joe experienced a queer little twinge of pain. She looked so small, so weary, so exquisitely pretty in his soft light, and she was such a loving little thing!

"I'm glad we're friends again," he said awkwardly.

"Yes, I am, too."

"I couldn't of stood it," she confessed.

The other employees of the Mack were streaming through the side door when Maggie came flying up from the locker room. Joe was lingering at the top of the stairs.

"I thought I'd walk with you to the corner."

"Oh, that's grand! Which way do you go, Joe?"

"Down past the city—out on the Elmindale road."

"Then you want the Ten car." His arm was under her elbow, and she gave him once more the delicious sensation of nearness, confidence, and sweet smallness and youth.

He had never seen her so deliciously pretty, so small and loving and enchanting. She could hardly keep her little feet on the ground. Tired? Depressed? Hungry? Not when Joe Grant, tall and lean and protective and most appealing, was beside her, was guiding her along the lighted street.

Her walk was a combination of jump, bounce, and dance step. Joe had to laugh sympathetically at the laughing face, the eager eyes that demanded his sympathy.

"This is my corner, Joe."

His steps had been quite automatically turned toward that particular quiet block where he had parked his roadster. They were close to the handsome, low-slung car now.

"You'd wonder he'd have any business in this neighbourhood," the girl innocently commented.

"How far away do you live, Maggie?"

"Oh, not so far. Pop and I walk it every morning. 'Bout—I think it's thirteen blocks."

Joe had palmed his key.

"Want me to run you home in this car?"

"I get so sick of my automobile, it's a treat to me to walk!" Maggie assured him. She was horrified when he slipped into the machine, and challenged her cheerfully.

"Joe Grant, get out of that car! D'you want to be sent to jail?"

"Oh, come on, get in, Maggie—don't be so scary."

"But, Joe, isn't it locked?"

"Nope. Key right here! Get in, Maggie, and—listen! I'll bring it back to the other end of the block and let him hunt for it awhile, to teach him a lesson about forgetting to lock it!"

"Joe, you could be sent to jail for that!"

"Oh, come on—it won't take five minutes!"

In the end, she yielded.

"Maggie, how'd you like to own a car like this, and have a big, fluffy white fur coat, and be riding along here this way—down to Elmingdale, or the Westbeach Arms, or one of those fashionable places?"

"Joe, believe me, I've seen girls do both ways, and there's nothing in letting fellers buy you coats and take you out riding. You don't mind being poor, do you, Joe?" she asked anxiously.

"Don't you?"

"I? Why, but what else would I be?" she demanded blankly.

"Don't you ever think of yourself as rich, with beautiful clothes, and a maid, and a big, comfortable room?" He glanced sideways.

"I think of myself as straight," she said briefly.

"Anyway, we're pretty near living the ideal life now, and my father says that all day long he thinks about—our house, and how nice and shady and quiet the kitchen is, and all the new dish towels——"

"We're getting out of debt, and even Liz said it was some comfort to come home to our house now—and she s-said—Liz said—that s-s-she——"

"Maggie! For heaven's sake! What are you crying about?"

"He-because—because they said I did it, Joe! Even Ma said that I made them all comfortable—and happier—and it—it makes me cry to have them love me so!"

He abruptly ran the car into the curb, and stopped it there, and put his arms about her, and tipped up her face.

"Now, look here, stop it. Stop this bawling right away, or you'll have me crying, too."

His big arm held her tightly, jammed against him, and her bewildered, ecstatic, tear-stained little rosy face was close to his own.

"J-Joe Grant!" she said breathlessly.

"Maggie Johnson! You've known this was coming, haven't you?"

"J-Joe Grant!"

His big arm held her tightly. . . . "J-Joe Grant" she said, breathlessly.

"Surprised?"

"No—but—but—I guess—maybe I thought——"

"Go on. Don't stop. Maybe you thought what?"

"I thought you were kinder—kidding me along."

It was at this juncture that for a terrible moment Joe Grant disappeared from his own consciousness for a few seconds, and the Joseph Merrill who was a truant from college, who belonged to the same world as this smart roadster, took his place.

To play a part was all very well insomuch as it concerned only himself.

But here was this bewildering little sobbing armful of passionately earnest femininity in his arms, her tear-soaked lashes almost touching his cheek, her whole being only too obviously ready to yield itself to his guardianship forever.

How on earth was he going to get out of this with Maggie Johnson?

When he spoke, his tone and manner had subtly altered.

"Why shouldn't I kid you along?" he said. "You're too much of a kid, yourself, to get mixed up in love affairs!"

She drew herself up, fumbled in her bag for a handkerchief, wiped her eyes quite openly, and said, in a composed, cold voice:

"You must drive me home, Joe. My father and mother'll be wild if I'm late."

"Maggie—listen. Don't take that tone! You know how much I like you—I've got to stop this, I've got to stop this, I'm a fool if I don't stop this, he added, in his heart. "Why, you're not eighteen—you're a little girl!"

"I'm eighteen to-morrow, and I'm not a little girl at all," she said, with swift dignity.

"Eighteen! Why, what would your father think if you married at eighteen!" Joe protested. "Damn it—and damn me for a fool!" he ejaculated. "Now I've said it! This is the first time that word has come into our conversations, and I'm the one that introduced it."

Maggie cleared her throat.

"I've had a great deal of responsibility in my life, and there's nothing so developing to the character as responsibility," she began. "Since I was ten years old, I've been tryin' to earn a little an' spend a little less, to bear sorrows patiently. Pop says he's always been anxious to live the life-al life, too, but he never thought it could be done on a postman's salary."

"Listen, Maggie. Listen, darling——"

"Since Christmas," she went on, "it's been you, Joe. Everything I done or everything I've done," she corrected it, "has been done because I was thinkin' of you."

He caught her small agitated hands and held them tightly.

"Maggie, just be quiet, dear. There's no need for you to get so excited and upset. Listen, dear. I like you immensely. I think you have more character than any girl I ever knew. I wouldn't give up your friendship for anything in the world. But you're only a little girl, Maggie, you're going to have a dozen beaus before you pick out the man you want to marry." He winced interiorly. "I hope our friendship——"

"I know, Joe, I know. That's you. That's your side of it. But I was talkin' about me."

She caught at his hand with a small bare hand, and raised her beautiful, wistful, childish eyes.

He laughed suddenly, boyishly.

"Ah, Maggie! You little idiot!"

And his kiss was a different kiss. The little figure rested against his breast, the little hand was crushed against his heart, and the fragrant soul of her seemed to be drawn through her fresh, half-opened lips.

Then they talked. Maggie's head locked in his, her head resting luxuriously against his shoulder.

"I'm getting thirty-five a week, Mary Margaret. And I'm not going to have my wife work!"

"Oh, Joe—I'll die—to hear you say 'my wife!'"

"That's about—one forty a month."

A BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

The Roxboro Courier.

Poultry is getting to be one of the worth while industries of this good Country, but, like everything else, it has its darwbacks. For instance, during the summer months eggs are slow of sale and low in price, and the farmer is not prepared to keep them, and besides, he wants the money to help carry on his farming operations. If some one, with a limited amount of capital could be induced to look into this matter he would find here a splendid opportunity to make some money and at the same time, be of real service to the farmer.

Below will be found an article showing how they are working the proposition in Texas. Read it:

"Texas, home of many modern farming ideas, is fostering a new thought—a cooperative egg storage plant which a group of farmers there believe will enable egg producers to obtain a greater portion of the profits from this farm product.

A 2400 case, electrically refrigerated storage plant is being constructed in the farm community of Bowie, Texas, and will be ready by early spring. Summer eggs, ordinarily thrown on an unprofitable market, will be held for the more favorable fall and winter prices.

The community egg storage innovation followed a chamber of commerce investigation of the success of small egg refrigeration plants a number of which have been operated in the Lone Star State during the past two years by individual farmers and merchant of farming communities. Impressed, the Bowie egg producers decided upon the proposed plant, which is said to be twice the size of any now in operation.

One of the first such plants was built by Lee Faulkner, Bellevue, Texas, merchant, who reported that during the first year he bought summer eggs for $7.50 a case and sold them in November for $12.50 a case.

"From the above figures," Mr. Faulkner stated, "it is evident that my plant, which cost $3,000, not only paid for itself during the first year, but that such a plant is a valuable asset to a business like mine, or a farm community."

The Bowie plant, like the others in Texas, will be of frame construction, with cork board insulation."

House Passes Vets' Loan Bill 363 to 39

212 Republicans, 150 Democrats For Bill; All Opponents Are Republicans

Washington, Feb. 16.—Striking hard at administration opposition, the house today passed the veterans loan bill by the overwhelming vote of 363 to 39.

It provides for an increase from 22½ to 50 per cent in the loan value of the adjusted compensation certificates which were approve by the house 355 to 54 in 1924.

Amid dramatic intensity, the measure was sent to the senate within an hour after Speaker Longworth opened the way for consideration. It carried with it more than enough votes to override a presidential veto. Similar quick action is expected in the other branch.

Leadership Split

With their leadership split, fewer than two score old line republicans rallied behind Major Leader Tilson and Chairman Hawley of the house ways and means committee.

Crowded galleries looked on as the members balloted after 40 minutes of debate.

More than 400 of 435 members were present. Under the procedure, the bill had to receive a two-thirds vote for passage.

Longworth Helps

Speaker Longworth swung 216 republican votes for the measure against the warning of Secretary Mellon that the treasury would have difficulty in financing it. Minority Leader Garner mustered his forces solidly with 151 votes for the bill and the farm-labor member—Kvale—of Minnesota—added his to make the total.

Representative Bacharach of New Jersey, proponent of the measure, led the advocates with the statement that he could not understand why the treasury should not approve the bill after conceding it was the best of all suggested. He predicted no bond issue would be necessary to finance the loans.

Garner wound up the debate for the minority with the assertion that the only argument against this bill is the argument of the secretary of the treasury.

Chairman Hawley, Representatives Treadway of Massachusetts, Ramseyer of Iowa, Chindblom of Illinois, members of the ways and means committee, and Fort of New Jersey, all administration followers, urged defeat.

Rogers Bill Passed

Shortly after the shouting that cheered the passage had died, the house passed and sent to the senate the Rogers bill to authorize a $12,500,000 expansion of the veterans hospital facilities without a record vote. It also passed a bill authorizing expansion of the home for disabled volunteer soldiers to cost $2,800,000 and sent it to the senate.

Earlier the house veterans committee approved the Johnson bill to provide $20 a month pensions for widows and children or World War veterans, entailing an estimated outlay of $191,000,000 in five years, beginning with $10,000,000 for the first year.

All of the 39 who opposed the bill were republicans.

FOOL-PROOF PLANE SHOWN

New York, Feb. 12.—A fool-proof-landing airplane was demonstrated today at the Glenn Curtis Airport. Its inventor says no pilot can be killed or injured if he will set the wings as prescribed and allow the ship to take care of itself.

Henry White, pilot, seven times today took the Merrill fool-proof plane aloft, set the wings at the 14 degree angle, and hands above his head, sat in the cockpit until the plane had reached the ground bounced a few times and came to a stop.

Albert Adams Merrill, inventor, who started experimenting with airplanes in 1894 is its perfector.

"This new type plane has wings which can be set at a 14 degree angle," he said. "The pilot need only to set them and throttle down to idling speed. The plane assumes the proper gliding position and continues to the ground without further attention.

"The plane can't nose dive, stall or get into a spin. It's good for all kinds of normal flying but is useless to a stunt flier—it will not do acrobatics."

The secret is in the wings, Merrill said. They differ from other designs only in that their maximum angle of tilting is 14 degrees.

FISHERMEN SAVED FROM LAKE ERIE'S DRIFTING FLOES

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Seven coast guards and three fishermen whom they had gone out to rescue from a drifting ice floe in Lake Erie were brought to shore ice this morning and were able to make their way across the ice to land.

The three fishermen were the last of a group of 20 cast adrift Saturday morning when the ice on which they were fishing snapped away from the main body.

Sixteen men and a nine-year-old boy, cast adrift when the ice on which they were fishing broke away from ashore Saturday, were brought ashore last night and the coastguards went back for the remaining three fishermen.

Then the treacherous ice pack shifted, wedging the coastguard boat solidly into an ice floe which was cut off from the main pack by a rapidly widening stretch of open water. The boat was held in this position for hours before the rescue was effected.

CORN YIELD DEPRESSED BY LEGUME INTERCROP

Raleigh, Feb. 9.—Tests made by G. M. Garren, cereal agronomist of the North Carolina Experiment Station, at the mountain and constal plain branch station farms last season indicate that intercropping corn with soybeans depresses the yield of corn and cuts the yield of soybeans as compared with yields secured when either of the two crops is grown alone.

Mr. Garren reports that this is a rather startling statement to make since most good farmers have practiced the intercropping of cowpeas or soybeans with corn but he presents facts to back up his statement.

In making the tests on the two farms last year, Mr. Garren mensured his land into one-tenth acre plots. In the first, he planted corn alone; in the second, he planted soybeans between the hills of corn; in the third, he planted a row of soybeans alternately with the rows of corn, and in the fourth, he planted soybeans alone.

Results secured on the mountain farm will give a fair example of what yields were secured. Taking round figures, he secured a yield of 56 bushels of corn per acre when the corn was planted alone. Where soybeans were planted between the hills, he harvested 50 bushels of corn an acre and where the soybeans were planted in alternate rows, he harvested 37 bushels of corn an acre.

Where the soybeans were grown alone, he harvested 30 bushels of the beans an acre; where the beans were planted between the hills of corn, he harvested 7.5 bushels an acre and where the soybeans were planted in alternate rows, he harvested 26.6 bushels of the beans an acre.

In this test, of course, no account was taken of the soil improving qualities of the soybeans nor of the value of the beans as compared with the corn yield that was cut down.

Because Bladen farmers were anxious to get some cash for starting their crops, they cooperated to sell 8,000 pounds of poultry at the car door in Clarkton and Bladenboro last week.

STATE AUTOMOBILE DEATH RATE THIRD HIGHER THAN FOR NATION

Raleigh, Feb. 13.—North Carolina's automobile death rate is 33⅓ per cent greater than for the whole United States, according to an analysis of the motor vehicle deaths in the state in 1930 made by Sprague Silver, motor supervisor of the department of revenue.

There were 777 persons killed in motor vehicle accidents in the state during 1930. This is equal to one death in every 610 automobile owners and, based on the ratio of the United States of one death to every 823 automobile owners, is 33⅓ per cent greater than for the whole country, Mr. Silver said.

The 777 death list in 1930 compares with a total of 690 persons killed in 1929, and is an increase of 7.9 per cent. This is an increase of 200 per cent over 1928 and 1929 with a decreased registration of approximately 29,000 motor vehicles, said Mr. Silver.

Mr. Silver said the North Carolina death rate percentage from motor vehicle accidents is only exceeded by three southern states Florida, Virginia and South Carolina, and the registration for North Carolina is in excess of the registration of either of these states by at least 100,000 motor vehicles.

14,000 ACRES OF TIMBER LAND BURN

Asheville.—Fourteen thousand acres of timber lands in ten western North Carolina counties have been burned by 1,168 forest fires since January 1, W. K. Bleckley, district forester, announced.

The actual damage to timber was estimated at $37,000, with the cost from loss of seedlings and future erosion impossible to determine, he said. The counties are Buncombe, Cherokee, Clay, Haywood, Henderson, Jackson, Macon, Polk, Swain and Yancy.

Additional thousands of acres were burned in McDowell, which is not in Biechler's district.

LESS COTTON, MORE MONEY, LEGGE'S ADVICE TO SOUTH

Raleigh, Feb. 12.—The opinion that a 14,000,000 bale cotton crop this year would sell for $232,000,000 less than a 10,000,000 bale crop was expressed tonight by Chairman Legge of the farm board.

In an address before the Raleigh chamber of commerce, Legge said his estimate was based on compilations by a score of large cotton dealers. He strongly urged reduced production.

To the higher price for a 10,000,000 bale crop, Legge and the saving for planting, fertilizing, picking and ginning a 14,000,000 bale crop should be added.

Based on the average yield for the last two years, Legge said, to bring the crop down to a 10,000,000 bale basis "would mean a reduction of more than 14,000,000 acre, or 31 per cent less than was planted last year."

"The lowest estimate we have seen on the cost an acre for raising cotton is somewhere between $15 and $16, probably too low a figure for the cotton growers as a whole," he added. "Even on this basis the saving in cost would amount to over $200,000,000 or an average of more than $100 apiece for the 2,000,000 cotton growers of the south."

In addition, he said the compilation contemplated no use of the land theoretically taken out of cotton production which might profitably be turned to other crops.

Going into the new crop year with a carry-over of from 8,500,000 bales to 9,000,000 bales, Legge said, "it seems rather conclusive that the sound business policy for 1931 would be a sufficient curtailment of production to permit the consuming demand to make a material reduction in the stock on hand."

A 1931 cotton crop approximately as large as the last two, he asserted, would inevitably result in a still lower price for the commodity.

THOUSANDS FREEZE TO DEATH IN CHINA

Harbin, Manchuria, Feb. 14.—With the mercury falling as low as 45 degrees below zero, this city is experiencing one of the coldest winters in many years. More than 1,000 persons have frozen to death on the streets.

In northern sections of the country, especially along the Siberian and Manchurian border, the cold has been even more severe.

Although the snow is not unusually heavy for this part of the world, the intense cold has caused many train lines to run two and three days behind time.

Several major accidents have been reported along the Chinese Eastern railway and in one case a train left the tracks when the locomotive wheels froze and crumbled.

Several instances have been reported where men and women leaving cabarets in intoxicated conditions have fallen into the streets and frozen to death in a short time.

Senator Grant's Opposition Fails Of Effect

Representative J. P. LeGrand Passes Bill Abolishing Office of Treasurer

Commissioners Are Authorized To Appoint Financial Agent For Davie

Through a long distance telephone message Monday afternoon, the Enterprise representative learned from Mr. J. P. LeGrand that the bill introduced by Davie's member in the Lower House abolishing the Office of County Treasurer had passed the Senate without a dissenting vote and is now on its way to enactment into law. It will be recalled that the Democratic party in the recent campaign promised to abolish this office in the interest of economy, and place the work now being performed by the treasurer with some bank or individual, at a considerable saving to the taxpayers. It has been currently rumored that this was merely a campaign gesture and that the Democrats, once well established in office, would not dare to molest the office of county treasurer. Senator Grant, elected by a greatly reduced majority, was among those questioning the motives of the Democrats regarding abolishment of the treasurer's office.

Several days ago John P. LeGrand, Davie's Democratic representative, introduced the following bill in the Lower House:

LeGrand Defends Davie Bill

Raleigh.—Representative J. P. LeGrand's bill to abolish the office of county treasurer of Davie county, is not as vicious as Senator Turner Grant, of the same county, would have the Senate believe, he states.

If the bank in Mocksville will put bonds in the hands of the county for the $500 allowed in the bill then the county commissioners are authorized to appoint a fiscal agent to handle the funds, or, if it should come to such a pass, the banks of Winston-Salem could be used, Mr. LeGrand said.

Representative LeGrand said he had talked with some of the members of the Senate who had suggested that the bill go over and they will now support and push the measure through that body. It will be up for final action Monday night already having passed the House.

The bill, as introduced by Representative LeGrand, follows:

A bill to be entitled

An Act To Abolish The Office of Treasurer of Davie County And To Appoint A Substitute Therefor.

The General Assembly of North Carolina do Enact:

Section 1. That the Board of Commissioners of Davie County are hereby authorized and empowered to abolish the office of Treasurer of said county and in lieu thereof to appoint some bank located in the county as Financial Agent of the county, which bank shall perform the duties now performed by the Treasurer. The said bank appointed to act as Financial Agent of the county shall be appointed for a term of two (2) years, at a compensation not in excess of Five Hundred ($500) Dollars per annum and shall be required to execute the bond for the safe-keeping and proper accounting of such funds as may come into its possession and belonging to said county or any political subdivision thereof and for the faithful discharge of those duties as is now required by law of county treasurers. If, however, there is no bank or trust company in the county, which can or will accept such appointment, the Board of Commissioners is hereby authorized to appoint some bank or trust company of an adjoining county as such Financial Agent, under the same terms and conditions as it might appoint a bank located in the county.

Section 2. If said Board of Commissioners, in the exercise of their discretion, should determine not to select a bank or trust company to act as Financial Agent, it may, after abolishing the office of treasurer as provided in section 1, select some suitable person to act as Fiscal Agent for the county, who shall be required to execute the same bonds for the safekeeping and proper accounting of such funds as may come into his possession and belonging to the county or any political subdivision in the county and for the faithful discharge of his duties as now required by law of county treasurers. The compensation of said Fiscal Agent shall be not in excess of Five Hundred ($500) Dollars per annum, payable monthly.

Section 4. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

Section 5. This act shall take effect from and after its ratification.

This measure passed the House immediately, but when it reached the Senate it encountered opposition from Senator Grant and one or two others, as evidenced by the following excerpts; from the Winston-Salem Journal; one from Mr. Fred R. Leagans, of Cooleemee, and the other from the Raleigh staff correspondent of The Journal.

Davie Fight Looms Tonight

Cooleemee—A fight is looming in the state Senate Monday when the bill introduced and passed by the lower house by Davie's representative, J. P. LeGrand, for the abolishment of the office of treasurer of the county comes before that body for action.

Senator A. T. Grant, from the twenty-fourth district, is leading the fight on the grounds that it is only a campaign promise and not designedly for the betterment of the county government. The senator is supported by Senator Clement, of Rowan county, contends that the $500 allowed a bank for handling the county funds is insufficient and that one of the few counties now in good

WIFE BELLED BY HUSBAND GETS DIVORCE

Chicago, Feb. 22.—"My husband," Mrs. Conrad Pacheldt complained to the court yesterday, "made me walk home from sleigh rides."

"What's the idea?" said the court. "Didn't you want to hear the sleigh bells onto me, so I'd jingle."

Divorce granted.

"Waited a minute, judge, listen to this. He didn't like alarm clocks—so every morning, I had to run around his bed, clogging on the floor with wooden shoes."

"Ah, I was saying," continued the court, "divorce granted."

BORN WITH TWO TEETH

There was born to Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McBride on January 30th, a son, Robert Eugene, weight 12½ pounds. Now, there is nothing unusual in this statement, so far, for babies are no rarity in this section where race suicide is unknown, but the fact that this baby was born with two teeth is news, for it does not happen often. Mr. McBride says if you doubt this statement call at his home and he will show you Robert with two well formed teeth on the bottom row.—Roxboro Courier, Feb. 11th.

Davie County Tournament To Be Held In Mocksville The First Week In March; Six Davie Schools Are Entering

The Davie County Basketball tournament, to be held in Mocksville the first week in March, is expected to draw large crowds from all over the county. All the schools in the county will be represented by entering teams in these contests. Each school will have an opportunity of entering the following teams: One midget boys team, one midget girls' team one girls' (varsity) team, and one boys' (varsity) team. The girls' and boys' varsity teams winning out in the tournament will each receive, as a trophy, a silver loving cup.

The champions of the county last year were as follows: Midget boys—Advance; midget girls—Smith Grove; boys (varsity—Cooleemee; girls (varsity)—Cooleemee.

The people who witnessed these events last year were well pleased, both with the snappy games and the fine sportsmanship exhibited through the entire tournament. Due to the new rule, that a team must be defeated twice before it is eliminated, the team will be enabled to play more games and of course more interest will be aroused among the fans of the county.

The gate receipts will be divided among the schools represented in porportion to the number of games played by the teams they enter.

The rules governing the tournament are given below:

1. A committee is to secure a neutral referee to referee both boys and girls games.

2. A silver loving cup or trophy shall be given to the winners of both boy's and girls' teams. The cup shall become the permanent property of the school that shall win it two years in succession or three years not in succession.

3. The prices of admission shall be fifteen and twenty-five cents each night, except the final game when twenty and thirty-five cents may be charged. If any games are to be played in the afternoon the admission shall be ten cents straight.

4. Each coach in the county shall present to the committee a list of boys and girls that are eligible to compete in the championship series not later than February 26th.

5. The players, coaches, and substitutes of each team entered shall be admitted to all contests free. No school, however, shall be allowed more than ten boys or twelve girls to the team.

6. Due to the fact that the winning team will have to play three successive nights, the preliminary games shall be played in six minute quarters with two minutes intermission between quarters and five minutes at the half. The final game shall consist of eight minute quarters with two minutes between quarters and five minutes between halves.

7. All games will be called according to 1930-31 Spalding Official Rule Book. Each field goal in girls' games will count two points, regardless of how made.

8. The proceeds shall be divided among teams taking part—the team playing the most games to get the greater portion. Each game entitles the team to one portion or part of the gate receipts; midget games shall count one half part.

Below are eligibility rules for individual players:

(a) Each player must have attended school at least 60% of the present school year up to date of game.

(b) No player shall be eligible to play who has already played over four years of high school basketball.

(c) No graduate shall be eligible.

(d) Each player must have made passing grades in at least three subjects for the previous term of work and for the previous month.

(e) No player can play in any other than a midget game if he or she is in a grade below the eighth.

(f) No first team shall be eliminated from the contest unless it has lost two games.

Each school entered agrees to abide by the rules of the committee. Failure to do so will forfeit the right of the school to participate further in the contests, or forfeit all rights after contests have been played.

Each school may also enter a lightweight team, both boys and girls. No boy shall weigh more than 120 pounds and no girl more than 110 pounds. No one can play on both first and lightweight teams. The time that they shall play and other details pertaining to the lightweight championship will be formulated by the committee after ascertaining the number of teams that expect to enter.

MOCKSVILLE WINS CLOSE GAME

In a game featured by skillful playing and perhaps the most hotly-contested battle ever staged on a Mocksville court, the Mocksville All-Stars last Thursday night defeated the strong Salisbury Phantoms by a score of 32 to 30. Thrills packed the unusual basket ball game from start to finish and, although Mocksville won in the final few moments of play, the Salisbury aggregation led in the scoring all the way to put fear into the locals.

Dwiggins and Madison, guards, were the outstanding players for Mocksville, the former making 15 points of his team's total, and the latter doing fast footwork and netting two points. Woodruff and Allen, forwards, made five and four points each, and Crenshaw, center, gathered in six. O'Brown and Saleeby, guards, were also Salisbury's outstanding players, O'Brown scoring eight, Saleeby two, while Peeler, forward, led with 10 points.

The two teams will meet again here on Friday night at 7:45 to play off engagement.

DIXIE AS THE WORLD'S WONDER

Those who love the southland ought to be interested in some figures given out recently by the Manufacturers Record, showing the marvelous growth and development of Dixie since the close of the War Between the States. Indeed, the things the South is now doing are almost beyond belief. That we now boast of between a third and a half of the population of the entire country, is a fact which not all southerners know. To be exact, according to the 1930 census, the south has forty one million inhabitants. Our annual agricultural output is now about equal to that of the entire country thirty years ago. Our manufactories turn out finished products valued at the manufactured output of the entire nation in 1900. Some of our Southern cities now have more people living within their borders than those who went to make up entire states in Civil War days. The aggregate wealth of the south is now almost equal to the total wealth of the entire nation thirty years ago.

We think we are suffering from a bad depression just now, and we are, but with such a record of achievement within the past thirty years, we should be thankful that business conditions are no worse than they are and we should turn our faces towards the future with renewed hopes and aspirations and determinations to continue in this growth and development which has done nothing short of making the world wonder at our achievement since those dark, poverty stricken days of the sixties.

IF WE FAINT NOT

Three weeks ago this paper predicted that we had already reached the bottom in the business depression and would hence start slowly on the uphill climb again. Well, since then we have not changed our mind. Every day one can see slight signs of improvement. This improvement is slow, and we rather suspect that it will continue to go slowly, and it will be best for every one if such should be the case. We should all keep our heads and still strive to adjust ourselves to conditions as they are, not as we should like to have them. There is no use for us to look for normal conditions soon. We doubt whether or not even another crop season shall be able to bring business conditions up to anything like normal. But let us hope that conditions will continue to improve. Let us have faith in ourselves and in the fundamental soundness of our country's conditions. Let us economize, let us work, let us think, strive and fight. We shall make the grade yet, if we faint not.

WILL HELP BUSINESS CONDITIONS

At the time this is written it looks like the soldiers' bonus measure is going through safely. If it does, it will be the occasion of some business improvement. It will turn loose a large amount of money in every section of the United States. We are told that the measure will make it possible for each ex-service man to borrow half the amount which his certificate calls for, and as these certificates call for amounts running around $500 to $1,700, depending on the length of the services rendered by the certificate holder during the world War, the passing of the measure by Congress will mean that every man who served in the World War can borrow on his certificate amounts ranging from $250 to around $900. And most of them will draw the amounts allowed. That will help the boys, especially those who are out of work just now on account of the business depression and those farmers who sorely need some ready cash to help them finance the making of a crop the coming summer.

IS THIS TALK TO YOU

There are several hundred readers of this paper whose subscriptions have and will expire this month. Scores of these are coming in and renewing, and we trust that the others will do so before the first days of March shall have passed away. We want you to see us right away and get straightened up for another year. We also want several hundred new readers before April 1st. Now is the time to look after this little matter, friends. Don't put it off. You need the paper and we need the money. It takes a whale of a pile of money to successfully operate a good newspaper, and don't you forget it. We are addressing these remarks to YOU, if your sub-

WE HAVE THE RUSH WITH US AGAIN

Well here we are with only a few more days in which to work with most of the important measures introduced in the Legislature to be yet completed. Just as is usually the case, the first days of the present session were piddled away and now the legislators must rush and work overtime in getting through the real big things which should have all due and careful deliberation. But they will just do such things, so-what's the use to complain?

MORE THAN MERE LIVING HOME

Gastonia Gazette.

We need more farmers in North Carolina like Mr. R. A. Lipe, of Stanly County. If we had more of his type, there would be none of this distress talk from the farms.

Mr. Lipe is one of the farmers who really live at home. In addition to that, his scheme is one that provides sufficient income to provide the modern conveniences, educate his children and so forth.

Mr. Phillips, county agent of Stanly County, has told in a very interesting manner some of the high lights of the Lipe family and their way of farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Lipe own about 175 acres of land with around 65 acres under cultivation. They have two mules, seven milk cows, eight young heifers and three brood sows. They have sold 30, 250-pound hogs and killed four for home consumption and now have 15 shoats almost ready for market. They also maintain a flock of 125 hens. They grow the following crops to support their farm and livestock last year: 720 bushels of corn from 14 acres; 252 bushels of wheat from 12 acres; 300 bushels of oats from nine acres; 119 bushels of barley from four acres; 2,000 pounds of soybean hay; 3,000 pounds of red clover hay; 24,000 pounds of lespedeza hay and 4,000 pounds of meadow hay: In addition to this, Mr. Lipe feeds quite a bit of his oat straw.

Mr. Lipe grew the following seed for seeding purposes on his farm and small surplus; nine bushels of soybeans, four bushels of peas, and 50 bushels of lespedeza seed. Mr. Lipe has a number of his fields fenced for pasture, and in addition to this, has six and one-half acres of improved pasture, and he says, he wants more just as soon as he can get it. He considers pasture next to his garden in value.

Mr. and Mrs. Lipe have a year round garden, and in addition to living in their garden during the summer and winter months, they have on hand the following canned goods: 392 quarts of blackberries, beans, tomatoes, peaches, apples, pickles, soup mixture, chili sauce; 15 gallons of molasses, 13 gallons of apple butter; 10 gallons of jellies, jam, etc.; dried fruit, kraut and 10 bushels of peanuts. Additional food supplies include 36 bushels of Irish potatoes and 48 bushels of sweet potatoes.

Mrs. Lipe makes most of the candy for the family and the children say that this peanut candy is "good stuff." In addition to the above they have an apple orchard to supply their family with apples during the summer and winter months. They sold around $125 worth of surplus products from their garden.

Mr. and Mrs. Lipe stated that they only bought cereals, sugar and a little coffee, while they are not very strong on coffee as they drink principally whole milk. They bought some beef a few times during the year, fish and cheese and a few other things that are not convenient for them to produce.

Mr. Lipe stated, that even though he was taught to live at home, he was in a better position to live at home this year than ever before. "We have more things to eat and feed than we have ever had, and whether the family eats more or not, I know we are feeding our livestock better and we find that it pays and pays well." Mr. Lipe said further, in discussing the county situation, that he was confident that the farmers of the county had quite a lot more things to eat and feed than in other years.

"While our farmers are short in money, they are fortunate in having an abundance of things to eat and feed. I believe that Stanly County farmers as a whole are in a better position to live at home, and live good at home, than they have ever been. I know my soil is more fertile now and this is true on practically every farm in the county and it is much easier for us to live at home when we have fertile soils. In fact, I do not see how we can really live at home, in the true sense of the word, when we have poor soils. I was asked a few days ago what was responsible for these changes, and I remarked that is was through our soil improvement and balanced farm program. If we were voting on any one crop, we would have to say lespedeza was decidedly in the lead. It has helped more of our farmers improve their conditions than any other one crop. Growing livestock to consume the crops that we grow has aided greatly in our soil improvement work."

Mr. and Mrs. Lipe have recently added a windmill water system and other conveniences about the house, a bath room, widened the kitchen, etc. Mr. Lipe and his children did most of the work in putting up the windmill and installing the water and lights.

In addition to Mr. Lipe's live-at-home program on his farm, he takes an active part in his church and community life.

TAKE A LOOK AT SENATOR CAM.

Morganton News-Herald.

Senator Cameron Morrison, has not been in Washington very long but already the editorial lenses of the nation have been focused on him, and recently he has been playing in the spotlight. North Carolinians will be interested in the following pen picture of our new senator, so well known throughout the State, in a recent issue of Collier's.

Cam has a crown of striking white hair. He affects wide-brimmed hats and long-tailed coats of Southern gentlemanliness. He sticks to the good old rural fashion of chewing tobacco. He's a rorer when he speaks.

"In spite of the fact that he married one of the great fortunes of North Carolina he remains one of the most rural personages left in this citified nation with the highlands of Scotland and of the United States as a background.

"All of this sounds as if we had got another Southern demagogue in Cam. But that leaves out of the reckoning the hard, practical Scottish element in his make-up. He has a lot of sense. North Carolina is the most modern of the really Southern States. And it owes most of its modernness to Cam's term as its governor from 1921 to 1924. It was he who initiated its good roads, improved its schools, built up the University of North Carolina and modernized its charities.

"Cam will probably make a pretty good senator. He has courage, energy and self-assertiveness. But he is a person. And it is so seldom that a person arrives in Washington that one has to record his arrival."

IN GOOD CONDITION

The Cleveland tSar.

Further Assurance that Cleveland county affairs are in pretty good condition comes from the recent table of statistics assembled by the University News Letter in which it is shown that the total public indebtness of the county is only 8.7 percent of the county's taxable wealth.

That indebtedness is not merely the county debt, but includes the indebtedness of all towns and cities in the county, of all schools and special districts. The county indebtedness alone is only $605,450, or just one-sixth of the total $3,363,708 public debt of everything in the county. More than one-third of the total debt is that of the schools, and a big percentage of that is in the special districts where taxpayers voted for better buildings and equipment with which to educate their children.

Seventy-six of the one hundred North Carolina counties have a greater percentage indebtedness than Cleveland county.

No county no firm, or no individual is in very bad shape when they owe no more than 8.7 percent of their wealth.

Feb. the 8th, accepting the Standards of Josua. Oh, what a revolution it would make in our lives if we lived up to it. Then the Golden Text would be enough for us. Luke 6:31. Let us ask ourselves, when the day is done and evening shadows fall, let us honestly be able to say with one of earth's wise men. "I do not remember that in my whole life I have ever willfully misrepresented anything to anybody at anytime. I have never knowingly had connection with any fradulent scheme. I have tried to do good in this world, not harm, as my enemies would have the world believe. I have helped men and have attempted in my humble way to be of service to my country."

Editor:

Below you will find the printing under Mr. Stroud, editor Record beginning with the awarding of the County printing from May 1st, 1908 to May 1st, 1909, I wish to say at this point; that in giving the cost of printing from 1897 to the present time, I have never intimated that I thought the printing cost was excessive twenty five and thirty years ago; really I thought it not enough, even at the low prices existing then, but what I started out to show was, that the pendulum has swung too far in the opposite direction in the last few years, and the cost has become excessive and unreasonable, I have prepared a bill to be submitted to the present Legislature to give the Commissioners discretion to the point of dispensing with the itemized reports of expenditures, for the cost is so high and not one out of a hundred of the taxpayers ever read the annual report which has been costing them nearly four hundred dollars per year, a wonton waste of the taxpayers money. Under my ownership of the Record I printed Mortgage sales of land, and the law fixed the price at $3.00 for four weeks insertion, now it often runs up to over $15.00, I am heartily in favor of reasonable prices for every thing, but we are living in a time when the tax monies of the people should be safeguarded in every reasonable way, in justice to all.

FORD COMFORT

ONE of the fine things about driving the new Ford is the way it takes you over the miles without strain or fatigue. No matter how long the trip, you know it will bring you safely, quickly, comfortably to the journey's end.

The seats are generously wide, deeply cushioned and carefully designed to conform to the curves of the body. Every new Ford has specially designed springs and four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers. These work both ways — up and down. They absorb the force of road shocks and also provide a cushion against the rebound of the springs.

Other features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of fine steel forgings, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, Rustless Steel and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

In addition, you save many dollars because of the low first cost of the new Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

DIXIE AS THE WORLD'S WONDER

Those who love the southland ought to be interested in some figures given out recently by the Manufacturers Record, showing the marvelous growth and development of Dixie since the close of the War Between the States. Indeed, the things the South is now doing are almost beyond belief. That we now boast of between a third and a half of the population of the entire country, is a fact which not all southerners know. To be exact, according to the 1930 census, the south has forty one million inhabitants. Our annual agricultural output is now about equal to that of the entire country thirty years ago. Our manufactories turn out finished products valued at the manufactured output of the entire nation in 1900. Some of our Southern cities now have more people living within their borders than those who went to make up entire states in Civil War days. The aggregate wealth of the south is now almost equal to the total wealth of the entire nation thirty years ago.

We think we are suffering from a bad depression just now, and we are, but with such a record of achievement within the past thirty years, we should be thankful that business conditions are no worse than they are and we should turn our faces towards the future with renewed hopes and aspirations, and determinations to continue in this growth and development which has done nothing short of making the world wonder at our achievement since those dark, poverty stricken days of the sixties.

IF WE FAINT NOT

Three weeks ago this paper predicted that we had already reached the bottom in the business depression and would hence start slowly on the uphill climb again. Well, since then we have not changed our mind. Every day one can see slight signs of improvement. This improvement is slow, and we rather suspect that it will continue to go slowly, and it will be best for every one if such should be the case. We should all keep our heads and still strive to adjust ourselves to conditions as they are, not as we should like to have them. There is no use for us to look for normal conditions soon. We doubt whether or not even another crop season shall be able to bring business conditions up to anything like normal. But let us hope that conditions will continue to improve. Let us have faith in ourselves and in the fundamental soundness of our country's conditions. Let us economize, let us work, let us think, strive and fight. We shall make the grade yet, if we faint not.

WILL HELP BUSINESS CONDITIONS

At the time this is written it looks like the soldiers' bonus measure is going through safely. If it does, it will be the occasion of some business improvement. It will turn loose a large amount of money in every section of the United States. We are told that the measure will make it possible for each ex-service man to borrow half the amount which his certificate calls for, and as these certificates call for amounts running around $500 to $1,700, depending on the length of the services rendered by the certificate holder during the world War, the passing of the measure by Congress will mean that every man who served in the World War can borrow on his certificate amounts ranging from $250 to around $900, and most of them will draw the amounts allowed. That will help the boys, especially those who are out of work just now on account of the business depression and those farmers who sorely need some ready cash to help them finance the making of a crop the coming summer.

IS THIS TALK TO YOU

There are several hundred readers of this paper whose subscriptions have and will expire this month. Scores of these are coming in and renewing, and we trust that the others will do so before the first days of March shall have passed away. We want you to see us right away and get straightened up for another year. We also want several hundred new readers before April 1st. Now is the time to look after this little matter, friends. Don't put it off. You need the paper and we need the money. It takes a whale of a pile of money to successfully operate a good newspaper, and don't you forget it. We are addressing these remarks to YOU, if your subscription is due.

WE HAVE THE RUSH WITH US AGAIN

Well here we are with only a few more days in which to work with most of the important measures introduced in the Legislature to be yet completed. Just as is usually the case, the first days of the present session were piddled away and now the legislators must rush and work overtime in getting through the real big things which should have all due and careful deliberation. But they will just do such things, so-what's the use to complain?

Press Comment

MORE THAN MERE LIVING HOME

Gastonia Gazette:

We need more farmers in North Carolina like Mr. R. A. Lipe, of Stanly County. If we had more of his type, there would be none of this distress talk from the farms.

Mr. Lipe is one of the farmers who really live at home. In addition to that, his scheme is one that provides sufficient income to provide the modern conveniences, educate his children and so forth.

Mr. Phillips, county agent of Stanly County, has told in a very interesting manner some of the high lights of the Lipe family and their way of farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Lipe own about 175 acres of land with around 65 acres under cultivation. They have two mules, seven milk cows, eight young heifers and three brood sows. They have sold 30, 250-pound hogs and killed four for home consumption and now have 15 shoats almost ready for market. They also maintain a flock of 125 hens. They grow the following crops to support their farm and livestock last year: 720 bushels of corn from 14 acres; 252 bushels of wheat from 12 acres; 306 bushels of oats from nine acres; 119 bushels of barley from four acres; 2,000 pounds of soybean hay; 3,000 pounds of red clover hay; 24,000 pounds of lespedeza hay and 4,000 pounds of meadow hay. In addition to this, Mr. Lipe feeds quite a bit of his oat straw.

Mr. Lipe grew the following seed for seeding purposes on his farm and small surplus; nine bushels of soybeans, four bushels of peas, and 50 bushels of lespedeza seed. Mr. Lipe has a number of his fields fenced for pasture, and in addition to this, has six and one-half acres of improved pasture, and he says, he wants more just as soon as he can get it. He considers pasture next to his garden in value.

Mr. and Mrs. Lipe have a year round garden, and in addition to living in their garden during the summer and winter months, they have on hand the following canned goods: 392 quarts of blackberries, beans, tomatoes, peaches, apples, pickles, soup mixture, chili sauce; 15 gallons of molasses, 13 gallons of apple butter; 10 gallons of jellies, jam, etc.; dried fruit, kraut and 10 bushels of peanuts. Additional food supplies include 36 bushels of Irish potatoes and 48 bushels of sweet potatoes.

Mrs. Lipe makes most of the candy for the family and the children say that this peanut candy is "good stuff." In addition to the above they have an apple orchard to supply their family with apples during the summer and winter months. They sold around $125 worth of surplus products from their garden.

Mr. and Mrs. Lipe stated that they only bought cereals, sugar and a little coffee, while they are not very strong on coffee as they drink principally whole milk. They bought some beef a few times during the year, fish and cheese and a few other things that are not convenient for them to produce.

Mr. Lipe stated, that even though he was taught to live at home, he was in a better position to live at home this year than ever before. "We have more things to eat and feed than we have ever had, and whether the family eats more or not, I know we are feeding our livestock better and we find that it pays and pays well." Mr. Lipe said further, in discussing the county situation, that he was confident that the farmers of the county had quite a lot more things to eat and feed than in other years.

"While our farmers are short in money, they are fortunate in having an abundance of things to eat and feed. I believe that Stanly County farmers as a whole are in a better position to live at home, and live good at home, than they have ever been. I know my soil is more fertile now and this is true on practically every farm in the county and it is much easier for us to live at home when we have fertile soils. In fact, I do not see how we can really live at home, in the true sense of the word, when we have poor soils. I was asked a few days ago what was responsible for these changes, and I remarked that is was through our soil improvement and balanced farm program. If we were voting on any one crop, we would have to say lespedeza was decidedly in the lead. It has helped more of our farmers improve their conditions than any other one crop. Growing livestock to consume the crops that we grow has aided greatly in our soil improvement work."

Mr. and Mrs. Lipe have recently added a windmill water system and other conveniences about the house, a bath room, widened the kitchen, etc. Mr. Lipe, and his children did most of the work in putting up the windmill and installing the water and lights.

In addition to Mr. Lipe's live-at-home program on his farm, he takes an active part in his church and community life.

TAKE A LOOK AT SENATOR CAM.

Morganton News-Herald.

Senator Cameron Morrison has not been in Washington very long but already the editorial lenses of the nation have been focused on him, and recently he has been playing in the spotlight. North Carolinians will be interested in the following pen picture of our new senator, so well known throughout the State, in a recent issue of Collier's.

Cam has a crown of striking white hair. He affects wide-brimmed hats and long-tailed coats of Southern gentlemanliness. He sticks to the good old rural fashion of chewing tobacco. He's a rare one when he speaks.

"In spite of the fact that he married one of the great fortunes of North Carolina he remains one of the most rural personages left in this citified nation with the highlands of Scotland and of the United States as a background.

"All of this sounds as if we had got another Southern demagogue in Cam. But that leaves out of the reckoning the hard, practical Scottish element in his make-up. He has a lot of sense. North Carolina is the most modern of the really Southern States. And it owes most of its modernness to Cam's term as its governor from 1921 to 1924. It was he who initiated its good roads, improved its schools, built up the University of North Carolina and modernized its charities.

"Cam will probably make a pretty good senator. He has courage, energy and self-assertiveness. But he is a person. And it is so seldom that a person arrives in Washington that one has to record his arrival."

IN GOOD CONDITION

The Cleveland (Sar.

Further Assurance that Cleveland county affairs are in pretty good condition comes from the recent table of statistics assembled by the University News Letter in which it is shown that the total public indebtness of the county is only 8.7 percent of the county's taxable wealth.

That indebtedness is not merely the county debt, but includes the indebtedness of all towns and cities in the county, of all schools and special districts. The county indebtedness alone is only $505,450, or just one-sixth of the total $3,363,708 public debt of everything in the county. More than one-third of the total debt is that of the schools, and a big percentage of that is in the special districts where taxpayers voted for better buildings and equipment with which to educate their children.

Seventy-six of the one hundred North Carolina counties have a greater percentage indebtedness than Cleveland county.

No county no firm, or no individual is in very bad shape when they owe no more than 8.7 percent of their wealth.

Let us ask ourselves when the day is done and evening shadows fall, let us honestly be able to say with one of earth's wise men. "I do not remember that in my whole life I have ever willfully misrepresented anything to anybody at anytime. I have never knowingly had connection with any fradulent scheme. I have tried to do good in this world, not harm, as my enemies would have the world believe. I have helped men and have attempted in my humble way to be of service to my country."

Editor:

Below you will find the printing under Mr. Stroud, editor Record beginning with the awarding of the County printing from May 1st, 1908 to May 1st, 1909, I wish to say at this point; that in giving the cost of printing from 1897 to the present time, I have never intimated that I thought the printing cost was excessive—twenty five and thirty years ago; really I thought it not enough, even at the low prices existing then, but what I started out to show was, that the pendulum has swung too far in the opposite direction in the last few years, and the cost is becoming excessive and unreasonable, I have prepared a bill to be submitted to the present Legislature to give the Commissioners discretion to the point of dispensing with the itemized reports of expenditures, for the cost is so high and no one out of a hundred of the taxpayers ever read the annual report which has been costing them nearly four hundred dollars per year, a wonton waste of the taxpayers money. Under my ownership of the Record I printed Mortgage deeds at 1% land, and the law fixed the price at $3.00 for four weeks insertion, now it often runs up to over $15.00. I am heartily in favor of reasonable prices for every thing, but we are living in a time when the tax monies of the people should be safeguarded in every reasonable way, in justice to all.

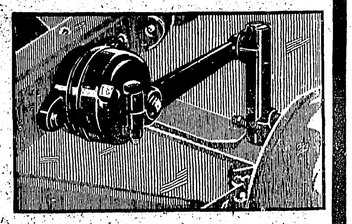
FORD COMFORT



Every new Ford is equipped with four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers

ONE of the fine things about driving the new Ford is the way it takes you over the miles without strain or fatigue. No matter how long the trip, you know it will bring you safely, quickly, comfortably to the journey's end.

The seats are generously wide, deeply cushioned and carefully designed to conform to the curves of the body. Every new Ford has specially designed springs and four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers. These work both ways — up and down. They absorb the force of road shocks and also provide a cushion against the rebound of the springs.

Other features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of fine steel forgings, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, Rustless Steel and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

In addition, you save many dollars because of the low first cost of the new Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

Ninth Installment

Maggie Johnson, whose father is a letter-carrier, her mother a lazy woman who has "seen better days," and her sister a bookkeeper's sweetheart who works in a beauty parlor, is stock girl in the "Mack" store, the Five-and-Ten of San Francisco. A boy who she knows only as "Joe Grant," but who is really Joseph Grant Mac-Kenzie Merrill, son of the owner of the "Mack," is learning the business by starting at the bottom. He doesn't like the job until he meets Maggie. And neither of them realizes that they are falling in love with each other, at first. Joe is impressed, however, by Maggie's intelligence and goodheartedness, and gives her advice on the subject nearest her heart, how to live the ideal life. She makes a suggestion for a better way of selling certain lines. He tells his father, as if it were his own idea, greatly pleasing the old man. He finds that the girls he used to know don't interest him as much as Maggie does, and when Maggie discloses her love in a burst of jealousy, he realizes that he loves her, too.

Joe is afraid that if Maggie finds out who he really is she will not have anything more to do with him. So he pretends that it is some other fellow's car when he takes her home in his yellow roadster. And on the way they talk, at last, about marriage.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"And there's a budget for two people begins on eight hundred a year! Joe, I'm going to work it all out. We're going to put money in the bank from the very first minute. The man who has an income of one thousand and saves ten dollars is ten dollars richer than the man on an income of twenty thousand who saves nothing a year."

"Where'd you get that?"

"That was on a card in the window of the bank next door to the Mack. I see a lot of those things," added Maggie dreamily. "But I never really thought about them until I met you. You see, my mother and Liz aren't much on looking ahead, and their father—eyes," she added delicately, with some hesitation, "is sorter influenced by Ma. But you—you seemed to be mine, Joe, from the start!"

After pride, her joy as she said it, brought tears to his eyes. He did not speak.

For the moment he saw Joe Grant, the hard-eyed young millionaire, and Joe Merrill, with his car and his income and his magnificent home, was the dream. This was the reality.

He interrupted her, kissing her gravely. And then, without speaking himself, although Maggie continued to chatter joyously, he drove her home.

Joe went to his own home, and dressed for dinner like a man in a dream.

A week ago, or yesterday, he might have gotten out.

But now it was different. He had kissed her, had his arms about her, spoken of her as his wife.

Maggie: Maggie Johnson. Living in that wreck of a cottage on Goat Hill, pacifying and caring for that appalling mother, that commonplace, selfish sister, and that poor little worm of a letter-carrying father.

"My God! What have I done?" said Joe Grant, half aloud.

"What thinking of, Son?" his father asked, looking up.

They were in the library, he and his father alone together. And to his father's surprised question, Joe could only make the son's usual answer.

"Nothing."

Then there was another short silence.

"Nothing doing to-night, Dad?"

"I may go over to Maxwell's later —they're sitting in a little game," his father answered, with an awkward little effort to appear interested and cordial that touched Joe. "Brewer, one of our buyers, was to go to Japan for us on the Hiyoria next Saturday," he explained. "And now I understand that the wife's father has died and left them a pot of money—something like that—and they're going to New York," he said.

"Losing him, huh?"

"I guess so. They come and go, of course."

"Well, with three hundred and forty employees, that's natural enough," Joe drawled.

"You've got 'em counted, eh?"

"Well, the six stores—and the administration office—what have you got down there? Seventeen or eighteen clerks?"

"You wouldn't ever be interested in coming down to one of the Stores with me, Joe," his father began. "It might interest you very much."

"No, thanks," Joe said then lightly, "I couldn't stay in the Stores—now."

His father nodded. The sudden interest and hope that had lighted his face faded. His instantly resumed his usual inscrutable, remote expression again.

Joe laughed gruffly, cleared his throat.

"That's where I am, Dad," he explained.

"You—!" he presently said, in a low, sharp tone.

"Sure," Joe said easily, grinning. "My boy. How did that happen?"

"Oh, well—you remember the blow-up in December, when you sent me to some home from college about some bills? Well, the next day I happened to be passing the Mack—no, I went in; there was a girl at the—that said 'Extra Christmas Help Wanted,' and then she seems to be reaching out for everything that is free, just as these other girls reach out for everything that's rotten! She doesn't know what they know—she wouldn't understand their jokes—"

"H'm!" ejaculated Merrill senior in somewhat perplexed, dissatisfied tone. And at the time nothing more was said.

On Sunday morning, however, just a few minutes before twelve, George Merrill met his son in the upper hallway of the family mansion and noted that he was dressed for golf.

"Got out of your engagement, eh?"

"Yep. Sweeney was going into town for Mother, and I asked him to send a note to—Miss Johnson, with flowers."

"Why, Joe, you must be halfway in love with the Maggie".

"You in the Stores. You in the Stores," he murmured.

"Pretty hard work, isn't it?"

"Not so hard."

"And the sort of men—the girls there—aren't they a rather—plain—crowd?"

"They're all right."

"This," George Merrill suddenly exclaimed, "accounts for the autumn that you've been walking about looking like a thunder-cloud!" Of course! I wondered—and Flint wondered, how you happened to be taking such an interest in the Stores."

"As a matter of fact, it wasn't my idea at all."

"I thought you—that night Flint was here—"

"It was a girl who suggested that," Joe said. "One of the girls in the Stores. A kid—really. She's only seventeen. She'll be eighteen to-morrow."

"How d'you happen to know that?"

"She told me. I took her home to-night and she happened to mention it."

A silence. Then George Merrill said slowly: "I see."

"See what?"

"What's been making the change in you, Joe. It was a girl was it?"

"Well—I guess you're wise!"

"I hope so!" Joe said unconvincedly.

He played four holes, played the fifth—a short one, and suddenly turned back to the clubhouse. It took him fifteen minutes at the telephone to locate his mother's chauffeur.

"Sweeney. This is Joe Merrill speaking. Sweeney, did you get those flowers to that young lady?"

"They went right out."

"I see. Thanks."

And he hung up the receiver, feeling flat.

She probably had them by now. Poor little disappointed kid!

Damn it, it made him feel hot and uncomfortable, and like a skunk.

Maggie, doing the Johnson dinner dishes, and perhaps shedding surreptitious tears into the sink.

Joe had an inspiration. The intelligent thing to do, the honest thing to do, was to go to her and say, "Now, look here, Maggie—"

Rushing cityward in his car a few minutes later, he soon reached the Johnsons' dilapidated cottage.

Maggie came to the door herself—everyone else was out.

"Pop volunteered for special delivery to-day—it's Valentine Day," Maggie said. "Liz was off with her beau, and Ma had to go to a funeral at one. I had a real good chance to make the kitchen ideal."

"You certainly did that one little thing," Joe said admiringly.

"And what did you get for your birthday, Maggie?"

"Nobody remembered it but Pop," Maggie said lifelessly.

"But you got my flowers. You aren't mad at me, are you, Maggie?" he asked suddenly.

"Oh, no, Joe. Why would I be? I wouldn't have any right to be mad at you," Maggie said, adding the last phrase as if to herself.

"You seem sort of—stiff," Joe said.

"Here's what it is, Joe," Maggie said. "I just happened—what I got your note—to see your side of it, Joe, I know you like me—but I know you don't love me. I hope we'll always be friends. But—" she stopped short,—"but—this part of it—isn't easy for me, Joe," she finished.

"What made you change this way —from last night, when we sat in the car and talked?" he temporized grufflly.

"I think kinder realizing that you were—saying more than you meant, Joe!" she answered simply.

She was delicious, small, confidential, brave in her first battle with hurt and humiliation. Joe felt shamed and bewildered.

"Did you know they were thinking of trying out your automat idea for the buttons and pins and tacks and so on, Maggie?" Joe asked.

"I don't believe it!" she said scoffingly.

"It's true. What would you do, Maggie, with—say, twenty thousand dollars?"

"With—with what?"

"With twenty thousand dollars for all your rights in that idea?"

"Joe, it'd sell my rights in that idea for twenty-five cents, if you ask me!"

"Yes, but you couldn't do that. They seem to feel it's a new idea and a darned good idea, and my father—" he floundered, grew red, and saved himself by a heir—"my father thought it was a pretty good idea, too; I was talking to him about it," he said.

She had noticed nothing amiss. Her eyes were steamy, happy.

Pale and Weak

"I think Cardui is a wonderful medicine, for I improved greatly after taking it," says Mrs. A. W. English, of R. F. D. 4, Roanoke, Va. "When I was just a girl of 13, my mother gave this medicine to me, and it did me a great deal of good. I was weak and run-down. After I had taken Cardui awhile, I felt much better.

"In 1924, my health was poor. I felt miserable, and hadn't enough strength to do my housework. It took all my willpower to keep up. I was pale and weak.

"I got Cardui again and took it. My improvement was wonderful. I can recommend Cardui to others, for my health was so much better after I had taken a course of the Cardui Home Treatment."

Which Will You Save?

YOU can save pennies or save chicks. Poultry yard facts show that ordinary untested rations and mixtures such as hard boiled eggs and oatmeal save pennies but not chicks. Usually 50% of them die. Poultrymen who are making money invest one penny more per chick and save 90 to 100% of their chicks. They feed Purina Chick Startena, the buttermilk starting ration containing Cod Liver Oil. We'll be glad to tell you of a feeding plan that's as simple as A B C. It saves chicks and brings them through to early maturity.

MORE ABOUT GRANT'S OPPOSITION

shape will be disrupted, if this office is abolished.

Senator Turner Grant, of Davie Republican and little given to speech in the Democratic body, arose today to assert that his county of Davie would be ruined if the General Assembly enacted the bill, already passed by the House, introduced by Davie's Democrat representative, J. P. LeGrand, to abolish the office of county treasurer and to provide for a successor, a bank.

Would Ruin Davie

Senator Grant said the annual amount to be allowed the bank for handling county funds, as specified in the bill, is $500 and that he knows the bank in the county will not undertake to handle the county funds on that basis, and that it would be a dangerous thing if it did. A clerk could not be employed to handle the funds for that amount, Senator Grant said.

"When you pass that bill you are going to ruin one county in the state that is in fair shape. No bank will handle the funds on the conditions provided in the bill. It is hard to say, but no surety or bonding company will bond a bank in North Carolina for surety of county funds," the Davie senator said, adding that he knew the bill was the result of a campaign promise.

Senator Heyden of Rowan came to his rescue, saying the same thing happened two years ago and he had to provide at this term for [illegible] a treasurer to fullfill the matter. Senator Grady Rankin also came to Senator Grant's aid, remarking on a similar situation in Gaston.

Senator F. O. Clarkson, Mecklenburg, said the bill merely authorized the county commissioners to name a bank as treasurer.

The bill went over until Monday to give opportunity for the senators to study it and its possible effects.

From the foregoing it will be observed that the republican senator, representing the 24th Senatorial District, exerted himself to the utmost in his effort to defeat Mr. LeGrand's purposes to save the taxpayers of Davie county the cost of the treasurer's office, which as this newspaper has explained many times before, is an unnecessary expense. Mr. Grant, as will be noted from his speech on the floor of the Senate, sought to destroy this movement to economize in the expenditure of public money in Davie County.

Representative LeGrand is receiving, in his absence, complimentary remarks from all sides. He has carried out the main promise made by him in the recent campaign. He has met and overcome all opposition to his bill. He has demonstrated beyond all question that the legislative interests of Davie County are no longer in the custody of Mr. Grant, so often referred to as "The Veteran" of the Legislature. Mr. LeGrand, in this, as in other matters shown himself to be Davie's Representative. He has been at all times fearless, intelligent, patriotic and true to every promise he mawe when candidate for the lower house against an opponent whose name has now almost been forgotten in political circles.

Within a few days' time, Mr. LeGrand's bill will be a part of the statute law of North Carolina. At the next regular meeting of the Board of Commissioners of Davie county action will probably be taken placing the duties of county treasurer with the Bank of Davie or some other solvent banking institution or individual. When this has been done the taxpayers of the county may rightfully declare "THE DEMOCRATS HAVE FULFILLED ANOTHER CAMPAIGN PROMISE.

WASHINGTON'S RULES OF BEHAVIOR

George Washington has been brought to our minds so impressively this week, since his 199th birthday was Feb. 22, so that in memory of the "Father of His Country" we will print the Rules of Behavior which he carefully wrote out for his own improvement. While they may seem quaint and obsolute, yet we may find helpful suggestions in them. The last of the twenty-one rules has often been quoted.

"Turn not you back to others, especially in speaking; nor not the table or desk on which another reads or writes; lean not on any one.

2. Read no letters, books, or papers in company; but when there is a necessity for doing it, you must ask leave.

3. Show not yourself glad at the misfortune of another, though he be your enemy.

4. In writing or speaking, give to every person his due title, according to his degree.

5. When a man does all he can, though it succeed not well, blame not him that did it.

6. Wherein you reprove another, be unblamable yourself; for example is more prevalent than precept.

7. Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of any.

8. Associate yourself with men of good quality, if you esteem your own reputation; for it is better to be alone than in bad company.

9. Let your conversation be without malice or envy.

10. Speak not injurious words, neither in jest nor earnest; scoff at none, although they give occasion.

11. Be not forward, but friendly and courteous.

12. Detract not from others, neither be excessive in commending.

13. Gaze not on the blemishes of others, and ask not how they came.

14. When another speaks, be attentive yourself, and disturb not the audience.

15. Be not apt to relate news if you know not the truth thereof.

16. Be not curious to know the affairs of others, neither approach to those that speak in private.

17. Undertake not what you can not perform, but be careful to keep your promise.

18. Speak not evil of the absent, for it is unjust.

19. Be no flatterer; neither play with any one that delights not to be played with.

20. When you speak of God, or His attributes, let it be seriously, in reverence. Honor and obey your parents, although they be poor.

21. Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience."

JESUS SENDING FORTH MISSIONARIES

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Here is a lesson that is much larger than appears at first glance. Too many fail to reach the heart of the matter because they are about as unrelated as those who flippantly talk about "giving it the once over." Dig deep this time and you will discern the program that Jesus presented to complete His entire missionary enterprise. He did not plan to reach the people en masse as when He fed the five thousand. His plan was to go after the individual in a "Win One" campaign that should never end. Some time before He had commissioned the Twelve to go forth as workers. Now He starts Seventy on their way as ambassadors of the Kingdom of God.

In that day the area was more thickly peopled than now. Every individual was a prospect and the Master Teacher was eager to have each one invited to become a believer, a follower, and in turn a "Win One" worker in further extending the Kingdom. It was heart-breaking to see the populace in their spiritual ignorance and without any inner power to help them up to God's way of thinking. Again, the Omniscient tells how the desired end can be accomplished. The same method is the one to be followed today though the population is much greater than in that generation. The direction is found in the Golden Text: "The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest."

Then you can rejoice at the result which was reported at the conclusion of the itinerary. The Seventy were alole, though spiritual power, to win many as believers. Miracles were wrought and these confirmed the values of the teachings. Why have thousands of churches in America not added a convert in a year?

ADVERTISING NOT AN EXPENSE

That advertising is not expense but a necessary investment in modern production and distribution, is shown in the current issue of the Standard Oil Company publication.

It reports that a certain American manufacturing company expended $11,401.78 for advertising back in 1892, which amounted to a quarter of a cent per unit sold. This same concern expended $3,581,937.72 in 1929—but this was only one-tenth of a cent per unit. Commenting on this, the article concludes as follows:

"Who is paying for the increased bill? The manufacturer? Obviously not. The consumer? Again no. The advertising load is carried, not by humans, but by machinery. Since 1892, the machinery of wheels, levers, belts, cogs, desks, telephones, and human business organization have increased in efficiency many fold. The advertising bill—To paraphrase an editorial in Better Homes and Gardens for November, 1930—is paid out of the difference that exists between the cost of producing a commodity in small quantities and the cost of producing it in large quantities. Machinery makes it possible to produce on a large scale.

"Advertising does not increase the consumer's bill. Actually, it reduces the expense of manufacture and distribution by making possible mass production, and brings the product to the attention of the buyer at a far lower price than would otherwise be possible."

PLANT SPRING OATS AS FEED CROP

Raleigh, Feb. 16.—A good crop of feed at low cost may be obtained by planting spring oats this month, the Lighus and Burt varieties are recommended by State College agricultural workers.

"Many farms where hay yields were injured last summer by drought will find it profitable to plant spring oats this season to supplement the feed supply," says G. M. Garren, cereal agronomist at State College. "This will be cheaper than buying feed even though the individual grower may not be prepared to seed and harvest with modern machinery. Oats is an excellent feed for poultry and work stock and though the crop does not yield as well from spring planting as it does from fall planting, still this is an exceptional spring when the practice can be recommended."

Seeding of the oats should begin in eastern Carolina between the first and fifteenth of March. The dates are a little later for the piedmont section and before April 1 in the mountains. Mr. Garren recommends the Fulghum variety as best for North Carolina conditions but the Burt variety is also good. This latter variety may be planted later than the Fulghum. Plant at the rate of two and one-half bushels of seed oats an acre and fertilizer with 300 to 400 pounds of an 8-3-3 or 8-4-4 fertilizer at planting. A top-dressing of quickly available nitrate fertilizer, such as nitrate of soda, is advised by Mr. Garren after danger of freezing is past.

The planting of oats to cut down the North Carolina feed bill this summer is urged by Mr. Garren as one feature of a live-at-home plan well worth trying this year.

Live-At-Home Week Is Observed In Smith G. School

During the week of February 16, Smith Grove School observed the Live-at-Home program. Every pupil in school took part in this work by making booklets, writing essays, and making posters, all of which they enjoyed and found very interesting.

Each day a different phase of the program was studied. On Monday the subject was "Our Daily Food"; On Tuesday, "The Family Cow"; On Wednesday, "The Importance of Poultry"; On Thursday, "The Importance of the Hog;" and on Friday, "The Importance of a Garden."

In addition to the class work of the High School and higher grade pupils listened in each day to lectures broadcasted from Raleigh and Winston-Salem. On Friday morning at 9 o'clock, they heard the radio address by Dr. A. T. Allen State Superintendent of Public Instruction, in which he stressed the three main points in the desired result of the Live-at-Home program. They were: To make the farmer realize the need of producing more than he uses on the farm; To get city people to buy, so far as possible the things they need from North Carolina farmers, so that the money may remain in the state; and to raise purebred stock and use first class seed, that stocks and crops will be of the best and will be of more value.

Previous to Friday a letter sent to the patrons in the Smith Grove community, inviting them to visit the school on Friday to hear a talk by Mr. George Evans and to inspect the work that their children had done during the week. Due to rainy weather many did not come, but those present enjoyed both the work on exhibition and Mr. Evans' talk.

Throughout the week, the lectures emphasized that making a living should come first in the farmer's thinking and planning and money crops second. Mr. Evans also brought out this idea in his talk. Other objects of his speech were to impress the farmers with the need of feeding stock the proper kinds of feed, and making crops bring more money.

Mr. Evans stated that too much cotton and tobacco are being planted in North Carolina, that it is better to cultivate less and receive more money for it than to raise so much and have to take discouraging prices. "A good remedy for this is a farmers' organization which could decide just how much should be planted."

A valuable part of the speech was an explanation of the different soils in Davie County and the best fertilizer to use on each to the best advantage. "There are many kinds of soils in this county, and the farmer who is to be successful must study these and give them the proper kind of fertilizer."

"The improvement of the soil," said Mr. Evans, "is very essential. The minerals obtained from the soils which build up the body come from the soils; and in order to get the proper amount of these, it is necessary to feed the soil. Lime is one of the most important foods that we can give land. It stimulates the growth of the plants and furnishes the soils with iron and phosphate. Lime is more necessary for legumes than truck crops, as the latter can be grown successfully without it.

Mr. Evans stressed the importance of sub-soiling in this section, the advantage in preparing land for seeds a few months before planting, and the importance of having the soil well pulverized for planting.

The next phase talked on was dairying. "To make dairying a success more science must be put into it. Legume feed is essential. Low producing cows must be replaced with good stock."

Mr. Evans said that this is an excellent place for sheep raising and that more should be grown, both for their meat and wool. Mutton is one of North Carolina's best meats, and it is eaten less than any other.

At the conclusion of the speech, the farmers present engaged in a round table discussion. It is believed that they gained much valuable information and that Smith Grove's Live-at-Home program was a decided success.

The great number of men who are applying directly to the U. S. All members of the local post, and all ex-service men and women in Davie county are urged to attend this meeting as plans will be formulated and arrangements made for the local post to assist all veterans in the filing of their claim.

Every post of the American Legion in North Carolina will meet on this night for the same purpose.

It is understood that our townsman, Attorney Robert S. McNeill who is service officer of the local post, will address the meeting in Elkin on this same night.
