Nature's Ice Sculpture

Sleet and freezing rain which began Tuesday, shortly after 5 a.m. forced the closing of county schools. Roads, however, remained in "pretty good condition" throughout the daylight hours. By late afternoon the frozen mixture was collecting on trees and utility wires.

Commissioners Consider Study Of County Water System

The Davie County commissioners discussed Monday a four-month study of the county's water system to determine the condition of the Cooleemee plant, population growth and capital needs.

The study, estimated to cost between $15,000 and $22,000 would be conducted by Finkbeiner, Pettis & Stroud Ltd. of Greensboro, the county's engineering consultants.

Ray Hamilton, the company's engineering director, told the commissioners that much of the county's growth may depend on its water system.

"Developers are already building in eastern Davie, but demand will grow all over the county," he said. "If we're not careful, development will outstrip the county and its water system."

The county water plant in Cooleemee was built in the 1930s, with parts of it upgraded in the late 1970s. County Manager Charles S. Mashburn said.

It now pumps about 1.4 million gallons of water a day to some 4,000 homes in the county but has a capacity of 2.4 million gallons a day.

Work has already begun to tie about 100 homes in the Sheffield community onto the water system by this summer.

The water study, recommended by Mashburn last fall, has four phases: to determine the life expectancy of the Cooleemee plant, to look at future expansion, to evaluate expansion alternatives and to look at financing that expansion.

The analysis of the present plant will include a review of operating records, equipment and hydraulic conditions, according to a proposal that Hamilton gave the commissioners.

Determining population growth and its needs will involve combing Census Bureau information, preparing a county population map for the next 10, 20 and 50 years, and

January Presented A Variety Of Spring And Winter Weather

Area residents experienced a variety of weather during the month of January. The first month of 1985 started out like spring, plummeted to sub-zero temperature later, ended with a five inch snow January 28th and a heavy rain on Thursday, January 31st.

The temperature peaked in the mid 70s on January 1st. This was up from the 66-degree record in January 1984.

A surge of arctic air moved into the area January 20-21, accompanied by, sub-freezing temperatures and brutally cold winds.

Temperatures began dropping on Sunday, Jan. 20, plunging to a low of minus-10 degrees early Monday, with a high of the day at 22 degrees during the mid-afternoon. The wind chilling factor on Sunday was 30 below zero.

The deep freeze, which stalled cars, froze pipes, had no sooner lifted when a five-inch snow blanketed the area Monday, January 28th. Schools, offices and businesses were closed and driving was hazardous for night and early morning motorists. Temperatures rose into the 40s on Wednesday, quickly melting the snow.

January began and ended with rain, totalling 3.45 inches in Davie County. This included the 2.93 inches of heavy rainfall of Thursday which flooded creeks in the county. This month's total was slightly down, however, from the 3.89 inches recorded in January 1984.

An inch of freezing rain fell early on the morning of January 17th, turning into rain and tapering into a slight mist at daylight.

Murderer And Accomplice Given Maximum Sentences

The murderer of a Blue Bird cab driver and his accomplice were given maximum sentences in Davie Superior Court Monday.

Judge C. Preston Cornelius sentenced Lawrence Clinton Coleman of Winston-Salem to 100 years in prison, and his accomplice, Wilson Nelson Wommack also of Winston-Salem, to 30 years in prison for the killing of Joseph Gray Privetta, 34, a driver and dispatcher for Blue Bird Cab Co. in Winston-Salem.

Coleman must serve 38 years before becoming eligible for parole, and Wommack must serve 15 years, District Attorney H.W. "Butch" Zimmerman Jr. said.

The two men had been charged with first-degree murder but entered guilty pleas to lesser charges on Friday after three days of jury selection.

Zimmerman, who had planned to seek the death penalty, said Monday, that he is pleased with the sentences. "I'm very happy that justice was done, and the (Privetta) family is too," he said.

The court-appointed defense attorneys, Grady L. McClamrock and Wade Leonard Jr. of Mocksville, declined comment. "It couldn't have been any worse," McClamrock said.

In defense evidence presented in the sentencing hearing Monday, a picture emerged of Coleman and Wommack as boyhood friends who went astray because of drugs and alcohol. Both grew up without fathers and were in trouble by 15 or 16 years old, defense attorneys said.

Coleman, 26, of Granite Street, is a former traveling gospel singer who began to withdraw from his family at 16 when he started taking drugs and drinking alcohol, his mother, Mary Dowd, testified.

He dropped out of school and began associating with people she disapproved of, Mrs. Dowd said. After a break-in charge in his late teens, Coleman was sent to a rehabilitation center in western North Carolina. "He'd be doing fine, then he'd come home and get with the same people and slide backwards," his mother said.

In 1977, Coleman was in a motorcycle accident that paralyzed him from the waist down, she said. "He hasn't been able to find a job since the accident, and his drug and alcohol problems have gotten worse."

Wommack, 27, of Dew Street, grew up in a family of deaf-mutes and was shuffled from household to household until his grandmother took him in and raised him, according to his mother, Rachel Wommack, and two aunts. All three spoke in sign language, which was translated to the court by June Ryan of the Winston-Salem Deaf Center.

"Wilson had a lack of love," his aunt, Bessie Williams of Winston-Salem, said. "He was slow in school, was emotionally upset and restless. His parents didn't pay him enough attention, and he ran with the wrong crowd."

The three women said that Wommack was virtually abandoned after his parents divorced when he was 9 years old. His father had custody but soon left for Indiana with his second wife, they said. A seventh-grade dropout with an I.Q. of 75, Wommack cared for his grandmother, 82-year-old Ruth Wommack, for the next 15 years, cooking all her meals and cleaning her house, they said.

Both boys were loners, the women said, but struck up a friendship at 13. Frequent jail stays separated them from other friends, they said, but Wommack and Coleman stayed in touch with each other.

Coleman's Forsyth County record shows 12 convictions, including drug violations and assaults. He was sentenced to two years in prison for possession of drugs with intent to sell or deliver in 1982, according to court records.

Wommack's record in Forsyth County shows 13 convictions, including vandalism, assault on a female and assault on an officer. He was sentenced to 24 months in jail for five larcenies in 1981.

He was jailed for bad check charges in Bolivia in Brunswick County the week before the murder but was released after his grandmother got a second mortgage on her house to post the $5,000 bond. He was scheduled to appear in court on May 12.

Coleman was awaiting trial in Winston-Salem on a charge of driving while impaired, but the two decided on the night of May 11 to go camping in Indiana instead, Wommack testified.

After several beers each and one shared joint, they called a cab to take them as far as $20 would go, he said.

As the cab neared the N.C. 801 exit ramp off I-40, Coleman suddenly lurched forward from the back seat and slit Privetta's throat, Wommack testified.

Privetta staggered from the cab, Wommack slid into the driver's seat and drove the cab to Bland, Va., about 115 miles to the northwest.

"I was just scared and just wanted to get away," Wommack said. "I've been arrested so many times, I just wanted to run."

Once Privetta left the cab, a trail of blood indicated that he walked 45'5" before collapsing, according to the testimony of Det. J.H. Stephens of the Davie County Sheriff's Dept.

William R. Foster of the SBI said the fatal wound, a left of center to right cut (16 cm in length), severed Privetta's jugular vein and caused extensive bleeding.

Written statements of two truck drivers, Keith Hathcock and Gary Lackey, indicated that they were in transit from Kernersville to Asheville in separate trucks when they approached the murder scene.

They saw a stopped car on the side of the road and a man attempting to walk to the rear of the cab. According to their written statement, it appeared to them as if Coleman, who plead guilty to second degree murder in the death of Winston-Salem cabdriver Joseph G. Privetta, armed robbery and felonious larceny of a taxi cab, was sentenced to 100 years in prison. Wommack, who pleaded guilty as an accessory to these charges, was sentenced to 30 years. (Photo by John Ver-nelson).

The Stamp Album

By the time you read this, the new non-denominated "D" stamps will be available at your local post office, although the Jerome Kern issue is now on sale at the new 22-cent rate for first class postage. Remember, February 17 is the date of the rate change-officially. To use either the "D" stamps or the Kern stamp before that time is a waste of money.

The schedule for rates starting Feb. 17 are as follows: first class domestic letter rate is 22-cents; the post card is 14-cents. A non-denominated postal card will be released by the USPS for those who use this kind of postal stationery. There will also be regular and large size (No. 10) embossed envelopes available. The additional ounce rate on first class letters remains the same at 17-cents.

The airmail rates are changed all down the line with 39-cents being the new charge for letters to Colombia, Venezuela, Central America, the Caribbean Islands, the Bahamas, Bermuda and St. Pierre and Miquelon. It will cost 44-cents for air mail to all other countries except Canada and Mexico. Of course, these last two are serviced with the standard first class rate (22-cents) and airmail need not be designated inasmuch as all mail of certain distances are sent via air anyway. International surface (non-airmail) for letters will be 37-cents and the postcard surface rate is going to be 25-cents and the airmail post card will cost 33-cents and the aerogramme will be 36-cents.

The new issue of the Philatelic Catalog (for January-February) has now arrived. Besides listing all available stamps, it catalogs Stamp Collecting Kits (there are sixteen different kits); Souvenir Cards, Maximum Cards, Postal Service Guide to U.S. Stamps and a nice all-purpose binder called Commemorative Collections Binder which sells for $11 and includes 20 acetate pages. You can't touch this album at any dealer for this price. Get your copy of this fine catalog by writing to: U.S. Postal Service, Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265-9997. The catalog is free.

The USPS sends me reams of material about special cancellations, but it has been my practice to pass on only those of local interest. From February 23 through March 3 Charlotte is authorized to issue this cancellation, "The South's Annual Salute to Spring." Send your self-addressed and stamped envelopes to the PM before those dates are past and request for the cancellation at the Southern Spring Station. Use ZIP 28202.

Sir Robert Hart, an Englishman will be recognized with a stamp by the Republic of China (Taiwan) on Feb. 15. Hart, at the age of 28 was given the title: Inspector General of Chinese Customs, a position he held for forty-five years. One of the proposals he made while in government service was the establishment of a modern postal service. In 1896 Hart was charged with the responsibility of founding the postal service. On Feb. 24 ROC will release a single stamp noting the 100th birthday of Lo Fu-Hsing, an early Chinese revolutionary (against the old emperor). Its format is that of a stamp-on-stamp.

Austria released two stamps in February. One commemorating the 100th birthday of Alban Berg and the other recognizes the 25th anniversary of founding of the Institute for Vocational Training.

On the 25th of February Australia will issue a set of five 33-cent stamps which feature Colonial Military Uniforms.

Special ID Cards Available To 11-Year-Olds And Above

The Division of Motor Vehicles (DMV) in the North Carolina Department of Transportation (NCDOT) has begun issuing special identification cards to individuals eleven years and older, transportation officials have announced. Previously special identification (ID) cards were available only to individuals 16 years and older who requested them.

In order to obtain a special ID card, an applicant must go to a local drivers license office and present a certified birth certificate or any two of the following documents to the examiner.

1. School records.
2. Photo I.D. from company or agency.
3. A valid or expired photo drivers license.
4. Military discharge (a dated certificate from military)
5. Insurance policy at least one year old.
6. Service discharge DD-214 (dated record of military separation from service)
7. Copy of individual census report (contains name, place of birth, current age and address)
8. U.S. passport.
9. Driver Education certificate (dated and correct name)
10. Family Bible (with authentic family history).

The cost of the special identification card is $5 and must be paid for in cash as drivers license officers are unable to accept checks or credit cards as payment. The card which is computerized expires in four years and is renewable at that time for $5.

The card itself is similar in size and appearance to a drivers license. On the card are a computer-assigned number, a colored photograph of the applicant, and the signature of the applicant. A different color background on the ID card reflects the age of the individual; yellow for the 11-18 group; blue for the 19-20 group; and red for the 21 and over group.

DMV Commissioner Bill Hiatt said, "I am pleased that DMV can offer this service to North Carolina citizens, and I'm even more delighted to see us make this card available to our younger, as well as older, citizens. The special ID is a most valuable asset in helping identify persons - young or old - who might be involved in an accident, become lost, or be visually or hearing impaired. It may also aid a person in cashing a check or being admitted to a restaurant or theater."

In June of 1966 he was named Supervisor of Education and moved to the Central Office. He remained in this position until July, 1982, when he became a Director in charge of testing along with the Community School concept, and special projects.

Principals presented Kiser a bakers dozen golf balls along with a plaque describing his service to education. Kiser stated that many good changes have taken place since the early 1950's. During the course of a super steak dinner, Kiser and other principals shared humorous experiences that have happened during the course of years.

Mocksville-Davie Chamber of Commerce

Chamber Chatter

by Henry Shore, Executive Director

North Carolina - A Major Farm State

Census data make it plain that by almost any measure of production, North Carolina is one of the major farm states. The $3.6 billion in farm products sold places it among the top dozen states in the nation. The figures represent almost 3 percent of total U.S. agricultural sales of $131.9 billion.

Looking a little closer at North Carolina from the national perspective, comparing it with U.S. farm data, we see some interesting contrasts. For example, the average value of agricultural products sold per farm in the state was $48,093 and in the U.S. as a whole, $58,858. As we said, the average size farm in North Carolina was 142 acres, but nationwide, it was 440 acres. But, if we look at the total value of agricultural production divided by land in farms, North Carolina is ahead by a wide margin, $339 per acre, compared with $134 per acre for the U.S. And looking again at the value of land and buildings, another significant North Carolina figure appears, $1,314 per acre, compared to only $784 nationally. The acreage and sales figures together indicate intensive farming on small and valuable tracts. In fact, 41 percent of the 72,792 farms in North Carolina are under 50 acres.

Looking at the state's farms by size of sales, we see that 54 percent had agricultural product sales of less than $10,000 in 1982, with their total amounting to less than 4 percent of the state's gross sales. Only 12 percent of the farms had sales of $100,000 or more, but they amounted to $2.5 billion, 71 percent of the state's total.

Now for a look at the structural organization of 72,792 North Carolina farms. The family farm continually ranks high. Eighty-eight percent of the State's farms were operated by individuals or families as sole proprietorships, up a bit from the 87 percent of 1978 and on par with the national average. Ten percent were partnerships, unchanged from 1978 and equivalent to the U.S. percentage.

The corporate farm, eyed with apprehension in many quarters for decades, remained slightly under 2 percent, through both censuses in North Carolina, a little below the national average of 3 percent. A high number of farm operators in the state own all or part of their places, 88 percent, up from 86 percent four years ago and on a par with the national average.

Likewise, tenants in North Carolina at 12 percent of the total, down from 14 percent in 1978, are the same as the national average. Tenants in the state controlled only 8 percent of the land in farms. By contrast, North Carolina operators who fully owned their land controlled 41 percent of the land in farms.

The most important character in North Carolina agriculture is the farm operator. The farm operators are a stable group. Forty-six percent had farmed 10 years or more on their present places. On average, they had been on their present farms 18.5 years, a little longer than the national average of 17 years. Only 5 percent had been on their farms two years or less.

The Chamber thought for the week: Confidence is locking a door and then not trying the knob to be sure.

Emergency Food Depleted

By John Vernelson

Increased demands for emergency food brought on by the adverse weather conditions of recent weeks have just about depleted the Department of Social Services supplies, according to social worker supervisor Karen Smith.

She said the increased demand for food by the county's needy can be traced to factors associated with plunging temperatures, snow, and excessive rainfall.

As examples she cited the fact that children have spent more time at home because of snow; plumbing bills and fuel costs are up because of freezing temperatures; and the incomes of workers whose jobs are affected by the weather are down.

"Right now during this crisis, I don't know that I could say there are no hungry people in the county," she said. "We want people to come in. This is a generous community. Its people do a lot for us and a lot for the people who need help. We believe we'll get some contributions."

In addition to the Food Bank in Winston-Salem which provides the bulk of the department's emergency food, local churches and civic groups also make regular contributions. Some private citizens make donations, Smith said, but these usually occur around Christmas.

Normally, the department has enough food on hand to meet demand, she said, but because of increased need during the last two or three weeks, supplies are getting dangerously low.

Since the Dept. of Social Services has no facilities to store either fresh or frozen foods, Ms. Smith requests that those who make donations limit them to non-perishable items such as canned goods or staples such as flour, sugar, dry milk, macaroni, spaghetti, and other dry goods.

Departmental policy requires that all canned donations be store bought rather than home-canned.

The Dept. of Social Services at 807 Hospital Street is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Those in need are encouraged to come by during the above times, Ms. Smith said.

In addition to the Dept. of Soc. Ser., two area churches provide food for the needy on a regular basis, according to Ms. Smith. They are the Jericho Church of Christ on Jericho Church Road, Mocksville and the Agape Faith Church in Clemmons.

Jericho Church of Christ minister Wayne Hendrix said Friday the church has two programs. One, the Food Bank Program, utilizes food furnished by the Food Bank in Winston-Salem and the other, the Pantry Program, food furnished by church members.

Every other Wednesday, he said, from 4-6 p.m., the Food Bank Program operates. On other occasions according to need, six times thus far this year, the Pantry Program provides the needy with food. On four occasions it has given away all its food, 25 bags. As of January 30, he said, the church has served 64 families (219 people) 123 bags of food.

Jericho Church of Christ is located at the end of Jericho Church Road where it joins Davie Academy Road, Hendrix said.

The Agape Faith Church which also obtains much of its food from the Food Bank in Winston-Salem, feeds the needy in Forsyth, Yadkin, and Davie counties (particularly eastern Davie County), according to Gus Street, a Davie man who is a member of the church and assists with the program.

Jim Howard, the assistant pastor of Agape Faith Church, is in charge of the program. He said at the present, the church locates the needy through word of mouth. If someone is hungry or knows of those who are, Howard said he could be reached at the church. The number to call is 766-9188.

Once contact is made, he said, a check is conducted to ascertain the needs of the caller or of those to whom the caller refers.

Student Financial Aid Workshop Offered At Davie High Monday

By Doris Short

Students who are planning to attend college after high school graduation should plan to attend the Financial Aid Workshop at Davie High School Feb. 11.

Rex Hobson Davie High Guidance Counselor suggests that parents accompany their children to the workshop which will begin at 7 p.m. and should last no longer than 1 to 1 1/2 hours. "Parents should start planning for their children's education as early as kindergarten and should definitely begin looking at financial aid by the sophomore year," says Hobson.

Miriam Koon, Financial Aid Director at Rowan Technical Institute and Hope Dodson from the College Foundation in Raleigh will be on hand to answer questions about what kinds of financial aid are available and how to obtain the different types.

According to Hobson, students should put together a financial aid package which consists of a combination of the different aid programs in order to meet their needs. Grants, scholarships, loans, and college work study are all possible avenues students can take in order to finance their education.

Hobson stresses that students should be very careful in filling out forms to apply for aid and also to make sure that they are using the form that the college they are applying to requires. There are two types of forms, Financial Aid Form and Family Finance Statement.

Some colleges require one or the other, says Hobson, while other colleges prefer one over the other but will accept either. If a student does not know which form to use he or she should contact a guidance counselor for that information.

Students should apply to at least two schools, added Hobson, and be sure that the forms are filled out correctly. An incorrect form could mean a big delay in the application. The forms should be completed no later than early February. Hobson also stresses that aid must be reapplied for each year.

Davie High Students receive $200,000 each year in scholarships alone, says Hobson. It is worth the effort to apply even if a student is not sure if he or she will qualify.

Students or parents having any questions about the upcoming workshop or questions about financial aid can contact the guidance office at Davie County High School.

Charles Sofley, a rural route carrier for the past 38 years, made his last mail delivery last Thursday. He officially retired February 1st as Rural Route 5 carrier, and was honored for service by members of the Mocksville Post Office.

Charles Sofley Retires As Mail Carrier

Charles Sofley of Mocksville has spent the past 36 years delivering mail to persons living along Mocksville Rural Route 5.

He began his career as a rural route carrier in 1953 when he joined the Cana Post Office. He served at Cana until 1955 when the office was officially closed. Sofley was then assigned as Rural Route 5 carrier for the Mocksville Post Office, a position he has maintained ever since.

Sofley retired Friday, and was honored by local postal employees for his 36 years of loyal service.

Sofley said he has witnessed dramatic change and growth in the county during the past 36 years. "I only had 38 stops when I began work with the Cana Post office in 1953," Sofley said. His route increased to 58 miles and 250 boxes when he joined the Mocksville staff in 1955. At the time of his retirement Friday, Sofley said his current route included deliveries to about 600 residences.

Sofley said he has grown to know the people along his route quite well, and will miss his daily mail run to residents on Route 5. However, the time comes to retire," he said. "I am looking forward to enjoying my favorite hobby which is visiting area flea markets." Sofley said he is also planning a trip to Hawaii this spring.

NCSU Nutrition Study Reveals Mixed Trends In Southern Diets

Vermont was the first state to be added to the original 13 colonies.

By Ruth Hutchison
Prompted by evidence that Southern households of the mid-1960s were lagging in their intake of some nutrients, two economics researchers at North Carolina State University have analyzed newer information to find out whether that pattern has changed.

Dr. Ronald A. Schrimper and doctoral candidate Christine Hager found some significant changes in Southern nutritional patterns between 1965 and 1977, the year of the most recent U.S. Department of Agriculture survey of household food consumption.

"The trends are somewhat mixed," Schrimper said, "in that we saw improvement in some categories, no change in some and a decrease in nutrients in others."

The USDA surveys of household food consumption are made to find out how adequate diets are and what changes in nutritional patterns have occurred, Schrimper said.

Comparing the national surveys to the Census, he said it will be another five to six years before updated information is available.

In their study funded by the N.C. Agricultural Research Service, the NCSU researchers classified nutrients into three groups: total food energy, or calories, from protein, fat and carbohydrates; minerals, calcium and iron; and vitamins A, C, thiamine and riboflavin.

Comparing changes that took place in the South with national trends, Schrimper and Hager cited these as among the most significant patterns:

-Iron intake in the South in the 19-and-under age group rose and for infants nearly doubled.

-Calcium deficiencies, except for the elderly, were greater in the South than in the rest of the nation.

-Calorie intake for most groups decreased in the South more than in the rest of the nation.

Increased iron for infants and children was the result of fortified infant formula and cereal, according to the USDA. And said Hager, between 1965 and 1977 the number of participants in the food stamp program also increased.

Hager, a former Peace Corps volunteer who taught nutrition for two years in Colombia to mothers of malnourished children, said the decrease in iron intake in women of child-bearing age was of "special concern." Women in this group were getting less than two-thirds of the USDA's Recommended Dietary Allowance, she said.

Southerners seemed to increase their intake of vitamins, especially A and C, said Schrimper, a research specialist in food consumption and demand. However, he added that people across the country increased their vitamin C intake.

Compared with the rest of the nation, calorie intake from all sources decreased more in the South, he said. "It's hard to tell whether this is good or bad since we don't know how many calories people require."

The researchers found the decrease surprising because, at the same time, incomes were rising faster in the South and participation in the food stamp program was growing.

One possible cause, said Schrimper, may have been a rise in food prices. "There is some evidence that food prices have risen faster in the South than in some other parts of the country."

Hager added that even as income increases, nutrition may not necessarily improve. "When people change their eating habits they sometimes lose elements that were nutritional," she said.

For example, vitamin A-rich sweet potatoes, a staple in the Southern diet, are giving way to casseroles and processed foods, she said.

The economists agree on the need for further research that will determine why nutrient consumption in the South differs from other areas in the country and why people change the foods they eat to get the nutrients they consume.

Free Shade Trees For Spring Planting

The National Arbor Day Foundation is giving ten free shade trees to people who join the nonprofit Foundation during February, 1985.

A Sugar Maple, Weeping Willow, Red Oak, Green Ash, Thornless Honeylocust, Pin Oak, Silver Maple, Tulip Tree, European Mountainash, and Red Maple tree will be given as part of the Foundation's campaign to encourage tree planting.

These trees were selected because they provide flowers, berries and nuts, in addition to shade and beauty, according to John Rosenow, the Foundation's executive director.

The Foundation will give the ten free trees to members contributing $10 during February. The six-to-twelve inch trees will be shipped this spring between February 1 and May 31 when conditions are right for planting. They will be sent with enclosed planting instructions, and are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free by the Foundation.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, a $10 membership contribution should be sent to Shade Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by February 28, 1985.

Angell Farm Receives Statewide Recognition

Angell Farm of Mocksville recently received two state level awards in N. C. statewide yield contests.

The farm is operated by father and son, Tilden G. and T. Madison Angell, and raises primarily corn, soybeans, and wheat.

Angell Farm earned third place honors in the Western District of the N.C. Wheat Yield Contest and was fourth high in the state with an officially recorded wheat yield of 94.6 bushels per acre on a measured three acre plus area. Angell Farm also was recognized at the N.C. Soybean Producers Association where they took first place honors in District Four of the 1984 N.C. Soybean Yield Contest with an officially recorded yield of 53.8 bushels per acre on a three plus acre area. This was the third time Angell Farm has taken top honors in District Four of the N.C. Soybean Yield competition. The farm also captured Davie County Corn Yield Contest top honors for 1984.

The N.C. Yield Contest for various crops are conducted by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service in cooperation with various agribusiness and producer associations in an effort to recognize those production practices necessary to obtain maximum economic yields. "One Extension recommendation that has changed," according to Ronnie W. Thompson, Davie County Extension Chairman, "primarily due to information gained through the yield contests, is nitrogen fertilization of wheat. The nitrogen recommendation for wheat grown under maximum yield production practices is now 100-120 total units of N, up from the old recommendation of 60-80 total units."

The annual Davie County Soybean Production Meeting is scheduled for February 20 at Fisherman's Quarters Restaurant in Mocksville. The major emphasis of the information to be presented will center on the use of post-emergence herbicides, such as, Poast, Fusilade, Blazer, Basagran, 2, 4D-

B, Rescue, etc. Alan York, N.C. Agricultural Extension Service Weed Specialist, will be the guest speaker. The meeting sponsors are the Davie County Agricultural Extension Service, Farm Credit Service of Mocksville, and Northrup King Seed Company.

The Davie County Agricultural Extension Service offers educational programs without regard to race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, or handicap.

Local Senior Nominated For ECU Scholarship

Bruce Branan of Mocksville was one of 53 outstanding high school seniors from across the state and nation to have been nominated as semifinalists for the selection of the first five University Scholars awards at East Carolina University. The University Scholars is a major new, privately-financed scholarship program designed to attract academically-gifted students with demonstrated leadership potential to ECU.

Eventually the program will support at least 20 $3,000 University Scholars awards each year. The first five recipients will be chosen this spring and enter the university in the fall semester.

ECU officials announced that regional screening committees will choose no more than 24 candidates from the list of semifinalists for interviews which are scheduled Feb. 16 in Greenville, Raleigh and Greensboro. Each committee will nominate two top choices and an alternate, according to ECU director of admissions Charles F. Seeley.

A selection committee will meet on March 9 to interview finalists and choose five winners.

Seeley said any one of the 53 semifinalists not selected for the University Scholars award automatically will be "highly considered" for another ECU merit scholarship including alumni honors scholarships which range in value from $750 to $1,500 a year.

The list of 53 semifinalists was drawn by screening applications which were received by Dec. 15, Seeley said. The University Scholars program was established last fall and announced on Oct. 19.

Holmes Completes CPA Examination

Joseph Fraley Holmes of Tot Street, Mocksville, was one of 287 people to successfully complete the Uniform Certified Public Accountant Examination held last November in Charlotte.

According to Chuck Bunn, Executive Director for the State Board of CPA Examiners, 1225 people sat for the exam last November, including 407 who sat for the first time and 818 who were returning to complete the previously unpassed parts.

Of the 407 who sat for the first time, 360 attempted all four parts of the examination and 49 passed all four parts.

Successful examination candidates must complete experience requirements before being awarded the Certified Public Accountant Certificate by the State Board of CPA Examiners.

Based upon preliminary review, Bunn feels that the percentage of people passing any given part and completing all parts of the examination appear to be comparable with previous examinations. North Carolina is a consistent honor role state.

The top average North Carolina score on the November examination was received by James Lawrence Miller. Miller received his accounting degree from UNC-Chapel Hill and is employed as a Staff Accountant with Price Waterhouse in Atlanta, Georgia.

James Everette Harris received the third highest scores. Harris received his accounting degree from Appalachian State, and is employed as a Staff Accountant with Ernst & Whinney in Winston-Salem, N.C.

All are candidates for awards given by the North Carolina CPA Foundation.

The system of using fingerprints for identification was started by William Herchel of the Indian Civil Service in 1858, at Jungipur, India.

Folk-Ways And Folk-Lore

By Roger Whitener

If a philosopher by the name of Leibnitz were around today he would be chortling over the proof of his prized thesis: Everything works for the best in the best of all possible worlds.

Disaster for some, in his eyes, simply meant good fortune for others. Take the case of Florida citrus growers, for instance. Though the fruit crop has apparently taken a fearful beating, nurserymen have been cheered by the news that the destructive citrus canker may have been eliminated for the moment by the extraordinarily low temperatures.

And in the mountains the advent of snow, plus record-setting cold blasts may have brought misery to some by way of frozen pipes and impassable roads. On the other hand, ski resorts have rejoiced in the natural white cover and in temperatures sufficiently low to allow for several additional feet of base, thanks to artificial snow.

Which brings to mind a bit of folklore concerning mountain roads in the Boone area. Word is that if you plan to live in a rural area you need to keep two things in mind: Where do highway officials and staff live and what roads lead to the ski resorts?

The assumption is that these roads are the first to be scraped, salted, or slagged when the rough stuff falls. When the first ski slopes were open in Watauga and Avery Counties, for instance, an amusing story made the rounds (amusing to some at least) of a woman marooned by a heavy snow, a lady who had lacked the foresight or wherewithal to manage a residence in a maintenance-blessed area.

For days she attempted to induce state highway crews to remove the heavy drifts: "Look, I've simply got to get into town and buy groceries. My kids are screaming and I can't even get out of my driveway, let alone into town."

Still no help. Finally came the light. Again she rang the maintenance office, and in an affected down-country voice she asked: "Can you tell me whether the roads to Beech Mountain are clear?"

"Yes, Ma'am," was the response. "Good roads and good skiing today."

"And how about 321 to Blowing Rock and Ski Mountain?"

"No problem, lady. Scrapers and salt trucks were out at daybreak. You'll have no trouble at all in making it to the slopes."

"You're sure I can make it without chains?"

"Lady, I tell you we've worked these roads till you'd be safe even without treads on your tires."

"All right, mister, if you're so damned efficient, get your lazy tail and your equipment out Roby Greene Road so I can get into town!"

Sugar Mountain

In a recent column we mentioned the source of the Seven Devils Ski Resort name (now Hawksnest): the folk expression, "Cold as Seven Devils." Neighboring Sugar Mountain also boasts its own bit of folklore regarding its name, growing out of the persistent questions of low country skiers.

"Were there sugar maples on the slopes which the mountain people tapped for syrup? Was it because sunlight on the mountain top made the snow look like sugar?"

Employees, faced with such questions on a day-to-day basis, eventually came up with a tongue-in-cheek response that might vary with the individual.

"On no. That's not how the name came about at all. Fact is it comes from what was once the finest sugar mine in these mountains. See that cleared section up the mountainside where the ski lift operates? Well, that used to be the route of a narrow gauge railway track that went clear to the top of the mountain where the mine shaft was located.

"Several times a week they'd run what they called the sugar cart up to the mine, fill it up, and then run it back down the mountain. People knew what days it operated, and they'd come from miles around with their pokes and buckets to pick up their short sweetening-saved them from having to boil down maple water or sorgan juice.

"Course, after a time the sugar was mostly mined out, and they closed the shaft when the country stores began to lay in supplies of the commercial stuff.

"But before the trees and underbrush could grow up over the tracks, the ski folks came in and started installing that first lift you see up there. Next time you go to the top ask the lift attendant up there where the mouth to the sugar mine is.

"Who knows?-price of sugar being what it is, they may take a notion to start up that sugar cart again some of these days!"

Readers are invited to send folk materials to Rogers Whitener, English Department, ASU, Boone, N.C. 28608.

Morning Fire Guts Kountry Korner

An electrical malfunction has been cited as the possible cause of a Thursday morning fire which gutted The Kountry Korner, a home decorating center, according to Det. P.C. Williams, one of the investigating officers.

Williams said at this time it looks as if the origin of the fire is electrical, but he and Det. J.H. Stephens will continue their investigation.

Linda Zimmerman, who owns the decorating center located at the intersection of N.C. 801 and Yadkin Valley Road along with her husband James, said Tuesday morning hardware, paint, carpet, wall paper, vinyl floor coverings, and other home decorating supplies as well as gift items housed in a large downstairs room and three smaller upstairs rooms were completely destroyed by the blaze.

The frame of the building was so charred by the fire, she said, that an insurance adjuster said the structure could not be "built over."

According to records in the county dispatcher's office, Farmington Fire Dept. responded to the fire at 5:22 a.m. and was backed-up by Smith Grove.

May Help Leprosy Victims

Scientist Gets Patent For New Drug Delivery Process

By David Williamson
A pharmaceutical scientist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has been granted a patent on a new drug delivery technique that he believes could help millions of leprosy victims around the world control their disease better.

Dr. James Swarbrick, chairman of the division of pharmaceuticals at the UNC School of Pharmacy, said the technique would allow patients to receive a single monthly injection of leprosy medication instead of having to remember to take a tablet every day. "One of the major problems in treating leprosy has been that people start taking their medicine religiously and then either forget to take it or run out," Swarbrick said in an interview. "Another problem has been that after six months or so, symptoms can begin to disappear, and some patients mistakenly believe that they have been cured."

If such patients had regularly scheduled monthly appointments for injections, however, they would be more likely to continue receiving treatment as long as necessary, he said.

The scientist found a way to coat dapsone, the least expensive and most commonly used leprosy drug, with a chemically altered form of the drug itself.

As the coating dissolves, dapsone is released into the tissues where it has been injected. By varying the thickness of the coating on drug particles, the researchers can now ensure that the release takes place over an entire month or longer, rather than all at once.

The University of Southern California, where Swarbrick began work on the technique in 1980, will own the patent. UNC will license the process if drug companies become interested in using it.

One advantage of the new method is that it doesn't leave any residue in the body.

"Obviously, if you need to continue therapy for five years or more, you don't want to leave a residue in the muscles that breaks down slowly or not at all," Swarbrick said.

The scientist said he and his colleagues were able to make the dapsone particles small enough to pass in suspension through a needle. He envisions the medication being distributed as a dry powder to be mixed with sterile water at clinics in remote areas of underdeveloped countries.

Another advantage of the technique is that the long-lasting drug doses could be given inexpensively by a minimum of health care workers who regularly travel from place to place.

The World Health Organization has been interested in the method and supported its development, Swarbrick said, in part because dapsone has been used safely in humans since the 1940s. As a result, the prolonged trials required for screening new drugs will not be necessary.

Acedapson, the less soluble form of the medication in the outer coating, also has been proven safe.

Further research at UNC on extending the drug delivery technique to other illnesses is going well, Swarbrick said.

"I'm bullish about it," the inventor said, "and I hope it will be applied in whatever ways it might be useful."

The fact that dapsone itself is no longer protected by a patent may work against drug company interest, at least in the technique's application to leprosy, he said.

Government laboratories in Third World countries, however, where most of the estimated 12-15 million cases of the disease are found, could produce the modified dapsone easily.

One day, the extended therapy now required to control leprosy may not be needed at all, Swarbrick said. Recent developments in immunological control of the ancient illness offer promise of ultimately eradicating it.

Center Plans Development Projects

The Center Community Development Association held their January meeting at the community building on January 29. There were 19 members present. President Robert Tutterow presided.

Community projects for 1985 were discussed and the following dates set for annual events:

March 30-Spring Cleanup

April 12 and 13-Barbecue and Flea Market

September 13 and 14-Barbecue and Fair

The association will also sponsor a Garden Contest in the spring. Other projects under consideration by the organization include an outdoor picnic shelter, new draperies and a trophy case for the community building. Plans were also completed for the visit of the judges for the Northwest North Carolina Development Association.

The Annual Fireman's Banquet on Saturday, February 23, will honor members of the Center Volunteer Fire Department and their families. The supper will begin at 6:30 followed by a program and the presentation of the Fireman-of-the-Year Award. Members of the community development association will provide the meats, drink and table service. The banquet is sponsored by the association to show their appreciation of the men who volunteer as firemen and everyone living in the Center Fire District is invited to attend.

Suzanne Says

Did you forget to laugh today?
Did you forget to smile and lighten someone's troubles
Even for a little while?

Did you forget to sing today?
And let the whole world ring,
With a deeply felt expression of your joy in everything?

Did you forget to walk today
In someone else's shoes?
To revel in their happiness
And understand their blues?

Did you forget to walk today?
To lend a helping hand?
Cause someone else's project Was much bigger than they planned?

Well if you did forget these things (we all do now and then),
There's always a tomorrow for remembering again.

Dropping Autos Over Sea Cliff Seems Practical In Gibraltar

By Joy Aschenbach
National Geographic News Service

More than 10,000 motor vehicles are jammed onto the Rock of Gibraltar. For at least 15 years, they've had no place to go but up and down and around its 26 miles of road.

All that should change on Feb. 5, when the large gates at Gibraltar's only border, closed since mid-1969, are thrown open once again. Driving back and forth across the narrow, sandy isthmus to the Spanish mainland may seem like one of the smaller consequences of this political decision, but it should be significant in bringing tourists to the British colony, especially from Spain's popular Costa del Sol, and in reviving its economy.

One of the limestone peninsula's little inconveniences that may be improved by the open frontier is the disposal of automobiles that cannot be repaired.

After all, there is not enough room on "Gib," as Gibraltar is called here, for a junkyard or "cementerio de coches" like those across the border in Spain. Gibraltar is only about three miles long and three quarters of a mile wide—a fortress of rock cliffs rising straight out of the sea. Even the airport runway is intersected by a road, on which cars have to stop and wait during takeoffs and landings.

What do they do with the cars that break down? They take them to the top of a cliff and drop them into the Mediterranean Sea. What else?

It may seem a bit primitive, but "it's the only way to get rid of them," explains Charles Rosado of the Gibraltar government.

Each year, officials send about 300 cars over the edge. They drop 200 feet to the sea, down the Public Works Department's car chute. A stone wall with a wide gate marks the spot. The stripped cars fall onto an underwater ledge at a depth of about 40 to 50 feet, later to be washed to the bottom by storms, Rosado says.

They make a big splash, but no environmental impact, he insists.

Their final resting place is 3,000 to 4,000 feet down.

If there is a ready market in Spain for old cars, the system will be abandoned. Otherwise, it will have to continue. At times in the past, some commercial contractors have boated the cars away for scrap, but such ventures didn't prove profitable.

Since Spain completely closed off Gibraltar's only landward link in 1969 as part of its campaign to regain the strategic peninsula that Britain took in 1704, Gibraltar has led an island-like existence. Travelers from around the world have been forced to reach the Rock by roundabout air and sea routes, generally via Morocco or Britain, never directly from Spain.

The new Spanish Socialist government opened the gates a crack in late 1982, but not enough to help Gibraltar's economy. Access was restricted to pedestrian traffic by residents of Spain or Gibraltar. And the Spaniards who set foot on the Rock cannot bring back Gibraltarian goods.

Cut off from the European continent for more than 15 years, Gibraltar, despite its imposing position at the western entrance of the Mediterranean, lost most of the tourists who made up one of its two major industries. Without them, hotels and restaurants have gone into a decline.

Gibraltar's other big asset, the Royal Naval Dockyard has been shut down because of budget cuts in Britain. The Gibraltar government plans to convert it into a ship repair operation that it hopes will restore lost jobs by the end of 1985.

More than 30,000 people live on the Rock. They suffer from shortages of water, and use any methods to get it: catching raindrops on 75 acres of corrugated iron sheets anchored to the Rock's rainier side and channeling them into huge reservoirs, making sea water potable at distillation plants, and even importing water from Britain and Holland on tankers.

British and Spanish leaders meet every few months to continue talks about Gibraltar's future. As part of their November 1984 agreement, Spain said it would open the border by Feb. 15, 1985, and Britain for the first time said it was willing to discuss the question of "sovereignty" over the peninsula.

The permanent solution may defy the legend that the Rock will remain British as long as the famed Barbary apes roam its heights. Actually tailless monkeys, the animals number about 40 today. Some take candy from strangers and are mischievous around motorists, breaking off windshield wipers, radio antennas, and side-view mirrors.

But they hardly do enough damage to be blamed for the deep-sixing of hundreds of cars in the Mediterranean, and they are likely to be around for some time.

Lester Bowles & Kermit Cartner Retire

Two 'Pros' Attest To Quality Of Roads

Co-workers at the local department of Transportation accuse Lester Bowles, maintenance supervisor, of sleeping with one foot out the window.

So adept at the dispatching of trucks during inclement weather, they kid Bowles that this is the only possible way he could keep so in tuned to the weather. "He knows when the first flake of snow falls," Van Swicegood, fellow worker said in confirmation of the accusation.

But Bowles laughs, adding that its simply a matter of good communications and 30 years experience.

Bowles, who resides just outside Mocksville, retired as local DOT supervisor Thursday. He is proud of his years of service, and the many things which have been accomplished during his tenure.

"Davie County has some of the best roads in the state," he said proudly, "and I challenge anyone who doubts it to make an active comparison of roads in North Carolina."

Bowles joined the department in 1947 as a truck driver, a position he maintained until his appointment as maintenance supervisor in 1971. He has witnessed many changes in the local road system during the past 38 years, including an increase in the total number of miles of road his department maintains annually.

"Back in '47 the department maintained about 350 to 400 miles of road which has increased to 500 miles in 1985," he said.

He also added that when he joined the force, a large portion were unpaved with the few paved primary roads gutted with holes and rough spots.

However, he describes Davie County roads in 1985 as some of the best maintained anywhere with very few miles of unpaved roads remaining.

The widening of the Farmington Road (N.C. 801) in the early 1970's is an accomplishment of which Bowles is very proud.

"I guess I enjoyed working on this road the best of any," he said. "The road was very narrow, and if a car went one foot off the pavement it ended up in the ditch filled knee high with water. He supervised the widening and re-asphalting of this stretch which has since proven to be a highly traveled stretch of road.

Kermit Cartner, maintenance crew leader for 22 years, also retired Thursday. He and Bowles shared some of the pitfalls of their jobs as Department of Transportation employees.

"The most frustrating part is the public's lack of understanding about the Department's mission and the regulations under which we must abide to accomplish this," Bowles and Cartner said.

"No one seems to understand that their are priorities and guidelines that must be followed in each aspect of our job whether its widening a road, re-paving it, or scraping snow away," Bowles said.

"You wouldn't believe the phone calls we get from really upset people," he said, "especially when it snows."

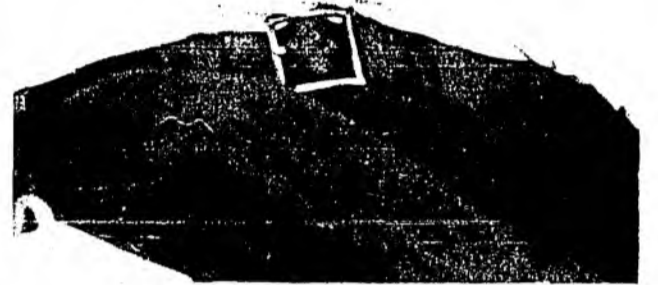

Bowles explained that there is a strict schedule for salting, sanding and scraping roads during inclement weather with trucks assigned to each road according to priority. "I-40 has to come first," he said. "There's no way around it. The schedule then calls for salting, sanding and clearing off primary roads, paved secondary roads and last but not least, unpaved roads.

But when the weather turns bad, people tend to forget the priority

Lester Bowles, maintenance supervisor with the local department of Transportation, describes the widening of Farmington Road as the most gratifying accomplishment of his career. He has spent all of his 38 years with the DOT in Davie, excluding a two year period in 1973 when he was transferred to Rowan.

Kermit Cartner of Davie Academy, recalls his 22 years as maintenance crew leader with the N.C. Department of Transportation. He retired Thursday.

J.M. Hall, DOT Highway Maintenance engineer, (left) said the department will sorely miss the 60 years of combined experience of Cartner and Bowles. Both retired Thursday.

Retirement isn't easy when you've devoted 38 years of your life to a job, Bowles said. As the retiring road maintenance supervisor in Davie, he described local roads as "some of the best in the state."

Vernon Whitaker, Rural Route 2 Carrier for the Mocksville Post Office, received a very special retirement gift Friday from the student body of North Davie Junior High. The farewell cake read "Special Delivery--Mr. Vernon Whitaker--Leisure Lane--Retirement City, USA--Many Happy returns requested."

Vernon Whitaker Honored By His Route 2 Postal Patrols Retires After 38 Years

It isn't everyday that a retiring rural route carrier has an entire community honor him with a retirement dinner.

But in retrospect, Vernon Whitaker of Mocksville, isn't the typical mail carrier.

Whitaker, who joined the Mocksville Postal Service in December, 1945, has made many friends during his career as Rural Route 2 mail carrier. Children were often recipients of his kindness, with those running to greet him rewarded with a sucker as a very special treat.

Whitaker officially retired Friday after 38 years and 2 months service. To show their appreciation, Patrons along Rural Route 2 will honor Whitaker with a covered dish supper at 7:00 p.m. Thursday at the Farmington Masonic Lodge. The dinner is staged to honor Whitaker for the many kindnesses he extended to patrons along his route during the past 38 years.

Whitaker joined the Mocksville Postal Service in 1945 as a substitute carrier. He was appointed as a Mocksville City carrier in 1960, a position he maintained until 1962. He was assigned as Route 2 carrier that same year, continuing to serve them until his retirement Friday.

Whitaker explained that his current route covers 62 miles and 575 residences in the Farmington and Smith Grove Communities. "I have become quite attached to the many patrons along my route, and will miss the day-to-day contact with them," Whitaker said. "It has really been a difficult decision to make."

Whitaker explained that Friday, his last day, was especially hard.

"The people have been so good to me," he said. "When they come out in weather like it was last Friday to wish me well, it really means a lot. These memories are very dear to me."

By the end of his route Friday, Whitaker had a carload of cakes and gifts from patrons wishing him well. A very special gift was a cake from the student body of North Davie Junior High School. It read "Special Delivery" to Mr. Vernon Whitaker with the address listed as Leisure Lane, Retirement City, U.S.A. Happy Returns Requested.

Whitaker plans to stay active following retirement. He has been active as a local boy scout leader for 25 years and is currently serving as vice-president of the Davie County Little League Baseball Association.

Davie Enters Final Week Of NPC Regular Season Play

The Davie High basketball teams will close out the regular season play in the North Piedmont Conference next week playing Trinity here on Tuesday night and North Davidson there on Friday night. The schedule for this week had Davie at Salisbury on Tuesday night and North Rowan there on Wednesday night.

Coach Bill Peeler's girls dropped West Rowan from first to third with a 43-36 victory last Friday night. Coach Paul Dreschler's boys made it a clean sweep with a 61-45 victory in the nightcap.

The win was significant to Davie's girls because it moved them out of the NPC cellar. The War Eagles are 4-8 in league play 4-14 overall. The top eight teams in the final standings qualify for the postseason tournament.

West led 29-26 going into the fourth quarter, but were outscored 17-7 in the final eight minutes. The Falcons had trouble finding the basket as the War Eagles forged ahead.

"We are in a terrible shooting slump," West Coach Gary Safrit said. "It has hurt us the past three or four games."

Davie's Andria Rayle led all scorers with 13 points. Selena Fowler added 10 and Tammy Pulliam chipped in nine.

Theresa Cress, with 10 points was the only Falcon to place in double figures. Davie held Nessie Holland, West's leading scorer, to two points.

In the boys game, Davie took an early lead and coasted from there. The War Eagles led 30-17 at half-time and increased that margin to 44-27 at the end of the third quarter. Davie Coach Paul Dreschler played reserves much of the second half.

"We played well at the start of the game," Dreschler said. "We hit a little bit of a lull at the start of the third quarter, but we played well again after that."

The win put Davie at 8-4 in the NPC play and 11-7 overall. The War Eagles moved into a third-place tie with North Davidson in the conference standings. North Rowan leads the league with a 9-2 mark.

"The standings right now are so close, we have to win the games we are favored to win," Dreschler said. "We have a tough end-of-the-year schedule."

War Eagle forward Tony Frost scored 18 points to lead the winners. Doug Jacobs added 13 points and Tony Tatum scored 10.

Tanglewood Lands Public Links Tourney

The U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship, which has never been held in North Carolina in its 63-year existence, has been awarded to Tanglewood for 1986, members of the Tanglewood Park trustees announced.

The Public Links is an amateur event for golfers who are members of courses that are open to the public. The tournament is popular in the West and Midwest and has been held in the south only once — Atlanta in 1948.

"We're just glad to have it here," Tanglewood golf professional Gordon Cox said. "We feel we need to do something to become known to the country and to let everyone know we're interested in having other events here and that this is a facility that can handle them."

Tanglewood was the site of the 1974 PGA Championship and is ranked among the top public golf courses in the country.

The Mugsy Phenomenon

The air still hasn't cleared on Tyrone "Mugsy" Bogues' awesome performance Saturday on national TV, leading the Wake Forest Deacons in a 91-64 slaughter over NC State. It was one of the most dominating performances in the history of ACC basketball. Across the nation now, people are writing about him. They are calling him the great hope of little men and they are replaying his film highlights. "There's a place in the game for the little man," they are saying, "just look at Mugsy Bogues."

But before you pick up the phone to call the coach of your favorite ACC team about some 5'2" superstar, you have to realize that Mugsy Bogues is not like any other little man in basketball today.

Georgia Tech's Mark Price isn't very tall. He has great speed and quickness though, to offset his height disadvantage. Spud Webb, only 5'7" has great leaping ability, and dunks effortlessly just like bigger people. Name any little man you want and he'll have some distinguishing characteristics that help him compete with bigger players. But, all of them play like bigger players—and compensate. Bogues, however, doesn't compete with bigger players. He doesn't play on the same wave length, you might say, so he doesn't have to do any compensating. He plays in a whole different dimension and makes people compensate for him.

The Mugsy phenomenon goes beyond a good shooting performance or a day with a lot of assists or steals. Don't be fooled by Mugsy's 20 points on national TV. There will be many days to come when he will not shoot well. But Mugsy's dimension doesn't depend on shooting nor even on his ability to dictate the tempo of the game. Up to now, basketball analysts and coaches only spoke of intimidating centers, big people like Patrick Ewing of Georgetown, as being a presence on the court. With a guy like Ewing on the court, capable of swatting away shots, people miss shots often because of mere worry about where Ewing is. That is presence—making the opponent mess up even when you aren't actually in position to mess them up. And that is the effect Mugsy Bogues is currently having on ACC players. Nearly everyone on the court against Wake Forest these days is playing tentatively, playing scared, looking around wondering where Bogues is, instead of flowing with the game, flowing with instinct and just letting things happen. People are playing poorly because their minds are on Bogues. Even tall, powerful Lorenzo Charles altered an outside shot and ended up passing the ball while in the air—because the mouse was underfoot and Lorenzo's rhythm was interrupted.

Bogues is both a confidence-buster on defense with his ball hawking, always-under-foot style of play, and he is a constant worry on offense because of how quickly he gets the ball down the court and how impossible he is to bother.

There aren't any other players in the league who are constant worries on both ends of the court. And especially, there is no quick-fix method to counteract his weapons. Bogues has proven again and again that he can not be pressed, not by one man, not by two. Every team who double-teams him wastes two players and is immediately victimized by a 5-on-3 break. Bogues is too low to the ground, too sharp with his pivots, and too quick accelerating to trap. Price can be trapped, Amaker can be trapped, Webb can be trapped, but Bogues can not be.

What else? Bogues gets away with three times as many fouls as any other player in the ACC because referees pity a little man? Of course not. Bogues doesn't—again—play like anyone else. He gets to the ball far more than anyone else, he gets underfoot, he reaches, he slaps, but he doesn't look like he's fouling when he does these things because his body isn't in the same positions as other players' bodies when they try the same things. In other words, just as his being different bothers his opponents and upsets their rhythm, it also upsets the rhythm and ability of the referees. They simply are not ready to blow a whistle on Bogues because he doesn't look "about to foul" just before he makes contact.

Everyone who plays against Bogues gets fouled by him and irritated, but all it does is upset their game, play on their minds, and break their concentration.

This is the Mugsy Phenomenon. It's presence. It's keeping a lot of ACC coaches tossing and turning late at night—even though, presumably, Bogues isn't there stealing the sheets off their beds.

 list. "They want their road cleaned then, and to heck with the rest," he said.
 "The snow will really run you nuts," Bowles laughed. "When you go 30 to 40 hours without sleep, these phone calls begin to play on your nerves."
 During their work with the local DOT, both Bowles and Cartner agree that they've learned the area well. "I use to know all the people, but the influx to East Davie has changed this somewhat," Bowles said. However, he never ceases to amaze employees with his memory and ability to draw maps to individuals homes across the county.
 "He never has to ask for directions when an individual calls," Van Swicegood confirmed. "He simply takes out a pencil and pad and begins drawing a map."

 Both Bowles and Cartner admit that it's hard to leave a job after putting so many years of your life into it.
 "However, all things must end," they said. "It's time to retire."
 Bowles said he hopes to spend his time raising a garden and devoting more extensive participation to church and civic activities.
 Cartner, who has a farm on Poor Boy's Road in Davie Academy, plans to occupy his time with farmwork. "His farewell gift is a goat," Swicegood laughed.

State Is Drumming Up Interest In North Carolina Seafood Industry

North Carolina residents have known for years that seafood caught off our coast is some of the best to be found anywhere. Unfortunately, not enough people in other states know this fact. Robert Mahood, Director of the state's Division of Marine Fisheries, Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said this is one of the reasons that the division's seafood development program has been expanded recently.
 "If we can educate people to the fact that North Carolina bay scallops, for example, are a better product than calico scallops from Florida, they will pay extra for that quality. The consumer will profit and so will the fishermen," said Mahood.
 While the division is working on marketing North Carolina seafood, it is also working in conjunction with the Gulf of Mexico and South Atlantic Fisheries Foundation and other southern states. Mahood said that even though there is competition for seafood markets, cooperation is important, too.
 "Say we develop a market for flounder filets in Cincinnati and they're selling like hotcakes," he said. "Then somebody from out there comes to a dealer and the dealer says, 'Sorry, but we don't have any to sell to you!' Well, the guy in Cincinnati loses momentum, and (to re-establish the market) it's like starting over."
 "The benefit from working together is that there are different seasons in different states, so we can assure a constant, steady supply."
 Mahood said the goal was not to do away with the old markets for North Carolina seafood, primarily Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York. "There's nothing wrong with those markets," he said. "But the dealers have just been selling to the same people their daddies and granddaddies sold to."

 "Two members of the development staff returned recently from the Midwestern Food Service and Equipment Expo in St. Louis, Missouri, where they displayed seafood products and talked to people attending the Expo. The main purpose was to drum up business for North Carolina. They brought back 116 requests for North Carolina seafood and talked with another 500 people who stopped by the exhibit to ask questions," Mahood stated.
 In coming months they will also display North Carolina seafood at shows in Los Angeles, Shreveport, Louisiana, and Charlotte.
 Coupled with the attempt to stimulate and develop new markets, fisheries division officers hope to create a clear identity for North Carolina fish and shellfish.
 "When a housewife goes to the store and picks up, say, some fresh crab meat and likes it, she'll want to go back and buy the same thing," Mahood said. "If that product has a North Carolina label on it, she can find it and our industry will benefit."
 Mahood said the state was continuing efforts it had always stressed in seafood development, which includes working with the industry to encourage construction of new processing plants. This extends to such things as helping design water disposal and waste treatment systems for processing plants, and helping members of the fishing industry acquire necessary state and federal permits.

Lending Your Car May Be Risky Business

"Neither borrower nor lender be." Those ancient words about money ring with wisdom for today's automobile insurance consumer.
 "When you lend your car to a friend, beware," said Theodore H. Ousley, spokesman for the Insurance News Service. "If you lend your car out you may be legally liable for anything that that person does with it," Ousley, Charlotte-based regional vice president of Allstate Insurance Company, added.
 When you share your automobile you're offering more than the value of your car. You're sharing the protection of your insurance policy for which you paid the premiums and not the borrower, Ousley said. If the car you lend is involved in a serious accident, you may be sued and may have to pay damages even though you weren't in the car at the time of the accident.

 That may seem unfair, but as the owner of the vehicle you are giving your consent to the other person to be a "permissive" operator. Under the law you could be responsible for any damages done to others with your car.
 "Given today's prices for luxury automobiles and sports cars, it's not difficult to damage a car in excess of the amount of coverage required by state law," Ousley said. "Many cars on the road cost well over $15,000. If your property damage liability coverage is only the $10,000 required by state law, a damaged party can then get a judgment against other assets, such as your savings account, in order to be compensated."

 Ousley recommended these safeguards for automobile owners: -Consider carrying more liability coverage than required by state law in order to protect your personal assets from a law suit. (The law requires $25,000 bodily injury liability coverage on each person up to a total of $50,000 for each accident and $10,000 property damage liability for each accident.)

 -Whenever you lend your car, be sure you know who is driving it, where the driver is going and when he or she will return. Many times accidents by "permissive" operators involve intoxication. Insist that your friends operate your car in the safe, responsible way you drive it.
 -Make sure teenagers in your family understand the responsibility they place on you if they lend the car to a peer. When your son or daughter has a friend in your car, insist that your child be the driver.
 Ousley concluded, "The safest practice is to follow Shakespeare's advice and neither lend nor borrow."

Good Eating Habits Can Prevent Overweight Problems For Everyone

Being overweight affects not only adults, but children as well. And for children, it can lead to lifelong physical and social problems, according to Josephine Cialone, a nutritionist with the N.C. Division of Health Services.

Cheri Cook Named Cycle Of Life Head For Cooleemee Area

The Leukemia Society of America, North Carolina Chapter announced that the 1985 Cycle of Life Chairman for Cooleemee will be Cheri Cook.

The Leukemia Society of America is dedicated towards the conquering of leukemia. Proceeds from the Bike-A-Thon will be used for research and patient-aid.

At the present time, the Leukemia Society of America, North Carolina Chapter has $319,053 in research projects granted in the state of North Carolina. These research projects are being conducted at Duke University and the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

The Leukemia Society of America is also providing financial assistance to 550 patients in the state of North Carolina.

In spite of remarkable medical advances in the last ten years, leukemia remains a Number 1 killer disease of children. Leukemia is no longer a hopeless disease. There is hope for children and adults with leukemia due to the research that has helped in treatment and diagnosis.

When a boy or girl comes by your home asking you to sponsor them in the upcoming Bike-A-Thon, please consider that the funds will be used right here in North Carolina for research and patient-aid.

Anyone wishing information should contact Ms. Cook at 284-4341 in Mocksville.

Seed Catalog Lingo

N.C. Botanical Garden

While poring over the seed catalogs this time of year it is sometimes easy to become frustrated by the technical terms used in some of them.

To get the best results from seed purchases, it helps to order those selections most suited to one's needs and to be clear as to what is being chosen.

Staff members at the N.C. Botanical Garden of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill offer a few definitions to help avoid misunderstanding.

"F1" refers to the first generation seeds from a cross of two known parent plants yielding a new variety that is stable and uniform in growth and appearance in the first generation. If this new plant is liked, the seeds must be created anew from the same parents each year to remain true-to-type.

For more casual gardeners, the seeds from the F1 plants can be saved and planted the following year. They will be diverse in form and color in that they contain many strains of earlier generations. It can, nonetheless, be interesting to see what some of these throwbacks are like.

"Open pollinated" is a term sometimes used in contrast to the term F1 for seeds arising from natural pollination by wind, insects or casual flower movement and not by deliberate human intervention. Gardeners saving such seeds for planting next season are likely to produce plants more or less the same as the parents.

"Determinate" and "indeterminate" are often used to describe tomato seeds and refer to the plant's growth habit. Determinate plants have short stems ending in a flower cluster which tends to set fruit early. These bushy plants usually don't need staking and don't respond well to pruning.

Indeterminate tomatoes are larger plants with long stems which start bearing later. Since they can become quite large, these plants do better with staking and pruning.

"VF," "VFN" and "VFNT" refer to tomato varieties bred for resistance to certain diseases. V is verticillium wilt, F is fusarium wilt, N is nematode and T is tobacco mosaic. It is useful to call your county agricultural agent or extension service to inquire what local diseases are prevalent.

"All-America" selections, offered in some catalogs, are plants selected by experienced and non-biased judges representing two non-profit organizations. The new plants and varieties are chosen from trial plantings in gardens all over the United States.

Some of the All-America plants catch on and remain favorites, e.g., the sugar snap pea of 1979. Interestingly, not all do though. Some turn out to be novelties with short appeal. It's the gardeners that decide.

Picking the right seeds depends on having a clear picture of what is wanted, the type of soil, water and sunlight availability, as well as personal style. It's not a bad idea to stroll around the neighborhood and see what sorts of plants are doing well. And a little experimentation does no harm either.

medical problems which cause them to be overweight, but the vast majority simply don't eat properly," Cialone said. "They overeat, make improper choices about what to eat, or a combination of the two."

She said there are a number of reasons why children have weight problems:

--they are provided with poor food choices such as candy, cookies and soft drinks;

--food is prepared using too much oil, butter or fatback;

--food is used as a reward by parents and others;

--families are bombarded by advertising that makes less nutritious foods look appealing;

--social life often revolves around eating rather than other activities.

"Children who are not taught proper eating habits may face a multitude of problems, both as children and as adults," Cialone said. "For example, they may be teased about their size and excluded by other children. These children are also less likely to participate in play and physical activities."

She pointed out that children with weight problems sometimes become adults with the same problems. In adults, obesity can lead to chronic illnesses such as diabetes and high blood pressure.

A 1982 study, conducted by the state Division of Health Services and the University of North Carolina School of Public Health for the Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, showed that approximately 26 percent of North Carolina's adult population were obese (20 percent or more over a person's ideal weight).

Based on this study, North Carolina ranked fourth among the 30 states that participated in the CDC survey. Statistics on overweight children are not available.

"With children, the real key is to get them on the road to good nutrition and good eating habits at an early age," Cialone said.

She recommended the following ways parents and others can help their children develop good eating habits:

--monitor what children eat. Be sure they get a variety of foods;

--monitor food portion sizes. Remember that children need children's portions of food rather than adult helpings;

--be sure that children get regular physical checkups. Weight is relative to height, especially for children;

--offer children nutritious, lower-calorie snacks such as cereal, crackers or fruit rather than candy, cookies and soft drinks;

--encourage activities such as sports, yard work and family outings;

--prepare foods properly. Boil, broil or bake foods rather than frying them. Use less oil, butter and fatback in seasoning foods.

"One thing people often forget to do is to praise their children for making the right choices," Cialone said. A smile and praise can go a long way in helping children to develop good eating habits and become happier, healthier adults."

For more information about good nutrition and your children's eating habits, contact your family physician or the nutritionist at your local health department.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

"PRIDE IN THE PAST...
FOOTSTEPS TO THE FUTURE"

Robert Baden-Powell, Ernest Thompson Seton, Daniel Carter Beard, William D. Boyce, James E. West were some of the early pioneers of Scouting. They built upon a dream more than 75 years ago to organize the largest youth movement in the free world.

Today, the ideals and traditions of these early pioneers have become the cornerstones of Scouting. The basic survival skills, Scoutcraft, emergency preparedness, goal setting, unselfish service, and love of country are all major endeavors of Scouting and will continue to be in the future.

We salute the Boy Scouts of America as they celebrate their 75th anniversary this February 8, 1985, and thank them for the great contributions they have made to our nation.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

CELEBRATING OUR 75TH ANNIVERSARY • 1910-1985

Still Trustworthy, Loyal, And Helpful

Boy Scouts To Mark 75 Years Of Good Deeds

By Boris Weintraub
National Geographic News Service
Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell, Ernest Thompson Seton, and Daniel "Uncle Dan" Beard never heard of Tiger Cubs or Varsity Scouts. They probably would have disapproved of female Explorers. And who knows what they would have said about merit badges in atomic energy, space exploration, or golf?

On the other hand, those three pioneers of Scouting would have thoroughly understood the mission the Boy Scouts of America adopted in 1983: "To serve others by helping to instill values in young people and, in other ways, prepare them to make ethical choices over their lifetime in achieving their full potential."

They would have been pleased to know that those values are based on those found in the Scout Oath: "On my honor, I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout Law; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

On Feb. 8, the Boy Scouts of America will mark its 75th anniversary, three quarters of a century in which more than 70 million Americans have vowed to be trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean, and reverent—the 12 tenets of the Scout Law.

The culmination of the celebration will come in July with the National Scout Jamboree at Fort A.P. Hill, Va., with the end of the Heritage Campfire Caravan.
Beginning in May, a Heritage Campfire will be lighted outside every state capitol. Ashes will be put into a wooden box the shape of each state and added to a caravan that will zigzag, capital-to-capital, 7,600 miles across the country in 55 days to the Jamboree.

There, the boxes will be assembled into a map of the United States and ceremonially burned, "uniting the councils of the Boy Scouts of America in a pledge to continue providing a meaningful program for America's youth."

In that all sounds a little grandiose and abstruse, well, that's the way it's been since the earliest days of Scouting, and it's worked pretty well.

There have been numerous changes in American society in the Boy Scouts' 75 years, and they have had to adapt. They now seek out black, Hispanic, and handicapped youngsters. They welcome 7-year-olds into the Tiger Cub program and young women into co-educational, career-oriented Explorer posts. The "Official Boy Scout Handbook" now warns of drug abuse and teaches first aid for ratbites as well as for snakebites. Merit badge lists have been updated, to incorporate new fields of interest.

But the handbook still shows how to build a campfire and tie knots, a return to traditional Scout concerns after a flirtation with "relevance" in a previous edition. And membership rolls, after a precipitous decline from a "baby boom" peak of 6.5 million in 1972, have begun to edge upward once more after dropping to 4.3 million by the end of 1979.

Now, says a spokesman at Scout headquarters in Irving, Texas, membership is over 4.7 million, having about 40,000 in 1984. Of that number, 1.1 million are adult Scout leaders; the rest are Tiger Cubs, Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorers.

The father of Scouting was Baden-Powell, who had written a book for soldiers on how to function in the field while serving the British Empire.

When Baden-Powell returned to England a hero after holding off a siege in Mafeking, South Africa, during the Boer War, he discovered that his book was being used by British boys as a guide to life in the outdoors. Baden-Powell decided to rewrite the book especially for boys, and took 20 of them camping for two weeks on an island, where he trained them in tracking, first aid, woodcraft, and other outdoor skills.

The result was "Scouting for Boys", a combination of post-Victorian moral urgings and practical advice. It became the basic text of the British Boy Scouts when they were founded in 1908.

The following year, a Chicago newspaper publisher, William D. Boyce, got lost in a thick London fog. A young boy appeared and helped Boyce find his way. When the publisher proffered a one-shilling tip, the boy—soon to become legend as the "Unknown Scout"—replied, "No, sir, I am a Scout. Scouts do not accept tips for courtesies or good turns." Intrigued, Boyce visited Scout headquarters to learn more. In 1910, he organized the Boy Scouts of America.

Other groups dedicated to helping young boys learn self-reliance already existed, including the Woodcraft Indians, organized by Seton, a painter and naturalist, and the Sons of Daniel Boone, formed by Beard, an illustrator and outdoorsman. But most were soon folded into the Boy Scouts. The organization succeeded for 75 years in touching a special chord in millions of American boys.

Perhaps the best explanation for this comes from William Hillcourt, retired national director of Scoutcraft and author of the most recent, back-to-basics, Scout Handbook. Hillcourt scorns the idea that Scouting has to be "in tune with the times." Even in 1908, he told Robert W. Peterson, author of a new history of the Boy Scouts, Scouting was out of tune with the times:

"The idea of cooking your meal over an open fire when your mother at home was perfectly willing to cook your meal over a coal fire, and this idea of sitting around a campfire when you had a perfectly good kerosene lamp burning in your living room at home—it was exactly because it was idiotic and out of tune with the times that made Scouting appealing. It goes back to the atavistic thing that is supposed to be in every human being to play Tarzan and Robinson Crusoe and so on."

HISTORY

Boy Scout Troop No. 50, the first Boy Scout Troop in Mocksville, was organized in 1932 by the First Methodist Church minister, Rev. R.C. Goforth. The troop planned to build a log-constructed hut behind the church on the present site of the Fellowship Building but when plans were made to build the Fellowship Building, the boys were persuaded to meet in the Men's Bible class which was later added to the church.

After the Rev. Goforth moved, Rev. Proctor, the Baptist minister became scoutmaster until he went to the Greensboro YMCA. At this time the Boy Scouts in Mocksville almost became defunct until Bryan Sell came to Mocksville from Coolemeec, where he also has a troop.
In 1937 Rev. W.C. Cooper

reorganized a Boy Scout troop at the Presbyterian Hut. Twenty boys were present. The troop was later on officially reorganized by B.W. Hackney, of High Point, Boy Scout executive of the district. Officers of the troop that year were Bill Angell, scribe; patrol leaders: Joe Stroud, Holland Chaffin, C.F. Leach and Kimbrough Sheek, Jr.

Artist Norman Rockwell did a painting for the Boy Scout calendar almost every year from 1925 through 1976. Through his portrayal of Scout activities, uniforms, and gear, he became closely identified with the ideal image of the Boy Scouts of America. This 1946 work was titled "A Guiding Hand."

Girl Scout Cookie Sale Underway

Tarheel Triad Girl Scout Council, a United Way Agency is preparing to begin the Annual Girl Scout Cookie Sale. This year marks the 51st year of the Girl Scout Cookie Sale in America.
Local Girl Scouts began taking orders on January 11th. The Direct Sale begins on March 2nd, 1985. The cookies will be $2.00 a box. The varieties available for this year are Tagalongs, Do-si-do's, Thin Mints, Samoas, Trefoils Chocolate Chunks and our new cookie Juliettes.
The Girl Scout Cookie Sale and the United Way are the two major sources of funding for Girl Scouts. Profits from the Cookie Sale help to provide camping facilities, equipment, handbooks, filmstrips, tapes and books for troop use, staff services and special programs. The Cookie Sale provides an opportunity for girls, volunteers, and community to support the largest organization in the world for girls.
The Cookie Sale is a great way for girls to learn how to market a product, work with the public, promote their own program, and handle finances. Girls can earn a Marketing Patch while in the process of selling cookies. The patch requirements have girls learn about the varieties of cookies they sell, what makes a good salesperson, how to keep accurate records, etc. The girls also learn why advertising is important. They set sales goals and make a plan for selling cookies.
The sales theme for the 1985 Cookie Sale is "Cookie Encounter". The incentives the girls receive follow this basic theme. Some of this year's awards include a silver tote made of "space age material", a flight bag and a space animal named "Fru Fru". Other incentives include a Girl Scout autograph book, mug, t-shirt, and charm. Top cookie sellers can qualify to receive a camera, one week at Resident Camp, or a clock radio. Girls have fun selling Girl Scout Cookies. Many troops hold booth sales or group sales Saturdays in their neighborhoods. Parents are encouraged to help girls get the most from their Cookie Sale learning experience. Many parents give girls a list of their friends so that girls might call for phone orders. Other parents take an order card to work and put the girls picture and personal sales pitch on the bulletin board. Parents often accompany younger girls and act as a Cookie Partner. Girls are encouraged to discover their own potential as cookie sellers.

Each troop has a Cookie Chairperson that distributes cookie information and corrects all orders. Many local troops have Dads to fill the role of Cookie Chairperson. This volunteer position is a great short-term role that lots of fathers share in his daughters Girl Scout experience. With the help of their troop Chairperson and leader troops set their own sales goals. These goals depend upon their plans for the year. If the girls had planned a day at the park or a trip to Juliette Low's birthplace in Savannah, Georgia, they can determine how much the activity will cost and how much they would like to earn on their own. The Troop Cookie Chairperson reviews a flip chart with the girls on their product, it's cost, safety in selling, sales goals and future plans for their profits. Some Cookie Volunteers have cookie cupboards in their homes where troops and girls can pick up extra cookies when they run out.
The girls also learn what they are contributing to the support of their Girl Scout Program. Girls know for example that you have to sell eight boxes of cookies to buy one child's life jacket, or 450 boxes to buy one platform tent or twenty-five boxes to buy one troop program kit.
The Girl Scout Cookie Sale is big business. Girls, parents, troop leaders, and cookie volunteers help to make it a successful activity for girls. In 1984, the top cookie seller in Davie County, Tammy Revels of Junior Troop No. 473 was the highest cookie seller in 1984. She sold 476 boxes of cookies. Top cookie selling troops were Brownie Troop No. 581 that sold 2,604 boxes of cookies, and Junior Troop No. 280 that sold 1,752 boxes of cookies.

Local Bull Named 1985 Trait Leader

A Polled Hereford bull owned by Lucky Stryke Farm, Crossville, Tenn., and Whip-O-Will Farm, Mocksville, N.C., has been named a 1985 Trait Leader for maternal weight by the American Polled Hereford Association (APHA).
Graystone Trustee was one of 15 sires recognized by the APHA for exceptional progeny performance in maternal weight among the 842 bulls listed in the 1985 Sire Summary, an annual listing of bulls and their expected progeny difference values.
This is the fourth year of the APHA has produced the Sire Summary program to give Polled Hereford breeders and commercial cow-calf producers guidelines on selecting bulls for use in their individual breeding programs. Performance data on birth weight, weaning weight, yearling weight, carcass characteristics and maternal productivity of the sire's daughters is gathered by breeders across the U.S. and analyzed in APHA's data center.
"The program is not designed to tell breeders which bull is best, but instead help breeders make selection decisions to fit the needs of their herd," says Dr. Jim Gibb, APHA Director of Education and Research.
Trait Leader recognition in the Sire Summary is based on excellence in single traits plus total performance. Bulls ranking on the list have outstanding progeny performance and a high degree of reliability.

Alcohol Info Report by Bill Weant

A drinking driver, especially one that has a blood alcohol content of at least .10 percent, will exhibit one or more of the following clues:
--Driving at unreasonably slow or fast speeds.
--Changing lanes frequently.
--Drifting across the center line, and returning with a jerk.
--Passing with insufficient clearance; slowing or excessive swerving when overtaking or passing.
--Approaching signals unreasonably fast or slow, and making jerky starts and stops.
--Failing to dim lights to oncoming traffic.
--Driving at night without lights.
--Driving too close to shoulders or curbs; hugging the edge of the road or center line.
--Driving with windows down in cold weather.
--Turning with an unusually wide radius.
--Weaving, swerving.
--Stopping without cause in traffic lane.
--Braking and accelerating erratically.
--Driving into opposing or crossing traffic.
--Signaling inconsistent with actions.
Persons driving while impaired increase their chances of having an automobile accident by seven times, and they are more likely to cause greater personal and property damage if such an accident should occur.

Applicants Sought For Little Miss Pageant

The Winston-Salem Jaycee Women are now taking applications for the Fifth Annual Little Miss Winston-Salem Pageant to be held March 30-1985. The first twenty (20) applicants from Forsyth County and all adjoining counties will be taken. Girls must be five (5) to eight (8) years old. The entry fee is $50.00.

Last year, we had twenty (20) eligible applicants who competed in talent, sportswear, and evening dress competitions. We had a variety of talent ranging from gymnastics and dancing to singing and playing the piano. Each child was outstanding in every phase of competition. Judges interviewed the children prior to the pageant. This was combined with the pageant competition to select a winner.

We had over sixty (60) sponsors for last year's pageant and hope to have more this year. Sponsors and advertisers were listed in our program. Among the prizes donated were skating and theater passes, free dinners, clothing certificates, hair cuts, dental checkups, trophies and flowers. This year, again, we will award each contestant with a trophy; the winner, in addition, will receive a crown. Other prizes will also be awarded.

Proceeds from the Little Miss Winston-Salem Pageant benefit the Rainbow House and Amos Cottage. Rainbow House (Ronald McDonald) is a home away from home where families can stay while their children are receiving treatment at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem for chronic illnesses.

This year's pageant will take place Saturday, March 30, 1985 at Philo Junior High School Auditorium. The finals will begin at 7:00 p.m. The theme this year is "Soaring Dreams". The emcee is Kathy Fleming, of Elkin, North Carolina, 1977 Miss North Carolina.

Tickets will be on sale at the door. For additional information write the Winston-Salem Jaycee Women, P.O. Box 2256, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, 27102.

Variations In Sign Languages Vary Across America

The authors discovered there are at least 22 different hand variations for the word, picnic, in American Sign Language—which is the fourth most used language in the United States behind English, Spanish and Italian.

By Melinda Stovall
In Florida, an up-and-down motion of the hands indicates the word, picnic, in sign language. Two hands brought to the mouth means picnic in Illinois.

At least 22 different hand variations exist for the word, picnic, in American Sign Language—the fourth most used language in the United States behind English, Spanish and Italian.

Reflecting regional variations, vacationers may talk of the beach in North Carolina, call it the shore in New Jersey or speak of the coast in Oregon. Likewise, users of sign language across America vary their hand movements for certain words, depending on where they live.

A recently published book written by two Greensboro educators of the deaf focuses for the first time on regional variations in American Sign Language.

"Signs Across America: A look at Regional Differences in American Sign Language" was written by Dr. Edgar H. Shroyer, an associate professor of communication disorders at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, and his wife, Susan P. Shroyer, an educator at both Guilford and Bennett colleges.

The 304-page book was published by Gallaudet College Press of Washington, D.C., and contains 130 individual words for which at least three different signs currently are used.

"The recognition of different signs for the same word is something that has been done time and time again for anybody who has anything to do with deafness. But no one had ever come up with a process to record it," said Dr. Shroyer.

The Shroyers were playing "What's your sign for...?" with friends one night two years ago. Fascinated by the variations, they decided to expand their research to 25 states with sizable deaf populations and states that reflected different regions in the country. Thirty-eight persons across the country contributed signs for the book.

"Most of the people we asked we knew," Dr. Shroyer said. "In places that we didn't know anyone, we contacted the community service centers for the deaf and sometimes the residential schools."

"We asked them to share some of their signs," he continued. "To record the signs, we sent them a videotape and a list of words and asked them to sign."

The Shroyers collaborated on the research for the book, viewing the videotapes and the 1,278 illustrations represented in the entire text.

The book is targeted mainly toward those in interpreter training programs, educators who teach sign language, linguists and the general deaf population.

"Invariably what happens when you teach a sign language class is that a student will say that is not the sign he or she learned," Dr. Shroyer said. "With this book, a teacher now can show when sign language for a word is not uniform. And sign language definitely isn't international as thought by many. There is German sign language, Russian sign language, etc."

Besides being educational, the book, Dr. Shroyer noted, is one of the few works to preserve unique and traditional signs found across the country.

"People have been very positive, saying that saving sign language heritage is a fantastic idea," he said. "American Sign Language is based on French sign language. When French sign language was brought over in 1817, people used it. When they started school for the deaf, students also brought their own signs to the classroom; thus, you had American and French sign languages dovetailing."

"People who were taught by Thomas Gallaudet (recognized as one of the originators of the first permanent school for the deaf in the United States in 1817) branched out to start schools of their own, and they incorporated what the students brought in," Dr. Shroyer continued. "Always some signs vary, depending on where you live."

"In Hawaii, for instance, the signs are quite different because it is so far away. They didn't send our teachers of the deaf as quickly to Hawaii as they did to the continental United States. The sign language in Hawaii is more primitive and doesn't follow American Sign Language rules for usage as much."

A native signer, Dr. Shroyer is the hearing son of deaf parents and the nephew of four deaf aunts and four deaf uncles. In 1978, he joined the division of communication disorders in UNC-G's Department of Communication and Theatre.

Frostbite remedies

With Winter upon us, bear in mind that frostbite is fairly easy to prevent. Wearing earmuffs and scarves serves as adequate protection for ears and cheeks.

Wet gloves and socks make for frostbitten fingers and toes. Change to dry clothing as needed.

Minor frost nips may be treated by covering cheeks or ears with a warm hand. Deeper frostbite may require medical attention. Get the victim indoors and call a doctor. Then, warm the frostbitten area by immersing it in water heated ten degrees above body temperature. Take care of yourself. You're important to us!

Federal Government Spent $44-Million In Davie During '83

The federal government directly spent $44,026,000, in Davie County during the fiscal 1983 according to a report recently issued by the United States Department of Commerce. The Federal government's fiscal 1983 began on October 1, 1982 and ended on September 30, 1983. During this period, direct federal expenditures amounted to $1,790, for every man, woman, and child in Davie County. Direct per capita federal expenditures in North Carolina were $2,202 during fiscal 1983 while direct per capita federal expenditures nationally were $3,049 during the fiscal year.

Direct payments in individuals were the largest single source of federal spending in Davie County during fiscal 1983. These amounted to $26,150,000 during that year. Of this total $21,129,000 consisted of retirement and disability benefits for individuals. These include Social Security retirement and disability pension payments, retired civil service and military pensions, veterans' benefits and allowances, expenditures for medicare, as well as most of the other forms of federal assistance for individuals which are usually termed "transfer payments" or "entitlements".

Another major source of federal spending in Davie County during fiscal 1983 was the Defense Department. Total defense spending in the county during this period was $17,247,000. However, this figure is misleadingly high since a very substantial portion of it consists of military pensions and veterans' benefits which were also reported as direct payments to individuals. $119,000 of defense spending in Davie County during fiscal 1983 was for military and other Defense Department salaries. A further $16,171,000 was disbursed by the Defense Department in Davie County in the form of military procurement contracts.

Other departments and agencies of the federal government including the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Housing and Urban Development, Interior, and Transportation and the Environmental Protection Agency disbursed $234,000 in Davie County during fiscal 1983. While the federal government does not provide a breakdown of these figures in Davie County, other sources indicate that the Department of Agriculture was one of the largest source of these funds in Davie County during fiscal 1983.

Other federal spending in Davie County during the fiscal year included $327,000 in grant awards. Specific details on all local grants were not provided. However, besides general revenue sharing grants, the largest sources for grant funds in most counties are the Departments of Agriculture, Education, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Labor and Transportation.

While the total of direct federal spending in Davie County is substantial, as noted, it does not include another extremely important source of federal money in the county: federal loans and federally guaranteed loans. These are not included in direct federal spending figures because, as loans, it is presumed that these funds will eventually be repaid to the federal government.

Federal loans and federally guaranteed loans encompass a variety of programs. These include emergency farm disaster loans, rural electric loans and loan guarantees, Small Business Administration loans, student loans for higher education, community development loans, many of the various housing loan programs, as well as others.

Direct federal loans in Davie County were $11,000 during fiscal 1983 while federally guaranteed loans in the county amounted to $5,685,000. The Department of Agriculture's loan programs were among the largest sources of federally guaranteed loans in Davie County during that year. The Department of Agriculture's loan programs include a number of low and moderate income housing loan programs as well as various farm loan programs.

None of the federal spending totals in Davie County include expenditures made through the United States Postal Service in Davie County. The Postal Service's expenditures are no longer considered a separate corporation. Postal Service expenditures in Davie County for fiscal 1983 are not presently available.

The total of direct and indirect federal spending in Davie County was $49,722,000 during fiscal 1983. It is apparent that federal spending provided one of the largest sources of funds for the economy of Davie County during that period.

Commission Makes Recommendations To Enhance The Town's Appearance

By John Vernelson

The Appearance Commission put on a show for the Town Board at a special meeting of the two February 12.

Following the show, a slide presentation of Mocksville which highlighted both its assets and liabilities, the Board listened as the commission made six recommendations designed to enhance the town's appearance and to make it a safer, more accessible place for its citizens.

Recommendations are:

1. On South Main Street, designate NO PARKING in the parking spaces in front of the two sets of steps. This will allow pedestrians to step up from the street onto the sidewalk.
  2. Remove all extraneous concrete from the four plots and re-seed them.
  3. Replace the sidewalks and curbs where needed on both sides of North Main Street. Replace the asphalt strip between the sidewalk and the curb with concrete.
  4. Replace street signs. All signs that identify streets should be green with white letters. Stop signs and others in disrepair should be replaced.
  5. Remove privately placed signs in the right-of-way that are in disrepair.
  6. Collect garbage from the rear of businesses whenever it is feasible.
- All six of the commission's recommendations were approved, although Board members decided to delay sidewalk and curb work on North Main Street until the economic feasibility of such an undertaking has been determined. Town manager Terry Bralley said Friday if the price is reasonable, he sees no reason why the North Main sidewalk project cannot be completed this year. "At the worst," he said, "it will be budgeted for next year."

The Town acted quickly to implement the wishes of the Board. Workmen were busy Friday afternoon designating the no parking areas on South Main and Thursday afternoon 12-15 privately owned signs in the right-of-way were removed, according to Bralley.

Some signs in the right-of-way are community watch signs and were left intact by workmen, Bralley said. Later, he will suggest to Community Watch block captains that their organization assume the responsibility for the upkeep of these signs.

Sanitation workers have been asked to compile a list of businesses which, at the present, require frontal garbage pick-up. Once the list has been completed, the Town will mail these businesses a letter to see if it would be feasible for them to relocate garbage pick-up to the rear of their buildings, Bralley said.

A list of downtown street signs which need to be replaced has been completed and, according to Bralley, the order for their replacements has been made out.

Work on the four plots will commence as soon as the weather is favorable for re-seeding in the early spring. The Town will not remove any extraneous concrete from the plots until about a week prior to the re-seeding. Bralley reasons that such a schedule will lessen the probability of erosion problems that might occur when the now protected topsoil is exposed to the elements.

SOUTH MAIN STREET AREA IS TOP PRIORITY

Although none of the Appearance Commission's recommendations deal with the multitude of problems posed by the oak trees which line the west side of South Main Street, the commission said it has determined that this area should receive top priority.

Mayor Mando agreed. He said that while the Square is a good starting place for the Town to begin its work to improve the appearance and accessibility of Mocksville, problems associated with the trees on South Main make it the top priority.

And, the Board seemed to agree. When member Bob Hall said it had to make a decision concerning the fate of the trees, no disagreement was voiced by the body's four other members.

Town manager Bralley recommended that the Town bring in a landscaping expert to examine the trees who, after completing his study, would advise the Appearance Commission of his findings so that it could return to the Board with recommendations.

Board member Julia Howard said because of the Board's budget planning schedule, it would need the Appearance Commission's recommendations by April.

Friday afternoon Bralley said he had already contacted Herman Terry, the Director of Urban Forestry for the Department of Natural Resources, "to take a look at the trees on South Main."

Consultant To Review Local Cable Applications

Two cable television companies vying for a franchise allowing the set up of cable in eastern Davie face a delay after commissioners voted to refer the applications to an outside consultant.

The five members of the Davie County Board of Commissioners voted unanimously Monday to refer applications submitted by Advance Microwave and Davie County Cable T.V. to an outside consultant for recommendation on technical merit. Commissioners told representatives of the two firms that the board felt an independent analysis of the proposals was in order due to the "competitive nature of the applications."

Law stipulated that the county hold at least two public hearings prior to granting cable television franchises. Monday's meeting was the second concerning the two competing firms.

Bill Foster, board chairman, said Davie County is lucky to have two good companies applying for the franchise, but said the final decision would be made on a technical basis and not personalities.

During the meeting, a petition with about 150 names favoring Advance Microwave was submitted to the board for consideration. However, the board indicated that it would rely heavily on the recommendations of an independent cable television consultant in making its final decision.

Phillip Bolton, the owner of Advance Microwave, asked the commissioners last month for a franchise to serve 250 homes along N.C. 801 by this spring. The board tentatively agreed to grant the franchise, but several weeks ago Davie County Cable submitted its application.

Davie County Cable wants to serve 931 residents along N.C. 801 and N.C. 158 within seven months, according to the application. Service would be expanded to Advance and Farmington by 1986.

After Davie County Cable's application was submitted, Bolton

County Jail Adds New Security Measure

By John Vernelson

"We're getting a different breed of inmate than what we did 20 years ago," said Chief Jailer Buster Smith Monday as he considered the importance of the County Jail's newest security measure, a metal grate that stretches across the jail's front entrance.

Citing the need of the jailor to have more control over the flow of traffic in and out of the jail, Smith had nothing but praise for the metal grate whose door may be opened electronically with the flick of a switch or with a key.

Since no one but authorized personnel have access to keys, Smith said the on-duty jailor has complete control of all jail traffic.

Installed about a month ago, the metal grate is located just inside swinging glass doors that open to the outside. Prior to the installation of the grate, Smith said the jail was wide open.

"During the night shift," he said, "the glass doors were so quiet,

Man Charged With Assault After Hitting Son

By John Vernelson
A Cooleemee man who struck his 12-year-old son in the head with a drinking glass Saturday morning at the two watched television was arrested later the same day and charged with simple assault by the Davie County Sheriff's Department.
Jerry Wesley Jacobs, 40, of 1 Grove Street was arrested in his home at 1:45 p.m. several hours after his son described the incident to Martha Phipps, an LPN on duty in Davie County Hospital's emergency room where the boy was admitted at 10:41 a.m. for treatment of a head wound, according to a Sheriff's Dept. report.
Statements made by the injured boy to LPN Phipps indicated that the elder Jacobs became enraged and threw the glass at his son when the youth did not switch television stations as asked to by the father. The boy said he was watching cartoons, but his father wanted to watch a western instead.
After listening to the boy's story as she treated his head wound, a laceration approximately 4 cm long and 1/4 cm deep, Phipps notified the Sheriff's Dept. and the Dept. of Social Services of the assault, according to the report.
The victim and his mother Mary Jacobs said, according to the report, that Jacobs had been drinking prior to the incident and, in fact, had been drinking heavily since the preceding Thursday.

Later, when investigating officers, Det. P.C. Williams and deputy Holt Howell, entered the Jacobs residence to make the arrest, they saw a fifth bottle of liquor more than three-fourths empty sitting atop the kitchen table and another fifth bottle totally empty in the living room, the report indicated.

When Williams and Howell entered the Jacobs residence, the report indicated that Jacobs was on a couch in the living room watching television and offered no resistance when the two officers placed him under arrest.
Once Jacobs reached the County Jail, his mood apparently changed because he became very loud, uncooperative, and, according to the report, struck jailor Bob Lemmons in the back with his fist as Lemmons prepared to place him in a cell.
Magistrate Robert Cook set Jacobs' secured bond at $100 and ordered that the arrested man not be released for at least four hours so he would have time to sober up, the report indicated.

According to the arrest report, the case was referred to the Department of Social Services because of the "remote" possibility that Jacobs might eventually be charged with child abuse in addition to simple assault.
Social work supervisor Karen Smith said Tuesday afternoon the Dept. of Social Services routinely works with the Sheriff's Dept. and the district attorney on cases of this type, but because of their confidential nature, she is not at liberty to discuss specific cases.

County Jail Adds New Security Measure

someone could have been in the jail before the jailor would know it."
Many times, he continued, when the jailor is in the cell area, the only people up front are those in the communications office.
Because of the proximity of I-40, Smith said the jail houses out-of-state fugitives quite often. Not all of these people or their friends are the types who frequented Andy Taylor's jail in Mayberry, he said.
Some potentially dangerous prisoners spend months in the county jail. The recently convicted murderers of the Winston-Salem cab driver spent about eight months in the Davie jail, according to Smith.

It's bothersome at times for the jailer to have to let all but authorized personnel in and out, Smith said, but the benefits of the new system easily outweigh this minor irritation.
In addition, a second metal grate separates the magistrate's jail office (located just inside the front entrance) from the booking area (located to the left of the magistrate's office). This, in conjunction with the new front entrance grate, allows the jailor more freedom and more options as he deals with Sunday visitors and prisoners who are waiting to make bond, Smith said.

The erection of the metal grate not only improves the overall security of the jail, but according to Smith, is in compliance with recommendations made by the State Jail Inspector in November.

Davie Hospital Gets $4,084 Duke Grant

The Davie County Hospital has been awarded an operating grant of $4,084 by the Duke Endowment.
According to Ashley H. Gale, Jr., director of the Endowment's Hospital and Child Care Divisions, the recent grants "are annual awards to help cover costs of indigent care and data-gathering services in hospitals, and to defray operating expenses in child-care institutions. This year's contribution represents an increase of nearly 6 percent over last year's grants for the same purposes."

When James Buchanan Duke established the Duke Endowment in 1924, he directed that all qualifying nonprofit hospitals in the two Carolinas receive one dollar per day for each day of free care given to charity patients. The percentage of "free bed" days fell dramatically with the advent of Medicare-Medicaid programs, but now exceeds the pre-Medicare-Medicaid level.

Hospitals reporting to the Endowment indicated that percentages of "free days" rose from 16.5 percent in 1983 to 18.4 percent in 1984.
"There has been a steady escalation in the number of free bed days," said Mr. Gale. "The uninsured poor, the elderly, and those with catastrophic illnesses account for most of the increase.

United Way Applicants Sought

Human service non-profit agencies interested in applying for funding through Davie County's United Way are encouraged to submit an application by April 12.
Applications received by that date will be considered for admission to United Way and may participate in this year's budget process to receive funding in 1986.
Agencies interested in applying should contact Ruth Foster at 284-2542, Carmen Walker at 988-5555 or Darlena Cockerham at 723-3601.

Cable Applications To Be Reviewed

revised his application, Charles Mashburn, the county manager, said. Bolton now proposes serving 700 homes in the Advance area within a year.
Only Mocksville residents and county residents served by Central Telephone Co. have cable service now.
Advance Microwave now provides cable service to Riverview Townhouses on N.C. 801, but also handles 24 commercial buildings across the state, Bolton told the commissioners in December.
Advance Microwave customers would pay $8 a month for 11 basic channels, Bolton said initially. For $4.50 more a month, customers would get 19 more channels, including Cable News Network, Nickelodeon, the Nashville Network Music Television and C-Span.
The Movie channel Home Box Office costs $10.95, but Bolton's application shows that additional channels, such as Showtime, the Disney Channel and Cinemax, might be available later at a lower cost.
Davie County Cable was formed expressly for the franchise in eastern Davie County, according to its application. The co-managers are Thomas R. Orrell of Winston-Salem and Lester Hilton of Advance.

Campbell Road Bridge To Be Replaced

The Division of Highways of the North Carolina Department of Transportation will close Campbell Road (Secondary Road 1400) in Davie County to general traffic for approximately four weeks. The road, located near Mocksville, will close on February 18. It is expected to reopen in mid-March.
The temporary closing will allow NCDOT bridge maintenance crews to replace an existing bridge with pipe. During construction, traffic will be detoured from Campbell Road to US-158, back to Campbell Road. The detour route is 4 miles long.
For additional information, contact B.D. Martin, bridge maintenance supervisor, (704) 633-3001.

Report From Raleigh

by Rep. Betsy Cochrane

The 1985 session of the General Assembly started with a coronation in the House and a discipline lesson in the Senate.

A resolution affecting when the Governor would speak to the General Assembly was the first order of business in the Senate. It was to see if the party troops would line-up like they are supposed to. The suggested date in the resolution was not the one originally agreed to by the Governor and Lt. Governor. There was a section of the resolution which told the Governor what to say. That move was without precedent. A session law dating from 1925 says an incoming governor may present his budget after his biennium address. Since a resolution is not binding and only requests, the whole episode was "much ado about nothing." I'm glad we're moving on to more substantive issues.

One substantive issue is a change in Day Care Law. We've had about a dozen bills introduced affecting changes in child-staff ratio, space in square feet per child, training of child care providers, definition of a provider, changes in assistance standards, etc. We obviously need to upgrade in some areas, like child-staff ratio for babies, but we must move very cautiously so that we do not price families right out of the day care market. I am on the committee that will evaluate these proposed laws, so I am studying the issues very carefully.

I have co-sponsored legislation to repeal the direct deposit for teachers and the centralized pay system. I believe in local control where the employer, which is the school board, pays the employee. The interest earned by the money on deposit is also needed by local systems in funding their budgets.

We have had two bills introduced to raise the drinking age to 21. One bill raises the age for purchase, consumption and possession of beer and wine to 21 effective July 2, 1985.

The other bill raises the age over a two year period. Although the prevention of highway deaths and accidents is the primary reason for the age change, the availability of additional highway funds makes it a more acceptable and possible move at this particular time.

This may not have made headlines, but we have had a bill introduced to put a sales tax on ice. Ice is presently exempt from the retail and use tax.

This same representative introduced a bill to provide a refundable income tax credit to low-income individuals for the estimated amount of sales and use taxes paid by them on food. I certainly do not oppose helping folks in need, but these low-income individuals may have to hire a Certified Public Accountant to fill out the forms to qualify for the refund. Bills such as this one can be modified as amended in committee so that a feasible idea has a workable format.

We have had legislation introduced to conform state dependent care credit to the federal credit regarding care for a disabled dependent or spouse. This includes expenses for care outside the home for a mentally or physically disabled child who is 15 years of age or older, or a mentally or physically disabled spouse. It increases the credit for two or more qualifying individuals from $4,000 to $4,800, and increases one qualifying individual's credit from $2,000 to $2,400.

One especially pleasant event for me in this first ten days of session was having Kathy Tomlinson and her husband at a reception and dinner honoring First Amendment Day. I am grateful to all of you for the opportunity for service you have provided me. I hope you will visit me when you are in Raleigh and will write me to share your views on any subject. I am in Room 1106 of the Legislative Building. My phone number is 919-733-5822.

Lost... a light brown puppy with a cut off tail. Kay Johnson of Mocksville spent Monday afternoon placing signs concerning her lost puppy along Country Lane. She said the dog, a stray which wandered to her home, disappeared this weekend in the area and has not been located. I've become very attached to the puppy, and hope the signs will prompt persons who might have seen him to call me. She said his cut off tail is a sure identification and added that "he's so ugly, he's cute."

Rezoning Denial Sparks Dispute

A request to poll the Davie County Board of Commissioners on tape as to why each voted against a rezoning petition led to a heated exchange Monday between commission chairman Bill Foster and petitioner, Cletus Potts.

Foster ruled a request by Potts of Clemmons to poll each member as to his reasons for voting against the rezoning of 3.1 acres on Howardtown Road for a mobile home park as out of order.

Potts, who taped the hour long hearing, asked that the records show that his request was denied. Foster acknowledged that each side of the rezoning issue, including the opposition represented by Mocksville attorney Hank VanHoy, would be reflected in the minutes.

Potts also threatened to appeal the commissioners' decision in court.

Potts' request was denied previously on Jan. 7 because of a technical error in notifying adjoining property owners of a public hearing. The Davie County Planning Board approved the request at a meeting on Nov. 19 and again on Jan. 31.

In his request to the commission, Potts proposed opening a 10-unit mobile home park with recreational facilities on the 3.1 acres of land up for rezoning.

About 25 neighbors opposed the rezoning, saying a mobile home park would change the rural character of their community and lower property values.

Potts, in a presentation to the commissioners, said that 33 of the 70 visible occupied dwellings on Howardtown Road are mobile homes on private lots.

As for the property values, Potts referred to a slide presentation he had made to the board earlier showing dilapidated buildings and dump sites along the road. "It seems logical that they might be concerned about this matter if they're really concerned over property value," he said.

The commissioners have not approved a rezoning request for mobile home rental property in the past eight years, despite the county's need for more housing, Potts said.

Despite objections by County Attorney John Brock that previous delays were irrelevant, Potts said he had been treated differently from other petitioners because of the delays. Brock ruled at the Jan. 8 meeting to present the request to the planning board a second time and hold another public hearing, giving proper notification to adjoining property owners.

Potts ended his presentation by quoting from four Supreme Court cases concerning rezoning, which he interpreted to mean that public interest alone is not enough reason to deny a rezoning request. "You have an obligation to approve this request, and I urge you to do so," he said.

Van Hoy was adamant in his contention that commissioners have no legal obligation to grant the request. "This is not the law, and I'm sure Mr. Brock can so advise you," he said.

Van Hoy represented some 25 citizens who attended their third board meeting to oppose the rezoning request.

In other business, a franchise was awarded to River Cable Inc. for continued service to Bermuda Run and Bermuda Village.

Also at the meeting, commissioners appointed Shirley Betsa, Marie Miller, Catherine Young, Wilma Hayes and Richard Carson to the county's nursing home advisory committee.

Town To Charge Fee To Cut Off Water

Beginning April 1, the Town will charge a fee to cut on or cut off water for Mocksville residents, according to town manager Terry Bralley.

A fee of $20 will be charged during business hours (8 a.m. - 5 p.m., Monday - Friday). A fee of $40 will be charged for such services after business hours, Bralley said.

Fees will be charged when residents have their water cut off because of frozen pipes, leaks, and other plumbing repairs, he said, but no fee will be charged when residents move into a new residence.

According to Bralley, the state plumbing code requires that houses have a master water cut-off.

Disaster Assistance: A Proud American Tradition

The American people have a proud tradition of responding generously when disaster strikes. Since the early days of our republic, Americans have consistently provided relief supplies and emergency food aid to victims of earthquakes, famines, floods, fires, hurricanes, and civil strife the world over.

This proud tradition continues today with America's generous assistance to the millions of famine victims suffering from the current drought and food shortages in Africa.

The U.S. Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance marked the 20th anniversary of its coordinated foreign disaster relief efforts in 1984. Since 1964, the United States has assisted victims of 772 disasters in 128 countries. These disasters killed more than 2 million people and affected another 751 million.

The United States has proved $2.4 billion to assist victims recover from these tragedies.

The U.S. Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance (OFDA) within the Agency for International Development (AID) coordinates U.S. government aid to countries hit by disasters. Its responsibilities include emergency relief and rehabilitation as well as disaster preparedness, early warning, and contingency planning.

Disaster relief and preparedness are vital to developing countries. With less developed communications systems, unreliable transport, and weaker economies, these nations often don't have the resources to initiate massive relief efforts when disasters strike. And disasters are more crippling to fragile economies.

AID Administrator M. Peter McPherson calls the disaster assistance program a crucial part of AID's over-all development strategy. "Development is a difficult, fragile process, and I have seen natural and man-made disasters play havoc on this process," he says.

"Apart from immediate relief," McPherson explains, "our program is designed to help developing countries cope more effectively with disasters by using their own resources. This is done through training and public awareness projects, and by integrating these countries into international early warning systems."

Making A Difference Already, some of the disaster preparedness efforts of the OFDA had had an effect in the African food emergency. For example, improved forecasting of grain harvests has helped mobilize relief efforts in advance of a crisis. OFDA-launched forecasting methods helped develop an emergency food program in the East African nations of Rwanda and Kenya this year which should save many lives.

AID's efforts in famine relief represent "an enormous immediate response," according to Administrator McPherson. However, he cautions, "it is clear that there is going to have to be a great deal more" done before the emergency abates.

OFDA's role in this emergency is one every American can be proud of.

Local Student Selected For Scholarship, Interviewed At ECU

Five high school students have been selected as alternates to be interviewed Feb. 16 for places as finalists for East Carolina University's University Scholar award.

A total of 26 students will be interviewed by regional screening committees Saturday, according to Charles F. Seeley, director of admissions. Finalists will be invited to visit the campus prior to selection of the five University Scholar award winners next month.

The University Scholars program was established at ECU last fall. It offers full, $3,000 a year scholarships to students with superior academic records and leadership potential.

Seeley identified the five alternates selected for interviews as: Brude M. Branon, Mocksville; Alan E. Jones, Rutherfordton; Sherry L. Campbell, Charlotte, all to be interviewed in Greensboro;

$18 - Million Alienation Of Affection Suit Dropped

The $18 million alienation of affection suit naming Fred C. Lovette of Wilkesboro and his nephew's estranged wife has been dropped.

Davie court records show that R. Lane Lovette of Mocksville has voluntarily dropped the suit and agreed not to bring it back to court.

No monetary settlement was mentioned in the dismissal papers. Lane Lovette sued in November accusing his uncle of using promises of wealth to steal the affections of his 23-year-old wife, Diane Taylor Lovette.

Lovette also accused his uncle and ex-wife of stealing the affection of the Lovettes' 4-year-old son.

The suit contended that Fred Lovette, 59, and Diane Lovette began an affair in 1983, while she posed as his housekeeper.

The elder Lovette encouraged his nephew to seek a divorce later that year, the suit alleged, then moved Diane Lovette into his mountaintop estate in Wilkesboro the day the couple were legally separated.

Lane Lovette said that his uncle spent extraordinary amounts of money on his wife for trips, cars, expensive jewelry and clothes.

The younger Lovette, a former research supervisor at Holly Farms, sought $3 million in actual damages and $15 million in punitive damages from his uncle for adultery and alienation of affection from his wife and son.

He also sought $1 million in actual damages and $5 million in punitive damages from Diane Lovette for alienation of the affection of his son.

Fred Lovette, whose estate has been valued at $20 million, founded Holly Farms when he was 17, after taking over his father's egg and chicken business.

Holly Farms is now the largest chicken-processing company in the world.

Although neither side would say why the suit was dropped, a N.C. Court of Appeals ruling in December may have applied to the case.

The court ruled that, since a man or woman commits adultery or gives affection of his or her own free will, adultery and alienation of affection can no longer be grounds for lawsuits by spouses seeking retribution.

Lane Lovette's attorney said at the time that the ruling might affect his client's case.

Census Bureau To Survey Selected Households Of Area

Local representatives of the U.S. Census Bureau will visit selected area households beginning March 1 to conduct its Survey of Income and Program Participation (SIPP), Joseph S. Harris, Director of the Bureau's Charlotte Regional Office, has announced.

SIPP is a major continuing survey that was introduced to many areas in the fall of 1983. It began with 20,000 households nationwide and now approaches 38,000. It will be among the nation's largest when the full complement of about 55,000 households is reached in April 1986.

Expanding the sample means that participating households contribute to a more accurate picture of economic conditions among American families. The Census Bureau publishes periodic reports that provide information on the survey's results, covering subjects such as jobs and earnings; the economic effects of unemployment, disability, and retirement; how taxes affect personal spending; and participation in programs such as Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, and food stamps. This information helps policy makers and administrators determine whether government programs are aiding those they are designed to help and how program and policy changes will affect segments of the population.

Here are some facts from the first SIPP interviews (the sample size limits accurate reporting to national figures only):

--The average monthly income for the nation's 83.1 million nonfarm households in 1983's second quarter was $1,670. For white households it was $1,750 and for black households, $1,080.

--The average monthly income for married-couple households was $2,160. For those maintained by someone age 65 or older it was $950 and for households maintained by women with children and no husband present, $800.

--SIPP also revealed these totals of households receiving public assistance: Medicaid, 7.5 million; food stamps, about 6.3 million; Aid to Families With Dependent Children, 3.8 million; and public housing assistance, 3.5 million.

Information collected in SIPP is confidential by law. Census interviewers will ask for detailed information which will be made public in statistical summaries from which no individual can be identified. Interviewers have credentials identifying them as U.S. Census Bureau employees.

Rex Hobson, guidance counselor at Davie High, said the county stands a good chance of getting one of the five German exchange students scheduled to arrive in the Piedmont in mid-September. He is currently seeking host families wishing to house exchange students during their visit.

Davie High School Seeking Hosts For German Exchange Students

A Davie High guidance counselor is seeking host families for five German teenagers slated to spend ten weeks in the area beginning in mid-September.

Rex Hobson, local guidance counselor, said the Cultural Relations Fellowship is sponsored by the Koerber Foundation of Germany and R. J. Reynolds of Winston-Salem. The exchange is identical to the one which has allowed approximately 8 Davie High students to spend six weeks in Germany, living with host families and working in German industries.

Hobson explained that host families will be selected from a seven county area. "I feel that Davie stands a good chance of having at least one visit the area during the tour," he said. "We are currently recruiting prospective host families willing to open their homes to one of the youths if Davie is indeed selected as a host county."

Families wishing to participate in the exchange must have a child enrolled in the eleventh or twelfth grade at Davie High, and possess a sincere desire in having a foreign exchange student in their home for ten weeks.

Applications and brochures about the program may be secured at the Davie High Guidance Office with the official application cut off date set for March 1. Applications will be screened and forwarded to R. J. Reynolds in Winston-Salem for final approval.

"I would like to have three to four families willing to house a foreign exchange student in case Davie is indeed named a host county," he said. "I truly feel confident that we stand a good chance of having at least one in the county during the ten week tour."

He added that all five of the exchange students speak fluent English.

The exchange students will return to Germany just before Thanksgiving. During their tour they will visit Washington, D.C., New York and Florida.

While living in the county, exchange students will attend classes at Davie County High School where they will be enrolled in two to three vocational courses. They will also visit area schools and civic groups to give lectures on Germany's customs, beliefs and life styles.

Anthropologists Take Innovative Measures Of American Health

(In today's unprecedented quest for good health, Americans are changing their diets, trying to reduce stress and exercising, exercising, exercising. But are we any healthier than our ancestors were? "Anthropologists Take Innovative Measures of American Health" provides some scientific insights into America's health history and debunks a long-held myth about colonial Americans.)

By William G. Schulz
Smithsonian News Service

"Wellness," low cholesterol diets, reduced sodium diets, stress elimination and exercise, exercise, exercise are the buzz-words of the Health-conscious '80s. Americans are jogging, cycling and swimming their way toward unprecedented fitness.

Health professionals are exhilarated. Their warnings about how to prevent such ailments as diabetes, cardiovascular disease and hypertension (high blood pressure) have received robust response. But while well-worn tennis shoes and home exercise equipment might be evidence of current quests for chic, sleek physiques, some scientists must dig deeper for clues about the health status of past generations of Americans. Ironically perhaps, physical anthropologists such as the Smithsonian Institution's Dr. J. Lawrence Angel and his research associate, Jennifer Kelley, examine the skeletons of our ancestors to pinpoint the stresses and benefits of their lifestyles that determined overall physical fitness.

Although the body's structure has not changed much over the past 25,000 years, not surprisingly "people now are much healthier than past generations of Americans," Angel says. In part, he says, that progress can be credited to advances in medicine that curbed many deadly childhood diseases, to public health policies that have made such ailments as tuberculosis little more than gruesome memories and to dietary changes and improvements that have given Americans better, more consistent nutrition.

These conclusions may seem a matter of common sense, but Angel's study of skeletal remains

Dr. J. Lawrence Angel and his research associate, Jennifer Kelley, measure skulls, pelvic bones and other long bones for information on the nutritional health of our American ancestors. They have studied skeletons of black slaves, colonial people and five more recent generations.

from five generations of Americans between 1984 and 1985 provides innovative evidence of general health status in each generation as well as health trends that have prevailed over the entire period. Large storage drawers of skeletons line the walls of part of the National Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C. They were donated to the Smithsonian from the dissecting room collections of the Washington University Medical School in St. Louis. Other skeletons used by Angel and Kelley in their research either were willed to the Smithsonian or were forensic skeletons—remains of the victims of violent crimes.

When Angel and Kelley began their study four years ago, they first grouped the skeletons into 25-year generational time spans. From previous work, Angel had determined that increases in measurements of the height of the skull base and the front-to-back depth of the pelvis could be used as indicators of overall health status. While genetics play a significant role in determining physical development, Angel and Kelley contend that, over time, their measurements can be used to infer certain aspects of the health and nutrition of past generations. "No one has ever worked with skull-base height before," Angel says of this measure of the area that forms the support structure for the skull on the spinal column.

Bone growth, for example, depends in part on vitamin D and the individual's protein intake. If these or other nutrients are lacking, bone in the skull base is inhibited from growing upward against gravity. Decreases measured in pelvic depth, too, can be blamed on nutritional deficiencies. In severe cases, lack of ultraviolet light—necessary for the body's production of vitamin D can cause a bone deformation known as rickets.

In the five-generation study, the Smithsonian scientists have documented an increase in these measurements and an increase in bone growth as calculated for overall stature. "All three"—skull-base height, pelvic depth and stature—"improve with better nutrition," Angel says. Over this 125-year period, he notes, technological developments such as refrigeration made fresh fruit and vegetables available to more people year-round; vitamin supplements became more attainable, and the American passion for suntans—which helped prevent rickets, among other benefits—embedded itself in the national culture, becoming closely associated with ideas about sex appeal and healthful appearance.

"It hasn't been until recently in recorded history that we've been getting an adequate diet," Angel says. Healthful diets with less meat and more vegetable or other plant material—now popular with many Americans—haven't been followed with such regularity, Angel believes, since paleolithic times when humans roamed about in search of food. Presumably, those ancestors gathered and ate more plant material than they successfully hunted meat.

When the Smithsonian team examines skeletons for evidence of health—a term they use to mean "the ability to overcome illness"—teeth also provide telltale clues. Childhood diseases or nutritional deficiencies halt the growth of enamel in developing teeth; the result is "hypoplastic," or darkened lines on the tooth surface each time illness occurs.

A separate Angel-Kelley study on the nutrition and health of early black Americans became possible after highway construction unearthed skeletons from unmarked graves near a slave-operated iron forge called Catoctin Furnace in Frederick County, Md. All of the skeletons dated from the late 18th to the early 19th century.

From written sources of the day, the scientists knew that slaves who worked the forges were better fed than other slaves. Nonetheless, these skeletons confirm the life of hard labor shared by all slaves in this era. For Angel and Kelley, bones with "crests"—the growth of extra bone material to accommodate new muscle tissue developed by backbreaking labor—provide corroborating evidence.

Rickets was suspected in 10 out of 31 skeletons, although Kelly and Angel have no solid clues as to why rickets would have afflicted these people. Stress fractures and other sorts of wear and tear on bone attest to their hard lives. Thus, the anthropological evidence, supplementing written data, lends insight into the lifestyles and occupational skills of a group of Americans one researcher has dubbed "the invisible people."

Results from the Catoctin study showed that males from the sample lived an average of six and a half years longer than the women. Kelley suspects the women had shorter lives because of deaths in childbirth and perhaps because of the higher female incidence of anemia.

At some point in the early 19th century, Angel says, life spans for both black and white women began catching up with those charted for men, probably because of a trend toward smaller families, hence less childbirth stress. But as Angel notes, "women from the beginning are physiologically tougher than men, while males are more physiologically expensive" than females. That is, men have greater muscle strength, greater food needs and higher blood pressures than women. Modern statistics show that Western women live longer than men.

The brand of physical anthropology practiced by Angel and Kelley has also helped to debunk a long-held myth that colonial Americans were much shorter in stature. Angel thinks this misconception might stem from portraits of the day that were painted in a style that makes the subjects appear shorter or from architectural trends that featured low ceilings and doorways. In fact, according to Angel, colonial people would not be noticeably shorter than most modern Americans even though skeletal features show increased stature over time.

The obstacles to good health faced by today's Americans are different from those of our forebears. "Being overweight is the major health problem in the United States," Dr. Artemis Simopolous, chairman of the nutrition coordination committee of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., says.

People today, she says, not only eat the wrong things but eat too much because of habit, stress and boredom. Last year, the NIH supported nutrition research to the tune of more than $164 million. Simopolous and others recommend a well-balanced diet composed of the familiar four basic food groups—meats and poultry, vegetables and fruits, grains and cereals, dairy products—alertness toward family health problems and something many earlier Americans in the Smithsonian studies never had to worry about: exercise, exercise, exercise.

Globe Watch - The State Senate

By Dr. James Leutze
(Editor's Note: Dr. Leutze, chairman of the Curriculum in Peace, War and Defense at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, hosts the public affairs program "Globe Watch," which appears on Thursdays at 8 p.m. on UNC Center for Public Television stations. In this article, he discusses topics that will be explored in the third segment of that series, which will air on Feb. 21.)

The Senate this year differs from the House of Representatives in several significant ways. For one thing, the Republicans control the Senate; for another, the Senate has the responsibility to advise and consent on treaties.

What this means is that the Senate will be the main focus of attention concerning any possible arms control treaty with the Soviets.

But the practical issue relating to any treaty effort is the defense budget and the Democratically controlled House will have a lot to say about that.

The argument goes this way, according to the Republicans: the Russians are only back in Geneva negotiating because the Reagan administration has been strong on defense. Therefore, it would be an inappropriate time to cut back on defense because you'd hazard the arms talk process.

Not so, say some Republicans and many Democrats. Now that we've brought the Soviets to the table, they argue, we can afford to moderate our military spending.

Interestingly, no one is calling for slashing the defense budget. In fact, there is no concentrated sentiment for holding defense much below a 4 percent increase from last year, although there is irritation, even among Republicans in the Senate, at Secretary Weinberger's uncompromising argument for every gun and every dollar.

So it looks at the moment as though Reagan has made a convincing connection between a strong defense and the progress on arms control Democrats and moderate Republicans so badly want.

But consider for a moment what may happen if there is no progress at Geneva—and Mr. Reagan's own negotiators have been very careful to caution the public not to get their hopes up. What then happens to the argument that the arms buildup has had a positive effect on the Soviets? And what is to stop the Soviets from blaming the Reagan Administration and its buildup for poisoning the international atmosphere thus making agreement impossible?

By this simple tactic, they could not only dash treaty hopes but also divert world attention from the Soviet buildup and focus it on America's own highly advertised rush for military muscle.

From this perspective, therefore, Mr. Reagan has made the success of his military program and his diplomatic program hostage to Soviet willingness to be reasonable.

This cannot have escaped the attention of the Soviets or of those senators who sit back and grind their teeth as events seem at the moment to put the defense budget just beyond their grasp.

Twins Foundation Seeks Members

What do Jane Pauley, Debby Boone, Mario Andretti, and Dr. Elisabeth Kubler Ross have in common? They're parents of twins or twins themselves and they're part of a contingent of thirteen celebrities who've become Charter Members of The Twins Foundation, the organization's premiere publication announced recently. Other VIP Charter Members include Ed Asner, Phil and Steve Mahre, Aldo Andretti, Lily Tomlin, Maurice and Robin Gibb and

Isabella Rossellini. They, along with Board Members John Mack Carter, Editor-in-Chief of Good Housekeeping and Richard B. Stolley, Managing Editor of Life—all twins, parents of pairs or people interested in twin research—are leading the search for twins in every state in the Union. "There are an estimated 4.5 million twin individuals in the United States and never before has such a wide-ranging effort been launched to locate them," Kay

Cassill, the Foundation's President and author of Nature's Amazing Mystery declared. "If you were born a twin, a part of a larger group of multiples, or if you have twins, you now have some unique opportunities to help yourself and others," she stressed. The Foundation is building the country's first, comprehensive twin registry. Already 6,000 have been located and this number is increasing daily. One of the benefits is the chance to have your name permanently registered, along with those luminaries, as a Charter Member in The Twins Hall of Fame. Cassill encouraged people who are twins or know of them to write The Twins Foundation at P.O. Box 9487, Providence, R.I. 02940-9487 or call (401) 274-6910, just as soon as possible. "If you are a twin or know of one, The Twins Foundation wants to hear from you."

Pfc. Robert Allen With U.S. Marine Corps

Marine Pfc. Robert Q. Allen, son of Robert S. Allen of Route 3, Peoples Creek Road Advance, N.C., has completed the Administrative Clerk's Course.

During the four-week course at Marine Corps Service Support Schools, Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, N.C., Allen was provided with the basic skills and knowledge to perform as an administrative clerk.

He received instruction on typing and preparation of naval correspondence, and was introduced to the basic officers functions performed by all Marine Corps administrative sections.

A 1983 graduate of Davie County High School, Mocksville, he joined the Marine Corps in May 1984.

Fire Prevention Can Save Lives

Two Charlotte deaths occurred within one year because smoke detectors in the home were not properly maintained.

"A smoke detector should be in every home and should be checked regularly, but we must remember that the detector helps only after a fire has started," said William W. Tice, spokesman for the Insurance News Service (N.C.I.N.S.). "Fire prevention should come first," said Tice, Greensboro-based resident vice president of Iowa National Mutual Insurance Company.

Careless smoking is the cause of about 30 percent of all fire deaths at home, Tice said, citing a recent article in Family Safety magazine published by the National Safety Council. According to the article, many people die in fires because they were smoking in bed or smoking while overly tired.

A second major cause of residential fire deaths, Tice said, is faulty heating or electrical equipment. Tice offered these fire prevention suggestions to consumers:

-Routinely check heating and exhaust systems in your home. Make sure these systems are working properly. Keep combustible material away from vents and electrical wires.

-Clean and maintain chimneys properly. Tar and soot build-ups from burned wood can ignite, causing a chimney fire. Bricks and mortar in the chimney need to be kept in good condition to prevent mortar from chipping, falling in between bricks, and eventually allowing sparks to escape and start a fire.

-Make certain space heaters, whether they burn wood, coal, gas, kerosene, or some other fuel, are installed correctly. If heaters or their vents are installed too close to walls, ceilings, or other building material, a fire can break out.

-Use electrical appliances bearing the Underwriters Laboratories (UL) label, whenever possible. This label signifies that the product meets certain accepted standards of safety.

-Don't overload electrical circuits by using too many extension cords.

-Keep collections of newspapers, boxes, magazines, clothing, and furniture away from heat sources like light bulbs and furnaces.

-Store matches and lighters out of the reach of small children. Teach them the danger of playing with matches.

Smoke detectors should be used and checked regularly in case prevention measures fail and a fire starts in the home Tice said.

Fire prevention material may be obtained by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to Fire Prevention, N.C.I.N.S., Post Office Box 11526, Charlotte, N.C. 28220.

Vehicles Collide In Wreck On 601

A 20-year-old Statesville man was charged with failure to reduce speed following a collision on U.S. 601 February 12, according to a Highway Patrol report.

Willard Donel Houpe, 20, the operator of a 1979 Chevrolet, was charged after his vehicle struck a 1975 Ford driven by Clarence Morgan Potts, 58, of Rt. 5, Mocksville, in the rear.

A report indicated that Houpe was pre-occupied and didn't realize that Potts had stopped his vehicle in the roadway and was waiting for oncoming traffic to clear before making a left turn onto Liberty Church Road.

Damage to Potts' vehicle was $200, to Houpe's $2200. Trooper J.L. Payne investigated.

Davie Pro-Lifers Are On The Move

By Amy Medwin

Members of the Davie County Right to Life have been very active since the new year began. In January, the anniversary of court decisions legalizing abortion on demand through the ninth month was met by many forms of protest. Members attended marches in Washington D.C. and Winston-Salem, and shared the good news of alternatives to abortion in churches around the area.

Chairman Amy Medwin joined "Birthright" director Phyllis McDuffee in addressing students at the N.C. School of the Arts. The topic was teenage sexuality and its consequences.

Janice Schooler recently completed a special training workshop sponsored by the newly formed Salem Pregnancy Support in Winston-Salem. This is a crisis pregnancy center designed to meet the needs of anyone who has a crisis pregnancy. Free pregnancy testing and counseling will be available to anyone who needs it.

It is our desire that all this activity will make us more responsive to the needs to those in our communities. Please join us when we meet, Thursday, Feb. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the Grand Jury room of the courthouse. We will be sharing on these and other issues and events.

Advance News

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Poole, Charlie Allen, Terry Allen and Mrs. Patsy Kiger have returned from a two week trip to Panama. They accompanied the Rev. and Mrs. Marion Fulk on a Mission Building Team. Flying to Panama City on Tuesday January 29 they transferred to a small plane to Bocas Del Toro Island, approximately four hundred miles and two hours flying time from Panama City. While there they worked on the Manse. They painted the house inside and out and built a utility house. They worked twelve hours daily five days a week. During their free time they took a boat and an open train trip, of one and one-half hours, into Changnolia on the mainland for a tour of a Chiquita banana farm, consisting of thousands of acres, probably 90,000. They observed the fruit being washed, graded and made ready for shipping.

On another sight-seeing tour they went across the island byboat to a coco bean farm. Monday February 11 the group had an enjoyable tour of the Panama Canal. They arrived home late Tuesday night Feb. 12.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Zimmerman spent Sunday afternoon in Mooresville visiting their children and grandchildren Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hendrix, Andrea, Melissa, Amanda and Meredith.

Our community expresses sympathy to Frank Bailey in the death of his wife Katherine who died last Wednesday.

Elementary Kids Join The Circus

Over 50 kindergartners from Mocksville Elementary School will travel to Greensboro on Thursday, February 21st, to "join the circus." Five and six-year-olds in Suite 8 have been looking forward to the trip for almost two months.

Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus is billed as the "Greatest Show on Earth." Three rings will overflow with excitement as children from schools in a two-state area fill the Greensboro Coliseum with their own dreams and expectations.

To get into the circus mood, many of the kindergartners had a chance to be a clown for an afternoon. Professional make-up artists from Holy Cross Lutheran Church came in to apply the magic touch. These adults, led by Pastor Gary Gilreath, have been part of the church's Clown Ministry for some time. He was assisted by Mrs. Jane Anderson, an aide at Mocksville Elementary, and her sister, Mrs. Alderson. The children then paraded through the school accompanied by circus parade music. The temptation to join the circus on Thursday will be great for children and adults alike, but memories can be rich for years to come.

Eva Everett and Bill Seabrook - teachers, and Linda Giles and Jan Allen - aides in Suite 8, share the anticipation of the children that going to the circus will be the learning highlight in this Kindergarten year.

Kindergartners at Mocksville Elementary School got into the circus mood recently by getting made-up as clowns. Over fifty children from the school will attend Ringling Brothers Barnum & Bailey Circus in Greensboro, Feb. 21.

BB&T. It's More Than A Bank. It's An Attitude.

Is it going too far to suggest that, in today's complex financial world, your bank's attitude could possibly make a difference? We don't think so.

In fact, at BB&T, we think attitude is all-important. We don't mean a superficial cheerfulness, a smile worn like a suit and as easily removed.

Attitude, for us, goes much deeper than that. It takes in the ability, and even more important, the willingness to commit our talents to meet your future goals as well as your current needs.

It rests on the integrity of a company that still believes it is driven by the needs of its customers, rather than its own corporate objectives. A company that realizes that the quality of its service is inseparable from the attitude of its people.

Come discover what a difference the right attitude makes. At BB&T, it's the very thing that makes us more than a bank.

Davie County Sales Guide Now In Publication

The Davie County Board of Realtors has announced the first edition of the Davie County Sales Guide. The publication, distributed to area real estate agents for the first time this month, contains property listings across the county. Each participating agent will receive a new guide monthly.

The first edition contains 141 listings with only 4 located outside of Davie County. At the present time 35 agents are subscribing to the publication.

Connie Kowalske, local board secretary feels that sellers will get much better coverage for their property by getting the information to more agents in the area.

The books has been a lot of work, she adds, but all the companies have pulled together to try to make things better for the whole industry.

Mrs. Kowalske says Board of Realtors members seem pleased with the first edition. The book also contains statistics on properties sold and under contract.

Frank Short, Jr., president of the Davie County Board of Realtors, feels that this is only the first step in improving the marketing process for buyers and sellers alike in the Davie County area. The local board also has more plans in the making for giving area residents the best possible coverage in the quest to sell their property or in the big step of buying a home, according to Short.

Companies subscribing to the new sales guide are: Betty Potts Realty, Carolina Energy Efficient Homes, Century 21-Clemmons Village, Davie Realty, Howard Realty, Larew-Wood-Johnson, Leonard Realty, Potts Realty and Realty Ranch.

Local financial institutions have also joined the board and will be receiving a copy of the sales guide.

Frank Short, Jr. and Connie Kowalske, officers of the Davie County Board of Realtors look over the newly published county real estate guide.

They are: Branch Banking & Trust Company, Farm Credit Service, First Federal Savings & Loan, Mocksville Savings & Loan and Central Carolina Bank.

Members of the local board of realtors recommend that homeowners list their properties with local real estate companies to get the best possible market coverage. They feel that agents within the area can service customers better than agents who must travel 20 to 30 miles to show a house each time.

Davie Hospital Staff To Offer Courses In Many Life - Saving Techniques

Almost anyone in good health can learn the life-saving technique of Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation, or CPR, so that he or she can deal effectively with emergency situations and save a human life. That life might be your neighbor's, your husband or wife's, or your child's. Your life could also be saved by a trained family member.

Each year hundreds of thousands of people die who might have lived if people around them...people just like you...knew how to recognize heart attacks and give immediate life-saving assistance. It is estimated that over 650,000 people die from heart attacks each year.

About half of these deaths occur outside the hospital, usually within the first two hours after onset of symptoms. Many of these deaths could have been prevented if bystanders or family members had known what to do to be of effective assistance.

CPR is not a skill given by instinct; it must be learned and practiced on a manikin under the guidance of a trained instructor. It is also important to learn about the things in our lives that increase our risk of having a heart attack or stroke. Many of the risks can be reduced by maintaining a sensible weight, reducing cholesterol intake, regular exercise, watching your blood pressure, and avoiding cigarette smoking.

Davie County Hospital is here to serve the citizens of Davie County.

That service includes not only taking care of you when you're sick, but also teaching you about health concerns. We would like to teach you how to assist the victim of a heart attack, how to properly administer CPR, and how to reduce your own risk. We know, all too well, how important this knowledge can be," John Frank, Davie Hospital Administrator said.

Members of the nursing staff of the hospital, trained instructors in CPR through the American Heart Association, look forward to helping Civic Clubs or other organized groups learn the skills of CPR. Sixteen hours of classtime are needed for instruction and practice. Class meeting times can be arranged to suit the needs of your group. Organized groups who are interested in this service through Davie County Hospital should have their President or Secretary call the hospital for more information. Contact persons at the hospital (634-3546) are John Frank, Administrator, and Lynne Doss, Education Coordinator.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor:

On Friday, February 15, school children came home with advertising circulars inviting them to come to Hardee's of Mocksville on Saturday and Sunday to see Mickey Mouse, Magic Dragon, and clowns. There was also a promise of "free suckers and balloons to all children."

I made special arrangements for my children to "see Mickey Mouse" Saturday evening, only to be told that the characters had already removed their costumes. There were approximately fifteen other children present at that time, all with the same expectations. We kept thinking at least one character would don his costume so as not to disappoint the children. We were wrong.

Not only were there no characters present, the "free suckers and balloons" were nowhere to be seen.

I called on Sunday around 5:30 p.m. and was told the characters were already gone again. Since there was no specific time stated on the advertising circular, I feel that Hardee's misrepresented their advertising claims.

Although adults understand that this was an advertising gimmick which only lasted for a short time, children merely consider this a broken promise and a disappointment. I hope that in the future, Hardee's will be more sensitive to children's feelings.

Dear Editor:

Some time last year your paper featured an article about a gentleman who collected National Geographic magazines. If someone can furnish me his name, address and phone number, I would be most grateful.

Also, I have some old, weathered buildings in Davie County and would like to get in touch with a craftsman or someone who could use this material. Thank you.

Current estimates suggest that there are at least 23 million Americans with high blood pressure or hypertension. Innumerable symptoms are often attributed to blood pressure elevation, but the condition is, in fact, frequently symptomless; therefore, blood pressure checks can discover this condition which otherwise could go undetected.

Rauch & Swindler Vows Spoken

The wedding of Miss Janis Barbara Rauch of 8220 Cedar Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina, to Paul Harrison Swindler, also of Charlotte, N.C. was held Saturday, February 16, in a seven o'clock evening candlelight ceremony at the First Baptist Church in Mocksville. The Reverend Charles Bullock of Raleigh, N.C. officiated at the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist, Dr. Max Smith, professor of Music at Appalachian State University, Boone, N.C.; and Miss Lou Ann Eaton of Wilson, N.C., soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, Robert K. Rauch, wore a formal gown of Alencon and Venice lace on lush satin designed with an embroidered bodice with scooped neck and inset sleeves, basque waist, full skirt, and an applique'd cathedral train. Her headpiece was a lace caplet attached to a chapel length veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of silk Rubrum Lillies, Iris, Jewel weed and Azaleas. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Ginny Dunn of Mocksville was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of cranberry satin, designed with a fitted bodice, spaghetti straps, and a matching jacket with ruffle trim. She carried a bouquet similar to that of the bride.

Bridesmaids were Miss Marie Swindler, bridegroom's sister of Winston-Salem, N.C.; Miss Karen Long, bride's cousin of Newnan, Georgia; Miss Miriam Spainhour of Louisville, N.C.; and Jean Nichols of Mocksville, N.C. They wore gowns identical to that of the honor attendant's, and carried silk flowers in a cascade bouquet.

Robert H. Swindler of Farmington, N.C. was his son's best man. Ushering were Paul Rauch, bride's brother of Mocksville; Scott Ward also of Mocksville; Larry Mock of Farmington; and Kevin Hegel of Charlotte, N.C.

Mrs. Glenda Long, bride's aunt of Salisbury, N.C. directed the wedding. Presiding at the guest register was Miss Debbie Graham and Brent Ward, both of Mocksville. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Rauch of Magnolia Avenue, Mocksville, N.C. She attended UNC, Chapel Hill, N.C.; and is a graduate of Leon's College of Beauty Culture, Greensboro, N.C. Winter 1985 has proven unpredictable with both extreme highs and lows reported. A spring like warming trend in late December and early March caused some area trees to bloom prematurely.

Sleet and freezing rain transformed the area into an icy wonder February 7, forcing the closing of schools.

Relax For 1,000 Years No More Erratic Weather

Davie County has experienced a variety of weather during the first two months of 1985, with temperatures ranging from the unseasonably warm to record breaking lows.

And since the ground hog saw its shadow February 2, the area is assured of more cold weather, at least until the official arrival of spring March 20.

But Davie County isn't alone in its plight. Scientists admit that they can't explain the abnormal weather of past winters, but optimistically predict that it should be at least a thousand years before it happens again.

During the past decade, the nation as a whole has experienced a climate scenario unprecedented in the 20th century, according to Thomas Karl, a meteorologist at the National Climatic Data Center in Asheville.

Karl is one of three men to conduct a recent study of weather changes in the last 80 years, concluding that the period from 1975 to 1984 was the most erratic.

Three winters in that period were abnormally warm and three were unusually cold, Karl said. Given certain assumptions, he said, his analysis indicated it would be another 1,047 years before the nation experiences a similar recurrence.

Karl said his findings were even more interesting because temperatures in the winters from 1955 to 1975 were average.

What makes this so unusual is that we had a moderate period followed by a decade of unusual weather, he said.

Karl said researchers aren't sure what the numbers portend.

We're not sure if it's just chance or we've got a climate change. The question is why these unusual weather patterns have arisen, he said.

Karl said the variations could be blamed on fluctuations or a weakening in the jet streams, increased volcanic activity, increased carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, changes in ocean temperatures or variations in solar activity.

Area residents have experienced the extreme impacts of weather this winter, with the first day of 1985 rolling in with a spring like high of 74 degrees.

However, Old Man Winter made a strong comeback 20 days later with the low January 21 at a record 10 degrees below zero.

The deep freeze, which stalled cars and froze pipes, had no sooner lifted when a five-inch snow blanketed the area January 28th.

Another snow storm which dumped as much as eight inches of snow on some sections of the state February 12, dropped enough locally to free students from school.

However, the storm promised more than it actually delivered with temperatures rising to 35 degrees by 1 p.m. The snow that only a few hours earlier had covered cars, sidewalks and parking lots subsided, and the slight accumulation quickly melted.

With 28 more days until the official arrival of spring, the unpredictable weather patterns could bring more cold, snow, sleet and freezing rain to the area.

According to local records, a freak snow ushered in spring, 1983 followed by an April freeze which wiped out 90 percent of the local peach crop.

March was also a snowy month in 1982 with two inches of accumulation blanketing the area March 4, followed by an April cold snap which again damaged area fruit trees.

March, 1981 was no exception with a snow fall of 6 inches blanketing the county March 26.

So while spring appears to be just around the corner, history proves that there's still plenty of time for cold, snowy weather.

Unseasonably warm weather in early January confused these Canadian geese who normally fly south for the winter. They were spotted taking a leisurely swim at the Tanglewood Park lake.

Yellowbells burst into bloom prematurely in early January, thinking that spring had arrived. However, an arctic blast later in the month dropped temperatures to a record 10 degrees below zero.

Catawba Nuclear Station, located near Rock Hill, S.C., has two 1,145-megawatt reactors. Unit 1 on the left, is scheduled for full-power operation this spring.

Duke Power Files For 19.6 % Rate Increase

Duke Power Co. last week filed a request with the North Carolina Utilities Commission to increase electric revenues by $340 million, or approximately 19.6 percent.

In the full amount of the increase is granted, the cost of electricity for a typical North Carolina residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt-hours will increase from $66.10 to $79.15, excluding sales tax.

Approximately 80 percent of the request covers costs associated with Unit 1 of the Catawba Nuclear Station, William H. Grigg, executive vice president-finance and administration, said.

The reactor, located near Rock Hill S.C., began producing electricity last month and is expected to reach full power operation this spring, Grigg said.

"The Catawba unit was constructed at a lower cost than any other comparable U.S. nuclear unit to be completed this year," Grigg said. "As a result, Catawba will play a large role in keeping our rates lower than the national average for the rest of the century."

The remaining 20 percent of the request includes costs associated with increased operating expenses and the cost of capital.

"The commission's final order is not expected until mid-September," Grigg said. "Customers' bills will not be affected until October 1985."

Food Industry Backs Easter Seals

The food industry in North Carolina, including most supermarkets, will kick off a "Back a Fighter" program this week, which could mean thousands of dollars for the North Carolina Easter Seal Society, provider of direct services to the physically disabled.

Initiated by Atlas Marketing food broker, the program to help Easter Seals has the enthusiastic support of 12 major grocery outlets and 18 food manufacturers.

From February 28 through March 29, grocers will feature certain products at special prices. A portion of the purchase price will be given to Easter Seals. Contributing products can be identified by the Easter Seal Lily logo near the product display and in weekly grocers' ads.

of all ages, all year round including, equipment provision, physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech therapy, stroke club network, support groups, camping, adapted swim programs, respite care, telephone reassurance, and public health education. Easter Seals is the oldest and largest voluntary health agency providing direct services to people with disabilities in the world.

For more information call Easter Seals at 1-800-722-0652.

Senator Paul S. Smith, (R-Davie, Davidson) will be among N.C. legislators representing the state at the Leader-To-Leader program February 20-22 in Washington, D.C.

During the three day meeting, legislative leaders will meet with President Ronald Reagan to discuss the federal FY 86 budget, federal tax reform, highway funds and other key issues.

During the meeting, legislators will also meet with John Block, secretary of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture; Sen. Jesse Helms. Senate Agriculture Committee, Don Wilkenson, governor Farm Credit System; Robert Dole, Senate Majority Leader and Lee Verstandig, assistant to the President for intergovernmental affairs.

Numerous receptions and luncheons are planned for legislators attending the Leader-To-Leader program.

Don't Cut Revenue Sharing, Counties Tell Federal Government

Faced with proposed elimination of general revenue sharing, the National Association of Counties called on Congress and the Reagan Administration to maintain full funding for this vital program.

The Association also called for a freeze in federal spending, except for programs that serve the needy, and released the results of a nationwide survey on how county governments use revenue sharing funds.

"General revenue sharing is a unique program," said Earl M. Baker, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners of Chester County, Pa., at an Association press conference.

Baker, who also chairs the Association's policy-making committee on taxation and finance, added: "It is the keystone of the new federalism. It has, since its inception, had a bipartisan appeal."

General revenue sharing sends nearly $4.6 billion annually to counties and other local governments across the United States. Some $1.9 billion of this total goes to counties, where it is spent to meet a variety of needs, from road repairs to social services, from law enforcement to health care for the poor. It is the only federal money counties receive that can be spent as a local government chooses.

In his opening remarks, Matthew B. Coffey, executive director of the Association, told the reporters that county officials around the country support efforts to trim the federal deficit.

But he added that many of the proposed cuts in domestic spending could have serious effects on county government.

The Association, he said, calls for a freeze in federal spending, as opposed to cuts in specific programs. However, federal funding for means-tested entitlement programs—such as Medicaid, food stamps and other services for the poor, the disadvantaged or the elderly—should be exempt from the funding freeze. The exemption would enable local governments to take care of increasing numbers of clients for these programs.

If cuts in the federal budget are still necessary after a freeze, revenue sharing is the highest priority for counties. An Association survey of counties across the country found that revenue sharing is a vital portion of budgets and that counties would have to reduce services or raise taxes or both if the federal program were discontinued.

Other top county priorities are: Medicaid, community development block grants, rural programs and mass transit.

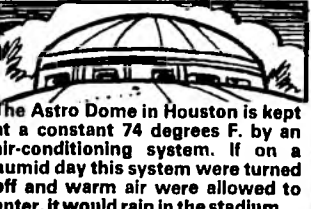

Speaking on proposed cuts in Medicaid was Jim Rout, chairman of the Shelby County, Tenn., Board of Commissioners and chairman of the Association's subcommittee on health care cost containment.

"Counties spend over $25 billion on health care," Rout said, much of it in services to the poor. "It's the fastest growing portion of county budgets."

Cuts in federal health care spending would merely shift the cost of providing services to counties, jeopardizing other county services or forcing local tax hikes.

"The trickle-down effect takes place," Rout said, "and when it gets down to us, there's no place to trickle. The buck stops with us."

The Astro Dome in Houston is kept at a constant 74 degrees F. by an air-conditioning system. If on a humid day this system were turned off and warm air were allowed to enter, it would rain in the stadium.

Community Volunteers Offer Tax Assistance

Free assistance with the preparation of income tax returns is offered by community volunteers in almost half of North Carolina's 100 counties, ranging from Cherokee in the west to Perquimans in the east, the Internal Revenue Service has announced.

The IRS sponsors community, church, college and civic groups and trains the volunteers in the preparation of simple 1040, 1040A and 1040 EZ returns. In most cases, an appointment is not necessary; taxpayers are assisted on a first-come-first-served basis. The locations, dates and times of individual sites can be obtained by calling the IRS toll-free at 1-800-424-1040.

Taxpayers needing this free assistance should bring a copy of last year's tax return, W-2 forms and other documents necessary for the preparation of this year's return, the IRS said. The volunteers will also review taxpayer-prepared returns, answer questions and provide forms if the taxpayer did not receive a forms package in the mail.

Health Watch

Urinary Tract Infections

Some diseases affect one sex more than the other. The North Carolina Medical Society says urinary tract infection is one example. Urinary tract infection is common among women, but it is almost unknown among young men.

Bacteria can enter a woman's urinary system more easily than a man's. Once there, the bacteria need to travel only a short distance to reach the pain-sensitive bladder. The bladder is the organ where urine collects before it is flushed out of the body. When infected, the bladder walls can become painfully inflamed. The tubes that lead to and from it can also become inflamed, and in severe cases, even the kidneys may be affected.

Symptoms of urinary tract infection may include abnormally frequent urges to urinate or a burning sensation during or after urinating. Someone who suspects that they have a urinary tract infection should see a physician promptly. Medical treatment for urinary tract infections is a must.

Here are a few tips from the North Carolina Medical Society on avoiding urinary tract infections. Urinate as soon as you feel the need; don't wait. Drink plenty of water. Always wipe from the front to the back after you've used the bathroom.

Home Accessibility Is Major Problem For Those With Arthritis

Home. For most of us it is the one place we can escape our problems, relax and be completely comfortable. But for the disabled, home can be just another set of barriers that rob them of independence, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

"For many of the 36 million Americans with arthritis, stairs restrict movement, cabinets are out of reach and bathrooms pose a maze of obstacles," said Mrs. Barbara Carley, a volunteer with the North Carolina Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation. "Their house is not truly home—it's a hostile environment."

With a few simple and inexpensive modifications, however, people with disabilities, can be more self-sufficient at home. She offered the following suggestions:

Doors
--Doors are a problem if you are in a wheelchair or your hands are crippled. To open doors more easily replace present hinges with fold-back hinges which allow a door to swing flush with the hinge side of the jamb. Or use double-action hinges to allow a door to be pushed open from either direction.

--If you have difficulty grasping doorknobs, you can purchase rubber or metal levers to slip over conventional knobs. For a more permanent solution, replace knobs with lever handles.

Kitchen
--Many special devices are available to simplify chores in the kitchen, including two-handled cookware, special jar openers and storage aids such as lazy susans.

--Pull out shelves or lap boards at several work stations can provide convenient work space if you are in a wheelchair or if you cannot stand for long periods of time.

Bathroom
--If the existing toilet is too low, a raised toilet seat can help. They are available with armrest designs.

--Towel bars are not designed to support a person's weight, so do not lean on them. Install safety grab bars directly into the tile or wall.

--Special bath seats allow you to set comfortably in the tub, and to enter it more safely.

--Organize all bathing and grooming items close at hand with a special bath shelf or caddy.

--Many bathrooms are not large enough to accommodate a wheelchair. You may have to transfer from the wheelchair to a rolling chair at the bathroom door. Grab bars can be installed on the wall to help you propel yourself.

Furniture
--Perhaps the easiest part of a home to make accessible is your furniture. Chairs, sofas and beds which are too low can be elevated simply by placing wooden blocks under each furniture leg.

--Hard foam rubber cushions can be used to build up chair seats to a comfortable height.

--Rolling carts can be built or purchased to help you move items with ease.

"If you have a disability such as arthritis, you may want to ask your physician to arrange for an occupational therapist to visit your home and give you specific suggestions for adapting it to your particular needs," said Carley. "The Arthritis Foundation's patient groups are another way to find out how others have adapted their lives."

For further information the Arthritis Foundation also has available a special "Self-Help Manual," at a cost of $3.00, which contains hundreds of suggestions that make everyday tasks easier. This publication, along with other free-of-charge pamphlets, may be obtained by writing to the Arthritis Foundation, Dept. A, P.O. Box 2505, Durham, N.C. 27705.

Concludes Mrs. Carley, "Answers are available, so let your house be a home—not a barrier."

Through a program called Tax Counseling for the Elderly (TCE), sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service, specially trained persons assist citizens prepare 1040-EZ, 1040-A, and simple 1040 returns with such schedules as A and B, R and RP, and 1040-ES estimated tax.

Individuals who need help should bring their 1984 tax package they received in the mail, their wage and earnings statements (W-2s); statements of recipients of periodic annuities, pensions retirement pay or IRA payments; interest on dividends statements; and other relevant information on income and expenses. Recipients of Social Security benefits in 1984 should also bring in the 1984 form received from the Social Security Administration as benefits could be partially taxable for 1984, the IRS said.

Rev. Grover C. Graham Dies

(Dear Editor:

The Rev. Grover Graham spent some of his most effective years at Farmington in Davie County. He was a remarkable and memorable personality.

I hope you may be able to use the following item. Hundreds of older residents will recall him vividly.

Sincerely,
John A. Duvall
Pastor, Harrison United Methodist Church
Pineville, N.C.)

Last week's North Carolina Christian Advocate brought news of the death of the Rev. Grover Cleveland Graham, beloved retired United Methodist minister. At age 97, he was the oldest member of the Western North Carolina Conference. I knew him well.

He lived a long and valuable life, and more than any other I've known, he exemplified the Wesleyan experience of the warmed heart, vital piety, evangelical zeal, and a keen social consciousness.

Grover Graham grew to maturity at Potato Creek, Virginia, where his parents were pioneer residents and stalwart citizens. His father was a merchant. Once I went with him, walking a winding trail, to stand for some reverent moments before the decaying ruins of his boyhood home which included the building where his father operated his general store. We quenched our thirst from the refreshing coolness of the old spring and we prayed together at the altar of the nearby Potato Creek United Methodist Church. I remember he stood afterwards in the pulpit and sang the "Doxology" in his characteristically beautiful mellow tenor voice. He spoke touchingly that day of beginnings; of his own profession of faith; of early and positive influences on his life; and he lingered lovingly at the graves of loved ones in the historic cemetery across the way. We kept holy silence for a time.

Precious and tender memories! During World War I, Mr. Graham was in Europe on assignment where he met and courted Olive, an English girl, whom he soon made his bride. A remarkable and memorable team they were—he from Potato Creek and she from London—well-matched, dedicated home builders; extraordinary parents to a fine family; and spiritual leaders in a dozen far-flung Methodist appointments—Helton, Clemmons-Hanes, Watauga, Marion Mills, Lewisville, Jonesville, Harmony, Statesville Circuit, Coleridge, Farmington, Kona, and Spruce Pine. Olive Graham ran the house in her wholesome and inimitable fashion, while Grover ranged ever-outward seeking all those who had wandered "away from the tender Shepherd's care." The imprisoned, the lonely, the down and out, the poor, the outcast, the troubled, the lost, and lots of other folks as well—they were all his business, and in such work he excelled as few others have.

For years Grover Graham was an effective pamphleteer. He wrote and handed out printed tracts on many subjects. Newspapers frequently carried his letters and his sermons; editors over a wide area respected the power of his pen. He hated liquor like he hated sin, so use and abuse of alcohol were of-times topics of his editorial venom. He was regularly ahead of his time. Fully thirty years before integration he was boldly proclaiming an inclusive church and racial equality. A cut of the 1784 ordination of Bishop Asbury hung on his study wall, and he often pointed out the presence of black preachers in that sacred service.

In 1960, the Upper Room carried one of his devotionals. Mentioning some words that stand out in the scriptures, he wrote, "The word 'come' looms large in Holy Writ—'come' and see, 'come' unto me, whosoever will may 'come,' I will 'come' again."

"Come home," must have held a welcome ring for Grover Graham. After nearly a century of labor, gentle in his surrendered life; gracious of manner; neat in personal attire; everything on the altar, there was winsome beauty about his consecration. Thousands are better persons because of him.

Now, heaven holds another attraction since he is there; and Methodism in Western North Carolina has lost one of her most valiant soldiers of the Cross.

The Poppy Proves Itself As Force For Good And Evil

Grown legally, it provides cooking oil and tasty seeds, helps condition the soil for growing food crops, and is the source of the modern world's standard against which all pain medicines are measured.

Grown illegally, it is a source of misery, the plant whose milky, alkaloid-rich sap becomes, with chemical processing, a shortcut to euphoria but, long-term, a downhill road to addiction, horror, crime, and death.

It is the opium poppy, Papaver somniferum, a pretty little flower whose petals may be white or red or mauve or purple, but which is "unique in its profound and far-reaching effects on humanity, both good and evil."

So writes Peter T. White in the February National Geographic after a globe-circling study of the poppy in which he witnessed those effects everywhere.

White's 23-country investigation led him:

--To the harvest of illicit poppy fields in Pakistan's mountainous border region near Afghanistan, where opium was banned in 1979 but continues to be grown.

--To legal poppy plots in India, where the plant is grown to produce opium for export--much of it to the United States, where pharmaceutical factories turn it into codeine (the prime ingredient in the now most widely prescribed cough syrups and pain killers).

--To an addict-treatment center in Iran, where treatment consists of heavy doses of revolutionary rhetoric and the threat of jail for failure.

--To Australia, where growing poppies is a high-technology process.

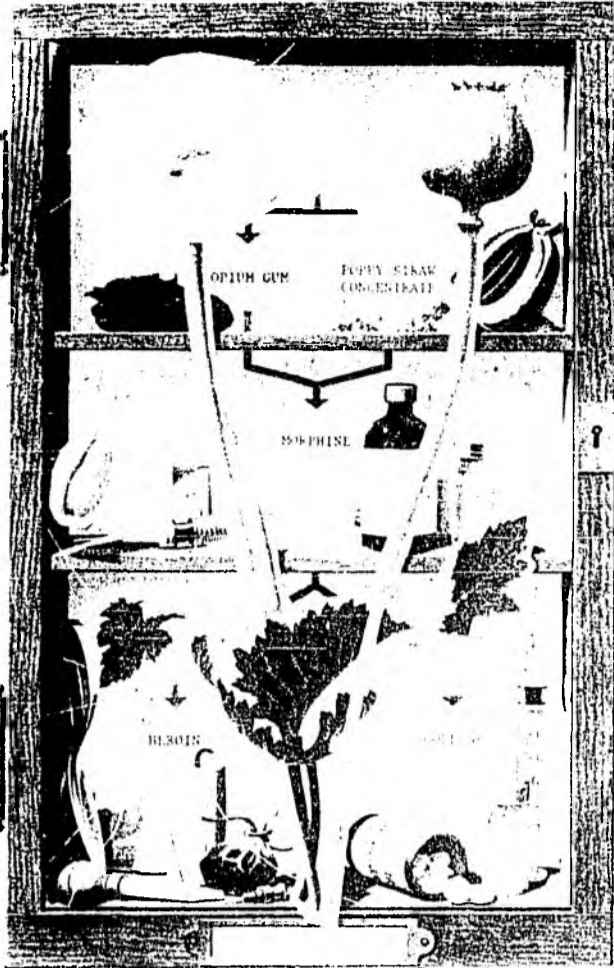

--To Mexico, where U.S. helicopters and Mexican pilots and navigators are waging an incessant battle to destroy illicit poppy fields with herbicide spray.

--To a London hospice, where morphine, the poppy's most beneficial product, is used to provide as full and pain-free a life as possible for the terminally ill.

--To a Washington, D.C., "shooting gallery," where addicts can inject themselves with the poppy's most ill-used product, heroin, as soon as they buy it.

The effects of the opium poppy have been known for millennia. A Tondon museum contains ceramic jugs shaped like poppy capsules that come from Cyprus and date to 1500 B.C.; presumably they held dissolved opium on its way to Egypt. Scholars speculate that a potion described in the "Odyssey," mixed by Helen of Troy, and the "vinegar mingled with gall" offered to Christ on the Cross both contained opium.

Nature's chemistry gives the opium poppy its power for good or

Blessing and curse, the opium poppy offers freedom from pain but can enslave. Opium gum and poppy-straw concentrate hold morphine, unsurpassed in treating violent pain. Codeine relieves moderate pain and coughs. Heroin, chemically treated morphine, wrecks lives and deals death worldwide.

White writes:

"Day and night, certain nitrogen-containing compounds, or alkaloids, are produced by the plant and stored in its cells. After the petals fall, the seed capsule swells; if the capsule is shallowly incised while still green and unripe, a milky, alkaloid-rich sap seeps from tiny tubes in the capsule wall. It dries, darkens, turn gummy--that's opium."

But it is man that decides how the poppy's power is used. Opium's usefulness as a pain reliever has been recognized since the fourth century B.C., and morphine is still unequaled for the worst sort of acute pain.

Still, it also is known that too much opium, taken too long, can bring misery, even kill. The invention of the hypodermic needle in 1853 increased morphine's potential for misery. And after the marketing of heroin--morphine to which chemicals related to acetic acid have been added--in 1898, the situation became worse.

Introduced in Germany, heroin was first used as a remedy for cough and diarrhea, and it was proposed as a morphine substitute, less likely to lead to addiction. The opposite proved true, White notes sadly.

Today, legitimate poppy production is monitored by a United Nations treaty, signed by 116 countries, that acknowledges the poppy's medicinal benefits while requiring the elimination of illicit poppy production.

India, the largest legal producer of opium, harvested 997 metric tons in 1983. According to estimates by the U.N.'s International Narcotics Control Board and U.S. government agencies, unlawful production worldwide may be double that amount, with most of it converted to heroin.

The largest grower of illicit poppies is Burma, which supposedly produced 600 metric tons of opium on 60,000 hectares of land. In Afghanistan, about 20,000 hectares were devoted to poppies in 1983 and, though the government of Iran claims it has eliminated poppy cultivation, U.S. officials estimate that the plant is grown on 30,000 hectares in Iran.

The Golden Crescent--Pakistan, Afghanistan, and Iran--is now believed to be the greatest source of the world's illegal heroin, surpassing the Golden Triangle of Burma, Laos, and Thailand. But suppressing smuggling routes is a frustrating business; as soon as one closes, another opens.

"I call it squeeze and effect," White writes. "Take a pillow or a half-inflated balloon, squeeze it here, and it pops out there."

White's investigation led him to reflect about good and evil and how the fight between them is an endless part of existence.

"When seen in that light," he writes, "isn't Papaver somniferum, bringing both good and evil, another symbol of life?"

Alcohol Info Report

by Bill Weant

Increasing abuse of cocaine may be creating a new set of problems for alcoholism treatment programs. The number of people using alcohol and cocaine simultaneously has increased substantially in the past few years. In addition, persons who abuse cocaine are at high risk for becoming dependent on alcohol.

Alcohol plays a very important role in the life of the cocaine-dependent individual. As the dependence on cocaine increases, alcohol is used more and more as a means of depressing the central nervous system so that cocaine consumption can continue. It is quite common for cocaine users to consume large amounts of alcohol, since they say it diminishes the anxiety and the depression associated with the temporary cessation of heavy cocaine use.

There are four distinct progressive levels of toxicity that accompany cocaine use: euphoria, dysphoria, cocaine hallucinosis, and cocaine psychosis.

In the first, there is a feeling of heightened pleasure and the user is very verbal, lucid, and confident. In the dysphoric phase, anxiety and depression begin to set in, and the user consumes increasing quantities of the drug in an attempt to maintain the original euphoria. The third stage is accompanied by tactile, auditory, and visual hallucinations due to central nervous system overstimulation.

And the final stage brings symptoms similar to those that accompany true psychoses--paranoia, acute frustration, anxiety and depression, and the threat of suicide.

Most cocaine and alcohol abusers think they are very knowledgeable about drugs. In reality, they are often dangerously uninformed. A major goal in treatment is to get the client's life back in order.

(This series is prepared by Bill Weant, alcoholism education consultant with the Tri-County Mental Health Complex, 622 North Main Street, Mocksville. These articles are designed to create understanding about drinking, alcohol abuse, and alcoholism in our society. If you have a question concerning alcohol that you would like answered in a future column, phone 634-2195.)

Advance Couple Are Elected To American Angus Association

S.S. and Bonnie Watkins, Advance, North Carolina, has been elected to membership in the American Angus Association, reports Dick Spader, executive vice-president of the national organization with head-quarters in St. Joseph, Missouri.

The American Angus Association, with some 38,000 active life and junior members, is the largest beef cattle registry association in the world. Its computerized records include detailed information on nearly 10 million registered Angus.

The Association records ancestral information and keeps records of production on individual animals for its members. These permanent records help members select and mate the best animals in their herds to produce high quality, efficient breeding cattle which are then recorded with the American Angus Association. Most of these registered Angus are used by the U.S. farmers and ranchers who raise high quality beef for consumption.

Mosses

N.C. Botanical Garden

For the braver, more energetic, souls who like a stroll in the winter woods or on the N.C. Botanical Garden trails on a sunny day, the bright green patches of moss on the rocks and logs are a rewarding sight.

Amid the generally brown underbrush, the mosses--like all green plants--are taking carbon dioxide from the air, water from the soil and using the chlorophyll in the plant and the sunlight overhead, producing carbohydrates, oxygen and energy. While the process of photosynthesis is always remarkable, it seems especially so in the cold, when many other plants have quit for the winter.

Staff members at the Botanical Garden--located at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill--says the mosses prefer this season when there is an abundance of moisture that is vital for their growth. Equally important is that plenty of the sunlight needed to manufacture food can reach them now that the deciduous trees have shed their shading leaves.

Mosses have worked out various mechanisms for coping with their need for moisture. For example, the reason mosses tend to grow on the north side of trees is that the direct rays of the sun and its dehydrating effects during summer dry spells are thereby avoided.

Some mosses close up shop during summer droughts when water is not available. Their metabolism slows down, and dormancy sets in.

In this condition, the cell contents of the plant are transformed from the usual liquid state to a gel-like form until a good rain makes water again available. There have been reports of mosses being completely revived after being stored dry on a shelf for 20 years!

Gardeners may find mosses an attractive plant for decorative use in moist, shade areas. They cannot be expected to flourish in dry, open places, but they are drought resistant, given a bit of watering on occasion. They are easily maintained and need no fussing with fertilizer; they are found naturally on compacted, poorly drained, infertile soil.

A simple way to start gardening with mosses is with a moss-covered log or rock in the shade garden, much as the Japanese have used in their beautiful garden designs for centuries.

The poet Thomas Hardy was also a moss enthusiast: "Variety upon variety, Dark green and pale green; Mosses like little fir trees-- Like plush, like malachite stars-- Like nothing on earth except moss!"

Methodist Churches Helping To Alleviate World Hunger

News is coming to us daily from Ethiopia and other parts of Africa concerning the tragic food shortage there that is causing deaths by starvation for thousands of people. That news comes to us as a call from our Lord who says to us, "Feed my sheep" (John 21:17) and "I was hungry and you gave me food...for...as you did it to one of the least of these, you did it to me." (Matthew 25:35,40).

In response to this urgent cry for help the children, youth and adults of First United Methodist Church of Mocksville have joined together with special class projects to fill the "Hunger Pot." The projects include an auction, donut sales, special donations and individual donations.

A monthly calendar was received by all church families as a guide to daily giving. All money collected will be placed in the "Hunger Pot" during worship service Feb. 24th.

Immediately following worship service all members of the church and everyone in the community is invited to join in the Fellowship Hall for the annual soup luncheon. The donations from the luncheon will also be placed in the Hunger Pot. Other Methodist Churches in the county are sponsoring projects to

"There is a time for everything...." - Ecclesiastes 3:1, The Living Bible

THE CROSS AND EMPTY TOMB ARE FOR YOU

All the immensity of the universe is focused on the cross of Christ. The crucifixion of Christ, and His resurrection, are the central facts of all of history, for God cast this entire universe along redemptive lines. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

When we feel dwarfed by our solar system, when insignificance overwhelms us to the point where we begin to think or feel that either God doesn't know or he doesn't care, read the 19, 20 and 21st chapters of John. The cross and the empty tomb are for you!

Kappa Homemakers

Kappa Extension Homemakers met at the home of Louise Carter, Monday, February 4 at 7 p.m. for their regular monthly meeting. Margaret Ann Shew served as co-hostess.

For opening devotional thoughts, Margaret Ann used a reading, "Measure By Measure". As we are confronted daily by measurements - size, distance, temperature etc., do we stop to consider how our lives are measuring up? While no one can choose the length of life, they can choose the depth.

A special welcome and introduction was given to Janet Blair, and Karen Kahr, of the Davie County Health Department. Janet presented the educational program for the month on the Hospice program in Davie County and the Health Care services available to all county citizens. In the February tradition, cherry cheese cake and red fruit punch was served the group as they asked questions of Janet and Karen before they departed.

During the business session members answered the roll call with, "Love Is". Lena Souther, former member, was welcomed, and Jollette Daywalt and Darlene Hepler were welcomed into the club membership.

Report was given on the reception that had been held in honor of Ostin West the previous day. Plans were made for the group to go to Autumn Care Nursing Home for a party at a convenient time in March. Members were reminded that Kappa would be hostess for the area meeting to be held at the Davie County Library, Tuesday, March 26, at 7 p.m.

The meeting closed with the club collect.

Hi, My name is Jessica Denise Grant. I was one year old February 7. I celebrated on February 9 at my home. My mommy and daddy are Rhonda and Dwayne Grant. I had 23 guests at my party. They were served strawberry shortcake, cupcake, punch and ice cream. We had lots of fun and I received many nice gifts. My maternal grandparents are Ronald and Beatrice Smoot. My paternal grandparents are Henery and Ernestine Grant.

Jennell Lynn McClamrock celebrated her 7th birthday, February 5. Jennell is the daughter of Jerry W. and Jennifer McClamrock of Salisbury St., Mocksville. Jennell shared her birthday with her classmates at school. Cupcakes were shared with her Brownie Troop. Jennell had a party at her home. She received many wonderful gifts that she is enjoying very much from friends and relatives. Jennell's paternal grandparents, Ruby and Calvin McClamrock, attended the party. Jennell received gifts from her maternal grandparents, Alice and Roger Gabbert of Saur Rapids, Minnesota. Jennell would like to thank all of her guests and especially her brother, Justin, for helping to make this birthday a very special one.

This person thought he could drive as well after a few drinks as before. He was dead wrong. Don't make the same mistake.

Standards Division Of NCDA Checks All Weights And Measures

Did you ever wonder when you bought a pound of meat whether it was weighed accurately? How about that last fillup at the gas station - how do you know the pump dispensed the right amount of fuel at the right price? How do truckers know the scales are correct at state weigh stations?

Good questions and there are equally good answers. In an effort to let citizens know who tests these weighing and measuring devices, the Standards Division of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture will celebrate National Weights and Measures Week March 1-7.

"The Weights and Measures Section of the Standards Division of the NCDA is responsible for testing all commercial weighing and measuring devices in the state," said N. David Smith, director. "No one thinks a lot about how much scales affect their life but accurate weights and measures are vital to business, consumers, and industry, especially high tech."

Several examples of scales tested by the division are those used in grocery stores, by wrestling teams, all fuel dispensers, pharmacies, and taxi meters.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham noted that scales are absolutely necessary to agriculture and agribusiness.

"Weighing bulk commodities such as grain and tobacco must be accurate if farmers are to get the correct price for their crops," Graham said. "It is also imperative that livestock producers and dealers get exact weights."

"These are all responsibilities of the department's weights and measures section," the commissioner said. "We believe it is a service invaluable to the taxpayers and it only cost our citizens about 20 cents per person annually."

Spring Is Just Around The Corner

Recent spring like weather inspired many county residents including Roscoe Mabe, shown pruning a large fruit tree, to enjoy the sunshine and get a head start on spring chores.

Condition Of Downtown Trees Is Topic Of Special Meeting

By John Vernelson

The Appearance Commission met with the director of the North Carolina Department of Urban Forestry Tuesday afternoon in the Town Hall and talked about downtown trees.

Director Herman Terry, who has worked with the urban forestry assistance program for about seven years, said he has worked to some degree with 50-60 towns with tree problems similar to Mocksville. "Infact," he said "most towns in the state I have been in, have basically the same problems with trees."

Problems are caused as a tree grows and as long as it is healthy, problems associated with spreading root systems, height increases, and expanding crowns will continue, he said.

At somewhere along the line, Terry said, a decision must be made. "You have to decide to live with the conditions and make repairs as needed as long as the tree grows, or you have to decide to remove the tree and get rid of the problem once and for all," he said.

Unhealthy trees on public property, he continued, pose a threat to property and pedestrians alike. For example, he said, the tree that stands in front of Hall and Vogler's law office near the corner of South Main and Water streets is fast becoming a hazard.

According to Terry, this particular tree has suffered extensive damage due to decay. "Once decay sets in, it moves up and down which means that the roots decay as well as the trunk and limbs," he said. "Decay of the root system increases the chances of a tree falling because of wind."

Some towns live with the constant need to repair sidewalks, to periodically unplug water lines and storm drains while others, he said, decide to remove the trees.

"Unfortunately, there is no real black and white area in the situation," Terry added. "The people who planted the trees had good intentions, but before planting any tree, they should have taken into consideration the locations of the water lines, the storm drains, and the eventual size of the tree."

The tree located in front of the vacant lot where the Old Masonic Building stood, according to Terry, has some internal decay, but the remainder of the trees which line South Main Street appear to be fairly healthy.

"To remove the two worst trees," he continued, "would be a safety pre-caution, but the problems (cracked sidewalks, the possibility of a damaged water line and a plugged storm drain) would remain."

In response to commission member Wanda Edwards' concern regarding corrective action that could be taken to make downtown trees less hazardous, Terry said pruning would be one solution if an experienced pruner "who knows what he's doing" does the job.

"Pruning, if done incorrectly," he said, "creates continuing maintenance problems.

In regard to the trees on the Square, Terry said they looked fairly healthy, were very attractive, and added to the town. Since there is no question concerning their removal, he suggested that soil samples be analyzed to determine the best fertilizer to use as food for the trees.

Since the Town Board, on the recommendation of the Appearance Commission, decided to remove all extraneous concrete structures from the plots, commission member Barry McBride asked Terry if removal of the concrete collar which surrounds one of the trees would affect its health.

Terry said feeder roots usually grow 1-2 feet underneath the top soil, and that roots located near the base of the tree are used for support and have nothing to do with a tree's food supply, so removal of the collar would not endanger the tree.

When this particular tree is fed, he said, fertilizer would be spread over an area beginning at the outer edge of the concrete collar's present location and ending at the curb line.

Ideally, he continued, fertilizer should be spread on across the street towards the vacant lot because the tree's feeder roots grow in length relative to the height of the tree.

Next week, according to commission members, they will meet, consider all options, and decide what recommendations they will make to the Town Board concerning the trees that line South Main Street.

Dottie Sigmon Is Named N.C. Youth Conservationist

By Kathy Tomlinson

With binoculars in hand, pretty Dottie Sigmon seeks the solitude of the rural farmland surrounding her Davie County home.

She feels the warmth of the sun on her face and a soft breeze in her hair as she surveys the immense beauty of the countryside before her.

Finding a secluded spot, she quietly nestles among the brush and undergrowth, soon oblivious to anything but the chirping birds above her. And through a lens, she eagerly views and records the habits of a species most take for granted.

At 14-years-of-age, Dottie is a veteran bird watcher. Since taking up the hobby at age 9, she has identified 91 different species, recording individual characteristics and the natural environmental habits of each.

Her hobby, which began as a member of the Davie Academy 4-H Club, has recently brought her statewide recognition. The shy South Davie Junior High student was named this month as the Governor's Youth Conservationist of the Year. The award is sponsored annually by the N.C. Wildlife Federation and the Sears-Roebuck Company in cooperation with the National Wildlife Federation.

Dottie admits still being "in shock" about the state award which was presented February 16 at the 23rd annual Governor's Conservation Achievement Awards Banquet in Greenville, N.C.

"I am thrilled," she said modestly.

Dottie has never been the type of person to sing her own praises.

National Guard Has Large Impact On Local Economy

The North Carolina National Guard with an operating budget of nearly $100 million a year is one of the larger employers in the state a recently released economic impact statement reveals.

About two-third of the operating budget goes to salaries for the more than 13,000 Guard members for weekend drill and annual training. These salaries provide additional income to the Guard members' full-time jobs and get spent in communities throughout the state the statement indicates.

In Mocksville the National Guard with its 50 members has a total local financial impact of $160,153.00.

The total for Mocksville includes military pay for Guard members, operating expense for the local armory, local purchases and pay for full-time personnel.

In releasing the financial information Maj. Gen. Hubert M. Leonard, North Carolina Adjutant General, points out "The North Carolina National Guard is indeed big business and the financial impact on our state is substantial. The National Guard is more than a group of citizen-soldiers ready to respond to state and federal emergencies. We are viable asset to our state's economy."

The Guard operated on a state budget of $5.5 million in 1984. This allocation generated $93 million in

Arrests Made In Abuse Cases

Arrests were made last week by the Davie County Sheriff's Department in connection with unrelated cases and types of abuse involving a 22-month-old child and an 81-year-old man.

In the first case, the child's mother, Jessie Lee Cuthrell, 20, of Rt. 7, Advance, and Perry Quenton Simmons, 21, of Rt. 3, Advance, were arrested and charged with felonious child abuse February 20th and 21st, respectively, according to investigating officer Det. P. C. Williams.

"The extent of the child's injuries," he said, "are marks, lacerations, and scarring on its back and chest that appear to have been caused by a switch. The child's face had also been hit with what appeared to be fists."

Williams said the mother, released on a $500 unsecured bond, and the man, released on a $2,000 secured bond, are scheduled to make their first appearance in District Court March 26.

In the second case, according to Det. John Stephens, the in-according to her mother, Mrs. Cecil Sigmon. But she doesn't mind sharing her love of birds and bird watching with other people.

As part of a 4-H demonstration project, she has spoken on birds and birdwatching before 5,000 people during the past 5 years. She has also compiled an impressive cumulative record about wildlife in Davie County.

She was nominated for State Youth Conservationist by Leon Harkins, N.C. State University extension Wildlife specialist.

Dottie does not limit her love of wildlife to just birds and bird watching. She has attended numerous fish and game camps, forestry and wildlife camp, 4-H wildlife camp and a fur, fish and game camp sponsored by the N.C. Wildlife Federation.

Dottie has also identified 38 wildflower species, entered numerous archery and rifle contests, and won photography awards at the Center Fair for her wildlife photographs. She also helps her Dad, Cecil, skin deers during hunting season.

Dottie is eager to share her enthusiasm for the outdoors with others, and has taught numerous fellow 4-H members to make inexpensive bird feeders.

She is an active member of the Davie Academy 4-H Club, the county 4-H Junior Leaders and serves as county 4-H Council reporter.

As state Youth Conservationist of the Year, Dottie is eligible for competition for the national award which is presented at the National Conservation Achievement Banquet.

The North Carolina Wildlife Federation first presented a limited number of conservation awards in 1958 but it was in 1961, when financial aid granted by Sears-Roebuck Foundation permitted expansion of that annual project, that the current North Carolina Conservation Achievement Program was established on its present scale. In 1972, the North Carolina retail stores of the Sears-Roebuck Company in lieu of the Sears-Roebuck Foundation elected to continue financial aid for the program.

By giving recognition to the contributions made in the public interest by outstanding community and state conservation leaders, it is felt that a new public awareness of the need to conserve and wisely use our natural resources will encourage their renewed dedication and action by others as we strive to achieve "environmental quality."

Nominations are submitted by individuals, local conservation clubs, private organizations and by the agencies and departments of government. Nominees, which may be either professionals or non-professionals, must be justly deserving of recognition for outstanding accomplishments, and in the case of professionals such effort must be that given above and beyond their regularly assigned duties. An "Awards Committee," composed of qualified conservationists who are not necessarily Federation members, judge all nominations and select state winners which are honored at the Awards Banquet.

Dottie Sigmon of Rt. 7, Mocksville, received this handsome trophy as winner of the Governor's Youth Conservationist of the Year. The presentation was made last week during the 23rd annual Governor's Conservation Achievement Awards of the N.C. Wildlife Federation.

Dottie is an avid bird watcher and does not limit her hobby to the outdoors. She has an impressive collection of porcelain birds in her room. Dottie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Sigmon of Rt. 7, Mocksville.

Arrests Made In Abuse Cases

investigating officer, 18-year-old Bill Lee Wyatt, Jr., of the Lakewood Motel in Mocksville, was arrested February 20 and charged with 10 counts of false pretenses and one count of extortion in connection with what may be termed as the mental harassment and/or abuse of Fletcher Strider after Wyatt reportedly attempted to extort $2,000 from the elderly man.

Wyatt reportedly took thousands from Strider over a three year period by telling him at various times that he needed money for serious illnesses and emergencies such as cancer and a gun shot wound, according to Det. Stephens. After obtaining the money, Wyatt allegedly bought other items with it for himself and friends, Stephens said.

In the latest episode, according to Stephens, Strider said Wyatt showed him a note which threatened both men with death unless Wyatt could come up with $2,000 in cash by 1 p.m., February 20.

As a result of the note, Strider drove to the Northwestern Bank in Clemmons to get the money, but an alert teller, Lisa West, called the Sheriff's Dept. and told Det. Stephens Strider wanted to withdraw $2,000, Stephens said.

Strider then, said Stephens, returned to his residence without the money and locked himself inside. Stephens drove to Strider's house, but said the elderly man refused to answer the door.

Concerned that he might be afraid or hurt, Stephens called for a uniform car and a few minutes later, deputies Mike Smith and Teresa Piner arrived.

"Finally," Stephens said, "we broke in through the front door because we didn't know what physical condition he might be in. We were afraid he might have been beaten up or was hurt."

Once Strider was convinced they were the law, he told them about the note and the three left for Wyatt's residence, but as they were leaving saw Wyatt's vehicle as it approached Strider's house, Stephens said.

Wyatt, according to Stephens, attempted to turn around and leave the scene, but deputy Smith stopped him with his police car.

Detectives Williams and Stephens said Friday that such cases as the two involving the physical abuse of the child and the mental harassment and/or abuse of the elderly man are common.

"If anyone has information or knows of cases of this type, they should contact the Davie County Department of Social Services or a detective with the Davie County Sheriff's Department," Williams said.

Such cases will be investigated, the two said, and callers "don't necessarily have to have their names revealed."

Chief Deputy Tom Foster said more cases of this type had come to the attention of law enforcement officers during the last two years because of media publicity surrounding cases of abuse.

"If people would let us know about these kinds of cases, we could do more to help in these areas," he said.

The Sheriff's Department has made 18 child abuse arrests over the past year, a significant increase over previous years.

Nine-Year-Old Is Struck By Car

A 9-year-old boy who was struck by a car on U.S. 601 S. Thursday afternoon was discharged from Davie County Hospital the next day, according to a hospital spokesman.

The boy, Joel Lane Surratt, of Mocksville, was struck at about 4:25 p.m. by a 1977 Lincoln driven by Dorothy Steele Archer, 57, of Center Street, Cooleemee, when he ran onto the road from the left into the path of the vehicle, a Highway Patrol report indicated.

According to the report, Mrs. Archer could not avoid striking the boy and no charges were filed by Trooper J.L. Payne, the investigating officer.

Man Sentenced For Assault

An 18-year-old man charged with assault and carrying a weapon on school property was found not guilty of the weapons charge but was given a 30 days suspended sentence for assault in Davie County District Court Tuesday.

The man, Meade Atkinson, of 501 Salisbury Street, Mocksville, was charged after an incident involving a fight at South Davie Junior High School February 19.

According to arresting officer Greg Bagshaw, Atkinson went to South Davie to fight a 16-year-old student and had a replica gun in his possession at the time.

The assaulted youth testified in court, said Bagshaw, that he didn't fight back because he was afraid he would be shot. According to Bagshaw, the boy covered his head when assaulted by Atkinson.

Judge Robert W. Johnson suspended Atkinson's sentence but placed him on supervised probation for two years and on unsupervised probation for three years. He was also ordered to pay a $50 fine and costs.

As a special condition of his probation, he was ordered to perform 50 hours of community or repair service.

Other special conditions are:
 (1) Not enter upon premises of South Davie Junior High School without the expressed written consent of the school principal.
 (2) Not have in his possession any firearm during the period of suspension.
 (3) Not have any replica of a firearm outside his home.
 (4) Not threaten, harass, or assault the youth in question during the period of suspension.
 (5) The defendant is to complete his high school education.

 (6) Not violate any State or Federal laws, and remain of general good behavior.
 (7) Report to Mental Health Clinic for evaluation and counseling.

Meeting Date Is Changed

Animal Protection Society Receives $1,000 Grant

The Margaret C. Woodson Foundation has made a $1,000 grant to the Davie County Animal Protection Society.

The grant was announced this week by Freddie Hammer, local APS officer.

Mrs. Hammer said the $1,000 will be used to cover expenses incurred by the society's two animal cruelty investigators, John McCashin and Earl Hammer during official investigations.

"These two men have volunteered their time to act as county animal cruelty investigators for the past six years without any type of reimbursement for travel," she said. "The funds will be used to cover the out-of-pocket expenses incurred by them while investigating various reports of animal cruelty and neglect."

She added that the society is most grateful to the Woodson Foundation for its generous donation.

--Margaret Lynne Weaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sterline Abernathy Weaver of Eden, John Motley Morehead High School.

The six winners were selected from 20 finalists by an interview committee of business, professional and educational leaders from the Carolinas. Each finalist was rated on the basis of merit, academic record and awareness of career goals. The 20 were chosen by a review committee from nearly 900 students nominated by their principals and headmasters within Duke Power's service area. None of the members of the interview committee or the separate review committee were employees of Duke Power.

Under the guidelines of the program, half of the scholarships were awarded to children of Duke Power employees. They are Kappy, Todd and Tonya.

The scholarships fully provide for tuition, fees, books and room and board at any accredited college or university in North Carolina or South Carolina, Booth said.

Scholarship funds will come from shareholders, not customers, he said.

In addition to the full scholarships, Duke Power will present 14 honorary one-time $1,000 grants to the other finalists.

They are:

Susan Paige Baker, Kelly Leanne Jackson, Jerry Michael Stephen Telford, all of Charlotte; Paula Renee Eaker of Lawndale, N.C.; Kristen Dawn Gardner of Wilkesboro; Todd Allen Moore of Reidsville; Carol Ashley Moss of Shelby; Ethan Gregory Shenkan of Chapel Hill; Victor Blaine Sitton of Rutherfordton; Melinda Catherine Taylor of Hickory; James Erskine Mitchell of Stanley; Jill Catherine Wright of Raleigh.

Tonya Turner

who attends the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics in Durham; and Stephen Maline Roddey of Rock Hill.

"The scholarship program is intended to recognize and reward individual merit and high achievement, to play a significant role in improving the quality of education in our area and to demonstrate Duke Power's continued commitment to higher education," Booth said.

"We are proud of all these youngsters and wish them well as they pursue their educational and career goals," he said.

Woman Shot Following Argument

A Davie County woman was shot in the chest and abdominal area Friday night following an argument over a bonfire at her residence.

Shelly Marie Renner, 20, of Davie Academy Road was in satisfactory condition Tuesday morning at Davie County Hospital, where she is being treated for the wound. Ms. Renner underwent surgery early Saturday, and was listed in critical condition at that time, according to Chief Deputy Tom Foster of the Davie County Sheriff's Department.

Willie Howard Thomas Leonard, a suspect in the shooting, was also treated at Davie County Hospital. He was treated for injuries received when he was beaten by Ms. Renner's boyfriend and another man after the shooting, he said.

Leonard was released Tuesday in the custody of the Sheriff's Dept., according to a hospital spokesman.

A warrant for assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injuries was to be served on Leonard upon his release, Foster said.

Ms. Renner was shot after an argument broke out over who had called the local fire department to put out a bonfire at her residence.

"The boyfriend of the victim had accused Leonard of calling the fire department," Foster said.

Leonard went to his trailer across the street and returned with a shotgun, he said. They were all reportedly drinking at the time.

The sheriff's department received a call at 11:37 p.m. that shots had been fired at the residence, and upon arrival, found Ms. Renner lying in her driveway, he said. The case is being investigated by Deputy Jerry Williams and Detectives John Stephens and Buddy Williams.

Report From Raleigh

by Rep. Betsy Cochrane

February 27.

I have attended two public hearings this week. One very lengthy session concerned the Day Care Bills and one concerning the University System Comments by President Friday led to the introduction of the proposed 700 SAT requirements for athletes entering college.

My Judiciary Committee is considering legislation to remove a closed pocket knife from a deadly weapon category.

It was a pleasure to be visited this week by Ruth Hoyle, Davie County Librarian. I was pleasantly surprised in the House Chamber by Rufus Brock, Dean Myers, Walter White, and Luther Potts.

When you are in Raleigh, do come by and see me at the Legislative Building, Room 1106. My phone number is 919-733-5822.

Special interest groups that like to meet with legislators often entertain the General Assembly with evening receptions. In the past, some groups have met with legislators at breakfast. This session, we have had far more breakfast invitations than ever before. One that I accepted last week with great pleasure was breakfast with the Governor at the Mansion. The invited guests were the leaders in the House and Senate, including the Appropriation and Finance Chairman. That made a total of 15 men and me. We had a tasty ham and egg breakfast and interesting conversation with the Governor, Lt. Governor and Speaker.

Recent bill introductions have included the Basic Education Program and the Teacher Career Plan. Both bills will receive lengthy discussion. The Basic Education Program is basically very good. It presents a curriculum plan that attempts to equalize educational opportunities state-wide.

Whereas the plan is very good, it does need some modification. We want the math and science instruction to be more basic rather than concentrating on relevancy. Students will have great difficulty understanding the effects of acid rain if they do not understand about acid. The price tag for this blue print is $619 million.

The Career Ladder Program is still struggling with the evaluation tool. That is essential to its success, along with a commitment on the part of teachers and principals to make it work.

With some seriousness and some tongue in cheek, two legislators introduced bills to raise the minimum SAT scores for athletes to 700. We were told athletes received 400 just for signing their names.

Another bill introduced in the House would limit the governor to one four year term. A Senate bill limits the governor to one six year term. Although it does not affect Governor Martin, these bills will bear watching, so they are not amended to affect him. The voters may decide this one through referendum.

A second bill was introduced this week to chip away at the Governor's power. This one instructed the Governor to choose State Election Board members from a specific list. This limited the Governor's appointive powers. We tried to amend it to death. It passed the House after providing us with our first real skirmish and, certainly, the only floor excitement this session.

I have introduced legislation to allow the County School Board to transfer some property adjacent to the old Coolemeec Elementary School to the Coolemeec Fire Department. It will be before Local Government II on Wednesday.

E. Davie Homemakers Meet With Ms. Smith

Old and new business was taken care of, after which, the meeting adjourned and remained with Shirley for a delightful lunch, consisting of chicken pie, tossed green salad and congealed strawberry salad.

Canvasbacks Subject Of State Duck Stamp

Representative Joe H. Hege, Jr., Republican of Davidson County announces the appointment of Miss Kristin Kay Stewart (Kris), as a House Page to the North Carolina General Assembly. Miss Stewart was recommended highly by her peers and teachers. She will be serving in the House of Representatives the week of February 25-March 1, 1985. She is the daughter of Gordon and Gail Stewart of Southmont. She is a sophomore at Sheets Memorial Christian School and is a member of the National Honor Society. Kris has served as a Candy Stripper at Lexington Memorial Hospital, and is the present secretary for the Davidson County Chapter of Teen-Age Republicans. Along with her mother, Kris has participated twice in the March For Life in Washington, D.C. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Camilla Shaw of Mocksville, and of Mrs. Ruby Stewart of Portland, Maine.

A painting of a pair of canvasback ducks will be featured on the 1985 North Carolina Waterfowl Conservation stamp and art prints. The painting, by Tom Hirata of Rutherford, New Jersey, was recently selected in a competition sponsored by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. The publishing and national marketing of art prints of this stamp will be handled by Sport'en Art-Midwest marketing of Sullivan, Illinois. Revenues from waterfowl stamp sales and royalties from print sales will be used to fund waterfowl conservation programs in North Carolina.

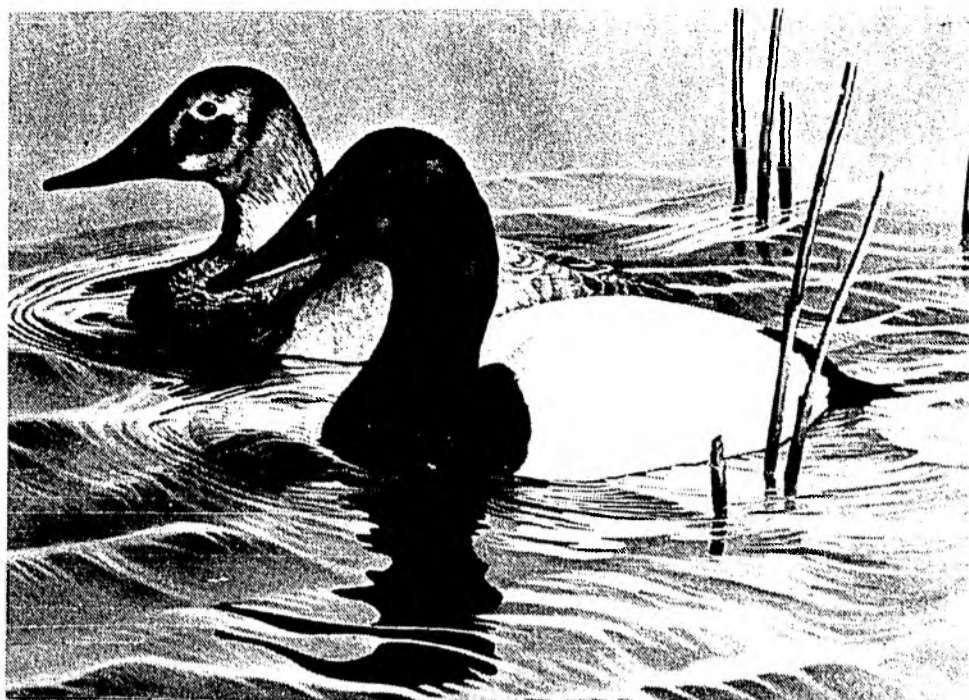

"We're sure that sportsmen and wildlife art collectors will be very pleased with the new state waterfowl stamp and art prints," said Vernon Beville, executive director of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "The new design featuring a pair of canvasbacks makes an especially attractive art print, and funds from this program will make a great contribution to waterfowl management and research in North Carolina. Over the past two years, over $825,000 has been raised for waterfowl conservation in the state through the stamp and print programs. This money is being used for habitat improvement and research for waterfowl, and will also be used for habitat acquisition and management in the future."

Hirata is a nationally known wildlife artist. His painting of canvasbacks was selected for the First of State New Jersey Waterfowl Stamp in 1984. In 1982, he won the Best of Show award at the Ducks Unlimited National Wildlife Art Show. He has also been a Gold Room Exhibitor at the Easton Waterfowl Festival in Easton, Maryland.

The 1985 North Carolina Waterfowl Conservation stamp art prints are not yet available. These prints will not be sold by the Wildlife Commission, but will be available from art dealers. Literature on the program will be sent to art dealers in the near future. The 1985 North Carolina program will, for the first time, include a medallion series in addition to the regular and remarked print series. The new medallion series will add another dimension to the program and should prove very popular. Art dealers will take orders for these time limited-edition prints through August 31, 1985. Stamps will not go on sale until July 1, 1985, and will be available through license agents.

"These state waterfowl stamp art prints are not only beautiful pieces of artwork, but should also appreciate in value in the future," said Sid Baynes, chief of the Commission's Division of addition, a royalty from the sale of each print is used for waterfowl conservation. Buying one of these prints is not only a good investment and a great way to beautify your home or office, but it helps waterfowl as well."

This painting of a pair of canvasback ducks was selected as the design for the 1985 North Carolina Waterfowl Conservation stamp. Three types of art prints of the stamp, which are not being sold by the Wildlife Commission, may be ordered from art dealers through August 31. Proceeds from the sale of stamps and art prints will be used for waterfowl management and conservation in North Carolina (N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission)

Folk-Ways And Folk-Lore

By Roger Whitener

A recent letter from R.V. Whitney of Maiden with reference to a moon superstition piece we did sometime back reminds us that Halley's Comet is not only on the way but that it will bring a deluge of non-celestial material as well.

"I look for some very bizarre tales about the 'doomsday' effect on mankind," says Mr. Whitney. "There were lots of new myths in 1910 (last appearance), and I am sure there will be some new ones in 1986 that will take people's money and make them nail down the windows!"

Problem is, Mr. Whitney, that the TV will probably not be nailed down and thus there will be no escape.

Arlen J. Large, in a recent Wall Street Journal article, calls it "Halley Hype", and suggests that we will be inundated by all manner of commercial items, from T-shirts to bumper stickers.

Sample printing: "Repent! Halley's Comet Is Coming!" And on a bronze medallion: "Liberate Nos a Malo Cometae"--save us from the evil of the comet.

The evil pictured in the 1910 appearance was supposedly lethal cyanide gas from the tail of the comet, giving rise to the sale of comet pills as a special protection.

According to Large, the 1986 appearance of the comet will usher in yogurt-covered sunflower seeds as a spoof of the original comet pills.

Most of the other commercial items will also be of a spoofing nature, particularly the Halley T-shirts, the exceptions being those designed to be sold in science museums and observatories. These will carry such slogans as "Once in a Lifetime Experience," and for the very young, "I'll see it in the year 2061, too!"

And there will apparently be books on top of books, some seriously scientific, others of the pseudo-scientific variety. Large notes that the Library of Congress has already reported a dozen English-language books headed for the Comet market, with others on the way.

Some of these should prove very valuable, particularly those bolstered by data collected through close-up observation of the comet from spacecraft and from planetariums with high-powered equipment.

For the individual there will also be observation and picture-taking equipment, including binoculars, telescopes, and cameras. Large mentions that "stashed in a New Jersey warehouse are hundreds of 'Halleyscopes,' small Japanese-made refractors especially designed for first-time telescope users." These will apparently retail for about $200 each.

All this over a year before the expected public viewing of the comet in March and April of 1986.

For readers old enough to make comparisons, the '86 edition of Halley's is expected to be dimmer than that of 1910, and with a shorter tail.

In addition it is not expected to be seen scooting across the sky with flaming tail as has often been depicted. Instead, say experts, the average observer will see what appears to be a motionless bright object above the dark morning or evening horizon.

And city folks may have difficulty in seeing the comet at all as it fights street lights and advertising illumination for attention.

But, then, there is always TV--and T-shirts.

Child Guidance Counselors To Attend Clinic On Serious Eating Disorders

Counselors and other professionals who work with children in the 10-county area including Davie and served by the Child Guidance Clinic in Winston-Salem will have a chance to learn more about two potentially life-threatening eating disorders at a seminar March 6 at the Clinic.

The disorders are anorexia nervosa, or self-starvation; and overeating, which causes obesity. Debora Winfrey, psychologist at the Child Guidance Clinic, 1200 Glade St., will conduct the seminar from 10:30 a.m. until noon on March 6.

Ironically, Dr. Winfrey noted, anorexia occurs largely in people who could afford to eat what they like, while obesity afflicts lower-income people as well as the affluent. And anorexia is on the increase, she said.

"There are no cases of anorexia reported in underdeveloped countries; there are very few cases reported in lower-income stratas," Dr. Winfrey said. "Self-starvation is observed only under conditions of abundant food supply."

Dr. Winfrey emphasized that anorexia and obesity touch everywhere, damaging the health, personal happiness and the livelihoods of those afflicted—our friends, neighbors and co-workers.

"There has been a conservative estimate that there are approximately 1 million anorexics and bulimics (victims of a related disorder) in the U.S.," she commented.

"In patients with severe eating disorder," Dr. Winfrey said, "a basic disturbance has been recognized in the way the sensation of hunger is experienced. Anorexics are commonly heard to say, 'I do not need to eat,' and literally mean it."

Family problems can trigger anorexia.

"For instance," Dr. Winfrey noted, "a mother expects perfection from a child, and she complains if the child puts on the least amount of weight."

Some of the signs to look for in detecting a potential problem with anorexia include: a preoccupation with food; a refusal to eat anything but very small portions; a preoccupation with school; and excessive exercising. The problem often begins with the victim's being on a diet.

In adolescent females, who make up a group commonly associated with anorexia, Dr. Winfrey noted that menstruation stops, depression sets in and the young females, no matter how thin they are, see themselves as being fat.

Anorexia—or self-starvation—became well known in 1983 when singer Karen Carpenter died from it.

"Kidney failure, cardiac arrest and liver dysfunction can result from self-starvation," Dr. Winfrey said. Of the million who suffer from anorexia and a related disorder known as bulimia, she added, "Six percent die from the illness, and 90 to 95 percent are women."

Dr. Winfrey, who graduated magna cum laude from Ohio University in Athens and earned her Ph.D. in Psychology at Ohio's Kent State University, joined the Child Guidance Clinic last year. Her position as a Clinical Psychologist there involves both psychological evaluation and therapy. The Clinic frequently sees patients with problems stemming from eating disorders. The Clinic serves a primary 10-county area of: Forsyth, Guilford, Davidson, Rowan, Surry, Stokes, Davie, Iredell, Wilkes and Yadkin.

Before she came to the Child Guidance Clinic, Dr. Winfrey worked as Psychology Program Manager at the North Carolina Department of Corrections' Women's Prison in Raleigh. Prior to that, she worked as Department Chief for Psychological Services of the Kansas Reception and Diagnostic Center in Topeka, Kan., where she dealt with male felons; and held other clinical, teaching and administrative positions.

Professionals who treat eating disorders usually try to involve the family in therapy. At the Child Guidance Clinic, families normally are included in treatment of youngsters with eating disorders. But while group or family therapy is common, Dr. Winfrey said, therapists have several different methods to control these problems, which result in emotional stress that damages personal as well as school or job relationships.

Like anorexia, obesity is on the increase and also is rooted in family problems.

"I'm running into more obese kids than I have in the past," said the slender psychologist. "Statistics show that more than one-third of the general population suffers from being overweight..."

"For obesity, there's a suggestion that kids don't learn very early how to differentiate between the sensation of hunger and other feelings of discomfort."

"There is the interaction of the child with mother. For example, a depressed mother stuffs food in the child's mouth whenever the child cries. Mother feeds the child instead of checking for a wet diaper or a problem with a pin."

The child then comes to look upon food as the answer to almost every type of problem, she said.

"Overweight people will often say, 'My stomach doesn't want it, but my mouth does,'" said Dr. Winfrey. "Or they feel compelled to eat in spite of a strong desire not to gain weight and will even eat food they don't like."

The obese have to beware of potential problems with heart attacks, strokes, diabetes, high blood pressure, cardiac arrest and liver ailments.

In addition to getting therapy, said Dr. Winfrey, victims of anorexia or obesity can get help from support formed by others who have suffered from the disorders.

"The support group for anorexics is Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders or ANAD," she said. "For obese people, there is Overeaters Anonymous."

North Davie Junior High Mathcount Team Advances To State Competition

A team from North Davie Junior High was named Mathcounts champion Saturday following three hours of grueling competition against 30 schools from a 10 county area.

The win will allow the North Davie team to advance to state competition scheduled for late April in Raleigh.

Susan Barnhardt, coach of the North Davie team, said the Mathcount competition is sponsored by the Professional Engineers of North Carolina and held yearly at Wake Forest University.

Competition included three hours of constant testing including a 40 question timed individual written test, a 10 question times individual test, and a 10 question team solutions test. All problems were based on high school level mathematic principles including Algebra, geometry, probability and word problems.

North Davie's team was comprised of four eighth grade students, Ken Fergusson, Chris Krause, Robert Ligon and Allan Newsom, with Jeff Jarvis, a seventh grader, serving as alternate.

Mrs. Barnhardt said 20 students went out for the team with preparation beginning before Christmas. Students spent at least one afternoon per week and some Saturday's preparing for the event. The team will step up its practice schedule during the coming weeks to prepare for state competition in late April.

The North Davie team also placed third in the Mathcounts ciphering contest held Saturday afternoon. Two members, Allan Newsom and Ken Fergusson, received respective individual awards of third and fifth place in this phase of competition.

Only the 15 best teams competed in the ciphering contest with each team member solving six problems shown separately on a screen. Students had one minute to solve each problem.

This is the second year North Davie has competed in the Mathcounts contest. The team placed third last year. Mrs. Barnhardt and Charles Markland serve as coaches.

South Davie Junior High also made a good showing at the Mathcounts competition placing eleventh out of thirty teams.

DCCC To Offer Four Math And Science Courses

Davidson County Community College's Mathematics and Science Division is offering four courses that may be of special interest to individuals who want to earn college credit this spring.

"These beginning math and science courses are being offered this spring to provide greater scheduling flexibility for new and returning students," explains Dr. Robert Cole, chairman of the division. Students can take these courses to fulfill program requirements, as electives, or for general interest.

Environmental Awareness (SCI 200) is an interdisciplinary approach to problems of using the environment with emphasis on population dynamics, pollution, and resource depletion. Current events, case studies, field trips, and laboratory experiments will be used in instruction. This four credit class will meet from 10 to 10:50 a.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays beginning February 27. Students will also have a 1-2:50 p.m. lab on Wednesdays.

Evening students needing a beginning science course can take General Biology (BIO 104) from 6 to 8:55 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning February 28. This four-credit course, which is also taught during the day, introduces the student to the molecular and cellular basis of biology and acquaints the student with the major principles of ecology, genetics, and evolution. Other courses in the general biology sequence will be offered in the evening this summer and next fall.

Foundations and Topics in Mathematics (MAT 106), which is one of the courses that can be used to meet the mathematics requirement in college transfer programs, will begin February 27. This five-credit class will meet from 1 to 1:50 p.m. Monday through Friday. The development of the real number system and systems of numeration, as well as various topics selected from sets, logic, geometry, consumer mathematics, and probability will be discussed. High school algebra or the equivalent is required as a prerequisite.

Another college transfer mathematics sequence will begin this spring with College Algebra (MAY 111), which will be offered from 6 to 8:05 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays beginning February

27. ### Letter To Editor

Dear Editor:

There is another request for a sewage package plant in Davie County. There are already a large number of these permits issued for our county. I'm wondering just how many a county of this size can support before we are completely saturated?

The people who depend on wells for their water should be alarmed and start looking for a better way of sewage disposal for the county.

I understand that the Shady Grove school had to hook to the county water system because their water supply was contaminated. Is county water available in your area?

There is a sewage plant in Coaleemee that is not operating efficiently for the lack of domestic waste water. This plant is capable of handling quite a lot more sewage than is being pumped into it. The plant would operate more efficiently and need less repairs, if more domestic waste was pumped into it. We need to think seriously about these problems and try for better ways to solve these problems not add to them.

Sincerely,
Eva R. Jurgensen

The governor's address will be aired live and in its entirety over the nine channels of the Center, and will pre-empt the instructional programming originally scheduled for that time.

It is anticipated that the address will last approximately 30 minutes.

During the speech, which will be delivered in the State Legislative Building in Raleigh before a joint session of the General Assembly, Gov. Martin is expected to touch upon highlights of his budget proposals.

Southwest Columbus, New Mexico: Come "step back" into American history by visiting a historic village of Columbus!

Columbus, population 450, is the home of the Pancho Villa Museum and also offers the tourist postal, banking, motel, automotive, and food services.

Here on March 9th, 1916, Pancho Villas began their historic raid on Columbus and the adjacent Camp Furlong.

Here at 4:30 in the moonless, black, early hours of March 9, 1916, a shot shattered the silence of Camp Furlong dropping Private Fred Griffin, the sentinel at Troop K-S headquarters. "Viva Villa" rang out in all parts of the camp and in adjacent Columbus as Pancho Villas villistas began their historic raid on this border outpost.

The first operational military air base was established at Columbus and there mechanized transportation was first used in a punitive expedition.

Because of its rich historical past, Columbus has been designated a national historic landmark by the National Park Service. Many of its old buildings still remain, the most photogenic one being the Southern Pacific Depot.

The 38-acre Pancho Villa State Park has an excellent desert botanical garden and offers one a panoramic view of northern Mexico from Villa Hill.

Some of Camp Furlong's original buildings, other relics of Pershing's expedition into Mexico, an outstanding desert botanical garden, and wide view of southern New Mexico and northern Mexico from Villa Hill, are features of the park. Modernistic metal picnic shelters, rest rooms with shower facilities, and elevated barbecue pits are available to visitors. Stone-lined driveways and foot trails lead

Recipes from the Southwest:

More about Clearwater, Florida: The Gulf coast of the Clearwater-St. Petersburg area offers eye-catching attractions. If you've ever wanted to journey to a South Sea Island, the enchanting Sea Island, the Tiki Gardens will whisk you away for a few hours, as you wander through over 12 acres of lush polynesian paradise.

Just south of the gardens in another kind of heaven, the Sun Coast sanctuary has been saving injured birds from death for years. The sprawling compound began casually in 1971 headed by Richard Heath. Since then, Heath and his devoted flock of colleagues have saved and released over 10,000 birds back into the skies. Hundreds more make themselves at home at the sanctuary. Some will never fly again, but can successfully mate and help propagate their species.

The sanctuary is a fascinating and heartening look at one man's dedication to helping Nature. It's free and open daily from 9 until dark.

By Barbara A. Minter
The peanut, also known as the goober here in the South, has been around for centuries. By the time Columbus discovered America, the peanut had made a name for itself as a food item from Mexico down through most of South America. Early explorers and traders carried the peanut with them to Africa and Asia where it became a popular commodity. From Africa, the peanut came to America and slowly became the hot item it is today.

Today, peanuts are a part of our national heritage. From visiting the circus, attending the fair, to watching a baseball game or a favorite movie, peanuts are a part of our life. One can buy the peanut in a variety of ways—shelled, roasted, salted, boiled, unsalted, and in the shell.

Besides being a great tasting snack, peanuts are filled with plenty of nutrition. Known as one of "Nature's Masterpieces," one will find thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, calcium, phosphorus, potassium, iron and magnesium in these legumes. For those who are health-conscious, it's nice to know that there is no cholesterol found in peanuts and they are rich in polyunsaturated fats.

Peanuts are a multimillion dollar commodity in North Carolina. During March, National Peanut Month, we at the N.C. Department of Agriculture salute the fine job our Peanut Industry is doing.

Bacon Cheese Logs
1 (1 lb.) package bacon
1 (3 oz.) package cream cheese, softened
½ cup finely chopped peanuts
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce few drops hot pepper sauce chili powder

Cook bacon until crisp; drain and crumble. Combine with remaining ingredients except chili powder. Chill ½ hour, then shape mixture into three logs about one inch in diameter. 3 tablespoons toasted coconut, optional Drain fruit, reserving juice; add enough water to juice to make 1 ¾ cups. Set fruit aside.

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water; stir in reserved juice and ginger ale. Chill until consistency of unbeaten egg white. Fold in fruit, and spoon into a lightly oiled 12 x 8 x 2-inch dish. Chill until firm. The topping is optional.

Beat whipping cream until soft peaks form; fold in salad dressing and marshmallows. Spread topping over salad; sprinkle with coconut, if desired. Chill well. Yield: 12 servings.

Concord United Methodist Church Dedicates New Addition

On Sunday, February 17, an overflowing crowd of worshippers filled the newly remodeled sanctuary of Concord United Methodist Church to participate in the Service of Dedication at the eleven o'clock worship hour.

Special guests, former pastors, members, visitors, and some of those responsible for the actual construction of the new addition, blended their voices in hymns of praise and thanksgiving. Taking part in the service were Bishop L. Bevel Jones of the Western North Carolina Conference, the Rev. Cecil H. Marcellus, Jr., Thomasville District Superintendent, and the Rev. Phillip B. Cole, minister of Concord United Methodist Church.

Bishop L. Bevel Jones presented the sermon that asked the question, "Who Are We?" Within his remarks he stated that United Methodist Church members were a people of worship, a people of fellowship, a people of outreach, and a people of hope. In closing, he challenged the members of Concord United Methodist Church to continue building character within its community and to set the pace for United Methodism in Davie County.

Following the sermon, Ed Welch, Chairman of the Trustees, and Lester "Pete" Dwiggins, Chairman of the Building Committee presented the new facilities to be dedicated to the glory of God and to the service of man. The new facilities include a sanctuary, three classrooms, a choir room, and a large meeting room.

Bishop Jones led the congregation in a liturgy to dedicate the facilities toward proper and sacred uses. The Rev. Cecil H. Marcellus, Jr., gave the Prayer of Dedication.

Following the symbolic burning of the mortgage and the benediction by the Rev. Phillip B. Cole, lunch was served in the fellowship hall. The noon meal was thoroughly enjoyed by all of those attending.

More than two hundred and fifty guests, visitors, and members attended the morning worship service. Among the special guests and visitors attending were the Rev. J. C. Lane, Rev. and Mrs. George Sherrill, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Corriher.

This is the third building to accommodate Concord Church members. The first one was built during the years of 1859-61 on land donated by Mrs. Mary C. Hodges and when finished it was dedicated by the Rev. W. H. Bobbitt, presiding Elder at that time.

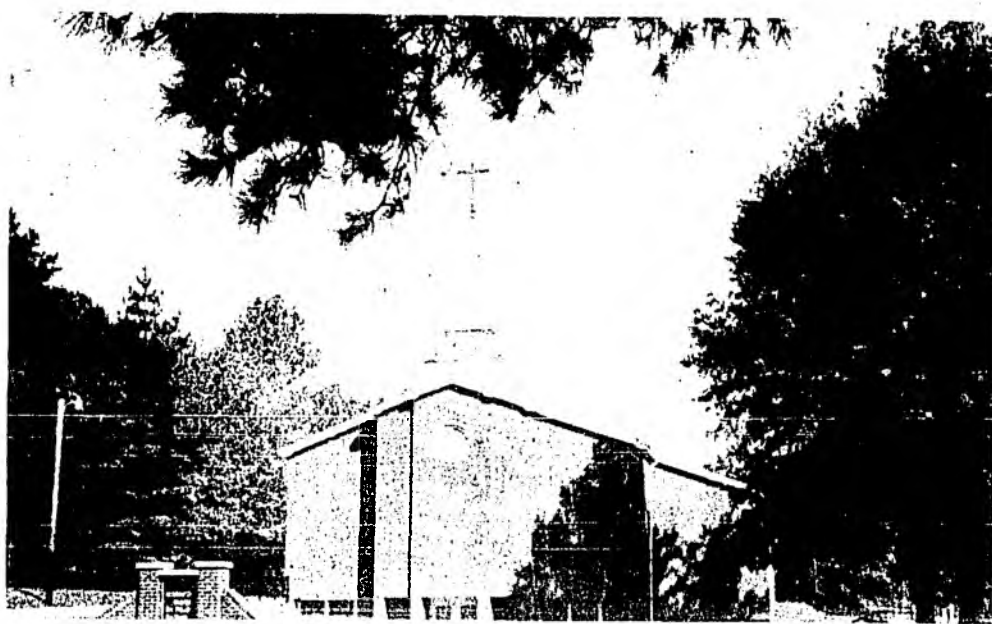

In 1946 the Rev. G. W. Fink appointed a building committee for the purpose of building a structure to replace the former historic building. Under the leadership of Rev. J. B. Fitzgerald, the actual construction of the new church took place. Members of the building committee for this project were Samuel Berrier, Frank Crofts, S. D. Daniel, W. R. Davis, Boone C. Foster, James B. Garwood, and Vann Swicegood.

In 1976, under the direction of Rev. Kenneth Eller, a building committee was appointed to study the feasibility of making some changes to the existing church facilities. At this time the services of Mr. Dennis Nicholson, of Nicholson Associates Architects in Durham, N.C., were secured to aid with the study. The designs presented were part of a three-phase building program.

In August of 1978 a groundbreaking ceremony was held. Construction of "Phase I" began in the Fall of 1978 with Hendrix and Corriher Construction Company of Mocksville, N.C., as contractor. Church school classes met for the first time in the new classrooms on Easter Sunday of 1979. The dedication service for this new addition to Concord Church was held on August 3, 1980.

"Phase I" construction consisted of four new classrooms, four bathrooms, a Narthex, and some remodeling in the sanctuary and the education building. Total cost of this construction was $121,000.00. To assist the congregation with this indebtedness, the Davie County Sub-District Mission Society donated $1,000.00 and $29,625.00 was received from Duke Endowment. Members of the building committee for "Phase I" were Lester "Pete" Dwiggins-Chairman, Belle D. Boger, James D. Boger, Bob Crofts, Henry Crofts, Homer Crofts, Judy F. Pratt, and Sid Smith.

After the dedication of "Phase I", members of the building committee expressed their desire to begin construction on "Phases II and III" to their new minister, Rev. Phillip B. Cole. Members of the building committee for "Phases II and III" were Lester "Pete" Dwiggins-Chairman, Belle D. Boger, Bob Crofts, Henry Crofts, Homer Crofts, Jane Crofts, Judy F. Pratt, Joe F. Shamel, and Sid Smith. They decided that the same architect and building contractor would be used for the construction of "Phases II and III".

In August of 1982 a groundbreaking ceremony was held. Construction began in the Fall of 1982 and a Service of Consecration was held in July of 1983. "Phases II and III" consisted of three new classrooms, a choir room and a large meeting room. The sanctuary was completely remodeled and expanded by the addition of eight new pews and a new altar area. Total cost of this construction was $285,000.00. The church received $7,000.00 from the Davie County Sub-District Mission Society, $2,832.00 from the Methodist Builders Club, and $54,000.00 from Duke Endowment. Due to the great love and dedication that the current membership has for its church, the final payment on the mortgage was made during December of 1984.

The members of Concord United Methodist Church greatly appreciate all of those who served on the building committees for the three-phase building program. Without their faithful service and loyal concern, the church facilities would not be what they are today. Members are especially thankful for the "watchful eyes" of Lester "Pete" Dwiggins-Chairman of the two building committees. All of his hard work will be cherished for a long time.

Members of Concord Church also value the spiritual guidance of the Rev. Phillip B. Cole during the building program. He now joins a long list of ministers who have faithfully served Concord Church in its spiritual growth.

The dedicated efforts of all the church members cannot be overlooked. Without their great love and support for their church, Concord's debt would not have been paid. The present church membership is 167. Though small in number, there continues to be a spirit of Christian goodwill and fellowship that should help the church to continue its growth for many years to come.

Many gifts of money, time, prayer, patience, and love went into the building of Concord Church. The following is a list of special gifts given to the church during the three-phase building program:

Stained Glass Windows in memory of Earl Smith and Kelly Call by Cicero "Sid" and Frances Smith

A Communion Rail in honor of Henry and Katherine Crofts by their children

A Pew in memory of Frank Crofts and in honor of Nettie Crofts by their children

A Pew in memory of S. D. and Annie Martin Daniel by John and Dot Walker

A Pew in honor of Wade and Alice Nail by Mildred Seamon

The Cross and Retable by the United Methodist Men

A Wurlitzer Chapel Piano in honor of J. N. and Peggy Tutterow by the Joe Shamel Family and an Allen Dital Computer Organ in memory of James D. Boger by Belle D. Boger

Another great event in the history of Concord Church has taken place due to the very special members of the church. They now have a special "house" to worship in and an even more important reason to help and serve others.

(The members of Concord Church truly appreciate the fine work that Mrs. Otta Davis and Mrs. Mildred Seamon have done in compiling the history of the church. Special thanks is extended to them for furnishing the afore-mentioned pertinent historical facts relating to the history of Concord United Methodist Church.)

Volunteer Firemen's News

Davie County fire departments have responded to numerous brush fires in the past month. Most of these fires were caused by burning trash. A few simple rules should be kept in mind before burning materials outside.

1. Obtain a burning permit if required.
  2. Do not burn in dry weather.
  3. Do not burn if there is any wind.
  4. Have rakes and/or water available should the fire start to spread beyond the burn area.
  5. If the fire does get out of control, call fire control immediately (634-2211).
- These simple rules will prevent property damage and assist the local fire department in fire prevention.

Dirt That Up And Moved Leaves Gullibility Gap

By Mercer Cross
National Geographic News Service

Among aficionados of oddball natural occurrences, it's called the "Cookie-cutter" puzzle.

The term refers to a mysterious hole in the ground that was discovered last October in northwest Washington state, on the Colville Indian Reservation, not far from the Grand Coulee Dam.

A chunk of earth 10 feet long, 7 feet wide, and 18 inches to 2 feet deep, weighing at least a couple of tons, was uprooted from a depression in a wheat field. It apparently arced through the air, rotating slightly en route, and landed virtually intact 73 feet away.

Since then, winter storms have blanketed the hole with snow. Cows grazing in the field have trampled down the edges.

Nobody has figured out how or why the dirt took flight. Several scientists have examined the divot and come away scratching their heads. Investigators of unidentified-flying-objects (UFO) phenomena have expressed interest.

Okanogan County farmers Rick and Pete Timm, who found the displaced dirt, notified Don Aubertin, director of mining on the Indian reservation. He suspected a meteorite fragment. A geologist hired by the reservation took a look and said no.

"There was no sign of impact," Aubertin told a newspaper reporter in November, when the story came to public attention. "The hole was not a crater. It has vertical walls and a fairly flat bottom. It was almost as though it had been cut out with a giant cookie cutter."

Theories abound. One is that an earthquake caused the freakish upheaval. A quake with a 3.0 rating on the Richter scale, its epicenter some 20 miles from the hole, had rattled the area nine days before the Timm brothers' discovery.

Stephen D. Malone, a University of Washington earthquake expert, discounts that possibility as "beyond the incredible." A quake that small, he explains, lacks the power to boost a heavy patch of turf out of the ground.

"A hoax, I think, is a possibility," Malone says. So do some other scientists how have not inspected the site.

Others say they don't see how a hoax could have been perpetrated in the field, situated in a remote area sprinkled with massive boulders that local residents call "haystack rocks."

For one thing, no signs of human intrusion—no wheel tracks, footprints, or evidence of machinery—were found.

Robert L. Schuster, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., examined the puzzling hole. He leans toward the theory that an underground methane gas explosion may have popped the earth out.

"I'm not ruling out the earthquake, myself," says Greg Behrens, a geologist with the federal Bureau of Reclamation at Grand Coulee Dam. Behrens, who probably has spent more time studying the riddle than anyone else, thinks the methane theory is improbable.

Nevertheless, in November he sent soil samples to the bureau's regional office in Boise, Idaho, for analysis. No lab test had been conducted by February; low priority and a shortage of staff were given as reasons. The government plans no further investigations.

The quake could have generated concentric surface seismic waves, Behrens says. "Trouble is," he wrote John P. Timmerman, chairman and treasurer of the Center for UFO Studies, in December, "that anything this large has neither been witnessed nor monitored during a seismic event."

In his letter to Timmerman, Behrens cited other potential natural causes of the so-far inexplicable uplifting: a "freak tornado" or a "complex freezing action" combined with strong winds. But, he wryly noted, the weather was warm when the incident is supposed to have occurred.

Behrens went on to mention several conceivable man-made causes, among them an excavation dug by an enormous crane or an airborne pickup of the earth by a helicopter.

"Man has done more spectacular things," Behrens concluded. "But the cost would be high and the profit nil."

The cookie-cutter mystery "doesn't hold up as a very strong case for out field of study," says Timmerman, a saving-and-loan executive in Lima, Ohio. But, he adds, "It's a little hard to walk away from something like this, because it's so tantalizing. It's very suggestive."

One scientist who is particularly tantalized by the Washington incident is Bruce N. Kaliser, hazards geologist for the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey.

In 1978, on an inspection trip following a 3.5 earthquake in northern Utah, he came upon a cross-shaped depression 14 feet in diameter. The "only possible explanation" for it, Kaliser concluded, was "an object dropped from an aircraft," possibly a large chunk of ice.

Holes in our planet almost never go unexplained. Most common are sinkholes, the kind that occasionally make headlines with cave-ins that swallow buildings, cars, and sometimes people. Such subsidence, as it is called, usually occurs in the 15 percent of the United States that overlies soluble limestone that erodes underground, from causes both natural and man-made.

Nobody can say with certainty whether an answer to the enigma will ever be found. "It's the most bizarre thing I ever saw," says Don Aubertin.

"There are just enough unknowns about this case to have it hanging in the air, so to speak," says Timmerman.

Geologists examine the "jigsaw puzzle" chunk of earth in northwestern Washington. The multi-ton divot was mysteriously lifted from the hole in the foreground and deposited virtually intact 73 feet away. Theories are plentiful, but scientists have not found an explanation. No signs of human activity were evident at the site when it was discovered in October 1984. Photo was taken before snow covered the hole and cattle trampled its edges.

A steer for a pet? No, four local teenage girls are raising steers for market. Kerri Wilson gives hers a friendly pet as Laura Phillips, Katherine Meadows and Tricia Reilly await their turn.

Raising a market steer seems an unlikely job for teenage girls, but four local teenagers are doing just that. Each girl purchased a steer for $400, hopes to sell it at a profit this spring. Kerri Wilson (right) shows her steer named Yogi to Katherine Meadows, who is also raising a steer for sale. Extension livestock agent, John Hall (background) admits that this is an unusual task for a girl.

Raising Market Steers; Unusual Job For Girls

By Kathy Tomlinson

What would the typical 16-year-old girl buy with $400?

(A) A new wardrobe complete with all designer jeans labels.

(B) Lots and lots of jewelry, specially necklaces and dangling earrings.

(C) A complete collection of the most current top 40 hits.

(D) A feeder calf.

Most would instinctively invest in clothes, jewelry and records in that order of priority. However, four Davie County teenage girls invested $400 each in individual feeder calves which they hope to sell at a profit this spring.

Does it sound unusual? Well, maybe so. But not for four girls who don't mind investing time and money in a project which could make a few dollars for them in the end.

The four, Katherine Meadows, Tricia Reilly, Kerri Wilson, and Laura Phillips, are all avid 4-H'ers who plan to pursue careers as veterinarians following high school graduation.

Even local extension livestock agent, John Hall, and extension 4-H agent, Dale Safrin, admit that it is rather unusual for girls to raise and sell market steers. However, they agree that these four girls are devoted when it comes to properly feeding and caring for their market steers, and they expect each to make a strong showing at the Northwest Junior Livestock Show and Sale this June in Winston-Salem.

But raising a market steer takes time and money, efforts for which the girls hope they will be reimbursed when the gavel sounds on the auction block.

In addition to spending $400 on the initial purchase of a 500 pound feeder calf, each girl will spend another $400 feeding it.

Hall estimates that each of the four market steers will weigh an average of 1200 to 1300 pounds when the sale is held. Each steer eats about 20 pounds of a corn, soybean mixture per day with the average feed cost at about $8 per 100 pounds.

The girls are responsible for all feeding and grooming of the animals, quite a task for four girls who probably each don't weigh much more than a 100 pound sack of feed.

"It's hard to gain the respect of an 1100 pound steer," laughed Tricia Reilly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Reilly of Rt. 1, Mocksville. She admits that it took some ingenuity on her part to halter break her steer and teach it who is the boss.

"I had to tie a rope to the tractor and pull him around a few times before he realized that I was, indeed, in charge," she said.

The objective to raising a market steer, is to provide optimal nutrition so that the steer will gain the maximum amount of weight possible during a given period of time. This includes daily records of the amount of food each is fed compared to actual weight gain. Each of the four animals is weighed at regular intervals to determine if rations are satisfactory for proper weight gain.

There are also medical records to be kept on each animal including vaccinations, when the animals were wormed, and the removal of horns if desired.

In addition, as 4-H'ers and members of the newly formed livestock team, the girls must groom and train the animals for showing.

A big, hulky steer may not seem the ideal pet, but the girls admit they can't help becoming attached to them.

Katherine Meadows decided to name her steer a seemingly un-caring "302" due to a previous experience. "I thought that if I named him something like 302 I wouldn't become so attached," she said, "especially after my experience with a market lamb."

"It seems that Katherine became so attached to the lamb that she couldn't bring herself to take it to market. "I donated it to the Nature Science Center," she laughed. "I simply couldn't bear the thoughts of it winding up on someone's dinner table."

She's decided to be "tough" where 302 is concerned. "He will go to market," she said.

The girls have no assurance of making money or even breaking even when the animals go to sale. At the Northwest Livestock Show and Sale, the girls will at least receive the going price of 60 cents a pound, which wouldn't cover purchase of the animal and cost of feeding it.

"That's why it's so important to secure sponsors who are willing to bid more than the 60 cent minimum," said Kerri Wilson, who made a slight profit on her last market steer. "It will be quality beef, and we're all hoping to at least make a small profit at the sale."

With only a few months to go, the girls will continue monitoring food intake and weight gain. They realize they probably won't get rich, but the knowledge and experience they've gained will prove invaluable.

Tricia Reilly, whose steer is a Santa Gertrudis noted for its good, lean muscling, carefully weighs the animal's daily food intake. Each steer eats about 20 pounds of corn, soy mixture each day.

Laura Phillips admits that the girls have had problems leaching the animals just who the bosses are. Her size, compared to that of the steer is an adequate comparison. "But they're really just big babies," she said.

Each girl is required to keep growth charts on their steers to document weight gain as compared to actual food intake. Kerri Wilson said it takes about two hours a day to care for her 1100 pound steer, Yogi.

South Davie Jayvee Girls Are 14-0

By T.J. Eanes

South Davie's jayvee girls basketball team finished the season as conference champs with a record of 14-0. The Tigers won 2 games last week, defeating Trinity 32-24 and Northeast 39-29. Rebounding and a scrappy defense has been a key to South's victories this season.

South defeated Trinity 32-23 behind Shawn Smoots' 19 points and 5 steals. Shannon Jordan added 8 points and played a tough defensive game for the Tigers. Angie Potts had 4 points, 15 rebounds and 1 blocked shot, and Jenny Stevenson had 11 rebounds, 1 point and 2 blocked shots.

At the end of the first half South was ahead 12-8 before Trinity came back to make the score 19-18 in favor of South at the end of the third quarter. Shawn Smoot started hitting from the outside and South started to rebound and steal to win 32-24.

In their last regular season game South defeated Northeast 39-29 to give Coach Donna Ireland her first undefeated team and the conference championship. Rebounding was the key as South had 53 team rebounds.

The Tigers were led by Shawn Smoot with 19 points and 5 blocked shots. Angie Potts had a fine game with 13 points and 18 rebounds. Shannon Jordan had 5 points and Jenny Stevenson had a good day rebounding with 11 and 1 blocked shot. Beth Mashburn added 2 points and 10 rebounds.

Jill Amos, a basketball star at Davie County High School and UNC-Wilmington between 1976 and 1984 will tour internationally with an Athletes In Action team this summer.

"Playing for Athletes in Action will combine my two loves-sharing the love of God and playing basketball," Amos said.

An All-State guard for the War Eagles, Amos went on to become the first player ever to score over 1,000 points at UNC-Wilmington. She is currently working in the Academic Support Services Office at the University of South Carolina, while earning a master's degree in health and physical education.

Amos serves as a graduate assistant coach for the Lady Gamecock basketball team.

To be able to participate in the athletic ministry organized by the Campus Crusade for Christ, Amos will have to raise $3,600 from individual supporters so she can meet her share of the team's expenses. The amount must be raised by May 15, a few weeks prior to the beginning of AIA training camp in Hawaii or California.

"The opportunity to serve God with the talents He has given me by playing basketball overseas in Australia, the South Pacific and Latin American is truly a blessing," Amos said. "It's difficult to put into words how wonderfully God has blessed my life and this opportunity is just one more of the many blessings."

The 23-year-old daughter of Bob and Georgia Amos of Cooleemee will bring 13 years of basketball experience to the AIA team. Besides being a basketball standout, Jill was a superlative tennis player at both the high school and college level, playing number one position throughout her career.

Davie Girls Meet Kannapolis Thursday Night In District 5 Basketball Tournament

Girls Nosed Out In Finals Of NPC Tourney 41-39

The Davie High Girls basketball team will meet Kannapolis Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the District Five tournament being played in the South Rowan High School gym.

Coach Bill Peeler's lassies earned the district tournament berth through their stellar play in the North Piedmont Conference Tournament in which they went to the finals losing only two points to North Davidson.

Davie, after a sixth-place finish during the regular season, upset third seeded West Rowan and second seeded Thomasville to get to the finals.

The local girls defeated West Rowan 46-37 last Thursday night to earn a spot in the finals. This marked the sixth time in seven years that Davie has reached the finals. Davie was on the championship five of those times.

In the tournament finals last Friday night, Davie lost to the regular season champion North Davidson team 41-39, when North's Debbie Swicegood hit crucial free throws in the closing minutes to lead her team to victory.

Despite a sub-par shooting performance by Swicegood, North Davidson Coach Rick Phelps had no doubts about turning to the league's leading scorer in the closing minutes.

"I kept putting the ball in Debbie's hands," he said. "She didn't shoot particularly well from the field, but she's a clutch player."

Swicegood who was named the tournament's most valuable player, keyed a fourth-quarter rally that saw the Black Knights rebound from a seven-point deficit. Davie's Michelle Deal hit two free throws with 7:06 remaining to put the War Eagles in front 37-29.

But Davie committed several consecutive turnovers, and North Davidson took advantage. Shelly Slabach hit an inside shot to make the score 36-31. Then hit two free throws at the 4:29 mark to pull the Black Knights within one.

Nine seconds later Swicegood made two more foul shots, and North Davidson led 37-36. Davie missed a shot, Swicegood rebounded and the Knights called on their delay offense. North ran the clock to 2:38 left in the game, then Swicegood hit two free throws to give the team a three-point lead.

Davie then broke scoreless stretch of nearly five minutes on a basket by Sandy Stroud. Both teams added a single free throw, leaving North with a 40-39 advantage heading into the final minute.

The War Eagles, after rebounding a missing free throw, had a chance to take the lead but missed an outside shot. The ball fell out-of-bounds and was awarded to North Davidson.

Swicegood then made one free throw with 15 seconds left to set the final margin. Davie turned over the ball on its next possession, ending its chances for a tie. After Swicegood missed two foul shots with seven seconds remaining, both teams battled for the rebound as the time expired.

"I am extremely proud of them," Davie Coach Bill Peeler said. The War Eagles, now 8-17, also gained a berth in the District 5 tournament next week at South Rowan.

Four Davie players scored eight points, including Deal, Tammy Pulliam, Selena Fowler and Carla Presnell.

South Davie Girls Win Tournament

By T.J. Eanes
South Davie's jayvee girls won the Invitational Tournament at South Davie this weekend. On Friday South defeated Troutman 34-28 to advance to Saturday's championship game. They then defeated a tough Mooresville team 44-32 to win the championship. Beth Mashburn, Angie Potts, Shannon Jordan and Shawn Smoot were all named to the 10-girl All-Tournament team.

Against Troutman South was led by Shawn Smoot with 18 points, 5 steals and 1 blocked shot. Shannon Jordan had 8 points and Jenny Stevenson had a good defensive game with 10 rebounds and 5 steals. Angie Potts and Beth Mashburn each had 4 points but Potts and 13 rebounds and 1 block while Mashburn had 12 rebounds and 3 steals.

In the championship game South came out with good defense and rebounding to lead 13-2 at the end of the first quarter and a 23-8 halftime lead. In the third quarter both teams played even and South was ahead 31-17 before Mooresville came back and was forced to foul near the end. South was 9-17 from the foul line in the fourth quarter and won 44-32.

The Tigers were led in scoring by Shannon Jordan with 13 points and she shot 50 percent from the field and 70 percent from the line. Beth Mashburn scored 10 points and had 9 rebounds. She was 4-4 from the line with 8 of her points in the second half.

Angie Potts had a fine game with 9 points, 16 rebounds, 5 steals and 1 blocked shot. Shawn Smoot scored 6 points, had 7 steals, 5 rebounds and 2 blocked shots before getting hurt. Gail Bohannon came off the bench to add 4 points and 7 rebounds and Janice Powell added 2 points. Against a much taller team South had 44 rebounds and 5 blocked shots. South Davie finished the season undefeated with a 16-0 record.

ACC INSIDE STUFF

ACC Tournament: Who Cares?

Who's going to win the ACC Tournament? That is the question everyone is already asking, even though it isn't yet certain who will win the regular season.

While reporters and analysts give you hundreds of reasons and commentaries during the next week, a better question might be, "Who cares?"

I ask that question, not sarcastically. Like all of you, I am a big ACC fan. I'm looking forward to going to Atlanta and being a minor part of that super-charged ACC atmosphere. And I will be very interested in each of the games. In fact, for the first time in years—even though coaches have been saying this eternally—anyone can beat anyone. There are reasons why each team can win. Duke has that great defense, the guards that cannot be pressured, and Mark Alarie. Georgia Tech has the big front line and Mark Price. N.C. State has depth, experienced game breakers Spud Webb and Nate McMillan, and the great strength of Lorenzo Charles. North Carolina has the big people inside, the most consistent point guard, and the wizardry of Dean Smith. And Maryland has speed, size, and Len Bias.

But there are reasons, too, who no team can win three straight ACC games. Lorenzo Charles will run out of gas for State, or the Wolfpack will start bombing from outside. Duke will be impatient on offense. Georgia Tech will get players in foul trouble. Carolina will get a run of needless turnovers. And Maryland...has Lefty Driesell.

The point is, this year's ACC races, both the regular season and the Tournament, are wars of attrition—someone will win because someone has to. But each of the teams has limitations—precisely the reason the regular season may end in a three-way tie between five-time losers.

So, who's going to win the Tournament? The reason I say "Who cares?" is that a week later it won't matter at all. Let me take that a step further with a prediction.

A team that loses in the first round of the ACC Tournament will go farther in the NCAA playoffs than the winner of the ACC Tournament.

There are several reasons why I think this. A first round loser will have longer to rest before NCAA competition, they'll have something to prove, the pressure will be off, and they'll be enthusiastic about the opportunity.

The winner? They'll have some sense of anti-climax, a factor which has long been a subject of debate around the ACC. Does the pressure of the ACC tournament sap the winner's energy and spirit to such an extent that performance suffers in the NCAA playoffs? It is difficult to answer that conclusively—especially now that nearly all the conferences have tournaments. Nevertheless, for teams like Duke and Georgia Tech—who don't have particularly strong benches—it is difficult to imagine them winning three ACC tournament games and then still having the stamina and drive to go on and win in the NCAA's.

It has been done, of course. But it's not easy. Which is why I think fans of a first round loser—assuming it's one of the top five teams—shouldn't get all upset. Your team may actually have a better chance in the NCAA's by losing. That seems strange, when you consider what factors momentum and "peaking at the right time" are supposed to be. But in this case, this year, I don't think a team will pick up momentum by winning the ACC.

Whether they do or not, you have to realize, in these times of 64 NCAA bids, the ACC Tournament doesn't have near the pressure associated with it that it used to when only the winner went on.

This year's ACC Tournament is mostly for Virginia, Wake Forest, and Clemson—three teams that can salvage their season and an NCAA bid by reaching the finals. For the rest of the teams, it's a grand exhibition with a definite sense about it that the best is yet to come.

Third Graders Present 'Secrets Of A Super Smile' At School

Third graders at Mocksville Elementary School presented the play "Secrets of a Super Smile" to fellow students in three performances this week as part of the school's observance of National Dental Health Month.

Twenty-six students in Mrs. Elizabeth Martin's class participated in the play which was presented at the school Monday through Wednesday.

The setting for the play is a third grade classroom. Inspector Strong of the Friendly Dental Investigators (FDI) arrives with two of his FDI Agents to check out the "Class Smile." They're visiting schools across the country on behalf of the Smile Foundation, to make a Super Smile of America Award.

In the course of its examination, the FDI team uses special equipment to look deep inside the teeth. They suspect a problem in one molar and discover that Acid Amy and Acid Andy, Dental Double Agents, have been at work dissolving the enamel. This could lead eventually to a cavity.

Through the use of simulated, greatly magnified enamel rods (which students make), the audience watches mouth minerals begin to rebuild the dissolved enamel with help of flouride. Action involves the alternate work of acid versus mouth minerals and flouride.

As the activity of dissolving and rebuilding enamel proceeds, Inspector Strong and his two FDI Agents explain (with the help of Dental Billboards) what people can do to reverse the decay process and keep healthy teeth for a lifetime. Three actions are involved: 1) daily flossing and brushing with an effective flouride toothpaste; 2) eating healthful non-sugary snacks and 3) going for regular dental checkups.

In the last scene of the play, six months time has elapsed since the initial visit of the FDI. The FDI team returns, announces that Secret Agents have kept tabs on the dental health of the class, reviews the dental health rules, then presents the class with the Super Smile Award, evidence that students have been practicing good dental health habits.

Third graders at Mocksville Elementary School explain the "Secrets to a Super Smile" during presentation of a school play this week. Will Dwiggins, Melvin Gaither and Shelly Foote, demonstrate how good dental habits can result in a "Super Smile" award.

Area Urologists Have New Method Of Treatment For Kidney Stones

Citing a need to prevent over 1,000 Piedmont North Carolina residents from having to undergo surgery for kidney stones this year, Piedmont Stone Center Associates has petitioned North Carolina's Department of Human Resources to permit the group to purchase an innovative treatment machine known as a "kidney stone buster" for operation on an outpatient basis.

The announcement was made by a spokesman for the Piedmont Stone Center Associates, a partnership of 17 urologists from High Point, Lenior, Lexington, Statesville and Winston-Salem. Dr. Fred Howell of Winston-Salem said, "The kidney stone buster means treatment can be less costly, more convenient and without the discomfort associated with major surgery. We will be able to use shock waves to pulverize the kidney stone in the Center's office and then let the patient go home that day. Current major surgical treatment requires around six days hospitalization and two to four weeks of home recuperation."

The Center's urologists have made arrangements, subject to state approval, to acquire a $1.6 million Extracorporeal Shock Wave Lithotripter which is manufactured by its inventor in Germany. The Center's machine would become the ninth stone buster installed in the United States since the machine gained approval by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in December 1984. At present there is no machine in the Carolinas.

The Area II Health Systems Agency last year overwhelmingly recommended a Certificate of Need for the Piedmont urologists, but this approval was denied by the Facility Services Division of the Department of Human Resources in Raleigh. Prior to federal approval of the Lithotripter in December, hospitalization was required during its use in this country. "But now," Dr. Howell said, "experience with the Lithotripter in other locations in the United States clearly indicates that only in rare cases can the patients be treated in the office and not go back home to resume their normal pursuits."

Dr. Fred Reid, President of the Group, said that according to urological studies, Piedmont North Carolina has one of the highest incidence rates for kidney stones in the country-between 1.6 and 2.9 per thousand residents each year. That means in the upper Piedmont region with over two million residents, over 4,000 people will suffer from kidney stones in 1985, and over a fourth of them will require surgery to remove the stones if a Lithotripter is not available. "The stone buster is a very cost effective alternative to surgery," said Dr. Reid.

He added, "In addition to treating patients we are willing to make available all research and educational opportunities to health care institutions in the region."

The physician add, "We are dedicated to minimizing pain and sufferings in our patients. At the same time, we want to do this at the least possible cost to the patient with the least disruption to the patient's normal life."

Dr. Fred Howell said the urologists hope to get an early ruling from the state on the request to set up an outpatient center to treat kidney stones. He said, "The sooner they give us the o.k., the sooner our neighbors in the area will have a cost effective, less painful alternative to hospitalization for kidney stones."

Only two Presidents of the U.S. - James K. Polk and Woodrow Wilson - have been elected without winning the vote of their home state.

"Planning Your Estate" Seminars Scheduled

If you're like the majority of North Carolinians, you may not have written a will. If you have a will, it may be out of date and may not give adequate protection against death taxes.
On Thursday, March 7, and Thursday, March 14, the Agricultural Extension Service will sponsor a seminar on "Planning Your Estate". Both sessions will begin at 7:00 p.m. in the County Office Building Auditorium, according to Nancy Hartman, Home Economics Extension Agent.
Mrs. Hartman says that Henry P. VanHoy, local attorney, and R.L. Roycroft, trust officer with Central Carolina will be guest speakers.

The seminar will cover how to begin planning your estate, wills, handling financial affairs after a death, trusts and death taxes.
Mrs. Hartman adds "Estate Planning is the process of developing a program for effective management, enjoyment, and disposition of property at the least possible tax cost. Making a will is a crucial part of Estate Planning but it includes more." Estate Planning is for everyone. Not just the elderly or rich. If you let time run out on you and do not plan your estate, your family will have to live with that choice.
Plan now to attend Extension's Planning Your Estate Seminar.

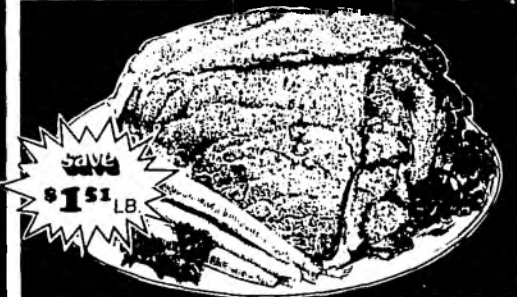

Questions or comments may be made to Nancy Hartman at 634-6227. Programs sponsored by the Davie County Agricultural Extension Service are open to all persons regardless of race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, or handicap.

North Davie Junior High Students Hold First Annual Science Fair

Wendy Keuper was named ninth grade winner for her project in North Davie Junior High's first annual science fair. Her project was entitled "Memory-What Conditions Trigger the Best Memory Recall?"

Close to 400 North Davie Junior High students tested various scientific principles during the school's first annual Science Fair last week.

Students teamed up to create a total of 196 entries, spending an average of three weeks on each project. The event will be held annually to promote creativity through scientific research and experimentation.

Projects were judged with the top ten making oral presentations for judging last Monday night during the school's P.T.S.O. meeting. Entries were judged on the basis of originality, use of scientific method, validity of information, visual appearance and evidence of knowledge gained.

Wendy Keuper was named ninth grade first place winner for her entry entitled "Memory-What Conditions Triggers Best Memory Recall."

During her experiment, Miss Keuper presented 20 words, listed in various orders to approximately 179 North Davie students. After this testing, she compiled students' individual responses to determine which list was the easiest overall to memorize.

She is the daughter of Gary and Sharon Keuper of Bermuda Run. Testing the relative heating value of different types of wood won a first place award for Todd Gullidge and Robert Ligon, both eighth graders at North Davie.

In their experiment various types of wood were burned during a lime test. A pan of water was placed atop the burning wood with the maximum air and water temperatures carefully monitored during the timed burning. The two used the weight of the ashes and the air and water temperatures to compute how much energy (BTU's) was transferred from each type of wood to the water.

Gullidge is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Todd Gullidge of Bermuda Run.

Ligon is the son of David and Ellen Ligon of Rt. 6, Mocksville.

Lisa Lanier, a seventh grader at North Davie, was named first place winner for her experiment on the permeability of eggs in various solutions.

During her testing, Lisa soaked whole eggs in various solutions including coke, sugar, food coloring, chlorine, salt water, coffee and tap water for one week.

The eggs were then cracked to reveal how osmosis occurs through egg membranes, thus changing the appearance, texture and color of the raw egg. Each egg was photographed as record of osmosis with results charted to prove her point.

Lisa is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ricky Lanier of Rt. 2, Mocksville.

Each of the first place winners received $20 from the North Davie

P.T.S.O.

Several students received $10 cash prizes as second place winners. They are Matt Mecham, Angie Newsome, Robert Edwards and Rodney Cline.

Third place winners receiving cash awards of $5 each were Kim York, Melissa Sofley, Danny Hall, Lee Hendrix, Craig Cartner and Blake Livengood.

A STUDY OF THE EFFECTIVENESS OF A GROWTH STIMULANT IMPLANT IN FEEDER CALVES

Kim Hattaway and Lisa Sherrill conducted experiments to determine why plants are green. As ninth grade, first place winners, the two determined and demonstrated how light affects the production of chlorophyll.

Elizabeth Crenshaw and Becky Frank, eighth graders at South Davie Junior High, teamed up to determine if today's youth are out of shape. Their efforts got them a first place win in the school's third annual science fair last week. (Photos by Robin Fergusson)

John Sharp, seventh grade winner in South Davie's science fair, purchased two calves and implanted one with a growth stimulant. After three months, he said he saw no significant increase in growth due to the implant. He plans to continue his experiment and enter the results in next year's science fair.

South Davie Junior High School

Scientific Principles Are Tested

Approximately 300 students at South Davie Junior High School tested various scientific principles during the school's third annual Science Fair last week.

Lorene Markland, science teacher and program chairman, said that the 300 students paired off to create a total of 150 entries. Students spent approximately three weeks preparing for the event which promotes creativity through scientific research and experimentation.

Projects were judged last Thursday, with the top ten making oral presentations for judging Thursday night. Entries were judged on the basis originality, use of scientific method, validity of information, visual appearance and evidence of knowledge gained.

Three first, second and third place winners were named following the oral presentation and presented cash awards by the South Davie P.T.S.O.

Blue Ribbon winners at South Davie included Elizabeth Crenshaw, Becky Frank, Kim Hattaway, Lisa Sherrill and John Sharp. Each was awarded $20.

Elizabeth Crenshaw and Becky Frank both eighth graders, teamed up to determine if students at South Davie get enough exercise. The two passed out 450 surveys questioning students about personal exercise habits. A total of 375 surveys were returned with the girls tabulating results to determine the average amount of exercise completed daily by students.

The girls then tested 22 South Davie athletes and 22 non athletes to determine their endurance and overall physical condition through guidelines established in the Harvard Step Test. Their conclusion was that the athletes were only slightly more physically fit than South Davie's non athletes.

Elizabeth is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crenshaw of Park Avenue.

Becky is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Frank of Garden Valley. Kim Hattaway and Lisa Sherrill, also first place winners, teamed up to determine why plants are green, and the effects of light on the production of chlorophyll.

The girls closely monitored light received by individual plants during a four week period. At the end of each week, leaves were boiled in alcohol to remove the chlorophyll, showing that the longer a plant is subjected to light the more chlorophyll it produces.

Lisa is the daughter of Judy and Alec Sherrill of Route 1, Mocksville. Kim is the daughter of Barbara and Dick Hattaway of 450 Ridgeview Drive. Both girls are ninth grade students at South Davie.

John Sharp, a seventh grader, won a first place award for testing the impact of growth implants on feeder calves.

Sharp purchased two calves three months ago, implanting one with a growth stimulant. The cows were weighed and photographed periodically to monitor growth. However, at the end of a three month period, Sharpe said he determined no significant increase in growth due to the implant. He said he plans to continue his testing through the year and submit the results during the school's fourth annual science fair next year.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Sharp of Rt. 3, Mocksville. Twelve other students were named cash recipients for their entries in the science fair.

Students awarded $15 prizes are Tammy Overcash, Kim Salyer, Beth Dwiggin, Scott Kollins and Chris Callison.

Students winning $5 cash prizes included Shellie Plott, Katie Hartness, Dottie Sigmon, Sarah Odium, Hank Jones, Wynn Welch and Bobby Bowers.

Numerous students were presented ribbons for second, third, and fourth place wins. Second place prize winners included Angela Hinson, Angie Potts, Greg Miller, Dean Humphrey, Melinda Frye, Torrie Evans, Michelle Hendrix, Yvonne Cosentino, Tricia Cook, Susan Carter, Brent Foster, Tracy Angell, Lisa King and Jay Johnstone.

Third place prize winners were Natalie Godwin, Timika Brooks, Amy Snyder, April Green, David Brown, Marc Holcomb, Lori Gifford, Lori Brannock, Kim Stine, Susan Boger, Lori Carter, Celest Carter, Amy Cook, Jimmy Green, Selena Lewis, Regina Carson, Emily James and Jennifer Anderson.

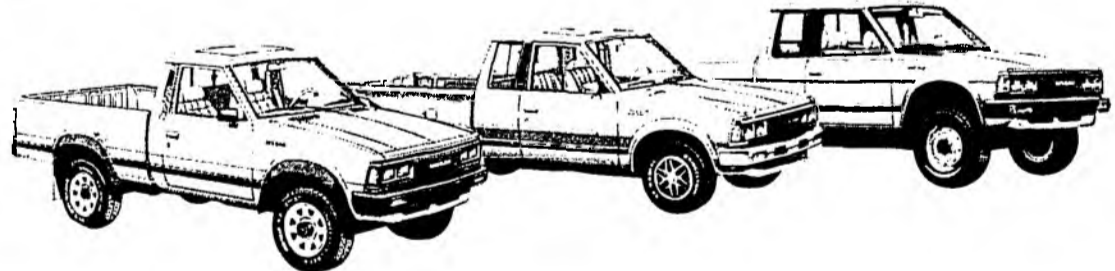

Fourth place winners included Chad Forrest, Matt Barnhardt, Ricky Younts, Chris Tuek, Garth Bishop, Eddie Ijames, Brian Mashburn, Tommy Beaver, April Lankford, Anita Spry, Carolyn Rattledge, Rodney Cassidy, Clint Junker, Carole McDaniel, Jody Everette and Scott Boger.

GOD'S FIVE MINUTES

"There is a time for everything...." - Ecclesiastes 3:1, The Living Bible

HE SAW ETERNAL LIFE

"Be of good cheer!" Jesus shouted to His followers, "I have overcome the world!" (John 16:33) He spoke the words almost in the faces of the men who came to kill Him. "Don't worry," He seemed to philosophize, "things could be worse."

But of course, that was not what He "seemed" to say. What He said was "Don't worry. I know what is beyond the cross. I AM the way, the truth, and the life. I AM the Son of God"

Straightaway a flame was kindled in the souls of His followers. They KNEW He was what He said He was. That he had looked beyond the tomb and had seen eternal life. That He would come again to receive them unto Himself.

They knew! That, friend, is the wisdom for which you should pray every day. "That they may know me, the only Son of my Father."

Alcohol Info Report

by Bill Weant

Think about these facts concerning alcoholism:

- Alcoholism is ranked among the first three of our nation's health problems.
- Alcoholism accounts for 40 percent of all admissions of mental hospitals.
- There are over 100,000 deaths each year in the United States because of alcohol abuse.
- Alcoholism is a progressive illness and unless it is treated, will cause insanity and death.
- Alcohol is the most abused drug in the United States.
- Alcohol is involved in over 50 percent of all arrests.
- Problem drinkers are increasing at the rate of 500,000 a year.
- Twenty to fifty percent of general hospital beds are occupied by people whose illness is associated with alcohol abuse.
- No one ever takes a drink with the intention of becoming an alcoholic.

A potential alcoholic may be defined as anyone whose use of alcohol causes difficulty in any area of life...family, social, employment, or health. As with any illness, early treatment greatly aids recovery, and counseling will be helpful to the drinker and to other members of the family.

When anyone contacts Alcoholism Services at Tri-County Mental Health, the person will be given assistance in evaluating the extent of the abuse problem and will be provided information on ways to deal with the situation.

If you sometimes wonder if maybe you have a drinking problem, you probably do have an alcohol abuse problem. If alcoholism is a part of your life or the life of someone you love, remember that life can be different.

(This series is prepared by Bill Weant, alcoholism education consultant with the Tri-County Mental Health Complex, 622 North Main Street, Mocksville. ## Richard Ferebee Has 49 Years Of Sunday School Attendance

Richard Ferebee was honored Sunday, February 24th, by the Eaton's Baptist Church for 49 continuous years of perfect attendance in Sunday School.

The 49th bar for his pin was presented to Ferebee during the Sunday School program by James Eaton, Director of Sunday School.

The 68-year-old Ferebee received the first pin in February 1936, presented by the Rev. Edward Laughridge.

"Richard has attended church all his life and his church is the most important thing in his life," said his late sister, Mrs. Ruth Howell at the 1978 event. Others said they had seen Richard come driving in on a tractor in heavy snow. He lives at the homeplace in the Cana community about three miles from the church.

On two separate occasions he was admitted to the hospital for surgery.

"The doctor operated on me on Monday and let me go home on Saturday so I could go to Sunday School, but I didn't get to stay for preaching," he recalled.

"However, there was one time he was in the hospital on Sunday and

Richard Ferebee the doctor wouldn't let him go home. "My class came to the hospital and held Sunday School," he said, "and I didn't have to miss."

4-H News

The Davie County 4-H County Council met Tuesday, January 22, 1985, at 7:00 p.m. in the County Office Building. The meeting was called to order by President, Tricia Reilly. Amanda Sigmon and Julie Allen led the pledges to the American and 4-H Flags. Laura Phillips had devotions. Terri Wilson called the roll and read the minutes of the last meeting.

We discussed old and new business. There will be a District Horse Retreat March 1-3 at Betsy-Jeff Penn 4-H Center. A State Council Retreat will be held March 8-10 in Raleigh.

Dale Saffir gave an excellent program on Trinidad, Sheffield-Calahaln and Trailblazers 4-H Clubs had refreshments.

The meeting was then adjourned.

Cloverbuds
The Cloverbuds held their first meeting for 1985 on the 31st of January with ten members present. We welcome to the club Neil Hendricks, who was a regular visitor that decided to join. We also welcome two new members Justin Taylor and Joshua Manning.

Reflecting on projects and activities for 1984 we realize just how busy we were. We've bumped through baking biscuits, withstood the scrutinous eye of the fashion judge, trembled on stage during the talent show, sung our hearts out on a hayride, collected our coins during the flea market sales, rode most every ride at Carowinds, caught water balloons and laughed as the bigger kids pushed potatoes with their nose at the county picnic, molded teeth and painted boards for the fair display, laughed and laughed at getting Nancy Hartman's goat at the Farm-City Week, hit the gutter eight out of ten times at bowling, served refreshments at the bike-a-thon, piled a truck high with paper during the paper drive, made big fruit baskets and sung carols as we gave them out. We've learned how to care for our teeth, plant tulip bulbs, finger printed by a real police officer, learned how to do CPR and save a drowning victim, became aware of our five sense, identified ties and how to remove them, traced the circulation of the heart, learned the digestive system and labeled major bones.

We also realize the thrill of receiving ribbons and awards and certificates for our work. We were busy and it looks like the coming year may challenge us yet as we begin our study of communications. Angela McClemrock and Robrina Walker won the prize for listing the most ways to communicate. We did a hearts and flowers deco-art pie plate for our Valentine craft and served pizza as a refreshment.

Everyone filled out their project selection sheets and we're looking forward to working on them.

Trailblazers

The Trailblazers 4-H Horse Club held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Eleanor Wilson on February 14. The meeting was called to order by the President. We discussed old and new business. Two leaders, Jean Shoaf and Sandy Jolly were introduced. We then saw a film on two-day eventing. The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served.

Two Named To Dean's List

Two Davie County residents were named to the Dean's list at Lenoir-Rhyne College in Hickory. Elizabeth Helms of Advance and Carol Victoria Daywalt of Mocksville were among 234 students named to the honor roll during the fall semester.

Helms is the daughter of Joe and Joann Helms. Daywalt is the daughter of David and Miriam Daywalt.

According to Lenoir-Rhyne registrar Steve M. Shuford, the students qualified for the Dean's list by compiling a 3.4 grade point average out of a possible 4.0 while carrying a course load of at least 12 semester hours. They made no grade lower than a "C". Lenoir-Rhyne is a four-year liberal arts college owned and operated by the North Carolina Synod of the Lutheran Church in America.

Right To Life Holds Meeting

By Janice Schooler
Davie County Right to Life met last Thursday and members gave reports about some recent activities.

John Butero reported on his trip to Washington, D.C., for the annual "March for Life." He was among some 70 thousand people who march on January 22 of each year to protest the Supreme Court decision which legalized abortion on demand. This was the twelfth year of the march. President Reagan addressed the group by taped message and vowed again to ask the Congress to move this year on legislation to protect the unborn.

Amy Medwin, chairman, will present a program to the youth at Mocksville Pentecostal Holiness Church on Milling Road this Wednesday night, February 27. There will be a film and time for discussion and debate.

Janice Schooler reported on the counselor training sessions that she had attended in connection with "Salem Pregnancy Support" which will soon open on Healy Drive in Winston-Salem. This crisis pregnancy center will be a valuable resource for Davie County as well as Winston-Salem. The people involved are dedicated to helping women make choices that they can live with and then helping those women to be able to carry through with those decisions.

Come and hear more about our plans for this year. Our next meeting will be Thursday, March 21 at 7:30 in the Grand Jury room of the courthouse.

Amanda Slye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Slye, is making her contribution to the World Hunger Pot at First United Methodist Church in Mocksville.

Trailways Announces College Student Discounts

Trailways announces college student discounts on Round trip purchases. Trailways Lines, Inc. announced that no round trip fares will exceed $90 for persons presenting a college identification card at the time of purchase. And students who are traveling from, and returning to Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia or West Virginia will pay no more than $84 for their round trip tickets on Trailways.

In making the announcement Mr. Robert Buschner, vice president of marketing for Trailways stated, "The new Trailways college discount program is designed to attract students to us during the spring semester when a good portion of student travel takes place. The fares are only $49 one way or $42 each when students buy a round trip ticket. We want to offer students a viable alternative to using their own cars for spring break trips and for travel to and from their homes," Buschner said.

According to Buschner the $84 round trip fare being offered from eleven southern tier states in effect through June 15, 1985 for both sale and transportation. The $98 round trip fare being offered from all other Trailways origin points is good for sale through either April 15, 1985 or April 30, 1985 on transportation through either April 30, 1985 or May 15, 1985, depending on the state. Students are urged to contact their local Trailways terminal or agent for specifics on the new fares.

'400 Years Of North Carolina' Program Becoming Popular

"400 Years of North Carolina," a computerized multi-image presentation of the state's history, culture and unique qualities, has become one of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's most popular productions.

Since the show's debut last October, it has been shown by about 30 organizations to more than 7,000 North Carolinians statewide. Recently, the show has traveled to Greensboro, Asheboro and Mocksville, and it will start a 16-county tour of western North Carolina in April. Students at William R. Davie and North Davie Junior High viewed the show last week.

Carolina one of the country's fastest growing and most desirable places to live.

The show's content was approved by a panel of North Carolina historians, cultural experts and educators. Dr. J. Carlyle Sitterson, Kenan professor emeritus of history and former UNC chancellor, chaired the advisory committee responsible for the program content.

A multi-image program is one of the most versatile and exciting types of presentation available for large audiences, Wileman said. With computer-guided precision, nine slide projectors fade and blend images on a wide screen, producing composites, panoramas and animation. The medium has many uses, including tourism and trade promotion and new product advertisement. EPCOT Center at Walt Disney World uses multi-image, as does Bush Gardens and many trade expositions.

"400 Years of North Carolina," which is crossing the state by van, will be shown to students, civic groups, churches and other organizations through the spring of 1987.

College Students Urged To Lineup Private Scholarships Now

Deadlines are quickly approaching for summer and fall financial aid, according to The Scholarship Bank.

Students with financial needs should begin now to investigate some of the more than 25,000 private aid sources, according to Steve Danz, Director. These funds are available to students with interests in a number of fields, and many do not depend on demonstrated financial need, as do state and federal funds. For example, students with an interest in business, law, and accounting can receive a stipend from the Exceptional Student Fellowship Fund, and apply to the parent corporation for full time work following graduation.

The Scholarship Bank is the largest private scholarship bank in the country for undergraduate and graduate grants and loans. The computer can help you find sources designed just for you, based on your major, occupational goal, geographic desires, type of aid requested (scholarships, loans, summer work), and special skills and hobbies. According to the director, the computer guarantees each student at least fifty sources of aid. It has been estimated that each package of aid represents approximately $20,000 in potential money for college. Private aid comes from America's largest foundations, corporations, unions, and private donors and totals ap-

'Tips On "Medigap" Insurance' Booklet Is Available From BBB

Since "medigap" insurance is a relatively new, and often misunderstood, type of health insurance, elderly Americans are urged to get the facts before they sign up for the coverage. "Medigap" insurance is a Medicare supplement designed to help close the gap between the health cost Medicare will cover and senior citizens' actual expense.

A new booklet released by the Better Business Bureau in Winston-Salem, N.C., "Tips on Medigap Insurance", answers many of the questions consumers have about this new insurance.

The booklet devotes considerable attention not only to the value of the policies, but also to their limitations. Consumers are reminded that medigap insurance is general unwilling or unable to pay fees not approved by Medicare. The booklet also points out that medigap does not provide coverage for nursing homes, prescription drugs or health supplies.

"Tips on Medigap Insurance" has been added to the Better Business Bureau Consumer Information Series which offers helpful tips on more than 80 topics of consumer interest. For a copy of the booklet or a catalog of topics, send a self-addressed, business size, stamped envelope to 2110 Cloverdale Ave., Suite 2-B, Winston-Salem, N.C. 27103.

Kevin Hendrix, a Davie High senior, has been named ICT (Industrial Cooperative Training) Student of the Month by instructors, Monte Taylor and Joey Kennedy. ICT allows students to gain valuable on-the-job training and classroom credits through jobs with local industries and businesses. Hendrix is employed by Bailey's Landscaping and Hendrix Bar-B-Que. He said ICT has proven helpful in teaching job responsibilities. Hendrix hopes to secure a job with R. J. Reynolds following graduation this spring.

The Fast Food Fobble

If you have a weakness for fast food, you are not alone. It's been estimated that more than half of the American people eat more than half of their meals away from home. Millions go to fast food restaurants. It's widely debated whether fast food restaurants offer food that has real nutritional value. The North Carolina Medical Society observes that fast foods are usually made from the staples of the American diet: beef, chicken, potatoes, and bread. Most fast food restaurants offer little else, and frying is the predominant method of cooking. As a result, most fast food tends to be the opposite of what most Americans need. Fast foods are high in calories, high in saturated fats, and high in salt.

If your schedule and your pocketbook dictate frequent stops for fast food you can take some steps to avoid some of the nutritional pitfalls:

- (1) Skip the soft drink that usually accompanies a fast food meal. It probably contains about 100 calories and little nutritional value. Unsweetened tea or water are good options.
- (2) Though it's almost impossible to avoid salt in a fast food meal, you can at least restrain the urge to salt French fries that have already been salted.
- (3) Eat your hamburger with a fork. You can leave off one-half of the bun, and using a fork will help you eat slower and feel fuller.
- (4) Don't lock yourself into burger and fries. Some fast food places offer salad bars. The green and yellow vegetables are good alternatives to the usual fare.

Tornado Awareness Week Proclaimed

The tornado season will be arriving soon in North Carolina, according to the National Weather Service. Weather officials urge all residents of the state to familiarize themselves with severe weather danger signs and safety procedures. "The prime month for tornadoes in North Carolina," said Robert E. Muller, Meteorologist-in-charge of the Raleigh-Durham NWS office, "are March, April, and May. They can occur at other times, but are most common during those months."

In view of this fact, Governor James G. Martin has proclaimed the first week of March as Tornado Awareness Week in North Carolina. The National Weather Service, the Division of Emergency Management in the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, and the N.C. Department of Public Instruction will cooperate to conduct a statewide tornado drill sometime during that week.

"The most devastating severe weather event on record in North Carolina occurred just last year. During the evening of March 28th, a series of tornadoes and severe thunderstorms swept across eastern North Carolina. There were 42 deaths and 810 injuries," Muller said.

Even though one of the March 28th tornadoes had an average width of one-and-a-half miles, Muller said that tornadoes in North Carolina are usually the large, long-duration tornadoes that are more common in the Great Plains, Midwest, and Gulf Coast states.

"Ours are generally smaller and of less time duration," Muller said, "but they can be devastating in terms of property loss, deaths, and injuries. Since 1916, 123 people have been killed by tornadoes in North Carolina."

The typical North Carolina is small and short-lived with an average path length of about one-and-a-half miles and a life span of just a few minutes according to Muller.

"This limits our ability to alert people to the presence of a tornado," Muller said, "because a tornado warning is not issued unless there is a strong radar indication or there is a confined public sighting."

The Weather Service has two levels of severe weather alerts. The first is a Tornado or Severe Thunderstorm Watch. It is issued by the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City. A watch can cover up to half of the state at a time. Everyone in and near the Watch area should monitor local conditions and be prepared to take action if threatening weather is sighted. Radar summaries and statements are issued periodically by the Weather Service.

The second level of alert is a Tornado or Severe Thunderstorm Warning. It is issued only if severe weather has been reported or there is a strong indication on radar. Warnings are issued by Weather Service offices in Asheville, Cape Hatteras, Charlotte, Greensboro, Raleigh-Durham, and Wilmington.

"Since we are limited in our ability to get Warnings of North Carolina type tornadoes to citizens," Muller said, "it is very important for residents of the state to be aware of weather signs that accompany tornadoes. This knowledge could save their lives."

--Tornadoes are always associated with thunderstorms and they usually move from southwest to northeast.

--If a funnel-shaped cloud forms at the base of a thunderstorm, beware. A tornado could be developing!

--Tornadoes are most common during the late afternoon or evening.

Muller also said that winds caused by severe thunderstorms can be just as destructive as a small or medium-size tornado. Such "downburst" winds, which can exceed 100 miles per hour, are relatively common in the state, he said.

If someone does sight a tornado or weather signs which indicate the likelihood of a tornado, Muller offered the following advice:

--Stay away from doors, windows, and outside walls. Protect your head --In homes and small buildings, go to basement or to an interior part on the lowest level such as closets, bathrooms, or interior halls. Get under something sturdy.

--In schools, nursing homes, hospitals, factories, and shopping centers, go to pre-designated shelter areas. Interior hallways on the lowest floor are usually best.

--In high-rise buildings, go to interior small rooms or hallways.

Vegetable Transplant Regulations Are Explained

Individuals, brokers, or dealers who intend to transport vegetables transplants into North Carolina during the 1985 growing season for commercial purposes should be aware of the vegetable plant regulations and understand their real intent, said state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.
