

Duke Power Buys Land For Generating Plant In Davie County

Duke Power Company is acquiring land in Davie County for the possible construction of a new power generating plant.

Approximately 1,000 acres is being acquired along the Yadkin River, east of US 601 South between the Cherry Hill Road and the Yadkin River.

The land is being added to the company's plantsite inventory which already includes five sites - three in South Carolina and two in North Carolina - and most of a sixth site in South Carolina.

Dick Pierce, Director of Public Relations for Duke Power Company said the land being acquired in Davie would be subject to geological studies and test borings. The company also plans to install environmental monitoring equipment on the site to check our prevailing winds and other atmospheric conditions.

Following the geological and environmental studies, a decision will be made by Duke Power Company as to the generating plant and its type... either fossil or nuclear.

"Also included into the decision as to the type of generating plant will be of course the economic consideration at that time. We have not deserted coal. The plant we are presently building at Belews Creek in Forsyth County is as big as any nuclear plant.

Here coal was more feasible because of ready accessibility and rail lines into the area. Duke Power now owns three coal mines and recently purchased another coal field in Virginia," said the Duke Power Company official.

It was pointed out that the railroad situation into the Davie site also appeared good.

The construction of a fossil (coal burning) generating plant requires around four years. The nuclear plant takes around six years because of various government restrictions and regulations.

A force of around 1300 persons would be required for the engineering and construction of a new generating plant and a lot of these would be local people.

After the generating plant is built, a force of around 100 would be required to maintain and operate it. These people would live in that community.

The Davie site was selected because of the abundance of water in the South Yadkin River and because the land there is sparsely populated, relatively speaking.

The purchase and option on the land was worked out individually with the property owners. Some have been relocated, and some will be allowed to live on the land until the actual construction of the plant.

Once the plant is constructed, the immediate half-mile area around it will be an exclusion area with no habitation.

The Duke Power spokesman said that the proposed plant would probably use cooling towers and that the water would be recycled and returned to the river at the same temperature of the river. He said that some sort of a river dam might be involved but this could not be determined until after other decisions were made. However, no large size lake will be built.

The rumors are that the plant will represent an investment of between $800 million and $1 billion and would give the county a tax base at least five times as great as its present one.

The operation is rumored to be much bigger than what's involved in Stokes." (Duke Power is building a $304 million steam station on Belews Creek that will, when in full operation, more than double that county's tax base.)

The Duke Power site purchasing teams at work for sometime on this project were under the supervision of Vernon Dull of Mocksville.

8 Injured In Collision

Eight persons were injured in a two vehicle collision Sunday afternoon on US 601, 1.8 miles south of Mocksville. The accident occurred around 3:45 p.m.

State Highway Patrolman Randall Beane said that Homer Lee Leonard, Jr., of Cooleemee, was operating a 1957 Ford Pickup, equipped with a camper. He was going south on US 601 when the left rear wheel ran off the truck, causing Leonard to lose control of the vehicle. The vehicle crossed the roadway and collided with a northbound 1964 Plymouth, operated by Danny Keith Phipps of Crumpler, N.C.

Injured in the Ford Pickup was the driver, Homer Lee Leonard, Jr.; his wife, Margaret Pauline Leonard; Thomas Allen Leonard, one-year-old; 1½-year-old Deborah Lou Leonard. Two passengers riding in the camper of the truck, Tiny Lee Leonard, age 7, and William Jeffrey McCurry, were also injured when they were thrown out of the camper at the time of the collision.

In the Plymouth, the driver, Danny Keith Phipps---and a passenger, Larry Hash of Crumpler, were injured.

Leonard was taken to the Rowan County Hospital where he was treated and released. Phipps was treated and released from the Davie County Hospital. The six passengers were sent to the Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem from the Davie County Hospital.

Both vehicles were a total loss. There were no charges.

Day Lilies

Day Lilies of seven or eight different colors grow in the garden of Mrs. Draper Wood, Joyner Street, Cooleemee. This is said to be most unusual. Davie Below State Average In Per School Pupil Expenditure Davie County spent over $100 less per student for public education than the average in North Carolina in 1971-72.

The state spent an average of $719.19 per pupil for current operating expenses in 1971-72, an increase of $56.38 over the previous year, and a total of $778,618,231.39. Of this amount, 66.8 percent was provided by the state, 15.2 per cent came from federal sources, and 18 percent was provided by local governments.

In Davie, a total of $651.56 was spent per pupil for current expenses, with 77.3 percent coming from the state, 9.8 percent from the federal government, and 12.9 percent from local sources.

The figures have just been released by the state Department of Public Instruction with the caution that because of differences in transportation, heating, administration, and other costs, averages should not be used to judge efficiency or effectiveness.

The break-down of the statewide per pupil expenditure reveals that $21.11 went for administration, $491.41 was spent on instructional services, $36.14 for operation of the plant, $23.50 for maintenance of the plant, $73.81 for fixed charges, and $63.05 for auxiliary services.

Total expenditures in Davie County for schools 1971-72 amounted to $2,520,723.95. Of this amount only $326,108.13 came from local sources. A total of $1,949,238.81 came from state sources and $245,377.01 from federal sources.

Truck Overturns, Driver Is Charged

Damages estimated at around $1400 were done to a 1969 Dodge Van Truck when it went out of control and wrecked Sunday around 2:20 p.m. on US 64, 9.8 miles west of Mocksville.

The truck was operated by Charles Warner Parker of Salisbury, Rt. 1, who was charged with driving under the influence.

State Highway Patrolman J. C. Goodin said his investigation showed that Parker was operating the vehicle and was heading west on US 64 when the truck ran off the roadway on the left side and overturned one complete time. Parker suffered minor injuries but did not require hospitalization.

The figures have just been released by the state Department of Public Instruction with the caution that because of differences in transportation, heating, administration, and other costs, averages should not be used to judge efficiency or effectiveness.

A scrambled pile of junk is all that's left of a mobile home which was demolished Thursday evening as a severe electrical storm hit the Cooleemee area. The trailer came within a few feet of being blown into the back of the L.B. Hamilton home.

says, "and we still have some phones out."

Quesenberry says it was one of the worse electrical of his career. Most of the damage resulted from the lightning, which melted cable and in some instances, the cable was burned into. This is the main reason why some of the residents were without service for so long, he says. "It takes more time to repair and replace the cable."

A mobile home, owned by Richard Foster, located on highway 601 near Jerusalem Church was completely demolished. The high winds blew the entire trailer about 50-feet from its original location. It came to rest only a few feet from the back of Mr. and Mrs. L.B. Hamilton's new home.

Not more than five minutes before this happened, Hamilton said he was "sowing grass in the very spot where the trailer now stands."

The top of the trailer blew over the Hamilton home, knocking a hole in the roof and landing in a pasture more than 400-feet away.

Foster, who had previously

One of the largest trees uprooted as a result of the high winds, was the elm located on the edge of the yard at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lowder. They also lost two other trees in Thursday's storm, an apple tree, which was heavy with fruit, and a cherry tree.

been renting the trailer, says it was unoccupied at the time of the storm.

The storm seemed to touch down in various spots throughout the community leaving a path of destruction. Ruffin Street, which has suffered damages in most of the previous storms, had a good many uprooted and broken trees.

The storm apparently lifted and touched down again in North Cooleemee. Trees were reported down at the Foyell Brodgon home, which blocked traffic on Highway 801 for a short while, and at numerous other homes in this section. There were three trees uprooted at the Robert Lowder home, an apple tree, cherry tree, and a huge elm which fell across the power and telephone lines. Duke Power restored their service around 11 p.m.

met at the Smith Grove Ruritan Building. This is the first time this group has met in Davie County. District 31 embraces 15 counties in Piedmont North Carolina, including 51 clubs. The cabinet of this district is made up of 9 zone governors, plus other officers and committee chairmen.

The national president attended this meeting last Saturday night. On Sunday he visited with some members of the Jericho-Hardison Ruritan Club in their new building and with some of the members of the Sheffield-Calabash Ruritan Club in their new building.

Social Services

replacing the resigned personnel would be a matter of weeks due to the procedure prescribed by the state.

Mr. Royer said that he would definitely seek to rehire any of those resigning if they should reconsider.

"However, I do not believe that any of these people will reconsider unless the county commissioners reconsider," said Mr. Royer.

Mr. Henry headed a delegation of social service workers that appeared before the commissioners at their meeting, Tuesday. They requested a 15-percent increase based on the cost of living rise and the fact that there had been no mid-year merit raises.

Following the meeting with the delegation, the commissioners adopted the budget that granted all county employees, including the social workers, a 5-percent increase across the board.

Mr. Royer had first proposed the 15 percent pay raise for the social workers. When the commissioners tentatively approved the five percent pay recently, 13 of the department members issued a "united staff statement" and paid advertisement in this newspaper. Royer, who did not sign the statement, indicated that he fully supported the 15 percent raise.

The statement said the department's members consider their present pay "grossly inadequate."

The county commissioners answered the printed statement with a letter categorizing the 15 per cent increase as "completely out of the question".

Tuesday morning the nine staff members of the Department of Social Services submitted identical three-line letters of resignation to Director J.E. Royer.

The letters read:

"This is to advise you of my resignation as (followed by job title) to be effective July 9, 1973.

"This was precipitated by the county commissioners' decision on the 1973-74 budget.

"After careful consideration, I do not feel I can be a productive staff person for the salary as approved by the commissioners."

Submitting were Demsie Grimes and Terry Potts, social workers; Linda Keller and Pam Crotts, typists; Ophelia Kepley, Amelia Collins and Mary Foster, eligibility specialists; Alma Ijames, clerk; Phyllis Ivester, receptionist; and Minnie Mason, case aide.

Royer said that "99 percent of the staff like their job and believe they are making a contribution" to Davie County. He added that "What really got the staff is that nobody seems to view the staff with any degree of professional competency."

Royer said that "I think that if the County Commissioners would come up with another five percent, that the staff would be here."

He added that the staff is "not striking. They are just quitting."

John Barber Resigns

Barber's professional associations include the North Carolina Association of City and County Managers, North Carolina Association of County Commissioners, Northwest North Carolina Development Association, and the International City Management Association.

He holds membership in the American Legion, is director of the Mocksville-Davie County Chamber of Commerce, director of the Piedmont Triad Criminal Justice Planning Unit, executive member of the Piedmont Triad Comprehensive Health Planning Council, and a member of the Mocksville Rotary Club.

His letter of resignation to John Bailey, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, is as follows:

Mr. John M. Bailey - Chairman
Davie County Board of Commissioners County Courthouse
Mocksville, N.C.

Dear John:

As per our conversation Wednesday June 27, 1973, this letter confirms my resignation as County Manager of Davie County effective July 31, 1973. On August 1, 1973 I will assume the same position in Iredell County.

This is one letter I had hoped would never be necessary. Hazelanne and I have spent twenty-three wonderful years in Davie County and I think this in itself emphasizes our love for the county and its people. I have had opportunities before to leave for other job assignments at more money but my roots were too deep to leave. I know the question is - Why now? This has not been an easy decision for me as it was a real tug-of-war between what "I" wanted to do and what would be best for my family and our future.

One thing is certain, I shall never have the opportunity to serve a finer group of men than those who make up the Board of County Commissioners in Davie County. The county is certainly fortunate to have the calibre of men as you to serve as the governing body.

Davie County has the reputation of being a progressive rural county. Many positive programs have been adopted and others are in the works such as the County Water System and County-wide Zoning. The programs are sometimes unpopular with some of the citizens but you as a Board have always, even at possible self-sacrifice, approved what you thought would be best for Davie County. As long as this Board is at the helm, the county will be in good hands.

I want to take this opportunity, too, to express my appreciation to John Brock for all of his support and cooperation in assisting me in my duties as manager. It is not necessary for me to tell you as Board members his outstanding qualifications for you well know how much he means to you and the county. In my book he is "second to none" as County Attorney and if you are not careful I will be calling him from Iredell County for advice.

The future for Davie County is, indeed, bright and if certain things fall into place, it could be fantastic. It is my desire for the very best to happen and with your leadership to expand facilities for public service and new improvements introduced for the enjoyment, comfort and welfare of all the people who live in Davie County.

At any time I can be of assistance, advise and I will help any way possible. Again, I thank you and each member of the Board of County Commissioners for your loyal support.

Very truly yours,
John T. Barber
County Manager

Working At The Davie County Hospital

by C.W. Shepherd

There are many appealing assets of which a community may boast. Among these are Christian homes, churches, schools, business establishments, industries, and recreational opportunities. The listing, of course, could include other areas of personal involvement. Indeed, in a close knit district or section its citizenry should feel that all its needs are being met and that it is self-sufficient. Something vital, however, is frequently neglected.

Tragedy often strikes in your home or that of a neighboring friend. Suppose there is a terrible disabling accident? Can the home, church, school, or even industry adequately render the necessary service and treatment required for recovery? What happens in case of a stroke or a massive heart attack? Or, in case of many types of serious illness—is it likely that any of the areas of involvement of community activities that I mentioned will be prepared to offer what is indispensable attention leading to complete recovery as is reasonable to expect? Is it necessary the stricken individual be transported fairly long distance, losing valuable time, in order to secure the desired medical care? Distance and the time element could both be critical and prohibitive, and this says nothing about the extra costs and inconveniences that adds to other frustrations at a time a person can ill afford them.

The Davie County Hospital provides a big part of the answers to the questions that have been posed for consideration. Indeed, there has been in evidence considerable foresight and long distance planning that insures there residents of this area not only an excellent physical plant, now being expanded from 65 to 90 beds, but also well trained staff that really cares about and for those admitted as patients. Having known from personal experience what many other somewhat similar communities have had to offer to those temporarily disabled due to accident or illness, it is my considered opinion that the people in this area are extremely fortunate and should thank an ever kind Providence for this very superior facility.

Injecting a personal note, my sojourn on this planet began just before the turn of the century. A small farm in Alamance County provided the setting and work was the order of the day. Christian parents ably directed the various activities of the six children in this household and saw to it that we, first of all, had the opportunity to obtain a solid religious foundation and faith. Each of us, without question, has always been thankful for this direction by precept and example of our parents. No where along the line were we allowed to get the idea that the concept suggested by the little four-letter word, "work". Personally I learned never to shirk it but to accept it as an important challenge. Without doubt, my entire life was greatly influenced and strengthened due to the acceptance of basic principles that came my way during those early and rather formative years.

Early in my teens a nearby textile plant beckoned to me. The farm was left behind as I engaged to perform as a low paid mill hand. But, liking my work, advancement followed fairly rapidly and soon I became a supervisor. At this time, no idea had entered my mind that this move was the beginning of involvement in textile work that was destined to continue without interruption until retirement status was attained. However, that is the way it worked out as I drifted along through various textile mills in the two Carolinas. As I accepted work in each of these situations it was at once apparent that every single mill had its own peculiar problems. Many of these became my own enigma, and I had to effectively deal with it. This was fine with me; I welcomed the challenge each of these positions thrust upon me. The work I did not mind at all. In every case I confidently believed I could accomplish whatever was needed. I also possess the firm conviction that in every job or position I ever held was left in better shape when I left it than when I moved into it.

I am glad that the last years of my active involvement in textile work were with companies that operated the Cooleemee plants. The policies, and the men who formed these policies at top level, were, in my opinion, very fair indeed. If anything unfair entered the picture, it did not originate at the top level. That's the way I see it. It was my privilege to be in meetings with those in the highest echelons from time to time, and I was impressed with their sensible and fair approach to the existing problems, as well as the prayerful attitude in which the sessions were conducted.

But to get back to the Davie County Hospital. Reaching retirement status, I simply could not sit back and do nothing. Having been active all my life, the "do nothing" approach had to appeal to me whatsoever. It was necessary, therefore, to connect with some activity or organization in which I would be needed, accepted and be happy.

I became interested in the Davie County Hospital and the possibility of finding fulfillment there. The more I saw and learned about the facility the acute need for helpers, especially men, the more interested I became. Soon I enrolled in courses sponsored by Davidson Community College and in due time was awarded diplomas or certificates embracing three distinct areas of need: Home Care for the Aged, Nursing Assistance, and Stroke Patient Care. In then found my place in the Davie County Hospital...on the third shift, often referred to as the "graveyard shift".

One day I almost did not make it. The "bears" got me. That is an expression I learned on the farm when a most troublesome situation developed. At the insistence of others I went to the hospital for of the shift all workers on that shift met for breakfast at an appropriate eating establishment...and had breakfast together. This we did because of the close ties of friendship that existed between members of this shift. As we ate and talked, and talked and ate, it did not take a Solomon to notice that there was something rather special about that gathering. Perhaps those who were a part of the group would not have observed as readily the very distinctive makeup or composition of those feasting as readily as a casual onlooker. You see, I was the only man in the group. Someone smilingly remarked that "there is an old rooster among a number of young hens".

So, to make an important point: Few men have had the interest or have bothered to pursue training that would qualify them to do the work that I am called on to perform at this hospital. I say this in all humility. More men are desperately need—and it would be difficult to find a better place to do this type of work (or to be treated, for that matter) than the Davie County Hospital.

I work at the Davie County Hospital because here I have found acceptance. I have found a way to be helpful. And, I have found that it contributes to my own peace of mind.

BITS OF LIFE

By ROSCOE BROWN FISHER
Grandpa Brown and I stood on the overhead bridge. A fast train came into view, passed rapidly beneath, and was gone.

It was quiet again. Grandpa adjusted his spectacles for a better view of the stars. I thought it was a good time to let him talk. Besides, I have often been told it is wise to listen to those who have been where you are going.

"Tell me about life," I asked.

He said: "Most people take better care of their automobiles than their brains. . . they seldom put cheap fuel in their cars."

"Our minds are like vending machines. . . they won't pay off unless we put something in."

"Gossip's knowledge of arithmetic is incomplete. It uses only addition and multiplication."

"Cutting off your nose to spite your face may hurt your disposition as well as your looks."

"The higher you climb the farther you fall when you give up."

"Some people never learn that you have to stoop to conquer."

"Few men ever achieve anything worthwhile without first believing it is a worthwhile thing."

"Remember the fault you see in another may be your own; so say a little prayer for someone to someone in need."

"Investing something of ourselves in another is a way of keeping more than we give away."

Grandpa left off speaking, and was quiet again.

FROM OUR READERS

WHAT IS FAITH?
A dictionary gives a good answer: "Confident belief, trust." The Bible has a better answer: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen..."

The meaning of faith could perhaps be best understood by a returning prisoner of war.

The entire eleventh chapter of Hebrews could be called the Men of Faith Hall of Fame. Let us add the names of the recently released prisoners of war to the Men of Faith Hall of Fame!

Bill McClamrock, the gardener, with a bouquet of peonies picked from his garden while they were in full bloom. He has almost a hundred different kinds of this one variety.

Bill McClamrock . . .

A Man Of Many Talents!

A gardner, baker, carpenter . . . to mention a few of the jobs William "Bill" McClamrock of Mocksville does when he isn't working on his regular job in the shipping department at Ingersoll-Rand Company.

"He even has some honey bees," says his wife, "I don't believe there's anything he can't do."

When the weather is bad, she says, there's not a grain of sugar or an ounce of shortening in the house.

Bill does an expert job of baking and decorating cakes for all occasions and in all shapes and sizes. He has any number pans for making cakes in the desired shape and, yet, some are his own original ideas. Like the straw hat cake he made for Father's Day. He has also made several wedding cakes. Bill took a beginners course in cake decorating a couple of years ago, along with his wife and daughter, Mrs. (Patricia) Randy Draughn.

The ladies do a good job in the kitchen, but both agree that Bill does a much better job and seems to enjoy it more than they do.

Bill has never advertised his cakes, but he does sell a lot of them. He will seldom turn anyone down if they call him about making a cake for a special occasion, and mainly because he enjoys it.

He is also very good at making candies and breads, his wife says, and she enjoys this almost as much as her husband.

Bill says he has been working with flowers almost all his life. He still main-

Mr. and Mrs. McClamrock are shown in a small portion of the flower garden.

The skilled hands of McClamrock puts the finishing touches on a cake that will be in the shape of an "open book" upon completion.

Bill, the baker, puts the finishing touches on a cake while his wife lends a hand with mixing the icing.

Cakes for all occasions. Shown are just a few of the many cakes Bill makes.

tains a huge flower garden behind their home on Avon Street that would keep any three people busy for as long as they desired to work.

The entire lot is filled to capacity with all varieties of blooming shrubs, camellias, roses and beautiful clematis vines of all colors.

His vegetable garden, which is not nearly as large as his flower gardens, would make anyone take notice. It will produce enough vegetables to more than take care of several families.

"Everything he does", says Mrs. McClamrock, "Bill puts his whole heart into it and he doesn't do anything on a small scale."

A disabled veteran of World War II, Bill has never allowed his injury to handicap him. Prior to his job at Ingersoll-Rand Company, he worked as a carpenter with Roy W. Daniels and he has never neglected his gardens and yard work, nor his hobby of cooking.

Although Bill never ceases to amaze his family and friends with his creations in the kitchen and his prize winning flowers, his wife says the excitement of his life came during his military career.

During his tour of overseas duty in Germany, he encountered several unusual experiences. Like the time he was on guard patrol in Frankfurt and almost had to deliver a baby. The woman in labor, he remembers, was in a railroad station about ten-feet from his post. The nearest hospital was only a few miles away, but they made the trip just minutes ahead of the stork.

Another incident he shall long remember happened while he was on guard duty behind a bank in Germany. A truck, loaded with valuable paintings and blocks of gold, was being unloaded and the valuables were put into separate vaults in the basement.

One of the guards dropped a metal box, which he said measured about three feet long and a foot high, that was stuffed full of diamonds. There they were, about ankle-deep in diamonds and he didn't even get a souvenir.

McClamrock also remembers the times he was on guard patrol around General Eisenhower's headquarter. All these unusual experiences hold memories that are amusing today and will never be forgotten. However, there are many unpleasant experiences, as in all wars, that he shall never forget, and they are not amusing . . . even many years later.

A man with many talents is one way of describing Bill McClamrock. To find a man who apparently has a green thumb and is willing to use it, one who is just as much at home in the kitchen as in his workshop, and all in addition to working at a regular job - they must be very few and far between.

Mrs. McClamrock and their pet poodle admire a rhododendron bush, one of many growing in her husband's garden.

Making rosettes, Bill uses the flower nail and transfers the completed flower to the cake.

The big game record-keeping program is well known to big game hunters, guides and outfitters throughout North America. To many sportsmen, the name of the Boone and Crockett Club has become synonymous with this big gamekeeping.

The joining of these two prestigious organizations may very well be a milestone in the history of North American big game hunting.

Established in 1887 by Theodore Roosevelt, the Boone and Crockett Club demonstrated its progressive nature from the offset by incorporating into its by-laws the concept of fair chase. This was at a time when few state or provincial hunting laws were on the book and even fewer were enforced.

Although the Club's regular membership is limited to 100 persons, the list of members has always included the most distinguished legal, conservationist, political and scientific talent of the times.

The National Rifle Association, organized in 1871 to train and educate citizens in the safe and efficient use of firearms, reaches over one million members through its rolls. The Association actively supports and promotes good sportsmanship, wildlife management and studies in conservation.

Through joint cooperation, the two organizations foresee wider public acceptance of the hunting ethics consistent with the principles of fair chase and the promotion of our natural resources.

An idea from the Davie Craft Association grew into quite a big attraction Friday, June 29th on the Court Square of Mocksville with a "Square Fair". The "Square Fair" was an exhibit of country crafts for sale.

The Davie County Extension Service was instrumental in helping to form the Davie County Craft Association and co-sponsors the activities. Now belonging to the Association there are thirty-four exhibiting and eighteen associate members. They are interested in the preservation of country crafts and promoting quality crafts.

Exhibiting Friday from 2:00 till 9:00 p.m. and their crafts were: Mrs. Mary Estep, of Winston-Salem, candlemaking;

Mrs. Alice Bess of Winston-Salem, hand painted ceramic jewelry; Mrs. Gray Matthews, Rt. 1, Advance, baked goods; Gray Matthews, Rt. 1, Advance, Burlap flowers; Belle Boger, Statesville Road, Mocksville, Rock craft, nature craft and decoupage hand bags; Lucy Elustondo, Mocksville, crochet and knitted doll clothes; Virginia DeParle, Fork, crochet

The newly formed Davie County Jaycee Club held a successful car wash last Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the M & S Sunoco Station at the intersection of Hwy 601 North and I-40.

"There was such a turnout by members of this community that some customers had to be turned away", said Earl Williams, President of the Davie County Jaycees Chapter. A total of $164 was realized from this project.

The proceeds from this project will go into the building fund to be used for the construction of the multi-purpose building and the Davie County Department of Corrections.

The Davie County Jaycees is an institutional chapter composed of inmates at the Davie County Department of Corrections. The chapter is expecting to receive its charter within the next 30-days. The chapter was introduced and extended to the correctional unit by the Mocksville Jaycee Club.

Plans are underway for various internal and external projects, both at the correctional unit and in the local community.

Visitors

From Arizona

Mrs. Rosalee Gilliam, left, of Mesa, Arizona, and Mrs. Edythe Williams, of Phoenix, arrived in Mocksville Monday of this week to visit Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Harmon and family at Mobiland Mobile Homes on the Yadkinville Road. The two ladies are cousins and Mrs. Williams is Mrs. Harmon's grandmother. They certainly don't look it.... but, Mrs. Gilliam is 70 years old and Mrs. Williams is 74.... and, they came to Mocksville in a 1958 truck pulling the 15½ foot travel trailer shown behind them! Mrs. Gilliam did all the driving despite being an arthritis victim and unable to walk without the use of a cane or a walker! They visited a number of vacation sites on the way here and plan to visit in Michigan before returning home.

Beard To Appear In Musical "1776"

Fresh from his triumph as Alfred P. Doolittle in "My Fair Lady," Mocksville resident James Beard will appear as John Dickinson, the delegate from Pennsylvania who urged reconciliation with England, in the musical "1776" which opens on July 9 at 8:15 in Reynolds Auditorium.

Based on the conflicts which led up to the signing of the Declaration of Independence, "1776" ran for three years in New York, during which time it was awarded both the Tony Award and the New York Critics Award.

Leading roles will be performed by Paul Meier as John Adams, John Sneden as Benjamin Franklin, Christopher Coan as Edward Rutledge and Robert Kettler as Thomas Jefferson.

Although there were only men in the Continental Congress, the musical "1776" has two women in the cast, Deborah Gordon as Abigail Adams and Katharine Buffalo as Martha Jefferson.

"1776" will play nightly in Reynolds Auditorium from July 9 to 14, during which time anyone with a birthday falling on one of the performance nights will be admitted free by showing proof of birth date at the box office.

Corrections

This is to correct an article appearing in last week's Enterprise-Record.

Blank checks were not stolen from a truck belonging to Henry Howell and forged on his account. They were stolen from the truck of a Branch Banking and Trust Company customer and forged on that account. Mr. Howell merely assisted in the obtaining of warrants for Forsyth County man sought in their forgery.

Also, the Fork Fire Department, Tom Rice of Mocksville Rt. 3, Chief, was inadvertently omitted from the listing of fire departments serving Davie County.

Also, we have been advised that the Advance Volunteer Fire Department serves the Bermuda Run Development.

Cooleemee Branch Library Changes Hours, Plans Special Program

The Cooleemee Branch Library will begin a Story Hour Program for four and five year old children on Tuesday, July 10 at 10:45 a.m. The purpose of the program will be to introduce young children to the library and books.

Mrs. Nancy Fullbright, Davie County Librarian, emphasizes that this introduction cannot begin too early and that story hours develop a child's love for books at his most impressionable age. She feels that this a wonderful opportunity for children to discover books and, at the same time, have a learning association with other children.

Mrs. Carolyn White, Branch Librarian, will direct the Story Hour which will be free of charge. Outstanding children's stories will be featured through the use of books, filmstrips, and recordings with 45 minutes being devoted to the story hour and 15 minutes allotted for the children to choose books for home use.

Zucchini Delicious

Summertime is squash time. If you are looking for an inexpensive vegetable, easy on the budget, the preparation time and the taste buds, you will want to consider summer squash. These squash are the varieties which are harvested while immature and when the entire squash is tender and edible. They include the yellow Crookneck, the large yellow Straightneck, the greenish-white Patty Pan, the greenish-white Zucchini, and the slender green Zucchini.

The seeds of the tender-skinned squash soften in cooking and may be eaten along with the flesh. Yellow squash and zucchini do not have to be peeled for the skin is edible and add flavor plus color. Recipes for summer squash and zucchini are usually interchangeable.

In selecting, look for squash that are tender and well developed, firm, fresh appearing, and well formed. You can identify a tender squash because the skin is glossy instead of dull, and it is neither hard nor tough.

Summer squash yield only 15 calories per 1/2 cup, cooked and drained. They do have an affinity for other foods which adds extra calories. They are delicious cooked simply with onions, plus a small amount of butter, salt, and pepper for seasoning. If calories can be spared, stuffed, fried, or in casserole are delicious. Just take your choice.

Skillet Squash and Onions

2 pounds yellow summer squash
3 medium onions, sliced thin
3 tablespoons or less butter
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Wash squash and dice. Combine all ingredients in skillet. Cover and cook for 20 to 30 minutes, or until squash and onions are tender, stirring frequently. Makes 4 servings.

Suzanne Says...

One of my favorite dishes is Swiss Steak. It does not take long to prepare and it is great for guests as well as the family. Here is a good recipe:

SWISS STEAK SUPREME

2 lbs. round steak 1 or 1 1/2 inches thick

2 1/2 cups tomatoes

1 medium sliced onion

1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce

1 1/2 tablespoon black pepper

1 tsp. vinegar

1 clove garlic

2 tablespoons catsup

2 1/2 tablespoons brown sugar

1 tsp. salt

Pound 6 tablespoons flour into sides of steak. Brown in hot fat. Add all ingredients, cover, cook over low heat or in oven until tender... 2-2 1/2 hours. Uncover at least 15 minutes and let sauce thicken.

If you don't like to bake a cake from scratch, then there are so many good cake mixes on the market today. You can use your imagination and variation of a basic cake mix to suit yourself. I have this recipe:

1 yellow cake mix (use as directed)

1 stick margarine

1 can sliced peaches (drained)

1 1/2 cup corn flakes

1/2 cup raisins (nuts may be substituted)

1/2 cup brown sugar

1 tsp. ginger

1/2 cup peach juice

1/4 lb. cheese (optional)

Mix cake mix as directed on package. Melt margarine in oblong baking pan. Add brown sugar in pan. Drain peaches next. Then, pour in cake mix. Add corn flakes, ginger, vanilla, peach juice, raisins or nuts on top of cake mix. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or more until done.

If desired, 5 minutes before cake is done, remove from oven and place slices of cheese on top and brown for 5 minutes more.

Damage to the Chevrolet was estimated at $2,000, and $1500 to the pickup. Mrs. Felker was charged with failure to yield the right of way.

Loses Control

An estimated $300 damage was done to a 1972 Ford Tuesday, around 1:30 a.m., when the driver lost control on the Williams Road, and ran off the roadway. There was no injury.

State Highway Patrolman J.L. Payne said his investigation showed that Eddie Lee Frank of Mocksville Rt. 1 was operating the motor vehicle. The accident occurred on the Williams Road 6-miles east of Mocksville.

Study points to Vitamin E

A Duke University Medical Center researcher has found evidence that a Vitamin E-rich diet can help protect the lungs from the effects of noxious air pollutants such as ozone and nitrogen dioxide.

Dr. Daniel Menzel says that his findings offer a possible answer to the prevention of emphysema and other chronic lung diseases which are environmentally triggered. "Man's diet has not changed fast enough," Menzel continued, "to adequately protect him against an increasing toxic environment."

Though no one knows exactly how Vitamin E works, the best theory is that it acts as an antioxidant, protecting and preventing the damaging effects caused by oxidation within the lungs, which in turn is caused partly by inhaling air-borne pollutants.

And Children

Baptist Homes President Marks Anniversary

On June 30 Dr. W. R. Wagoner, president of the Baptist Children's Homes of North Carolina, Inc., marked his 15th year as president of the Southeast's largest child caring institution.

Dr. Wagoner came to the agency as general superintendent in 1958 and his title was later changed to president. His administration has been characterized by strengthening existing programs and developing existing services in areas of unmet need in the field of child care. He became president of the Baptist Children's Homes after nearly 20 years of active pastoral service.

Dr. Wagoner is a graduate of Lewisville (N.C.) High School, Mars Hill College and Wake Forest University. He received the B. D., Th. M., and Th. D. degrees from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky. His doctoral degree is in the field of Christian ethics and sociology.

Dr. Wagoner has done graduate research at the University of Louisville in Louisville, Ky., Duke University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He is married to the former Elizabeth Tucker of Winston-Salem. They have three children, Otis, who is a graduate student at the University of Southern California; Anne, who lives in Beaufort, N.C.; and Bruce, who is a ninth grader. The Wagons make their home at 503 Willow Dr., Thomasville.

Dr. Wagoner, the youngest of nine children, was reared on a farm near Lewisville in Forsyth County. During college and seminary studies, he served as pastor of churches in North Carolina and Kentucky. Following graduation from the seminary, he served as pastor of the Mt. Carmel Baptist Church at Chapel Hill, North Winston Baptist Church in Winston-Salem, and the First Baptist Church of North Wilkesboro.

Recognized in child care circles across the country, Dr. Wagoner served as president of the North Carolina Child Care Association from 1963-1964; president of Southern Baptist Child Care Executives from 1966-1967; and was the first president of the Southern Baptist Social Service Association organized in 1969. He served on the Board of Directors of the North Carolina Social Service Association from 1964-1968.

The Baptist leader has addressed Baptist state conventions throughout the nation and conducted numerous seminars for executives in inter-denominational child care meetings. He was a representative to the White House Conference on Children and Youth and to the Baptist World Youth Congress, an international conference on youth held in Beirut, Lebanon in 1962. In 1971 Dr. Wagoner was named "Alumnus of the Year" by Mars Hill College.

During his 15 years as administrator, 13 cottages for children have been built on the various campuses across the state. Eight residences for staff have been constructed during his tenure and a recreation-gymnasium building and an infirmary have been built at Kennedy Home in Kinston. A general administration office building, a library, and a Child Development Center have been added at Millie Home in Thomasville, while numerous other buildings have been renovated.

Odum Home in Pembroke, the first Indian orphanage in the state, was turned over to the Baptist Children's Homes by former trustees and in 1960 a colonial complex which houses 24 children was dedicated there.

The state's oldest registered Holstein dairy herd was moved from Millie Home to a modern facility at Kennedy Home.

The agency opened Broyley Home near Waynesville-Clyde in 1971 to serve children in western North Carolina. A Maternity Home began operation in 1970. Four additional area offices were opened in Asheville, Raleigh, Charlotte and Fayetteville to make social service more readily available to families in need.

An extensive training program for social workers, houseparents, and other child-care workers, promoted through the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, has been utilized.

The Baptist State Convention of North Carolina requested the Homes to provide a Child Development Center to serve as a model for pre-school child care and education. It was opened in 1965 and has been under the direction of Mrs. Wagoner since its inception. Children from the Thomasville area are served year-round in nursery school, kindergarten, and day care. In addition, the Center offers professional help to churches across the state interested in beginning any phase of pre-school education.

In 1964 a vacation cottage was built on Bogue Banks near Morehead City. It affords children and staff recreational opportunities throughout the year. Wall Home in Wallburg provides an adventure program for boys who live with houseparents in a semi-rural environment. Greer Home near Chapel Hill was established in 1963 to provide intensive care for a limited number of children with special needs.

A development department was established by the agency in 1965 to stimulate grants, special gifts, deferred giving and estate planning from friends of the Homes.

During the past year the Baptist Children's Homes provided services for more than 1,300 children and maintained a close working relationship with 2,000 parents and relatives.

World War I Medals Available

The demand for the State's World War I medal has become so great that another system of distribution is now in effect to speed up issue, John J. Tolson, III, Secretary of the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs for North Carolina has announced.

In addition to applying for the medal at the Office of the Adjutant General, P.O. Box 28288, Raleigh, N.C. 27611, applicants may now appear in person or write to any one of the 15 N.C. Veterans Affairs District Service Offices. A district office is located in Winston-Salem at 228 First Union National Bank Bldg., 310 West 4th Street, 27101. Ray Lagle, Davie County Veterans Service Officer, advises that Robert Remsburg of the N.C. Department of Veterans Affairs, will be in Mocksville at his office on Court Square on Tuesday afternoons from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

"Most of the time, those eligible can pickup these medals from him as this time," said Mr. Lagle.

Officials of the National Guard recently announced that World War I medals to commemorate the State's appreciation of the distinguished service rendered by the soldiers and sailors from North Carolina in the First World War were available to all veterans who could provide evidence that they entered service from North Carolina. At that time the medals were available only at the Adjutant General's office.

The medals were found in an old Raleigh warehouse earlier this year. They had apparently been stored by the State years ago upon receipt from a Massachusetts manufacturer.

The medal hangs from a red, white and blue ribbon. On the front is a state crest and the words "World War Service." On the back the inscription reads "Presented by the State of N.C. TO -- for honorable services." Information is that the North Carolina General Assembly appropriated $20,000 on March 10, 1919, for the design and purchase of a medal for veterans of World War I.

...about your Social Security

Widows who have been getting survivors payments from social security but who have been severely disabled for the last 2 years may be eligible for Medicare starting July 1, 1973, but they must file a disability claim.

Medicare has been available only to people 65 and over. Starting in July, the Government health care insurance will be extended automatically to all disabled people under 65 if they've received monthly social security disability payments for 2 years or more.

But some severely disabled widows 50 and over have never applied for disability payments. Generally they've been getting social security survivors benefits because they're 60 or over or they've been getting benefits as widowed mothers who have young or disabled children in their care.

To get Medicare, these widows must file a claim for disability payments. As soon as possible they should call, write, or visit the social security office. If a widow is unable to make the contact, a friend or relative may help. For more information call the Social Security Office, Salisbury, N.C. 633-6470.

Q. I just started working full time and my first two check stubs showed the wrong social security number. What should I do?

A. Report the error to your employer as soon as possible, and show him your social security card so he can correct his records right away.

Q. Is Medicare coverage for the disabled the same as the Medicare coverage now provided for people 65 and older?

A. Yes, the only difference is in the requirement for getting Medicare coverage. Disabled people must have been getting monthly social security disability payments for 24 consecutive months. There is a special provision for people who need a kidney transplant or dialysis.

Q. I've been getting monthly social security disability benefits since 1967, and I know I'm eligible for Medicare coverage. Will my minor children, who also get monthly checks as my dependents, be able to get Medicare coverage, too?

A. No. The recent change in the law extends Medicare coverage only to disabled workers like you, and to disabled widows and widowers 50 to 65; people 18 and over who receive social security benefits because they became disabled before 22, and certain other disabled people. Minor children are not included.

Q. When I signed up for medical insurance under Medicare, I couldn't get hospital insurance because I hadn't worked long enough under social security. However, my sister told me that this has recently been changed. How do I apply for hospital insurance coverage?

A. Call, write, or visit your social security office to apply. Persons like yourself, who previously couldn't get hospital insurance coverage may now enroll at a cost of $3 per month.

Highland Games, Gathering Of Clans, This Weekend At Grandfather Mountain

The pageantry of the Highland Games and Gathering of Scottish Clans will return to MacRae Meadows on the slopes of towering Grandfather Mountain Saturday and Sunday and advance interest promises that the 18th annual event will draw record crowd of spectators and participants.

In excess of 25,000 persons are expected to witness the gala ceremonies which will be authentic and traditional as any similar event held anywhere in the United States. The two-day gathering is a rebirth of an ancient legend of Scottish folklore, staged in a setting which almost identically matches the highland countryside of Scotland.

Bagpipe tunes will kick off the 1973 Highland Games as piping competition begins at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday. Also on the morning program is the Sunfish Sailboat Regatta on Loch Dornie at nearby Grandfather Golf and Country Club.

The crowd-pleasing demonstration by Scottish Sheepdogs will be held shortly after noon, followed by the 1 o'clock presentation of the guests of honor as the pipe bands pass in review.

At 1:30 p.m., the field will become a beehive of activity as the track and field contests commence, the Highland Dancing starts, and the piping and drumming continues.

One of the first events to reach a conclusion will be the Mountain Marathon in which runners will be reaching MacRae Meadows to complete a 26-mile race which began some three hours earlier in Boone.

Athletic competitions scheduled for Saturday afternoon include the dashes of 100, 220, 440, and 800 yards, the one and two-mile runs, the long jump, the pole vault, and the triple jump.

The formal Tartan Ball for officials, sponsors, clan representatives and invited guests will be held Saturday night.

A worship service and the Kinking of the Tartans launches the official festivities on Sunday morning. The guests of honor will be introduced at noon, followed by the archery competition, exhibition dancing, and the fencing competition.

The inspiring Parade of Tartans, featuring the marching of the clans and guest bands, is scheduled for 2 p.m. on Sunday.

At 2:30 o'clock, the Old Scottish athletic contests begin, with the contestants attired in kilts. The caber toss, the sheaf toss, the broad jump, wrestling, and weight-tossing events plus the mirthful tug-of-war will bring on the gleeful leaps of victory and the slumping agony of defeat.

Over 200 trophies and medals will be awarded to the first, second, and third-place finishers in practically all events in addition, cash prizes

Tar Heel Spotlight

Department of
ART, CULTURE and HISTORY
Grace J. Rohrer, Secretary

William Hooper, Joseph Hewes, and John Penn found a permanent place in history 197 years ago this week when they signed the Declaration of Independence for North Carolina.

None of the three was a native North Carolinian, and the oldest was only 45 when the Declaration was signed on July 4, 1776.

Hooper was a native of Boston and a graduate of Harvard. He moved to Wilmington as a young man, married into the upper strata of local society, and maintained a successful law practice. Elected to both the first and second Continental Congresses, Hooper was described by John Adams as one of the "three great orators of the Revolution." The others, in Adams' opinion, were Patrick Henry and Richard Henry Lee. Hooper resigned from the Congress to return to North Carolina in 1777 more than a decade prior to the final ratification of the Constitution. He is buried at Guilford Battleground in Greensboro.

Joseph Hewes was born on a small farm in New Jersey and moved to Edenton sometime between 1756 and 1763. He was one of the most staunch advocates of reconciliation with Great Britain, and his final decision to support the Declaration is widely credited with persuading several other "holdouts" to make the vote unanimous. Hewes died prior to ratification of the Constitution and is buried at Christ Church Cemetery in Philadelphia.

John Penn, the third North Carolina signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born in Caroline County, Virginia, and moved to Granville County in 1774. He was not a political leader of any particular note when chosen to replace Richard Caswell (who resigned) at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia. There had been considerable resentment of the fact that all three delegates were from the eastern part of the state, and Penn's appointment has been characterized as "a calculated move to bring the west into the Revolutionary fold." Like Hooper, he is buried at Guilford Battleground in Greensboro.

The almost untold story of these men and many of their fellow delegates is the great reluctance with which they approached the move to independence. Hooper vigorously opposed some excesses of the British, but he described the British Constitution as "the most perfect instrument of government ever designed by man." Hewes in 1775 wrote, "We want no revolution unless a change of ministers and measures be deemed as such." Penn alone in the North Carolina delegation appears to have approved of Thomas Paine's famous pamphlet "Common Sense," which Hewes sent home as "a curiosity" and Hooper considered to be "radical."

An inexpensive pamphlet entitled "North Carolina's Signers" offers brief sketches of the men who signed both the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution for North Carolina and is available from the Office of Archives and History.

Davidson Community College Establishes Employment Service

Plans for a new employment service for students, graduates and alumni of Davidson County Community College have been announced here by H. Herman Roach, dean of student affairs, and W. Alan Knight, manager of the Employment Security Commission in Lexington.

Beginning July 2 the Lexington office will enter into a joint venture with the college in establishing a full-time Employment Security Commission-Student Placement Office at the college. It will be one of the first such offices to be established on a community college campus.

Mrs. Clyde (Maxine) Conrad, interviewer in the Lexington office, will be in charge of the new branch office located on the ground floor of the Gee Building. Mrs. Thomas (Frances) Coppley, of Lexington, will be office by the Employment Security assistant.

"Mrs. Conrad has an excellent background in employer-applicant relations," Knight said. She has been with the Lexington office for the past twelve years. "In her new assignment she will devote all of her time to providing a variety of employment services to students, prospective graduates and alumni," he added.

Much of her time will be spent in job development work through contacts with the various employers in the county. The job will be tied in with the statewide job bank system, using a micro-fiche viewer and daily updated files. The applicants will have the most up-to-date information on jobs throughout the state.

The new arrangement will be operated and supervised jointly by the Employment Security

"Blithe Spirit" Begins At Tanglewood

Tanglewood Barn Theater's second production of the season, Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit," begins suitably on Friday the 13th (of July). The scheduling of the production ties in well with this day of superstition and augury since it is a comedy of the supernatural.

The play will run for 13 performances with evening performances through July 22 (except for Monday July 11) and matinees on Saturday and Sunday July 21-22. Preview performances of the show will be given Wednesday and Thursday, July 11 and 12.

Ryan Hilliard plays Sir Charles Condomine, an aspiring novelist who invites a medium to his home to learn more about the occult. But Sir Charles gets more than he has asked for in the bargain.

The eccentric medium, Madame Arcati, unwittingly summons back the spirit of Sir Charles' long-dead first wife Elvira, much to the displeasure of Sir Charles and his second wife Ruth.

Elvira torments Charles by reminding him of their days together and plots to make him a ghost. But mistakes occur and it is Charles' second wife Ruth who becomes a ghost.

How Charles manages to extricate himself from these two blithe spirits bring the play a hilarious conclusion.

Imogene Bliss makes her debut at Tanglewood as Madame Arcati; Holly Hill acts as Elvira and Marilyn Allen as Ruth. Others in the cast are Dan Hogan, Jennifer Dunning and Kathryn Baumann.

Guest director for the production is Nancy Wynn.

Evening performances are at 8 p.m. and matinees at 2 p.m.

Tickets are on sale at the theater box office and by mail. Telephone reservations are accepted also.

Human Resources in Action
in North Carolina

by Pat Patterson

What do you look for in a nursing home if, for one reason or another, a relative must be placed in such a facility?

Before making any decisions, consult a physician -- you may not need the services of a nursing home at all. There are several types of facilities available depending on the person's needs.

Family care homes, which house no more than five people, and homes for the aged, which house more than five residents, provide a protected environment (one which provides the residents with basic needs such as food and shelter) for those living there. These homes, which are licensed by the Division of Social Services of the N. C. Department of Human Resources, do not provide medical facilities. In North Carolina there are 572 family care homes located in 85 counties. Homes for the aged number 245.

Another type of home, the intermediate care facility, provides skilled nursing services eight hours per day seven days a week. The nurse(s) on duty can either be a registered nurse (RN) or a licensed practical nurse (LPN). This type of setting is for those patients who require some form of nursing care but do not need constant 24 hour attention. There are 10 intermediate care facilities in the state.

Finally, there are the skilled nursing homes which provide 24 hour nursing service to patients. An RN must be responsible for the nursing staff but may not be on duty at all times in this type of home; however, LPN's should be on duty day and night. There are 131 homes of this type. Sixty-four of these homes strictly offer skilled care; 10 offer a combination of skilled and intermediate care; 20 offer facility and the grounds. Note the cleanliness of the home and skilled care and home for the aged care; and the remainder of the homes are assorted combinations.

One factor which may also influence your decision as to the type of home needed is whether the facility falls under Medicare-Medicaid eligibility provisions. Medicare pays the bills for most people over 65 years of age and Medicaid pays bills for low-income people. Medicaid will pay bills for intermediate care facilities or skilled nursing homes. Under the Medicare-Medicaid programs, the federal government sets safety and sanitation standards for nursing home services. Knowing that each state must follow these standards when it inspects and certifies nursing homes may help you choose the right facility.

Though the type of facility and whether it falls under the Medicare-Medicaid program are important considerations in choosing a rest home or nursing facility, they are not the only ones. Ernest Phillips, chief of the nursing home section for the N. C. Division of Health Services, suggests checking the following:

- Check the location -- is it close to a hospital or doctor and is it convenient for visits from friends and relatives?

- Personally visit several homes.

- Read the brochures concerning each home.

- Talk to the head nurse in each facility (if the home requires one) as well as to the administrator. Note their attitude toward patients, visitors and staff. Are they available to answer questions, hear complaints or discuss problems?

- Don't notify the facility in advance that you are coming -- this will give you a chance to view everyday operations as they actually occur.

- Take a walking tour of the whether it complies with Medicare-Medicaid sanitation standards. Check the safety measures taken by the facility such as lighting, sturdiness of chairs, handrails in hallways and bathrooms, etc. One particular measure to note is whether the home meets Federal and/or state fire safety codes such as clearly marked and unobstructed exits.

- Time your visit during a meal so that you can see how the residents are fed. Talk with the dietician at the facility. Note whether the residents are eating hot, nutritious meals and whether the food is properly prepared according to a doctor's specifications (if any).

- Find out what type of activity programs are offered by the facility such as church services, transportation to and from town for shopping trips, etc.

- Talk to the patients. Check their alertness, freedom to communicate, happiness, etc.

- Finally, don't be pressured into making a snap decision as to which facility best suits your needs. Consider carefully the advantages and disadvantages of each home and select one accordingly.

Nursing homes are becoming more and more in demand across the United States as well as in North Carolina. One reason for this is that the general population is taking more interest in the care of senior citizens. Another reason, says Phillips, is that these homes, especially skilled nursing homes, are starting to take care of more short term patients so that these patients won't have to pay high hospital costs."

Anyone can be admitted to a home except maternity patients; drug addicts, psychotics or alcoholics whose behavior may endanger other occupants; and patients with communicable disease or other conditions which may endanger the welfare of other occupants.

Senator Ervin Says

The problems of private enterprise continue to escalate almost every month. For nearly two years, the economy has been in deep trouble. The first real signs of this became clear in the weeks before the President made his historic August 15, 1971 announcement that he was declaring a 90-day freeze on wages and prices.

Twenty-three months later under Phase 3½ of the Economic Stabilization Plan, we find that controls do about as much harm as good. What seems to be a blessing for consumers has turned into a nightmare for food producers.

Feed manufacturers, broiler-chicken and egg farmers, and other segments of the agriculture industry have curtailed and in some instances closed down operations. Administration officials, recognizing this, have indicated that food rationing is a possibility.

At best agriculture rests on a basis of operations subject to many uncertainties, but up to now there has seldom been any doubt that America could produce what it needed to insure adequate supplies of food and fiber in the marketplace. The present condition relates to the ability of farmers to buy their supplies at a cost that will allow them to comply with price ceilings and make a reasonable profit, or, as they put it, a livelihood.

The price ceiling is not the only major worry of farmers. How to obtain adequate fuel supplies to produce and harvest their crops is a real concern. In response to this situation, along with other members of the North Carolina Congressional delegation, I recently wrote to the President and presented the

Small Watershed Projects Prevent Flooding

Small watershed projects in the Midwest alone saved $7 million and protected more than 10 million acres of rural and urban land during the heavy flooding in the early months of 1973.

This was emphasized by Robert Long, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, in a talk to the 20th National Watershed Congress in Wichita, Kansas that was heard by a number of North Carolina delegates. The assistant secretary told more than 400 in attendance that "This emphasizes the urgent need to help our local communities obtain more watershed projects, and I hope we can agree that a small watershed is a sensible place to begin managing soil and water resources. Unfortunately, in some areas watersheds have become battlegrounds between landowners and members of certain ecological groups."

He added: "We live in a very complex society and our individual needs have to be expressed. My great concern is that some small interests many times overshadow interests that are very large. It's no trick at all these days for a small but disciplined organization to halt practically any development, no matter how many people want completion of a project. Eleven-hour stoppages not only hurt those who want the project, but even the people responsible for the stoppage."

Brady Angell, Chairman of the Davie Soil and Water Conservation District, voiced agreement with the views expressed by Assistant Secretary Long. "It is good for individual citizens to ask questions about local projects. Often this results in modifications which are an improvement."

"But I also believe that a citizen should study the facts carefully before he contributes money or becomes a member of a group that, through court action, seeks to stop or delay projects that may be urgently needed in the next few years."

M.E. "Red" Knight of Corapeake, president of the North Carolina Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts, who attended the Watershed Congress had this to say. "It is a fact that we are going to need more water, more food, electricity, highways, airports, drainage and other things to maintain our standard of living -- and this is true even if the work done does disrupt fish or wildlife temporarily."

Chairman Angell added that, "Perhaps the solution to our fish and wildlife problem is for our state and federal conservation agencies to work together to better manage and utilize more than 1600 wildlife refuges, which cover more than 50 million acres in the United States today."

If you pay someone $50 or more for household services during any three-month calendar quarter, you must report these payments and pay social security taxes to the Internal Revenue Service.

The report for the April-May-June calendar quarter is due July 31. Robert LeBaube, Acting District Director of Internal Revenue for North Carolina said today.

Often when maids or other household employees apply for benefits, it comes to light that all social security taxes have not been paid, LeBaube said. The IRS then has to secure delinquent returns from the employer, sometimes covering several years with a substantial amount of taxes, penalties and interest due. This may delay and decrease benefits for the household employees, he added.

The social security tax on household wages is 5.85 percent for the employer and 5.85 percent for the employee. When filing the quarterly report the employer should include a check or money order for 11.70 percent of cash wages paid for the period.

Employers must use Form 942, Employer's Quarterly Tax Return for Household Employees, to report the social security taxes due. After the first one is filed, a copy of Form 942 is mailed to every employer in time for the next quarterly report. However, if you do not receive a form, you may obtain one from your local IRS office.

How would you react to a big jump in car prices?

That's why railroads are essential.

One way car manufacturers keep prices from getting out of control is with economical shipping. By rail. In fact, railroads move 76% of all new autos and auto parts.

Why do the auto industry and so many other industries ship by rail? They know it's usually the most economical way to go. Consider these figures for the thousands of things delivered by rail. The average cost per-ton-mile by truck is five times as much as by rail. Air shipping is fifteen times more expensive.

Now you know one big reason why you need railroads. And why you need Southern:

Letter To Editor

The following letter was received by the Rev. Austin Hamilton, Minister of the First United Methodist Church of Mocksville, from the Rev. W. Gordon Mullinax, Minister of The Hope United Methodist Church of Melbourne, Florida. It concerns the Lytton family of Melbourne who have been patients at the Davie County Hospital after being seriously injured in an automobile accident a few weeks ago.

Reverend D.A. Hamilton
First United Methodist Church of Mocksville
Mocksville, North Carolina

Dear Brother:

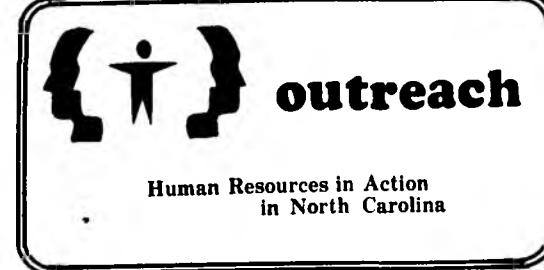

I am simply overwhelmed by the reports I receive from the Lytton family regarding the royal treatment they have received from you and your people and the whole town of Mocksville. I would estimate that at least three-fourths of all conversation I have had with the Lyttons has been on the subject of the unbelievable friendliness and warmth of your people and yourself.

In addition to your church, they have mentioned hospital staff, nurses, the doctor, the ambulance drivers that visit them sometimes twice daily, the Highway Patrolman who visit them even while off-duty, people who open their homes to visiting families, hairdressers who set-up special appointments, and people all over town who wave their friendliness to strangers who are 'strangers no more'.

My sincere thanks to you and your wonderful people.

Yours truly,
W. Gordon Mullinax, Minister
The Good Hope

In a hall just outside the special study room of the dormitory-like cottage is a bookcase which holds a set of encyclopedias. But unlike a regular encyclopedia which has 20 volumes and takes up less than three linear feet, this set of encyclopedias is made up of 145 volumes and requires 85 linear feet on a bookcase.

It is a Braille encyclopedia, one of several sets scattered around the campus for use of students at the Governor Morehead School for the Blind in Raleigh.

The Governor Morehead School, now in its 129th year of service to visually handicapped children of North Carolina, is one of the institutions within the N.C. Department of Human Resources. It is the only school for the blind in the state.

And, according to S. J. Cole, superintendent, it is one of the largest schools for the blind in the United States. Last year there were 336 students enrolled, and 62 faculty members.

Any person, aged six to 18, who is a resident of North Carolina and is classified as legally blind (20-200 vision is eligible to attend the Governor Morehead School).

However, Cole pointed out that being legally blind does not necessarily mean the person has no sight left. "In fact, I would say that 70 percent of our students have some vision. It must be remembered that the vision they have may be just vague light perception, while other students are able to use large print versions of books, music or whatever they are studying."

"Our principal concern is to provide an education for those children who are not able to attend the public schools because of inadequate vision," Cole said.

There is no charge to the student or his family for attending the Governor Morehead School. Classes and the pupil's room and board are provided as a service by the state.

Convincing the General Assembly that education for the deaf and blind was a state responsibility rather than a matter for private schools was no easy matter back in the early 1840's. But thanks to the persistence of Whig governor John Motley Morehead, the 1845 legislature approved an act to "provide for the education of deaf and blind persons in this state."

The school, known as the "North Carolina Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind," opened May 1, 1845 at a rented site in Raleigh. Since then, education facilities for the deaf have been set up as a separate specialty with three campuses. At the school for the blind, physical facilities and the number of faculty members have expanded along with the number of students.

In 1963, the General Assembly authorized the board of directors to change the name of the school to the Governor Morehead School in honor of the determination and leadership of John Motley Morehead.

The school is located on two campuses at present. Students in beginner classes through grade three and grades nine through 12 attend classes and live in cottages at the Ashe Avenue campus, near N.C. State University and just a few blocks from downtown Raleigh. Grades four through eight are offered at the Garner Road campus along with residences for the pupils there.

However, the General Assembly approved legislation to close the Garner Road Campus and consolidate it on the Ashe Avenue campus. As a result of this decision, the school was awarded $3,302,334 in capital improvements money for projects to develop and expand the Ashe Avenue campus for the merger. Consolidation is expected by the fall of 1976.

Since 1967 the school has been under the leadership of Superintendent Cole, who has among other accomplishments, helped the school achieve accreditation by the National Accreditation Council for Agencies Serving the Blind and Visually Handicapped and the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

He has also been active in the development of other programs for the benefit of the school's visually handicapped students. For example, college bound students in their high school years are now participating in a cooperative venture with Raleigh's Broughton High School. Every morning, the students go over with a teacher from the Gov. Morehead School for three hours of classes and mixing with sighted students.

A more recent project has been the development of a horticulture program, which is proving popular for both students and teachers at the school.

The school operates each year for a period of 10 months from September until June. The pupils are offered classes ranging from beginner work through the 12th grade, except for the special methods of instruction and additional specific skills which are required, the academic program of the Governor Morehead School is similar to that of the state public schools.

All pupils are taught courses in music, arts and crafts, vocations, and physical education as well as classwork. Vocational training includes bedding manufacturing, piano tuning and repair, and secretarial and medical transcription courses.

Instruction in Braille is begun in the first grade, and learning to type is part of the sixth grade instruction. Typing is useful to the students both in their classwork, particularly in taking tests, and in communicating with sighted friends. Specialized mobility training begins with basic orientation to the campus. This includes cane travel technique and use of all forms of transportation.

Campus cottages house more than 90 percent of the enrolled students. A number of day students commute from the nearby urban area. Houseparents supervise the children when they are not in the school setting. Also, they are responsible for instruction in personal habits, self care and daily living skills. In an effort to maintain more normal family and community ties, students are encouraged to go home on weekends and holidays.

For information on enrolling in the Governor Morehead School, write S. J. Cole, superintendent, The Governor Morehead School, 301 Ashe Avenue, Raleigh, N.C. 27606.

National Guard

Specialist Paul E. Carter, recruiter for the National Guard Armory, has written the following article:

If you're one of the more than a million young American men who graduate from High School next June, you probably are looking for an answer to the question about military service.

And, if you are over 17 and can meet physical and mental standards, you may find the answer right here in your home town, or nearby.

In the Army National Guard you can have the distinction of being trained to serve your country and your community. Here's how it works: First, you enlist in the outfit nearest to your home. After you sign up, you take four or six months of active duty training. What's more, if you're a High School undergraduate you can join now but defer starting your active duty until graduation.

With a minimum of interruption to your schooling or job plans, you return from active duty training to serve as a member of the Home Team, the National Guard, for the remainder of your military service.

Find out more about the National Guard -- and get all your questions about military service answered -- by a visit to your local National Guard Armory here in Mocksville. Do it today.

lanes -- a distance of 1,200 feet. The activity on the lanes will be tied with the installing of guard rails in the area. If the outer guard rail materials have not arrived by July 16, then one of the inside lanes will receive first treatment.

No order has yet been determined for lane treatment.

Once activity begins on a lane, the lane will be closed from Monday morning through Saturday noon. Previously, the lanes had been closed from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. weekdays for the installing of the inner guard rails.

Alternate routes have been devised for motorists who normally use Interstate 40.

Winston-Salem city officials urge motorists to take Silas Creek Parkway round to Corporation Parkway, Corporation Freeway to U.S. 52. This route provides access to the downtown area via Peters Creek Parkway, Main Street and U.S. 52.

Motorists traveling west may either take U.S. 52 south or exit at the Fifth Street ramp to take them into the downtown area.

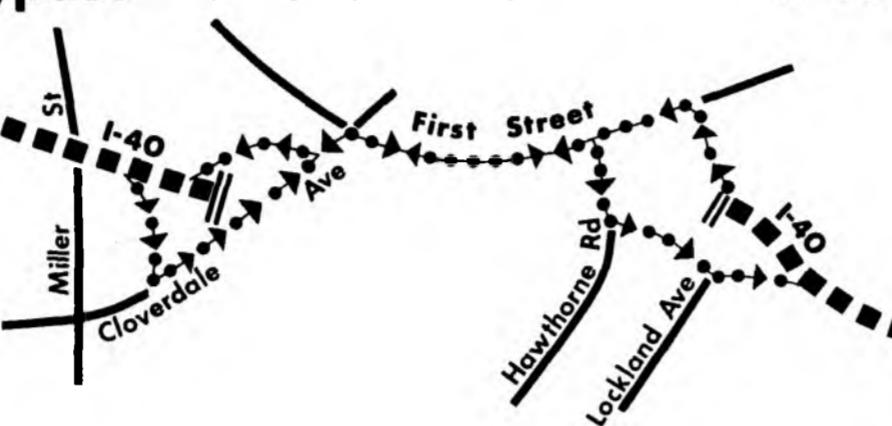

In addition, the outer ramps on I-40 will provide access into the downtown area -- Main, First, Lockland and Peters Creek.

If individuals frequently coming into the Winston-Salem area will use these ramps and alternate routes rather than waiting to use the hospital exit at Hawthorne Road or the Cloverdale Avenue ramp, officials feel that it will facilitate traffic flow since it is expected that through travelers and tourists will probably use these exits and will thus experience the least amount of confusion.

AMERICA ON THE MOVE

In 1835, a French visitor to the United States commented that "America is a land of wonders, in which everything is in constant motion."

The America of 1973 certainly is in motion, and getting from one place to another often presents a challenge.

The average American has the choice of several methods of traveling, yet some modes of transportation are being used a great deal, while others suffer from lack of use.

AUTOMOBILES AND MASS TRANSIT - Although the House recently rejected attempts to use Highway Trust Funds for mass transit systems, this issue is not over and is most likely to be a continuing battle. Highway supporters say that the United States will need to spend $300 billion on roads between now and 1990, but the Highway Trust Fund will generate only about $125 billion (around 42 percent of the money needed.)

Statistics show that 700,000 miles of highways are now subject to traffic jams, with around 4 million cars being added annually to our roads. Advocates of public transit claim that the present course will lead to the paving over of a great deal of the nation and that in many towns, half of the downtown area is already devoted to parking or moving cars and trucks.

Steadily rising rates have caused some empty seats, and a major problem seems to be finding a way of utilizing planes' capacities without causing airline fare wars. Many public transit systems are in trouble. They need more riders, but they cannot get more riders unless they provide service at a reasonable cost. However, improving these systems will also take money.

It is true that we need both highways - for moving from town to town - and public transit - for local travel.

Paying for them is the problem that has fallen on Congress. We can only act within the framework of a certain amount of money being available for what has to be done. We must decide which needs are most urgent and vital in order to allocate our resources to solve problems.

THE RAILROADS once carried 75 percent of the traveling public, but by 1970, they carried only 7 percent.

In 1970, twenty railroads were combined into Amtrak. The system started with the railroads contributing a sum equal to their passenger-carrying losses in 1969 and the Federal Government adding $40 million in direct funds and $100 million in loan guarantees.

The number of passengers has increased 14 percent over the past two years, but numerous problems were inherited by Amtrak. The first years have been spent improving facilities, with trains now running with 80 percent arrival reliability.

Yet, Amtrak is still a long way from paying for itself. The system still expects to lose over $100 million this year, and there are many needed improvements. Congress will have to take Amtrak one step at a time. We cannot afford to build up something that will be outmoded by new systems within a few years, but a revitalized rail system would certainly help alleviate the crowded conditions on the roads.

THE AIRLINES have fallen on more difficult times recently. They report that almost 49 percent of their seats are empty.

Consumer groups want across-the-broad reductions in order to fill the planes, but the Civil Aeronautics Board has recently decided to eliminate youth and family fares by a year from now.

Steadily rising rates have caused some empty seats, and a major problem seems to be finding a way of utilizing planes' capacities without causing airline fare wars.

In other words, we are well-blessed with a variety of ways to travel, but we must learn how to use wisely what we have in order to eliminate waste and inefficiency.

Lanny Bailey Has Completed Workshop

Lanny Bailey of Route 2, Advance, has recently completed the National Science Foundation Biological Sciences Curriculum Study Workshop held at Mars Hill College June 11 through June 29. The workshop, Implementation of Biological Science: An Ecological Approach, seeks to instruct teachers in utilizing ecological approaches in their high school classes.

COMPENSATION LAWS

The first effective State workers' compensation laws were passed in 1911, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Not only will you find outstanding bargains in local stores, you'll also save money on gas because you'll have a shorter distance to travel, plus saving money on parking because there's always plenty of free parking locally. It doesn't take a crystal ball to see that it pays to shop at home!

CHRIST IS REAL

A children's book is offered containing a small synthetic patch of material which, when scratched, emits an odor - lilac, pine, fir, rose. The fascinated child can read about the Christmas story and at the same time smell the odor of an exciting, yet to be Christmas tree!

Poor child! Don't be led astray by the synthetic experiences of life. Some things must be seen and touched and smelled - even heard and tasted - or else you've missed it all. But other things, just as real, or more so, cannot be encompassed by the senses. One of these is Christ.

He is real, alive and present. But you must experience Him by personal encounter. No synthetic gospel, no ersatz experience, no phony relationship will fill the place of Christ in your life.

Mrs. Bob (Clara) Lookabill, head of the Answering Service, has more than five years previous experience. The new business in Mocksville is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Lookabill.

A New Telephone Business...

Someone Always To Answer!

The town of Mocksville now has a Telephone Answering Service, which is the first of this type ever offered in Davie County.

The new business, located over Foster's Jewelry Store on Main Street, began operations on May 1, and is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Bob Lookabill.

Mrs. Lookabill, who is head of the new operation, has five years previous experience in this field in Asheboro and more than three years experience as a PBX Board operator.

Used as a residential service as well for the local businesses, Mrs. Lookabill says that "we feel our services will be an asset to the Town of Mocksville."

In addition to herself, Mrs. Lookabill presently employs two ladies, Miss Mary Lapish and Miss Linda Grannaman. Someone is on duty from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m. seven days a week. "And during these hours", she added, "the person on duty doesn't leave for anything."

She explained that the service can be "hooked up" by the local telephone company within a day after the customer signs the agreement. The phone company also keeps the equipment in order and has worked with them extremely well since the service began.

"This is actually an extension from their business or home phone" she says. "It runs through a secretarial switchboard which is answered in such a way as the subscriber would answer the phone themselves."

Story by Marlene Benson

She says at this time, they have almost as many residential as they have business subscribers.

"We always catch the phone between the third and fourth ring," she says. "By this time most subscribers would have answered if they were home or in their office."

Most of the times the customers will call and inform them that they are going to be away, but there are times when they may leave for a short while without notifying the answering service. As for the businesses, it has been a great service during lunchtime or before the office opens at nine.

Mrs. Lookabill says that it's quite surprising how many calls come in during lunch and after office hours. She also feels this service could be a means of protection due to someone always answering the phone. It is her opinion that when homes have been robbed, the burglars would make a phone call to determine whether or not anyone was home. She says when they answer a residential call, they never tell the caller the people "are gone for the day." However, they do take messages or any instructions that may be necessary. The subscriber is informed of their calls upon their return home. In many cases, she says the caller does not like to leave their name, which isn't necessary, but they should leave their phone number so that the call may be returned. The service could also be additional protection for anyone living alone.

The answering service has already applied for a license for a "Pageboy System", but says they feel they must determine the need before purchasing the equipment. The system, governed by the Federal Communications Center, includes an FM Radio Pager which is about the size of a pencil in length and only one inch wide. The individual carries it with him and when the toner sounds, he calls the answering service to receive the message.

"The paging system may operate within a 30 mile radius", she explained, "and we feel it would especially be important to the doctors."

Mrs. Lookabill added that it will depend on the response of the local people as to whether or not they will go to 24-hour service.

Another helpful service they provide, she says, is the "White Glove Service".

"This is most helpful to small businesses who do not have a secretary. Our girls type

Miss Mary Lapish delivers typed material to one of their customers, L, which is part of the "White Glove" service offered.

Most of the work offered by the "White Glove" service is done in the office of the Answering Service, however, there are times when one of the girls may work elsewhere.

A most accurate record is kept of all messages received, including, date, time, and person or number called. And when the message is given to the subscriber, the same information is also recorded.

Back From Long Dead!

Blythe Bros. Acquires L. A. Reynolds Co.

Tree And Sod Farm Planned In Davie

Davie County has an interest in the sale of the L.A. Reynolds Company of Winston-Salem to the Blythe Brothers, a Charlotte Construction Company.

Blythe bought 51 percent of the stock and Reynolds 49 percent from four brothers who started the business in 1945 — Galloway, Frank, Dan and Herbert Reynolds.

The sons of L.A. Reynolds, they expanded a nursery business he had operated in Lewisville into a farm and garden store and then into the paving of residential driveways. In the last few years the L.A. Reynolds Co., named for their father when they incorporated in 1947, has become a major asphalt paving contractor bidding on huge highway projects. Under the merger, it will expand in this field. Another area in which it hopes to grow is its utilities division, which is involved in water and sewage projects.

The company also will develop a tree and sod farm in Davie County, "so that we will be growing and replacing more trees than we destroy in our site preparation work for various customers," Jon Reynolds said.

Although there will be no personnel changes, there will be changes in officers and directors. F.J. (Jack) Blythe Jr., chairman of the board of Blythe Bros., will become chairman of the board of L.A. Reynolds, succeeding Herbert Reynolds.

Herbert Reynolds will become senior vice president. He was president and chief executive officer during the company's period of greatest growth. In addition to Jon Reynolds, president and chief executive officer, other officers will be:

Raymond C. Pfaff, secretary;

Donald A. Stewart, treasurer; Jean P. Berry, Philip R. Ball, Leonard C. Tilson, Paul J. Beauchamp, Albert R. Kirkman, Richard M. Reynolds, A. Ray Atkins, W.S. Kiger Jr., M.W. Beauchamp and Nelson B. Kirby Jr., all vice presidents.

Galloway and Dan Reynolds will move out of the L.A. Reynolds offices, back across West First Street to a smaller building where the company formerly had its offices. They will maintain their partnership interests in Rey-Nol Inc., a land development company in the Boone area.

Herbert and Frank will still be involved with the Seven Devils resort project in Watauga County, in which they are major stockholders.

Included in the purchase was Asphalt Associates Inc. This company was started in 1971 by L.A. Reynolds and Barnhill Contracting Co. of Tarboro and had sales in 1972 of more than $1 million. Most of its work is in the Piedmont Triad area. It will be dissolved into L.A. Reynolds.

Jon Reynolds, 31, the son of Herbert Reynolds, is one of two members of the third generation of the Reynolds clan to have gone into the business.

The other is Frank's son, Richard, who becomes a vice president under the new ownership.

A Forsyth native, Jon is a graduate of Southwest High School and of Duke University, where he received a bachelor of arts degree in business administration. He joined the company after spending a year and a half in the Marines. He married Elizabeth McComb of Hickory and they have one son. They live in Shallowford Lakes in Lewisville.

In addition to his interest in L.A. Reynolds, Jon is chairman and secretary of Kamar Corp., a wood products firm with headquarters here, and is secretary of Dalton-Reynolds, a construction company that developed the Shallowford Lakes and Shallowford Forest residential areas in Lewisville. Dalton-Reynolds recently became a partner with Salem Ventures in the construction of the Stonebridge condominium complex on Country Club Road.

Blythe Bros. began business in Charlotte on Jan. 4, 1921. It was started by Jack and Blythe, both of whom are now dead.

Student Enrolled At Science Institute

Miss Luellen Hubbard, daughter of Mrs. Lucy Greene Hubbard of 112-A Westgate Circle, Winston-Salem, and granddaughter of Mrs. Garland V. Greene, formerly of Mocksville, now living in Winston-Salem, also is among some 30 students from seven states enrolled in a six-week summer science institute at Bucknell University at Lewisburg, Pa. The program is being conducted under auspices of the National Science Foundation. It began June 25.

The institute is a secondary science program for high-ability high school students and allows them to do advanced study in chemistry and biology. Luellen is attending on a scholarship. At Reynolds, she is a member of the National Honor Society. In the 1972-73 school year, she also was a junior marshal, a member in the Anchor Club and majorette.

All of the students have completed high school courses in chemistry and biology, will be seniors in school next year and intend to go to college. The program is designed to enable the students to develop an understanding of biology and chemistry and of the scientific careers that are open to them.

The daily program includes one 90-minute period of chemistry and one of biology each morning, and the afternoon are used for laboratory work and field trips. There will also be time for relaxation, sports, discussion groups, and other activities developed by the group.

gorillas in Africa.

Mrs. Brindamour has had more success than many other orang researchers. In a year of field work in Borneo, she has observed wild orangutans more than 900 hours.

She and her photographer husband live in a hut on the edge of a rain forest and must cut trails through dense undergrowth with machetes to reach the animals.

Orang in Gras

While hacking through a swamp vine, Mrs. Brindamour cut her knee. Forced to return to her man camp by way of an overgrown rice field, she made a significant observation:

"There in the long grass 150 meters from the forest was an adult orangutan warily proceeding from one forest to the one on the other side of the field," she reported.

"It was drizzling rain and to me he looked like some very early primordial man venturing forth for the first time into the African savanna. The reason this observation is so startling is that orangutans are arboreal, and they rarely do come down from the trees."

The orangutan (Pongo pygmaeus) is the only living Asiatic great ape. An adult male may weigh 200 pounds and have an arm spread of 7½ feet but stand less than 5 feet tall. It swings easily through the treetops, but walks clumsily on all fours because of its long arms.

Unlike the black African apes, orangs have reddish-brown hair. Their flexible lips are remarkably expressive. Adult males have bulging cheek flaps and below them large inflatable air sacs capable of monumental belches that may serve as warning signals.

Lives Lazy Life

Hardly a go-getter, an orang builds a leafy nest in a tree, sleeps late, and spends most of the day eating unripe fruit. Unlike chimps, orangutans have not been observed eating meat or using tools in the wild.

In captivity, however, the intelligent orangutans are quick to learn tricks, and the escape artist Fu Manchu learned how to trip a spring-loaded lock in the Omaha zoo.

Pet orangs are retrained for life in the jungle at an official Orangutan Rehabilitation Center on Borneo. One problem case was Winnie, who had developed a taste for cigarettes and beer and had to kick the habits before returning to the forest.

Racing Resumes At Bowman Gray This Saturday

NASCAR stock car racing will resume Saturday night at Bowman Gray Stadium, after a two-week vacation, with a double feature for Modified cars headlining a six-event "Ladies' Night" program.

Track Manager Joe Hawkins said that an "inverted" start will be used in the second of two 25-lap Modified features, similar to the procedure followed in a June 23 twin bill. However, there will be one variation, a move by the promoter to discourage a "sandbagging" tactic that was successful at the June 23 event.

BY JIM DEAN

A FUTURE FOR MATTAMUSKEET'S GEESE?

Lake Mattamuskeet used to be one of the best Canada goose hunting spots in the world, but the lake has gone from boom to bust in the past decade. Waterfowl hunters are keenly aware of this sad situation, but not everyone knows why the goose population at Mattamuskeet has declined so sharply.

Mattamuskeet's goose problem is the subject of a rather extensive article in the July issue of WILDLIFE IN NORTH CAROLINA. The article has been written by North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission Waterfowl Biologist Jack Donnelley, U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife Biologist Otto Florschutz and Mattamuskeet Refuge Manager John Davis.

These men have studied Mattamuskeet's problems for a long time, and they tell what has happened, why and also what might be done to help. In short, the article is "must" reading for every waterfowl enthusiast.

Space is not available to outline all the information in the article, but the findings can be highlighted.

Following the establishment of Mattamuskeet as a wildlife refuge in 1934, the goose population steadily increased. From 1940 to 1948, the wintering population fluctuated between 30,000 to 50,000 geese. Then, in 1949, the goose population began to increase again until, by 1959 the lake's wintering population peaked at a whopping 144,400 geese.

Soon, hunting became a major industry for Hyde County, and the lake became known as the goose hunting capital of the world. Unfortunately, since 1959, the goose population has declined sharply until there is now only a remnant flock. Last winter, only about 7,000 geese wintered at the lake.

Surprisingly, the total population of Canada geese in the Atlantic Flyway has increased at the same time that Mattamuskeet's population has declined. Since 1951, the Atlantic Flyway's population has increased from some 495,000 birds to roughly 1,000,000 in 1972. In 1972, Maryland alone had 462,000 birds, or nearly as many as the entire flyway in 1951.

Therefore, while wintering flocks south of Virginia have fallen, they have increased greatly in the Delmarva area (Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey and Virginia). They have also increased in Pennsylvania, New York and Massachusetts.

There are several reasons for this. Perhaps the most important is that farming practices have changed both in the northeast and in the south. In the Delmarva area, corn is being planted in abundance where once vegetable farming was the major crop. Meanwhile, North Carolina's corn and soybean production declined while vegetable farming increased. Also, new grain harvesting techniques have left barren fields in the winter.

From a goose's point of view, stopping up north makes sense. Why fly farther for less food?

The biologists also point out that excessive hunting pressure at Lake Mattamuskeet contributed to the decline. Hunter harvest was high during the 1960's, and adding to this pressure was an extension by law, not Commission or Federal regulation -- of the hunting hours from sunrise to sunset.

Previously, hunting stopped at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. During the mid-60's the season was extended by Federal authorities, and the bag limit raised from two to three geese.

To counter this, large flocks of geese flew to the fields to feed only at night. Others left to feed in areas where pressure was not so great. Most, however, began to stop farther north for the winter where food was plentiful and hunting pressure was less severe.

Hunters have also learned to encourage farmers to use agriculture practices to encourage geese to stop in the Delmarva area, and the populations there are increasing, and will no doubt continue to do so.

The conclusion reached by Donnelly, Florschutz and Davis is that the previous bonanza in goose hunting at Lake Mattamuskeet, Hyde County and the entire south is gone forever, largely because of changing farming practices.

But, they express hope that with the proper management, the population can be built again to higher levels than now exist. Their recommendations include reduction of hunter harvest, and some biologists suggest even closing the lake to hunting for a few years. They also recommend the leasing or acquisition of several thousand acres of private farmland adjacent to the refuge where corn and other crops could be planted to feed geese. A cooperative farm program to increase the food for geese is also suggested, along with the development of "decey" flocks to attract geese.

The biologists make no guarantees, even if all these things are done, but they say quite candidly that if these things are not done, there will be no hope at all for the future of the Canada goose at Mattamuskeet.

Gerald Compton of Martinsville, Va., intentionally finished near the back of the field in the opening 25-lapper of the June twin bill. When the order of the first 16 finishers was reversed for the start of the second race, he got an advantageous starting position which helped him to victory.

"I think we have figured a way to stop that," said Hawkins, who added that he "didn't blame Compton. The name of the game is to win, and he outsmarted us."

Hawkins' next move: The number of finishers to be "inverted" in Saturday night's second race won't be known until the winner of the first race draws a number. Even numbers from 8 to 16 will be placed in a hat, and the number drawn will be the number of front finishers inverted for the start of the second race.

The starting order for the first race will be decided by qualifying trials, as previously. The trials are slated from 7:30 p.m.

A field of 20 to 25 Modified cars is expected, with the first race scheduled to start at 8:30 p.m. on the municipal stadium's quarter-mile asphalt track.

Also on the agenda are two 10-lap heats and a 20-lap feature for the Limited Sportsman Division, and a 15-lap Hobby race.

Seven drivers will get two chances to become the season's first multiple winner in the featured Modified Division.

June 23 victories by Compton and Paul Radford of Ferrum, Va., made them the sixth and seventh different winners this season at the stadium, where no Modified driver has been able to win twice.

The other winners have been

Ralph Brinkley of Lexington;

Melvin Swisher of Kernersville;

Lloyd Ashby of Martinsville; and Billy Hensley of Ridgeway, Va.

Old pro Perk Brown of Eden, winnings driver in the track's history with 43 career victories, winner Charles St. John of Hamptonville. Clive Scott of Winston-Salem will be shooting for his fourth 1973 victory in the Hobby Division.

Reduce Energy Consumption... Increase Comfort

Tips for reducing energy consumption and increasing comfort in household cooling, prepared for use by North Carolina Extension Agents.

Saving Energy Through Management of Appliances. Etc., In the Home

1. Set the thermostat at a comfortable level (usually 74 degrees) and leave it at that setting. During extremely hot periods raise to 80 degrees.

2. Keep draperies closed during the day to cut down on heat penetration from the sun's rays.

3. Turn off room air conditioner and turn up central system when you will be away for prolonged periods of time.

4. Be sure air inlets (exterior and interior) are free from obstruction.

5. Be sure drain for condensation is open in central system. Pour a pitcher of water to check run-off, since insects and dust sometimes block drains.

6. Split System Control Conditioner. Make sure air intake and discharge of outside compressor unit are both open and free of leaves and other debris.

7. Keep clean filters in window air conditioner by replacing or washing.

8. Clean evaporation and condenser coils.

9. Oil fan motors with electric motor oil.

10. Check to see that rodents and bugs have not gotten into unit to clog operation.

11. Avoid excessive window and door opening.

12. Keep windows closed and tightened by installing weather stripping where needed.

13. Draperies and shades help some, but that is after the heat gets into the house.

14. Consider using awnings over windows and doors.

15. Mopping, laundering, dishwashing, and bathing add moisture to the air. If done in the cooler part of the day, the air conditioner will be less burdened.

16. Operate kitchen fan when cooking to take out hot air and moisture.

17. When using fans or open window ventilation for cooling, it is usually better to keep windows and doors closed the early part of the day to retain the overnight cooling. After the heat has broken through, then open windows and ventilate.

18. Purchase cooling units that are sized for the job. Air conditioners should be sized to operate continuously on the hottest days. In addition to reducing the temperature, air conditioners also reduce the relative humidity. This is a major factor in comfort cooling. Units that reduce the temperature quickly will cut off, yet humidity may be high.

19. Heavy cooking, oven cleaning, ironing and other big heat-producing activities should be done during the cool part of the day to reduce cooling load.

20. Continuous fan operation at low speed may be needed on air conditioners to keep air uniform in temperature--to eliminate cold or hot pockets.

21. Shut off rooms that do not need to be cooled when individual units are used.

22. Wash full load each time clothes washer is used, or adjust water level for small load. This conserves hot water.

23. Replace washers in leaking faucets. Hot water faucet leaking one drop a second wastes 2,500 gallons a year.

24. Long runs of hot water pipe waste water. Install water heater near the point of use.

25. Don't install water heater in a totally unused area.

26. Plan major use of water for such tasks as wall cleaning when ground is warm. This means the temperature of the water to be heated will be warmer.

27. Take showers rather than tub baths. Less hot water will be used.

28. Bend float rod downwards so that the smallest amount of water necessary to flush commode is used.

30. Reduce water heater thermostat to 135 degrees except that for a dishwasher, which should be set at 150 to 160 degrees.

31. Reduce water temperature for washing less soiled clothes.

32. Dry full loads of clothes as dryers operate on a time control switch. Not only may clothes get too dry if the load is small, but there will also be a waste of electrical energy.

33. Keep lights turned on only for areas needed. Use concentration of light on work and less intensity for general lighting.

34. Turn off TV sets and radios when not being used.

Reduce Heating Load for Air Conditioners by Direct Sunlight Control

1. Louvers or bar screens can reduce direct solar heat by 50 percent or more for east and west windows for most of the day and can reduce direct solar heat by 90 percent for south windows.

2. Roof overhangs keep out summer sun but let in winter sun.

3. Roof overhangs over south walls are usually easy to incorporate into house plans. In the 35 degree latitude area (North Carolina) a 2.4-foot-wide overhang will have a shadow height of 4 feet. This would prevent direct sunrays at noon from striking the wall or window the distance from the "Summer Constellations" At Morehead

"Summer Constellations," opened at the Morehead Planetarium on the University of North Carolina campus at 11:00 a.m., 3 and 8:00 p.m. July 3 and will run at the same times daily through July 23. Matinees will be added on week-ends.

In this production a triangle of bright stars points down the Milky Way to many wondrous sights of the season.

The Planetarium also offers free scientific and art exhibits before and after each show.

Admission to "Summer Constellations" is 75 cents for children through age 11 or overhang down at the bottom of a 4-foot-long window.

4. South windows are easier to protect from summer sun than east or west windows.

5. Venetian blinds reduce direct solar heat by 25 to 50 percent, depending on the color and angle of the slats.

6. Light-colored composition shingles absorb about half as much direct solar heat as black or dark shingles.

7. Light-colored metal or canvas window awnings reduce direct solar heat by 70 percent. Awnings with open sides are best. All awnings must be wider than windows to keep out sun longer during the day.

8. Do not have black top or concrete adjacent to the house. These reflect and re-radiate solar heat into the house.

9. Grass and shrubbery adjacent to a house absorb heat.

10. East and west windows are more difficult to shade than south windows. For east and west windows in most cases, awnings, louvered bar screens, trees and large shrubs can be effective.

11. Houses with high-pitched roofs are cooler than low-pitched or flat roofs. Roof slopes facing north and south are cooler than those facing east and west. If possible when building, orient your house with the ridge running east and west.

12. Provide attic ventilation at the eaves and at the peak of the

A Time to Make Amends

Now that the Vietnam situation is patched up, it is perhaps time to reflect on these most distracting years. Probably no occurrence in this century has caused so much divisiveness among Americans.

The results of the monthly survey on employment and unemployment provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the Nation. For example, total employment in May held steady at its all-time high of 84 million--2.5 million more than 12 months earlier. And the out-of-work rate stayed at 5 percent, the rate held since late last fall.

Houses in this area taking part in the survey are part of the 50,000 nationwide scientifically selected to represent a cross section of all households. All information about individuals and families provided to the Census Bureau is confidential by law and can be published only as statistical totals.

Interviewers who will visit households here are: Mrs. Helen T. Miller, 728 N. Franklin Road, Mr. Airy, N. C. 27030. But Section 2 of Article VI © National Federation of Independent Business.

For some reason, over which historians are still arguing, there was a boobytrap written into the Constitution. The best explanation for its existence is probably that it was due to a compromise between those who stood at that time for state rights and those who advocate Federal control.

However, the Bricker Amendment was defeated largely by the efforts of the liberal establishment. Yet defeat of this amendment made Vietnam possible, which the liberal establishment used to divide the nation. Perhaps it is high time that "liberals" re-think their position. There is no law against liberals being consistent.

ALWAYS BE A SMART SUN-WORSHIPPER

NEW YORK (ED) — When it comes to summer, teenagers have the best time of all, because they have the most time to spend at the beach and by the pool. And, because you can spend more time outside, you need to know all about the best way to get that great tan... and to keep it all summer!

Don't run outside and expect to get a tan in one day... you'll end up with a burn! Be a smart sun-worshipper... after a long winter's absence, you need to build up that tan gradually.

can discontinue precautions against the sun. Keep buttering up your skin with a product like Coppertone Tanning Butter with lots of cocoa butter and coconut oil. Remember to reapply your tanning butter when you get home, too, to help keep your skin soft, tanned and beautiful.

You don't go near the water? The hot sun can still burn you if you're not careful, so wear a tanning product whenever your skin's exposed.

Here's how: Start slowly, spending a few minutes each day in the sun, and gradually increasing your time as your skin becomes "sun-conditioned." Don't forget your favorite suntan product. When you head for the water or that tennis match, you'll have a head start on a tan.

Your tanning program is well on its way, so don't stop now. Just because you have a great tan doesn't mean you

The Child's Needs

"The child has needs just as an adult..."

Only the child is more dependent.

"The child has feelings just as an adult..."

Only the child needs to learn how to express them.

"The child faces fears just as the adult..."

Only the child needs more help to master them.

"The child has joys just as the adult..."

Only he needs encouragement to develop them."

These challenging lines are from a new poster prepared for the National Institute of Mental Health's program called "One To Grow On."

It's a new program, but an important one. It is another manifestation of the significance being attached to child mental health and the widening and deepening of the attack on mental illness in children through preventive programs that actively promote mental health and, in turn, preclude the growth and development of mental illness.

The "One To Grow On" program is primarily a means to help teachers develop mental health activities for their classrooms.

In line with this, "One To Grow On" is being designed for inservice and other teacher training institutions.

Although still in the developmental stage, instructional texts, films, and other materials are being planned and prepared to meet need which teachers have expressed.

In the new poster, the Institute asks for ideas to aid in developing the "One To Grow On" program:

"Won't you send your ideas about developing healthy children to NIMH, Room 15-99, Rockville, Maryland 20852?"

America's First What???

Leslie R. Henry, curator of Transportation Collections at the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Michigan, seems unable to convince this young lady she is actually looking at America's first sports car.

America's first production car was a sports car. This may come as no surprise to those thousands of car owners who demand the ultimate in power, maneuverability and design associated with today's sports models, but that first sports car had a top speed of 20 mph, was steered with a tiller instead of a steering wheel and looked more like a wagon than a motor vehicle.

In 1896, when others were still building experimental cars, Charles E. and Frank Duryea, were already manufacturing, advertising and selling the practical and rather sophisticated vehicle that bore their name. That year 13 identical Duryeas were made, making the Duryea Motor Wagon Company the country's first automobile manufacturer. Recently the last survivor of that historic production run and the third produced was acquired by the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Michigan for its automobile collection.

Standing among the 200 other antique, classic and historic automobiles in the collection it seems to fit no one's idea of a sports car, but its engineering innovations and its record on the race track fully qualify it for that classification. The Duryea was the first American car to have an electric ignition system, a water pump and pneumatic tires. Its 2-cylinder, 138 cubic inch displacement engine developed 6 horsepower. It had a three speed, belt driven transmission. The Duryea prototype was

Old Cook House Recalls History

Johannas Nicholaous Gluck was born in Germany and died and was buried in a family burying ground in the Jerusalem area. Gates on the grave stone are: Born September 11, 1748; Died October 22, 1832.

Professor J.D. Hodges, a great grandson of this man, wrote that Gluck (that became Click over here) was born in Saxony, came to Maryland in 1867 where he married Rebecca Harmon, and then on into the Forks of the Yadkin. On her grave stone is the date: Died October 1834, aged 81 years and 49 days.

The Clicks attended Heidelberg Lutheran Church located on Dutchman's Creek, but their original lands and home place were in and around the community of Jerusalem.

The house which Nicholas Click built stood a short distance from the early Salem-to-Salisbury Road, later to be known as the Shallow Ford Road, and still later was called the Mock's Old Field - Salisbury Road. It was a quarter of mile north of the Jerusalem Baptist Church. The family graveyard was located a quarter mile northwest of the dwelling house.

This was where Nicholas Click and wife, Rebecca, reared five sons and three daughters. Their son, Michael, and his family were the next occupants of the house. Michael married Sarah Butler and they had sons William Elisha, John Nicholas, Michael, and several daughters.

John Nicholas Click, son of Michael and Sarah Butler Click, were the third generation to live at the original homeplace. He married first, Rebecca Cheshire, and they had one son, John William. After the early death of Rebecca, John Nicholas Click married Amelia Eaton, daughter of Joseph Eaton.

Eventually only John Nicholas and his son, William or "Bill" were left alone in the ancient house. After the death of his father, Bill tore the old house down and built another on the same site. Only the cook house and smoke house of the original buildings were left standing and still stand today.

When Bill Click died in 1933, a daughter of his half-sister, Susan Click Langston, married and settled down on her great-grandfather's home site. She married Willard Foster. They moved "Uncle Bill's" house and built a modern brick one on the same original site.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

In the wake of the record $8 billion in farm exports during fiscal 1972, trade observers are speculating about the rate at which our exports will expand over the next several years.

USDA Economic Research Service Administrator Quentin M. West explored this possibility in a paper presented recently at the annual meeting of the American Agricultural Economics Association.

Basing his assessment on Economic Research Service trade projections, Dr. West said a $10 billion export level before 1980 is a reasonable goal. But he emphasized that certain conditions must be favorable.

Dr. West also hinted that even higher exports levels might be reached through negotiations to reduce the non-tariff barriers to free world trade.

Tariffs, he pointed out, are no longer the major obstacles to free trade. Six rounds of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade successfully lowered customs duties.

In recent years, however, other trade and domestic policies have emerged as the main inhibitors to free world trade. These non-tariff barriers include domestic support programs, export subsidies, domestic consumption restrictions, and preferential trade agreements.

Domestic support programs have been instituted in the U.S., Western Europe and Japan to raise farm income by supporting commodity prices. The programs have led to surplus production, which in turn has spurred greater use of trade policies and subsidies to protect these programs. The net result has been to discourage trade based upon economic comparative advantage.

Some countries use export subsidies to remove surpluses that develop when domestic prices are supported above their equilibrium levels. In some cases, the subsidies have been more costly than successful in expanding exports.

Restrictions on domestic consumption are a commonly used non-tariff barrier in most European countries. In curbing consumer demand through high prices, these measures also restrain imports.

Preference trade agreements among trading blocs pose a serious threat to free trade by granting easy access to each other's markets — thus discriminating against trade with other nations.

Three sets of trade conditions and their possible effects on U.S. farm exports are being examined: 1) export conditions that might result in zero growth, 2) those that would yield moderate growth, and 3) those that would significantly accelerate farm exports.

Zero growth assumes that:

- The enlarged European Community becomes virtually self-sufficient in grain production.

- Anticipated grain markets in the USSR and Eastern Europe fail to materialize, and the area becomes a net exporter of grains.

- Livestock economies in the developing countries experience little growth.

- The "green revolution" in developing countries accelerates.

- Our P.L. 480 commitments hold at relatively low levels.

If all these assumptions were valid, U.S. farm exports would expand little, if any, above the current $8 billion level.

Moderate growth would result from modification of some or all of the assumptions linked to the zero growth conditions. For example, the European Community might remain a major grain importer. And the USSR might continue to import U.S. grains or possibly supplements to improve feeding efficiency.

Too, developing nations will probably make a concerted effort to build up their livestock industries.

Under these circumstances — even with no basic changes in non-tariff barriers — U.S. farm exports could easily top $9 billion. If all factors were favorable, the $10 billion mark could be topped before 1980.

The third set of conditions assumes negotiations succeed in lowering non-tariff barriers. The result would be rapid expansion of world trade as a totally new set of trade conditions emerges.

Exports of commodities in which the U.S. holds a competitive advantage would rise significantly. The gains, however, would be partially offset by higher imports of products in which the U.S. lacks a competitive edge.

Notices of farm acreage and poundage quotas for flue-cured tobacco have been mailed to farm operators, John F. Orrell, Chairman of the County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASCS) Committee, has announced.

The notices are sent in advance of the July 17 marketing quota referendum so that farmers will know how the vote decision will affect their individual operation. Revised notices adjusted to reflect undermarketings or overmarketings of 1973 quota will be sent to farm operators after 1973 crop marketings are completed.

The acreage-poundage quota program for flue-cured tobacco has been in effect since 1965. The referendum will decide whether the program is to continue for the 1974 through 1976 crops.

This program is open to all eligible participants, without regard to their race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

All producers 18 years of age or older are eligible to vote if they share in the 1973 flue-cured tobacco crop or its proceeds. Where no tobacco is produced in 1973 on a tobacco-allotment farm, only the owner and operator are eligible to vote.

Under the program, growers may carry undermarketings from a short crop over to the next year. They also may market up to 10 percent over the farm's poundage quota, penalty-free, by deducting the difference from the next year's crop. Price support on up to 110 percent of a farm's quota is available if a grower does not exceed his acreage allotment.

"If two-thirds or more of the growers voting approve tobacco quotas for the next three years," Orrell said, "the program will continue with acreage allotments, price supports, and penalties on excess tobacco marketed above 110 percent of farm quota.

"If more than one-third of the voters disapprove quotas, there will be no marketing quota to limit production and no price support for the 1974 crop. In that event, a similar referendum will be held next year."

The June 28 4-H meeting was called to order by Kenny Reavis. We had family night with sandwiches, chips and cookies. Games were played by the group, which everyone enjoyed.

The fishing demonstration was rained out so it was carried over till next meeting at Bill Smoot Pond.

The meeting was adjourned by the president.

I've been on the Board," Mrs. Hoyle said. "They put the ad in the paper and really made an issue of it."

According to Mary Frances McDaniel, state board representative, the county commissioners have the authority to modify the pay of the department. The state board usually goes along with the commissioners unless there is a discrepancy between Social Services and other county health agencies. "As long as one agency is equitable with another," Mrs. McDaniel said, "the state board will usually not step in." She added that "I think they have a good staff there and they have done some good work."

John Bailey, chairman of the commissioners, agreed with Barber that the job cuts were not done in retaliation but were a matter of economics. "I think they have too many employees out there and we're just cutting back on help."

According to Jerry Swicegood, another commissioner, "the basket is getting bigger than the funnel to feed it."

"When I went on the board in 1967, there were 7 employees. These seven handled the Social Service budget on $119,802. This year there were 17 employees and the budget request was for $310,000." "At the same time, the clients were less in number than they were in 1967 which creates a lot of doubt in the taxpayers mind."

Swicegood said he had more calls on this matter than any other issue since he has been on the board. "It was almost unanimous for backing the County Commissioners in giving the Social Service workers 5 percent and no more."

"This (the job cuts) is not a vindictive move on the part of the commissioners," Swicegood said. "We cut according to Mrs. McDaniel's suggestions that if there be cuts, these would be it."

The public was "astounded" to discover that the agency had 17 employees and a $300,000 budget, according to Swicegood. "They almost dictated that something be done."

"I don't think there is anybody out here that is not resolved to live with the commissioners' decision," said Royer, the Social Service Director. "Whether Davie County knows it or not, they have a darn good staff here and I think they treated them poorly."

"The commissioners have spoken and they (the social service staff) will live with it just as I'll live with it — which is really academic, isn't it?" Royer concluded.

Applications Being Taken For Supplemental Social Security

The Salisbury social security office is now taking applications for supplemental security income payments, a Federal program scheduled to start in 1974 that will establish an income floor for people in financial need who are 65 or over, or blind, or disabled, according to Robert C. Thomas, social security district manager.

But people already getting State old age assistance, or State aid because they are blind or disabled, don't have to apply, he said. They'll be getting more information later this year about how the program will help them.

The first monthly payments under the Federal program will be made in January 1974, Thomas said. Until then, State and local public assistance offices will continue to make

Soil Conservation Announces New Book

A new book prepared to assist North Carolina developers, planners, engineers, architects, government officials and others in reducing water pollution through sedimentation has been prepared by the USDA-Soil Conservation Service and is now being distributed, it was announced today by State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks of Raleigh, who heads the federal conservation agency in North Carolina.

The 232-page book, "Guide For Sediment Control On Construction Sites In North Carolina," is profusely illustrated with photos and drawings showing engineering structures and practices that will help control water pollution. "Although it is prepared with sound engineering information on these practices, the guide is written in easy-to-understand layman's language," Mr. Hicks explained.

While not designed for distribution to the general public, the guide will be available without charge in every county of North Carolina to developers, landscapers, local government officials, technical specialists, and others concerned with sediment control on construction sites. Copies will be available in every Soil Conservation Service office, and through the local soil and water conservation district offices--which serve every North Carolina county.

Special North Carolina information, such as rainfall averages, is provided. Grasses and other plants suitable for the state are listed, with information on suitability for Coastal Plain, Piedmont, or Mountain area planting.

"We know this book will be valuable to the people for whom it was prepared," Mr. Hicks commented, "but we continue to back this up with the expertise of our Soil Conservation Service professionals in North Carolina--which is always available."

Growing Trees Means Extra Income

Landowners who allow their land to remain idle instead of growing trees are missing a sure bet for extra income, according to the Southern Forest Institute, Atlanta, Ga.

"With land values and taxes rising steadily throughout the South, it's more important than ever for private landowners to realize the income-producing potential of their land," says Benton H. Box, Executive Vice President of the Atlanta-based forestry institute. "And for a long-range investment, often requiring only minimum care and attention, growing timber on currently non-productive or under-productive forest land still makes good business sense."

According to the Institute, there are nearly 193 million acres of forest land in the twelve Southern states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma.

"The 17 million acres of forests in the South owned by state and federal governments are generally well-managed. So are 35 million acres of commercial forests owned by the pulp and paper, lumber, plywood and other forest-based industries. But, unfortunately, most of the 141 million acres owned by private non-industrial landowners in the South is either poorly managed, or not managed at all," Box explained. "These are the landowners who would gain the most, both financially and otherwise, by improving or beginning management of their woodlands."

Who are these private landowners? "They're not just farmers," Box says. "They're also doctors, lawyers, government retirees, businessmen, professional people, and others who often live in our fast-growing urban areas but own land in the country."

"These are the days of the absentee landowner; the city dweller who sees his land only two or three times a year, if that payments in the usual way.

People not getting public assistance now who think they may be eligible for the new Federal payments should call or write social security to find out if they should apply. Federal supplemental security income payments will be made by the Social Security Administration, but the program will be financed by Federal general revenues—not by social security contributions from workers and employers. It's not the same as social security.

The aim of the new program is to provide supplemental payments in cases of need so that people 65 or over, or blind, or disabled will have a basic cash income of at least $130 a month for one person and $195 a month for a couple. This doesn't mean that every eligible person or couple will be getting that much from the Federal Government every month, the amount of the Federal payment any person gets will depend on how much either income he has. States may add to the basic Federal payment, according to Thomas.

Eligibility for Federal payments will depend not only on the amount of income people have but on the value of their assets. If you're single—or married but not living with your husband or wife—you can own things worth up to $1,500 and still get Federal payments. A couple can own things worth up to $2,250 and get payments. Not everything you own has to be counted toward your total assets, however.

A home of reasonable value will not be counted as an asset, Thomas said. In addition, the Federal Government will not put liens on the homes of people getting Federal payments. Personal effects and household goods won't count in most cases. Insurance policies or a car may not affect eligibility either, but it will depend on their value.

Certain income also will be disregarded in deciding on an application for supplemental security income. The first $20 a month of income generally won't affect the Federal payment at all, Thomas said. In addition, people who are working part time should know that the first $65 a month of earnings won't be included in counting their income and only half of the rest of their additional earnings will be counted, he said.

Apart from earnings, other income above the first $20 a month generally will reduce the Federal payment. This includes social security checks, veterans payments, workers' compensation, pensions, annuities, and gifts, Thomas said. And if you live in someone's household, your basic Federal payment will be reduced by one-third before other income that may affect your payment is deducted.

People who need more information to decide whether they might be eligible for the which should be removed from timber stands to allow more sunlight and growing space for prime young timber.

Selling mature pine trees often brings well over $60 per thousand board feet from lumber and plywood mills. Intermediate pulpwood thinnings can produce additional income when sold to one of the South's 113 pulp and paper mills. Good-quality, small and medium-sized trees should be left to grow, if possible. The larger the tree get in trunk diameter, the more income they will produce for the landowner in the long run.

It may take as long as 15 years to develop a tract of forest land into a well-managed, productive condition. Assuming it initially possesses some mature trees, the land should produce an average of $10 per acre income during this time through periodic sawlog and/or pulpwood sales. Later, as the trees continue growing in size, volume and value, average annual gross revenue per acre may rise to $20-$25.

Over 30 years, for example, conservative estimates put the gross income per acre per year at about $12-$15 for well-managed Southern forest land considered average in productivity. During this time, even a small forest tract—say 100 acres—will have produced a gross income averaging between $36,000 and $45,000. All this time, over-and-above income earned from selling timber, the property itself mounts steadily in value.

"Assuming you already own land, the cost of providing basic management for most Southern forest land normally averages around $2 per acre per year," Box said. "If the land must be cleared, the cost can run up to $40 per acre. And it is possible that some of the acreage will need planting at $15 to $20 per acre. But these costs are not recurring expenses; they are basically one-time costs to get into the tree-growing business."

Many forest products companies have professional foresters available to help private landowners manage their land. Some companies provide seedlings free, or on a matching basis, to help landowners get their forests planted. Help is also available from many state Forestry Commissions and Extension Foresters. Still another major source of management assistance is professional, consulting foresters who work directly for the landowner. Either way, it is best for the landowner to seek the help and advice of a professional forester in managing his forest holdings.

Mature tree crops, both hardwood and pine, which many landowners already have on their land, can be harvested and sold to help reduce the cost of starting or improving a forest management program. These include over-mature trees which are beginning to die, and defective, diseased or culled trees

"That," explained the forestry official, "is when growing trees really pays off!"

Federal payments should call social security at 633-6470 or write to the office at 105 Corriner Avenue, Salisbury, NC 28144, he said. Or a friend or relative can make the call if the person in need isn't able to.

Even though payments cannot start until January 1974, we're starting to take applications now so we can process them ahead of time and avoid delays that might occur if there's a rush of applications right at the end of the year, Thomas said.

Family Physicians' Academy Schedules Community Programs

The North Carolina Academy of Family Physicians has arranged a program scheduled for October 6, 1973, in which over twenty-five North Carolina communities will have the opportunity to meet personally many medical students interns and residents who may eventually wish to practice medicine in North Carolina.

The concept of this program was derived from a similar plan in Alabama in which the Academy of Family Practice has had considerable success. The Student Party will be held at the Convention Center in Winston-Salem and will begin in the later afternoon with a social hour for the participants and their wives followed by a dinner to be catered there. A program of slides representative of the various areas of North Carolina will follow; and then the young doctors from North Carolina's medical schools, training hospitals and military bases will visit freely with representatives from various communities. Each Community will have a booth or table with displays and literature. Both the physician and the community will have direct contact where their common needs may be discussed.

The North Carolina Academy of Family Physicians believes this may help to encourage distribution of doctors into areas of need as well as being an encouraging factor in making more young physicians take an interest in primary health care as a family physician.

Bits Of Life

Too Cheap For Sally

By ROSEC BROWN FISHER

Grandpa Brown and I often stopped at Aunt Sally's place. She lived just off a curvy mountain road at the foot of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Aunt Sally leaned back in a somewhat shaky chair and rocked to and fro. Grandpa listened intently as she told tales from out of the past. Good company for Grandpa.

Aunt Sally was about 70, having spent all her days in the rolling hills which buffered the more majestic mountains farther west.

Having lost her husband, she lived alone. Her mellowness and kindly attitude revealed a heart much larger than the meager circumstances in which she lived.

Early one morning, while Sally was building a fire in her small kitchen stove, the thing exploded. In a matter of moments, the lapping flames were all over the place. The city fire truck was called, but too late to do Sally any good.

Two days later — Grandpa and I followed a child-size casket as it was taken from the handcart hearse and carried across a neglected cemetery. After the brief cemetery service, the few relatives and friends left one by one.

My curiosity had me again. In a manner I hoped not too forward, I asked the undertaker, "Why did you put Sally in that small casket?"

"What we found of her went in the small casket all right. I didn't mean to be cheap about it, but the county paid for her burial and they have a set amount you know."

"I just wondered," I replied. "Yes, yes . . . I understand." I muttered, but I really did not.

Both Grandpa and I were silent as we wandered back toward the car, moving carefully among the markers on the unkempt cemetery.

Then I heard Grandpa muttering: "Too cheap . . . too cheap . . . Why should he do it? Put Aunt Sally in a casket that small?"

I had no answer for Grandpa . . . Yet, I knew that in that great beyond Aunt Sally would have all the room she wanted . . . like that in the great open spaces around her mountain home.

Catawba Still Has Scholarship Funds

"We still have some scholarship funds available for this fall, but the applications have been coming in rather steadily, and we do not know just how long the remaining funds will last."

That's the latest word from Catawba College's financial aid director, David J. Sessions.

Through a program approved by the 1973 North Carolina General Assembly, state funds are being sent to private colleges and universities in the state in a ratio geared to the number of North Carolina students enrolled. The funds will be added to the current scholarship funds Catawba has available and will enable the College to offer a scholarship program considerably in excess of any in the past.

This program of state aid to North Carolina students enroll in private institutions, where the costs are generally above those at state-supported schools, was created by the N.C. Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, of which Catawba is a charter member.

Efforts by the Association in the General Assembly have resulted in this program for which some $4.6 million has been appropriated.

The General Assembly said it is to the advantage of the taxpayer and the state to utilize the resources of the independent institutions at a figure considerably less than the cost to educate these students in public institutions.

The scholarship funds are being administered on a "need basis" so that the monies can be used as effectively as possible among prospective students, assisting those students whose ability to attend college is restricted only by their financial situations.

Complete information on the scholarship funds can be obtained from Mr. Sessions at Catawba. A visit is recommended and appointments can be arranged by calling 636-5311.

Cooleemee Plans Auction

An auction sale is being planned for Saturday, August 18, in the Recreation Center building in Cooleemee in hopes of raising money for the much needed repairs.

When the mill leased the recreation center to the community, it was in agreement that the property would be kept in good repair. At this time, a good deal of the playground equipment is unsafe for the children, and the recreation building needs painting, new ceilings, new lighting, windows replaced, etc. The living quarters at the center also need repairing.

With this in mind, the various recreation committees are urging the local people to concentrate on re-opening the recreation center building in order to provide our community with the wholesome recreation that is so desperately needed.

If there is enough local interest, the auction sale will hopefully provide some of the monies needed. There are two proposals involved in the planning of this sale.

Small City Residents Should "Get Away From It All" Too!

Why should people in smaller cities invest their money in recreational land?

"For just about the same reason big city people do," according to one of the nation's top sales executives.

"The idea of a recreational or vacation home is to get away from it all," says Bill Gibbs, executive vice president of Russwood, Inc., of Charlotte, N.C., "and it doesn't matter whether you're trying to get away from crowds and traffic congestion or just want a change of scene once in awhile."

Gibbs pointed to the fact that Russwood's current project, Chickasaw Point, on the Georgia-South Carolina border, has attracted buyers from throughout the Carolinas, the smaller towns as well as the big ones.

"Most everybody likes to be on the water, likes to hunt, fish, swim, go boating, play golf and tennis," Gibbs said, "all this kind of opportunity, plus good location, is what attracts them to second home sites."

Chickasaw Point, situated on 55,000 acre Lake Hartwell, has all of this and more and Russwood's sales records indicate Carolina people have discovered this fact.

They show people in such Carolina cities as Greenville, Spartanburg, Seneca, Anderson, Columbia, Taylors, Union and Asheville have bought sites in Chickasaw Point.

The $20 million project is the latest by Russwood in the Carolinas and is just across the Tugaloo River from Stephens County, Georgia. It is about mid-way between Charlotte and Atlanta on I-85.

It reflects Russwood's philosophy of cutting into a wilderness area just enough to make room for people and the things they enjoy such as an 18-hole golf course, swimming pool, tennis courts, clubhouse, boat harbors, picnic areas, horseback and hiking trails.

"But forgetting about the fun aspect of it," Gibbs said, "let's look at the dollars and cents side of an investment such as Chickasaw Point:

Real estate values in this country will continue to rise as they have in the past;

Resort property today increases in value as the amenities are built.

There are more people than ever before in this country and there will be another 35 per cent more by 1980. And these people have more money than ever before to do the things they want.

Vacation-leisure time has doubled in less than 20 years. The average American 10 years from now will work 161 fewer hours, and for more money, than he does now;

Resort property with water is most in demand and least in supply.

"Add these factors and you see what kind of an investment good recreational land can be," Gibbs continued.

At the same time, he warned buyers to exercise

SAILING ALONG—Not on Moonlight Bay, as the old song goes, but on beautiful Lake Hartwell at Chickasaw Point. The recreational land development, located near Fair Play, S.C., just across the Georgia border from Stephens County, Ga., is attracting second home buyers from all over the Carolinas. Sailing, hunting, fishing and projects under construction such as an 18-hole golf course are attracting folks who simply want to "get away from it all." Chickasaw Point is a project of Russwood, Inc., of Charlotte, N.C. (PRN)

"some common sense" when dealing for recreational land and he listed a few tips for prudent buying.

1. The three most important things in selecting any real estate are location, location and location.

2. Check up on the company you're dealing with. Take a look at other developments it has done.

3. Look at the water supply, the sewage facilities, the road, power, telephone service and security system.

4. Don't buy anything you can't comfortably afford.

Gibbs' concern for the buyer is one of the things which have earned Russwood something of a reputation as a consumer advocate.

The company's president, Henry J. Skorga, has been the subject of magazine and newspaper articles because of his calls for national licensing of all recreational land salesmen.

Skorga has suggested the Federal government study the possibility of such a license which holders would forfeit for unethical sales practices.

To Nancy Wynn, the theater is like a religion — it is her whole life.

Ms. Wynn, guest director at Tanglewood Barn Theater, is directing the Piedmont Repertory Company's present production, Blithe Spirit, a comedy of the supernatural by Noel Coward. Also, this summer she will direct Hotel Paradiso and Gingerbread Lady at the theater.

Ms. Wynn, who is presently finishing up a PHD in theater at the City University of New York, started her straining for the theater at the early age of 6 and made her first stage appearance at the age of 8.

She appeared in "dozens and dozens" of local production around her home in Akron, Ohio and then at the age of 16 auditioned for the Radio City Rockettes.

At that time, she was the youngest girl ever hired by the famous dancing group. She lived and worked in New York for 4 summers, returning to Akron in the fall to attend school.

But Ms. Wynn claims that she did not come from a theatrical family. Her mother influenced her, but she was not a pushy stage mother.

"I was always taking lessons," Ms. Wynn recalls, "I didn't have time for the usual childhood things because of the lessons."

In all, she accumulated 11 years of dance lessons, 9 years of piano and 3 years of music theory and conducting.

But all of the lessons paid off in the long run.

After graduating from school in the mid-west, Ms. Wynn went to work with the American Pantomime Art Theater in New York and also did a lot of work for television.

But she was not content just to act.

"I always wanted to direct things," she said, "Even as a child, I wanted to be the person in charge."

In 1951, she choreographed her first show, "Showboat" for the Goodyear Operetta Company and then started directing pantomime.

"I discovered that I far more enjoyed directing and choreography," she said.

Being a woman in a predominantly male field caused some problems in the beginning, Ms. Wynn said. She discovered that women were not taken seriously as directors but were as choreographers.

But Ms. Wynn overcame the obstacles and has gone on to direct some 42 shows including comedy, tragedy and musicals.

Her specialty is the musical. Because of her training, she usually stages the dramatic scenes, choreographs the dance numbers and even directs the pit orchestra.

But she doesn't claim to prefer any particular theater genre. "I always enjoy the play

I am presently working with," she says while adding, "unless it is just a piece of hack work".

She feels though, that comedy is the hardest to act and direct.

"Almost anymore can do tragedy," she says.

"Timing is everything in comedy," she continues.

When working with a professional company she feels the important part of the director's job is to control and directing, Ms. Wynn has also written for the stage. She has completed five plays, three of which have been produced.

The Cup, a drama concerning a returning Vietnam veteran, due to his mixed background (part American and part Vietnamese) was staged last year by the New York Theater Ensemble.

"My whole life has been theater," she says, "The theater is like a church for me. I guess you would say I am dedicated to it."

"Through the theater, we are able to crystallize for society its thought and feeling that the average man can not put into thought for himself."

Ms. Wynn has three children: Wendy, 13; Robin, 11; and Wynn, 5. Wendy and Robin are in Winston-Salem now with their mother and Wynn will be joining them later this summer.

Concerning future theatrical plans for her children, Ms. Wynn said emphatically, "I only want my children to be in theater, if it is what they want more than anything else."

SILAS C. MYERS

ADVANCE — Silas C. Myers, 79, of Advance died yesterday at the Medcenter in Winston-Salem. The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Eaton's Funeral Chapel at Mocksville. Burial will be in Elkhorn United Methodist Church cemetery in Davie County.

Mr. Myers was born in Davie County to Jess and Cora Wilson Myers. He was a member of Elkhorn United Methodist Church and was a retired farmer.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Annie Jarvis Myers; three daughters, Mrs. Charlie Allen and Mrs. June McCullough of Advance and Mrs. Frank Craver of Clemmons, Rt. 1; three sons, Rufus W. Myers of Winston-Salem; Garland V. Myers of Advance, Rt. 2; and Trey G. Myers of Harmony; a sister, Mrs. Jennie Cornatzer of Advance; and three brothers, W. L. Fred and Tom Myers of Advance.

One of your neighbors has some pretty old-fashioned ideas.

In our neighborhood, Duke Power's main job is to provide you with electricity. Efficiently. Now and in the future.

To do this, we use the most modern equipment available. Electronic computers. Microwave communications systems. Automatic controls. And sophisticated instrumentation.

But the 12,500 members of our family do a lot of other things, too.

Some of the things are just plain old-fashioned. But they sure make living in our neighborhood a little better.

Protecting the environment, for example. We've been at it since back in the 1920s. Fighting mosquitos, planting trees, protecting wildlife.

And we're creating boating, fishing and recreation areas for you and your family. Try Duke Power lakes for some of the finest game fishing in the Southeast.

We teach cooking and home economics. And we help our farm neighbors give nature a hand.

You'll find other members of the Duke Power family participating in just about every civic and charitable group in our neighborhood.

You see, we know that everything we do in our neighborhood affects our neighborhood. So being a good neighbor is important to us.

That's more than a sound business principle. It's a way of life.

A rather wry joke is to the effect that the way to put the United States back into solvency is for this nation to lose a war to some wealthy nation.

* * *

The inference, of course, is to the fact that after defeating Germany and Japan, this country extended the economic support to them which has enabled them to go ahead by leaps and bounds, leaving the United States saddled with a currency of questionable value, a balance of trade deficit, and somewhere up around 80 billion dollars floating around the world with no place to go.

* * *

This is perhaps a much more severe example, than that exemplified by the recent railroad labor settlement, but there seems to be a great similarity of concept, if the ridiculous can be classified as a concept.

* * *

It is no secret that some of the nation's railroads are bankrupt, and others are on the verge of a financial crash.

* * *

The railroads have been seeking means of cutting down their operating costs by eliminating train crew members no longer necessary in modern operating procedures, but they have been quite effectively blocked from a course followed by any normal business.

* * *

So now, despite the financial problems of the railroads, there has been negotiated a pay increase that over 18 months will boost that part of the operating costs by 10.7 per cent.

Shoppers in today's modern retail stores probably would be surprised to learn that they had been "put under a microscope" by a team of experts before construction of the building ever started.

Learning about prospective customers is an important element in selecting an appropriate location for a store and in deciding upon the merchandise mix, which, in turn, is a factor in determining how large the store needs to be. For example, long before the F.W. Woolworth Company began construction of its newest store at Signal Hill Mall Shopping Center in Statesville, a team of experts spent months studying the needs, wants, tastes, and habits of prospective customers, as well as, facts about average incomes, employment rates, and traffic patterns in the community.

Only then did it decide the store would be located in Signal Hill Mall, that it would have 83,000 square feet of building area, and the kinds of merchandise it would stock. The total building area of this center will exceed 250,000 square feet and will have over 20 different stores around an enclosed heated and air conditioned mall. Designed with wide aisles, soft lighting and a bright decor, the store has ample room for home furnishings and small appliances, as well as extensive lines of high-fashion apparel and shoes, perfumes, and upgraded beauty care items.

"Today's shoppers demand comfort and convenience," reports Mr. Edmund H. Burke, Regional Vice President for Woolworth. "At the same time, this 'new' consumer's demands are high when it comes to the quality and styling of goods as well as the attractiveness,

The size of the store and the nature of the merchandise is determined by the advance research," he said, "but stores being opened these days are much larger, to accommodate the greatly expanded lines of merchandise in upgraded quality demanded by today's customers."

New stores opened by Woolworth last year averaged over 65,000 square feet of building area, compared with 15,000 square feet a decade ago.

Biography Of Savings Bonds

Although there were "Liberty Bonds" in World War One and "Baby Bonds" in the late 1930's, the Savings Bonds Program, as known today, was launched in 1941. By order of March 19 of that year, a Defense Savings Staff was set up in the Office of the Secretary to plan the national sale of Savings Bonds—Series E, F, and G—and Savings Stamps, then exchangeable for Bonds.

On May 1, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt bought the first Defense Bond from the Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau. With the onset of World War Two, thousands of volunteers brought the program to every home and business community, to every important professional, benevolent, and social group—promoting and selling War Savings Bonds.

The media—newspapers, magazines, radio, motion pictures, advertising—urged Americans constantly to buy more Bonds. By the end of 1945, during and between seven War Loan Drives and a Victory Loan, some six million volunteers had sold $185 billion in Treasury securities to an estimated 185 million Americans.

Treasury Order No. 50 of June 25, 1943, set up a War Finance Division, under a National Director, to coordinate and integrate volunteer work in every city and county, with the 52 state and territorial War Finance Committees and the Washington and state office staffs. Under the provisions of Treasury Order No. 62, effective January 1, 1946, the Savings Bonds Division has continued the program.

Two series of Savings Bonds are available—Series E, an appreciation-type security, sold at 75 percent face amount, which gradually increases in redemption value; Series H, a current-income security, which pays interest by Treasury check every six months. As registered securities, they are "indestructible"; that is, they will be placed if lost, stolen, mutilated, or destroyed.

The Bond Program is today carried on by a modest staff in Washington, 11 region and 42 state offices, assisted by a nationwide "Crops of Volunteers" in all walks of life. Savings Bonds offer Americans a safe, sound investment, with a good-and-guaranteed-return on their savings.

Through the Payroll Savings Plan, offered by employers, and the Bond-A-Month Plan, available at banks, the program provides a simple, automatic way for persons to save for themselves and for the future security of their families and their country. It broadens the base of ownership of the federal debt; it helps reduce inflationary pressures.

More than $58 billion worth of Savings Bonds—some dating back to 1914—are held by millions of Americans everywhere. Millions more are buying them regularly, building nest eggs for financial peace of mind.

Q -- I still carry my World War II "V"-prefixed National Service Life Insurance. Can I get additional coverage?

A -- Yes. Public Law 92-188, enacted in December 1971, allows veterans with these policies to use their insurance dividends to buy additional paid-up life insurance protection.

Hearing Losses
Most hearing losses gradually get worse, warns the Beltone Crusade for Hearing Conservation, which also points out that when such losses are not alleviated in time, persons can lose the habit of distinguishing sounds.

Fourth of Stomach
Dairy products occupy more than 25 percent "share of stomach".

East 330 feet with Brewer line to a point in Western edge of Yadkinville Road; thence North with Yadkinville Road approximately 200 feet to the beginning.

BEFORE taking such lawful action as it may deem advisable the Town Commission shall consider all recommendations from any citizen present on the above proposed zoning amendment.

In CASE, HOWEVER, OF A PROTEST signed by owners of 20 percent or more either of the area of the lot included in such proposed change or of those immediately adjacent in the rear thereof extending one hundred (100) feet from the street frontage of such opposite lots, such amendment shall not become effective except by favorable vote of $\frac{3}{4}$ of all members of the legislative body of such municipality.

John Barber As County Manager

Once upon a time Davie County was small, not only in geographical size, but in that of activity and interest.

A sheriff and one deputy could handle the crime. A single state highway patrolman served the county. All the county offices were located in rooms in the court house. The welfare department consisted of a superintendent, one case worker, and a clerk. And the board of county commissioners met only once a month to pass on routine matters.

But as time marched on, Davie County grew both in activity and interest, and its government became more demanding and complex.

As office staffs increased, as county services expanded, and as county government became more and more involved with the state and federal governments, it became apparent that a fulltime county manager was required.

The county government is big business....a $2-million 664,111 business...and no such business dares to operate without someone in an overall, full-time supervisory capacity.

It was in March of 1970 that John Barber became Davie County's first manager. There is no way to enumerate his services and the value of these services during the past three years. However, the status of the County of Davie holds today, the soundness of its services and institutions, is a testimonial in itself to John Barber and the boards of county commissioners he has served.

Let's briefly review some of the accomplishments of the past three years:

...There was the renovation and expansion of the court house.

...A new jail was constructed after grants were secured from the federal and state governments.

...A new landfill for garbage disposal was built, and a new and improved garbage collection system created.

...Federal and state grants to the county have increased into the thousands of dollars.

...Compliance with the Emergency Employment Act brings $26,000 in grants

VA Issues "RH" Insurance

The Veterans Administration last year issued 17,600 veterans low cost "RH" Service Disabled Life Insurance policies totaling $165 million, it was reported today by H.W. Johnson, Director of the Winston-Salem VA Regional Office.

Johnson said $1.5 billion worth of "RH" insurance has been issued to 173,000 service-connected disabled veterans since the program's inception in April 1951.

Generally, the insurance must be applied for within one year after VA notifies veterans that their disabilities have been rated as service connected.

By the end of this year, VA expects to issue to about 18,400 veterans policies totaling nearly $172 million, Johnson said. This would be a 4 percent increase over 1972, and compares with 21,700 policies (worth $204 million) in 1971 when the level of combat activities in Vietnam was still high.

Eligible veterans at 25 years of age can buy $10,000 worth of life insurance protection for a $2.60 monthly premium which would increase every five years.

Or, they could take out the same amount of ordinary Life Insurance ("RH") for a $13 monthly premium which would not increase. No dividends are paid on "RH" insurance, Johnson said.

By taking out a $10,000 "RH" policy and converting to a commercial policy the $15,000 Servicemen's Group Life Insurance carried in service, these disabled veterans can obtain a total of $25,000 worth of government life insurance.

To make certain eligible veterans are not overlooking "RH" insurance, VA began sending "reminder" letters in 1967 to veterans following their military discharges.

The agency also began automatically issuing up to $10,000 premium free policies to into the county. This provides for two deputies, a jailer, an ambulance attendant, and a health aide. And additional $10,000 grant made possible the purchase of a new ambulance for the county.

....A county planning board was reactivated and is now active.

....All the county records were converted to a uniform accounting system as recommended by the Local Government Commission.

....The groundwork has been laid for a county-wide water system.

....The groundwork has been laid for a system of countywide planning and zoning.

....A federal grant of $357,000 is making possible a county service facility, now under construction on North Main Street.

....A mass gathering ordinance was passed.

....A grant received through the Piedmont Triad Criminal Justice Planning unit pays 75 percent of the salary for one deputy.

....The county now has 17 NYC student workers in the county at work in recreation, school, court house, etc. The county pays nothing to these NYC workers and their salaries will bring around $7,000 into the county this year.

The county manager handles all the correspondence, he serves as clerk to the board of county commissioners, he is available for consultation to county citizens and to employees in the various departments, he attends all the governmental workshops throughout the state and stays abreast of changes in federal and state regulations, and he keeps the county budget funds in line.

No one knows better than John Bailey, Chairman of the Davie County Board of Commissioners, as to what a county manager means to Davie County and the excellent job Mr. Barber has done in this capacity.

"He has done an excellent job. All of the commissioners are well pleased", said Mr. Bailey.

And the fact that such sterling performance of duties was recognized by others results in Mr. Barber moving on to a much larger and challenging job.

So, on behalf of the citizens of Davie County, we express appreciation to Mr. Barber for what he has done, for what he has meant, as County Manager. We wish for him continued success in Iredell.

New Obscenity Law Poses Enforcement Problems

BY MITCHELL SIMON

X-rated movies and adult bookstores are still in business as police and prosecutors in North Carolina's 100 counties sit in meetings to study the new obscenity law and its implications.

Officials are unsettled as to what action, if any, could be taken under the U.S. Supreme Court's latest directives on obscenity.

The court, in a 5-4 decision, has given local courts and law agencies more freedom in determining what is obscene.

The decision has evoked comments from faculty members at the University of North Carolina here who are studying the opinion in its entirety.

"I would rather have my tax dollar pay for a policeman's services in patrolling the streets than to subsidize his watching a dirty movie," is the philosophical observation made by Prof. Arnold H. Loewy of the Law School where he teaches constitutional law.

Prof. Dexter Watts of the Institute of Government at the University wonders if North Carolina's state laws will prevent cities and counties from making more stringent regulations concerning obscenity.

"North Carolina's obscenity statutes may have to be written by the General Assembly when it next meets in order to have any practical effect," according to Watts.

"The Burger (Chief Justice Warren Burger) court has made it easier for the prosecution to get a conviction in an obscenity case," he said, "but I am not sure North Carolina, without change in its law, will be able to take advantage of this new ruling. We can continue regulating obscenity to the extent that we are at present."

He reviewed the North Carolina law which states that material is obscene "if the dominant theme of the material taken as a whole appeals to the prurient (lustful) interest in sex," or if the material is "patently offensive because it affronts contemporary national community standards relating to the description or representation of sexual matters," or if the material "is utterly without redeeming social value," and, if the material as used "is not protected or privileged under the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of North Carolina."

Prof. Loewy, concerned with the effect of the Supreme Court decision, opposes the new ruling for two reasons.

"Psychologically, it impairs each individual's feeling of freedom to determine what he or she can or cannot read or see.

Special Project To Feed Elderly

The Yadkin Valley Economic Development District, Incorporated through its OEO local initiative funds is implementing a pilot, test feeding the elderly program (FEP) for 100 Yadkin Valley area Senior Citizens who are not able to prepare food for themselves.

The program plans to provide for at least one hot meal a day for five days a week beginning in August, 1973.

Priority for enrollment will be for those low-income persons who are over 60 years of age and are either disabled, living alone, or over 75 years of age.

Citizens who know of persons who need this service and might be eligible should contact their County Community Action Program's Service Center, Agnes Thomas, Phone 634-2188.

MANPOWER
The Manpower Development and Training Act, passed by the Congress in 1962, provides training opportunities to meet the needs of the disadvantaged worker and to focus on alleviating skill shortages, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Also, the amount of police, prosecutorial, judicial, court room and citizen (expert witness) time involved in an obscenity prosecution is substantial.

"Even without strict enforcement of anti-obscenity laws," Loewy said, "police are overworked and many criminal court calendars are overcrowded. Adding obscenity to the problem out of a vague fear that obscenity may cause psychological harm -- a premise on which there is substantial disagreement -- is a very unwise investment in time and money from a cost-benefit analysis."

Loewy contrasted the paradoxical nature of the obscenity decision to the recent decision striking down anti-abortion laws.

"In abortion there is no specific constitutional prohibition such as freedom of speech. Furthermore, the state interest in preventing free abortion (protecting an embryo, which at very least is an organism with a full set of human genes) is of substantial interest," he said. "But anti-obscenity legislation does appear to be an interference with freedom of speech (a specific constitutional prohibition) and the state's interest (never really clearly stated) is much more vague and ephemeral.

"Therefore, one would have thought if a distinction were to be made between an anti-obscenity law and an anti-abortion law, the anti-obscenity law would be more likely to be held constitutional. Yet, the court reached precisely the opposite result."

The Supreme Court acknowledges the inherent dangers of undertaking to regulate any form of expression, and that state statutes designed to regulate obscene materials must be carefully limited.

"As a result," the Court opinion reads, "we now confine the permissible scope of such regulation to works which depict or describe sexual conduct. That conduct must be specifically defined by the applicable state law, as written or authoritatively construed."

Disenting Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas proposes a constitutional amendment if there are to be restraints on what is obscene.

"I do not think we, the judges, were ever given the constitutional power to make definitions of obscenity," he asserts. "If it is to be defined, let the people debate and decide by a constitutional amendment what they want to ban as obscene and what standards they want the legislature and the courts to apply. Perhaps the people will decide that the path towards a mature, integrated society requires that all ideas competing for acceptance must have no censor. Perhaps they will decide otherwise. Whatever the choice, the courts will have some guidelines. Now we have none except our own predilections."

Dr. Elmer Oettinger of the Institute of Government, aware of the backlash against permissiveness, noted the flexibility of the Constitution.

"Many do not understand that this dynamic document is not a fixed thing. We always have to be ready for new interpretations and changes," he said. "The Supreme Court ruling swings back from the previous more permissive statute.

"When we get into the social mores we're dealing with a very personal matter. It's a case of the individual versus society. As for the influence of pornography on youth, we have to keep in mind that young people are much less tender plants than we treat them to be. A normal person can accept violence or pornography, but the abnormal person cannot."

"We are making community standards assume a priority over a national standard by this new ruling which represents a forward step to those people who think we have gone too far with obscenity. It's a backward step for those who feel they should have the right to choose what they read or see," Dr. Oettinger said.

Speaking as a professional librarian, Rebecca Ballentine of the Institute of Government staff sees broad implications in the Supreme Court directives.

"I'm very frightened by this ruling," she said. "When local authorities can have the power to decide on this enforcement we can have big problems. A pressure group could bring unofficial action on what a library can have on its shelves. If we had a Joe McCarthy in the community, just imagine what might happen."

Driver Injured In Sunday Wreck

The driver of a 1969 Ford pickup was injured in a one vehicle accident Sunday around 9:10 a.m. on the Deadmon Road, 1.3 miles south of Mocksville.

James Penry Wagner of Mocksville Rt. 4 was taken to the Davie County Hospital.

State Highway Patrolman J.C. Goodin said his investigation showed that Wagner was operating the vehicle and was traveling west on the Deadmon Road. Wagner told the patrolman that he hit the brakes to slow down behind another vehicle, the brakes grabbed and the pickup ran off the road on the left side and overturned on top.

Damage was estimated at $800.

Fire Hydrant Turned On

Mocksville Police are investigating the opening of a water hydrant on Carolina Street, Saturday night.

Chief of Police Joe Foster said that the hydrant was turned wide open Saturday night and gallons of water was wasted before it was found and turned off. The town engineer was called to shut off the hydrant. The turning on of this hydrant is felt to have been a deliberate act on the part of someone.

Auto Theft Moving To Small Towns

Always considered a big city crime in the past, auto theft is on the decrease in major population centers and a new trend, increases in small communities, has appeared.

The 1972 Uniform Crime preliminary report, recently issued by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, revealed a seven per cent reduction in nationwide auto theft over the prior year. This is the first such reduction in over a decade.

The dramatic auto theft reduction in the nation's largest cities is the major contributing factor in the large overall decrease. In cities with a population between 500,000 and one million, auto thefts in 1972 were down 11 percent and in cities with over a million inhabitants, these thefts dropped by 14 per cent.

According to the FBI report, cities and towns in all population groups above 10,000 experienced auto theft decreased last year. The only exceptions were communities where the plants were pulled up around 2:30 p.m., Tuesday, from a Yadkin River bottomland where they were growing. Sheriff Smith refused to pinpoint the exact location or say who owned the property.

Sheriff Smith said the plants were approximately three months old, and were from two to four feet in height.

The plants were destroyed by the sheriff's department.

According to Sheriff Smith, fully grown plants may reach the height of 12-feet to 15 feet. It was reported that the area in which the plants were found looked to have been recently cultivated.

Fully grown, the plants would sell for several thousands of dollars as marijuana.

WDSL Sets Special Ice Cream Promotion

The staff of Radio Station WDSL has announced the details for a special July promotion.

WDSL, with the help of local businesses will hold a drawing on July 28 and give away an Ice Cream Party. The prize will consist of 26 gallons of real Bordens Ice Cream, 400 ice cream cones, and 2 ice cream dippers.

A spokesman for the station said the idea originated when the staff began thinking of something a little bit different and something cool to do during July.

"We have found," said a member of the staff, "that people in this area had just as soon win something for someone else, as for themselves, and so we are suggesting that the winner have a party for their civic groups, church, relatives, or for the public." The station staff will assist the winner in distributing the ice cream as the winner prefers.

There were no injuries. Joyner was charged with improper equipment.

Davie Youths Are Charged In Rowan

Two 18-year-old Davie County youths were taken into custody Thursday in Rowan County on charges of non-burglarious breaking and entering with attempt to commit a felony at a store on NC 8011.

Capt. C.M. Grant of Duke Street, Cooleemee, and Donnie Ray Robbins of 587 Avon St., Mocksville.

Salisbury law officials reported that the two youths attempted on July 11th to break into the outside beer cooler of Tom's Grocery and Service, owned by T.D. Coughenour, on N.C. 8011.

Food, Cars Rank High In Local Spending

Residents of Davie County were in the marketplace in greater force in the past year, according to a report on local retail store activity, just released.

With most local families enjoying bigger incomes than in the previous year, they were in a position to spend more and they did so.

They were far less cautious in that respect than they had been in 1971, when they kept their spending under tight control and put a record amount of money into savings.

The facts and figures, with a breakdown of their outlays for automobiles, food, clothing, furniture and other goods and services, are from a new consumer markets survey conducted by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It gives comparable data for every section of the country.

In Davie County, it is shown, stores selling food and automotive equipment captured a large part of the consumer dollar. Between the two of them, they attracted 46 percent of all local retail business.

Their combined share, elsewhere in the United States was 41 percent and, in the South Atlantic States, 42 percent.

The amount spent for food alone, in local supermarkets, bakeries, butcher shops, delicatessens and the like, totaled $5,638,000, compared with the prior year's $5,022,000.

These expenditures refer only to food that was bought for home consumption. They do not include the amount that was spent in restaurants, lunch rooms and other dining and drinking places.

The report shows that automobile dealers and those selling motorcycles, boats, trailers and related equipment also had a good year, accounting for a total of $6,778,000, as against the previous year's

Most other retail lines in the local area also turned in good figures for the period.

Department stores and variety shops dealing in general merchandise chalked up their 1971 volume of $1,560,000.

Those specializing in clothing, shoes, hats and other articles of apparel grossed $379,000. The year before it was $337,000.

Sales of furniture and other home furnishings came to $1,234,000, as against the previous total of $1,014,000.

Much of the increase in gross sales is attributed to the higher cost of goods and services.

office because payments will be mailed as they are received from the computer.

Producers who earn payments in the 1973 set-aside programs for feed grain, wheat and cotton began receiving payments on July 10th.

As soon as farmers filed reports of acreage and certification of compliance, data was submitted to the computer in New Orleans.

Farmers in the set-aside programs give up the use of some of their productive acres in order to help achieve an effective balance between supply and demand.

Farmers have selected land for set-aside that has the same average productivity as the program cropland on the farm.

It will not be necessary for participants in the program to request payments at the county

Sunday Storm Causes Blackout

A wind and electrical storm swept across Davie County early Sunday, causing some damage and power blackout to Duke Power Company customers in the county and in northern Rowan County.

E. E. Goodwin, Duke Power Company branch manager here, said Monday that damage to the company's lines was at a minimum.

A big transformer went out of service toward the Winston-Salem area, Goodwin said, and a tree fell and pulled down lines toward Salisbury.

Some customers lost electrical power about 1:30 a.m. Sunday. The last of the service repairs were made about 10 a.m. Sunday.

Davie County Hospital Last Of Original Nurses Staff Retires

Mrs. Beatrice Hendrix, the last of the original nursing staff formerly occupied by the Davie County Hospital, has recently retired after 17 years of service.

"It's like leaving home," says Mrs. Hendrix.

In fact her ties are so strong that she will continue to work two days each week after her retirement.

"I just can't break away completely," she commented, "not all at one time."

Mrs. Hendrix is a graduate of the 1955 School of Practical Nurses at Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem, which was the second LPN class offered there.

She was hired by the hospitals first Directors of Nurses, Mrs. Kay Everest, who she says quit after just a couple of days and had left. Mocksville before she finished working her notice at Baptist.

She came to work when the hospital first opened and for a good while Mrs. Hendrix was the only Licensed Practical Nurse on the staff.

"There were registered nurses and nursing assistants," she explained, "but the LPN School was still fairly new."

There were only two medical doctors, Dr. Martin and Dr. Long, and one surgeon, Dr. Kornegay, when the 30-bed hospital first opened, she recalled.

"I've seen it through thick and thin," she says, "We now have five medical doctors and two surgeons and the number of beds is doubled. They are also expecting to double the number of beds again with the construction which is presently underway.

Mrs. Hendrix attributes her nursing career to "Old Dr. W.C. Martin," who was their family doctor for many years. She says for many years his son, the late Dr. Lester Martin practiced medicine and later specialized in optometry. His office was also located in Mocksville.

One thing Mrs. Hendrix says she has to be thankful for is that out of 17-years service at the hospital, "I have never been admitted."

Just prior to her retirement, the other nurses presented Mrs. Hendrix with an engraved silver tray during a dinner held in her honor.

Mrs. Beatrice Hendrix admires the engraved silver tray given to her by her co-workers upon her retirement from the Davie County Hospital

Mrs. Beatrice Hendrix completes 17-years of service at the Davie County Hospital.

A Letter To The Editor

SUPERCONTINENT
Most evidence shows that the earth's land surface was once one gigantic supercontinent that geologists call Pangea, according to the Nature Science Center.

Dear Editor:

There are many unanswered questions concerning the proposed Duke Power Company plant in Davie County. The question of greatest concern to many people is whether or not this plant, if built, will be an atomic reactor. The answer seems to be, "Yes." Representative Gilbert Boger has stated that Duke Power officials have told him a one mile radius from the plant is needed. This amount of land is not needed for a coal or oil powered plant. The conclusion is that an atomic energy plant is planned.

If you read beyond the front page of some of the larger newspapers, there is considerable information on the dangers of atomic energy plants. There are also rumors of information withheld from the public concerning the possibility of an accident to an atomic reactor. We read that any such "spills" into the environment can be "Cleaned up," but this is not the sort of waste that can be put into the trash can or swept under the rug. Where can either the accidental or normal radioactive waste be stored so that it cannot affect us? Is there any safe place to store this unusable material where it cannot be released by erosion, earthquake, sabotage, or some other unforeseen "accident"? Are our scientists creating a slow Nagasaki or Hiroshima for our own people? Our children may well regret "the sins of the father" willing to take a chance with disease, deformity, and slow death for us and our children's children.

I understand that nuclear power plants for the nation are going to be built largely in the Southeast. Is there any real reason why people here should be forced off their land and exposed to the hazards of radioactivity to provide power for other parts of the country? The Winston-Salem Journal of July 7 reported that fifteen leaks have occurred in tanks containing atomic waste at the Savannah nuclear plant. Though Atomic Energy Commission officials deny that any leakage reached the water table, liquid waste is missing from the tanks, and is believed by some sources to have reached the water table.

The Hanford Plant, a nuclear reactor on the Columbia River in Washington, is reported to have leaked 500,000 gallons of "deadly radioactive liquid," and according to The Charlotte Observer the incidence of cancer has risen 75 percent above normal levels in Portland, Oregon, "due to radiological contamination of the Columbia River and the air downwind of the Hanford Plant." An improved tax base for Davie County is hardly worth a risk as great as this.

To those who are so accustomed to looking at everything through a dollar mark, and are saying that this would be such a great thing for the county tax wise, I would say look around at Forsyth and Mecklenburg, and see if the people there have been helped at all. When you have done this, go to the upper part of Davie County and count the Forsyth people who have moved into Davie in order to have a safe and decent place to live. Eloise C. Stephens

Never On Sundae

At the turn of the century, many people thought that soda water was actually intoxicating. Perhaps the basis for their judgment was the giggling and smiling ice cream soda sipping inspired. Whatever the reason, Evans-ton, Ill., took action and passed a law prohibiting the sale of ice cream sodas on Sunday. One clever fountain operator found a way to get around the law by serving ice cream plus syrup minus the soda water. Dubbing his creation ice cream "Sunday," probably doubled his weekend business. But the pious town fathers objected to naming an ice cream dish after the Sabbath, so the spelling was later changed to sundae—a treat to be enjoyed any day of the week.

Conquering Colds

The cold season never seems to end? If you fall prey to every sniffle-causing bug this side of Hong Kong, maybe you just don't take care of yourself. Suggestions: 1) Start every day with a vitamin and glass of orange juice. 2) Warm your soul by drinking herb teas with honey. 3) Remember, a wet head and a cold don't go together. Try Psssssst, a spray-on, dry instant shampoo. Press a button to banish oil and grime, sparkle your hair back to most presentable life—without running the risk of going out with a wet head.

There's a rumor afloat that water is bad for the skin—dries it out and ages it. Bah humbug! Water is your skin's fountain of youth (no pun intended). However soap is another story. Soap is alkaline and skin, acidic—thus soap may attack your skin's natural acid balance and leave it drier.

More Tobacco, Corn, Soybeans Forecast

A 16 percent larger flue-cured tobacco crop, an increase of one-third in soybean plantings, and a slight increase in corn acreage are highlights of the season's first major crop report from the N.C. Crop Reporting Service. The report also noted a slight decrease in small grain production and lowered cotton plantings.

A noticeable shift from corn to soybeans has occurred since the March intentions report was released. North Carolina growers indicated they planted 1,570,000 acres of corn. Of this, about 1,400,000 will be harvested for grain - 4 percent more than last season.

For soybeans a record smashing 1,460,000 acres are intended to be harvested for beans this year. This is 33 percent more than the estimated 1,100,000 acres combined in 1972.

Flue-cured tobacco is forecast at 770 million pounds -- 109 million above last year's outturn -- based on conditions around July 1. About 366,000 acres will be harvested -- 10 percent more than in 1972. An average yield of 2,104 pounds per acre is indicated, well above last year's average of 1,993 pounds. If realized, indicated overall flue-cured yield will be the highest since the acreage-yield program started in 1965. Recent weather conditions have generally favored the crop.

All belts in the State show increases in production prospects compared with 1972: type 11 increasing from 241 million pounds to 277 million; type 12, from 333 to 396 million; type 13, from 88 to 97 million.

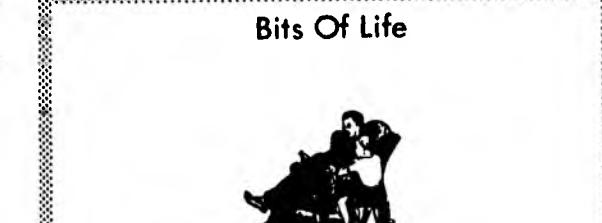

The U.S. flue-cured crop is forecast at 1,141 million pounds, 13 percent more than the 1,012 million produced in 1972.

Despite a reduction in small grain acreage, total expected output is less than 1 percent below the 1972 output. A wheat crop of 6.3 million bushels is indicated compared with 7.0 million in 1972. Oat production is estimated at 3.6 million bushels, up 0.2 million from last year. Barley is expected to produce 3.0 million bushels compared with 2.6 million in 1972. Rye is placed at 336,000 bushels versus 294,000 a year ago.

Official production forecast for corn, soybeans, sorghum grains, cotton, and peanuts will not be made until August. However, acreage estimates of each have been made based on enumerative and mail surveys and in large measure foretell production.

Sorghum for harvest for all purposes is placed at 113,000 acres -- unchanged from last year.

Peanuts planted alone for all purposes are estimated at 169,000 acres. Plantings are about the same as during the past several years, reflecting

The Generation Gap

By ROSCOE BROWN FISHER

The little fellow is older now. He has put away his models and the tubes of cement. The fairy tales have long since been replaced by mysteries and "Sports Illustrated" — Quite a way from the nine-year-old chap who bought "The Praying Hands" in Texas for his souvenir on our trek across the States and back.

Now 18 and a sophomore in college and two inches taller than his father, and no worry about being drafted, Luther apparently has moved into an exciting life — thinking seriously about his world of tomorrow.

The other day we talked about the "Generation gap." Asked what we might do about it, he said, "Daddy, there's no way to put hair back on your head."

"That's an hereditary factor, son. Go easy."

"If that means what I think it does, we better talk about something else."

"What about the 'generation gap'?"

"Pop, this 'generation gap' is talked about too much already. I wouldn't expect you to think like me... or me like you. You are my father, and I have to look to you and mother for advice. I want you to tell me 'no' sometimes, and 'yes' a lot of the time."

"Keep talking, son."

"At school, it bothers me to hear some of the kids complaining about their parents. These are the kids that act like they have had their way most of the time."

"Reckon a little paddling might help fill the 'generation gap'?"

"Quite possible... quite possible," he reflected, a bit more seriously.

"But son, aren't you spending a little too much time Sunday afternoons looking at those TV baseball games? Are not there better things you can do on Sunday?"

"Now, Pop, I go to Sunday School and church each Sunday morning and hear you preach, and sometimes it is one I have heard before. I go to the pulpit, pick up your sermon book and Bible and come to the door and shake your hand. So I think I ought to be able to look at all the TV baseball I want to Sunday afternoon. Besides, the baseball games are entertaining."

I had no more to say about "the generation gap."

Church ActivitiesBLAISE BAPTIST

The Women's Missionary Union presented a "White Bible Service", last Sunday evening at the church in honor of Miss Teresa Knight, who will wed Jimmy Smiley on July 22. Following the service refreshments were served.

Communion Service will be held a little late for this quarter. This special observance will be Sunday, July 29th.

Our Youth reported a wonderful time at Ridgecrest Assembly last week. We will be hearing more about this from them at a later date.

We will elect a Sunday School Superintendent for the coming year. The nominating committee will be meeting soon. Be praying about this and answer the call to serve God through your Church.

Pray for: Mrs. Billie Horton and Stamey Edwards, both who are patients at Davie County Hospital.

Human Resources in Action in North Carolina

by Jerry Blackwelder

Donald was born in a small North Carolina town into a family situation that left much to be desired. He was kept in a crib until age four. He was culturally deprived, brutalized to the extent of having scars on his back from beatings and neglected.

At the age of 10, Donald and his brother broke into a school. He was sent to a corrections center, then to a mental hospital, and finally to a center for the mentally retarded.

The future for young Donald seemed dark until he met Dr. Jim Tompkins, who was new to North Carolina and an employee of the Durham Child Advocacy Center. (Dr. Tompkins is now executive director of the Governor's Advocacy Council for Children and Youth, an agency of the Department of Human Resources.)

"I was impressed with Donald," Dr. Tompkins says. "He was not mentally retarded, but was there because of court action. I felt he had no business there." Dr. Tompkins, in cooperation with administrators at the institution, enrolled Donald in the Wright School for emotionally disturbed children in Durham.

Dr. Tompkins went one step further and assumed responsibility for Donald on weekends and holidays in November of 1972. He described Donald's first weekend this way:

"Donald used his hands to eat. He used utensils backwardly. He didn't know how to wash, take a shower or brush his teeth. He had no concept of matching clothing, and he was a junk-collector, compulsive counter, a hoarder from his dealings with tokens at the institution." Donald, at age 13, was at the second grade educational level.

The weekend adoption system lasted until May of this year, when Donald left Wright School and Dr. Tompkins to go to a church-supported Children's Home. In seven months, Donald had reached a seventh grade level in arithmetic and a sixth grade level in all other subjects. There were no indications of his former primitive habits.

Jim Tompkins says he had two motivations for taking Donald into his home life.

"First, I liked the kid. He's neat and likeable. And I wanted to give one child one chance in life."

"And I wanted to show, in a professional way, that this type of program can work. Families across North Carolina could be 'springing' kids from institutions like this and providing them with family environments," he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Williams and son, Norris left Sunday for a week's vacation in their cottage at Long Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Walker, Miss Dixie Walker and Mr. and Mrs. John Eddieman entertained at an informal gathering Friday night in the Methodist Fellowship Hall honoring Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Nicholson of Knoxville, Tenn., who are former residents of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. David Hutchins and children, Adam, Wesley and Leslie of Yadkinville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lashley, and Cecil Lashley who had the misfortune on last Thursday to break his right leg when a yard swing gave way and fell across his leg.

Mrs. Queen Bess Kennen was hostess Sunday at the Clemmons Village Restaurant to a dinner party honoring Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Nicholson. Other guests were Mrs. B. C. Brock Sr., Miss Margaret Brock, Mrs. J. H. Montgomery and Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Smith.

Mrs. Bob Lakey returned Friday after a week in the Baptist Hospital undergoing surgery.

Mrs. J. H. Montgomery and Mrs. Nellie White returned Saturday from a delightful Caribbean cruise.

Mrs. Margaret Christian arrived Tuesday for a visit with her mother, Mrs. J. W. Williams.

Miss Debbie Lashley returned Saturday from a happy week at Camp Rainbow in the mountains near Boone.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Boger, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Miller, Kip Miller, Johnny Steele, Ruth Hartman, Krista Miller, Kathy and Debbie Boger enjoyed last week at Cherry Grove Beach.

Mrs. M. R. Yeager and children, Stephanie, Scott and John of Johnston, Pa. returned home Tuesday after visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Odell James for two weeks. Mr. Yeager joined them here on Sunday.

Mrs. Billy Rudolph and children, Lisa, Stephen and Allen from Nashville, Tenn., are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Teague.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Groce attended the wedding of a nephew Michael Reavis to Miss Carol Hill in the First Baptist Church in Marshville on Sunday.

On Monday Mr. and Mrs. Wade Groce attended the funeral of an uncle, V. L. Renegar in Elkin.

Several of our folks enjoyed the weekend at Lake Norman, fishing, boating, water skiing — they were: Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Brock, Mr. and Mrs. Danny Smith and children, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Jackson and children, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Stearns and Mr. and Mrs. Billy Hayes.

Many are there not because they're mentally retarded, but because they're abandoned, abused, neglected, or placed by court action."

Institutions welcome the idea of parents "springing" the children. Superintendents, as well as social workers from the units, are available to work out the most suitable plan for families to adopt the children, either for weekends and holidays, or for longer periods.

"If a small portion of our population would get involved, our institutions would be empty of children who shouldn't be in these institutions," Dr. Tompkins predicts.

It is obvious that Donald has made his mark on Jim Tompkins, and sold him on the value of such projects.

"Why, if the children's home program works out, that kid could be my boss in ten years," he said.

Kappa Homemakers Hold Meeting

Nine members of Kappa Homemakers Club met at the Community Building, Thursday, July 12th, at 2 p.m. for their regular monthly meeting. Margaret Ann Shew, president, presided and called the meeting to order. Betty Prevette led the devotions, after which Margaret Daywalt gave the treasure report and Sara Koontz read the minutes of the June meeting and called the roll. Announcement was made that our District meeting will be October 24th at the Armory at North Wilkesboro. The members voted to contribute $25.00 to the five 4-H Interstate Exchange Trip Delegates to Pennsylvania. During leaders reports Dorthea Cartner read a very interesting leaflet on cancer. Mrs. Oistine West gave a very interesting lesson on "Window Shades". After the Club Collect, Betty Prevette, assisted by her daughter Teresa, served "Kentucky Pound Cake", chips, and cokes. For recreation Betty led the game "Trees Like People", which revealed we weren't familiar with our trees. Our next meeting will be on August 9th, 7:30 p.m. at the Community Building, Dorthea and Verla Cartner hostess.

The Non-Phosphate Story

Confused about the phosphate versus phosphate-free laundry detergent controversy? If so, you're not alone. Various governmental bodies are, too. They weigh such problems as eutrophication, ecology, sewage systems and environmental factors. But we, as homeowners, are interested in the practical aspect of getting the family wash clean!

The best approach is to use the phosphate-free products, of which there are a large variety available. They are relatively new and not extensively advertised, but they do the job. And, they do it well! They bear the names of the store where you buy them, or they are national in scope, and clearly state phosphate-free on their label.

For the most part, they have replaced the offending phosphate with washing soda, long a standby for getting clothes clean. "Consumer Reports" ran tests, using standard procedures, which have indicated that the phosphate-free products do the job as well — if not better — on some materials than the phosphate products. And if you're lucky enough to live in a soft water area or have a water softener, you will be delighted with the results.

Even in hardwater areas, the results are comparable. For best results here, use water as hot as is safe for the material when you use the phosphate-free laundry powder. By using these products, you can be assured of a clean, fresh-smelling wash and, at the same time, have the satisfaction of knowing you're doing your bit toward saving our endangered water supply.

Teen Times

Good news, rock fans! TV rock shows and superstar specialists on ABC have been scheduled for late at night, thanks to some hip executive who managed to convince the bigwigs that pop music buffs are anywhere but in front of the tube during prime time on Friday and Saturday nights. Now "In Concert," specials will be viewed from 11:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. on alternate Fridays. Hard rock will be interspersed with bluegrass, country western, Gospel, soul and the soothing sounds of Melanie, Helen Reddy and Kris Kristofferson, to name a few. Not to be outdone, the other networks are due to follow with new musical specials.

Have you been wishing for an old-fashioned, tear-jerking escapist flick? There are a couple of them in the theaters these days. A Warm December, with Sidney Poitier as the handsome doctor in love with the beautiful, dying Esther Anderson, although unoriginal in plot, throws in some nifty scenes of London and a high powered motor cycle race. For those who prefer their romance straight from the pages of history, there is The Nelson Atar, in which Lord Horatio Nelson (Peter Finch), public hero and Admiral of the British Navy, circa 1805, tries unsuccessfully to settle down to estate life with his famous mistress, Lady Emma Hamilton (Glenda Jackson).

Don't let doomed romance be your story, though. Acne can be an embarrassing problem, so keep those blemishes under control. To help keep your face its cleanest, try washing daily with a medicated cleanser such as Fostex®. To provide all-day medication for troubled skin, as well as fresh-colored cover, be sure to use an acne drying lotion such as Fostri®.

Interest Yields

Interest yields on U.S. Savings Bonds have been increased seven times since the first Series E Bond was sold on May 1, 1941. The current rate is 5 1/2 percent, if held to maturity — and E Bonds bought today mature in 5 years, 10 months. Outstanding E and H Bonds also benefit, so there's no need to replace them with new Bonds.

Randy Thompson In Special Program At WCU

Randy Thompson, the son of Vernon Thompson of 535 Church St., Mocksville, is enrolled in Western Carolina University's 1973 summer program for superior and gifted children and youths.

The announcement was made by Dr. Roy L. Cox, program coordinator and head of the WCU Department of Curriculum and Instruction. A total of 253 youths from seven states are attending the five-week session ending July 27, Dr. Cox said.

The students, nominated by their school principals and screened by the university, have IQs from 130 upwards to genius levels. They reside in a university residence hall and attend classes in the Camp Laboratory School here.

Teachers working with "The Cullowhee Experience" were specially selected from school systems across the state.

A class of 59 fifth graders is investigating the cultures of China, Africa, India and the Ocean World, while a sixth grade class of 31 explores the ecological factors of the Southern Appalachian region. Thirty-eight seventh graders are researching the mountain heritage and an eighth grade class of 35 students is studying social problems of the area. Ninth and tenth graders are working on independent research projects. A gifted math class and reading improvement program are also taught during "The Cullowhee Experience," now in its 15th year.

Purpose of the project is to challenge the young, exceptional brain, according to Dr. Cox. "The idea is not to accelerate these kids, but to bring them together and provide a setting for them to explore ideas," he said. "They can also use their abilities on an individual basis to an extent they can't in public school classrooms."

Thompson is in the reading improvement class.

The young people of Blaise Baptist Church spent a week at Ridgecrest Baptist Assembly. Attending sessions were: left to right; Lane Hollar, Ronnie Riggan, Stewart Howell, Lisa Reavis, Ronnie Blackwelder, Regina Whittaker, Lester and Gerrie Cozart, and children Angie and Deanna, and Mark Whittaker. WASHINGTON - A couple of months back, I made passing reference, in this weekly report, to the Senate Prayer Breakfast held each Wednesday in the Capitol.

I have been a bit surprised, and greatly pleased, that so many North Carolinians have indicated a considerable interest in our prayer group. We have had numerous inquiries. A gentleman in Asheville wrote: "I find it reassuring to hear that you Senators meet for regular worship." A lady in Rocky Mount said, "Please tell us more about it. Who comes? Who conducts the meeting? How long does it last?"

Several North Carolinians wanted to know if they could attend when they're in Washington.

TWENTY There are about 20 of us who attend, and almost all of us have nearly perfect attendance records. For me, it is the highlight of the week.

The Prayer Breakfast was started a number of years ago, and up until the time he was shot, Senator Stennis of Mississippi was the leader of the group. While Senator Stennis is recovering in Walter Reed Hospital (and, incidentally, we get regular reports from him - he is doing well), Senator Cliff Hansen of Wyoming has been presiding. Each of us takes our turn in leading the discussion.

The Prayer Breakfast is held in the Vandenberg Room on the first floor of the Capitol. We meet promptly at 8:30, have a quick breakfast, and then proceed with the lesson and discussion. The regular participants are about evenly divided between Democrats and Republicans.

Because the room is so small, only Senators are regularly in attendance. There are, however, a few exceptions. The Chaplain of the Senate, Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, always comes. Billy Graham has attended a few times when he was in Washington. But mostly the group consists of Senators and former Senators.

Former Senators who often attend include Homer Ferguson of Michigan, Frank Lausche of Ohio, and Caleb Boggs of Delaware. Senator B. Everett Jordan comes when he is in Washington, and we are always glad to see him and other former Senators.

Since Committee meetings begin at 10 o'clock, the Prayer Breakfast is concluded about 9:30 or shortly thereafter.

CURTIS At a recent Prayer Breakfast, Senator Carl Curtis of Nebraska, was the discussion leader. His subject was, "Why I Believe." Senator Curtis is a man of great faith, and has often been described as a "born-again Christian." Perhaps you would be interested in a few excerpts from his message:

"Faith is a growing thing. It is not static . . . The eternal truths of Christianity are supported by everything that happens."

"In the first place, I believe that there has to be a Creator. Just as there can't be a garden without a gardener, this marvelous universe in which we live had to be created."

"God has revealed himself to man. Christianity is not man-made . . . The Old Testament is a continuous story of man reaching for God, but of God revealing Himself to man . . . Christ came to reveal God."

"I believe in God, and in Jesus Christ as God, because I have that feeling within. I have experienced Him. He has guided me and helped me far beyond my expectations, and far beyond anything I could possibly deserve."

In concluding his discussion, Senator Curtis recited the words of that great hymn, "How Great Thou Art," written in Sweden about 1885 by Rev. Carl Boberg:

*O Lord my God, what I am in awe some wonder Consider all the worlds Thy hands have made,
I see the stars, I hear the rolling thunder
Thy power thro' out the universe displayed.
Then sings my soul, my Saviour God, to Thee
How great Thou art, how great Thou art!
Then sings my soul, my Saviour God, to Thee
How great Thou art, how great Thou art!*

U. S. Jaycees Launch Campaign For Responsible Drinking

For the first time since prohibition, a national leadership organization had dedicated itself to work for greater awareness and understanding of drinking problems in our society.

The United States Jaycees have adopted a major resolution calling for responsible drinking by those who drink alcohol . . . and for acceptance of the individual's right not to drink.

The campaign will go into action in 6,700 Jaycee communities all over the country. The sensible drinking effort will include public service messages for television, newspapers, radio, and movie theaters as well as posters, bumper stickers, newsletter articles and reproduction prints, and a pamphlet of guidelines for responsible drinking. The pamphlet will include the truth about some popular drinking myths, suggestions for helping friends with drinking problems, and tips on sensible drinking. It will also contain helpful hints for the host and the hostess who serve alcohol.

The United States Jaycees is a young men's civic organization devoted to human improvement. Recognizing the growing toll of alcoholism, drunken driving, and other drinking problems, the Jaycees passed this resolution:

Whereas, The United States Jaycees, comprised of 325,000 young men in 6,700 chapters, has undertaken pioneering and historic actions in the area of alcohol abuse and alcoholism prevention, and

Whereas, The United States Jaycees seek to create awareness and understanding about the drug alcohol, and

Whereas, We respect an individual's personal, private decision to drink responsibly if he so chooses; and just as importantly, respect a person's decision not to drink, now

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that the United States Jaycees, concerned with human personality, growth, and development, faithfully promote Responsible Drinking Principles and Guidelines regarding alcohol's use in our society, and encourage their acceptance by the American people.

illness, and the Jaycees are convinced that when enough people come to know this, alcoholism recovery rates will zoom.

Although a vast majority of the 100 million Americans who choose to drink use alcohol responsibly, there are about 9 million alcoholic Americans today. And more than half our traffic fatalities involve alcohol.

In their campaign, the Jaycees hope to enlist strong support from young people, elected officials, business and labor leaders, clergy, doctors, and other influential groups.

Young people are of special interest. The young are prepared and educated carefully for adult privileges and responsibilities such as driving, voting, and earning a living, but very little attention is given to teaching young people responsible practices and attitudes about drinking. Honest and open discussion Before young people begin drinking is a Jaycee goal.

The Jaycees recognize that parents and the family unit can be among the best and early examples of responsible living including responsible drinking.

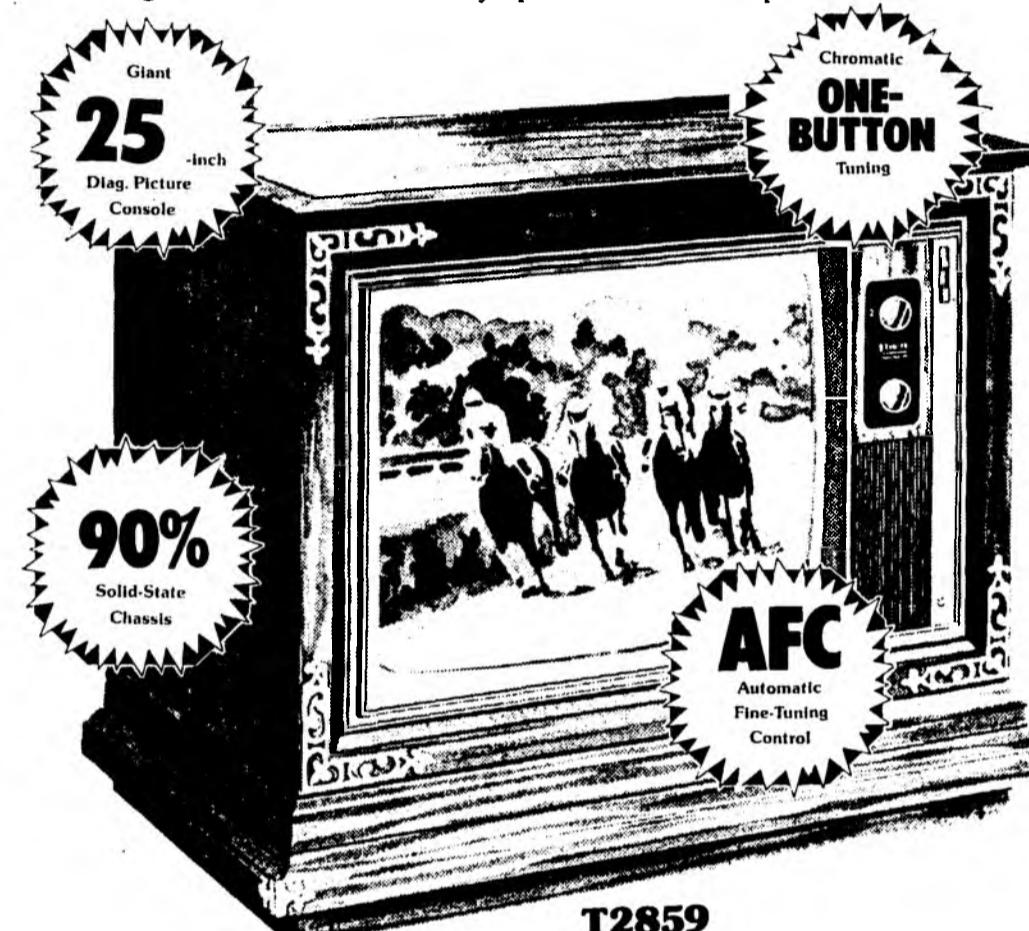

The United States Jaycees new responsible program is called "Operation THRESHOLD". The alcohol education effort is made possible by a grant from HEB's National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Taking a cue from the handful of growers who proved last year that automatic harvesters work, flue-cured tobacco farmers are mechanizing as rapidly as manufacturers can build the equipment.

The three makers of the tobacco combine indicate that they stopped taking orders early last fall due to a buying rush and limited manufacturing facilities.

It is estimated that the three companies manufacturing the automatic harvesters will have a total of around 400 of the $15,000 to $16,000 machines in the fields by harvest time.

There were an estimated 70 combines in use throughout the flue-cured belt in 1972, the first year that the machines were in practical farm use in significant numbers.

While the sale of combines is the most significant development, there are also increased sales of practically all types of tobacco mechanization equipment. This includes bulk curing barns, topping machines, harvesting aides, stitching machines and two-row transplanters with fertilizer attachments.

One major manufacturer reported that it has sold out of virtually every line of its equipment even though production facilities have been increased 120 percent since the beginning of last year.

It is believed that the total supply of bulk barns from all sources has already been committed for this year. As many as 4,000 new ones may be sold during 1973 throughout the flue-cured area. Even at that, there will only be around 13,500 barns in use - enough to cure only 10 to 12 percent of total production.

Rupert Watkins, extension engineer at North Carolina State University, said the rush to mechanize has been influenced by several factors, not the least of which was last year's strong market price for tobacco.

"Growers made money last year and the first thing they're going to do with it is mechanize," said Watkins. "Labor costs and associated problems continue to mount, so the growers want to go as far as they can in eliminating these headaches," the engineer added.

Other factors fueling the mechanization move are the expansion of the size of operating units through lease and transfer of allotments, the arrival of the combine and the bright outlook for another season of high prices.

Watkins sees the continued demand for equipment such as harvesting aides and stitching machines as an indication that some growers don't have any plans to completely mechanize in the near future. He suggested that many of these are probably older growers and those who will continue to operate small, family-size units.

The N.C. State University engineer predicts that the mechanization trend may be just as strong or stronger next year if the current crop is a good one and sells well. A bad year, on the other hand, could cool things off a bit. Present signs suggest a good crop and a strong market.

The reason this column didn't appear last week: the writer was busy becoming a grandmother for the third time, with the arrival of Andrea Victoria Nester, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jim Nester. Mother and baby are fine and returned home from the hospital on Friday.

Lisa Smith spent the weekend with Kathy and Sherry Smith.

Judy Howell underwent extensive dental surgery at the Forsyth Memorial Hospital last week. She is recuperating now at home.

Mrs. Annie Cope Smith formerly of this community underwent major surgery at Rowan Memorial Hospital on Monday.

Mrs. Ervin Hutchens is getting around on crutches these days; aftermath of a fall she sustained on the steps a few weeks ago. Watch! Those steps, we've had several reports of injuries on steps recently.

The sixth anniversary of Green Meadows church will be observed on this Sunday, July 22. Rev. Claxton Hall will be guest speaker for the morning worship hour. All members and friends are invited to bring a lunch to share at the noon hour.

Deaths And Funerals

MRS. W.G. MURCHISON
Mrs. Lydia Taynton Murchison died last Sunday evening, July 8, 1973, at Elgin, Illinois.

Mrs. Murchison was preceded in death by her husband, William Gaither Murchison, Colonel, U.S. Army, Retired, who died on his farm near Pino in 1951.

Mrs. Murchison would have been 92 years old in August of this year. She is survived by a daughter, Mary M. Johnson of Phoenix, Arizona, and three sons, Dr. John T. Murchison of Arlington, Texas, Kenneth of Shaker Heights, Ohio, and William G. of Glen Ellyn, Illinois, with whom she made her home in recent years.

Mrs. Murchison was born Lydia Julia Taynton on Aug. 14, 1881 in England and moved as an infant with her family to Winnipeg, Canada. One of her younger sisters was the first white child born in one of the Canadian areas where the family lived and the local Indians would often appear wanting to see this baby. When she was 16 years old, the family moved to Vancouver, British Columbia, and around the turn of the century she went to Skagway, Alaska, where she was secretary to a Canadian attorney who handled many legal affairs for gold prospectors. She met and married her husband in Skagway and followed him about the world in his career as an Army Officer until his retirement in 1937. At that time they returned to his place of birth on his Davie County farm where she continued to make her home until 1958.

Mrs. Murchison was buried with her husband at Arlington National Cemetery near Washington, D.C., and funeral services were held in the Chapel at the cemetery Friday, July 13th, 1973.

The above account of the death of his mother was sent to this newspaper by Kenneth Murchison, 3464 Milverton Road, Shaker Heights, Ohio 44120.

WILLIAM HAIRSTON

William Thomas Hairston, who died last week at the age of 96, was chairman of the church's trustee board for 40 years and secretary of the church for almost the same amount of time. He also was a deacon.

Mr. Hairston died at the Haven Nursing and Convalescent Home. He had spent most of his life on the Cooleemee Plantation near Advance in Davie County.

The original Hairstons took their name from their masters, the Peter Hairstons. The Cooleemee Plantation was built and staffed by more than 300 slaves.

The William T. Hairstons first spoke their marriage vows Aug. 6, 1889, at the Tyro Post Office in Davidson County, and then repeated them at a party at the Hotel Robert E. Lee in Winston-Salem in 1968 on the 70th anniversary of their wedding. President Nixon sent them a telegram of good wishes on this occasion.

William Hairston said at the time that 70 years of married life may seem to be a long time, but he did not think it was so remarkable.

"If the Lord helps you, you can do anything you want to do," he said then.

Mrs. Hairston preceeded her husband in death. He is survived by three daughters and five sons.

GOD'S FIVE MINUTES

HOW TO BE IMPORTANT

Recently a group of young people from a local church in the States went to the Republic of Honduras to engage in a program of health education, inoculation of children and adults against disease and personal Christian witnessing.

The results were outstanding! People in most areas flocked into the clinics for their vaccinations and health bulletins and lectures. Thousands were helped both physically and spiritually. At the conclusion of the great adventure, one young girl said, "I don't want to go home, I'm important in Honduras. I'm not at home."

How often we overlook the value of our youth. Here in America there are places where her help and love were desperately needed. But no one had fired her imagination and desire enough to cause her to go out and look for a place where she "could be important."

That's why the challenge of Jesus means so much to the Christian soldier — "Come, follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." There is eternal importance attached to serving God anywhere!

Summer Fun At Rich Park

The summer recreation program at Rich Park, Mocksville is in the midst of the sixth week of a proposed eight week program.

Although the unusual amount of rainy weather has been a hindrance to the program, especially the outside sports activities, Director Clyde Studevent says "attendance has been good."

The program activities consist of a strong Pee Wee Baseball program with six teams, and basically all are evenly matched. There are four little league baseball teams, one pony league team and four girls softball teams.

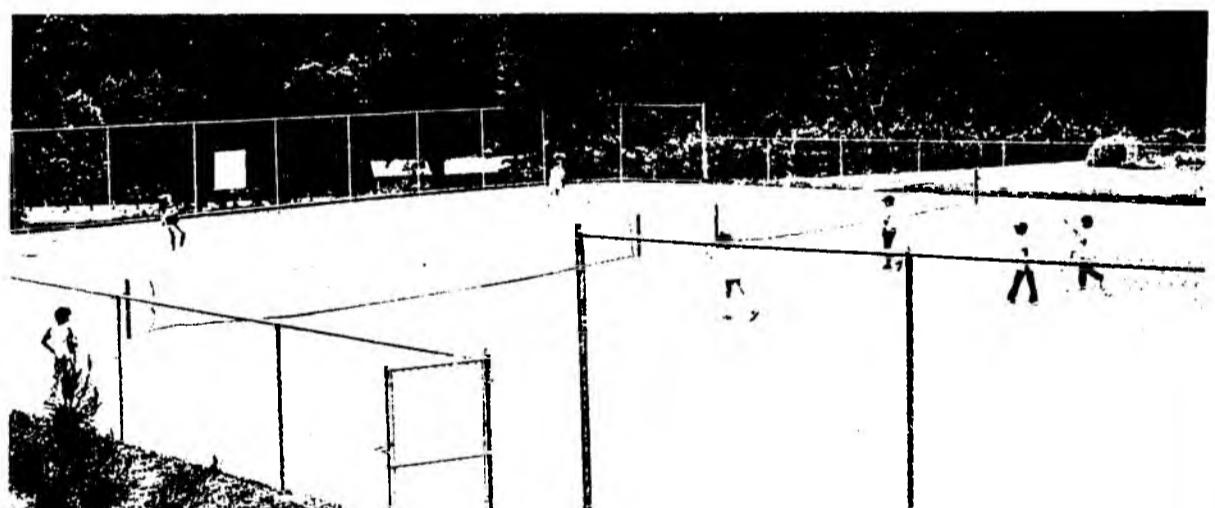

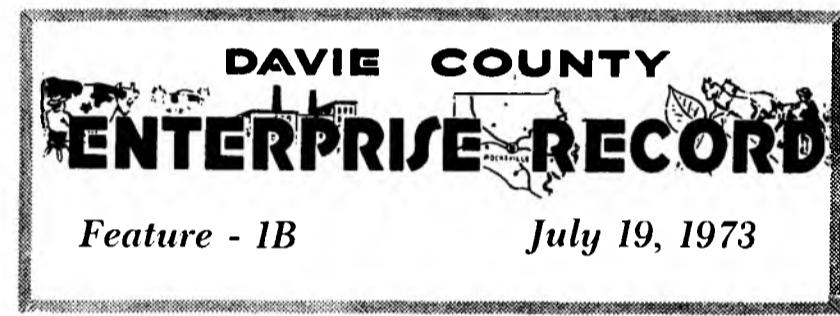

An excellent arts and crafts program is conducted daily for various age groups under the instruction of Mrs. Linda Hoyle and Miss Linda Bowden.

A tennis tournament is scheduled for next week for the 12-years-of-age and under age group and another for the 14-and-under group.

The tennis courts, which have recently been re-worked, are one of the greatest improvements made this year at the park. The courts were re-surfaced and painted and new nets were installed.

Terry Smoot was presented a trophy last week as winner of the ping pong tournament, after defeating the second place player, Doug Fowler.

Studevent says his assistant director, Danny Davis, has contributed a great deal, also, to making the program successful thus far.

The tennis courts at Rich Park, which have been recently re-worked for the first time in years, have only been available for public use during the past two weeks.

Crawfords Attend Minister's Week

"He saves the best till the last." Taking his theme from the Scriptural story of the wedding feast at Cana, Dr. Winston Pearce, writer in residence at the college, launched last week the first annual Senior Minister's Week at Campbell College.

Dr. Pearce, who has himself retired as Baptist minister and seminary teacher, illustrated in various ways his own conviction that the post-retirement years can be the most gratifying time of life.

Present for the first session were 47 former pastors and pastor's wives; and included in the group were Rev. and Mrs. C.E. Crawford of Advance.

Directing the conference is Dr. John Bunn, head of the college department of religion. Since continued good health is important to assuring a productive and satisfying retirement interval, Dr. Bunn explained, the four-day conference has been planned for preservation of good health -- physical, mental and spiritual.

Speakers who will be addressing during the week problems of health and other concerns common to senior citizens include Dr. H.A. Matthews, director of medical services, Western Carolina University; Dr. William Poe, Duke University Medical Center; I. Lee Parker of Raleigh, vice-president and estate consultant, Wachovia Bank and Trust Company; and Dr. Henry Burlington, pastor of University Baptist Church, Chapel Hill.

In the group registered Monday afternoon were twelve couples, seven pastors' widows, and sixteen former pastors who are now single. Numbers of these were attending the conference on scholarships provided by local churches. Most available to assist in underwriting the expenses of individuals and couples who wished to attend was one anonymous gift of $1000, Dr. Bunn reported.

Representative of Baptist churches that underwrote expenses of living former pastors was the first Baptist Church of Morehead City which provided scholarships for three couples (all of its living former pastors and their wives) -- Rev. and Mrs. A.P. Stephens of Lumberton, Rev. and Mrs. John H. Bunn of Goldsboro and Rev. and Mrs. J.B. Willis of Hamlet (Dr. Willis, who is ill, could not attend).

Dr. Bunn called significant the interest of the conferees in the medical, dental, and diatetic services planned for the assistance of the group. Thirty-four registered to take advantage of the free medical clinic provided for the conference by the North Carolina Department of Health Services, the Harnett County Health Department, the Senior Citizens Council of Harnett County, and the college health staff under Dr. Bruce Blackmon, Campbell director of Health Services.

Dr. Burgess P. Marshbanks, Jr., dental surgeon of Lillington, a trustee of the college provided a dental examination.

Nineteen of the women had enrolled by Monday for the dietary clinic to be conducted Thursday under direction of Lenore Tuck, Chairman of the Campbell department of home economics.

The conference is sponsored by 250-member Committee of Ministers for Campbell College. The committee has planned its own annual meeting to coincide with the last two days of the senior ministers' gathering, Thursday and Friday. Dr. Tom Freeman, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dunn and president of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention, is chairman of the Committee of Ministers.

From the rocky coast of Maine to the Navajo Indian villages of Arizona the Bicentennial is bursting with festivals and Americans celebrating life in a multitude of diverse traditions.

Curb Service For The Customer

... And the price is right! "Only two bits for a shoe shine," and Mark Odom and Phillip Sisk go so far as to provide "curb service" for their customers. The boys agree that they are making good money. The first day on the job, they had made $2.50 in a couple of hours. Phillip, who quite proudly says he is a preacher's son, commented that he thought "this helped business." Although the boys haven't fully decided how they will spend all the loot, Phillip says he "sure would like to make enough to buy a driving mower." The above customer is Lloyd Brown of Mocksville. America Plans To Celebrate Its 200th Birthday-Anniversary a past to remember / a future to mold

A space mission to Mars . . . clean-up America . . . a new wing added to the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art . . . a subway system for our Nation's Capitol.

These are just a few of many diverse goals Americans have already set for their Nation's Bicentennial.

Three short years from this Fourth of July, the United States will be 200 years old and Americans in every community -- in all corners of the Nation -- will be celebrating the anniversary of the unique American experience.

Where will the real activity and commemoration take place? Who can participate? How will people be celebrating?

Of course, there are no simple answers to these questions. The Bicentennial commemoration will be as diverse as the Nation and its heritage -- as different as its people and places -- and as all encompassing as imaginations and aspirations of 210 million people.

One thing is certain -- the Bicentennial will truly be something for everyone. It will be more than a giant fireworks display. It is a commemoration of a National heritage with an aim to improve the quality of life for the future. This idea is embodied in a National Bicentennial theme -- "A past to remember, A future to mold."

The Bicentennial belongs to all Americans, not just those in the 13 Original States. Every village and city can celebrate. Plans and blue prints for unique local festivities are already well developed.

On the Fourth of July, 1972 President Nixon extended an unprecedented invitation to the world to visit America during the Bicentennial. In announcing the invitation to the world, the President stated that the Bicentennial was a time for America to say to the nations of the world, "You helped to make us what we are. Come and see what wonders your countrymen have worked in this new country of ours. Come and let us say thank you. Come and join in our celebration of a proud past. Come and share our dreams of a brighter future."

In conjunction with the President's invitation to foreign governments and visitors, a special "Invitation to the World Panel" serving the Bicentennial has adopted major travel and hospitality guidelines to facilitate American and foreign travelers traveling and protect your home with Farm Bureau homeowners insurance while you're away. information and referral centers. The extension of low-cost accommodations such as hostels and Y's and expansion of camping facilities. The general development of a wider variety of accommodations for the Bicentennial.

The use by all Americans and foreign travelers of medical information identity card containing an abbreviated medical history, and a program of temporary travelers aid and low-cost health insurance.

A campaign to encourage U.S. organizations with foreign affiliations to extend invitations to their counterparts and to facilitate their travel in the U.S. for the Bicentennial.

With thousands of Bicentennial activities occurring throughout the nation in the next three years, the need for coordination of these projects and for a shared communications system has become imperative. To meet this demand the Bicentennial Commission hopes to employ a massive national computer information system permitting remote access to reports of Bicentennial activities in every U.S. community.

By making available information concerning all Bicentennial activities wherever they occur the computer system will ensure that the general public as well as special interest groups will be kept informed. It will provide an overview to all aspects of the celebration, as well as easy access to information for groups with specific interests.

But what about Mr. and Mrs. America and the two kids all packed in the family car or campervan? What can they see during their travels that relate to the Bicentennial and to the rich heritage covering these past 200 years?

The answer runs the gamut of their imaginations. Through one aspect of the Bicentennial, Festival USA, tourists are encouraged to see Americans do what they do, wherever they do it, and to participate wherever possible. They can visit a Spanish-American festival in Southern Texas; an Old World farm reproduction in Wisconsin or an International Film Festival in San Francisco.

From the rocky coast of Maine to the Navajo Indian villages of Arizona the Bicentennial is bursting with festivals and Americans celebrating life in a multitude of diverse traditions.

Inevitably, the big urban centers of the East that played a major role during America's early history will play a major role in the Bicentennial as well. Philadelphia will have several focal points, including Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell. Among the city's priorities for the celebration are restoration of historic buildings in Fairmount Park, new programs for the city's cultural institutions, neighborhood clean-up programs and the development of a model system for providing health care.

Boston 200, that city's master plan for the Bicentennial commemoration, is divided into five program areas with "The City Itself as Exhibit" as the central theme. Each are elements of a different aspect of city life.

City game: the city as the exhibit; Festival American: the city as cultural center; physical and environmental improvements; the city as liveable environment; tourism development; the city as destination. Visitor Services: the city as host. Boston 200 will begin officially on April 20, 1975 (the 200th anniversary of Paul Revere's ride.)

New York City is concentrating on tourism and conventions in 1976. A major part of the Bicentennial commemoration in our largest city will concentrate on the redevelopment of the South Street Seaport Museum, home of one to the nation's oldest ports and several historic ships. Part of the Seaport project will be a special Showboat featuring children's drama lessons and performances, as well as a special floating school for the deaf that will sail to all five New York Boroughs.

The Nation's Capital is preparing for an influx of visitors with a new National Visitors Center, monument and mall improvements, new museums and parks and a Bicentennial Garden. High on the list of Washington plans is urban redevelopment including the building of Fort Lincoln as a major New Town in town, the building of the main campuses of two new public colleges, the rebuilding of the riot corridors, the development of parks as recreation areas, and the redevelopment of the famed Pennsylvania Avenue Corridor.

But the Bicentennial belongs to small towns, too. On the East Coast travelers can visit a variety of Revolutionary War sites that will feature special commemorations. Lexington and Concord, Yorktown and Colonial Williamsburg and many other sites are planning events. Some twenty Revolutionary War sites have already been awarded Bicentennial recognition.

New Jersey is planning to redevelop a 500-acre site known as Liberty Park facing the famed Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor. As part of New Jersey's contribution to the Bicentennial, the property will be converted from old rail yards and docks to recreation areas with theatres and displays.

The myriads of travelers to Florida during the winter months of 1976 will have many extra added Bicentennial events to visit. Miami is building an Inter-American Exposition and the State is planning a trail to connect some 75 important historical sites.

The state of Virginia, rich in Revolutionary heritage, is scheduling a special historical center for tourists in Yorktown, as well as information and exhibition centers at Charlottesville and Alexandria.

From Memphis to Mobile, from Natchez to St. Joe all across the south and midwest elaborate festivities, pageants, fairs and festivities are on the calendar for unused churches and public buildings to community centers.

A Plains Indian Culture Center is being readied for the Bicentennial at the Oklahoma College of Liberal Arts. There's also a program to highlight Cherokee Indian heritage and culture.

In Arizona, Indians are also developing projects highlighting their role in the nation's history.

And the citizens of Wyoming are working on an Indian art and cultural center on the Wind River Indian Reservation (Wyoming, leader for Women's Rights may also construct a Hall of Fame for Women for the Bicentennial).

To complete this multi-colored highlights of the Bicentennial the far Western states are planning many diverse programs, several of which are related to cleaning up America and leaving a permanent residual for our Third Century. Beginning in mid-1974 Spokane will open an international exposition on the environment to honor the city's 100th anniversary and to salute the Bicentennial Park improvement is also slated for Seattle.

And in Oregon, the park system is to be extended along the Willamette River, which will be cleaned up by citizens in honor of the Bicentennial. Mobile historical exhibits are also being prepared to tour throughout Oregon. To facilitate the citizens of Idaho that state is considering the convenient of camping was not one of quiet appreciation of nature.

sion of unused churches and public buildings to community centers.

A few years ago, one could sit around a campfire and hear the birds chirping and the creek bubbling. The only "noise" was the occasional sound of an ax splitting firewood or the distant laughter of children.

Now, from roughly five o'clock in the morning until midnight, all you can hear is the constant putt-putt-putting of two and four cycle engines. I should point out that, with few exceptions, those who used their motorized vehicles took considerable care to drive them as quietly as possible while in camp, but the sound of 30-40 motorcycles -- even politely idling -- is not conducive to calm nerves.

For the families who go camping to escape the bustle of the city, there seems to be one alternative. That is to camp in areas devoid of other campers, and finding such an area is not easy task.

Another solution might be to a sort of woodland "keeping up with the Joneses".

For instance, I took my family to a big campground this past weekend, and although I have always considered our equipment fairly sophisticated (we have a gas stove, lantern, tents, sleeping bags and cooler), I was amazed to find that most of our neighbors in the campground felt that we were really "roughing it".

By their standards, I suppose we were. The family next to us (maybe it was two families camping together) had at least $30,000 worth of gear, and that is no exaggeration.

They had two trucks pulling large fifth wheel campers which are more like mobile homes than anything else. They also had -- I counted them -- eight motorcycles and trail bikes.

Every member of the party, including the kids, had at least some form of two-wheel conveyance.

It is likely that many areas will be closed to off-road motorized travel -- some are now. No one would argue that trail bikes and cycles are fun to ride, but the rapidly growing sport of riding them in wilderness areas needs some looking into.

One thing is certain. Camping has changed. Whether those changes are good or not depends upon how you look at it.

I, for one, think something wonderful is rapidly being lost.

CAMPING: MORE THAN NOISE AND STATUS?

There was a time when camping was a fairly simple thing. You pitched a tent, cooked over a bed of glowing coals and spent very little time fooling with your gear. Camping was a way of feeling nature's pulse at close hand, and nobody paid much attention to the gear that made it possible.

Over the past decade this has changed. How you camp is now more important than why you camp. The whole concept has changed, and the camper is no longer a pure-minded Thoreau seeking escape from the ravages of civilization.

Perhaps it is an unfair judgement, but it seems that more of today's campers are interested in the social status conveyed by owning certain types of equipment than anything else.

The new ethic seems to be a sort of woodland "keeping up with the Joneses".

Davie In State Babe Ruth Finals

Play This Weekend In Asheville For State Title

The Babe Ruth All-Stars of Coach Dale Ijames advanced to the state finals to be held July 20-23 in Asheville at the North Buncombe High School.

The Davie club advanced as one of the four finalists in the state by capturing the district title last weekend in Charlotte.

In Asheville, Davie will join the host team Parkway Conference; eastern champion, Kinston; and mountain champion, South Buncombe, in the battle for the state title and the right to represent North Carolina in the Southeast regional to be held later this month in Nashville, Tenn.

Davie opened the Piedmont Tournament by playing last year's state champions, Clark Griffith. Davie, behind the hit pitching of Paul Ijames and the big bat of Jeff Ward came off with a 3-0 victory. Paul Ijames was in command throughout the game, allowing only one man as far as second base and fanning 8. Davie got on the scoreboard in the first inning on a double by Ijames, and an infield hit by McDaniel, and a run scoring single by Robert Anderson. Ricky Allred scored the second run on a single by Craig Seaford. Davie's final run came in the inning when Clark Griffith bunched a walk and three singles into their pair of runs.

The championship game was played Sunday night. The Davie boys bounced back from their poor hitting performance of the previous night by quickly jumping on Clark Griffith's pitching for three hits in the first inning. The hitting and aggressive base running, combined with Charlotte errors, produced 6 runs before the rains came to temporarily suspend play at the end of five innings. The game was completed Monday.

Randy McDaniel hurled the first five innings, surviving a shaky first inning when he had bases loaded situation with one out. However, he fanned two straight batters to quieten the attack. McDaniel fanned five batters and surrendered only one base on balls and allowed only four hits in his five innings. Paul Ijames came back Monday night to complete the game by shutting out Charlotte for the final two innings. Randy McDaniel picked up the win.

Dave batted 12 hits to go with their 9 runs. Pacing the attack was Randy McDaniel with 2 hits, and Charles Blackwood and Jeff Ward with 3 hits each. Dave scored four runs in the first inning with the big blow being a triple by Robert Anderson. Randy Brooks knocked in a run in the fourth inning and scored with two Charlotte errors. Charles Blackwood cracked a two-run single in the fifth and a run scoring single in the seventh to finish the Dave scoring. Blackwood was the big man in the RBI department, pushing across 4 runs.

The biggest factor in the Davie victories was the excellent defense played by the

The junior tennis tournament will begin Monday at Rich Park.

Play will be for those 12-years-of-age and under and 14-years-of-age and under.

All those desiring to enter should contact Clyde Studevant by Friday of this week.

Football Practice To Begin On August 6th.

Football practice for 10th, 11th and 12th grades at the Davie High School will start on August 6th.

Coach Bill Peeler announced that during this first week, August 6-10, practice would be held from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., with light equipment.

Twice-a-day practice is scheduled to start on August 13th.

"All players must have a physical examination. Players should drop by the Davie High School gym and pick up their physical exam blanks and be fitted for a helmet by July 27th," said Coach Peeler.

"Insurance for each player has risen to $35.50 which makes it necessary for each upper classman to pay $10," said Coach Peeler.

David Pearson has to feel like a conquering knight on a great white horse every time he crawls into the Wood Brothers Mercury for a Grand National Stock Car.

Pearson's proficiency at winning may best be pointed out by his record of eight victories and a second-place finish in nine races leading into the halfway point of the season.

It seems that Pearson and the Wood Brothers pit their talents to outrun, outlast, or outfling the best of the rest in NASCAR's heralded Winston Cup championship series.

Although he won't be lacking for competition, Pearson would be an easy 2-1 favorite for the Dixie 500 on July 22 if race drivers were listed on pari-mutuel boards in the manner of race horses.

Pearson's competition for Atlanta International Raceway's second and final major league stock car race of the season will include such famous names as Richard Petty, Bobby Allison, Buddy Baker, Bobby Isaac, Cale Yarborough, Connie Allison and Gordon Johncock.

But the people who plunk their money down are long on current performance, and Pearson is getting the job done in about every way imaginable.

Pearson just flat outran everybody for his first triumph of the season, at Rockingham, N.C., leading all but one lap. Two weeks later he outdueled Cale Yarborough, Richard Petty, Buddy Baker and Bobby Isaac in one of the year's more

Ground Hog Is Caught

A large ground hog, weighing 15 to 18 lbs, was trapped last week by C.K. McDaniel on a terrace in a wheat field on his farm located on the Godfrey Road.

The groundhog was seen during the cutting of wheat. Mr. McDaniel set a large "rabbit-hollow" type of trap, baited it with a biscuit, and caught the groundhog.

Mr. McDaniel said he was feeding the animal on cabbage, bread and water.

"It doesn't appear to be vicious, but I haven't tried to handle and I don't plan to handle the animal", said Mr. McDaniel.

He said it was the first live groundhog he had ever seen. He plans to turn it loose or will sell it to anyone who might be interested.

Reds Win In Pee Wee Baseball

The Reds shut-out the Braves 12-0 last Wednesday night in the Mocksville Pee Wee League.

Bobby Allison had Pearson outclassed in the speed department it seemed at Darlington. But Allison smacked the wall and broke a hub while dueling with Pearson and the white and candy-red Mercury had another easy win.

Pearson avoided a multi-car pileup at Talladega, Ala. and wasn't seriously challenged. Buddy Baker shelved his season-long hard-luck jinx long enough to beat Pearson at Charlotte, but Baker's mechanical trouble opened the door for Pearson again at Dover, Del.

The Wood Brothers got in the act at Michigan International Speedway, providing Pearson with such swift pit stops that he was able to offset Baker's obvious swifter pace on the race track.

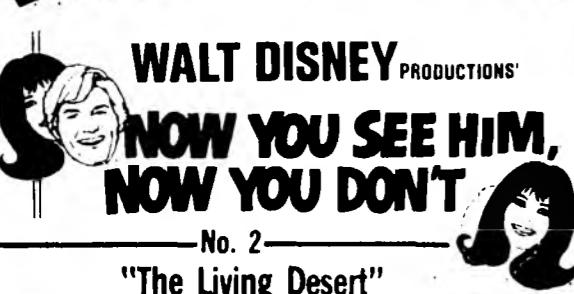

"You've got to feel that your chances to win are equal or better than most of the others when you're in the Wood Brothers car", said Pearson.

"I'm not doing anything different than I've done all these years of driving. Things are just working out for us, and I hope it goes for a long, long time."

Tickets are now on sale at the Atlanta International Raceway, Ticket office, P.O. Box 221, Hampton, Ga. 30228.

N.C. Picks Up Extra Interstate Funds

FREEBIES, ALMOST Because some other states were not able to spend all of their federal highway allocations last year, North Carolina picked up an unexpected interstate highway project.

The Tar Heel State had $75.6 million in federal funds in fiscal 1973. Because it has its federal aid projects ready to go to contract, the state was able to put all these funds into road construction.

But some other states were not so fortunate and didn't have enough projects ready to construct, and so were unable to spend all of their federal allocation. When this happens, the money is returned to the federal government which then prorates it among other states who have projects ready to construct.

So North Carolina got an extra $4.5 million in interstate funds and immediately asked for bids on the last section of I-77 in Mecklenburg County. The project is in the July letting list and bids will be opened to determine the low bidder on July 24.

When construction starts on this project, then work will be going on that will complete I-77 all the way from the South Carolina line to the Elkin Bypass. More work, carrying the road from Elkin toward the Virginia state line will be started during fiscal 1974, which began July 1, 1973.

Highway officials pointed out, however, that getting the unexpected interstate project didn't make up for the fact that some $26 million in federal aid money was withheld last year and that the state got that much less than the Congress had appropriated for North Carolina road construction.

Still North Carolina doesn't get a $4.5 million windfall every day . . . or even every year. CHANGED ROUTE Motorists traveling between Raleigh and Chapel Hill, using Interstate 40 for a part of the way, will have to take a slightly different route in the future.

Travelers have been leaving the interstate road at its interchange with Old Raleigh Road and traveling a few hundred yards to get on NC 54, which goes into Chapel Hill. But that interchange has fallen victim to a federal highway policy that limits the number of exits that may be available on interstate routes.

On Monday, July 16, state forces were scheduled to start removing the ramps there. Now motorists will have to enter or exit at the Davis Drive interchange, which is located just west of the Old Raleigh Road.

It isn't a major change for drivers and won't add to the time the trip takes. But it will require some getting used to by drivers who make the trip often.

Also, drivers on I-85 traveling north from the Charlotte and Greensboro areas now have a quicker way to get to Raleigh, then by using US 70.

They can exit I-85 at the Duke Street Interchange on the Durham Bypass and go through Durham on Gregson Street, to the Durham Expressway.

Motorists say it can cut 15 minutes off the trip from Greensboro to Raleigh.

Drivers going the other way, from Raleigh toward Greensboro, can follow I-40 through the Research Triangle Park, where it becomes the Durham Expressway, exit at Duke Street, and travel on Duke Street to I-85.

Duke and Gregson Streets are parallel one-way streets.

BUCKEL-UP State employees have gotten a reminder from the Department of Transportation. Signs have been placed in state-owned parking lots reminding employees to fasten their safety belts. The move was started by Boyd Miller, Administrator of the Transportation Safety Program.

"The signs are a reminder for workers to fasten their belts, not just when they're in state cars on official business," Miller said. "We hope they'll follow the suggestion when they're in their private cars. We don't think state employees need reminding any more than anyone else, just think safety begins at home."

It is hoped that municipal and county governments will embark on a similar program for their employees.

BICYCLE PATHS Last year was a banner year for many folks, but especially for the bicycle industry. In 1972 Americans bought more bicycles than automobiles. Many areas are viewing this increased activity with an eye to the future. The city of Winston-Salem has included $100,000 in its proposed 1973-74 budget to begin a public bicycle path network. As noted in published reports, the proposed item is not a recreational item.

With this setup the four scoop nets span a comparable area on the bottom as the two large nets, but the boat is able to pull faster. According to reports from Atlantic, the new arrangement has other good and potential features. For one, the new rig has been picking up much less scrap, scrap being fish shrimpers cannot sell and consequently dump back overboard. Through the years scrap fish taken by trawl boats have always been an argumentative point. The fish, mainly small spot, croaker, and sea trout, are either killed or injured and the waste can at times be large.

And, the fishermen report they can control the depth the nets fish—they can fish bottom, mid water, or surface. With this ability on a conventional N.C. boat, fishermen could possibly catch species of fish they had not been able to before, or more of the ones they have been catching. During cold months when shrimp cannot be caught in N.C. waters, some fishermen use their shrimp boats to catch fish, crabs, scallops, or even oysters.

Preliminary reports sound good here. Other N.C. boats are getting rigged with twin sets of twins, according to reports from Atlantic. Two boats from Oriental were reported last week working the Neuse River with similar rigs.

Gulf shrimpers have just recently refined the method so the nets are easy to handle. According to the University of Georgia marine resources extension program, which has a booklet out on the subject, Gulf shrimpers have been experimenting with it since about 1958.

budget proposal, but one in the transportation section of the Twin City's budget.

The proposal calls for a ten-mile protected bikeway belt system which would link residential areas with downtown and parks.

TRAFFIC HAZARDS As the harvest season goes into high gear for North Carolina roads more than at any other time of the year.

These slow moving vehicles are more frequently seen on the state's vast secondary road system than on the primary roads.

Traffic records at the Department of Motor Vehicles show that the losses from collisions between slow moving equipment and faster moving motor vehicles will be approximately $1,000,000 this year.

Department spokesmen cautioned motorists to slow to speeds less than 30 miles per hour upon sighting a farm vehicle on a road, or about to enter a road. The spokesman also cautioned motorists to be aware of the fact that many farm machine operators will not hear a horn due to the noise begin made by the machine.

During the next few months many youngsters with little or no traffic training or experience will be legally operating farm equipment, so motorists should "expect the unexpected" from farm equipment operators in order to avoid a collision.

Still North Carolina doesn't get a $4.5 million windfall every day . . . or even every year.

According to reports from Atlantic, the new arrangement has other good and potential features. For one, the new rig has been picking up much less scrap, scrap being fish shrimpers cannot sell and consequently dump back overboard. Through the years scrap fish taken by trawl boats have always been an argumentative point. The fish, mainly small spot, croaker, and sea trout, are either killed or injured and the waste can at times be large.

And, the fishermen report they can control the depth the nets fish—they can fish bottom, mid water, or surface. With this ability on a conventional N.C. boat, fishermen could possibly catch species of fish they had not been able to before, or more of the ones they have been catching. During cold months when shrimp cannot be caught in N.C. waters, some fishermen use their shrimp boats to catch fish, crabs, scallops, or even oysters.

Preliminary reports sound good here. Other N.C. boats are getting rigged with twin sets of twins, according to reports from Atlantic. Two boats from Oriental were reported last week working the Neuse River with similar rigs.

Gulf shrimpers have just recently refined the method so the nets are easy to handle. According to the University of Georgia marine resources extension program, which has a booklet out on the subject, Gulf shrimpers have been experimenting with it since about 1958.

Waldensian Drama Opens At Valdese

Visitors to the historical drama "From This Day Forward" in Valdese, N.C. this summer may visit free a living outdoor museum of Waldensian life and customs being developed on the amphitheatre grounds.

"From This Day Forward" is the dramatic story of the Waldenses, a group of French-Italian Protestants who suffered religious persecutions in 17th century Europe and came to America in 1893 to found the town of Valdese in the foothills of North Carolina's Blue Ridge Mountains.

"From This Day Forward" will open on July 19 with an expanded schedule of performances. There will be shows each Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evening until August 19 at 8:45 p.m. EDT.

Before performances descendents of the original Waldensian colonists demonstrate the Italian game of Bocce on the amphitheatre Bocce court. Visitors are welcome to learn to play this game, a European version of bowling.

Another item of interest at the theatre is the Tron House, first dwelling built by the Waldenses after their arrival in North Carolina. It has been preserved and refurbished with authentic artifacts.

Costumed Valdese women also staff the amphitheatre giftshop which offers books on Waldensian history, Italian gift items, and objects made by local artists and craftsmen.

In addition to the outdoor museum at the amphitheatre, the Waldensian Museum located in the Waldensian Presbyterian Church is open from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on performance nights.

Hungry visitors will enjoy joining Valdese residents in traditional Waldensian dress on Saturday evenings before show time at the Waldensian spaghetti supper prepared by the local American Legion Auxiliary at the Legion Post Home from 5 to 8 p.m.

Tickets to "From This Day Forward" are $3 for adults and $2 for children under twelve. They may be purchased at the amphitheatre box office before performances or ordered in advance by writing: Old Colony Players, Box 112, Valdese, N.C. 28690.

A visit to Valdese and "From This Day Forward" is a visit not only back in history, but also to another land, as the sights and sounds of Italy and France abound in this community.

The State Highway Patrol is receiving an increasing number of complaints from the citizens of our State concerning unlawful use of loud mufflers. The Patrol is also concerned about trucks failing to secure loads such as gravel, sand and other materials. Many motorists have had broken windshields from this source recently and it also plays a role in causing traffic crashes which can and do take human lives.

Patrol Commander Edwin C. Guy stated today that these matters have been brought to the attention of all Patrol personnel and they will be increasing their surveillance in both these areas. "I urge the cooperation of all highway users in complying with these statutes," said Colonel Guy.

A recent spot check indicated a cost of approximately $150 to replace a windshield on a late model passenger car.

CCB Reports Record Earnings

A new high in total assets, and record-breaking earnings for the first half of the year, will be reported later this week when current dividend checks are mailed to Central Carolina Bank shareholders.

Total assets on June 30 were $282,088,218, a 21 percent increase over the $232,255,386 reported on June 30 last year.

Income after taxes, but before securities gains or losses, was $1,399,109, as compared with $1,271,476 for the same period last year.

CCB shareholders will be told that comparative reports recently issued by leading security analysts show that, among the 12 largest banks of North Carolina, CCB stood first in 1972 in two major earnings ratios, income to capital funds, and income to total assets. "We are quite pleased that, despite the outstanding records made last year, our 1973 earnings are keeping pace," said Paul Wright, Jr., CCB president.

"The sale of 100,000 new CCB shares in December increased shares outstanding from 937,924 to 1,037,924, resulting in per share net income of $1.35 for the first six months of 1973, as compared with $1.36 for the 1972 period."

Wright also reminded shareholders that revisions in Federal Reserve Regulation "Q" call for higher rates of interest to be paid to savings depositors. CCB announced last week that, retroactive to July 1, it was paying these higher rates to its savings account customers.

The Board of Directors on May 8, 1973 declared a quarterly dividend of $1.162 per share payable July 20, 1973 to shareholders of record June 29, 1973.

At UNC Of AshevilleDavie Student Participates In Individualized Degree Program

"Doing your own thing" has a special meaning at the University of North Carolina at Asheville where Miss Nancy Williams of Mocksville and a number of students are opting for specially-designed programs not listed in the catalog.

In operation over a year, UNC-A's individualized degree program route to higher education has allowed students to move into such diverse areas as art therapy, political economics, early childhood education, American studies in history and literature, American political and social behavior and guidance counseling.

A degree program committee appointed by Dr. Roy A. Riggs, vice chancellor for academic affairs, is authorized to waive the fixed University requirements for valid reasons and approve individualized degree programs. Dr. Harry H. Johnston, professor of biology, is the current chairman with representatives from all three major liberal arts divisions represented on the committee.

"The individualized approach provides sufficient flexibility so the student who clearly knows what he wants and does not find it available in the regular departmental degree programs can construct his own program with competent faculty advice," Dr. Riggs said.

"It appeals to students who know what they want, particularly in career or graduate school experiences," he said. "To enter such a program, the student should be at least a sophomore. The candidate would discuss his proposal with a faculty coordinator who works closely with the degree programs committee."

The completed proposal, along with the coordinator's recommendation, would then go to the degree programs committee and, if approved, would become a detailed contract between committee and student.

Two former students, both magna cum laude graduates, incorporated individualized experiences into their undergraduate programs and served as forerunners for the present program.

Miss Gwen Gilbert, a 1971 graduate, attended the Goethe Institute in Muchen, Germany, from October, 1969 to March 1970 and received credit for European studies.

Miss Randy Ellis of Spruce Pine, also a member of the class of 1971, spent a summer doing research at the Argonne National Laboratory near Chicago, another example of what Dr. Riggs describes as the non-traditional type of experience producing academic credit.

Nearly a dozen students have chosen specially-designed programs since that time, including the newly-elected president of the student body and the editor of the campus newspaper.

Kenneth Wright, a senior from Horse Shoe and president of the Student Government Association, had two key reasons for wanting to design his own program.

"First, I want to write and should know about as many different areas as possible," Wright said. "Second, I hope to attend law school at Chapel Hill and the catalog specifies a broad background."

Three faculty members provide guidance for Wright-Larry S. Carney, assistant professor of sociology; Dr. James S. Vinson, associate professor of physics, and John Michael Gillum, assistant professor of literature and the catalog:

Pat Gainey, a senior from Taylorsville, and editor of The Ridgerunner, is combining history and literature in a program of American Studies in the 1920s and 1930s.

"Both history and literature have been affected by social changes, intellectual changes and political changes," Gainey said. "I intend to combine an intensive study of American history and American literature centering on the social, intellectual and political developments as reflected in history and literature, emphasizing the period between the two World Wars."

Hoping to do graduate work in guidance and counseling, Mrs. Susan Taft Calo, originally from Cincinnati, Ohio, and now living in Asheville, designed a combination sociology-psychology program she described as a unique opportunity to put sociology and psychology together in an intellectually sound and meaningful way."

Mrs. Gracelyn G. Cromwell, a junior from Burlington, has her career sights set on early childhood education and constructed a psychology-sociology-education program called "Education, Society and the Individual." Again, faculty from three areas consult with her.

Miss Nancy Lee Williams, a junior from Mocksville, is centering her work around art and psychology, hopes to take graduate work in recreational therapy and seek a career in art therapy.

In proposing her program, she cited UNC-A's aims in the catalog:

"The ultimate objective is to give to students their best possible opportunity to acquire skills, techniques and attitudes, and that basic knowledge and understanding which will best equip them to pursue successfully their individual goals, to function effectively and constructively in society, and to find meaning in their personal lives."

Robert E. Cansler, a senior from Franklin and eyeing a law school future worked out a program of political economics with Dr. Shirley Browning, assistant professor of economics, and Dr. Gene Rainey, professor of political science.

"There are many economic decisions which are made in the form of government policy and therefore greatly influenced by politics," Cansler said. "As this relationship became more apparent (to me), I became aware that in order to be an effective practical economist, one had to possess a certain amount of knowledge of political science."

Anthony, assistant vice president of The Northwestern Bank of Clemmons has announced that the opening of the bank's new main office, located at the corner of Lewisville-Clemmons Road and Cook Avenue, will be Saturday, July 28. Refreshments will be served and a special favor will be given to everyone attending.

Children under 14 years of age will be able to register for a boy's and girl's bike if they are accompanied by an adult. Winners will not have to be present to win.

Also, at open house, keys to "Northwestern's Treasure Chest of Prizes" will be given away. During the following week, keyholders will be allowed to attempt to unlock the chest. Prizes including a portable color television, color-pack Polaroid Camera, 8-track tape player with AM-FM radio, 50 gallons of gasoline, two $25 savings accounts and many others will be given to those who have keys that fit.

The new Northwestern Bank will be a full service bank offering a wide range of banking services to its customers. Its hours will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday. The Northwestern Bank located in the Clemmons Center will

...about your Social Security

Q. I'm 58 and had a heart attack in February. My doctor says I shouldn't go back to work. Will I need to bring a letter from him explaining my disability when I apply for monthly social security disability payments?

A. You should first call the social security office. They can tell you what information to bring with you when you apply for benefits. They will also help you gather all the medical records you'll need.

Q. I retired and began getting monthly social security payments when I was 63. I'll be 65 in the fall. Is it true that I'll be enrolled in Medicare automatically?

A. Yes, you will be automatically signed up for both the hospital and medical insurance parts of Medicare. The medical part will cost you $6.30 a month, but you can decline the coverage if you do not wish to pay the premiums for it.

Q. My doctor has ordered me to quit work right away because of a severe heart ailment. I'm 63. Should I apply for monthly social security retirement or disability payments.

A. You may apply for both benefits at the same time. If you're eligible you can begin getting reduced retirement payments immediately. If you are also found to be entitled to disability benefits, social security will substitute the higher disability payments after your 5-month waiting period is over.

Q. I'm a junior in high school and I plan to take a college entrance test in the fall. One of my buddies who took the test told me I need a social security card to take the test. If this is true, how do I get one?

A. Yes, you will probably need a social security card when you take your college entrance exam. The number on your card is often used by colleges for recordkeeping purposes. You should apply for your social security card as soon as possible because it takes several weeks to get one. Then you'll be sure to have it when you report for your test. Call the social security office and they'll be glad to tell you how to apply for your social security card.

Advance News

The annual Shutt reunion was held at the community building Sunday with good attendance.

Relatives from Fort Worth, Texas; Saltillo and Savannah, Tennessee attended who had never been to our community before. Their ancestors migrated West some 120 years ago. The relatives were most impressed with the old Shutt homeplace, where the house still stands that Christian Shutt settled with his family after coming to this country from Germany. Many pictures were made of the house and community. Also browsing through the Advance Methodist cemetery collecting dates from the grave-stones of their ancestors, exchanging old letters and newspaper clippings of almost forgotten relatives proved most interesting. Some of the Shutt descendants were visitors at the Sunday morning worship service at the Methodist church; Rev. and Mrs. Brown Welch of Fort Worth, Texas, Mrs. Kenne Shutt of Saltillo, Tenn., Mrs. Vernon Parnell of Durham and Mrs. Kirby Greene of Lexington.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Sandy spent the weekend camping at White Lake. Mr. and Mrs. R.D. Cornatzer and daughters Lelia and Julia enjoyed a weekend of camping at the Myers Campground. They were accompanied by Sherry Howard and Edie Bailey friends of the Cornatzer girls.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Carter and daughter Jill were Sunday afternoon visitors of Mr. Carter's cousin Franklin Bailey and wife of High Rock Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry D. Hendrix of Union, South Carolina were weekend visitors of their parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hendrix of Fork and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Zimmerman.

Mrs. Recie Sheets entertained several ministers and their wives with a luncheon at her home last Thursday. They were the Rev. and Mrs. Roscoe Fisher of the Bixby Presbyterian church, also their son Luther Fisher; the Rev. and Mrs. W.C. Anderson of Advance Methodist church and their two grandsons; and the Rev. Philip Bostrom, a Duke Divinity student who is with the Andersons for the summer and working in the Methodist Church. Thursday night supper guests of Mrs. Sheets were Mrs. Goldie Neal of Brownsburg, Indiana and Mr. and Mrs. Lallie Cornatzer. Mrs. Sheets granddaughter, Jo Ann Boger of Farmington spent two days visiting last week.

Hiram Cornatzer returned home from Forsyth Memorial Hospital where he underwent treatments last week. A speedy recovery is wished for him.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Zimmerman on the birth of a son, Michael David born last Monday at Baptist hospital. The baby weighed 4 lbs. 1 1/2 oz. and will be kept at the hospital until he gains more weight. At this report mother and baby are doing fine.

Mrs. Julia Kennery of Thomasville was a Saturday night supper guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Foster.

Visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Shutt and Miss Laura Shutt during the weekend were the Rev. and Mrs. Brown Welch of Fort Worth, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Kinnie Shutt of Saltillo, Tennessee; Hamber Shutt of Savannah, Tennessee; Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Parnell of Durham; Mrs. Kirby W. Greene of Lexington; the Rev. and Mrs. Glenn Miller of Rockwell; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Snider of Denton; Mrs. Marnie Lee Scott and Miss Zella Shutt of Winston-Salem; and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hendrix of Union, South Carolina. Wednesday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Shutt were Mrs. Jack Jack Wentz and daughter, Jill of Asheville and Mrs. C.E. Crawford of Advance Route 1. The Rev. and Mrs. Welch; Rev. and Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Greene and Mrs. Parnell also visited Mr. and Mrs. Bill Zimmerman. The Kenne Shutt's and Hamber Shutt were Saturday afternoon visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shutt.

Navy Aviation Machinist Mate Second Class Terry B. Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert L. Smith of Route 5, Mocksville, N.C. reenlisted in the Navy for four years during ceremonies at the naval air station here. A 1968 graduate of Forbush High School, Yadkinville, N.C., he entered the service in June 1968.

Seaman William Ellis of Meridian, Mississippi spent the weekend with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Bill Ellis.

LOST AND FOUND,
ALAS

We sat in the ring of light thrown by the gas lantern and watched the night beetles bounce off the globe. It was after midnight, and we were hunkered down in the middle of a dirt road high in the mountains. It was too black to see the bridge 100 yards away, but we could hear the creek under it.

Somewhere up that creek in the middle of 35,000 acres of wilderness, a 19-year-old boy was lost or hurt or both.

Earlier, Ron Evans and I had been camping alongside a road several miles away when a man in a pickup truck slid to a stop next to us. We had finished supper long ago, and we were drinking dregs from the evening's last pot of coffee.

"You seen a boy down this way?" asked the man in the truck.

"We said we hadn't." "Well, my boy's lost then," he said grimly. "He was supposed to meet me four hours ago just at dark. He's 19 and he's up that air creek yonder Lord knows how far. I've looked for him everywhere."

The man asked us about lights. We had none, except for the lantern, and that was not the ideal thing to be carrying into rough country.

"We're gonna need some help," said the truck driver. "I'm going to drive to town and get the rescue squad. How 'bout you fellows waiting up at the bridge in case the boy comes out?"

We said we would. We packed up our gear and drove up to the bridge. It was quiet now, but it looked like it was going to be a long night, maybe even a dangerous one. Some of the rocks along that creek are the size of houses, and there are waterfalls and cliffs. We left our boots on, anticipating a long hike.

"He's old enough to know how to get out," Ron said as we sat in the road waiting for the rescue squad. "He would know enough to come down the creek, wouldn't he?"

Must be hurt," I said, looking

Auto Insurance
It would appear that either the Congress of the United States, or the various state legislatures will in the near future pass legislation regarding auto insurance.

Last year a nationwide poll by the National Federation of Independent Business showed 63 per cent in favor of a bill by Senator Phillip Hart of Michigan for a national "no fault" insurance law. In all states where the Federation has conducted special state surveys on this issue, the vote has been heavily in the affirmative.

The major arguments in favor of "no fault" are an implied lower premium cost, and no delay in taking care of the expenses of an accident when the costs are limited.

However, many well qualified attorneys have expressed opposition to the idea. In the modern trend of questioning credibility, there is a feeling among some that lawyers oppose because of self-interest.

Yet there are many questions of deep legal background involved. In most states where the issues have been surveyed, there appears a trend toward combining "no-fault" insurance with a law requiring that registration of an auto be accompanied with proof that insurance is carried, or that to get a license to drive, proof of insurance must be presented.

This, of course, would give the insurance companies a captive market and without provisions for controlling premium costs could work out eventually to even higher insurance rates.

* * *

There is also, in this modern complex society, a Constitutional question involved in requiring insurance. Many people if deprived of their privilege to drive, would also be denied the right to make a living, because their livelihood depends on automotive transportation.

* * *

California, which leads the nation in car registration, has long had a law that provides that if a driver is held responsible for an accident, and has neither insurance or other means to satisfy the claim, the license to drive is revoked.

* * *

But this law has not worked out, as there are, according to all reports, a large number of the less affluent drivers of California who have no insurance, have claims against them, yet are able through a series of prolonged hearings, to keep their driving license.

* * *

Thus, there seems to be no simple answer to the problem. Recently the California Highway Patrol announced that due to a stepped up drive during 1972 it arrested almost 96,000 people in California for drunken driving. In order to do this, the officers were ordered to overlook many highway violations. It is quite terrifying to think that in one state in a year 96,000 projectiles, weighing from one to three tons were apprehended under the control of intoxicated people. One can only wonder how many more were not apprehended.

Children Learn Through Experiences Rather Than Wordy Definitions Says UNC Professor

Saturday is a blessed respite, and study on Sunday? Never!

For children, school is "the place where a child comes to interrupt life," according to Prof. Hunter Ballew of the UNC School of Education here.

School is apart from life rather than a part of life, he contends, and wordy definitions, particularly in mathematics, can cause the young mind to stray across the playground and on to the swimming pool or to a pond full of fish.

"It is unrealistic to expect children to change their routine as easily as we switch from Standard to Daylight Saving Time," Ballew notes in a new book for elementary teachers. "School starts at 8:30 a.m.; life begins at 3:30 in the afternoon. If you were a child, wouldn't you feel the same way?"

One part of the child's day—the mathematics lesson—presents a challenge for the prospective teacher.

How can the mathematics lesson contribute to a classroom which the child sees as a place where he can come, not to suspend his life, but to spend it? Where does the teacher begin in teaching children mathematics?

"The question is difficult even if the child is at the beginning of his formal schooling," Ballew said. "No one is at the beginning in learning. Everybody has to be somewhere, and the answer is never the same for any two children."

And so, Ballew wrote his book, "Teaching Children Mathematics," published by the Charles E. Merrill Company, to help elementary teachers view the math they already know from the standpoint of teaching it to young children.

The 479-page book emphasizes the methods applied to elementary school mathematics programs. Each unit begins with an idea, puzzle or game to stimulate thought and raise questions.

The book guides the teacher in class planning with the full realization that the main thing is not what the children covered last year or some other time, but what they can and will understand in the teacher's work with them.

The way children learn language is important implications for learning mathematics and verbal problem-solving skills. Learning through experience is important for acquiring language and math skills.

The child learns first about things in his surrounding environment. Initially, he learns nouns. Then, he associates sounds with objects for which he already has some sort of awareness. He learns the names of things in which he has some interest.

As the child grows, he becomes more and more ac-

cute in applying the right sound to the right object, but this does not mean he is ready to call these words names. The child learns proper sentence structure through experience and by observing how people around him say things.

"There is no point in correcting a child's speech until he has the background to understand the correction," Dr.

Ballew advises.

Much the same is true about teaching children mathematics.

Concepts, he said, are built through experience more than through wordy definitions and lengthy explanations.

Aesthetic Resources Service Holds Special Training Session

The Board of Directors of Aesthetic Resources-Services (ARS) held a day-long board training session Saturday, July 14, at Reynolda House in Winston-Salem.

ARS, a non-profit educational consulting agency, was incorporated in North Carolina in the spring of this year to facilitate education in the arts in Davie, Forsyth, Stokes, Surry, Wilkes, and Yadkin counties. Saturday's meeting has been scheduled to develop realistic goals for the coming year and to determine long-range strategy.

"ARS hopes to develop and coordinate arts programs in six of the northwest counties of the state," said Dr. Donald H. Wolfe, ARS Director this week.

"Our agency is entering the field because a need has been expressed to provide auxiliary support to the existing educational arts programs in this area," he said.

Mrs. T. Nelson Grice, President of ARS conducted Saturday's meeting moved quickly into a discussion of the agency's original goals and objectives followed by a talk entitled, "Art in Everyday Life" by Dr. Robert Mayer, Director of General Studies at Wilkes Community College.

Don Nance, Director of the Mt. Airy Fine Arts Center, discussed "Community Involvement in the Arts," followed by Mrs. Rachel Carter, a Winston-Salem independent reading consultant, who presented a demonstration entitled, "Aesthetic Education in the Elementary Grades."

Before the group broke for lunch, Mrs. Susan Tutt, recently named North Carolina Speech Teacher of 1973, provided a demonstration and discussion in the area of Creative Dramatics.

The Piedmont Symphony Brass Quintet provided luncheon music from their summer program.

Mrs. Helen Lynch, CEMREL representative from Decatur, Georgia, discussed CEMREL's aesthetic education program in a sound-slide presentation, followed by a printmaking demonstration by Irving Riley of Winston-Salem for the Hunt Manufacturing Company.

Two North Carolina

educators talked about arts programs in the schools in one of the mid-afternoon sessions: William F. Davis, Superintendent of Stokes County Schools, and Sam Keel, Title III Director for the Wilkes County Schools.

After listening to the programs, the board members discussed the goals and objectives for ARS, followed by the full board's determination of the immediate and long-range goals.

Mrs. Nancy Wolfe, Director of Communications and Public Relations for the City of Winston-Salem, moderated the consensus session.

Members of the Board of Directors of ARS include Mr. James Beard, Ms. Helen McGee, Ms. Kate Reidenbach, and Ms. Barbara Harris for Davie County; Ms. Aurelia Eller, Ms. Gretchen Grice, Dr. Harold Tedford, and Mrs. Rachel Wright for Forsyth County; Mr. Joel New and Mr. John Seawell for Stokes County; Ms. Carrie Kirkman, Ms. Jane McRae, and Mr. Carlyle Shepherd for Surry County; Mr. Dewey S. Mayes, Mr. Robert McNeill, and Mr. William Moffett for Wilkes County; and Ms. Jane Benbow and Ms. Ruth Williams for Yadkin County.

Davie Has 255 In Health Field

To what degree are residents of Davie County affected by a condition that is plaguing most areas of the country—the shortage of doctors, dentists, nurses and other health personnel?

What is the ratio of health workers to population locally, as compared with the ratio in other communities?

According to the most recent government figures, although there has been some increase throughout the United States, during the last few years, in the number of people engaged in health services, it has done little more than keep pace with the change in the population and with the added load created by medicare and medicaid.

A persistent problem, also, has been and continues to be the concentration of medical facilities and personnel in the big cities, leaving a severe shortage in rural areas.

In Davie County, based upon the latest tabulation by the Census Bureau, the number of men and women employed in the health field is 255.

A breakdown of this total shows that 30 of them are in the category designated "physicians, dentists and related practitioners," which includes, when there are any, chiropractors, optometrists, podiatrists, osteopathic physicians and the like.

Another 86 locally are termed "health workers." This group is made up of dietitians, registered nurses, therapists, hygienists and technicians.

The remaining 139, called "health service workers," include nurses aides, practical nurses, dental assistants and lay midwives.

To what extent do they fulfill Davie County's needs? From a numerical standpoint alone, it means that there is one person employed in the health field, locally, for every 74 residents.

This compares with an average of one for every 69 elsewhere in the United States and with one for 89 in the State of North Carolina.

The geographic imbalance with respect to health care is indicated by the government's figures which show that in urban America there is a health worker for every 63 people while, in rural America, the average is only one for every 97.

In some areas the shortage is even more pronounced, so that sick people are forced to travel great distances to get medical or dental attention.

Plant Would Be Valued At Around $1-Billion

Davie May Lose Chance To Get Duke Power Plant

Time is running out for Davie County's chance to acquire a billion-dollar nuclear generating plant.

Officials of Duke Power Company indicated this week that if options on the desired land are not secured by August 1st, a site in a neighboring county will probably be picked.

William S. Lee, Senior Vice President in charge of engineering and construction for Duke Power Company, said each day of delay in obtaining a site is costing Duke around $300,000 a day.

"Time is of an essence," said Mr. Lee. "Previously we had promoted work on two lake sites for power plants, but a law has come into effect that no power plants can be put on lakes so therefore this work was done in vain."

Mr. Lee said that when their lake sites were ruled out, the Yadkin River came into mind. He said that at least six sites were considered until narrowing down to two, both in Davie County.

"There were no technical or engineering reasons for picking these two sites in Davie," said Mr. Lee. "But we do need the river and railroad access. These sites in Davie offer both."

Mr. Lee and George Midgett, manager of the real estate department for Duke, both said that no alternatives to the Davie sites were considered until meeting opposition in Davie from the landowners.

"After meeting opposition in Davie, Duke Power went to work and has acquired options for enough land for a nuclear plant on the Yadkin River in a neighboring county. Although we prefer the Davie site, time is now of such an essence that we must do something," said the official.

Mr. Midgett said that not one option had been obtained from Davie landowners. He said that Duke Power is willing to pay the landowners "double the going price". And the landowners would have at least a year to find a new location.

"We will require at least a year to survey the land and use drill rigs for topographical surveys," said Mr. Lee. "The landowners would have timber rights for one year. If all options are signed, Duke Power will pay ten percent for the options plus any damage that is done to the equipment."

Mr. Lee said that the proposed nuclear plant would be valued around a billion dollars and would take around nine to ten years to build. Davie County officials said the tax valuation of this plant, if located in Davie, could drop the tax rate from $1.10 to around .15 cents, based on present day standards.

Mr. Lee emphasized that Duke Power "works very hard at being a good neighbor and will not locate at a site without good will".

"Never has one employee or one neighbor ever been exposed to radiation. Our plants are safe and we believe contribute in a positive fashion to any county or community in which located," said Mr. Lee.

Mr. Lee said that Duke Power was willing to spend over a million dollars to acquire the desired 1,000 acres of land in Davie.

"But if we can't, we must go elsewhere," he said.

Homes For A Song . . .

Rock City Gardens On Lookout Mountain Has World's Largest Housing Program For Birds

LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN, TENN. — A nationally famous travel attraction at nearby Chattanooga has the world's largest housing program for birds. Rock City Gardens, located atop Lookout Mountain at Chattanooga, has built, placed, and sold more than 10,000 attractive red and black birdhouses along the highways of America.

Each birdhouse carries the cheerful message "See Rock City" in white letters on its black roof. The birdhouses, designed originally for advertising purposes, have become familiar landmarks in the southern states. They are sought after eagerly by landowners, nature lovers, novelty seekers and birds themselves.

Purple martins are especially attracted to the houses, which are multiple-dwelling structures. Some of Rock City's largest houses, built for Interstate highways, contain as many as 24 separate "apartments." These super-apartment houses are inspected each year by Rock City maintenance crews, who clean them, spray them with disinfectants and repaint where needed. The birds never had it so good!

Demand for the colorful houses became so great that Rock City authorized construction and sale of a smaller, residential-sized, birdhouse containing six compartments for martins. This back-yard version has been sold by the thousands to Rock City's visitors.

In turn, the people who buy the Rock City birdhouses place them in unusual locations. Several were erected on the Greenland Ice Cap, 200 miles north of Thule, and in Korea, Vietnam, Germany and Ethiopia . . . spots where American troops or travelers wished to leave a bright red and black reminder of Americans.

One Rock City birdhouse, placed in Okinawa, withstood a raging Pacific typhoon, and another, on the Atlantic Missile Butcher, Banker . . .

Everyone from the butcher to the banker tries to increase their assets and many invest in the stock market. As a result, some 30,000,000 Americans (two-thirds with taxable incomes under $15,000) invest, and help our economy expand. To make it worth the while of individual investors who take the risk, the capital gains tax must continue to tax long term investments fairly.

The many useful shower gifts were displayed on a table in the entrance of the living room. The color scheme of pink and blue was seen throughout the house.

Special guests attending were the grandmothers-to-be, Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Hedgepath, both from out-of-town.

Mrs. Robertson reported that her 15-year-old son, David Robertson, was attacked by 5 or 6 blacks at the concert last Thursday night, kicked in the ribs and head, requiring treatment at the hospital.

Mrs. Robertson said she had protested the fact that no regular policemen were on duty at the event to supervise the estimated 1700 youth attending. However, it was reported there were 15 off duty policemen at this function which is sponsored by the Winston-Salem Youth Council.

Chiropractic Association Holds Special Health Planning Program

The North Carolina Chiropractic Association held a two day orientation program on Comprehensive Health Planning this past weekend in Raleigh. Speakers were: Hal Mannis, in charge of planning for the Department of Human Resources; Elmer M. Johnson, Assistant State Planning Director for the North Carolina Department of Planning; Dr. Gustave Dubbs, Executive Director of the U.S. Chiropractic Comprehensive Health Planning Council.

Dr. Dubbs, the featured speaker, explained that the Comprehensive Health Planning Act, already enacted, might be the first step to determining and establishing guidelines for the Federal Government to follow in providing National Health Insurance for its citizens.

The act provides for regional CHP councils, comprised of both health providers and health consumers, to seek data on which to determine: (a) what health services are necessary to the community, (b) who can best provide these services, (c) how duplication of services can be eliminated, and (d) how a maximum amount of service, for the least amount of dollars, can be efficiently made available to the health consumer.

Dr. Dubbs told the chiropractic physicians attending the seminar that "the real role of the profession is not to 'promote chiropractic', but rather to take up the gauntlet for consumer interests in health care."

"Chiropractors should speak out for the consumer and make sure that the intent of the Law, that is, comprehensive health care involving all health care practitioners' services, is carried out", he suggested. "The establishment is not necessarily motivated to bring in the consumer in its decision-making policies; it does not want to share its 'power'. Thus, it is up to the chiropractic profession to inform, educate and work with community sources to make certain that the best interests of the CONSUMER, not specific providers, is considered during the planning sessions", he said.

Mrs. Beverly Andrews is presented with the "Key Woman" award by Mrs. Jennie Turner, President of the Mocksville Jaycettes. This award is presented to a Jaycette who has excelled in club activities in a 3 month period. The award is given in recognition of outstanding service rendered as a Mocksville Jaycette.

Carolinians Construction Shows Drop

Construction volume in North and South Carolina showed a significant decrease in the second quarter of 1973. The Construction Business Index, prepared by the Carolinas Branch, Associated General Contractors of America, shows a second quarter total of $283,195,878 for 1973 versus a second quarter total of $344,596,517 for 1972.

Henry J. Pierce, executive vice president of the Carolinas Branch, AGC, said that the decrease in volume reflects the shifting patterns seen throughout the nation's economy.

The slow release of Federal funds was also cited as an adverse factor. AGC officials pointed to three such areas affecting utility volume. They said EPA grant funds for municipal sewerage projects were lower in fiscal '73 than '72; that HUD, EDA, and Farmers Home Administration funds for water and sewerage projects were frozen; and that for various reasons, EPA delayed until recently the release of fiscal '73 authorizations.

The AGC Construction Business Index is issued quarterly and reports all publicly advertised and publicly bid work awarded in the Carolinas. Three classifications of work are included: building construction, utilities, and highway-heavy (roads, bridges, dams, etc.).

In North Carolina building construction was $128,896,178 for 1973's second quarter, down from the 1972 second quarter figure of $154,823,893. South Carolina building figures were $42,953,621 for the second quarter 1973, up slightly over 1972's second quarter of $41,819,999. Approximately $40 million of North Carolina's 1973 quarterly total is for the Firestone Tire and Rubber Plant at Wilson, N.C.

Utilities construction was down sharply in both states. South Carolina figures show a decrease from $19,339,268 in second quarter 1972 to $10,189,790 in the same period of 1973. In North Carolina, second quarter volume fell to $14,176,496 in 1973 compared to

Figures in the highway-heavy division were somewhat lower. In North Carolina, the 1973 second quarter highway figure of $29,859,123 was down from $44,440,934 in 1972's second quarter. South Carolina slipped only slightly to $27,924,752 in second quarter 1973 from $29,334,830 in 1972. Chief reason for the decline was the non-availability of the usual Federal funding.

Direct federal work was up to $19,849,890 for the two states from $11,676,353 in 1972 for the quarter. Public works totaled $9,346,028 in second quarter 1973 versus $12,131,236 in the same period of 1972.

It is again emphasized that neither home building nor negotiated work are included in the building dollar volume because they are not publicly bid and therefore accurate figures are not available.

Below is a further breakdown of the figures:

	2nd Quarter 1972
Building	$196,643,892

Grant Sought For Area Emergency Medical Communications System

The Forsyth Health Planning Council has unveiled plans for a $400,000 grant application for an emergency medical communications system that would dramatically improve direct consultation between ambulance and hospitals.

In addition to Forsyth, the system would serve the counties of Davie, Davidson, Surry, Stokes and Yadkin.

Senator Sam Erwin Says

The Senate has passed by a unanimous vote the Federal Constitutional Convention Procedures bill (S. 1272), a measure which I introduced and have fought for continuously since 1967. A similar measure was approved by the Senate in the 92nd Congress, but died in the House with the adjournment of Congress.

I believe this bill ranks in importance with any other piece of legislation that will come before this Congress. It is surprising to me that we have not long ago closed the dangerous gap that has existed in our laws that would permit a constitutional convention to be called by two-thirds of the States with absolutely no rules to serve as guidelines for the procedures of such a convention.

The bill is designed to implement Article V of the Constitution, which provides, among other things, that Congress shall "on application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several States call a convention for proposing amendments." From the foundation of the Republic to the present time, the States have submitted several hundred applications for a constitutional convention, but no precedent exists to serve as a guide to the States and the Congress in carrying out this method of amending the Constitution.

In 1967, I became concerned about the prospect of a constitutional crisis with no guidelines in the event thirty-four States should request a national convention to modify the one-man, one-vote decision of the Supreme Court in the reapportionment cases. At that time, thirty-two States had called for such a convention, and it became obvious that we needed legislation to determine how and when a convention should be called and how any convention, once called, should function procedurally.

The Federal Constitutional Convention Procedures Act, which I introduced at that time, languished in the Committee that session and in the next Congress, also. There was a changed feeling about the bill in 1971 and the Senate approved it by a vote of 84 to 0 when it became evident that the bill is essentially neutral toward any proposed amendment to the Constitution.

What the proposed Act, which has again been passed by the Senate, does is this. It requires

(1) that the State use the same procedure for adopting convention applications as they use for the passage of statutes, but without the necessity of approval by the Governor;

(2) that an application by a State for the call of a convention be announced in the Congress and in other State legislatures;

(3) that such applications remain in effect for seven years, subject to rescission by the State Legislature unless two-thirds of the State legislatures have already submitted applications on the same subject or subjects, when such applications shall then remain in effect; (4) that when the requisite number of applications are filed with the Congress that Congress shall then pass a concurrent resolution calling for a convention.

The Act would require that the convention be convened within one year after adopting by Congress of the concurrent resolution for its call, and provides that each congressional district have one

The grant application is part of detailed plans by the council for upgrading communication, transportation and education in the operation of ambulance services in the six-county area. Dr. George Podgorny, who headed the council committee drafting the application, explained that even if the grant is not awarded, the council has completed planning to provide emergency medical services in this region.

"The average citizen who discovers an emergency needs some means of communication to report it," Podgorny said. "He needs to be able to talk with various health services involved in providing emergency care."

Podgorny said that after communication, transportation is the important aspect when the ambulance arrives on the scene. He said that education and training will be required for the ambulance attendants and the ambulance dispatcher to be able to communicate with the hospital in providing emergency care at the scene.

The grant application will be made to the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation before Aug. 1 to compete for $15 million in grants available for emergency medical communications systems.

Podgorny said the request would include systems such as transmitting cardiac readings from ambulances to a hospital for immediate interpretation by a physician.

"We hope to coordinate the ambulance services in all six counties and upgrade their services," he said. "We anticipate that each county will have its own dispatcher and ambulance service but they will be able to communicate with the dispatcher in our county when coming to a hospital in Forsyth."

Podgorny said that 24 different groups including private funeral homes, are now providing ambulance services in the six counties.

He said that at a July 12 meeting of representatives from five of the six counties involved that there "very enthusiastic responses" from county officials in attendance.

Linwood L. Davis, chairman of the council, said the grant would have a tremendous impact on the six-county area, but he said even if the grant is not awarded to Forsyth the work in compiling the application would serve as the basis for future development for regional emergency medical services.

The council had been studying emergency medical services in Forsyth for nearly two years

Robert Rowland Goes To Wilkesboro

Robert Hagan Rowland, who has been residing in High Point, is in the process of moving to Wilkesboro, N.C., where he will assume the new position as office manager and head accountant for the Empire Cadillac-Olds-Toyota.

Mr. Rowland is a graduate of the Davie County High School and Lenoir Rhyne College. He previously worked for the Southwestern Bank in North Wilkesboro before going to High Point as head cost accountant for the Tomlinson Furniture Company.

He is married to the former Nada Ann Cleary of North Wilkesboro. They have three children.

when the communications grant program was announced last April.

Podgorny said announcement of the grant gave the committee "impetus" in making its recommendation for overall emergency medical services. He said there were about 185,000 visits to emergency rooms last year in the six counties.

He said that 115,000 of these visits were to hospitals in Forsyth County, thereby showing the need for cooperation among the counties.

Podgorny said that of the nine hospitals in these counties only the two in Forsyth have fulltime physicians covering their emergency rooms 24 hours a day.

He said this fact emphasizes the need to cut down the communications time between the emergency call and the arrival of assistance.

Vocational Building

Appalachian Regional Commission would enable the high school to expand its present vocational program and provide more adequate accommodations for vocational courses now being offered. He further commented that the additional classrooms would also relieve the overcrowded conditions at the high school by making more classrooms available for academic courses.

Tar Heel Kitchen

By Miss York-Kiker,
Marketing Home Economist

Peppers are pepper-uppers! Beautiful and plentiful N.C. sweet peppers are available in good quality and supply. In raw and cooked form, peppers can boost our dishes. Peppers are correctly named for they have the ability to pep up meals that otherwise might be rather tasteless. Fortunately, peppers are low in calories and are a good source of vitamin C.

A recent tour of the Faision, N.C. produce auction market, in the heart of eastern North Carolina's pepper growing area, was fascinating and enlightening experience. It is hard to imagine the amount of work behind the scenes in growing, packing, inspecting, and marketing peppers and other vegetables. The chant of the auctioneer was mysterious to spectators unfamiliar with the process, but the buyers, present from all over the East Coast, understood perfectly. Many, many truckloads of various kinds of peppers were inspected and sold in a short time. These marvelous pepper-uppers finally make their way to the grocery stores or a farmer's market where they may be purchased.

Pungent or hot type peppers will need to be used sparingly, but North Carolina's sweet or bell peppers can be served delightfully in larger quantities. Sweet peppers are often bell-shaped as the name indicates, but can be long, and somewhat slender and pointed.

When purchasing peppers, watch for medium to dark green color and a glossy sheen. Peppers should be relatively heavy and have firm walls or sides. Sweet green peppers turn a bright red when fully matured. Avoid peppers that have thin walls and are wilted, flabby, cut or bruised.

Sweet peppers will lose their crispness but may be frozen satisfactorily for later use in cooking. Wash peppers, remove seeds and white membranes. Cut into halves. Scald for 2 minutes and freeze.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture specialist in charge of grading at the Faision market shared a favorite use of sweet peppers with scrambled eggs. Heat small amount of butter and diced peppers in skillet until peppers are slightly softened. Add beaten eggs and proceed to scramble according to usual method.

Additional recipes are given as a few suggested ways to include peppers in your meals.

Garden Pepper Boats
3 medium green peppers, halved
1/4 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup whole kernel corn, fresh or canned
1 medium tomato, chopped
1/2 cup cooked baby Lima beans
1 tablespoon butter, melted

New Labor Laws Go Into Effect

Mrs. Carman Walker of the Mocksville-Davie Chamber of Commerce has pointed out that important changes in North Carolina's Labor Laws governing hours of work, overtime pay, and minimum wages were made by the 1973 General Assembly. These changes will affect many thousands of Tar Heel workers and business people. For complete details on the Labor Laws, and how they affect you as an employer or employee, contact the North Carolina Department of Labor in Raleigh.

These laws will be most important to you, if your employment is not covered by the Federal Wage and Hour Law, and if you are not employed in farm work or domestic service.

The first of these laws deals with hours and days of employment. If your establishment is covered by this law, your work is limited to 10 hours a day, 56 hours a week, and 12 out of 14 consecutive days. This law became effective on July 1 1973.

The second law deals with overtime pay for employment over 50 hours a week. Again, if your employment is not covered by the Federal Wage and Hour Law, or if you are not in farm work or domestic service, you are entitled to time and one-half pay after 50 hours of work per week. This law also went into effect on July 1.

Full information about these two important changes in labor laws may be obtained from the North Carolina Department of Labor in Raleigh.

One other important law, which does not go into effect until September 2, 1973, raises the State minimum wage from $1.60 to $1.80 per hour. This law applies to virtually all establishments in North Carolina, but exempts farm laborers, domestic workers, and employment in establishments having fewer than four employees.

Remember...this increase in the minimum wage does not go into effect until September 2, 1973.

Wildlife Afield

BY JIM DEAN

HOW HEALTHY ARE NORTH CAROLINA'S DEER?

What if a doctor gave you a checkup and told you he had found as many as 7,700 lungworm larvae in one drop of liquid from your lungs?

You'd be plenty worried, wouldn't you? Chances are you'd spend the evening up-dating your will.

Let's say you're a deer hunter, and a deer doctor gives some of your whitetails a checkup. Then he tells you that he found lungworms, brainworms and muscle worms in high numbers in the deer.

You're plenty worried, right? Chances are you're wondering whether your deer are getting ready to die. And if you're really a sportsman, your next thought is "what can I do about it?"

Well, the answer is plenty. In fact, you may be the only person in the world who can do anything to help.

To put all this into perspective, the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission and the Southeastern Cooperative Wildlife Disease Study Group has been conducting a probe of the health of deer in various parts of North Carolina. It's all part of a continuing program to keep the deer herds in the state healthy.

The findings show that although the deer population in certain parts of North Carolina is far from being in danger of severe depletion, it does need help. Actually, the deer population in the state is larger than it has been in recorded history, and that is basically the problem.

One study was conducted on deer taken from Yancey and Craven counties. These deer were examined completely to determine their general health and to find out how many parasites they had. From the number of parasites found among other things—it is possible for biologists to learn the status of the health of the other deer in the area as well as the ones being checked.

All five of the deer from Yancey County appeared to be in only fair condition, and most of them had very high levels of parasites in their lungs, brains and muscles. One of the Yancey deer had 7,700 lungworm larvae in one single drop of lung wash.

Of the five deer checked from Craven County, two appeared to be in good condition while three appeared to be only in fair condition. These deer also had very high levels of parasites.

The biologists report indicated that "infections of this magnitude lead to chronic verminous pneumonia and extreme debility toward other diseases and physical stress." That, in layman's terms, means the deer herds in these two areas—and possibly others—are generally in poor health, and conditions are likely to get worse.

Fortunately, the cause is known, and it is simply a problem of overpopulation. There are too many deer in these two areas. The deer are not getting enough to eat because the range cannot support them. Furthermore, if the herd continues to increase, the health of the deer will become worse and eventually could lead to a fast-sweeping disease that could reduce the herd to a mere remnant of itself. This is essentially what happened in the Uwharrie area a year or so ago when a disease known as EHD swept through the herd and thinned it considerably. It's nature's way of controlling deer populations, and it isn't very humane either.

So what is the answer?

The answer is for hunters to harvest the excess crop of deer and thin the herd back to a level that the range can support in good health. That way, hunters can help keep the herd healthy and also make "use" of the extra deer rather than see them merely wasted by disease.

That, of course, means either-sex deer seasons where both buck and doe deer are shot. If doe deer are not hunted, it is virtually impossible to significantly reduce the size of a deer herd since one buck can service many females.

"But I don't want to shoot a doe," you might say, "I've always been taught that it is unsportsmanlike to shoot does."

This old notion goes back many years, and even game biologists once believed that shooting doe deer was poor management. Now they know different. In fact, biologists now know that controlled either-sex hunts are, in many instances, the only feasible way to keep a deer herd healthy so that the deer are large, sleek and well-fed.

By conducting such studies as the ones recently done in Yancey and Craven counties, and through other methods of modern game management, biologists can learn the status of deer herd health. From such studies, they learn whether the deer herd needs to be built up, maintained at its present size or reduced.

In Yancey and Craven counties, reduction of the herd appears necessary in order for the deer herd to stay healthy. And, there are other areas in North Carolina where the deer herd needs thinning for its own good, and for the improvement of future hunting.

That places the burden on the deer hunters in North Carolina.

"If North Carolina is to continue to have deer hunting at its best, and if we want big, healthy deer in good numbers, then we've got to harvest the does," says one biologist. "If we don't, nature will harvest them for us. By using controlled either-sex deer hunts, we can maintain deer herds at levels that are both healthy and huntable. If we let nature do the job, we'll have lots of runty, unhealthy deer some years, and very few deer in other years."

"What can I do to help?" asks the hunter. A good start would be to discard those old traditions about how unsportsmanlike it is to shoot does.

Department of Natural and Economic Resources

White-water canoeing, rafting and kayaking, it seems after one go at it, is an attempt to experience some of the sensations of flying. You descend rapidly, flailing a paddle like a hopelessly ineffective wing, with your craft only partly in control. There is exhilaration in the illusion of speed (you never really go very fast), in the cold water of mountain streams, the threat, more or less real, of danger, and the realization at the end that you have somehow come down that gorge in one piece.

In North Carolina, a good place to begin your white-water career, or just to give the sport a try, is the Nantahala River. It has a good steady drop from the power plant discharge to Wesser, a distance of about eight miles. There are only two scary spots between, and they aren't all that bad. It is a Class Three river, if that means anything to you, but Nantahala Falls just above Wesser is Class Five. Inexperienced people can float it in a raft, but intermediate skills are required for canoes and kayaks.

Nantahala Outdoor Center at Wesser, which is on U.S. Hwy. number 19 a few miles south of Bryson City, provides rafts and guides for floating the Nantahala River and the Chatoga, a much more challenging piece of water on the Georgia-S.C. line. For the Nantahala float, they pack a lunch for you in a waterproof pack, tie it in the raft, snap you up in a life vest and hand you a paddle.

You will get wet, so you should come dressed for that certainty, and the water is cold. It is well to change at the end of the three to four-hour trip.

N.O.C. also rents canoes if you feel your skills are up to floating the river in a more challenging vehicle. They have an inexpensive motel there and an unpretentious restaurant serving hearty meals. A mile away there is a campground.

Steve Laymon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gray Laymon of Route 5, is shown with the "Cropper" he caught while fishing with his Dad and with George Call and his son, Jeff. They were in the Gulf Stream off the coast of Calabash, N.C. Steve used a squid as bait to catch this one which weighed 13 lbs. and 9 ozs.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Burrell have recently returned home after a week's vacation in Honolulu, Hawaii. The tour, sponsored by Hennings Freight Lines, consisted of visiting Pearl Harbor, the pineapple fields in primitive northern Hawaii and Kualoa Country Club where they met basketball star, Jerry West, who was filming commercials for Jantzen Sportsweat. The highlight of the trip was Polynesian Luau held in the Luau Gardens, where they met Al Harrington, Hawaii Five-O's "Ben Kokua", shown above. They also attended one of Harrington's performances in the Tapa Room at Hilton Hawaiian Village.

N.C. Dove Season Set

Dove hunters will get their first shots of the season this year on Saturday, September 1, at high noon.

That's when the first half of North Carolina's split season on doves opens. The first half of the season will run from September 1 through October 6 and the second half will open December 11 and close January 12. Doves can be shot only from noon until sunset, and the daily bag limit this year will again be 12 birds per hunter with a possession limit of 24.

Along with the dove seasons, the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission has also selected dates for seasons on a variety of other migratory gamebirds, including rails, gallinules, woodcock, Wilson's snipe and sea ducks. The season dates are selected from a framework provided by the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife. Federal authorities also set the bag limits.

The season on rails and gallinules will open September 1 and close November 9. For King and clapper rails, the daily bag limit is 15, singly or in aggregate, with a possession limit of 30. The bag and possession limit for sora and Virginia rails is 25, and also singly or in aggregate. The daily bag limit on gallinules is 15 with a possession limit of 30.

The season on sea ducks—scoter, eider and old squaw—during this special season will be limited to the waters of the Atlantic Ocean and to waters of Pamlico Sound east of a line between the towns of Engelhard and Ocracoke, provided that all sea duck hunting takes place in open water at least one mile from any shore, island or marsh.

Season dates and bag limits for other waterfowl, including ducks and geese, will be announced as soon as the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission adopts local dates from the Federal framework of potential seasons which will be provided soon.

Q -- My local VA office has denied me a home loan guarantee on a duplex house I wish to buy. However, I believe I have a good deal. What can I do?

A -- You may write the VA regional director requesting a review of your case. At the same time, any additional information that would help your cause should be included in this communication.

Q -- I read that a new laboratory technique invented by VA is revolutionizing medicine and science. What is it, and what is it used for?

A -- Radioimmunoassay (RIA) ... a medical technique that measures extremely small amounts of substances from the body. It is being used in some hospitals in connection with treatment; for testing blood for hepatitis, and for cancer and other research.

ASCS News

Flue-cured tobacco growers have approved the continuation of acreage-poundage quotas on flue-cured tobacco for the 1974, 1975 and 1976 crop years, according to W. T. Reece, State Executive Director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Reece said that preliminary returns of the July 1 referendum show 97,010 growers in the entire flue-cured area approved quotas and only 1,391 were against the program. The favorable margin of 98.5 percent is well above the two-thirds required for the continuation of the program. In North Carolina a total of 65,307 growers were in favor of the program as compared to 719 against.

You will get wet, so you should come dressed for that certainty, and the water is cold. It is well to change at the end of the three to four-hour trip.

N.O.C. also rents canoes if you feel your skills are up to floating the river in a more challenging vehicle. They have an inexpensive motel there and an unpretentious restaurant serving hearty meals. A mile away there is a campground.

A SEED THOUGHT

May the mind of Christ our Savior,
Live in us from day to day.
By his love and power controlling,

All we do and say.
Take time to talk with God.
Be not contriving to push beyond today's uncertain rim.

Commit to the Lord.
Not all our striving can do as much as one small word with Him.

The 85th year of the Yadkin and Davie Association was held at the Cedar Creek Baptist Church all last week. The theme was, "The Church's One Foundation." It really was a Jubilee revival.

Cherry Hill Lutheran Church To Observe Homecoming Sunday

The Cherry Hill Lutheran Church will observe its 100th anniversary and annual homecoming Sunday, July 29th. A special all day program has been planned and is scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m.

The Rev. John A. Pless, executive director of the North Carolina Lutheran Homes, will deliver the sermon at 11 a.m. Mrs. David A. Rendleman will be accompanist for the song service.

Presentation of new hymnals, a gift of the Sells family, will be made by Laurence H. Sells. The hymnals will be accepted by Daniel B. Miller.

W.A. Sells will give the address of welcome, followed by the sermon entitled "Values That Last" by Mr. Pless. Mrs. Margaret Lynch will sing the offertory solo "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings."

All former members of the community who previously had any connection with the church or the adjoining cemetery are invited to attend and renew childhood memories. Those attending are asked to bring a picnic dinner which will be served following the morning service.

Following the meal, a large anniversary cake will be cut. The cake was donated by the Miller family commemorating the occasion.

At the afternoon service, Mrs. Mary Louise Apperson Davis will read an historical account of Cherry Hill Church compiled by her mother, Mrs. Vernon Apperson. A memorial service will be held during the afternoon, followed by a short business session with election of officers for the Cherry Hill Homecoming Association.

Featured at the afternoon service will be a solo by Mrs. Lynch entitled "Old Cherry Hill." The song was written in 1954 by Mrs. Pearl Baskins and J.A. Ruth, and copyrighted by Ruth the same year.

The congregation was founded on Oct. 15, 1873, organized by the Rev. J.D. Bowles and the Rev. R.P. Zink, and was officially known then, as in records of the North Carolina Lutheran Synod, as Reformation Church.

The same frame building still stands on a wooded knoll two miles from South River off the Mocksville Highway on the same site given to the Lutheran Synod by Mathias Miller.

From its founding 100 years ago until the 1930's, regular services were held at Cherry Hill, with astors supplied by the Lutheran Synod. However, as Lutherans moved out of the community, the church became a part of a circuit with services held once a month. Later, the membership dwindled until services were held there only occasionally. Finally, the church doors had to be locked as it was, with all equipment still in working order.

The memory of the church and its influence has never faded. Every year, there is a beehive of activity in and around the old building.

CELEBRATES CENTENNIAL — Old Cherry Hill Lutheran Church in Davie County will be 100 years old this year. For many years, the church has been locked and silent except for the last Sunday in July, when descendants of charter members gather for homecoming. This year will be a special day celebrating, marking the centennial anniversary. (Post Staff Photo by Bob Bailey)

Golden Age Club

The Davie Golden Age Club met Wednesday in the Rotary Hut with thirty one present. Two songs were sung to open the meeting, followed by an inspiring message by the Rev. Leland Richardson, pastor of the Mocksville Presbyterian Church.

He said taking responsibility is a way of showing love. He used a Bible reading from the eighth chapter of Nehemiah, and closed with prayer.

A luncheon outing in Winston-Salem was planned for Wednesday, August 1. All will meet at the Rotary Hut and go in cars from there. A cook-out was also planned for September. On July the 19th Mrs. Lucy Collette and Mrs. Era Latham were joint hostess to the Cana Homemakers Club at the home of Mrs. Collette.

Due to the absence of our president, Mrs. Wade Hutchens and vice-president, Mrs. Thellicle Brewer, Mrs. Ruby Leagans presided. For devotion, she read the Club Member's Creed, followed by all repeating the Lord's Prayer and singing the Song of Peace.

Committee reports were made. Mrs. Ivey Nell Boger gave a report on "Food Labeling", which was the topic covered by the National Dairy Council, when it entertained about 50 food editors, in Denver, Col. Dr. Ogden C. Johnson of the Food and Drug Administration, gave three possible benefits derived from nutritional labeling; "To identify nutritional quality of products; to use in planning meals; and to stimulate interest in nutrition."

Miss Jane Armstrong thought it an obligation of food editors to educate the consumers. She feels the chief concern about buying foods are: Value they get, weight control, natural foods, and food labeling.

Both Dr. Graham and Dr. Johnson agreed that labeling is very difficult, as there is so much unknown and interrelated. There are many questions about labeling that are still unanswered.

Mrs. Minnie Pope reminded the group of the importance of getting a yearly physical examination.

Mrs. Era Latham called attention to efforts being made to establish a Community Service Program, on a county-wide basis.

Mrs. Ruby Leagans discussed "Silk: a Luxurious, Intriguing Fabric". It has an exciting history, and its secret was guarded for 3,000 years by the Chinese. The U.S. imports most of its silk from Japan, but due to Japan's rapidly growing population and affluence, it has less and less to export. The people of Japan are devoted to silk, a natural fiber, centuries old and because of supply and demand they are importing silk from South Korea. Because of the scarcity of silk it is being combined to a greater extent with man-made fibers.

Mrs. West cautioned the group against the dangers of becoming over-heated while working in the yards and gardens, or any activity. She announced that plans were being formulated for District Day to be held on October 24th in the Armory in Wilkes County.

The subject for this meeting was Window Shade Treatment, and what is new in this area!! Window decoration has been part of our culture since the middle ages. Painted shades were used in the early 18th Century in France, England, and Holland. In America from 1780-1860 painted pastoral scenes and those of pioneer life, were in vogue. In the 19th Century, they became more imaginative, romantic, plus all-over scenes. There were stenciled borders, featuring folk-art, and fringe trim was endless. When starting this new venture, make your plans tie in with over-all decorative scheme, guided by personal taste. Three rules to keep in mind are: 1. Consider family need and interests. 2. Carpet and furniture. 3. Build an image. The ages of family and how your home is to be used is most important. Make a detailed plan for each room you plan to change. For additional help, consult House Beautiful for August, 1973. "All About Windows and How to Dress Them" gives many ideas and suggestions for color choice.

Delicious refreshments of congealed lime salad, wafers, pickle and peanut cookies and tea was served by the hostess.

Closing Out The Day

By ROSCOE BROWN FISHER

Grandpa Brown found a ledge overlooking the valley below. The criss-crossing, cultivated fields were hemmed in by small mountains farther beyond.

Several disturbed stones continued to roll down the nearby ravine as I stopped near the ledge.

"Grandpa," I called . . . as I observed him — motionless, reverent-like . . . immobile, it seemed, to all about him. In his fingers he held his outdated hat, characterizing a decade separated from my own.

Finally he answered, never ceasing to peer at the valley below, "I found this spot some months ago. And now I often stop here where I can be alone. It's not a bad way to close out the day."

"Living is more complicated than when I was a lad. Occasionally, I have to get away from it all: the radio, the TV, the news . . . the papers. There is too much confusion — man against himself: Too much conflict after 200 years of Christ's message of peace. Too much hate, after His message of love. Sometimes I wish I could go away . . . and be removed from it all."

"How long would you want to be away, Grandpa?" I asked.

"Don't know . . . don't know," he murmured.

"Then you would miss the outcome of the Watergate affair."

"Yes, I know," Grandpa relied . . . "So much beauty in our world, and we have to think on these . . . man against man, man against himself."

Grandpa continued speaking, "I've tried something different of late."

"What is that, Grandpa?"

"I no longer listen to the 11 o'clock news. How foolish . . . going to bed . . . and to sleep . . . with all that conflict — of one form or another — in your mind. The psychologists now tell us "what you go to sleep with you wake up with."

"Now I leave off the 11 o'clock news and let God talk to me before I fall asleep."

"Not a bad idea . . . not a bad idea," said I.

ENTERPRISE-RECORD

Feature - 1B July 26, 1973

The photo from McCall's album was taken on March 13, 1908, the day the Cooleemee Cotton Mill burned. Although there was no date on the picture, McCall clearly remembered the exact date as well as the fellow in the foreground, who he identified as the late Bob Shoaf, father of Tom Shoaf of Cooleemee. The men with hoses, he says, were employees in the shop.

Another treasured, and also undated, photo was of the "Mary Mack", a boat built by Lewis Sausman (far right in engine room) in 1904. Mr. McCall says he is the fourth person from the left. The photo was too faded to identify everyone but he remembers John Faulks, T.P. Moose and Jonce Walters also being on the boat.

The Memory Bank . . .

Walt McCall Of Cooleemee

Whenever people in the Cooleemee area get together to talk over old times and try in vain to recall a specific date, place or person's name, which in many cases goes back more than half a century, there is one man who can usually supply this information.

He's Walt McCall . . . The town "memory bank".

Not only does he remember names, places and people, but when it comes to remembering dates, Mr. McCall can tell you the month, day and year. As a matter of fact, there are instances when he even remembers the day of the week.

Unbelievable?

Sure it is, even for a youngster. However Mr. McCall hardly qualifies as a youngster. He will soon be 92, but the years have had no effect on his powerful memory.

"Why, I remember things that happened to me when I was four years old", says Mr. McCall.

"Like Aunt Sophie, the old colored granny woman that belonged to my grandmother during slave time." The family loved Aunt Sophie like any other member of the family, he explained.

He told about the night his younger sister was born. McCall was only four years old, but he remembered every minut detail from the time his father came in and called Aunt Sophie, to the newborn cry that came from his mother's bedroom.

His sister was born on McCall's fourth birthday and at almost the same hour.

Other things he remembers that took place during the fourth year of his life were that he had to sleep between two sisters . . . and the time his cousin bought him a pair of brogan boots with brass toes.

Mr. Walt moved to Cooleemee in 1902 from Charlotte, only one year after the Cooleemee Cotton Mill began operations.

He says he was 20 and a-half years old and this was "the first and only time I ever asked for a job."

"I came here to fish and hunt", he continued, "I just wanted to work enough to meet expenses."

He remembers "Ol Man Terrell", the first manager of the mill. And that there was only one shift in operation at this time. Mr. Walt says, matter of factly, he is the one who started up the second shift, of which he was the overseer. The late Charles Alexander was the general overseer for both shifts and McCall's boss at the time.

"I took John Canupp (now deceased) off an oiling job and put him on a section."

Another incident he remembered about the late Mr. Canupp was that he was one of the very few people in town who owned an automobile at this time.

"I'm the one who first exposed John to iced tea", says McCall. It was one day when he drove Mr. Walt to Charlotte to visit relatives and they were served iced tea. "He didn't know what it was, but he liked it right off."

Mr. McCall says the grocer would probably have thought you were crazy around here if you went into the store and "asked to buy some iced tea."

In those days, he says, there were no refrigerators and everybody waited for the ice man to deliver ice to their homes.

In looking through some old photographs of the past, Mr. Walt came across several that bore interesting stories.

One of the photos was of a boat, the "Mary Mack", built in 1904 he says by Lewis Sausman. Sausman picked up the parts from "what was known then as the old brick yard, near the tressle."

Lewis built the boat, steam engine and all, and put it into operation.

Mr. Walt says he remembers that in addition to himself and Sausman on the boat the day the picture was taken, there was John Faulks, overseer of the spinning room; T.P. Moose, assistant overseer of spinning; Jonce Walters, who ran a "Beer Joint" which stood on the property where George Miller lives today on Center Street. It was called the old "Malt Shop" and was built in 1905.

McCall says he later moved into the home there and used the joint for a barn, which was still standing when the Charles Pierce family lived there.

Although Mr. Walt has a fantastic memory, his eyes are just not quite sharp enough to make out everyone on the fading picture. "But if I could see them I could tell you exactly who they are," he says apologetically.

Another photo which brought back memories was the one taken when the mill burned.

"This was taken on March 13, 1908", he says, "it was Friday 13th."

"I remember reading in the paper a couple of years ago that on a Friday 13th a box car ran into the boiler room", he added before completing his story.

McCall discovered the fire in the Lapp Room.

"I was overhauling in the Spinning Room and had just finished the last frame in the new end. I'd just laid my tools down and Should Funerals Be Pre-Arranged?

Talking about death is often difficult. Yet a death in the family often creates problems for the survivors.

Is advance planning for the funeral an answer to such problems?

"Sometimes," says Albert S. Lineberry, President of the North Carolina Funeral Directors Association. "But the advantages and disadvantages for advance planning depends upon individual circumstances. What may be in the best interest for some may be impractical for others."

Advance planning for the funeral is now, however, considered by many for varied reasons. Persons without children or close relatives, for example, often want to assure themselves of an adequate funeral. Retired persons sometimes desire to make arrangements that their bodies be returned to their hometowns at death.

"The pre-need arrangement does provide a person with the opportunity to indicate his wishes in writing," points out Lineberry. "It also enables one to review and evaluate current funeral costs, funeral ceremonies, and burial procedures."

And counseling with a funeral director may well be both an educational and positive experience, he feels.

"Aside from the specific reasons for discussing advance funeral arrangements, it brings the subject of death out into the open and affords the family an opportunity to share their thoughts," he explains.

Lineberry also feels that it is always wise to consult those who will be affected by the death. "It is important to remember that while the funeral is of the person who has died," he comments, "it is actually for those who survive. Those survivors whose feelings will be most affected by the death should be consulted before prescribing a definite kind of funeral. Permitting them to assist in advance planning of the funeral and interment serves as a healthy outlet for their grief."

Information for pre-planning the funeral is now available in a new pamphlet, "Advance Planning for the Funeral", recently developed by the North Carolina Funeral Directors Association as a public service. The pamphlet may be obtained without cost or obligation by writing the NCFDA, P.O. Box 274, Fremont, N.C. 27830 started to the Machine Shop when I spotted it."

He says he then ran into the shop and told "Lindsey Misenheimer, the master mechanic" the mill was on fire.

From this point McCall ran to Tiller's desk which was in a corner on the second floor. He says he grabbed the time book and several other things lying on the desk and jumped out the window onto the fire escape. He then slid down it landing onto a portion of roof over the first story and jumped to the ground.

"Just as I got clear of the building, about where Bob Shoaf in this picture (pointing to a man in the foreground of the old photo) was standing, the whole top story caved in."

"Course I was only 26 years old then," he said as a big grin came across his face, "and tough as a pine knot."

Mr. McCall says there were several Friday 13th incidents that are quite clear in his mind.

For instance, after he finally persuaded the late Mrs. McCall to marry him, she wanted to be married on "Picnic Day".

"I told her no, this was Friday 13th, he said, "That's the day the mill burned and it was always unlucky for me."

"We got married the Sunday before . . . on August 9."

Mr. McCall's son, Charles, an employee of Heritage Furniture Co. who makes his home with his dad, teased him about not telling what a "hard time he had even getting a date with her." And they had known each other for four years.

"Mama (as he affectionately referred to his wife) said I was the ugliest and meanest man she'd ever seen and she hated she ever laid eyes on me."

They dated for only six months until they were married.

Charles reminded his Dad that Friday 13th had not always been unlucky, in fact, that very day this month they considered to be quite lucky.

"We got the mausoleum erected on Friday 13th and Mom's body moved here from Alabama", Charles explained. This is something they had been wanting to do ever since they returned to Cooleemee several years ago.

They moved to Alabama on "September 10, 1946", according to Mr. McCall after he retired as an overseer of the spinning room at the mill.

They first left Cooleemee in 1926, he says, and moved to High Point, but returned again in 1933.

"I've returned home for good", he says. "I've done got my grave dug and all they got to do is put me in a casket and slide me in."

Charles says he has traveled all over the world but he "never gave up the thought of one day returning to Cooleemee to live."

While talking of interesting places in the town, Mr. McCall told of the Blacksmith Shop that was located on Center Street on the site of the Anderson home. And the Livery Stable stood where the Jerry Bailey residence is on Marginal Street. The barn, he says, was later moved by the mill to the location of the Fred Pierce home, where it stood until just a few years ago when it was torn down.

For years, the mill company kept their big mules in it he says, which were used to deliver coal to the families in the village.

Apparently, Mr. Walt's fantastic memory runs in the family. Charles says his dad's sister, who lives in Charlotte, also has memory "just like dad's."

He also has a granddaughter with possibly a photographic memory, which they think she may have inherited.

Like her grandfather, she too is a walking memory bank.

Mr. Walt says he doesn't really know what to attribute to his long life and continued good health.

"I've been smoking for 78 years", he said as he lit up his pipe, but he didn't want to leave the impression that this was the right thing for everyone to do.

"I'm gonna live to be over a hundred if I can", he says, "or just as long as they'll let me."

They dated for only six months until they were married.

Charles reminded his Dad that Friday 13th had not always been unlucky, in fact, that very day this month they considered to be quite lucky.

"We got the mausoleum erected on

Library News

Participants in the Summer Reading Program of the Davie County Public Library were entertained on Friday afternoon, in the Main Library, to mark the close of the program for this season. Many young people who had "followed the trail of the pioneers" across a large map of our country, showing their reading progress with claim-stakes and covered wagons bearing their names, enjoyed a delightful meal.

The movie was RABBIT HILL from the book of the same title by Robert Lawson. Real animals were used to tell the story of the rabbit family and their friends who lived on Rabbit Hill, and their concern about the "new folks" moving into the big house. All children love this classic tale and the young audience Friday was no exception.

Favors were presented to those present, and all who have completed twenty books during the program will receive certificates to be awarded at their schools in the fall. Children who have read from the Bookmobile, the Cooleemee Branch and the Main Library have participated in the program. The Map will remain in the library until the end of August.

Wim's Whims

By Wim Osborne

We've had some hot days recently -- for those who do not use Dial, (not everyone does) I dedicate the following son.

I Walk Alone

(Tune same as old song by the same title.)

I walk alone, because to tell you the truth I have BO.
I don't mind having BO, when my nose tells me you have BO, too.

I walk alone, they ask me why and I tell them I'd rather, 'cause my soap just won't lather.
Soap I bought at the store, a soap called PORE.

I'll always be near you, the odor's so strong, each day in every breeze. If you sniff, you'll smell me no matter how far. Just breathe real deep, and I'll be there.

Please walk alone, and send your fumes and your odors to guide me.
Then, I'll rush up beside thee -- we'll walk alone, together.

I'm now working on a new(?) song --- "Ban, You Didn't Do Right By Me." All right, who is the smarty-pants who said my songs smell? STINK is more descriptive.

ART, CULTURE and HISTORY

Grace J. Rohrer, Secretary

There are several commendable membership organizations in North Carolina for people interested in the state's history, and two are operated in conjunction with the Division of Archives and History.

The North Carolina Literary and Historical Association and the North Carolina Society for the Preservation of Antiquities are both long-standing participants in "Culture Week," the state's unique annual gathering in Raleigh of cultural and historical groups.

The Literary and Historical Association was the first effective statewide organization devoted to fostering the literature and history of the state. It was established in 1900 and is widely recognized as the "parent" of cultural organizations within North Carolina.

The association's primary purposes are to promote interest in the literature and history of North Carolina, to encourage literary activity within the state, and to stimulate varied activity in the field of state and local history. The former Department of Archives and History was created by association-sponsored legislation.

Members receive "Carolina Comments," which is published six times per year, and the North Carolina Historical Review, a quarterly featuring articles on various periods, people, and events in North Carolina. The Christopher Crittenden Memorial Award is presented during Culture Week each December to a person, organization, or group which has contributed significantly to the preservation of North Carolina history.

The primary purpose of the Society for the Preservation of Antiquities is to support and encourage the preservation and restoration of historic sites, buildings, and other antiquities.

CGA Golf Championship Underway At Tanglewood

A full field of 160 players teed off Tuesday at Tanglewood Park in the qualifying round of the 59th Annual Championship of the Carolinas Golf Association.

The Tanglewood course has recently been revamped and will be where the 1974 National PGA Championship will be played. The course measures 7,050 yards with par at 70. This is the second year in a row that a Robert Trent Jones layout has been selected for this event, being played last year at the new Chanticleer Course in Greenville, S.C.

Defending champion is David Canipe of Fayetteville who last month won the N.C. Amateur Championship. Canipe defeated Heyward Sullivan in last year's championship final and is exempt from qualifying. There are three additional former champions in the field: Harry

Cooleemee Baptist Win In Softball

The First Baptist Church Cooleemee won the double elimination softball playoffs held at the Cooleemee Ball Park over the weekend.

The First Baptist won three games on Saturday. They beat Edgewood 6-4; Pats "76", 7 to 6; and in the final game beat the Cooleemee Methodist, 11-10 to win the championship.

The trophy was presented to the church on Sunday morning.

Pats "76" won the regular season championship and the Cooleemee Methodist team was runnerup in both the regular season and play-off.

Pats "76" trophy was given to Fred Hellard in remembrance of his son, Dickie Hellard, who played ball with Fred and Pat's "76" before he was killed in an accident.

Two Super Sport Events In August

August the noun is the eighth month of the year.

August the adjective means admiration, grandeur, majestic.

Connected by your favorite verb - such as go, see, do - the noun and adjective combine for an interesting time in North Carolina.

Two super sports events take place during the month - Golf's Only Doubleheader, and the Tanglewood International Tennis Classic. Both will attract the top players in their respective sports.

Golf's Only Doubleheader will be played August 23-26 at MacGregor Downs Country Club at Cary, 10 miles from Raleigh. The $25,000 twinbill consists of the Liggett & Myers Open and the U.S. Professional Match Play Championship. Jack Nicklaus defeated Frank Beard Two and One for the Match Play Championship in 1972, while Lou Graham took the L&M first prize in a four-player sudden-death playoff. North Carolina offers more money to the PGA players than any other state.

The Tanglewood Tennis Classic, August 7-12 at Clemmons near Winston-Salem, is a $25,000 stop on the major summer tennis circuit. Thirty-two of the world's top professional men players will compete in singles and doubles. Jaime Fillol of Chile, 1971 Tanglewood champ, will be on hand to try and regain his title.

Free Bats And Baseballs To Little Leagues

PHILADELPHIA — A major consumer packaged goods promotion that will benefit Little League baseball teams across the country has been announced here.

Up to $300,000 worth of official baseballs and bats will be distributed to officially chartered Little Leagues through a Scott Paper Company promotion.

Through July, collection of Seals of Quality from five of Scott's packaged production division products will earn up to five cents in value toward the baseballs and bats.

League efforts to collect Seals of Quality will be coordinated; however, individual consumers are urged to participate as well.

Distribution of baseballs and bats will be made on a prorated basis and will be handled entirely from Little League headquarters in Williamsport, Pa., to authorized Little Leagues.

This arrangement with Scott marks the first time in the 34 year history of Little League that it has agreed to become partners with a major company.

Little League has more than 6,000 leagues throughout the United States with over one million youngsters participating in 50,000 teams.

Brands involved in the promotion include ScotTowels, Scotties Facial Tissue, Scott-Tissue, Scott Family Napkins and Waldford/Family Scott Bathroom Tissue.

Motorists Warned Of Farm Implements On Highway

A special hazard for motorists will accelerate in number during the next few months in North Carolina. As the harvest season goes into high gear for North Carolina farmers, slow moving vehicles (all manner of farm implements) use North Carolina roads more than at any other time of the year.

The slow moving vehicles are, naturally, more prevalent on the State's vast secondary road system than on the primary roads.

Traffic records at the Department of Motor Vehicles show that the losses from collisions between slow moving equipment and faster moving motor vehicles will be approximately $1,000,000 this year.

The festival is being held on the campus of Brevard High School, so space is no problem. For overnight accommodations, though, some people are being placed in nearby Asheville and Hendersonville, as well as Brevard.

Adding to it is the fact that Brevard is a popular vacation spot, and in the cool mountains August is the biggest month for visitors. Also, Van Cliburn is appearing in concert later the same evening at Brevard Music Center, and this is bringing in additional hundreds of people.

"This place is going to be full of people, all right," Tate said. "We'll be able to take care of them all but right now it's keeping us running to get everything set."

When asked about political aspects of the festival, Tate looked a little uncomfortable. He is president of the local Young Democrats Club, and it was the YDC that got behind the festival idea and pushed it.

"With Sen. Ervin here a lot of Democrats of course will attend," Tate said. "But we're trying to emphasize that this is a public event and a county-wide effort. We've invited Republican officials, too, and already got responses from several.

"The whole idea is to provide a chance for people to come and enjoy a good trout dinner and to meet and talk with their elected representatives-of both parties. Call it political if you want to, but make sure you say it is bi-partisan."

A Department of Transportation spokesman cautioned motorists to slow to speeds less than 30 miles per hour upon sight of a farm vehicle on a road, or about to enter a road. The spokesman also cautioned motorist to be aware of the fact that any farm machine operators will not hear a horn due to the noise being made by

Stimulating Flying Interest In Area

Strawberry Hill Officials Lease Twin Lakes Airport

by -- David Hoyle

"We want to stimulate flying interest in this area -- to get more people to see the benefits of flying," said Bill Melang, vice-president of Strawberry Hill Soaring Center.

Melang and his partner, C. A. (Gus) Street, Jr., have recently leased Twin Lakes Airport on Fork Church Road to add to their aviation interests in the Southeastern section of Davie County.

"We wanted to get the Piper dealership and a different client," Melang remarked in explaining the reasons for leasing the new airport only three air miles from their Strawberry Hill headquarters. The men already have the largest single engine Cessna dealership in the Southeast United States.

Twin Lakes, built by the Lamb-Young interests in Winston-Salem, includes a 3,000 foot paved runway, 50 feet wide and lighted for night flying, an asphalt apron, paved taxi strips and hard stands for plane tie-downs. A 50-car parking lot is also paved.

A 1700 square foot administration building, a 60 x 60 foot maintenance hanger and a 350 foot long T-hanger are also included in the new airport which was built in 1972.

In acquiring Twin Lakes, the men altered the hanger facilities and shop to take larger aircraft. "Everything else there was new and so there were no real problems," Street said.

Either airport can store up to about 50 planes with the present facilities, Street said, including a hanger at Twin Lakes which houses about 12 airplanes.

The two airport operations, employing 15 persons, includes a sales department, flight school, charter service, as well as such assorted jobs as supplying the plane for the traffic report on WTOP radio in Winston-Salem.

The corporation is a direct factory dealer for Cessna and Piper planes. "We'll order anywhere from four to eight airplanes at the time from the factory," Melang said. They also offered a flight course which can teach a man to fly in 35 hours.

The maintenance shop and another flight school are located in the new facilities at Twin Lakes. "We overlap in both places, actually," Street explained.

The Strawberry Hill facilities, where their main office is located employs 20 to 30 acres for airport use out of the 155 acres that was for 18 years Street's Dairy farm. Street used to divide his interests between dairy farming and flying before his barn burned down and he went into the airplane business full time.

Melang was employed by Piedmont Airlines for 7 years in aircraft sales before coming to Strawberry Hill.

Cooleemee Senior Citizens Personals

Mrs. Bertha Beck of Roanoke, Virginia has returned home after spending several days last week here with her sister, Mrs. O.H. Hartley. Other visitors in the Hartley home included Mrs. Harvey Potts of New Orleans and Mr. and Mrs. John Pittman and sons, Mark and Blake, of Thompson, Georgia. Mark and Blake returned to Roanoke with Mrs. Beck (their grandmother) for a visit. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hartley drove Mrs. Beck and her grandsons home on Thursday.

The treasurer reported a balance $465.81 in the club treasury. Reports were also heard from the Sunshine and Birthday Committees.

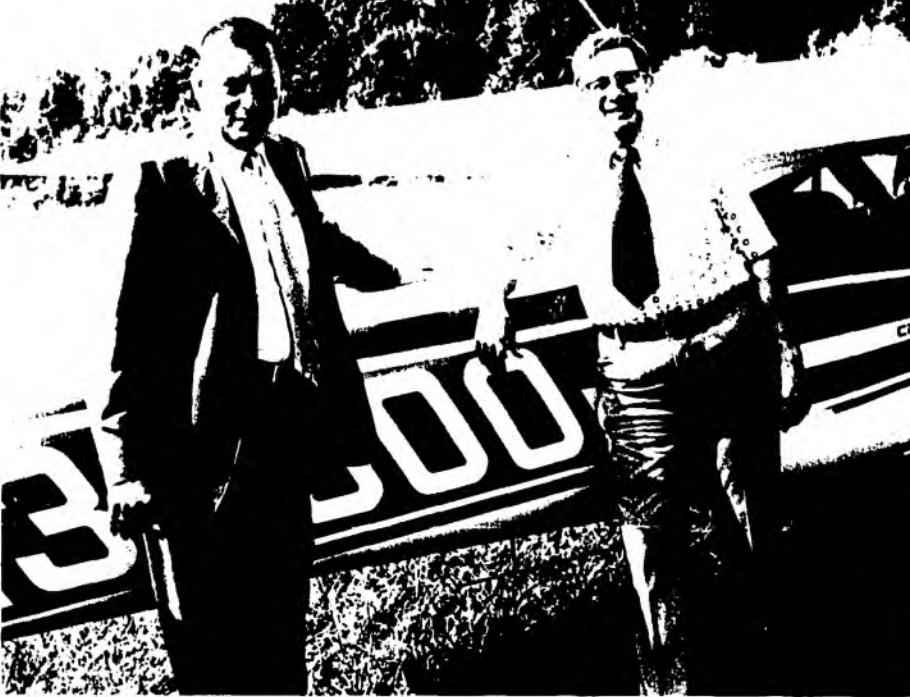

A request from the Lynn Haven Nursing Home of Mocksville for a program in the fall was presented. The club accepted the opportunity to be of service to the nursing home.

Misses Sadie and Ellen Click thanked the club for the cards sent during the passing of their brother Eddie Click.

Mrs. Will Nolley was received as a new member. Forty-one members were present.

A communication was received from Mrs. Louise Johnson regarding the possibility of relationship with a proposed executive board of senior citizens of Davie County. The matter was discussed and the club voted unanimously to continue the Cooleemee Senior Citizens Club in the future as has been done in the past.

A fellowship with home-made cakes, drinks and coffee was enjoyed by all.

Champion International Reports Best Quarter

Substantial increases in all three of its major businesses carried Champion International to new records for sales and earnings in both the second quarter and first half of 1973, the company announced today.

"Our Paper and Allied Products and Furnishings businesses showed sharp improvement, and together with our excellent Building Materials business helped lay the foundation for what we hope will be a record year," T.F. Willers, chairman and chief executive officer, said.

During the second quarter, net sales rose by 21.0 per cent to $580,800,000 from $479,880,000 in the like quarter a year ago. Net earnings were $27,950,000 compared with $16,993,000 during 1972, and increase of 64.5 per cent. Earnings per common share rose to $.90 from $.50, an increase of 80.0 per cent.

Assuming conversion of convertible securities, income per share in the second quarter of 1973 was $.076, compared to $.045 last year, a rise of 68.9 per cent.

"Our Paper and Allied Products and Furnishings

Products and Furnishings company cannot expect to make during the first half, maintain its second-quarter Looking to 1974, we anticipate level of performance, but our no sharp decline for our earnings will remain very good by historical standards. Normal seasonal factors play a role in this belief, as does the recent price deterioration in softwood plywood and a number of other building materials caused by increased supplies.

"But it should be pointed out that even with the long-anticipated downturn in the number of housing starts, they will still total approximately 2 million units this year, as indicated by the number of building permits being used.

Accordingly, the demand for building materials will remain firm. "Our Paper and Allied

A -- There is nothing to prevent you from applying to a school now. After acceptance by the school, contact VA. Make sure you have a copy of discharge papers (DD 214) so VA can authorize educational benefits under the G.I. Bill.

Farm Tips

By Dr. J. W. Pou
Agricultural Specialist
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

Food prices are high just like the price of virtually everything else. The difference is, food prices will come down eventually. The other prices may not. They usually don't.

Americans are so used to prices going up and never coming down that the tendency is to lump every item into the same category. Overlooked is the fact that agriculture responds to high prices by increasing production, often to the point of overproduction. This brings prices down.

North Carolina State University extension economists, in a recent series of papers on the many aspects of food pricing, point out that agricultural products do not follow the continuous upward trend that many other products follow.

Agricultural prices do go up, as they have in recent months, but they also come down. Sometimes they go up very fast, but they often go down very fast.

A 3 percent meat price increase this month, for example, doesn't mean a 40 percent increase for the year, as might be expected. In fact, it may mean a 10 percent decline somewhere down the road.

The nature of livestock production reveals why meat prices move both ways up as well as down. A farmer can't decide today to produce a beef steer or hog and market it tomorrow. Weeks, months or even years are required.

The farmer doesn't know what price he will get for his product at the time he decides to produce it. He guesses that it will be profitable. He often bases his guess about prices on what he has been getting recently and what he is getting now. So, if prices are high now, he guesses maybe they will stay high at least long enough for him to get geared up and produce a lot more at the high price level.

Once the farmer has decided to produce something, there are not many good ways of stopping the production process. Once a baby pig is born, there is a pretty good chance that in four to six months there will be a 200-pound live hog headed for market.

So what happens? When prices are low, farmers decide to cut back on production because they are losing money. But when they reduce production, prices begin to go up. So they decide to increase production again in response to the profitable prices. But it takes time before they have anything to sell. As everyone eventually has more to sell, prices fall again but they have to go ahead and sell all they have started to produce even at low prices. Thus, the cycle starts all over again.

The length of the cycle depends on the length of the production process and other factors such as changes in production costs and changes in consumption habits which change the normal relationship between levels of production, prices and profits. The hog-pork cycle tends to be about four to six years in length, the beef cycle is longer 10 years or more.

When several commodities reach the high price part of their cycles at one time, it may have a rather drastic effect on food prices. This seems to be what has happened recently according to the N.C. State University economists. So meat prices are high. But it is not likely that they will stay high very long. They will be low again and then it will be the producers rather than the consumers who are in a bind.

The only thing that makes these ups and downs tolerable, for producers as well as consumers, is that at least prices are neither high or low all of the time.

Northwestern Bank Opens New Branch In Clemmons

The grand opening of the new main office of the Northwestern Bank of Clemmons will be this Saturday. Open house festivities will commence at 2 p.m. and last until 8 p.m.

The new bank located at the corner of Lewisville-Clemmons Road and Cook Avenue is built and decorated in colonial style. It contains some 3,800 square feet of working space plus 1,500 square feet of storage.

The former home of Northwestern in Clemmons at the Clemmons Center will continue to operate as a full-service bank.

The new bank is designed to be more departmentalized than the branch.

The loan department, both installment and commercial, are separated from the teller functions and all loan related actions are being transferred from the branch to the new office.

For the customer's convenience, the new main office has six inside-teller windows and four note teller windows — plus three drive-in windows.

According to Tommy Anthony, assistant vice president, "with this new main office, Northwestern Bank will be the only self operating bank in Clemmons."

Many bank officials including D. Vernon Deal, chairman of the board; Edwin Duncan, Jr., president; George B. Collins, senior vice president; and Gwen Bowers, vice president, will be on hand for the occasion.

Refreshments will be served and a special favor will be given to everyone attending.

Children under 14 years of age will be able to register for a boy's or girl's bike if they are accompanied by an adult. Winners will not have to be present to win.

Also, at the open house, keys to "Northwestern's Treasure Chest of Prizes" will be given away. During the following week, keyholders will be allowed to attempt to unlock the chest. Prizes including a portable color television, Color-Pack Polaroid Camera, 8-track tape player with AM-FM radio, 50 gallons of gasoline, two $25 savings accounts and many others will be given to those who have keys that fit.

Hours for both the new main office and the branch are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday. The new main office will open for business Monday.

CONGRESSMAN EARL B. RUTH Reports FROM WASHINGTON

INFLATION

THE 93RD CONGRESS has recently passed the half-way point of its first session.

During the past few weeks, the emphasis was on ap-

ning of a new fiscal year. This current "Battle of the Budget" was fought in committee as well as on the Floor of the House and the Senate.

The "Battle" occurs every year, yet this time there was a real sense of urgency in the air due to the fact that it was now or never if we were to get a hold of Federal spending.

THE NATIONAL DEBT reveals how serious the situation really is.

In 1940, the national debt amounted to $43 billion. Now, only three decades later, it is a staggering $455 billion — an increase of over tenfold.

True, there have been three wars in the past thirty years, and they have increased the debt a great deal. But however the money has been used, the fact remains that the Federal government spent almost half a trillion dollars more than it took in during this period.

Unfortunately, advocating spending has been the popular thing to do. Because the money in the Treasury does not appear to belong to any particular person, this temptation to spend it has existed.

THE ECONOMY of the United States now amounts to over one trillion dollars. With an economy such as this, we can afford to fund many programs. However, we can no longer afford to fund costly, large-scale programs which have only inadequate small-scale planning to back them.

And, government is the nation's largest business.

Records reveal that in 1971, local, state, and Federal governments together generated $137 billion in income. Private services were the second place contributors to the economy, generating $110 billion.

Income from the government provides about one dollar out of every five to our national

By Ted Kestigian

For the first time in our history, the money Americans are now spending on their leisure pursuits is exceeding national defense expenditures. It is more than the outlay for new home construction. It surpasses the total of our country's entire corporate profits and will exceed the overall value of this nation's total exports.

...about your Social Security

Q. I don't live in Salisbury, so must depend upon others for transportation to get to your office. What's the best time to come, so I won't have to make my friends wait for me too long?

A. Early afternoon is usually the best time. We seem to be busiest in mid-morning and late afternoon. Better yet, though, why don't you phone before you come? We may have to send you some papers to sign, but we can complete almost all types of interviews by phone now and this may be able to save you and your friends a trip altogether.

Q. Please verify something for me, so I can win an argument with a friend. I'm sure I was told I can earn up to $200 this year and still draw all of my social security retirement benefits, but my friend insists that amount is $2400. Which one is right?

A. You are, for 1973. But your friend is right for 1974. A recent action by Congress increased the amount you can earn, but made it effective in 1974.

Q. May husband and I draw social security benefits and are covered under Medicare, too. We have a son who lives at home and has never been able to work. He's in his mid-40's now, and we draw a small social security check for him because of his disability. Can he get Medicare, too? He needs to see a doctor quite often.

A. If your son has been getting his benefit as your disabled child for at least 24 months, you should have already received a Medicare card for him to show he is covered as July 1. If you haven't get in touch with us right away, for he should be eligible.

Q. My husband's 76 year old grandfather lives with us and is not getting any social security benefit because he never worked under it. He is under Medicare and that's a help, but we have to struggle to meet his other needs. Isn't there any way he can get a benefit?

A. It sounds like he might qualify for a new program known as Supplemental Security Income beginning in 1974. He, or someone in his behalf, ought to get in touch with our office (or your nearest office if you don't live here) about filing for these payments. It's not too early to do it now. You didn't explain your overall financial situation, so I must assume that he cannot now qualify for cash payments through the County Department of Social Services. If there is any doubt on that point, you should contact that office, too.

Q. May wallet was lost or was stolen and I need my social security card. How long will it take?

A. If you can give us your old number, we can have it verified and a replacement card issued

YOUR OPINION OF DUKE POWER PUTTING A GENERATING PLANT IN DAVIE COUNTY?

Interviews by Marlene Benson

MRS. GRACE CALL, Advance, R.J. Reynolds Co. - "Well I think it would be fine. I do think it would be helpful to the county."

MRS. SYLVIA HUTCHENS, Yadkinville, Moxvil Mfg. Co. employee - "Well we really need it. It should be profitable to this county."

ROBERT COOK, Mocksville Deputy Sheriff - "Excellent. We need all the growth we can get. We need the money and all it will provide. I like to fish in the river as well as anybody and I don't think it will bother it. They (Duke Power) always leave things better than they found it."

GARY HARRIS, Rt. 2, Mocksville, Davie Ambulance Service - "I really think it should be done. To tell you the truth, I think it would help the county out a lot."

HENRY TAYLOR, Mocksville, Star Laundry employee - "Well, I guess it would help in taxes but it looks like Duke Power has bought up enough land. They have a lot of control and if they keep getting more and more control, they'll have their rates at anything they want."

Baptist Children's Homes Story Released In Book

"Love In Action", a book depicting the story of the Baptist Children's Homes of North Carolina, Inc. written by the late Weston C. Reed of Kinston, has been released by the child care agency for public sale.

The book traces the development of the Children's Homes between 1885 and 1970. It is the story of how a Christian ministry of child care for dependent, neglected and homeless children and their families has been built by North Carolina Baptists since 1885.

Senator

The author served the Children's Homes first as superintendent of Kennedy Home in Kinston from 1943 until 1950 and then as general superintendent of the Homes until retirement in 1958. At his death in 1970, Reed served as a consultant to the agency.

Reed spent the last day of his life, August 30, 1970, working on "Love In Action" by alphabetizing an appendix which lists the name of each person who worked for the Children's Homes between 1932 and 1970. He was stricken with a heart attack an hour after completing the tedious task and died in a Kinston hospital the next day.

Following her husband's death, the author's wife, Mrs. Mellie Parker Reed, undertook the responsibility for publishing the finished work. Supported and assisted by her children, she joined Dr. W.R. Wagoner, agency president, and members of the BCH staff in the task which required almost three years to complete.

Her son-in-law, Dr. R.L. Huguley, a faculty member at Western Carolina University, also provided invaluable assistance with editing.

Reed outlines the Homes' first three general superintendents administrations by summarizing the late B.W. Spilman's book, "The Mills Home, A History of the Baptist Orphanage Movement in North Carolina" published in 1932.

Through a series of personal profiles, he introduces Baptist Children's Homes administrators and their co-workers during the past 40 year period. Among these are his predecessors, Dr. I.G. Greer and Dr. Zeno Wall, his own administration, and Dr. Wagoner. Reed also introduces each member of the Board of Trustees during the period and recalls wills and bequests of friends of the Homes which have made possible buildings on each of the campuses.

Of special interest are chapters concerning the children in care and alumni of the Homes. The author recaptures the meaning of church, school and cottage life across the years and rekindles the alumni's love for their home.

Published by Edwards and Broughton Company in Raleigh, the book is obtainable through the Baptist Children's Homes in Thomasville or in local bookstores across the state at a cost of $5.95. The first printing provided 2,000 books for sale.

Ervin Says

Our country is confronted with a crisis of its most precious resource, energy.

The warning signs began appearing last year. Schools and factories were closed because of short fuel supplies. Gasoline shortages, despite some lessening in recent days, have caused more than two thousand independent gasoline dealers to close their businesses. Prices of gasoline have skyrocketed, and a nationwide campaign is now underway to reduce non-essential travel.

Many feel that the gasoline shortage is a cruel hoax and that it has never really existed. But energy experts tell us that even if we get by this summer with a minimum of hardship, the fuel shortage will be back again next year and is likely to worsen.

All energy officials tell us that the problem has been temporarily reduced by increasing crude oil imports. These supplies have permitted U.S. refineries to operate at 93 percent of their capacity in the last sixty days, a condition that has not occurred in many years. Deputy Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, Chairman of the Oil Policy Committee, attributes the President's elimination of oil quotas on imports as the main reason for recent improvement in gasoline supplies. Simon also says that motorists have responded favorably to pleas which have conserved gasoline.

Even so, the average American motorist now drives about 16,500 miles a year. Not very long ago, this average was 10,000 miles a year. All of which indicate that there is a substantial change in U.S. driving habits. The automobile is no longer a luxury but serves as a necessary means of accomplishing our daily tasks.

Last week the Senate considered S. 1081, a bill introduced by Senator Jackson to expedite the construction of the Trans-Alaskan Pipeline to bring much needed supplies of energy into the other forty-nine states. I supported S. 1081 and a Floor amendment offered by Senator Jackson to insure that the development and transportation of North Slope crude oil and natural gas can be brought to consumers as swiftly as is possible.

Human Resources in Action
in North Carolina

How many highschoolers do you know who would give up several afternoons a week to brighten the days of a 16-month-old boy who had both legs amputated to correct a birth defect?

Or to be a friend and companion to a fellow teen whose surgery required him to remain hospitalized in bed in a body cast for three months?

Every weekday afternoon at the N.C. Orthopedic Hospital in Gastonia, an institution within the N.C. Department of Human Resources, about 15 teenagers come by after school to visit, play with and feed the patients. During the summer, they often come for the full day.

The teenagers are participants in a nationally recognized volunteer service project at the hospital known as MOD Teens. Since the group was established three years ago, MOD Teens have given over 15,000 volunteer hours to the children at the Orthopedic Hospital.

MOD Teens is a unique junior volunteer project sponsored by the Greater Piedmont Chapter of the March of Dimes, hence the name MOD. The National Foundation for the March of Dimes recently selected three outstanding teen service groups to appear in a movie about its youth groups. The Orthopedic Hospital's MOD Teens was one of the three groups chosen to be featured in a film made for nationwide distribution.

Just as its MOD Teens are unique among volunteer groups, the Orthopedic Hospital is unique in the services it provides. For one thing, all its patients are babies, young children and teens. Patients over 16 years of age are not admitted.

It is a state-owned and operated hospital which for 52 years has offered specialized orthopedic services -- primarily surgery to correct birth defects -- at no charge to children from medically indigent families. The average patient load is between 60 and 80 children.

The idea for MOD Teens

AS HEARD BY HEARD

What Price Productivity?

Along with the price control program a great deal of publicity emanates out of Washington on increasing productivity.

Along with this barrage of publicity, there are heavy blasts at the mounting costs of food and somewhere in the chain of food production and distribution attempts are being made to isolate villain.

Let's consider this matter of productivity.

Since 1965 the productivity of the American farm has risen 26 per cent. In business and industry the productivity increase has been only 8 per cent.

If it were not for the exports of raw foodstuffs, the balance of payments deficit would be even more critical than at present. Increased productivity by the American farmer has lowered costs so that his products are attractive in the foreign markets.

But on the other hand, the American farmer has not benefited from this increase in productivity. As a matter of fact, he is worse off than he has been in the past forty years.

One of the leading tax study groups is asking the impossible.

Okinawa Ocean Exposition to Stress
Co-existence of Man and Nature

Motobu Peninsula, site of the International Ocean Exposition to be held in 1975. In upper right: the official symbol of Expo '75.

Construction of Expo '75, the world's first marine-centered exposition, began with a ground-breaking ceremony March 2 on Okinawa's beautiful Motobu Peninsula. The International Ocean Exposition with the theme "The Sea We Would Like to See" will be held in commemoration of Okinawa's return to Japan from U.S. jurisdiction in May, 1972.

Over 150 countries and international organizations have been invited to participate in the fair. It will be opened to the public March 2, 1975, offering visitors to the coral reefs of northern Okinawa tangible evidence of the harmonious co-existence of man and nature.

Among the attractions at the six-month fair will be "Aquapolis", prototype of sea cities of the future. The 21,500 yard floating city will house a restaurant, theater and exhibits of ocean science and technology.

Ten pavilions onshore will hold international exhibitions based on science and technology, ships, fish and the folklore and history of the sea.

EMPLOYMENT

Many a convincing orator can't even get a hearing at home.

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q) My wife and I had over $18,000 in income last year. Does this mean that we cannot take advantage of the increased deduction for child care?

A) No. You may still have a partial deduction. Your deductible child care expenses must be reduced by one-half of the amount by which your adjusted gross income exceeds $18,000 for one year. This means that you may have up to $27,000 in income before your child care deduction is phased out. For more information, see IRS Publication 603, "Child Care and Disabled Dependent Care." It's available free by dropping a postcard to your Internal Revenue district office.

Q) I paid someone to prepare my return for 1972. Can I deduct his fee on my 1972 return?

A) No. Since most taxpayers are on the cash basis, practically all deductible expenses, including tax preparer fees, may be deducted only in the year they are paid. Thus, if you itemize deductions, you may deduct on your 1973 return the amount paid in 1972 to have your 1972 return prepared.

Q) I had two jobs last year, and more than the maximum amount of social security tax was withheld from my pay. Can I claim the excess?

A) Yes. If you worked for two or more employers during 1972 and more than $9,000 of your wages were subject to social security tax, you are entitled to claim the excess social security tax as a credit against your income tax. See your tax form instructions for details.

However, if you worked for only one employer during 1972, and more than $468 in social security tax was withheld, you may not claim the excess as an income tax credit. Your employer should adjust this over-collection with you.

Q) How can I tell if a contribution to a particular organization is tax deductible?

A) If you itemize deductions, you may deduct contributions to organizations operated for religious, charitable or educational purposes. Some examples are churches, community chests, nonprofit schools, hospitals, etc. The organization itself should be able to tell you whether contributions made to it are deductible or you may call the IRS.

Q) Where can I get information on tax law changes affecting my 1972 return?

A) Internal Revenue Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax, 1973 edition," describes all the tax law changes affecting your 1972 return. It may be purchased for 75 cents at IRS district offices, Government Printing Office book stores, and many post offices.

Q) I heard that there are five tests that must be met for a taxpayer to claim a person as a dependent. What are they?

A) For a person to qualify as your dependent for 1972, the following tests must be met:

1) You must furnish over half of the dependent's total support during the calendar year;

2) Unless the person is less than 19 years of age at the end of the year or a full-time student during five months of the year, you may not claim him as a dependent if his gross income is $750 or more;

3) The person must be a member of your household and live with you for the entire year or be closely related to you;

4) He must be a U.S. citizen or resident, or a resident of Canada, Mexico, American Samoa, Panama Canal Zone or the Republic of Panama for some part of the year; and

5) The person must not file a joint return unless one is not due but was filed merely to obtain a refund.

Q) When will I receive my refund check?

A) It normally takes six weeks, but it may take longer if you mailed your return near the April 15 deadline. Delays will also occur if the return is incomplete or inaccurate.

If you have not received your refund or a letter explaining the reason for the delay within 10 weeks after mailing your return, contact your local IRS office or write the IRS office where you filed your return. Give all details including your social security number, current address, and the approximate date the return was filed.

Q) Does the Internal Revenue Service pay interest to the taxpayer when it is late in issuing a refund?

A) Yes. However, the IRS has 45 days from the due date of the return or the date of filing, whichever is later, to issue a refund without payment of interest. If it takes longer than that, interest at an annual rate of 6 percent from the due date or the date of filing, whichever is later, is added to the refund.

Q) I heard that there are five tests that must be met for a taxpayer to claim a person as a dependent. What are they?

A) For a person to qualify as your dependent for 1972, the following tests must be met:

1) You must furnish over half of the dependent's total support during the calendar year;

2) Unless the person is less than 19 years of age at the end of the year or a full-time student during five months of the year, you may not claim him as a dependent if his gross income is $750 or more;

3) The person must be a member of your household and live with you for the entire year or be closely related to you;

4) He must be a U.S. citizen or resident, or a resident of Canada, Mexico, American Samoa, Panama Canal Zone or the Republic of Panama for some part of the year; and

5) The person must not file a joint return unless one is not due but was filed merely to obtain a refund.

UNEMPLOYMENT

The unemployment rate for 16 to 24-year-old student seeking work was 12.5 percent in both October 1971 and October 1972. The rate for unemployed out-of-school youths was 10.6 percent

Prehistoric Sites Being Destroyed

Future studies of America's prehistoric past may be impossible if widespread destruction of sites holding clues to America's earliest cultures continues.

So say American archaeologists, who are on the verge of surrendering to scavengers and pothunters. Looters, they claim, are destroying artifacts and historic sites linking today with the past. To archaeologists, an artifact removed from where it was originally deposited has lost most of its value.

According to a member of the North Carolina State University sociology and anthropology faculty, Dr. Gifford S. Nickerson, antiquities laws prohibiting the removal of historic remains from designated areas are not the answer. While more than half the states, including North Carolina, have such laws, enforcement is virtually impossible. Pothunters must be caught in the act of looting in order to be charged, the educator noted.

Antiquities laws are different to enforce in a society that rewards "collecting at every turn," Nickerson points out in an article he authored in the "American Anthropologist."

While antiquities laws are aimed at protecting specific state and federal lands from scavengers, private land owners can only be encouraged to refrain from removing or destroying historic evidence found on their property, Nickerson said.

"People are too taken with the idea of private property and their rights as landowners to leave valuable remains found there in place," he said.

By studying artifacts from an earlier era, archaeologists can reconstruct the lifestyles of prehistoric cultures. Anthropologists don't agree on why gathering data on ancient cultures is important, Nickerson said. Some want to better understand man by learning from where he came. Others are simply curious about man's past and about the unknown, which extends into the past as well as the future, he noted.

"Learning about the past has intrinsic value," he added. "In the future we may discover that information gained from studying historical remains also has an applied value."

While legislation has proven to be an ineffective means of stopping the plunder, Nickerson believes that the public is simply unaware of the importance of leaving historic remains in place. He proposes a program of education, aimed at informing people of the goals of archaeologists and the proper ways to handle their "discoveries."

"The demand for relevance and a 'who cares?' attitude have been against those interested in preserving and learning from the past," Nickerson said. "Pothunting is thought of as a sport and not a wrongdoing. People just seem to find it very intriguing to find an arrowhead or beads," he added.

Basketball Pays

"Basketball, which is known as the game of the ghetto, has provided the means to a college education for many athletes, particularly black players. About 50 percent of college basketball players receive some sort of financial aid," according to an article in the U.S. Department of Labor's "Occupational Outlook Quarterly."
